Scanned from the collections of
The Library of Congress

Packard Campus for Audio Visual Conservation www.loc.gov/avconservation

Motion Picture and Television Reading Room www.loc.gov/rr/mopic

Recorded Sound Reference Center www.loc.gov/rr/record

THE LIBRARY OF CONGRESS

©C18 57461

Modern Screen

NUARY 15c

• A DELL MAGAZINE • A DELL MAGAZINE
DELL
• A DELL MAGAZINE • A DELL MAGAZINE

LIBRARY OF CONGRESS
SERIAL RECORD
JAN 31 1947
Copy 2

RANK SINATRA

AN OF THE YEAR—(p. 28)

DEC 17 1946

RING IN THE NEW
. . . a new beauty-thrill for you! Besides revealing up to 33 percent more lustre than any soap or soap shampoo, Drene, with Hair Conditioning action, leaves your hair smooth and easy to manage right after your shampoo. For this party hair-do Drene Girl Arline Dahlman ties all her hair high in back and swirls it around on top.

ON CHRISTMAS MORNING, Arline sweeps her hair into two side loops, with a top curl for added height. "And for added glamour," she says, "I always keep my hair Drene-clean." Drene is not a soap shampoo . . . never leaves dull-ing film on hair as all soaps do. And . . .
Drene removes unsightly dandruff flakes the first time you use it.

Holiday Headlines

No other shampoo leaves your hair more lustrous, yet so easy to manage!

Christmas at its merriest . . . New Year's at its happiest . . . and lovely you at your loveliest . . . your Drene-clean hair shining-bright, alight with all its natural lustre!

Here, famous Magazine Cover Girl and Drene Girl, Arline Dahlman, shows you the two holiday hair-dos she likes best. "But first," suggests Arline, "make sure your hair is at its gleaming, glamorous best . . . by using Drene Shampoo with Hair Conditioning action." No other shampoo leaves your hair more lustrous, yet so easy to manage.

Drene Shampoo with Hair Conditioning Action

PN1993
M33

"You're Fired!"

CUPID: Can't fire me, Missy. I quit. I—

GIRL: Loafer!

CUPID: —can't do anything for a Granite Face who won't even break down and beam at a man once in a while!

GIRL: Ho! And what've I got to beam with, pray? I brush my teeth—and regularly—but there's no beam about them!

CUPID: But there is "pink" on your tooth brush, perhaps?

GIRL: Only lately. And only a touch... Why?

CUPID: That's for your dentist to say, Sis. Because even a tinge of "pink" is a warning to see your dentist. Let him decide, not you. He may say it's simply a case of soft foods robbing your gums of exercise. If so, he may suggest "the helpful stimulation of Ipana and massage."

GIRL: Ah-h-h. And right away I've got a smile like Klieg lights, huh?

CUPID: Not so fast, Muffinhead. Sparkling smiles call for sound teeth. And sound teeth for healthy gums. And Ipana's designed not only to clean teeth but, with massage, to help gums. And if your dentist suggests gentle massage with Ipana when you brush your teeth . . . pay attention! You'll be off to the man-trappingest smile you ever wore! Check on it!

For the Smile of Beauty—

Ipana and Massage

Product of Bristol-Myers

METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER'S
LION'S ROAR

Published in this space every month

The greatest star of the screen!

Ah! Just wait "Till The Clouds Roll By"—and the stars come out!

★ ★ ★

M-G-M's love-and-song story of Jerome Kern is on its way . . . teeming with talent, Technicolor and 25 Kern hits.

★ ★ ★

To make hearts go pitter-patterer, June Allyson sings "Cleo-patterer".

★ ★ ★

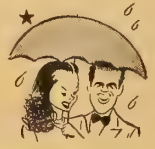
Lucille Bremer pleads lyrically for "One More Dance" and Van Johnson replies, "I Won't Dance"—but he does, and how!

★ ★ ★

Then there's Judy Garland as Marilyn Miller, singing the haunting "Who?".

★ ★ ★

Kathryn Grayson and Tony Martin are the melodic romancers of "Showboat".

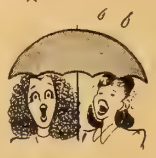


★ ★ ★

Torchy Lena Horne sings "Can't Help Lovin' Dat Man". Angela Lansbury "swings" a tune.

★ ★ ★

Virginia O'Brien scores with "A Fine Romance". Dinah Shore stops the show with "The Last Time I Saw Paris".



★ ★ ★

Frank Sinatra provides a spectacular musical climax with "Ol' Man River".

★ ★ ★

All this as you thrill to the colorful events in the life of Jerome Kern who is portrayed by Robert Walker.

★ ★ ★

As Kern's arranger and best friend, Van Heflin returns to the screen in triumph.

★ ★ ★

Director Richard Whorf and Producer Arthur Freed, with screenwriters Myles Connolly and Jean Holloway, have woven story and song and splendor miraculously together.

★ ★ ★

Yes, just wait "Till The Clouds Roll By". It's pure sunshine!

—Leo

JANUARY, 1947

modern screen

the friendly magazine

stories

MY FRIEND, FRANK by George Evans (Frank Sinatra) 28
HATE THAT BOY! by Billy Rose (Frank Sinatra) 30
A CHRISTMAS HE'LL NEVER FORGET (Van Johnson) 32
GOOD NEWS by Louella Parsons (MODERN SCREEN POLL PARTY) 34
"HAPPY" NEW YEAR! (Joan Leslie—Ray Milland—Margaret O'Brien) 42
GREGORY PECK LIFE STORY, Part One 44
"ESTHER'S LIKE THAT" by Ben Gage (Esther Williams) 48
MY BEST FINDS OF '46 by Hedda Hopper (Lizabeth Scott-Mark Stevens) 50
IT'S A WONDERFUL LIFE! (James Stewart) 52
LOVE SONG (Dick Haymes) 54
SISTER-IN-LAW, GENE by Cholly Knickerbocker (Gene Tierney) 56
SWING YOUR PARTNERS! (Lana Turner, Bob Hutton, Rita Hayworth) 58
THREE LITTLE GIRLS IN GREEN (Maureen O'Hara) 60

color pages

FRANK SINATRA in M-G-M's "It Happened In Brooklyn" 28
VAN JOHNSON in M-G-M's "Till The Clouds Roll By" 32
GREGORY PECK in United Artists' "Duel in the Sun" 44
ESTHER WILLIAMS in M-G-M's "Fiesta" 48
LIZABETH SCOTT in Columbia's "Dead Reckoning" 50
MARK STEVENS in 20th-Fox's "I Wonder Who's Kissing Her Now" 50
JAMES STEWART in Liberty Films-RKO's "It's a Wonderful Life" 52
DICK HAYMES in 20th-Fox's "The Shocking Miss Pilgrim" 54
GENE TIERNEY in 20th-Fox's "The Razor's Edge" 57
MAUREEN O'HARA in RKO's "Sinbad the Sailor" 61
ELIZABETH TAYLOR in M-G-M's "Courage of Lassie" 65

features

PICTURE OF THE MONTH: "The Yearling" selected by Dorothy Kilgallen 6
EDITORIAL PAGE 27

departments

RADIO: Radio Award by Ed Sullivan 8
Radio Gossip by Ben Gross 9
INFORMATION DESK 10
CO-ED: by Jean Kinkead 12
REVIEWS: by Virginia Wilson 14
FAN CLUBS: by Shirley Frohlich 22
BEAUTY: "No Vacation From Beauty" 62
FASHION: by Constance Bartel 65
MUSIC: "Sweet and Hot" 76
COOKING: "Visions of Sugar Plums" 80
SUPER COUPON 84

THE COVER PORTRAIT OF FRANK SINATRA IS BY NIKOLAS MURAY.
THE COLOR PORTRAIT OF JAMES STEWART IS BY WILLINGER.

ALBERT P. DELACORTE, Executive Editor — HENRY P. MALMGREEN, Editor

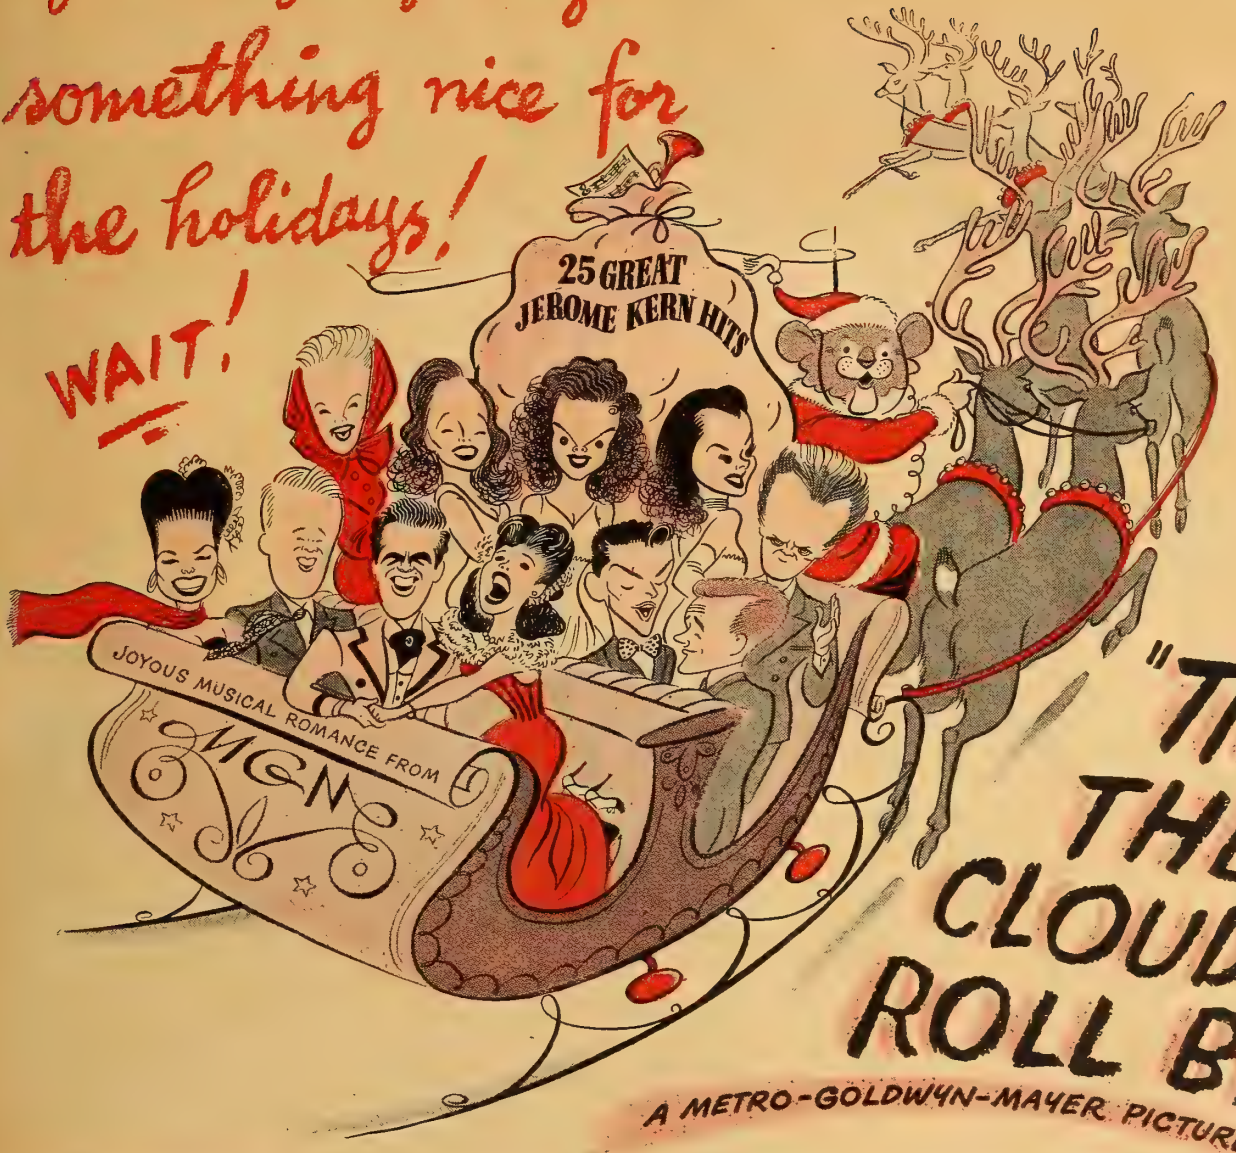
MAGDA MASKEL, western manager
JANE WILKIE, western editor
MIRIAM GHIDALIA, associate editor
BERYL STOLLER, assistant editor
OTTO STORCH, art director
BILL WEINBERGER, art editor
LAYNG MARTINE, promotion director
CONSTANCE BARTEL, fashion director
JEAN KINKEAD, contributing editor
GUS GALE, staff photographer
BOB BEERMAN, staff photographer
SHIRLEY FROHLICH, service dept.
BEVERLY LINET, information desk
CHARLES SAXON, cartoon editor

POSTMASTER: Please send notice on Form 3578 and copies returned under Label Form 3579 to 149 Madison Avenue, New York 16, New York

Vol. 34, No. 2, January, 1947. Copyright, 1946, the Dell Publishing Co., Inc., 149 Madison Ave., New York. Published monthly. Printed in U. S. A. Published simultaneously in the Dominion of Canada. International copyright secured under the provisions of the Revised Convention for the Protection of Literary and Artistic Works. Office of publication at Washington and South Aves., Dunellen, N. J. Chicago Advertising office, 360 N. Michigan Ave., Chicago 1, Illinois. Single copy price, 15c in U. S. and Canada. Subscriptions in U. S. A. and Canada $1.80 a year; elsewhere $2.80 a year. Entered as second class matter Sept. 18, 1930, at the post office, Dunellen, N. J., under Act of March 3, 1879. The publishers accept no responsibility for the return of unsolicited material. Names of characters used in semi-fictional matter are fictitious. If the name of any living person is used it is purely a coincidence. Trademark No. 301778.

You're going to get something nice for the holidays!

WAIT!



"TILL THE CLOUDS ROLL BY"

A METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER PICTURE

Starring (alphabetically)

JUNE ALLYSON as the dazzling musical comedy star!

LUCILLE BREMER as Jerome Kern's immortal "Sally"!

JUDY GARLAND as glorious Marilyn Miller!

KATHRYN GRAYSON as Magnolia of "Show Boat" fame!

VAN HEFLIN as the father of the real "Sally"!

LENA HORNE as the girl who loved "Bill"!

VAN JOHNSON as the singing, dancing bandleader!

ANGELA LANSBURY as the music hall nightingale!

TONY MARTIN as the dashing gambler "Gaylord"!

VIRGINIA O'BRIEN as the gal with a yen for men!

DINAH SHORE as the siren of the sultry voice!

FRANK SINATRA as the singing idol of millions!

ROBERT WALKER (as Jerome Kern)

In Technicolor

Story by GUY BOLTON • Adapted by GEORGE WELLS • Screen Play by MYLES CONNOLLY and JEAN HOLLOWAY

Based on the Life and Music of JEROME KERN • Directed by RICHARD WHORF • Produced by ARTHUR FREED • A METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER PICTURE

HEAR "SMOKE GETS IN YOUR EYES", "OL' MAN RIVER", "ALL THE THINGS YOU ARE", "WHO?", "TILL THE CLOUDS ROLL BY" AND MANY MORE!

dorothy kilgallen selects "the yearling"

■ Anyone who ever has despaired of the motion picture form becoming an art should be taken to see what Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and producer Sidney Franklin have wrought out of Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings' simple story, "The Yearling." That was a Pulitzer Prize novel, and they have made it into an Academy Award picture—a work of such honest beauty and shining tenderness that it seems to have come from a place far removed from the Hollywood so frequently engrossed in phony bust measurements and phony emotions.

It is a thrilling film. No one thing makes it so; it is the product of many hands, and, possibly more important, hearts, that must have worked with as much love as care to have achieved such soaring perfection.

The story is gentle, genuine and completely devoid of trickery. It might have happened. It is just the tale of a few seasons in the life of a desperately poor farm family in the wild scrub country of Florida —the bitter young mother who has lost all (Continued on page 10)

Alone a lot, Jody (Claude Jarman, Jr.) finds his best friend is dad (G. Peck).

It's Murder in the Mirth Degree!

Betty's a gal who can't tell the truth to save her life. Sonny's the lawyer who has a terrific case on her! And you're the folks who are gonna howl at 'em for ninety minutes on end!

Paramount presents

Betty Hutton

and

Sonny Tufts

in

"Cross My Heart"

...'n hope to die laughing!

Plus 3 hit songs as only that Hutton girl can sing them
"LOVE IS THE DARNDEST THING"
"THAT LITTLE DREAM GOT NOWHERE"
"HOW DO YOU DO IT?"

with MICHAEL CHEKHOV

Produced by Harry Tugend · Directed by John Berry

Screen Play by Harry Tugend and Claude Binyon · Additional Dialogue by Charles Schnee · Based on a Play by Louis Verneuil and Georges Berr

radio award . . . by ED SULLIVAN

■ In "Annie Get Your Gun," Irving Berlin wrote a number for Ethel Merman that compresses a world of truth into its lyrics. Sings Miss Merman: "There's no business like show business." It tells of the highs and the lows that make show business the most exhilarating and the most exasperating experience of all, because as Berlin words it, "There's no business like show business," no business like it in all the world.

As evidence that Berlin is right, this is the story of $35 that was parlayed into one of the million-dollar sensations of show business! The principal actors in the cast would be a sophomore at the Lakeview High School, in Chicago; an old gentleman who had his place of business on Van Buren Street; a freckled-faced newsboy in the best tradition of Horatio Alger. Incidental actors would be owners of night clubs, many of them; vaudeville audiences, many of them; unkind critics, too many of them.

The $35 story is the story of Charlie McCarthy, and the story of Charlie McCarthy is the story of Edgar Bergen, and the story of Edgar Bergen illuminates Berlin's point that there's no business like show business!

"A lot of stories have been told about Charlie McCarthy," Bergen tells me, "and most of them have been wrong. It was while I was in my second year at Lakeview High School, in Chicago, that I got Charlie, and he cost me exactly $35. A wood carver, Theodore Mack, now dead, created Charlie for me in his shop on Van Buren Street. The rest of Charlie's body has been replaced at least twenty-five times, and I've bought about twenty new suits for him, but the wear and tear has made no impression on his head."

How had he decided on "Charlie McCarthy" for a monicker?

"The first part of his name comes from a freckled-faced little Chicago newsboy, Charlie, who used to sell papers on the corner near Lakeview High," explained Bergen, "and the second half of his name comes from the old wood carver who created his head. The old gent's name was Mack, so I chose McCarthy as having a little more 'feel' and rhythm to it."

Thus christened, the little fellow who was to become Public Woodenhead No. 1 started out from Chicago on (Continued on page 24)

Word Is Spreading: "THE GREATEST MOTION and radio gossip . . . by BEN GROSS

■ Stories They Tell on Radio Row . . . They tell many of them along the lane of microphone stars . . . but few of them are as moving as the yarn of the 76-year-old Negro living near the Griffith Stadium in Washington, D. C. It is his story and also that of a radio broadcast that produced a miracle.

Sitting in his simple home one night, a place that had never known a woman's touch, he turned on his ancient receiving set. What he heard was an NBC dramatization of the life of Maude Ballington Booth, who, as head of the Volunteers of America, an organization similar to the Salvation Army, had devoted her life to helping the unfortunate.

The story so impressed the aged man that he began to review his own life. Although living in poor surroundings, he was really a wealthy man. He had made a fortune in real estate; but had never done much for his fellow men. Now, however, he picked up his telephone and called the Volunteers of America, making an appointment the next day with Lt. Col. Walter O. Ulrey, the organization's divisional commander.

Col. Ulrey at first believed he was the victim of a hoax; but he soon learned the truth. For the humble colored man, who insists that his name remain anonymous, then and there deeded outright to the Volunteers of America a modern eight-story house in a good neighborhood for welfare purposes. And a few days later he had a will drawn in favor of the Volunteers, leaving them an estate of more than $125,000.

Mere money had never brought to the old man the one thing he wanted most—happiness. But, at last, he found it in an opportunity to do some good in this world . . . and all because of a chance tuning in of a radio broadcast.

■ Have You a Sense of Humor? . . . Having nothing better to do, not long ago I asked a group of famous comedians, "What is your definition of a sense of humor?" So, for the benefit of MODERN SCREEN readers, here are some of their answers:

Bob Burns—"A sense of humor is that rare quality possessed by people who think I'm funny."

Jack Benny—"You've got a sense of humor when your toupee blows off and you're the first one to laugh like all get-out."

Bob Hope—"One person thinks a broken leg is funny and to another the idea of a juicy sirloin steak is uproarious. So everybody thinks he has a sense of humor and is, therefore, a comedian. If I ever meet a straight man, I'll give him a job for life."

Fibber McGee—"A sense of humor is simply a congenital defect. The possessor is just born without an 's' in his cosmic urge."

■ The Program Book . . . This New Year's time sees the height of the radio season. All of the important shows are on the air: The old ones, the new ones, the programs that click and those about to be carted off to ethereal oblivion. The period of sponsorial promises is over. Now it is deliver or get off the air.

With this thought in mind, let us take a quick glance at the blue ribbon offerings awaiting the turn of your dial:

In the field of comedy, such oldtimers as Jack Benny, Fred Allen, Bob Hope, Eddie Cantor, Charlie McCarthy and Fibber McGee and Molly are proving (Continued on page 24)

PICTURE I HAVE SEEN IN MY LIFE!"

Darryl F. Zanuck's production of

W. SOMERSET MAUGHAM'S

The Razor's Edge

20th CENTURY-FOX

Produced by DARRYL F. ZANUCK

Screen Play by LAMAR TROTTI

Directed by EDMUND GOULDING

From the Novel by W. Somerset Maugham

The Funniest Man Of The Year In The Happiest Picture Of The Year!
The only kind of a hat ah wear is a Kentucky Derby!
EAGLE-LION FILMS INC. presents

KENNY DELMAR
as
SENATOR CLAGHORN
THAT IS!
"IT'S A JOKE, SON!"
Bryan Foy in Charge of Production
with
UNA MERKEL • JUNE LOCKHART
JIMMY CONLIN • DOUGLAS DUMBRILLE
"Daisy"—the dog and introducing KENNETH FARRELL
Original screenplay by Robert Kent and Paul Gerard Smith
Produced by Aubrey Schenck • Directed by Ben Stoloff

LIFE says: "THE MOST QUOTED MAN IN THE NATION!"...

DOROTHY KILGALLEN SELECTS "THE YEARLING"

(Continued from page 6)

her children but one and is haunted by the fear of losing him, the father who understands her as he understands most of the things in life, and the boy Jody who longs with a wild loneliness for something of his own to love.

For Jody, director Clarence Brown left Hollywood and searched the rickety schoolrooms of the rural South until he found Claude Jarmon Jr., an extraordinary child with white hair and translucent pink skin and eyes like pieces of sky. In some magical way the director has made him act with naturalness and at times passion. Between them they have achieved a triumph.

Gregory Peck, as Penny, the father with the knowing heart, gives a performance of such strength and compassion that it seems not to be a performance at all, but part of the record of a life. He has been given considerable poetry to translate into the dialect of "poor white trash," and he does this so well that the words seem to come from his own mind and not from the pages of a Hollywood script.

Jane Wyman, demonstrating an amazing versatility, is the surprise of the picture. She plays the drab, nagging, miserable farm wife with such authority and definition as to make it almost impossible to believe that this weary creature and the glamorous little cookie of "Night And Day" came from the repertoire of the same actress.

All concerned can thank Paul Osborn for giving them a screenplay that contains no false note, and Clarence Brown not only for magnificently sympathetic direction, but for the additional miracle of having managed to keep the Technicolor under control so that the splashy calendar-art tendencies of Technicolor are conquered.

"The Yearling" would sound, in the telling of the synopsis, like the story of a boy and a fawn, but it has more than a story—it has the sweep of nature and the wildness of the seasons and the aching dreams of the young and the wisdom of those who live close to the earth.

Go to see it. Few such experiences can be bought with a ticket of admission.

MODERN SCREEN

"Here is a note from my doctor for being late for my appointment."

INFORMATION DESK

by Beverly Linet

PETER COOKSON was born in Milwaukee, Oregon, on May 8, 1915. He is 6' tall, weighs 175 lbs. and has brown eyes and brown hair. He is married and has two children. Current pictures include "Don't Gamble With Strangers," "Fear," and "Strange Conquest." Write to him at Universal, Universal City, Calif. Tamara Christoff, 295 St. Helen's Avenue, Toronto 4, Ontario, Canada, has his fan club.

DOROTHY MALONE, who was so charming in "Night and Day," "The Big Sleep," and "Janie Gets Married," was born in Chicago, Ill., on Jan. 30, 1925. She has blue eyes and brown hair and is 5'7" tall, weighs 124 lbs., and is unmarried. You can write her at Warner Brothers, Burbank, California.

JACK SMITH, popular CBS singer who's come up so tremendously lately, was born in Seattle, Washington, on November 16, 1915. He is 6'2" tall, weighs 185 lbs., and has hazel eyes and dark blonde hair. Is married, but has no children. Is immensely interested in fan clubs and those who would like to start one for him can address him c/o Kurt Weinberg, 131 W. 42nd Street, N. Y. C.

Evelyn Rouel, New York: Here are the pieces played in "I've Always Loved You:" CHOPIN'S Prelude in C Major, G Minor Ballade, Nocturne, Prelude No. 1, Opus 28. RACHMANINOFF'S 2nd Piano Concerto, and Prelude in C Sharp Minor. MOZART'S Magic Flute and Sonata No. 1. SCHARF'S Opus No. 1 and Carnegie Overture. BEETHOVEN'S Appassionata. WAGNER'S Liebestod. MENDELSSOHN'S Rondo Cappricioso. BACH'S Toccata and Fugue. SCHUBERT'S Moment Musicale. BRAHMS' Lullabye. VILLA-LOBOS' Brazilian Folk Song.

Roberta Broth: Gloria Egan, 10748 Holeman Avenue, Los Angeles, has the ROSS HUNTER FAN CLUB. Edythe Rojan, 40-45 12th Street, L. I. City, N. Y. has one for JOHN HEATH. Mary Susan Leonard, Box 428, Kingsport, Tenn., has the SHIRLEY TEMPLE CLUB, and Gloria Fine, 519 Charlotte Street, Bronx, N. Y. has the DOUGLAS DICK CLUB.

Seymour Gerr, Boston: Tommy Kelly and Frankie Thomas were both in service and are now waiting for the right pix. You'll be seeing Don Taylor in "Rich, Full Life," and handsome Jerry Rand is back from service and appearing in "Carnegie Hall."

There you are. Now come on and swamp me with questions. Just send them and a SELF-ADDRESSED, STAMPED ENVELOPE to Beverly Linet, INFORMATION DESK, MODERN SCREEN, 149 Madison Avenue, N. Y. 16, N. Y.

WARNERS HIT A BRAND NEW NOTE IN MUSICALS!!!

"THE TIME

DENNIS MORGAN

THE PLACE

JACK CARSON

AND THE GIRL"

IN TECHNICOLOR!!!

JANIS PAIGE ☆ MARTHA VICKERS ☆ and CARMEN CAVALLARO AND ORCHESTRA

S. Z. SAKALL · ALAN HALE · ANGELA GREENE · DONALD WOODS

DIRECTED BY DAVID BUTLER

PRODUCED BY ALEX GOTTLIEB

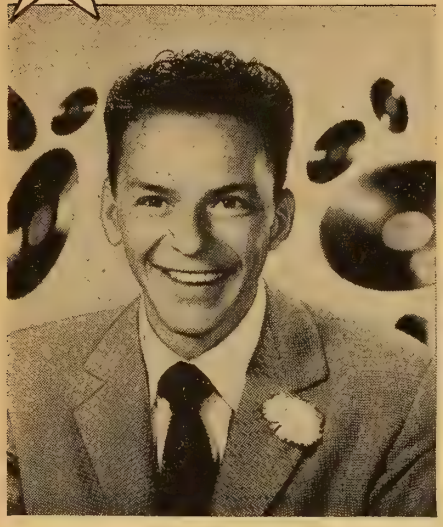
Screen Play by Francis Swann, Agnes Christine Johnston & Lynn Starling • Original Story by Leonard Lee • Orchestral Arrangements by Ray Heindorf

M-G-M Star on the Cover



★ The #1 star of Hollywood! That's the title bestowed on Frank Sinatra by the readers of MODERN SCREEN. It's a great, great compliment for any star to receive, but we're even prouder than usual of Frankie because he's gained this honor in such a relatively short time. The fans have elevated him to top stardom with unheard-of speed.

★ And though his original popularity was achieved through radio appearances and phonograph records, Frankie's meteor-like rise in motion pictures is really phenomenal. For his is the story of an entertainer who, in little more than five years, zoomed from dance-band vocalist to one of the nation's greatest celebrities.

★ Frank Sinatra was born in Hoboken, New Jersey, and first came to fame there as star athlete and glee club vocalist for the local High School. However, his ambition was journalism and he joined the Hoboken Observer, starting on a delivery truck, but quickly rising to sports reporter.

★ Then one night he squired his best girl—the future Mrs. Sinatra—to see a Bing Crosby picture. That, he decided, was the career for him, so off he went for an audition with Major Bowes. Here history takes over. Immediate success with the Major and subsequent engagements with the Harry James and Tommy Dorsey bands. Then solo billing and Hollywood. After two starring pictures, Frankie came under the M-G-M aegis and his popularity has been climbing ever since.

★ He was an instantaneous success in his singing and dancing role in "Anchors Aweigh", the best musical film of 1945. He is now appearing in "Till The Clouds Roll By", M-G-M's magnificent screen biography of Jerome Kern. When Sinatra sings "Ol' Man River" in one of the most lavish scenes ever filmed, it stops the show every time.

★ At the present time, he is busy commuting between Hollywood and Brooklyn for the final scenes of "It Happened In Brooklyn". Advance reports are that it looks like another Sinatra sensation. And for good measure, the cast includes such wonderful names as Kathryn Grayson, and Peter Lawford, and — Jimmy Durante! Yes, it's a happy new year for Frankie's fans and entertainment lovers everywhere.

Watch for his next M·G·M film hits

☆ "TILL THE CLOUDS ROLL BY" ☆
In Technicolor
☆ "IT HAPPENED IN BROOKLYN" ☆

LIFE IS WHAT YOU MAKE IT, AND BELONGING TO A FAN CLUB MAKES IT PRETTY PERFECT. HERE'S A HOBBY THAT MAKES SAD SACKS INTO GLAD JACKS—AND JILLS, TOO!

by Jean Kinkead

co-ed

■ You'd be surprised at how many letters there are on our desk right this minute that say things like this: "I live way out in the country and I'm a very lonesome gal," or "I'm just plain bored with my unexciting life," or "I wish I had a hobby like the other kids, but stamps and match covers leave me cold." And all the letters wind up with the same old plea: "Help!" For all of you who've written us those sob-jobs, and for the rest of you who've sometimes felt like writing 'em, we've got a really wonderful plan. A plan to lift you out of the doldrums so fast. . . . Just you listen!

Why don't you join a fan club? Hey, wait a minute now. Don't put on your me-tie-up-with-a-gang-of-swooners? face. The members of the fan clubs we're talking about are attractive, intelligent, stimulating people. They're people you'd like to know. People you'd have fun with. How do we know? 'Cause we've met dozens of them. Talked with them. Exchanged ideas with them.

Let us tell you more. The fan clubs we mean are no fly-by-night propositions. They are members of the MODERN SCREEN Fan Club Association, which means that they are recognized by the star and the studio, that they each have a charter and a constitution, that they are well-run clubs respected in their various communities. Their members are just as far removed from the button-pulling, screeching sort of fan as anybody could be. Maybe we've convinced you that clubs belonging to the MODERN SCREEN Fan Club Association are sorta special, but maybe you don't quite see what membership in one of them would do for you. First of all, it will give you a feeling of usefulness. Heretofore you've just been a voice crying in the wilderness; once you're a club member you'll have the exciting realization that by joining the club activities, you are actually having a direct hand in the success of your pet star. You will enjoy the companionship—either personal or via letters—of other club members, and your loneliness and boredom will vanish with things like club parties and issues of the club journal to look forward to. You'll get a kind of spiritual lift, as well, from participating in the pet charity which most of the clubs have. Did you know, f'rinstance, that the Jean Pierre Aumont Club has adopted a French war orphan to whom food packages are sent regularly, and that the Hotra Sinatra Club, on Frankie's last birthday, presented $25 to the Sister Kenny Foundation? To mention just two of the dozens of good works clubs have done.

But hang on. There are even more wonderful things about being a member of a MSFCA club. If you've a yen to write, all of the clubs have journals chockful of poetry, stories, interviews with stars—not to mention an exclusive snap of your dream guy or gal!—and the editors are always on the prowl for new talent. What's more, MODERN SCREEN awards several prizes each month for the choicest literary bits. You might even edit a journal yourself some day, and we can't think of a better way to get experience for that elegant magazine job you've got your eye on.

Attendance at club meetings will give you a good foundation in parliamentary procedure. You'll have a chance to learn how to give (Continued on page 88)

"It's a Wonderful Life"

All the fun of "It Happened One Night"; all the heart-warming joy of "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town"; all the happiness of "You Can't Take It With You"—Capra's triple-slam Academy Award triumphs!

LIBERTY FILMS, INC. Presents

FRANK Capra's greatest ... starring James Stewart and Donna Reed

AMERICA'S FAVORITE FELLER...

JIMMY'S FAVORITE GIRL...

HENRY TRAVERS
He couldn't do ANYTHING!

THOMAS MITCHELL
He couldn't do anything wrong!

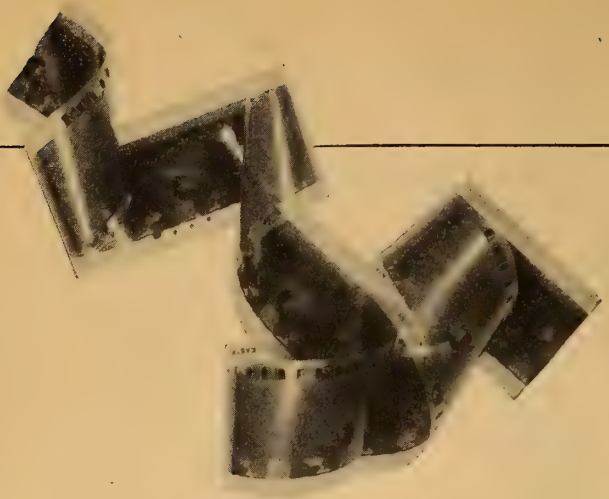
LIONEL BARRYMORE
He couldn't do anything right!

with

LIONEL BARRYMORE · THOMAS MITCHELL · HENRY TRAVERS

Beulah Bondi · Ward Bond · Frank Faylen · Gloria Grahame · Produced and Directed by FRANK CAPRA

Screenplay by Frances Goodrich, Albert Hackett and Frank Capra · Additional Scenes by Jo Swerling · Released by RKO Radio Pictures, Inc.



movie reviews

virginia wilson

"THE SIN OF HAROLD DIDDLEBOCK"

■ Maybe you've never seen a Harold Lloyd picture. If you haven't, you've missed one of life's major experiences, and the sooner you see "The Sin Of Harold Diddlebock," the happier you'll be.

Harold (Lloyd or Diddlebock, take your choice), as a football-playing collegian, is offered a job by the head of a big manufacturing concern. When Harold shows up, complete with diploma and full of enthusiasm and bright ideas, he is tucked away in the bookkeeping department. There he stays for twenty years. At the end of that time he is presented with a Swiss watch—which chimes—and is fired. Harold emerges into daylight, baffled and embittered, with two thousand dollars in savings and no future.

A weird little character called Wormy (Jimmy Conlin) gets a load of that roll and starts seeing the world through rose-colored glasses. He introduces Harold, who has never taken anything stronger than fruit cup, to a drink which the bartender christens a "Diddlebock." It causes repercussions of about the same intensity as an atom (Continued on page 16)

Success is just around the economies the founda of great fortunes in hand is worth sixty a pound. voice with the smile wins

Full of success story dreams, Harold Didalebock (H. Lloyd) starts out on a new job. But after twenty years of conscientious work, he is given the bird in the form of a watch and a pink slip.

You wanna buy a lion? Jack Norton's safe on his desk, assuring Harold that his landlord really wouldn't permit it. Harold got the lion when he bought a circus one night—on a binge.

Jail is a bit cramped for Harold and his pal (Jimmy Conlin). But Harold can't understand why the police were so nasty just because he had to rescue the lion from an 8th floor window ledge!

Are you in the know?

How should you cope with hickeys?

- ☐ Squeeze with finger-tips
- ☐ Cover with heavy makeup
- ☐ Let them alone

You're all set for next Saturday night, and horrors! — a hickey rears its ugly head. Never squeeze pimples. Just dab with antiseptic and let them alone. Unless they're chronic, needing medical care, they'll soon disappear on their own power. Well-scrubbed skin gathers few blemishes. And bathing's especially important if you'd be clover-sweet on certain days. Kotex helps keep you dainty, because every Kotex napkin has a deodorant locked inside!

Should a thank-you note be—

- ☐ A formal acknowledgment
- ☐ Brief but "personalized"
- ☐ An essay on gratitude

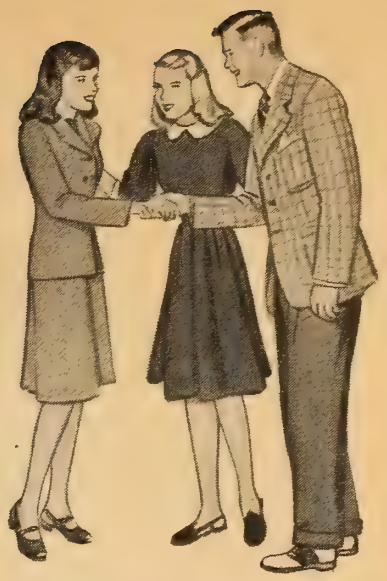
When sending thanks by mail, you needn't be stiff, or wordy or witty. Make your thank-you brief, but warm, with that personal touch that's you. Why let "duty notes" nag you? Writing them can be so simple. Likewise, why be needled by little problem-day worries — when Kotex can give you peace of mind? The exclusive safety center of Kotex means extra protection against accidents. That's why, as you skylark through "those" days, you'll say "thanks" to Kotex!



After making an introduction, then what?

- ☐ Follow through
- ☐ Let them take it from there
- ☐ Start talking for talk's sake

Spare your friends the pause that distresses — after they've said "How do you do?" Follow through! Drop a word about Jim's pet hobby or Jane's mad passion for the Samba. It gives them the pitch for conversation; puts them at ease. To be at ease on "trying days", let Kotex introduce you to real comfort, dreamy softness that is strictly this side of heaven! For Kotex is made to stay soft while wearing. You get lasting comfort . . . more poise per hour!

How can you leave at your dating deadline?

- ☐ Tell the crowd Dad insists
- ☐ Say you need your beauty-sleep
- ☐ Mention an early A. M. appointment

Party-ing is such sweet sorrow when you're the gal who must break it up. You're also the gal who must face the family . . . so don't hesitate. Mention an early morning appointment. It's the smooth way to exit at your curfew time. At "difficult" times, curfew for outline fears calls for Kotex. That's because Kotex has flat, tapered ends that don't show . . . that prevent revealing outlines. Yes, with Kotex you're poised at any party . . . a smoothie from the word go!

More women choose KOTEX* than all other sanitary napkins

A DEODORANT in every Kotex napkin at no extra cost

*T. M. Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

MOVIE REVIEWS

(Continued from page 14)

bomb. Under the influence of this strange mixture, Harold buys a checked suit, a cowboy hat and a bankrupt circus. This is on Tuesday night. When he wakes up Thursday with a hangover, he doesn't even remember what he did Wednesday. Which is just as well, as it turns out. Wormy reminds him of the circus. "The cats are hungry," says Wormy. "Also the giraffes and the elephants." Many is the man who has wakened to a hangover of elephants, but these are real ones.

Harold considers the situation. Obviously, he will have to sell the circus, but finding a customer for it is something else again. Maybe the thing to do is to mix up a batch of those "Diddlebocks" and get one of the lions and go on a customer hunt.

This works fine up to a point—the point where Harold and Wormy find themselves suspended from a lion's collar eight floors above the street.

Among the hilarious cast are Frances Ramsden, Raymond Walburn, Arline Judge and Franklin Pangborn—U.A.

P. S.

Harold Lloyd returns to the screen after an absence of seven years, waiting for the right story. . . . Lloyd and Jackie, the lion, first trouped together in "The Milky Way." However, this is the first time in Jackie's history that he ever got official screen billing, although he has worked in more than 300 pictures. . . . Sturges used Paramount's "New York Street" set for three days. He isn't superstitious, but he did manage to shoot Lloyd with one particular building as a background—the same building that was behind Brian Donlevy when Sturges made the opening shot of "The Great McGinty," the first film he directed . . . As a gesture to Sturges, Rudy Vallee played a small role as one of the bankers, duplicating the staid performance he gave in "The Palm Beach Story." . . . Members of the company admired the nerve of Al Bridge, who plays the circus owner. When Jackie chewed playfully on his arm, Bridge didn't budge and kept right on with his dialogue. Later, he disclosed that lions are no novelty to him. He ran away with a circus when he was a youngster and became the assistant trainer in a "cat" act.

THE TIME, THE PLACE, AND THE GIRL

The time—right now. The place—New York City, in Technicolor. The girl—Martha Vickers, playing a sweet young thing called Vicki Cassel. Vicki is the granddaughter of Maestro Ladislaus Cassel (S. Z. Sakall), and is being groomed for a heavily operatic career. She has a disagreeable manager, Martin (Donald Woods), and a dominating grandmother (Florence Bates) to see that she doesn't stray from the operatic path.

Vicki, when we first meet her, is only mildly discontented with this program. After all, she doesn't know what she's missing. Then she encounters Steve (Dennis Morgan) who is about to open a night club next to the Cassel house. The closest Steve has ever been to the opera was when he waited for a bus in front of the Metropolitan. But he has an eye for a pretty girl, and Vicki is a very pretty girl. Maybe he and his friend, Jeff (Jack Carson), can get her to use her influence with Ladislaus, who is apparently trying to keep them from opening their night club.

They soon find that it's Martin, not Ladislaus, who is back of the attempt. Ladislaus is a genial, if bewildered, old boy, who invites Steve and Jeff and Sue (Janis Paige), their leading lady, over for a champagne party while his wife is in Philadelphia. Unfortunately, Madame Cassel returns too soon, accompanied by Martin, and this puts a definite end to the night club's chance of opening.

Ladislaus feels responsible for this catastrophe. Also he likes to see young Vicki gazing blissfully at Steve. A girl should have some fun before she has to be an opera singer. Ladislaus is a romantic, of the practical school. He arranges for his wife to be summoned to Mexico City, leaving him in charge of their joint bank account. He will back a show for Steve and Vicki, thus solving all their problems. Unfortunately, Madame Cassel leaves only a few hundred dollars in the account. Complications set in, among them a Texas millionaire and a girl named Elaine (Angela Greene) who is jealous of Vicki.

Let me recommend a number called, "Oh, But I Do."—War.

P. S.

Dance director LeRoy Prinz estimated that Dennis Morgan, Jack Carson, Martha Vickers, and Janis Paige walked more than twenty miles a day while rehearsing dance routines on a treadmill constructed on one of the stages. . . . The piano played by Carmen Cavallaro in the film was especially designed and built in the studio shops. It's plastic, reinforced with steel, and cost some $7,000. . . . Alan Hale celebrated his fifteenth consecutive year with Warners during production by signing a new seven-year contract. . . . Prinz spent days selecting and training twelve beautiful chorines for a night club sequence which is done in blackface. . . . The actors didn't consider the set the safest place in the world after a series of accidents. Jack fell from the treadmill and injured his neck, "Cuddles" Sakall had to take a week off when a Technicolor camera dolly ran over the toes of his right foot, and Martha narrowly escaped getting beaned when the collar from a high-tensity arc fell from a scaffold just above her head.

I SAW IT HAPPEN

Vaughn Monroe was appearing at our local theater, and one gag in his show necessitated the use of a duck (stuffed, of course) as one of the props. Well, everything went along smoothly until the time came when the duck was supposed to drop from the ceiling. The band members looked up; they waited; still no duck! So the show went on with Vaughn singing one of his super solos. And right in the middle, that darn duck decided he wanted to come down to earth, I guess, because bang! down he fell, startling Vaughn and the whole audience, and turning the torchy number Vaughn was singing into a hilarious comedy. And nobody laughed harder than he did.

Lucille Retel
Buffalo, New York

THE DARK MIRROR

A broken mirror, an overturned chair and a man lying dead with a knife in his back. That's the beginning. The dead man is a doctor, and two witnesses saw him taking a girl to his apartment the night he was killed. Lieutenant Stevenson (Thomas Mitchell) has no trouble getting them to identify the girl. They say she is Terry Collins (Olivia de Havilland) who works at the magazine stand in the Medical Building.

"If only all cases were nice and simple like this one!" says the lieutenant. He's in for a shock, because Terry produces a complete alibi for the evening. Not the kind that could possibly be faked, either. Four different people place her at a point several miles from the scene of the crime. The lieutenant is going nuts over this problem when he learns that Terry has a twin sister, Ruth (Olivia de Havilland). Ruth, it seems, used to work at the magazine stand occasionally in Terry's place, and she too knew the dead doctor. There's no way of proving which girl was where on the night he was killed.

The lieutenant goes to see a psychiatrist, Dr. Elliott (Lew Ayres) who has made a study of twins. "It's a perfect crime, Doc," he says gloomily, "and I don't like perfect crimes. They make me nervous." Elliott agrees to try and help. He meets both girls and talks them into taking a series of tests for him. He will pay them for it, and they need a job. Since they've been in the papers in connection with the murder, no one will hire them. But as Dr. Elliott gets to know them better, and as the tests progress, he gets more and more worried. He has fallen in love with Ruth. And he knows that one of the sisters is guilty of the murder. That one of them is criminally—dangerously—insane.

Olivia de Havilland handles her dual role with authority, and it's nice to see Lew Ayres back on the screen. Thomas Mitchell makes the detective a human being instead of a stock figure.—Univ.

P. S.

No technical flaws will be found in the pic, as it was checked and double-checked in order to make sure of scientific soundness. Writer-Producer Nunnally Johnson not only consulted a practicing psychologist, but went to Washington where he had the FBI check all of his scientific data. . . . Superstition took a holiday as Olivia spent an entire morning hurling ashtrays at mirrors. Director Siodmak wanted the glass shattered in an impressively weird design and before he was satisfied, Livvy had smashed eight mirrors and ruined twelve takes. "Doesn't bother me a bit," remarked Olivia after completion of the scene, then added—"Just so I never have to whistle in a dressing room, or throw my hat on a bed!" . . . Director Siodmak's "X-Ray camera" promises to be the most provocative advance of 1946. Utilizing his own personally developed technique, Siodmak asserts that he is able to make the camera literally peer into the soul and ferret out secrets which the subject wants to conceal. . . . Lew Ayres uses a tried and true method of finding the truth. He tests Livvy with a real sphygmanometer (lie detector) in one scene, and was trained in the technique by John Schilling of the Los Angeles County Sheriff's office.

THE SHOW-OFF

Years ago, when Red Skelton was run-

The JOLSON STORY is a glorious cavalcade of music and heart-stirring entertainment ...glowing with Technicolor magic!

with LARRY PARKS · EVELYN KEYES · William Demarest · Bill Goodwin

Screenplay by Stephen Longstreet · Produced by SIDNEY SKOLSKY · Directed by ALFRED E. GREEN · A COLUMBIA PICTURE

High School Course at Home Many Finish in 2 Years

Go as rapidly as your time and abilities permit. Course equivalent to resident school work—prepares for college entrance exams. Standard H.S. texts supplied. Diploma. Credit for H. S. subjects already completed. Single subjects if desired. High school education is very important for advancement in business and industry and socially. Don't be handicapped all your life. Be a High School graduate. Start your training now. Free Bulletin on request. No obligation.

American School, Dept. H-114, Drexel at 58th, Chicago 37

ning around in knee pants, there was a very funny comedy on Broadway called "The Show-Off". It is now an equally funny picture, with Red as Aubrey Piper, the boastful yet lovable windbag of the title. Aubrey isn't a bad guy, but he likes to have people think he's important. When he meets Amy (Marilyn Maxwell) on a blind date, it doesn't occur to him to tell her he's just a clerk in a shipping office.

He dazzles Amy into falling in love and before he knows it, he's in love himself. Amy's family meet Aubrey and are impressed—unfavorably. They don't have the same touching confidence in him that Amy does. Mrs. Fisher (Marjorie Main) in particular eyes him with suspicious dislike.

Anyhow they get married and go to live in a tiny apartment on a budget. The budget is immediately snafued by Aubrey's purchase of a piano. Then his concern for Amy leads him to buy a Great Dane to guard her when he works evenings. The dog howls, the neighbors complain, the Pipers are thrown out of their apartment and they move in with Amy's family.

Aubrey continues to show off, always with disastrous results. He borrows a car and wrecks a truck, a police car and a trolley. When he comes up for trial on a reckless driving charge, he insults the judge. Finally Aubrey pulls a boner to end all boners. It's so super-colossal you'll have to see it for yourself.

Among Aubrey's victims are "Rochester," Virginia O'Brien, Leon Ames and Marshall Thompson.—M-G-M

P. S.

Red Skelton's literary tastes wowed the whole set one day. Immersed in a book, Red reclined in his dressing room and repeatedly failed to answer his "on the set" call. Finally director Harry Beaumont came to the door. "Excuse me, Mr. Skelton," he said, "but might we have the pleasure of your company on the set? We'd like to make a movie." Red looked startled, and put down a volume of Grimm's Fairy Tales!... Marshall Thompson was the victim of Red's best gag of the month when the comedian phoned Marshall, and imitating the voice of a fraternity brother, told Marsh that he was coming down with the mumps. Marshall took it much to heart and warned everyone on the set to keep away from him. For ten days, he inspected himself in a mirror every hour on the hour, looking for signs of swelling.

I'LL BE YOURS

You're young and beautiful and you can sing. You have a letter to the owner of one of the biggest theaters in New York. So you're all set, aren't you? But Louise (Deanna Durbin) finds out it isn't quite as simple as that. Mr. Buckingham, the theater owner, does give her a job, but it's a job as an usherette. Still, the uniform's cute and maybe she'll meet some nice people.

The only person she meets is Wechsberg (William Bendix), who is a waiter in a cheap restaurant. He's also a character. There is, however, one thing to be said for Wechsberg. He is friendly. Oh yes, and his lawyer, whom he introduces Louise to, is a handsome chap named Charles Prescott (Tom Drake). At least he would be handsome if he'd shave off the beard he's so proud of. He thinks it makes him look distinguished.

Wechsberg has an extra job waiting on table at a fancy party at the Savoy-Ritz Saturday night. He smuggles Louise in, thinking no one will notice. Louise is too pretty not to be noticed, and the host, Conrad Nelson (Adolphe Menjou), spots her immediately. Wechsberg, in a desperate effort to explain her presence, says she's one of the entertainers. He has no idea that Louise can sing a note, and dies in seven different languages when Nelson announces her number. But Louise sings so beautifully that Nelson promptly offers to back her in a Broadway show. Obviously, however, there are strings to the offer. Louise, to calm him down, tells him she's married—to Charles Prescott.

The next thing Prescott knows, he is offered a job as attorney for the great Nelson meat packing interests. "It's a job that will keep you away from your wife frequently evenings," Nelson explains apologetically. "What wife?" says Prescott, and we're off!—Univ.

P. S.

Deanna and Tom arrived on the set one morning for the Central Park sequence, but found the park in no shape to be shot. The shrubbery and grass had been trampled and nibbled on, the place was a mess. Cast members and crew finally traced the destructive culprits to the studio zoo. Two deer had escaped during the night, found the stage door open and came in to chew the scenery. . . . Speaking of shrubbery, Tom Drake sported a chinful of artificial beard. And how he suffered for art! The weather was torrid and every afternoon about four, the overgrown goatee began to droop, became sticky and gummy. Tom had to wear it constantly during production, and lunchtimes would find him keeping to inconspicious commissary corners.... Adolphe Menjou carted an autograph book around the lot while the picture was shooting. It belonged to his 11-year-old son, Peter. "He's got the signature of every important player in Hollywood, except mine," admitted Menjou. Seems Peter refuses to add his father's John Hancock on the grounds that pop isn't a big enough star!

CROSS MY HEART

Betty Hutton bounces through music and murder with the same exuberance in "Cross My Heart." She plays a chorus girl, Peggy Harper, who is about to retire from the stage to marry a poor but honest young lawyer. Only Peggy soon decides that Oliver (Sonny Tufts) is just too honest. After all, they'll have to eat, won't they? Maybe she'd better get a job and save some money to get married on.

A middle aged wolf named Brent (Howard Freeman) engages Peggy as his secretary. She describes Brent in glowing terms to Oliver as a fatherly type who is writing a book about biology. Brent is interested in biology all right, but not in writing a book about it. The first day when Peggy reports for work, she meets the eccentric butler, Peter (Michael Chekhov), who is an ex-actor, still longing to play Hamlet. He is considerably annoyed with his employer for not giving him the role in a production Brent is backing.

Peggy is all set to make with the shorthand and the typing. But Brent has no intention of wasting time working. When she tries to distract his mind by singing, he starts to chase her around the table. She finally has to give him a fast—and lucky—right to the jaw to get away. When she gets home she finds she has forgotten her purse. She goes back, taking her mother (Ruth Donnelly) along for protection, and finds the house surrounded by police. Brent has been found murdered, and Peggy looks like a logical suspect.

Peggy, oddly enough, thinks so, too. She will confess to the crime, get Oliver to defend her, the publicity will make them both famous, and they can get married on the proceeds. It doesn't seem to occur to Peggy that she might be convicted. Or that the real murderer is still wandering around loose, with another murder on his mind.—Par.

P. S.

Sonny Tufts' role is his seventh for MEN Worshipped...Cursed...

Hated...Loved Her!
RKO
PRESENTS
The Locket
Starring
LARAINE DAY
BRIAN AHERNE
ROBERT MITCHUM
GENE RAYMOND
with SHARYN MOFFETT • RICARDO CORTEZ • HENRY STEPHENSON RKO
RADIO
PICTURES

Paramount and his screen debut in civilian attire. . . . He worked in four pictures almost simultaneously during a three-day period. Besides, carrying on his role in "Cross My Heart," he made added scenes for "Miss Susie Slagle's," dubbed dialogue for "The Virginian" and completed a sequence for "Duffy's Tavern."... Film offered Michael Chekhov his first screen comedy role. He closed his acting school in Ridgefield, Conn., when all but one of his 17 male students were called into the service. The 17th, disqualified for military duty, is Hurd Hatfield! . . . The backstage sequence in which Tufts and Chekhov enact the death scene from "Hamlet" was Sonny's first Shakespearean venture and had a special sentimental significance for Michael. The latter played "Hamlet" as his farewell role at the Moscow Art Theater. . . . Paramount rented that particular set from John Carradine, who used it on his recent tour of Pacific Coast cities. Carradine, who received a rental of $400 a week, is reputed to have purchased it from the late John Barrymore for $50.00!

SONG OF SCHEHERAZADE

This is a Technicolor tangle of handsome Russian officers, a pretty night club dancer and the music of Rimsky-Korsakov. Jean Pierre Aumont and Yvonne de Carlo make love under a Moroccan moon, with Brian Donlevy and Eve Arden helping.

In 1865, the ship "Almaz" of the Russian Navy, is becalmed in a Moroccan port. Reluctantly, Captain Gregorovitch (Brian Donlevy) gives the officers leave to go ashore. Reluctantly, because they've managed to get into trouble in every port they've hit so far and he has no reason to think this will be an exception.

Most of the officers are interested in wine and women, but one of them is more concerned with a song. He is Nicky Rimsky-Korsakov (Jean Pierre Aumont). He hurries ashore as fast as any of them, but his search is for a piano instead of a bar or a girl. He wants to try out some of the music he has been composing on board ship. The only piano he can find is in the villa of Madame de Talivara (Eve Arden), and he waits for no invitation but walks right in and starts to play. His unsuspecting hostess is astonished when she comes downstairs and finds a good looking young stranger at the piano. Since he is good looking, and she's a flirtatious old girl, she lets him stay.

The ship "Almaz" has quite a reputation for its romantic officers, such as Prince Mischetski (Philip Reed), who breaks all the hearts in every port, and carries a coiled whip in his sleeve to keep off interlopers. The other officers feel that Nicky, with his music, is lowering their batting average, so to speak. Even Captain Gregorovitch speaks about it. Nicky obediently goes out and picks up a girl. She is a dancer at the Cafe Oriental, a dark eyed enchantress called Cara (Yvonne de Carlo). Neither Nicky nor his rival, Prince Mischetski, knows that she is really the daughter of Madame de Talivara. They just know that she's beautiful, which is enough to start a fight between them. If Captain Gregorovitch hadn't thoughtfully provided Nicky with a whip to match the Prince's, the Rimsky-Korsakov career would have ended right there.—Univ.

P. S.

Yvonne de Carlo, in another dancing role, performs this time in a Moroccan cafe. Her renditions of the "Scheherazade" and two other ballets are predicted to become the talk of dance addicts for months to come. . . . Eve Arden also goes in for rug cutting in the film. In one scene, she does a fancy fandango. . . . The cast laid bets as to which of the songs featured will achieve the greatest popularity. Leaders in the race are "Scheherazade," the "Gypsy Song" and portions of "Caprice Espagnol." . . . Charles Kullman, Metropolitan Opera star, enacts the full-sized dramatic role of the ship's doctor. In addition, he vocalizes "Song of India" and "Hymn to the Sun." . . . Brian Donlevy's role of Captain Gregorovitch called for constant cigarette smoking. Between scenes, Brian went around soliciting suggestions for breaking the habit he was acquiring.

THE PERFECT MARRIAGE

If you want to see two people talk themselves into divorce and out again, take a look at "The Perfect Marriage." Dale Williams (David Niven) and his wife, Maggie (Loretta Young), are celebrating their tenth anniversary, when doubt creeps in. They love each other all right, only, Maggie decides, they aren't in love any more.

"But we don't share the same interests," Maggie says. "You don't care a thing about my job as fashion editor. It only irritates you. And your family irritates me." "My family!" Dale is indignant. "Listen, it's that incredible mother of yours that causes all the trouble." That, of course, is enough to start a real quarrel, and by the time they've said all the things they've been storing up for years, divorce seems the only solution.

There are other factors involved. One is Gloria (Virginia Field) whom Dale has taken to dinner occasionally when Maggie was busy. Another is Maggie's ex-fiance, Gil (Eddie Albert), whom her mother has always said she should have married. Weighing against these is little nine-year-old Cookie (Nona Griffith), who will be broken hearted if her mother and daddy separate. Before they've made up their minds what to do, word gets around that a divorce is in the offing. In-laws descend upon them from all sides. Maggie's friends swarm around to assure her she's doing the right thing, and Gil turns up to tell Maggie that he still loves her and wants her to marry him the minute she gets her divorce. Then, he adds, they'll put Cookie in a good school and take off for Yucatan to hunt cobras' eggs or something adventurous. This isn't just the future Maggie had in mind. Maybe Dale isn't so bad after all, as husbands go.—Par.

P. S.

There were few dull moments on the set with gagsters Young and Niven constantly trying to outwit each other. Most notable was David's prank, arranged for a somewhat grim effect, during a slapping scene. He acquired a handful of false teeth, and when Loretta gave him a realistic whack, they promptly seemed to fall out of his mouth. His co-star was horrified, but only for a moment. Dave's toothful grin gave him away. . . . Loretta retaliated a few days later when the script called for her to douse David with a bucket of water. She filled it with ice cubes, and insisted on several rehearsals.... Zasu Pitts was accorded the title of set chef, as she daily deluged the cast and crew with cakes, pies, cookies, and her own personal recipes for other goodies. ... When David first came to Hollywood nine years ago, he was houseguest of Loretta, her mother and sisters. He hadn't even considered becoming an actor until the family began urging him to try his luck.... Pic marks a screen reunion for Loretta and Dave. They also appeared as husband and wife in "Practically Yours" before David returned to England. . . The inimitable Niven entertained the company constantly with his amusing stories and characterizations.

FREE SUBSCRIPTIONS!

Leave us let you in on a little secret: The only way to make sure that your favorite stars are featured in MODERN SCREEN is to fill out the Questionnaire below! (Follow instructions carefully, please, or your entry may be disqualified.) And—as a special bonus—if you clip this box RIGHT NOW and send it to us immediately, you may be one of the lucky 500 to receive a three months' subscription to MODERN SCREEN (February, March, April issues) absolutely free!

QUESTIONNAIRE

What stories and features did you enjoy most in our January issue? WRITE THE NUMBERS 1, 2 and 3 AT THE RIGHT OF YOUR 1st, 2nd AND 3rd CHOICES—AND THAT'S ALL!

My Friend, Frank (Sinatra) by George Evans ☐
Hate That Boy! (Frank Sinatra) by Billy Rose ☐
A Christmas He'll Never Forget (Van Johnson) ☐
Good News-MODERN SCREEN Poll Party by Louella Parsons ☐
Happy New Year! (Ray Milland—Joan Leslie—Margaret O'Brien) ☐
It's a Wonderful Life (Jimmy Stewart) ☐
Gregory Peck Life Story (Part One) ☐
My Finds of '46! (Lizabeth Scott-Mark Stevens) by Hedda Hopper ☐
"Esther's Like That" (Esther Williams) by Ben Gage ☐
Swing Your Partners (Lana Turner) ☐
Three Little Girls in Green (Maureen O'Hara) ☐
Sister-in-Law, Gene (Tierney) by Cholly Knickerbocker ☐

Which of the above did you like LEAST?.....

What 3 MALE stars would you like to read about in future issues? List them, 1, 2, 3, in order of preference.....

What 3 FEMALE stars would you like to read about in future issues? List them, 1, 2, 3, in order of preference.....

My name is .....

My address is..... City..... Zone.... State.....

I am ..... years old.

ADDRESS THIS TO: POLL DEPT., MODERN SCREEN
149 MADISON AVENUE, NEW YORK 16, N. Y.

The most reckless lover...
the boldest adventurer...
ever to bear the Monte Cristo name!
COLUMBIA PICTURES presents
The Return of Monte Cristo
STARRING
LOUIS HAYWARD · BARBARA BRITTON
GEORGE MACREADY
UNA O'CONNOR · HENRY STEPHENSON · STEVEN GERAY · RAY COLLINS
Screenplay by George Bruce and Alfred Neumann
Directed by HENRY LEVIN · Produced by GRANT WHYTOCK
AN EDWARD SMALL PRODUCTION

Use this famous Canadian Formula

for CHAPPED DRY HANDS

1. Quicker results. Softens roughest, driest skin over night.

2. Proved effectiveness for 65 years in cold Canada.

3. A pure, rich concentrated emollient. Aids healing. Choice of countless doctors, nurses, housewives, mothers.

4. Economical—spreads widely —single drop serves both hands.

At cosmetic counters—10¢, 25¢, 50¢ and $1.00 a bottle.

Campana Balm

THE SKIN SOFTENER

"Hello Darling!"
I bought
The two blocks of sterling inlaid at backs of bowls and handles of most used spoons and forks. They make this silverplate stay lovelier longer. Fifty-two piece set $68.50 with chest. (tax free)
HOLMES & EDWARDS
STERLING INLAID°
SILVERPLATE

Copyright 1947, The International Silver Co., Holmes & Edwards Division, Meriden, Conn. Sold in Canada by: The T. Eaton Co., Ltd., °Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

the fans

MODERN SCREEN FAN CLUB ASSOCIATION • SHIRLEY FROHLICH, DIRECTOR

■ Hi, fan clubbers, and welcome to the first monthly edition of "The Fans," right here, within the covers of MODERN SCREEN! We don't know how you feel about it, but we'd like to slap a huge orchid on each and every one of you, for making this possible. Bet you thought all this time we were using your cards and letters to line our closets. Uh-uh. Remember us? The friendly magazine? Each of those letters was a mighty persuasive campaigner for The Cause. But it was more than your written requests that turned the trick. You know MODERN SCREEN's policy —nothing but the best, always. The top stars . . . the best writers . . . the most interesting features. Frankly, we wouldn't have stood a chance if fan clubs—and particularly MSFCA clubs—hadn't been making such rapid strides, in all departments, during these past few years. Never have your journals been so well-written and edited; your officers more efficient; your members more active; your activities more exciting, and your self-accepted responsibilities more widespread in the community! In other words, you've quashed the old bogey, at last—the one about fan clubs being strictly kid stuff, characterized by hero-worship, hookey-playing and hysteria. This page is yours. But it's not a free gift. It's an earned reward! Now, if you'll bear with us, we want to take time to explain the workings of the MODERN SCREEN Fan Club Association to some million-and-a-half fans who are reading about us for the first time this month.

First of all, if you're a bit vague about what a fan club is, or what it has to offer you, put a marker right here to save your place, and turn to Jean Kinkead's "Co-Ed" (page 12). Jean tells you everything you want to know about fan clubs, in that wonderful way she has of making everything she writes about seem enchanted! And the best part of all is that everything Jean says is absolutely true. Not a word exaggerated!

Of course, not being a member of the MSFCA makes this page and the title, "The Fans," seem a little strange to you—but not for long, we hope. Because joining our Fan Club Association works something like your involuntary muscles—it could happen even while you're asleep! For anyone who belongs to an official MSFCA fan club is automatically a part of the MSFCA. It's as simple as that with no strings attached.

Although we're making our official bow in this issue, (Continued on page 100)

Andy Russell awards prizes to winners of MSFCA's Membership Sweepstakes Contest

"Sweet enough to eat!" he whispers. And you... with your fresh, white frills, your soft Trushay-tended hands... you planned it that way!

How faithfully this different hand lotion rewards its faithful users!

You can use fragrant, creamy Trushay a special "beforehand" way... before tubbing lingerie, before dishes. It guards hands even in hot, soapy water.

And be sure to use Trushay whenever, wherever your skin needs its softening touch.

TRUSHAY

The "Beforehand" Lotion

PRODUCT OF BRISTOL MYERS

RADIO GOSSIP BY BEN GROSS

(Continued from page 9)

again that the veterans of the entertainment world have a know-how that the newcomers simply can not equal. Among the youngsters, however, Henry Morgan, the ABC funster, has already achieved great favor among sophisticated listeners.

Among the variety shows, those of Kate Smith, Hildegarde and the Kraft Music Hall, starring Eddy Duchin and Edward Everett Horton, are the leaders. You can't go wrong in tuning them in.

When you come to the crooners, Frank Sinatra, Bing Crosby and Perry Como are still in the forefront of the procession. Andy Russell, Dick Haymes and the very young Vic Damone are also hitting vocal home runs. Jo Stafford, Helen Forrest, Dinah Shore and Joan Edwards are right up there in the female contingent.

The New York Philharmonic-Symphony and the famed orchestras of Boston, Cleveland and Philadelphia, with the NBC Symphony headed by Arturo Toscanini, are, as usual, high in the affections of the musical long-hairs. And, of course, in this category one can't overlook the Saturday broadcasts of the Metropolitan Opera Company.

The lineup of popular music bands reveals essentially the same faces as those in years gone by: Duke Ellington, Louis Prima, Cab Calloway, Guy Lombardo, Tommy Dorsey, etc. But there is also a new name, Elliot Lawrence, who is winning a great deal of favorable reaction.

Among the chatterers of the airwaves, our colleague, Ed Sullivan, has won an enthusiastic response from his millions of fans. Our other fellow worker, Hedda Hopper, is more popular than ever with her movie gossip and news of Hollywood personalities. And, naturally, one must not omit Walter Winchell, who has the highest listener rating of any air commentator.

* * *

January 1 is another historic day in radio. For on that date in 1927, NBC aired the Rose Bowl game in Pasadena, coast-to-coast, the first time that a Pacific Coast program was ever transmitted to the East.

* * *

Gags of the Month . . . Edgar Bergen: Charlie, what is it that you have to watch for when driving past a school?

Charlie McCarthy: A truant officer.

* * *

Gildersleeve: The other night I was a contestant on Truth or Consequences, and I didn't tell the truth.

Victor Borge: Then my program is the second you've been on.

Gildersleeve: Yes, this is the Consequence.

* * *

Eddie Cantor: Why did you let Walter Pidgeon make love to you when you're married to me?

Ida: Eddie, you're the only man who asks a question and answers it at the same time.

* * *

Fred Allen: What's new tonight, Portland?

Portland Hoffa: The paper says Japanese money has gone down.

Allen: Japanese money?

Portland: The yen is now barely an urge.

* * *

Funny Fan Mail . . . H. V. Kaltenborn, a grandfather and the dean of American commentators, although an admirable gentleman, is not exactly the swooner-crooner type. Yet, the other week, H. V. received this letter from an enamoured lady listener:

"Dear Mr. Kaltenborn: I love to listen to you when I'm in bed. Your voice sounds so warm and intimate. It makes me think you are right here and just talking to me. I love it. Would you mind if I came to the studio some evening?"

P. S. . . The lady hasn't showed up as yet.

* * *

At a dinner given to Al Jolson at the Hotel Astor, in New York, to celebrate the premiere of the picture based on his life story, the great mammy singer was showered with the tributes of the celebrated men and women of the entertainment world.

After it was all over, I, just as hundreds of others, congratulated the veteran song and joke man. "Wasn't it great!" he exclaimed to me. "All these people—this movie of my life by Sid Skolsky—everything! I can hardly talk, except to say one thing, Ben. I have everything I want now—except—well, you know what that is: A job on the radio. So how about telling 'em about me? Just say: Even if they did make a picture about me, I ain't dead yet!"

Okay, Al. I'm telling 'em. You are a grand old trouper . . . and there are millions eager to have you on the air again!

* * *

Loudspeaking . . . As you'll be reading this during the season of Happy New Year resolutions, let's have some fun and put down in print a few "I resolves" for the broadcasters to abide by. If they heeded them, the chances are 1947 would be a prize year in radio.

So, attention, stations, sponsors, producers, directors and performers! Resolve, by the sacred names of Hooper, Sinatra and a dozen NBC vice-presidents, to:

1—Cut down those lengthy commercials. They drive away the customers instead of attracting them.

2—Dig up new jokes for the comedians.

3—Insist that all girl singers pronounce their words as clearly as Kate Smith.

4—Ask Ed Sullivan never to mention in his Broadway column any comedian who makes strictly local jokes about Hollywood, which most listeners don't understand.

5—Take away the mike from any emcee who humiliates or insults a contestant in an audience participation show.

6—Tell some of the quiz shows that they'd win more friends if, instead of giving away cars, thousands of dollars and electric refrigerators, they'd give the listeners more entertainment.

7—Make an example of any comic who asks a movie star, "What has Van Johnson (or Gregory Peck, or any other handsome guy you can think of) got that I haven't got?"

8—Impress on some crooners, whose bank accounts have grown fat, to be nice to their fans, who made those bank accounts possible.

9—Give you better programs than ever . . . and thereby help you to have a Happy Radio New Year!

RADIO AWARD BY ED SULLIVAN

(Continued from page 8)

a career that was to run the gamut of showbusiness. "For a time, everything went along swell," recalled Bergen. "My vaudeville salary got up to $350 a week, ten times McCarthy's original cost. Of course, there were disturbing experiences, like that engagement at Little Rock, Arkansas, where the newspaper reviewer wrote: 'At this point in the vaudeville bill, for some unknown reason, there appeared Edgar Bergen, a dummy called Charlie McCarthy and a girl dressed as a nurse. Unfortunately for Bergen, the audience is not quite so gullible as McCarthy.' "

Wounded, bleeding as the result of the review in Little Rock, Bergen applied the tourniquet of kinder notices in other cities and hamlets, and as the years progressed, he worked his salary up to the not inconsiderable sum of $750 a week. Not only the mounting salary testified to the development of the act—something else happened to prove that McCarthy and his spirit were on the way up. The something else was their contract to play the world-famous Palace, on Broadway.

You youngsters will say "so what?" but in the old days of vaudeville, a contract to play the Palace was the be-all and end-all of an actor's career. An invitation to play the Palace was notice that an act had become Big Time stuff.

With the stamp of Palace approbation on him, Bergen launched into the different field of night club entertainment. "You ought to remember that very well," Bergen grinned. "I've still got the yellowed review you penned about me when we played the House of Morgan." He fumbled in his pocket, extracted a wrinkled newspaper review: "Edgar Bergen will be one of the comedy sensations of 1936."

"So what happened?" Bergen asked. "The day after your column boosted me, the Shuberts signed me for the Ziegfeld 'Follies' and I figured we were in the chips. And then the roof crashed in. At Philadelphia, just as the show was pulling up stakes for the opening on Broadway, I was fired."

Bergen shook his head at the memory: "It never rains but it pours. Released from the 'Follies,' and discouraged, things went from bad to worse. Then suddenly things reversed themselves. My agent telephoned me, all excited—Abe Lyman wanted me to go in with his band to the College Inn, Chicago. On top of that, the State-Lake Theater, Chicago, offered us the chance to 'double' into that house. It meant two jobs simultaneously, and two salaries! It looked as if the jinx was off us and when I started for Chicago, I was in a real sentimental mood. I was going back to my own city, where everything had originated. I was again on top of the world.

"Then, Boom! Once again the ceiling fell on us. Abe Lyman, it seemed, never had o.k.'d the idea of me appearing at the State-Lake Theater. Before the thing could be worked out, and while I was still on the train, the College Inn engagement was cancelled, just like that."

There were to be other great discouragements in his career, "but I never felt lower than at that moment," remembered Bergen. "Here we were, back in Chicago—released from the Ziegfeld 'Follies'—cancelled out of College Inn and a long run. That night, I took stock of myself and the conclusion was inescapable. We had gone just so far

(Continued on page 83)

EXOTIC NIGHTS.. in the mystic port of Morocco!
WARM LIPS.. of the girl of 1001 dreams!
BURNING HATE.. in the hearts of men who fought for her!
UNIVERSAL-INTERNATIONAL Presents
Yvonne De CARLO
Brian DONLEVY
Jean Pierre AUMONT
don't say it.. sigh it!
SONG OF SCHEHERAZADE
in Technicolor
with EVE ARDEN
PHILIP REED • JOHN QUALEN
and
Star of the Metropolitan Opera Company
CHARLES KULLMAN
Written and Directed by WALTER REISCH
Director of Photography: Hal Mohr, A.S.C.
Associate Producer: Edward Dodds
Produced by
EDWARD KAUFMAN
A Universal-International Picture
THRILL to the best loved MUSIC of RIMSKY-KORSAKOFF
"SONG OF INDIA" • "FANDANGO"
"ARABESQUE" • "FLIGHT OF THE BUMBLE BEE"
"HYMN TO THE SUN" • "CAPRICE ESPAGNOL"
"SCHEHERAZADE"

5 Winners!!!

M·G·M says "Thank you, Modern Screen readers, for your wonderful Christmas present to our stars".

And in the spirit of the season, look what we have for you....

FRANK SINATRA IN "TILL THE CLOUDS ROLL BY" AND "IT HAPPENED IN BROOKLYN"

VAN JOHNSON IN "TILL THE CLOUDS ROLL BY" AND "HIGH BARBAREE"

PETER LAWFORD IN "MY BROTHER TALKS TO HORSES"

JUNE ALLYSON IN "TILL THE CLOUDS ROLL BY" AND "THE SECRET HEART"

GREGORY PECK IN "THE YEARLING"

To our Readers...

■ January issues always find editors tallying their sins and their circulations. MODERN SCREEN being the friendly magazine, Henry Malmgreen and I naturally haven't a sin to our names. But we do have circulation—and above all we have friends in alarming quantities. For instance, in 1946, 180,000 of you darling people voted on our MODERN SCREEN poll (p. 20) . . . Since that poll tells us whom you want to read about—and helps keep MODERN SCREEN far ahead of the competition—thousands of you are in effect helping us edit our book. All of you pitching for us, that's friendship on a colossal scale, and we love it! I'd like to sit right down and write each of you a fat love letter—and enclose a lean lamb chop. Since King Solomon and Mike Romanoff between them couldn't handle that order, I'm going to content myself with telling you who won the poll and what we did about it . . . For 1946, Frankie passed Van by just the length of a bow-tie. Cornel Wilde was a close third, followed by Pete Lawford, Alan Ladd, June Allyson, Guy Madison, Gregory Peck, Jeanne Crain and June Haver—in that order . . . Your response to our poll is moving and it's magnificent. Through you, it has become the biggest poll of its kind in the world. Therefore, the honor you bestowed on Frank Sinatra was a very great one. We felt an obligation to present an equally great award. Not a medal or a ribbon, but a permanent and living symbol of your choice. And so, we commissioned Jo Davidson, America's most celebrated sculptor, to fashion a Sinatra bust. A short while ago, Louis B. Mayer, head of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, placed the final seal of approval on your choice when he appeared on Frank's program and personally presented him with the bust . . . For a full account of the excitement, the mammoth party at Ciro's following the award, our own Louella's generous gesture in inviting Frankie to guest on her program on behalf of MODERN SCREEN; for all this, read on. But first, before I forget, a great big beautiful Merrie Christmas to all of you!

Ida Zeavale

by George Evans

MY FRIEND, FRANK

Whether he's rehearsing in a radio studio or acting on a movie set, Frankie always finds time to huddle with his friend and publicist, George B. Evans. (Here, chatting on the "It Happened In Brooklyn" set.)

Take away that old black magic voice, and what's left? Just about the best friend any guy ever had, that's all.

■ I can remember the night it began, and that was a long time ago. Back in 1939. It was a blustery winter night, and I was driving along by the East River about one a.m. I was on my way down to my newspaper office for coffee and a bull session with some reporter pals of mine. The river beside the Drive looked black and lonely, and an icy wind thumped against my convertible.

I reached over and turned my radio on for company. The button I pushed got me a small local station, a voice singing "Night And Day," and a tap on the shoulder from Destiny, although I didn't know that yet. All I knew was that the voice somehow made me feel warmer and happier. It sounded as if the guy singing was right in the car and as if he was singing directly to me. I liked that. But the song was over in a minute and so was the program. Just then a big truck came along and darn near took off my left fender, so I didn't hear the announcement of the vocalist's name.

I thought about it later, over my second cup of coffee with the boys. "Anyone know who was singing 'Night And Day' over station W—— at one o'clock?" I inquired. "Some new crooner."

That got me a fine collection of wisecracks, but no information. The boys said they had something to do at one o'clock besides listen to the radio. They said they had a newspaper to get out. They added a few extra remarks about crooners.

I picked up the telephone and called the radio station. "Who was the guy singing 'Night And Day' at one o'clock?"

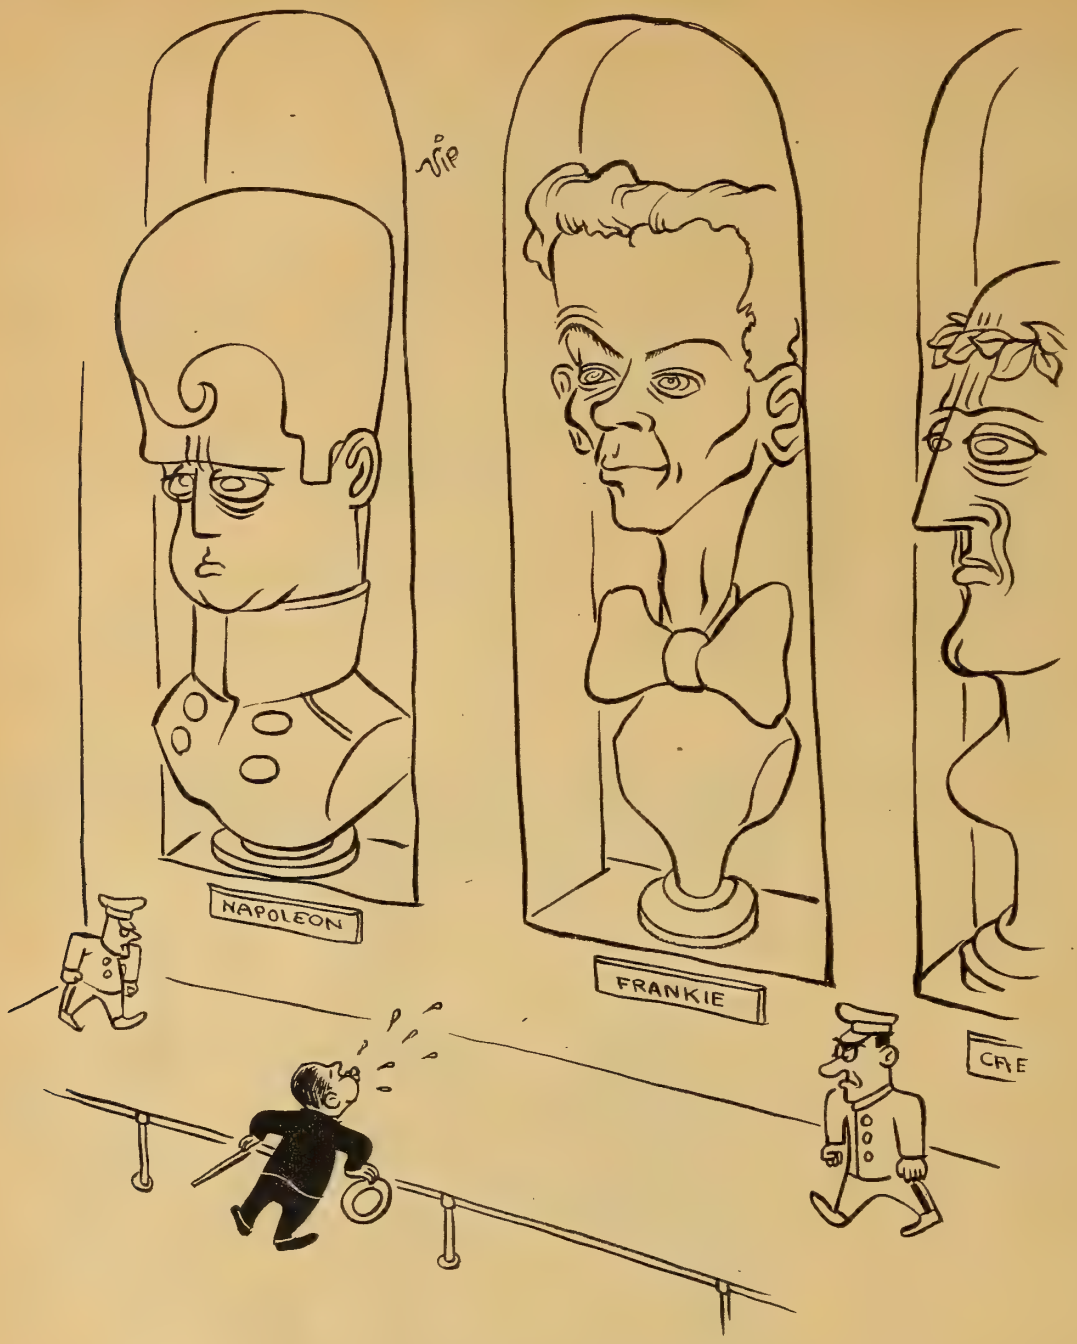
There was a slight pause for station identification, and then I got my answer.

"That was Frank Sinatra, broadcasting from the Rustic Cabin."

I repeated it obligingly to my newspaper pals. But did they know they were listen- (Continued on page 92)

To honor Frank for heading our poll for 1946, MODERN SCREEN commissioned Jo Davidson, the world famous sculptor, to do this magnificent bronze bust, then gave it to Frank.

illustrated by virgil partch



THERE ARE AT LEAST TEN REASONS WHY I HATE FRANK SINATRA:

1 After ringing one of the loudest success bells in show business history, Frankie still knocks around with the same guys who knew him "when." The boys in the bands he used to sing with love him like a hot trumpet. When he walks down River Street in Hoboken, the policemen's horses give him sugar. He thinks in big numbers. His favorite is 140,000,000; he wants no part of the 400. He makes an old social climber like me feel like a social climber. Hate that boy! 2 He weighs 130 with a flat iron in his pocket. But he once knocked out a couple of plug-uglies for making a stupid, bigoted crack. How do you suppose that makes me feel? I usually substitute chit-chat for the old one-two. Loathe that boy! 3 A few months ago, Little Bow Tie walked out of a zillion dollar picture and flew to New York to stooge for Phil Silvers the night he opened at the Copacabana. For this he got (a) no dough and (b) no billing. He did it because "Rags" Ragland, who had been booked to do a double act with Silvers, died a few days before the opening. "Rags" was an old buddy of his. That kind of gesture makes a "do-nothing-for-nobody" look pretty crummy. Can't stand that boy! 4 When he could be sunning himself at Palm Springs, he flies to faraway schools and talks to kids about tolerance. I hate intolerance just as much, but I do less. When he believes in something, he does something. The courage of this skinny kid with the loving-cup ears makes me feel as yellow as Chiquita Banana. Detest that boy! 5 When the Theater Guild brought in a

by BILLY ROSE

Hate that Boy!

IF ONLY HE'D SING OFF KEY, OR GET BALD, OR LOSE THAT WAISTLINE! BUT NO, THAT SINATRA JUST GOES ON AND ON, WILTING THE MEN AND WOWING THE LADIES.

it called "Oklahoma!" a few years ago, I turned chartreuse ith envy. Frank Sinatra thinks Bing Crosby is wonderful and ays so to anyone who'll listen. Phooey on that boy! 6 When omeone tries to make a touch, he reaches for his wallet like Vild Bill Hickock used to reach for his six-shooter. A good way hit me for five is to ask me for twenty. Intensely dislike hat boy! 7 In 1944, he worked for a studio where the boss- an was a Hoover Republican, but he drove his car on the t with a windshield plastered with Roosevelt stickers. Me, hen I'm with Hannegan I'm a Democrat, when I'm with ewey I'm a Republican. A pox on that boy! 8 Next spring e's financing a series of four-year scholarships for musical udents who otherwise couldn't afford advanced technical study. I've made a lot of money with musicians, but I never gave one of them a downbeat without collateral. He makes me feel like Scrooge. Nuts to that boy! 9 When he sings, my wife puts her arms around the radio. When I sing, she leans out of the window so the neighbors won't think it's she. He eats southern-fried chicken, candied sweets, and rye bread. I eat lettuce and rye-krisp. He has a waistline like Gregory Peck. I have one like Gregory Ratoff. Bomb that boy! 10 When I do a show I need seven press agents to protect my investment. When he does one, they need 70 cops to protect the theater. I'm snips and snails and puppy dogs' tails. He's sugar and spice and everything nice. The son of a so-and-so gives me an inferiority complex. Hate that boy!

VAN WAS A GROWN UP MAN OF EIGHT AND MEN DIDN'T CRY JUST BECAUSE THEY HAD NO CHRISTMAS TREE . . .

By Virginia Wilson

■ The big bedroom window had only been open half an hour, but already the room was icy. There was a full moon shining on the powdery snow outside, and by its light Van could see his breath making a frosty silver plume. He shivered, more with excitement than cold. When you're eight years old, Christmas Eve is so full of suspense that you can hardly bear it. He lay there, wriggling his toes a little under the heavy, home-made quilts. Listening.

The sounds from the other room were faint but unmistakable. The rustle of tissue paper. The tinkle of a fragile Christmas tree ornament breaking on the floor and then Dad swearing. Granny's soft Swedish voice, reproving him. Van grinned, and thought with eight-year-old superiority about last year when he had believed in Santa Claus. It was more fun this way, really. Of course he'd written a letter to Santa this year, the same as usual, solemnly giving it to his father to mail. It had contained just one sentence—a short one, in round, childish writing.

"Please, Santa Claus, an electric train."

Not that he thought he'd get it. Not now, when he knew there wasn't any Santa Claus. (Continued on page 86)

a xmas he'll never forget

Louis B. Mayer, M-G-M exec, formally presented the MODERN SCREEN Award bust to Frank Sinatra on F.'s broadcast. Later, they and Editor Al Delacorte went to Ciro's to celebrate.

At long last, Cornel Wilde's differences with 20th-Fox have been ironed out and he remains in "Amber." Wife Pat Knight's on her way up, too.

Guy Madison and Gail Russell, Hollywood's cutest kid twosome, had a fine time at the shindig. Says Guy, "We see each other every evening, but we can each date others—if we want to!"

Joan Crawford held even two glamor-accustomed folks like Louella Parsons and Louis Mayer enthralled over plans for her "in-person" exploitation for "Humoresque." She'll go to Paris on a similar stint.

louella parsons'

HOLLYWOOD HAD A CORONATION THE OTHER DAY: EVERYBODY—INCLUDING OUR OWN LOUELLA PARSONS— TURNED OUT TO CROWN THE KING, FRANK SINATRA, AT MODERN SCREEN'S PARTY FOR ONE OF THE SWELLEST GUYS IN TOWN.

Back from the wars, Glenn Ford, already a star, is a double threat as both the bobby sockers' and matrons' delight. Mrs. F., Eleanor Powell, played at Chi.'s Chez Paree at $10,000 a week, will do a movie soon.

■ A party to be remembered long and happily in the annals of Hollywood social history is the gay dinner dance hosted for the glamor boys and girls of Hollywood. Ciro's, the famous nightclub, was the setting, while the occasion was the award given each year by this magazine to the star chosen by you readers as the reigning favorite—the Number One actor of the year.

This year—1946—the winner of this coveted honor was Frank Sinatra, the boy whose voice has charmed millions. It was, however, not Sinatra the singer, but Sinatra the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer actor, the boy who delighted so many movie goers in "Anchors Aweigh," who was singled out by our discerning MODERN SCREEN readers.

Van Johnson was chosen last year. This year, Van was away on location, but he sent a message to the Delacortes, expressing his regret he couldn't be present. But Alan Ladd, who was voted tops on two or more preceding years, was there with his devoted Sue, the girl who discovered him and who is always so frankly proud of the handsome Alan. It does my heart good to see them together.

The Ladds, Sue and Alan, expect a baby, their second one, at Christmas time, and Alan makes no secret of hoping the stork will bring them a boy.

"I'd like a boy," says Alan, "and I hope he will be exactly like our three-year-old daughter, Alana." She is the darling and apple of his eye.

As I talked to Sue and Alan, I heard her say, "Alan, let's dance. We don't want Shirley Temple and her husband (Continued on next page)

Sonny Tufts co-stars with Ann Blyth in "A Swell Guy," congratulated Ann at the party for at last shedding the brace she's been wearing since her toboggan accident. Ann refused to learn how to smoke for her new picture.

Our party was fine, Esther Williams and Ben Gage agreed. But the Gages are looking forward to barbecues at their new home, with Esther the salad chef, Ben at the steaks.

Publisher George Delacorte heard all about Dorothy Lamour's new home, which will have a nursery for her year-old son and a ranch for raising work horses.

GOOD NEWS

good news GOOD NEWS GOOD NEWS GOOD NEWS

louella parsons'

Good News GOOD NEWS

GOOD NEWS

Good News

good news GOOD NEWS

Phoning keeps Hollywood's bachelor Lawford busy, and it's a Miami night-club dancer who's likely to be on the other end of the wire. Peter drove up to the party in his swanky $3,000, red leather-trimmed car.

Dancing with husband Jack Briggs at MS's party was a far cry from the minuet Ginger Rogers dances with David Niven in new pic. "Magnificent Doll." G.'s a brownette again.

Deanna Durbin (here with husband Felix Jackson) looks just the way she used to again. Her hair's back to its natural color, and her figure's streamlined. She'll sing requests in new picture.

Another happy couple who'll be buying layettes soon was at the party: The newly married Paul Brinkmans. Jeanne Crain's going to play Maureen O'Hara's daughter in "Chicken Every Sunday."

to outdo us in the rhumba department."

I don't wonder they felt in a dancing mood. The Delacortes, marvelous hosts, had left nothing undone to make the party one which even in Hollywood, which specializes in superb dinner dances, deserves mention among the really delightful events of any year. It was a fun party from start to finish, with Editor Albert Delacorte and Publisher George Delacorte and his charming wife on hand to see no one was neglected, with such food spread temptingly on buffet tables, such music and such chatter!

What a week of celebration for the MODERN SCREEN AWARD!

Earlier that very evening, Frank Sinatra had received the MODERN SCREEN AWARD, a bust by the renowned sculptor, Jo Davidson. The ceremony had taken place on Frank's radio show, and the spirited likeness which the sculptor had created was presented to Frankie by his boss, Louis B. Mayer, who as usual, made a speech that was spontaneous and eloquent with words of good wishes that must have made Frank a very happy boy. (Continued on next page)

GOOD NEWS good news GOOD NEWS GOOD NEWS GOOD NEWS

louella parsons'

Good News GOOD NEWS GOOD NEWS Good News GOOD NEWS

The guest of honor, MODERN SCREEN's "king of the polls," Frank Sinatra, talks to George Delacorte, MS's publisher, and Louella Parsons. To Hollywood's joy, Louella's back in the swing after her illness.

Nope, Nancy Guild's not the exclusive property of Frank Latimore, though he might like it that way! Nancy's bosses want to keep her natural, so she wears her hair straight both on and off screen.

Best thing Albert Delacorte, MS's editor, could do for Larry Parks, was to promise to say "hello" to Larry's wife, Betty Garrett. Betty's in New York, starring in hit musical, "Call Me Mister."

Mrs. Charles Korvin sipped her coffee and discussed her husband's latest role with him. Charles (whose real name is "Geza") is no longer on suspension from Universal, will co-star with Merle Oberon.

That's not a mustache Rory Calhoun's sprouting; it's just the trimming on Virginia Mayo's hat. Michael O'Shea thinks the mustache makes Rory look like Clark Gable—which is okay with Rory.

The Robert Mitchums are real party-goers. They love to dance, and glide around the floor like professionals. Although divorce rumors floated around last year, Bob says the rumors were just that and nothing more.

"Cleatus and I belong together," announced Bob a few months ago when reporters were breaking their necks to find out whether it would be Lana T. who'd become the next Mrs. Robert Hutton. Now he and C. are one.

Then on my show I interviewed Frank and also paid a tribute to this magazine which has such wide appeal for every member of a family.

I have never seen Frankie, who sometimes acts just a little blasé and bored, as touched and pleased by anything as he was by the Davidson bust. And well he might. The man who was selected to sculpt a bust of the late Franklin D. Roosevelt, Clemenceau, Foch, and other distinguished leaders, had achieved a remarkable physical and spiritual likeness of the young crooner.

Taking me by the hand, Frankie led me out to his bust which stood on a pedestal. Gazing at it, he said, "Isn't it wonderful? It will be something my children will treasure all their lives.

"Look," he said, digging into his pocket as he produced a tiny head modeled from the big bust.

"May I have one?" I asked.

"I'd like to give you my head," he said.

That was the only flip remark Frankie made all evening. I have never seen him as subdued, excepting when he did my radio show with me. He had gone out to see his little daughter, Nancy, before he came to Ciro's, and she clung to him with kisses and hugs.

Just as I had prophesied, a week after they'd split up, Frankie and Nancy, who had parted just before the MODERN SCREEN dinner, reconciled. This line was in Frankie's radio script, "Put the spaghetti on the stove, keep the children up, I'll be home." But there was never a chance for him to say that line because (Continued on next page)

Tom Drake didn't know when this pic was snapped, he was so busy telling Cathy Downs and Lon McCallister about the book he's writing. Lon's got three pictures lined up, now that he's back in civvies.

Still newlyweds, Barbara Hale and Bill Williams wouldn't part even to look at Jo Davidson's bust of Frankie, but examined it with Bill's arm safely around Barb's waist.

Pert June Haver visits with Mr. and Mrs. George Montgomery. Dinah's got a new air show co-starring jokester Peter Lind Hayes—who's a very funny guy.

Now that Alan Ladd expects to be a father again any minute, he's going into business and just bought the Mayfair Cafe. Sue's all enthused about plans to star him in "hot 'n' heavy" romantic roles in the future.

Trust Lana Turner to go to extremes! Once almost 20 pound overweight, she's now reducing so fast, her friends hardl recognize her. That's brilliant pianist Carmen Cavallero with Lan

She's had her first corsage (violets), seen her first show (N. "Carousel") and had her first screen kiss (in "Rich, Full Life") Liz Taylor's certainly old enough to chat with handsome Mark Steve the Sinatras met accidentally at Slapsy Maxie's cafe and kissed and made up. Each was with a large party of friends at different tables.

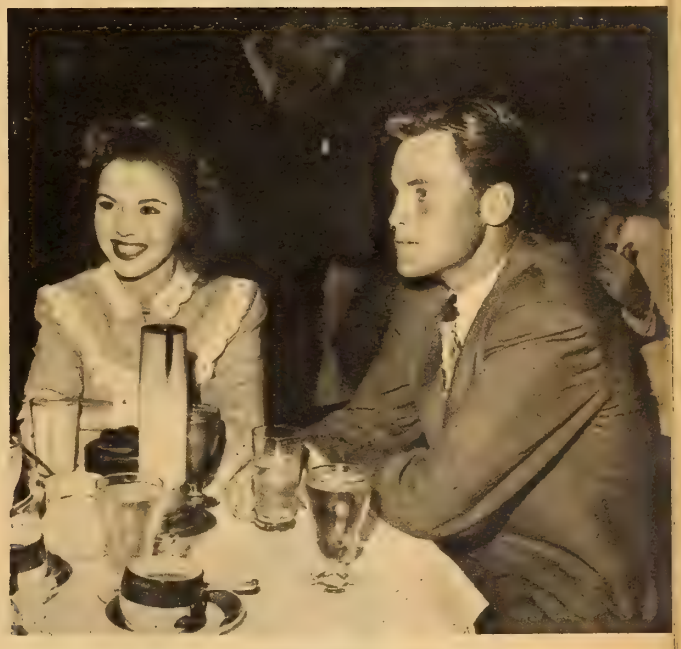
Phil Silvers, an old friend who was the star entertainer of the evening, called on Frankie for an impromptu number. Frank and Phil dressed up like vaudevillians and the bow tie king sang "Going Home." Said Phil, "That wouldn't be a bad idea!" At this, Frankie walked directly from the stage to Nancy's table, where she sat, pretty as a picture. He asked her to dance. Beaming, she accepted. They danced once around the floor and on through the door and home.

I'm going to set a precedent about the party news (fashion reporters take notice) by telling you what the guest of honor wore. Nobody ever cares about what the (Continued on page 105)

louella parsons'

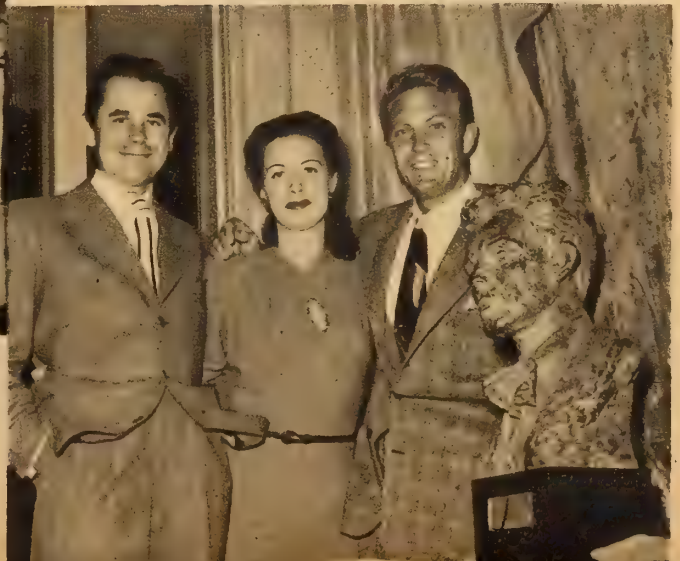
s soon as Johnny Johnston's divorce is final, he and Kathryn Grayson, ho's just signed a 7-year contract, will go on a "singing honeymoon." ey plan to appear as a team on cross-country personal appearances.

Talk about time flying! Even though Shirley Temple and hubby John Agar deny it, rumor has it that Little Miss Marker's due to become a Little Mrs. Mama.



erica seems to be a bit too topsy-turvy for England's charming ort, Phyllis Calvert. Here, Editor Al Delacorte and columnist dda Hopper join Gary Cooper in a Yankee ribbing session.

Ex-Lieut. Bob Stack threesome'ed it with the Glenn Fords. Glenn's trying to see "Gilda" once completely—fans have been getting violent!



NEW YEAR'S MEANS CONFETTI

AND TOASTS NOW. BUT THE STARS REMEMBER

WHEN SOMETIMES THOSE CHEERS HID TEARS . . .

by Jerry Asher

"HAPPY" NEW YEAR!

■ Not a child has to go to bed unless he falls asleep, or says goodnight on his own accord! She was only four years old at the time, but the importance of this announcement made a terrific impression on one Margaret O'Brien. They were at a cousin's house in San Francisco. It was December 31st and as usual, all the relatives were gathered to laugh, talk and reminisce. Being Irish and sentimental, there was also a tear or two along with the gaiety. At twelve the bells rang out. A heavy-lidded but determined-to-stay-awake Margaret, joined in the fun. She especially loved "breakfast served at midnight"—even if the reason wasn't exactly clear in her little girl's mind! New Year's Day, Mrs. O'Brien gave Margaret one last Christmas present, held over for this special event. The one she received last New Year's Day, Margaret will never forget. Eagerly she tore into the bright colored package. Before their startled eyes she pulled out a baseball and catcher's mitt! Somehow, someway, something had gone terribly wrong. It was the Christmas present Margaret had selected herself to give to—Butch Jenkins!

■ "Whiskers" was a very sick dog. Lying there so still in his box backstage at the Arlequin Theater, he looked pleadingly into the eyes of his young mistress. She struggled desperately to keep back the tears. "You can't cry now, Joan," someone cautioned her. "You're on next." At that particular moment, to Joan Leslie it seemed as if she was always on next. Invariably, on this last day of the year, the Brodel Sisters touring in vaudeville, found themselves far away from Detroit, friends and festivity. Now, to climax everything, the manager of the Quebec Theater requested a special midnight show. In French! Worried sick over her pet, Joan managed somehow to write a sketch. Sister Mary played Father Time, Betty played the Shadow, Joan was the little New Year. Just as the bells rang and the curtain went up, Joan looked toward the wings. There was "Whiskers" on his feet, and wagging his tail. After the show, everyone on the bill gathered in the largest dressing room. They laughed and sang until dawn. Someone brought sandwiches and coffee. To Joan Leslie, they tasted like caviar and champagne!

■ "Don't forget to knock on Mrs. Rumbold's door and wish her a happy New Year," his mother cautioned young Ray Milland. "You know how she loves little boys." Ray knew indeed. It was an old Welsh custom back in Neath, Wales, where he was born. The grownups attended the midnight watch service—watching the old year out and the New Year in. Bright and early the following morning the children made the rounds of the neighborhood. In exchange for cheery New Year's greetings, each child received fruit or nuts—or a kiss! The toothsome bounties appealed to his small boy's heart, but how he hated those kisses! Mrs. Rumbold's expansive ones in particular. Being his mother's best friend, she always insisted on kissing him, too. "I won't let her kiss me, I won't," Ray muttered desperately through clenched teeth. All that New Year's Day he tramped through the snow, avoiding the deadly issue. Finally at nightfall he knocked resignedly on the foreboding door. "Is Mrs. Rumbold at home?" he asked, as he felt his whole world slipping away. "Mrs. Rumbold," came the rejoinder, "has the mumps!"

At six, Greg was a city slicker, complete with high buttoned boots and freckles.

Though G. was terribly woman shy, Mom was the only gal who could bring out the Beau Brummel in him.

"The Yearlings." Here, at a zoo, Greg anticipated his Metro hit by 20 years.

RESTLESS AND CONFUSED, YOUNG GREG DIDN'T HAVE A DREAM TO HIS NAME. BUT A TRIP TO NEW YORK CHANGED ALL THAT! (PART I)

By Kirtley Baskette

gregory peck life story

■ The sign on the little brown bungalow in La Jolla, California, read, "La-Lo-O-Mi," which in Indian language meant, "Welcome." All the funny little shingle sided bungalows in La Jolla had names tacked up beside the door — "Resthaven," "Seaside," "Ocean View," "Bide-A-Wee." La Jolla, nestling on a curving white beached bay of the blue Pacific above San Diego, was a resort village. Down the hill a half mile from Fay Street, where the Peck bungalow perched, the high shore broke off into sandy cliffs, famous the world over for their grottos, caves, and natural arches through which the Pacific breakers boiled and bubbled. Glassy blue coves scalloped the shore and all year 'round gaudy umbrellas blossomed on the white sand. No wonder La Jolla people counted themselves particularly blessed to live in such a heavenly place. No wonder they named their little cottages affectionately. And the one where Gregory Peck and his wife, Bernice, lived, was especially blessed and appropriately titled the night of April 5, 1916. That's when their baby was born. He was especially welcome at La-Lo-O-Mi—because he was a boy.

Gregory Peck, Senior, had his heart set on a boy, a son of his father, a Peck. The Pecks were sturdy Irish-Americans; Dad Peck's mother had come over from Ireland, an immigrant, married a Buffalo, New York, baker and when he died, traveled West to San Diego with her small boy. Alone, she'd raised him and raised him right, hiring out for work to support him.

Greg's dad, Gregory Peck, was a he-man—square, solid, big, and muscular—and he passed on to his famous son the manly virtues of an athlete. Mr. Peck, active in his school days, starred at Michigan Univ. in football, basketball (Continued on next page)

gregory peck life story

Baby Stephen was born just after Greg finished appearing at a summer theater. The anxious pop practically bit his nails to the knuckles worrying about Greta (here, holding Jonny) who astounded everyone by being up and about in 6 days!

Statistics show that if Greg accepted every role offered him, he'd be working constantly for the next 10 years! He still has enough excess energy left, however, to perfect his usually corny card tricks.

He has only himself to blame! When they were first married, Greta doted on man-tailored suits and slacks. Now, because Greg likes his women feminine, she often blossoms out in frills and furbelows.

The biggest thing in Jonny's life right now is his new cowboy suit and Stephen, whom he calls "My baby." When he saw M.S. photog Gus Gale, he chirped, "Hi, pal!" then kept pleading, "More photographs, please!"

and baseball, playing semi-pro ball after college, still excelling in everything connected with sports around San Diego, where he played on or coached almost every kind of action team in town.

Dad Peck knew the Pecks always had boys and he was confident. "If I'd have been a girl," Greg Peck has often grinned since, "Dad would have sent me back for a refund." He had an Irish temper that way, as "Doc" Peck proved the night he married pretty Bernice Ayres, from St. Louis, Missouri, who was to be Greg Peck's mother.

Greg's mother's father, a railroad detective, had seven sturdy children. English, Dutch and Scotch blood ran in their veins and Irish and English in Dad Peck's. If the baby boy born in the little California bungalow that night hadn't (Continued on page 70)

Greg (of "The Macomber Affair") whets his appetite by working out with weights, bar bells and tennis. Jonny's a tag-along, mimics pop even to wood chopping and huge meals.

Contrary to custom, Jonny isn't jealous of baby Steve, magnanimously offered to share his private zoo of a pair of monkeys and a troupe of trained dogs as soon as "My Baby" grows old enough to appreciate the better things of life.

"Esther's like that"

by ben gage

TEMPERAMENT IS JUST A WORD

IN THE DICTIONARY TO ESTHER WILLIAMS,

WHO DOESN'T EVEN GET MAD WHEN HER HUSBAND

SAYS HE LIKES HER ACTING—

BUT PREFERS HER BACKSTROKE!

■ The girl in the white dress was in trouble, and the book said a soldier should always be a gentleman. Besides, I have been called a lot of things but no one has ever called me blind, and what I saw in the dress I liked. And I could see very well, although it was raining cats and dogs in sunny Southern California.

That's how I happened to meet Esther Williams—I rescued her car from the parking lot at Earl Carroll's and when I brought it around to the door, some people introduced us.

"This is Esther Williams, the actress," they said.

It didn't click with me. That name meant something else. "You mean," I said, "Esther Williams, the swimmer?"

"No," smiled Esther, "just Esther Williams."

That's what I liked about the girl I later married—right from the start. No act. No glamor. Nice and normal. I've never thought of Esther as an actress. Before I met her that night (Continued on page 79)

▼ It isn't Bach and it isn't boogie-woogie; all that the musical Gages can play on their new piano—yet!—is chopsticks. Esther practices twice a day, now that she's through working on "Fiesta."

▼ Ben's a handy gadget to have around; his height's a great help in hanging curtains. Esther's proudest, though, of the old vacuum he converted into a swimming pool cleaner.

▶ They're both wild about figs, and got a wonderful surprise when the tree on their property blossomed forth with lots of fruit. Ben's kept busy picking, but Esther specializes in eatin'.

my best finds of '46!

by hedda hopper

Lizabeth Scott and Mark Stevens!
Out of her whole bright roll call of "Stars of the Month," Hedda Hopper picks these magic personalities for inevitable stardom.

The winnahs! Lizabeth Scott and Mark Stevens give Hedda Hopper their thanks and their grins for those hard-earned honors.

LIZABETH SCOTT

■ If it's perfectly okay with everybody, Miss Lizabeth Scott can help herself to a brand new name right now.

She's not "The Threat"—she's "The Promise." And I'm backing that up by crowning Lizabeth MODERN SCREEN's Prize Girl Find of 1946!

Maybe Scotty was just a threat, back last year when I slipped a gold Gruen award watch on her trim wrist and announced as how she was going places in Hollywood. But Liz was just a fresh ex-model then—a one-picture girl, untried and untested, and buried under a load of press agent adjectives a mile deep—"The Threat" . . . "The Hubba-Hubba" . . . "The Tall, Tawny and Terrific" . . . the This and the That.

I had to hire a steam shovel, practically, to dig down and discover what Lizabeth Scott was really like before I dared stick out my neck on her chances. Things are different now—and how! I'm not saying "I told you so"—not exactly—but you'll have to admit I can pick 'em. I pointed out, 'way back then and in these very pages, that all Scotty needed (Continued on page 95)

She's sweet and svelte, yet packs it away. Her idea of a light snack is a quart of milk and millions of brownies. During her visit, the Scott appetite put a dent into England's rations.

MARK STEVENS

■ Pardon me, kids, for crooking my elbow in public—but if you don't mind, I'd like to pat myself on the back with this new, shiny copy of MODERN SCREEN.

After all, it's about this time, isn't it—New Year's—that you get around to checking up? And, looking back over MODERN SCREEN's star-bound Gruen watch winners, it's pretty plain to me that Hedda Hopper's picked herself a peck of pretty special people in the past twelve months—yes, indeed!

Now's the time when that rickety old '46 guy with the sickle bows out for the '47 kid with the brand new hourglass—and maybe that's pretty appropriate, too. Hollywood's never had such a shot of new blood in its history as it has this year. And along with MODERN SCREEN, maybe I've helped to hand out a transfusion or two. If so, I'm mighty happy. Nurse, hand me my plasma, quick! I love it—because I love Hollywood.

And Hollywood thrives on new blood—new faces, new names, new talents, new stars! (Continued on page 97)

Mark and wife Annelle collect pix of their baby. The seven-week-old pup they bought recently had to be given away. He was so huge the Stevenses were scared he'd swallow baby!

It's a wonderful life!

HE'S FLOWN ALL OVER EUROPE AND COVERED CONTINENTS, BUT NOTHING'S EVER THRILLED JIMMY STEWART LIKE COMING HOME . . .

by Ida Zeitlin

■ The drought's over, girls. Your long drink of water's back. We can talk about Jimmy Stewart again. He's finished his first picture, "It's A Wonderful Life" and started on "Magic Town," his second. He's living in his pre-war house, and Daisy Dooley, his pre-war housekeeper, is running it for him.

Daisy called him up at the Hank Fondas, who'd taken him in for a week that stretched to three months. "Don't you think you'd better get into your own place, and I'll come back and work for you?"

Jimmy wouldn't be surprised if his folks put Daisy up to it when the letter to Frances Fonda didn't work. "Isn't Jim staying too long?" they inquired anxiously of Frances, who showed him the letter.

"Nice penmanship," he murmured, and changed the subject. Now that he's moved, the only difference is he goes home to sleep.

He looks the same as ever—legs up to here, jaw down to there, and the slow-breaking grin. For the immediate future, his plans (Continued on page 103)

Even singer Anita Gordon's voice couldn't be heard above Charlie McCarthy's prattle. Edgar Bergen made Charlie tease Jim about painting his roof bright green so's he could spot it from the air.

One of Jimmy's best gals is blonde Anita Colby (above), although he's currently squiring Peggy Cummins. When Jim came back from the Army, he gave his service decorations to his first fan club.

Love song

HE WAS CROONING HIS HEART OUT ON A SMOKY BANDSTAND WHEN HE SPOTTED THIS BLONDE. "I'M DICK HAYMES," HE GRINNED DISARMINGLY. FIRST SHE WAS SORE—THEN THEY WERE MARRIED

by Jean Kinkead

■ Considering the slow start Dick and Joannie got off to, they're really breezing right along. Daily phone calls when they're apart, silly love letters written in soap on the bathroom mirror. It's strictly a made-in-heaven proposition at this point, but it wasn't so in the beginning . . .

It started one night when Dick was singing at the Hotel Lincoln with Harry James. There was a blonde having dinner alone at a table in the corner, and Dick couldn't take his eyes off her. "Hey, Harry," he said between numbers, "who's the babe at the far table?" Harry looked out at the gal, waved and then cocked that famous eyebrow at Dick.

"Look, bud," he grinned. "Does Macy tell Gimbel?" Whereupon he gave the band a downbeat, and further conversation was suspended. Dick sang "Stardust" as he'd never sung it before, then "Night and Day," and eventually there was an intermission.

The blonde was on her dessert by then, and in another minute she'd be gone, and jeepers she was beautiful. The boys in the band adjourned to the bar, all but the big towhead with the stars in his eyes. He strode across the room to the table in the corner. "I'm Dick Haymes," he said, and then he stood awkwardly, looking down (Continued on page 89)

No spendthrift, Dick nevertheless gave up a neat $250,000 to take a 3 months vacation with the family (here, wife Joanne, Pigeon and Skipper). "It's the first time I've ever been able to take it easy," Dick grins, "so now I'm going to get acquainted with the kids!"

The Haymes' nearly broke up when Joanne insisted on resuming her acting career, but when she proved to her anxious hubby that the children were old enough to be cared for by a nurse, Dick relented. So now she's a big hit in "Abie's Irish Rose" and "Rich" is wowing 'em in "The Shocking Miss Pilgrim."

hunderbolt," Dick's too-spirited horse, is anti-social, hates everybody t the boss. Dick's got "horse fever," though, and just bought a ling stable with singer Curt Massey to run for profit and pleasure.

s "gets away from it all" by escaping to his 100,000 acre ranch 60 les from Hollywood. Dick's setting a fan record by receiving 8,000 ters weekly at his studio, another 6,000 at the radio station.

SOMETIMES IT WOULD BE NICE, GENE TIERNEY'S BROTHER-IN-LAW THINKS, NOT TO BE BOTHERED WITH THOSE QUESTIONS: "WHAT'S GENE REALLY LIKE? IS SHE GLAMOROUS?" AND HERE'S THE ANSWER . . .

by CHOLLY KNICKERBOCKER

sister-in-law gene

Igor Cassini, Gene's brother-in-law, is better known as New York's society reporter, Cholly Knickerbocker.

■ This whole thing springs from a telephone call I got one morning at nine o'clock. I had been dreaming that a fire engine had burst into my flat and I woke up. It was the telephone. I reached over, sleepily, and grabbed the receiver.

"Yes?"

"Is Gene there?" a feminine voice squeaked.

"No," I said. "She's gone back to Hollywood."

"Oh, then this is Oleg?" the voice said.

"No. Oleg has gone back to Hollywood, too." And with that I was ready to drop the receiver.

"Well, then this must be Igor?" said the tiny voice, hurriedly.

"Yes," I replied. "And, by the way, who are you?"

"You don't know me," she answered. "But I know you. Won't you let us come up?"

"Us?"

"Yes, I have a friend. It's very important that we see you."

If I hadn't been awake before, this did it.

"Look," I said, stifling a yawn, "I'm not even out of bed yet. In fact, I just (Continued on page 102)

Swing your partners!

IT'S LIKE A ROMANTIC SQUARE DANCE WITH CUPID CALLING THE TURNS AND HALF YOUR HOLLYWOOD FAVORITES CHANGING PARTNERS — AND HEARTS.

By Arthur L. Charles

■ The Visitor-From-The-East, a stout matron whom we shall call Mrs. Esterly for no particular reason, ordered another frozen daiquiri and regarded her hostess brightly across the little table in the Tropics cabana. She had just arrived that day and, far from being t' d after her long journey (in compartments on the Centu and Chief), she decided that she had never felt better in her life.

Because her hostess, formerly Mrs. Esterly's room-mate at college and currently the third wife of a famous Hollywood producer, had never been so fascinating. Miriam, Mrs. Esterly had begun to realize, apparently knew all, heard all, saw all and told all that went on in Hollywood. Certainly she went to all the parties, was on "darling" and first name terms with an incredible number of stars. Five of the biggest names in pictures had so far stopped at their cabana during this lunch hour—at this very moment, for that matter, Miriam was waving and nodding across the patio to, of all people, gorgeous Lana Turner, who had just come in on the arm of a tall, dark, extravagantly handsome chap whom Mrs. Esterly did not recognize.

"Is that Lana Turner's fiancé?" asked Mrs. Esterly innocently.

Miriam eyed her sharply. Then, deep in her throat, Miriam began to chuckle softly. "I see I'm in for it," she said. "Settle back, dear, and loosen your collar. I'll get it over with, once and for all, or you'll be asking questions every ten minutes the rest of the time you're here, and nothing will make any sense to you.

"Now it all began . . ."

It all began (Miriam said) in 1945 when Cleatus Caldwell was in the process of getting her divorce from Ken Murray. You know, he's the comedian who started "Blackouts" out here and made a million dollars out of it. It's a divine show, I must take you one night— Well, as I was saying, there was Cleatus divorcing Ken, and in the meantime she was going about with Robert Hutton.

That was the romance of the year—or so it looked, and so everybody thought. You saw them everywhere together, at restaurants and parties (Continued on page 64)

Lana and Bob Hutton danced away many a night at Ciro's like this, but now Bob's married to Cleatus Caldwell. Lana tried dying her hair blue, but she didn't like it.

Here's Bob Hutton with wife, Cleatus Caldwell. That's Johnny Martin laughing at Bob's story about his difficulty learning 4 tunes for new pic, "Love And Learn.

Last year's Press Photographers' Ball boasted luscious Lana on Rory Calhoun's arm, started all those rumors that they might elope one day.

Last March, Lana was night clubbing in Florida with socialite Huntington Hartford, shortly after returning from her South American trip.

◀Tony Martin, who used to go with Rita Hayworth before Orson Welles married her, mixed hot dogs and glamor with L. at H'wood Park.

Rita and Orson Welles are back together again after a separation, which leaves Tony Martin without Rita, without Lana—but not without a brand new gal!

One of Lana's non-actor beaux is handsome Greg Bautzer, famous H'wood lawyer. Lana's getting so thin, her size 12 dresses for "Green Dolphin Street" have to be taken in!

three little girls in green

THERE'S A BIT OF BLARNEY IN THEIR TALK AND A HINT OF IRELAND IN THEIR WALK—MAUREEN O'HARA AND HER THREE EVER-LOVIN', SHAMROCK-EYED SISTERS.

By Fredda Dudley

■ Miss Bronwyn Price, chubby and two—the daughter of Maureen O'Hara—has an enchanting new game. It is called "playing baby." By the hour Bronwyn trots around the house in her ruffled white pinafore with a dimpled hand extended. When someone asks, "What are you carrying, Bronwyn?" that little lady answers in a surprised voice, "My baby, of course."

This baby's habits are not of the best, as another of Bronwyn's frequent remarks is, "Oh baby, wet again."

The baby gets sung to sleep with one of two chanties. One is "Rockabye Baby" and the other is a Bronwyn Price original. No one has any idea where she picked up either the tune or the lyrics. It started as a simple phrase to which she sang the words, "Goodbye, Joe, goodbye, Joe, goodbye, Joe."

One night her nurse, in a jocular mood, wanted to know, "Are you singing about Joe, broke his toe, on the way to Mexico?"

Miss Bronwyn, a very sharp cookie, studied her (Continued on page 77)

No sooner had Maureen (in "Sinbad the Sailor") welcomed sisters Margot (left) and Florence to her new Bel-Air home, than word came that her request for passage to Ireland had been granted! All 3 gals have slight brogues—and babies under two years of age.

SUN OR SNOW—NO MATTER WHAT YOUR HOLIDAY BACKGROUND, YOU CAN HAVE A PRETTY SKIN!

by Carol Carter, Beauty Editor

■ This winter the holiday season has lots of its old time zip. A lucky few of us are trekking South, some are taking to skis in the North and others, including Yours Truly, are slinging their ice skates over their shoulders and trudging off to the neighborhood rink for a happy whirl. With things in general looking so bright you wouldn't want your complexion to be the one sad spot on the scene, now would you? Of course not! So during this season of winter holiday, give some attention to the health of your skin.

Yes, I said health! Let's be really basic about this beauty business. Let's give our complexions the wonderous benefits of eight cozy hours of sleep every night. And we're not going to spend all our time huddled around the radiator, are we? Too much steam heat can wilt the most petal-smooth skin. Thing to do is to plan to spend a good segment of our days in the Great Outdoors. If we are 'way down South, soothing oils and lotions will keep our skin at its sun-kissed best. Richer, heavier beautifiers will fill the bill if Jack Frost is nipping at us.

Whether we are North or South, (Continued on page 75)

Frances Gifford, the smoothie-puss whom you'll soon be cheering in "The Arnelo Affair," uses a rich cream to protect her complexion against weather extremes.

Sun-squint lines are so unglamorous! So take a hint from Frances and, whether skiing in the north or swimming in the south, protect eyes with sun specs.

no vacation from beauty

SLICK TRICKS FOR ST. NICK

1 Letter names and greetings with tape strips
2 Hold pine and holly sprigs to packages
3 "Scotch" Tape Christmas Seals hold name cards
4 Seal and decorate odd shaped packages
5 Use tape on wrapping paper edge for bright border
6 Fasten clips to ornaments with "Scotch" Tape

WRAP YOUR GIFTS IN Glamour

The gifts you give are the prettiest under the tree when you use the "Scotch" Gift Wrap beauty treatment. It's simple to glorify even the tiniest (or biggest) package with "Scotch" Tape's sparkling assortment of thirteen colors and Christmas-y designs. This smart tape sticks at a touch . . . seals and decorates at the same time. And half the fun of Christmas will be in working out clever designs for your packages. Buy a roll or two of each design. Most stores have "Scotch" Gift Wrap Tape at 10¢ a roll . . . "Scotch" Tape Christmas Seals at 25¢.

REG. U. S. PAT. OFF.
SCOTCH BRAND Gift Wrap TAPE

SEALS WITHOUT MOISTENING

Save time by holding paper with invisible "Scotch" Tape. Then decorate with Gift Wrap Tape. Transparent "Scotch" Tape is 25¢ in the clever plaid dispenser.

REG. U. S. PAT. OFF.
SCOTCH BRAND Cellulose TAPE

Made in U. S. A. by MINNESOTA MINING & MFG. CO. Saint Paul 6, Minn.
THE 3M COMPANY

© 1946 3M CO.

"Scotch" Brand Tapes sold throughout the world and previews.

Export: Durex, 63 Wall Street, New York 5, N. Y.

(Continued from page 58)

Then what do you think happened?

("What?" asked Mrs. Esterly.)

Bob took Cleatus to a party one night, and who should be at the party—alone, as I remember it—but Lana Turner. Remember that Bob had been going steady with Cleatus for months. But the first thing any of us knew, Cleatus was talking with a couple of people on a sofa and Bob was dancing with Lana.

(She paused for effect. "Go on!" cried Mrs. Esterly, impatiently.)

Bob Hutton took Lana home. . . .

(No!)

Yes. That's the way love happens in Hollywood. Of course Cleatus had finally left the party when she considered she'd been left alone long enough, and I suppose Bob felt she'd been unreasonably jealous and decided to take her up on it.

At any rate that effectively took care of the Hutton-Caldwell engagement—if it actually was an engagement—and Cleatus began being seen around town in the company of Harry Carl, who's enormously rich, my dear.

triangle . . .

Bob, naturally, took up with Lana where they had left off after that party, and obviously fell desperately in love with her. Meanwhile, she was having occasional dates with Rory Calhoun. . . .

("Who," interrupted Mrs. Esterly, "is he?")

The boy Lana just walked in with, dear.

(Mrs. Esterly's large, rather florid face wore a look of mild bewilderment. "But you said— I thought all this was back in 1945—")

It was. You must try to pay attention, or I'll lose my train of thought and I'll need an ouija board to find it again. Now then, where was I— Oh. Bob is with Lana, only occasionally she sees Rory, and Cleatus is with Harry Carl. . . .

You may or may not remember from the columns, but for years Greg Bautzer, the handsomest attorney in town, was supposed to be the great love in Lana's life. And now in the late fall of 1945, just when Lana and Bob Hutton were at the very peak of their new romance, Lana and Greg walked into a cafe together for dinner one night, and there you were—the old spark had flared up again.

For awhile no one knew what to expect, not that we ever do with Lana, dear, and speculation was rife. At which point Lana announced that her studio was sending her to South America on a good will tour, and went flying off to Buenos Aires as nice as you please.

("But was that nice young Rory happy?" asked Mrs. Esterly. "And Bob Hutton? And what about that Mr. Bautzer you said—")

Will you wait? I'll get to them, all in good time. We've got to follow Lana to Florida. . . . Yes, dear, she turned up in Florida, and there she was introduced to Huntington Hartford. Very rich, very social, very handsome.

. . . And then she disappeared from Florida and reappeared in New York—across a table at the Stork Club from Howard Hughes. What's the trouble, dear? Need a handkerchief?

("I'm just hunting for a pencil," Mrs. Esterly muttered, thrashing about in her purse, "and a slip of paper. Perhaps if I made a little diagram—")

But it's so simple! If we just don't lose track of the time element—it's still winter, you know, in California at least. And back there, I mean here in Hollywood, while Lana has gone to South America and Florida and New York, where we left her at the Stork with Howard Hughes, just a few things have happened.

Cleatus Caldwell has said goodby, gently but firmly, to Harry Carl, the shoe man. Robert Hutton has been playing the field, and having a very good time doing it, to all appearances anyway. Rory Calhoun has been doing what he was told by his studio—he's still being groomed, you know—and has been seen about with various girls. Cleatus, after her breakup with Mr. Carl, has taken up with George Raft. And Greg Bautzer . . .

("The attorney?" asked Mrs. Esterly.)

The attorney. But I get ahead of myself. He can wait.

The point is, Lana was having a perfectly splendid time in New York with Howard Hughes, and people were predicting all sorts of things about Lana and Howard when—if you must take notes, dear, take your rings off, they scratch on the menu, so distracting—when, of all things, a front page announcement appeared in newspapers all over the country that Lana was engaged to Charles Jaeger, a very important radio executive.

Thereupon, Lana left New York very suddenly and flew to the Coast, with this Mr. Jaeger following her exactly one week later. . . .

("Jaeger," mumbled Mrs. Esterly, scribbling and scratching industriously. "Spelled like those things some men wear in winter?")

If you interrupt me at this point I shall scream, and furthermore not go on at all. I didn't realize when I started all this . . . However. Cleatus is going now with George Raft—darn! I said that.

Waiter, two more daiquiris. Greg Bautzer, I should have said, was going about with Joan Crawford. Bob Hutton was still playing the field. It was spring, tra la. And, precisely one week after Lana returned to Hollywood, her engagement to Charles Jaeger was very loudly broken.

Mr. Jaeger flew back to New York.

And, for pressing professional reasons, Lana shortly thereafter flew back too.

Bob Hutton followed her.

But Howard Hughes was still in New York. . . .

But concurrently with all that I have been telling you, you must understand that Orson Welles and Rita Hayworth had split up, and that Rita and Tony Martin, who had just been released from the service, became the most interesting couple in town. There was no doubt about it, Rita and Tony were in love. Of course you know that Tony was once an old beau of Lana's, they were practically engaged.

It's now midsummer, 1946.

Lana is still going places with Bob Hutton, and occasionally with Rory—your "nice young man." But Rory doesn't last. At least, not enough to represent an alternative romance.

It is at this point that Howard Hughes crashed in his experimental plane, and was carried off to the hospital more dead than alive. It had still been rumored that Lana and Howard were very close to each other, but when Lana was actually seen dancing at the Mocambo with Bob Hutton a night or two after the accident—well, dear, that appeared to write Mr. Hughes out of her life once and for all.

Meantime, dear, Rita and Tony were blowing hot and cold on their romance, until finally they were seeing very little of each other. Tony began to play the field, just as Cleatus—whose affair with George Raft had washed itself up—was doing. Tony went places with Marie MacDonald and Myrna Dell and Marguerite Chapman and Lana Turner. Especially Lana, who seemed to console him for the loss of Rita more than anyone else.

Tony was torching like mad for Rita, at the time when rumors were spreading that Rita and Orson might stage a great reconciliation. Lana's romance with Bob Hutton began to cool slightly, toward the end of summer, and in addition to everyone else she began to date Peter Lawford, that divine English actor who's over at Metro too.

Well, Orson did come back from New York, apparently to make his peace with Rita. But when he got here Tony had stopped seeing Lana and was back with Rita again—so Orson went to Mexico City, some say in a huff. And that brings us right up to last month. . . .

(Mrs. Esterly said firmly, "I distinctly saw Orson Welles and Rita Hayworth driving along Sunset Boulevard on my way over here. They were in the same car, too.")

"Of course, my dear," said Miriam complacently. "Orson came back from Mexico and Rita greeted him with open arms. They are quite happy again, as man and wife."

"If Rita went back to Orson," Mrs. Esterly said, not to be put off, "what happened to Tony Martin?"

"Still carrying a torch, but doing it without too much pain in the company of Nancy Valentine."

"And the handsome Mr. Bautzer?"

"The last I heard, he and Joan Crawford were still trotting around town together."

"But that charming Bob Hutton, who was so faithful for so long—and the girl he left, Cleatus Caldwell—"

"Back together again, dear. Married."

"Then there's Howard Hughes, who's up and about again. Didn't I read—?"

"You read that he was rushing Ava Gardner for a time in New York. Ava just divorced Artie Shaw, you remember, and Artie was once married to Lana."

"Dear, dear," said Mrs. Esterly, as Miriam paid the check. "It's like—why, it's just like a merry-go-round, isn't it? I wonder who'll catch the brass ring?"

"There's a gold ring in this one, somewhere," Miriam said. "What gets me is, who's going to give it to Lana?"

Elizabeth Taylor . . .

. . . currently appearing in M-G-M's "Courage of Lassie," soon to be seen in "The Rich Full Life." Here Elizabeth is all set for spectator sports (or maybe just some nice, idle relaxation) in Felix Safian's brilliant Mexicana playdress. Isn't that neckline Latin as anything . . . and aren't those colors luscious? And look at the sleeves—they start out by being shoulder caps, and have a surprise ending in little puffs! Cute, we call it—and bound to make you feel as though you own a patio and a swimming pool—whether you do or not!

To find out where to buy this playdress, and the other clothes in the MODERN SCREEN Fashion Section, turn to page 71.

Modern Screen
fashions

Holiday Hoop-la...

in dance dresses

■ Left: If woman-of-the-world is the way you want to look (and who doesn't?)—try sophisticated scrolls on a moulded jersey bodice—and an inky black ninon skirt. Black with contrast, or all pink, white, blue. Sizes 10-18. By Glad Modes. $18.95.

■ Below: If your man likes you sweet and romantic—black velveteen bodice to show your pretty shoulders, a full net skirt to twirl when you dance. Black with white, pink or blue Texagon rayon net skirt. Sizes 10-18. By Glad Modes. $18.95.

■ Opposite page: And don't be surprised if you're kissed in this dream dress. All floating white net glinted with gold stripes and a little gold bow. Texagon rayon net. Sizes 9-13. By David Klein. $25.

CORO JEWELRY, NELLIE FOREMAN EVENING BAG, $7.

Holiday Hoop-la...

in short blacks

FOR STORES FEATURING THESE FASHIONS, SEE PAGE 71,

■ Above: Get him where you want him —right at your feet—in a figure-making black with a spray of rhinestones winking from the bodice. Simple, yes . . . super, yes, yes! Rosewood rayon crepe. Sizes 9-15. A Melvin Dress. $17.95

■ Right: Stagline black dress that fits ooh! and flirts a triple-threat ruffle. The ruffles go around the dress, and dip seductively in back. Clip your best pin to the squared neckline. Rayon crepe. Sizes 7 to 15. By Joanne Jr. $22.95

Luggage DALE New York

The Indispensable WHITE COAT

for Travel wear!
for Formal wear!
for Resort wear!
for Everywhere!

Headed for the coast? Headed for the South? Headed for a holiday? Or for home place festivities? Then make a white wonder coat the dazzling highlight of your wardrobe. And the fabric we have chosen for this group is rich Miracle-Suede with a whipped-up texture, lush to the touch, loomed for us by the AMERICAN WOOLEN CO. Around $45.

Consult with your Local Retailer, or write

LOU SCHNEIDER • 512 Seventh Avenue • New York 18, N. Y.

GREGORY PECK

(Continued from page 47)

been tailored for trousers, Gregory Peck might have sent him wrathfully back, sure enough. Luckily, Eldred Gregory, as they named him, was all boy. You could tell that by the square cut of his baby jaw, by the fuss he raised, by the way he scooted out the door if you left it open a crack, the minute he could toddle around, to see what was cooking in this wide, new world.

Greg won't forget the time his big cousin, Warren, and the gang of swim-seasoned moppets tackled and dragged him, fighting, kicking and screaming, to the briny terrors of Alligator Point. It jutted eight feet up over deep water, but to Greg it looked a mile high and twice as deep. He'd skipped in the waves and paddled in the coves, but this was different. He struggled desperately, but it wasn't any use and he knew it. He felt himself swung, cat fashion, by the older huskies.

"One," yelled Cousin Warren, "two—threee!" sink or swim . . .

Out Greg sailed in a sprawling arc, dizzily dropping; then a splash and down he went, clear to Davy Jones' locker, it seemed to Greg. But he bobbed up, sputtering and gasping, shouting wildly to the kids perched on the point for help. Nobody moved a muscle. After he'd swallowed salt water, Greg knew it was up to him to make it back to the rocks. Somehow he thrashed there safely, as every kid did—somehow. The treatment was rugged, but it worked. From then on Greg Peck was as at home in the water as he was on land. And that's where he was half of the time, when he wasn't playing in "Grandpop's" grain and feed store.

"Grandpop" wasn't really Greg's grandfather; he was a great uncle. He ran a horse and buggy service station—a big barn-like store on the main road where wagons rolled in, a blacksmith forge clanged and glowed, and up the ladders into the loft were wonderful piles of bouncy hay.

Greg was just six years old when his father and mother separated. The memory is still crystal clear to him, not because of the break-up of his home, which was not quite understandable at his age, but because he took a trip halfway across the country all by himself. And he left his beloved California, for what, he tearfully thought, was forever.

The trip his mother took back to St. Louis was to be permanent, his Dad told him soberly one day, and since that was the way it was, it was best for Greg to be with her. He was busy with the drug store, but Greg would be put on a train in the conductor's care and his mother would meet him in St. Louis. Greg's despair at leaving the place he loved was sweetened by the excitement of the adventure.

But childhood's sorrows are fleeting and as soon as Greg had dried his eyes the wonders of the train took over and he basked in the first spotlight of his life. Greg was pumped and interviewed until he began to think the train was going East expressly to take him to his mama. It was a swell feeling and one he never forgot. St. Louis, too, sticks in Greg's memory vividly—but mostly because he didn't like it.

His mother took him to a boarding house in a shabbily genteel part of town. Bernice Peck was determined to make her own way, now that her marriage had broken up. She was working, and she welcomed young Greg with the best she could afford. But it wasn't elegant, and for a kid used to the sunny California outdoors it was dingy and confining.

Greg's mother realized that. She did her best to give him outings at Crève Coeur Lake and Forest Park Highlands, took him down to the rolling Mississippi to watch the side-wheeler steamboats. But it was a struggle and she knew that boarding house city life wasn't fair to her boy. It pulled at her heart to hear Greg say "Mama, when are we going back to La Jolla?"

Bernice Peck decided she could do better back in California. She'd find a tiny cottage by the sea Greg loved so well, then she'd get a job and Grandma Ayres would take care of her son during the day as she'd offered to do. Bernice Peck had courage that way, and always her boy's interests came first. Pretty soon Greg was on the train heading West, and happy as a canary out of a cage.

His mother found a little seaside bungalow to rent in La Jolla. The three—Greg, his mother, and Grandma Ayres—moved in, but the best position Bernice could find was in Los Angeles a hundred miles north. That month Grandma Ayres took over the daily care and raising of young Gregory Peck. His mother sent money for his support, which Dad Peck matched, and came down weekends, hurrying back to her job Sunday night. But in between, Gregory Peck—more than the average boy—was on his own. He couldn't run to mama every time he got in a jam, or to his dad either, away in San Diego. So he learned early to make his own decisions and run his own life, developing the self-reliant, independent strain that was later to guide him to Hollywood.

Grandma Ayres' house was on Exchange Place, "The Dewdrop," her cottage sign said, and it wasn't much bigger—a tiny bungalow with a kitchen, bedroom, living room and bath. Greg slept on the sofa in the living room. That was his home until he was ten years old.

Grandma Ayres matched her small house, a tiny woman under five feet, more round than tall, but with unmatched courage and spunk. Her heart went out to Greg, and she tried to take the place of his absent mother.

But with the unfettered feeling Greg had after cramped St. Louis, Grandma Ayres had a job cut out for her. Greg's dad couldn't be much help, because he'd sold his La Jolla pharmacy and taken a night job in a San Diego drug store. That meant he worked all night and slept most of the day. Greg wasn't Peck's Bad Boy by any means, but at that age, around seven or eight, he was bound to land in some scrapes, or he wouldn't have been normal. The worst part about it was—to sensitive Greg the mixups always worried him more than they did anyone else. He was always certain the Reform School was just around the corner for him.

Once Dad Peck gave him a bow and arrow for his birthday and Greg raced into the vacant field next to Grandma's house to try it out. A particularly luckless sparrow perched on the telephone wire and chirped sassily and Greg let fly. There wasn't any good reason why he should have hit the tiny bird—he had no skill with a bow and it was just one of those things that the arrow flew true and spitted the sparrow neatly through the middle. It flopped off to the ground and Greg dashed forward, amazed and stunned by the event. He hadn't really meant to kill the bird.

The most terrifying memory Greg Peck holds of his moppethood, though, is one he still blushes to tell. It wasn't exactly chivalrous, even though it involves Greg Peck's first encounter with a girl. It got him off to a pretty bad start with the ladies, as a matter of fact.

The girl lived next door and she didn't like boys any more than the boys liked her. In fact, she had the frank habit of heaving rocks at any male she encountered.

One day, this budding Amazon whistled a brickbat past Greg's ear at point blank range. If he hadn't ducked, his face would have never seen a movie camera, very probably, and the mayhem attempt made Greg see red. Unfortunately, too, a rock happened to be right at his toes. He picked it up and whammed it at the fleeing girl, who saw his face and knew what was about to happen. Greg's aim was true; the rock hit right behind the young lady's ear and she fell like a log, blood spurting.

cops 'n' rocks . . .

Greg was horrified at what he'd done, and what he'd done, he was sure, was commit murder. He ran, sobbing, home to his grandmother, "I've just killed the little girl next door!" Then he raced wildly down into the canyon across the field and sat on a rock deep in the brush reviewing his cardinal sin. He knew that the most horrible thing in the world was going to happen to him. Because he knew something especially awesome about the girl he'd socked—her father was a policeman!

They finally tracked Greg down about ten o'clock that night and carried him home. He was sure he was on his way to jail for life, but the terrifying cop neighbor never even mentioned the bloody episode. He knew from experience who had started the fracas.

Greg Peck got along better with more reasonable creatures—like boys and dogs

(Continued on page 72)

MODERN SCREEN

CLEOPATRA KELLY

"You mean you haven't any stamps with Frank Sinatra's picture on them?!!"

BUYING GUIDE

MEXICANA PLAYDRESS
(color photo, page 65)

BY FELIX SAFIAN

Atlanta, Ga.—Davison, Paxon
Baton Rouge, La.—Tots & Teens
Brooklyn, N. Y.—Abraham & Straus
Erie, Pa.—Trask, Prescott & Richardson
Hartford, Conn.—Youth Center
Lexington, Ky.—Tots & Teens
Los Angeles, Cal.—The May Co.
Milwaukee, Wis.—Bitker-Gerner
Newark, N. J.—L. Bamberger
New York, N. Y.—R. H. Macy
Pawtucket, R. I.—Peerless
Port Huron, Mich.—The Winkleman Co.
San Francisco, Cal.—Livingston Bros.
Schenectady, N. Y.—The Wallace Co.
Scranton, Pa.—Santer Brothers
Wilkes Barre, Pa.—Fowler, Dick & Walker
Washington, D. C.—Woodward & Lothrop
OR WRITE—FELIX SAFIAN, 1375 BROADWAY, NEW YORK 18, N. Y.

VELVET BODICE DANCE DRESS (page 66)
SCROLLED BODICE DANCE DRESS
(page 66)

BOTH BY GLAD MODES

Baltimore, Md.—May Co.
Detroit, Mich.—B. Siegel
New York, N. Y.—R. H. Macy
Seattle, Wash.—The Bon Marche
OR WRITE—GLAD MODES, 1385 BROADWAY, NEW YORK 18, N. Y.

GOLD-STRIPED DANCE DRESS (page 67)

BY DAVID KLEIN

Atlanta, Ga.—Rich's
Chicago, Ill.—Chas. A. Stevens Co.
New York, N. Y.—Saks 34th St.
Portland, Ore.—Meier & Frank
OR WRITE—DAVID KLEIN, INC., 525 SEVENTH AVE., NEW YORK 18, N. Y.

SHORT BLACK WITH RHINESTONES
(page 68)

BY MELVIN DRESS

Atlanta, Ga.—Rich's
Chicago, Ill.—Chas. A. Stevens Co.
Los Angeles, Cal.—Bullock's
New York, N. Y.—Arnold Constable
OR WRITE—MELVIN DRESS CO., 222 W. 37TH ST., NEW YORK 18, N. Y.

SHORT BLACK WITH RUFFLES (page 68)

BY JOANNE, JR.

Chicago, Ill.—Chas. A. Stevens Co.
Cleveland, Ohio—The Halle Bros. Co.
New York, N. Y.—The Emily Shop
Philadelphia, Pa.—The Blum Store
OR WRITE—JOANNE, JR.-ZINN BROS., 1400 BROADWAY, NEW YORK 18, N. Y.

Have You Met
Miss Youth Form
REG. U. S. PAT. OFF.
THE SENSATIONAL NEW SLIP THAT HAS GLAMOUR, BEAUTY ...AND ALWAYS BEHAVES
*No "Riding Up!"
*No Side Seams or Bulges!
*No Pull at Shoulder Straps!
Never before has there been a slip like MISS YOUTH FORM... the newly patented straight slip that you'll fall in love with at first wearing.
TRY on this amazing new slip.
PROVE to yourself that MISS YOUTH FORM really cannot "ride up."
SEE how beautifully it flatters your figure... and moulds your bust line.
NOTICE its careful tailoring (those seams won't pull apart!)... its fine fabric (tested and approved for washability and wear!).
At your favorite store $2.95
MISS YOUTH FORM LINGERIE, 38 E. 30th ST., N.Y. 16, N.Y.

"Please don't get up!"

and his best chum and bosom companion was a mutt named "Bud." Everywhere Greg went, Bud sniffed along behind happily, like Mary's little lamb.

Greg got along well enough in La Jolla Grammar School after he thawed out. He was no prize pupil or shining light in anything particularly, just passable in all. His active mind was seldom inside the classroom, but wandering out the open window through which the tang of his beloved Pacific continually wafted.

sea sprité . . .

The sea he loved also handed young Gregory Peck the first real heartbreak of his youth. He thought he'd never get over the tragic end of the "Tar Baby." That was a skiff Greg and Johnny Buchanan, his pal up the street, built together. It took them six months of furious, painstaking labor, uncounted midnight raids on lumber yards for scrap boards, beachcombing for hemp and nails and tar wheedled out of street repair gangs. They built the boat from a plan in Popular Mechanics and to Greg and Johnny it was the greatest project ever undertaken. They'd get up with the roosters and race home to the boat after school and Grandma would have to come drag Greg away at dusk for dinner. They had to soak the boards in tubs of water and bend them for the bows.

But at the end of six months, the "Tar Baby," black and glistening with its pitchy coat, was ready. Greg and Johnny lugged it precariously down the long wooden cliff steps and launched it proudly one Saturday morning before all the green-jealous kids in La Jolla. They spent the whole day rowing the gang all over the bay, basking in praise and admiration as the proud owners of a home built boat, big shots for a day—but only one day.

That evening they dragged the "Tar Baby" up on the beach where everyone hauled their skiffs and left them, well out of reach of the tide, safe, so Greg thought. Nobody ever touched La Jolla skiffs, but someone did that night—maybe a jealous kid who couldn't stand the spotlight on somebody else. Anyway, when Greg and Johnny rushed down Sunday morning for another day of glory, the "Tar Baby" wasn't there. Someone had launched it in the night and it was gone. They found it at last, or what was left of it, a mass of splinters washing against the rocks of Alligator Point.

Greg thought he'd never recover from that blow, but luckily about that time a big and exciting change in his life came up. Greg's mother, Bernice, was remarried and had a home in Los Angeles. She wanted Greg closer to her than La Jolla and she knew of a good boys' school in Los Angeles, St. John's, a military academy where he could have the best of training and still be a part of her life.

There was a family conference, and Doc Peck agreed to her idea; it was only fair to share their son. Greg was ten years old and just through the first grade when he left San Diego, and he was eager for the change. The brass buttons, long drill trousers and gold trimmed caps were a potent enough picture to blot out the joys of La Jolla's beach.

The school numbered about 300 cadets, with Army officers handling the R.O.T.C. and the Catholic Sisters of Mercy taking care of classes. Greg was there four years, from the age of ten to fourteen, until he was ready for San Diego High. He took the life seriously and blossomed from a shy, quiet kid into darned near an extrovert. He made every athletic team in his grade group—football, basketball, baseball and track.

king-sized kid . . .

Aside from editing "The Bugle Call," he also worked up to captain in his last year, commanding Company D. St. John's cadet companies were ranked according to age and size and Greg's company was the youngest and tiniest, an ignominious fact which took much of the glamor away from the boots, belt and sabre he could now wear. Because Greg had arrived at the stage of his life when he wanted desperately to get grown up as fast as possible. Anything connecting him with boyhood wounded his new dignity no end. Like the medal he won at the end of school.

He'd swallowed his humiliation at having to handle a bunch of babies and set himself to prep his company to win the drill prize. It was a job; half the time his babes in uniform would wander right out of the ranks or wail to go to the bathroom, it seemed to Captain Peck. But finally he'd got them whipped into shape and passed in review. The commanding officer then stepped up in front of all the parents in the grandstands and read the list of awards. Greg stood proudly at attention when the CO began, "To Captain Gregory Peck—" He expected some citation like "A medal for his excellent command of Company D!"—something military and manly. Instead, the officer read, "A special award for fine work in Junior Playground this year." To add insult to injury the officer then took one of Greg's cadets on his knee and patted him fondly—like a baby!

It was when Greg came back to San Diego that the pal-ship with his Dad began, which has meant so much to both Doc and Greg Peck's lives.

boy among men . . .

Grandma Ayres had kept him under her mothering wing as much as possible in his elementary years, and at St. John's, Greg's home life was divided. He commuted between San Diego and Los Angeles on all vacations and holidays. He'd spend Christmas Eve with his mother and stepfather in Los Angeles, then grab a train down to San Diego for Christmas Day with his dad. He'd spend Thanksgiving with one family and Easter with the other. But when he left St. John's to return to San Diego, it was Greg and his Dad alone. His mother and her husband had moved to San Francisco. The relation was more like buddies than father and son. They bached together in Doc's San Diego apartment house out on Broadway.

Greg grew four inches in his first year in San Diego High and at 16 he was six feet tall. He stroked a rowing team at the Club then, the rest of whose members were San Diego working men of twenty-five and over. The Rowing Club became his whole life outside of school. And school to Greg was, as always, mostly classes to be endured, and passed, of course. It held no other charms for him. He never went out for any of the athletic teams; he shied away from the school activities and dances—especially the dances. Greg didn't dance; in fact, he packed sort of a complex about girls, and it wasn't all from the rock dodging introduction he'd had to the fair sex either. For one thing, Greg was sensitive about his height—tree top tall, and mostly bones. Six feet—and only 125 pounds. For another, he didn't have any snappy chatter or glib assurance with gals—they were unfamiliar animals and he got tongue tied.

One weekend, Greg invited five of his high school pals up to his Dad's mountain cottage at Suncrest. There was a mountain hoedown on Saturday night and the gang trooped over for a look. The joint was jumping when they got there. Local yokels and vacationers were going to town on the rough boards, whirling their partners around while fiddles squeaked and the rickety piano tinkled. Three of the gang could dance. "Come on," they urged, "let's get going!"

"I can't," said Greg. "I don't know how."

"Me either," said Kenny Stevenson, his pal.

"See you later," chorused the gifted trio.

They danced all evening, while Greg and Kenny hung on the sidelines, twiddling their thumbs, and feeling like a couple of drips. It looked like a peck of fun and right then and there Greg resolved to do something about it.

"My sister, Detty June, can dance like nobody's business," said Kenny. "If we knew how, we could take her dancing. I'm gonna get her to teach me."

Greg didn't have nerve enough to ask, "How about me, too?" But the longing to get going with the girls was eating him up and he decided to solve it in his own fashion, typically Peck, independently. There was a dance studio in San Diego which advertised, "Dance Like A Dream—Six Lessons for $10."

He climbed the stairs. A bare room greeted him with a battered phonograph in the corner. A tired looking, little slick haired guy with a cigarette hanging out of one corner of his mouth was resting his patent leather pumps. "Yeah?" he asked.

"I—I want to take these lessons," said Greg, waving his newspaper ad.

"When you wanna start—now?"

Greg nodded. "Okay." The hoofer walked over and to Greg's ghastly, red faced amazement, grabbed him around the waist and started pointing out the steps. It wasn't what he'd dreamed at all, and he felt like a fool, waltzing around with the barking little hoofer. He sneaked out of the place after the lesson feeling like a criminal. But he sneaked back in again and grimly sweated out the rest of the lessons.

He also took piano lessons, borrowing another ten bucks from Doc Peck, and in another six-easy-lessons deal learned to pound a few chords. He joined the glee club at high school and even started looking at tux's in the men's store windows downtown. But he still had never had a date with a girl, like all the rest of the guys. That cosmic event took place when Greg was 16 and he'll never forget it, because it took him five months to get up nerve enough to ask for one, and when he got it he experienced the most agonizing evening of his young life.

jr. love light . . .

There was a saucy blonde dream at San Diego High Greg long had worshipped from afar. She was popular and confidently coquettish with the boys and that made her all the more unapproachable to self-conscious Peck. But between a certain class he'd pass her every day, always at the same place and always he'd look at her and she'd know he was looking at her. That went on for three or four months. But Greg didn't dare smile or say "Hello, there." Somehow his face muscles froze and his tongue jammed every day. But Greg knew something had to be done.

So one day, in the hall, he steeled himself and walked straight at her, blocking her path, and blurted desperately, "I've liked you for a long time—I want you to have a date with me!" And she didn't slap his face or call the cops or anything. Instead, she smiled sweetly and said, "Why, I'd love to!" It was as easy as that.

So the ice was broken and there were lots of dates for Greg Peck after that. His steadiest girl was named Wilma, who (Greg could really pick 'em) had twelve brothers, more than a football squad, of all ages and all at home, it seemed, every time Greg called. Greg took in the school dances, played with a pick-up band for one or two himself, talked his Dad out of a tuxedo and generally blossomed into a man about school before he'd graduated.

He financed most everything he did—his dates, his sports gear—oars, rackets, golf clubs, his piano lessons. Greg liked to be independent that way, always had. He had started out caddying for his dad on the golf course. Then he got a job as delivery boy for Marston's Department Store, hopping off the truck and racing packages to front doors. Every long holiday Greg Peck found himself some kind of job. Easters he'd work for a florist and clean up thirty or forty bucks before he went back to school. He had a steady Christmas holiday job selling neckties in a downtown haberdashery.

It was all a mark of his native independence and self reliance which Doc Peck wisely recognized. When he married again and moved into a house from the Broadway apartment, Greg was invited to live there too, and did. But he always had his own room and separate entrance. Seeing his Dad only casually every day, Greg had plenty of time to figure things out for himself and he day dreamed a lot. For a while he'd imagine himself a famous Big League baseball pitcher or a surgeon.

Really, of course, Greg was dramatizing his future, although he didn't know it then. It never entered his dreams to picture himself an actor or a movie star. The only person who had ever suggested such a thing was his stepfather, Joe. Joe Maysuch was more than a stepfather to Greg. From the start he was one of Greg's best friends. A successful salesman, he was a cheery optimist, with a positive personality and always busting with ideas. Luckily Greg's two families were friendly and he was as much at home with his stepfather as with his Dad—in fact, Joe, being naturally less conservative than Doc Peck, was the one who later encouraged and backed Greg Peck when he struck out for his crazy dream of acting, and Joe it was who, when Greg was only fourteen, planted a seed.

He looked at Greg quizzically one day and said "Say, you know you ought to be an actor when you grow up."

"Aw," Greg had countered, "gee whiz, me?"

"Sure," said Joe. "You've got the looks and you're smart, and when people see you they look twice. That's personality, my boy. I know. I'll bet you'll make a lot of money on the stage some day."

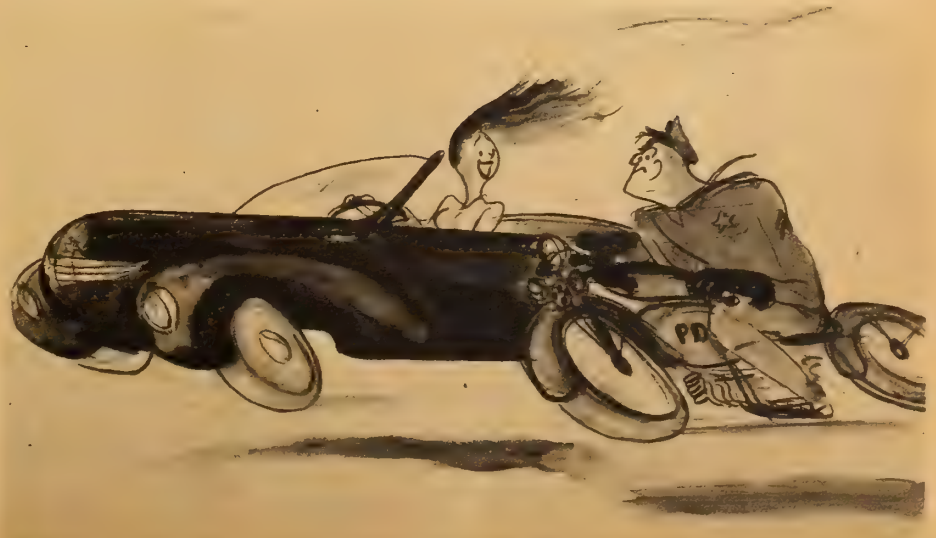
But Greg was embarrassed, flushed and changed the subject. He even thought he'd forgot all about it—until later on he remembered, and he knew then that Joe's idea had lodged somewhere and never dried up.

But at that point he was pretty confused. Basically, all Greg Peck knew was that he wanted to be somebody, to bust loose, to go places as he grew to manhood. How or why or where wasn't very definite—although the doctor dreams persisted, encouraged by "Doc" Peck, the pharmacist who was a frustrated physician. He'd planned to be an M.D. himself in his youth, but athletics got in the way and he'd settled for pharmacy. He'd always regretted it. He'd tell Greg, not exactly plugging, but suggesting, "The best thing to have is a profession. There's nothing finer than being a doctor. I wish I'd realized that when I was your age." So Greg more or less inherited the idea. He wasn't ever sure it was the right idea.

Greg Peck entered San Diego State College the next fall, after he graduated from San Diego High. He loaded up on pre-med subjects, which made him work, because he hated chemistry and physics. To balance the agony, he had as much fun as he could, and really in Greg Peck's education, State was just a prolongation of high school. He still was mixed up about his future and drifting and getting unhappy about it. He played around more with the girls, got seriously involved a time or two, went in for school athletics, making the State track and swimming teams, chased around with the boys and rowed at the Club. Physically he was growing into manhood. But he was getting nowhere and after the first year he suddenly determined to quit and take a job. He wanted to stand completely on his own feet and have a good look at himself. He walked into the Union Oil Company and came out driving a huge oil truck. It was a man's job. Greg was 18, but he fibbed and said he was 21. He herded the big wagon around San Diego county delivering oil, grease and gasoline ten hours a day. It was a dull, hard job and Greg Peck didn't like it. But he liked the $115 a month salary. It made him feel more independent and he stuck it out a year, saved up enough to buy his own jalopy, a second-hand Model A Ford roadster, and put a stake in the bank. Because he knew his Dad was right when he made him promise to go back to college after a year at the job. And by now Greg thought he knew what school he wanted to go to—the University of California.

Greg picked Cal for several reasons. He wanted to get far enough away from San Diego to a big school where he could look around and maybe find the desperately needed but nameless something he wanted but hadn't discovered yet. You could study a dozen different professions at Berkeley, including medicine. More directly appealing were other facts: California was one of the best rowing colleges in the world, a bunch of Greg's pals from San Diego were going there, and his mother and stepfather now lived in San Francisco to give him a touch of home. The one thing at California which was to change his life forever, Greg Peck never considered, never even knew about. That was the Little Theater on the campus.

The only brush Greg Peck had ever had with anything remotely approaching dramatics had happened when he was in San Diego State. By purest chance, he was an extra in two Hollywood movies. Once,



"I hope you don't mind, officer—this is the only way I can dry my hair."

"Caliente" with Pat O'Brien and Dolores Del Rio, was shooting at the Mexican resort, Agua Caliente, just across the border. The assistant director came to State, lined up the students in the gym and picked a hundred for atmosphere. Greg was one of the luckies. Busses picked them up, hauled them across the border where they swam in the pool, danced in the hotel, and lounged around for movie background, all for $10 a day and lunch. Another time, on the same kind of deal, Greg sat in the bleachers at nearby San Diego Army and Navy Academy and rooted while Mickey Rooney ran for a touchdown in one of his Hollywood boy sport sagas. Greg Peck remembers both events striking him as slightly ridiculous, but a soft touch. He recalls one director wore a pink and green sports coat, a purple scarf and suede shoes and he thought Hollywood must be a funny place—and gave it no further mind.

Greg returned to San Diego State to make up the necessary credits to enter Cal U, as a junior. It meant he had to make top grades—three A's and two B's. That's what he made—three A's and two B's, and he'd never studied so hard in his life. His acceptance slip came that summer and in the fall he loaded the Ford with two pals, Speed Wann and Fred Teepe, together with everything all three owned stacked, stowed and roped until the springs creaked, and rolled north.

Greg Peck had offers of financial help in college—from his Dad, from his mother and stepdad, who offered to bunk him in San Francisco. He shook his head. He wanted to be self supporting. He wanted to be free to find himself in any direction, without any strings attached. Fred, Speed and Greg landed a job the first afternoon at Berkeley as janitors for an apartment house. Salary—a free apartment for the trio and ten bucks apiece a month. Greg, Speed and Fred soon latched on to a couple of other lucrative rackets, so Gregory Peck's first two years at California boiled down pretty much to job hustling, study and rowing. He loaded up with a solid schedule in Liberal Arts, spent three hours afternoons working out in a rowing shell on the water, then hustled back to the apartment to take his turn cooking dinner with Speed and Fred.

He got good grades—all B's—and he made the Junior Varsity at his old Rowing Club spot—stroke. But a gnawing dissatisfaction haunted Greg—he still couldn't grab that elusive life's ambition.

California had a crack crew that June; both the Senior and Junior Varsities headed for the National Collegiate races at Poughkeepsie. Greg rated the trip, all expenses paid. Greg had never been out of the west, so after the regatta when the coach turned the squad loose, with a return ticket and four free days before train time, Greg and his rowing pal, Frank Lawrence, headed straight for Manhattan.

They had exactly fifty dollars between them. They put aside ten for food on the trip back and, after checking in at the Y. M. C. A., set out to see the town. How they ever did so much on so little money and so little sleep, Greg Peck will never know. But if there is anything they missed he can't remember what it was. They averaged two hours of sleep in every 24 hours.

Home once again, Greg knew that somewhere in New York there was what he was seeking. He didn't know what it was until his last year at California.

That summer he settled down doggedly to a job in his stepfather's office appliance company in San Francisco, saving a stake to start college again. The year passed with nothing accomplished, he felt, except good grades and more credits. He was all set to finish that senior year in mid-term—until something happened to keep him glued to the Cal campus longer than he needed to be. That something was a part in a play.

Greg first got mixed up with the Little Theater at California University to oblige a friend. He was stepping out of his English class one day when a classmate, Jack Thompson, stopped him. Greg knew Jack was a student director at the Workshop, an offshoot of the campus Little Theater, where they tried out original playlets with college actors. But like Greek letter fraternities and other campus societies, Greg Peck had never paid any attention to college dramatics. He knew about the Little Theater, that it was pretty good, but that was about all. He'd never even seen a performance. When he wanted to see a show he drove across the Bay Bridge to San Francisco. He was the last person in the world to suspect that what he was restlessly seeking inside lay right under his nose—until it reached up and bit him.

"Say, Peck," said Jack. "How about helping me out?"

"Glad to," grinned Greg. "What is it?"

Well, madam, you've tried on every pair of shoes in this place."

"Want you to play a part for me—at the Workshop."

Greg laughed. "Me—on a stage? What could I do?"

"Just be yourself," said Jack. "It's like this—" and he went on to explain. He was directing a scene from "Moby Dick" at the Workshop, a dramatization of the part where the mad Captain Ahab quells a mutiny. Captain Ahab was being played by a short actor; Jack said he wanted a tall one for contrast to play Starbuck, the saintly first mate peacemaker. It was all experimental anyway, wouldn't matter if Greg was good or bad. "Come on," Jack urged. "Maybe you'll like it. Maybe you'll get interested and get yourself some good parts. Anyway, you're the type I'm after and I'd be much obliged if you'd do it for me."

"Sure," said Greg. "But I'm no actor. I'll be terrible."

He was right. He was terrible. He didn't know what acting was all about. But right away he liked it, he himself couldn't tell why. Somehow, he wanted to play more parts and better ones. Next time the Workshop put on a play, Greg volunteered for a part. He did an old man in the racy Greek comedy, "Lysistrata." Again he was technically terrible.

He was bad and he knew it. He was a rank beginner, miles behind everyone else in the Little Theater, starting just when his collegiate career was due to end. But—and this was the funny thing—the more people told him how terrible he was, the more Greg wanted to be good. Criticisms made him mad at only one person—Greg Peck. Looking back today, Greg doubts if he'd ever have lost himself body and soul in the wild idea that was about to seize him, if he'd been good, a natural, an easy ace from the start. He might have lost interest then.

There wasn't much danger of that. He got no bouquets, only brickbats. The Little Theater tried him out in an S. N. Behrman play, "Rain from Heaven," entirely because Greg was tall and looked manly enough for the rugged explorer lead, and most of the Little Theater males were far too arty and delicate. But the brittle Behrman dialogue was 'way over Greg's head. The San Francisco newspapers reviewed that play and the critics were unanimous. Eldred Peck, in the lead, was terrible. But one said prophetically, "Awkward and green though he is, Peck has one thing. He has personality. At least you look at him."

Even with that, he got the promise of a part in the Little Theater's production of "Anna Christie," to be put on in the spring. Greg stayed over another semester and enrolled in an advanced dramatics class where he drew one of the lowest grades. Toward the end of the year he played "Anna Christie." The San Francisco critics tore him apart again. But by then Greg Peck had made up his mind.

Greg had his bags packed for New York when he took his last final exam at California. He would skip the cap-and-gown and exercises. He'd get his diploma by mail. That wasn't important now. His college career was out of Greg Peck's mind—ended. Yet, for the first time in his life, he knew what he wanted to learn.

He told his mother and Joe about his decision. "Hop to it," laughed Joe, "you've got what it takes." Joe's enthusiasm was catching. Greg smiled at his mother and she nodded, "I know you'll make good."

Greg didn't tell his dad, Doc Peck, down in San Diego, his decision. He knew he couldn't justify it—starting to learn something as strange and fickle as acting—just as he was supposed to be through with learning, just as he was getting his college degree. Doc would hardly agree that acting was a "profession" and besides, Greg knew, he could never explain his crazy action at this point. He just had to up and do it.

He sold his car for $200 and borrowed another $200 from Joe, his stepdad. Greg didn't know a soul in New York, and barely how to find Broadway. But there would be a way to learn to act right and a way to eat, he was confident of that.

Joe and Bernice drove Greg to the station and waved him off on the big adventure. "Send me your autograph," cracked Joe merrily. "And meanwhile," he whispered to Greg, "if you get hard up, you know where to write."

Greg said "Thanks, but this is my party. You and Mother have helped me enough."

"We'll be bragging about it some day," grinned Joe.

So Greg was smiling confidently himself when he waved them goodbye and handed the porter his bags. After the train pulled out of Oakland station headed East, he stretched out in his upper berth and listened to the rhythm of the tierails.

They seemed to tell Gregory Peck, A.B., "You know where you're going—and you're on your way!" It was the first time he'd ever heard that chant in his ears.

(Gregory Peck's life story will be concluded in the February MODERN SCREEN.)

NO VACATION FROM BEAUTY

(Continued from page 62)

we can take a hint from Frances Gifford and pop sun specs on our noses when we brave the great, open spaces. It's a basic-beauty idea because the glare of sun-on-snow or sun-on-sand can cause some mighty unattractive squints and wrinkles which a good pair of sun glasses would prevent. Incidentally, the glasses which Frances is wearing for skiing have special long leather thongs attached to the ear-pieces. These thongs tie cozily under the chin and prevent the glasses from flying off when a gal gets involved in the acrobatics of ice skating or skiing.

Healthy sleep and outdoor exercise, no doubt about it, are bound to give a girl a good appetite. But if you want a really super-de-luxe complexion, you can't live on a diet of candy bars, spaghetti and crackers. A tasty balance of fresh vegetables, lean meats, fruits and cereals will keep the roses blooming in your cheeks.

Most important of all, a face must be clean before it can even begin to be beautiful. The tools for this important job are cream, soap and water. First, soothe your taut, winter-weary face with the cleansing cream patted on in brisk, upward motions. Feels good, doesn't it? Old makeup and soil dissolve . . . and whisk off efficiently with soft facial tissue. Now, lather up snowy clouds of suds with a fine facial soap and a pliant complexion brush or sturdy wash cloth. Set to work with a will; scrub thoroughly but gently. Then with warm water, rinse, rinse, rinse. You've now set the groundwork for beauty. Top off this ritual with an exhilarating dash of skin freshener, a soothing lotion or, if headed bed-wards, a film of non-greasy night cream. If you're embarking on a new makeup, you will, of course, apply your pet powder base.

If such nuisances as blemishes and blackheads and "bumps" crop up in your life (the meanies love to make their appearance just before your Big Date), set to work to clear your complexion. But if they persist after normal care, run, don't walk to the nearest doctor. Might be, he'll find it necessary to tinker with your diet.

But many belles who find their faces afflicted with blemishes can right matters themselves. Remember that blackheads stubbornly plant themselves in a carelessly cleaned face. They are oil ducts that have become clogged and covered with a surface dirt, but can be removed with a regular blackhead extractor. The skin should be softened first by applying a wash cloth wrung out in hot water. Then the blemishes will come out with some gentle but firm pressure—and the surrounding area should be patted with an antiseptic lotion.

White clay and other packs are mighty useful in cleaning muddy complexions. Smooth them on a freshly cleaned face and let them remain as long as the instructions recommend. If your skin is dry or sensitive, use an emollient cream after the pack. The cosmetic industry has a remedy for most complexion woes!

* * *

It's a friendly business, getting your letters. And I promise to answer every blessed one of 'em with information about beauty products and beauty treatments. But won't you please help out by enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope? That way I can answer you so much faster. Oh, yes, my address: Carol Carter, Beauty Editor, MODERN SCREEN, 149 Madison Ave., New York 16, New York.

Kiss-tempting Skin

Skin soft-as-a-kiss with Jergens Face Cream! The only all-purpose cream enriched with skin-smoothing Vitone. Better than lanolin itself! In recent tests, doctors report, 8 out of 10 troubled complexions quickly improved. "Skin noticeably softer, smoother, fresher!" say these doctors.

All-Purpose plus Vitone

For kiss-tempting skin, a daily All-Purpose Treatment with Jergens Vitone-enriched Face Cream. It softens as it cleanses, as it beautifies. Helps smooth away tiny dry-skin lines! Jergens Face Cream works like 4 creams in one. Vitone-enriched . . . yet no higher priced than other fine creams. 10¢ to $1.25. Plus tax

VITONE: special Dry-Skin "Smoother" in JERGENS FACE CREAM

A Cleanser . . . .
A Softener . . . . .
A Dry-Skin Cream
A Powder Base . .

Free! Prove to yourself at our expense what Vitone can do for your skin!

Please send me generous trial-size, free, of Jergens Vitone-enriched Face Cream.

MAIL TO: Box 57, Dept. 407, Cincinnati 14, O.

*Name*_____

*Address*_____

*City*_____ *State*_____

(Paste on penny postcard, if you wish. Sorry, sample offer good in U.S.A. only.)

Pin-up Girl

It's as easy as fluttering your lashes, thanks to DeLong Bob Pins.

Just dampen your ends and roll into flat curls, fastening each one snugly with a DeLong Bob Pin. These dreamy Bob Pins make the task quick and easy—and their Stronger Grip keeps them from slipping out. Besides, DeLong Bob Pins are so comfy they won't disturb your beauty sleep.

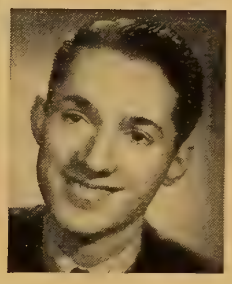
When your hair is dry and brushed out it's as flattering as a halo and you look like a photographer's delight.

Stronger Grip

Won't Slip Out

Quality Manufacturers for Over 50 Years
BOB PINS HAIR PINS SAFETY PINS
SNAPS PINS
HOOKS & EYES HOOK & EYE TAPES
SANITARY BELTS

sweet and hot



BY LEONARD FEATHER

■ If you will kindly yank a little more energetically at this long white beard I'm wearing, you will uncover the astonishing fact that I am not Santa Claus at all. (You will, of course, also uncover my chin.) Be that as it may, I do have lots of good valuable record information to pass along, so here it is, all covered with red and green good wishes for a Merry Christmas. For the best popular record of the month try the delightful "Christmas Carol" sung by King Cole with a string choir background on Capitol, and the best hot item is Count Basie's "Mutton Leg," Columbia.

BEST POPULAR

AIN'T THAT JUST LIKE A WOMAN?—Louis Jordan (Decca), Pat Flowers (Victor), Frankie Laine (Mercury)—The three records of this tune are wonderful contrasts in singing styles. Louis Jordan and his fine, breathless delivery, you all know. Then there's Pat Flowers, the boy of whom Fats Waller said before he died, "This kid will carry on for me after I go." Pat doesn't sing like Fats, but his piano playing's similar, and this record features two of the men who were on all the old Fats records—Herman Autry, trumpet, and Gene Sedric, clarinet. The third version of "Ain't That Just Like a Woman?" marks the record debut of Frankie Laine, who's very popular on the west coast. Laine looks like a business man—you'd never dream he was a singer—but he's actually a white carbon copy of King Cole.

JUST SQUEEZE ME—Duke Ellington (Victor)—This is a number Duke wrote years ago under the title of "Subtle Slough," and it was recorded then by Rex Stewart and some of the boys in the band. Now it's gone through the usual Ellington procedure of having lyrics added, and a new name, and Duke's recorded it with Ray Nance singing.

MERRY HA-HA—Ella Mae Morse—Ray Linn (Capitol)—This has an Ellington angle, too. It was composed by Billy Strayhorn, Duke's assistant arranger, with lyrics by Bob Russell, who's done the words for most of Duke's songs in recent years. ("Don't Get Around Much Any More" and "Do Nothing Till You Hear From Me" for instance.) "Merry Ha-Ha" is the best record Ella Mae Morse has ever made—better than her "Cow-Cow Boogie"—and not only does Ella Mae sing well, but she has wonderful accompaniment. The band is led by Ray Linn, who used to be trumpeter for Jimmy Dorsey and Boyd Raeburn. (Continued on page 101)

Peggy Lee and guitarist husband Dave Barbour (right) visit New York with Jane and Leonard Feather at Joe Louis' new restaurant. Joe swapped fight talk for jazz talk.

THREE LITTLE GIRLS IN GREEN

(Continued from page 60)

nurse without comment, but the next day Bronwyn's mirage baby was sung to sleep by the lyrics, "Goodbye, Joe, broke his toe, on the way to Mexico."

The invisible and highly hypothetical baby which Bronwyn carries around has two real life models: Her six-months-old boy cousin, Charles Donald, and her four-months-old boy cousin, Brian.

Charles is the lusty son of Florence Catharine FitzSimons Clark, and Brian is the blue-eyed baby of Margot FitzSimons Edwards, all four of whom have been the house guests of Maureen and Will Price for the past eight weeks.

The reunion of Maureen and her sisters was the first in over seven years of separation, and it was made possible because both Florence and Margot had become war brides. Florence had married a Canadian serviceman who is now in business in Montreal, and Margot had married a Major of Marines whom she had met in the British Embassy in London during the blackest days of the Blitz.

After V-E Day Major Edwards was returned to the Marine base at San Diego, whereupon Maureen received an ecstatic cable from Margot saying that it would soon be possible for the three FitzSimons sisters to have a Hollywood reunion.

When Maureen, Bronwyn, and Will Price met Margot at the airport, Maureen scanned her sister's face quickly, then, conquering a rising tide of emotion, turned her attention to the infant in Margot's arms. "Good Heavens," she said briskly, "you're starving that baby to death. Give him to me this instant!"

auld lang syne . . .

Florence, who is called Florrie by her sisters, arrived a few days later with her son. So the huge Price home in Bel Air echoed to the laughter of three girls who discovered immediately—to their intense satisfaction—that it was as if they had never been separated. Margot had brought a series of photograph albums in her restricted luggage space, so three beautiful heads pressed together, looking at the pictures and recalled olden days.

There were old snaps of Maureen, over which the girls screamed with laughter. Some of the shots of Florrie and Margot weren't unfunny, either. For weeks most of their conversations were prefaced by that happy phrase: "Remember when." Florrie, chuckling, recalled one tragic Sunday morning. Peggy, the older sister, had been guilty of some minor infraction of family rules, so the family had started to Mass without her. Florrie, always Peggy's pal, hung back and didn't want to go until later when Peggy was to go with the nurse, but her suggestion was vetoed by Mr. FitzSimons.

Three very glum little girls, Maureen, Margot, and Florence, sat beside their parents in church, missing the fourth member of the quartet. Suddenly, in the midst of prayer, a child cried out in the back of the church. Maureen, convinced that the weeper was her older sister, arose and shrieked—to the consternation of her parents and the controlled amusement of the parish—"It's all right, Peggy darling. Don't cry. We're right here."

One afternoon a wagon arrived at the Price home to deliver some of Margot's luggage forwarded from New York. After the boxes and barracks bags were stored in the basement, the three girls went down to investigate the shipment. They opened the package marked "Linen" and sorted out

Can hands that wash dishes be "exquisite . . . fragile"?—They can!

No matter how hard your hands must work . . . Pacquins Hand Cream can help give them a lady-of-leisure look! Use Pacquins several times a day . . . this snowy fragrant cream will quickly ease away roughness, redness, and dryness.

Pacquins was originally made for doctors and nurses . . .

Doctors and nurses who scrub their hands in hot soapy water 30 to 40 times a day. Pacquins Hand Cream, super-rich in skin-softening ingredients, was first made for their professional use. If Pacquins can do so much for them . . . just imagine how it can help your hard-working hands.

Pacquins
HAND CREAM
Creamy-smooth . . . not sticky, not greasy. More hands use Pacquins than any other hand cream in the world.
Pacquins
HAND CREAM

AT ANY DRUG, DEPARTMENT, OR TEN-CENT STORE

some of Margot's fine tablecloths and napkins. One had been burned by a cigarette. This hole was neatly indicated by an outside circle of bright red thread, a means taken by Irish laundries to call the fastidious housewife's attention to a need for repairs.

Maureen caught up the napkin, uttering a cry of remembrance. "It's been seven years since I've seen such a thing," she said. "It's so like home. It takes me back as if I had never been away at all."

Her two sisters were somewhat surprised by this nostalgic reaction, but each rested a hand on her shoulder in an affectionate caress. A few seconds later Maureen leaped up with a howl, saying, "There's a spider, there's a spider!"

Florrie, the forthright sister, pulled off a shoe and neatly bopped the spider. Margot observed laughingly, "Maureen, you really haven't changed at all. You're still afraid of spiders and you're still the world's biggest tease."

"Florrie was always a far greater tease than I," corrected Maureen.

Florrie denied it instantly.

"What about my stockings?" demanded Maureen.

"I only took them when I hadn't a clean pair of my own, and it was too late to get into a store," defended Florrie.

"It was always too late to get into a store," grinned Maureen, "and there was never much point in washing your stockings because you ruined every pair the first time you wore it."

Margot had something to say at this point: "You got even for every pair of stockings Florrie ever snitched from you when you went off to London with her paint box hidden in your luggage."

Regretfully Maureen agreed. "I suppose you shed bitter tears when you discovered what I had done, didn't you, Florrie?"

Smiling into her sister's eyes Florrie confessed, "I went through your grip when you were packing and found that paint box. I could have lifted it out and you would never have known the difference, but the truth was that after you were gone we were so lonesome for you that I comforted myself many times with the knowledge that wherever you were, you were carrying my most prized possession."

When Maureen knew that she was to have the delight of two months' visit from her sisters, she planned a good many things. They were to spend several days at the beach because all of the girls are good swimmers.

She wanted to take them night clubbing, to Romanoff's, Mocambo, and Ciro's. Most of all—since she herself has never been there—she wanted to take them aboard the island steamer to Catalina, twenty miles off the Southern California coast.

tot's confusion . . .

As luck and her motion picture career would have it, Maureen worked every day during the first month of her sisters' visit, in "Sinbad," at RKO; and after only a weekend off she reported to 20th Century-Fox for her starring role in "Home Stretch," with Cornel Wilde.

One Saturday night when Major Edwards was in Los Angeles on leave from his base, he and Will Price took the three sisters, gabbing like magpies as usual, night clubbing. They danced once or twice, but the floor was so crowded that the slide trombone had to be eliminated for fear of beheading a patron.

"Awfully smoky in here, isn't it, Florrie?" said Margot.

"Noisy, too," supplemented Florrie.

"And we could be playing 'Patience'," summed up Maureen.

So the party adjourned to the Price home where the three girls settled around a game table to play their particular version of brain-bursting "Patience," while the men discussed the Marine Corps.

After having won three games, Florrie's attitude was mellow. "There was only one thing that was fun about going to a night club," she admitted. "That was sitting at the table with Maureen and having everyone stare at her. I remember when I was a little girl I always liked to walk down the street with Maureen because she was so beautiful that everyone turned around to give her a long look of admiration."

Maureen let her win three games.

Incidentally, Florence resembles Maureen so closely that Miss Bronwyn was confused by her presence for several weeks. On repeated occasions either Maureen or Florrie would catch Bronwyn standing rooted to one spot while her bright blue eyes moved from her mommy to the face of her pretty aunt and back again. She listened to the sound of their voices, obviously comparing them. A number of times she popped into a room where Florrie was standing with her back toward the door and asked a question, addressing Florrie as "Mommy."

Having discovered her mistake, Bronwyn would depart in chagrined haste.

"All right, so it ain't like your mother used to make."

Eventually, the young woman's sense of humor caught up with the situation. Standing her ground one afternoon, she placed a hand on each hip and chuckled, "Two mommies."

Unlike most California visitors, neither Margot nor Florrie was agog over the prospect of meeting and getting to know motion picture stars. In Florrie's case this is accounted for by the fact that she had made many British motion pictures, in the latest of which she was James Mason's leading woman. In the case of Margot, that beautiful and talented girl had also been a rising young actress when she married, having appeared as second lead to Wendy Hiller in three pictures.

When Maureen asked them if there was any person in particular whom they wanted to meet, they said no. Then they burst into reminiscent laughter. When Maureen had first come to Hollywood, Florrie bombarded her with letters demanding pictures of Mickey Rooney. Margot, no less heavy on the pen, besought photographs of Bing Crosby.

Recalled Florrie, "I'll never forget the moment when a large manila envelope arrived in the morning post. Margot and I each made a dive for it—each screaming at the other that it was undoubtedly her own package. Daddy arrived at the scene in time to take the parcel away from us before we ruined it. As punishment he ruled that neither of us was to have it. Then he read the address. 'Mr. Charles FitzSimmons,' it said. You had sent a series of cowboy pictures to our brother, Charlie."

Margot and Florrie and their two youngsters had been in residence with Maureen only a week when the entire staff of servants, with the exception of the loyal nurse, resigned without notice and sailed out in an indignant body.

"Now what will we do?" wailed Maureen.

Her two sisters looked nonchalant. "What's wrong with our doing the housework?" asked Florrie. "After all, I'm a housewife. I've grown accustomed to making a home in a shoe box if necessary. This won't be any trick at all."

family portrait . . .

Useful as the aunts found their resourceful niece, she also embarrassed them on occasion. One evening she told her mother, "Auntie Fawie is wearing your red shoes, mommy. And Auntie Margot is wearing your pink slip and your big bracelet."

Added Florrie, resignedly, "I am also wearing one of the two pairs of nylons which were delivered this afternoon, and I have tried on that blue wool suit hanging in the back of your closet."

Margot also added a confession. "I've been wearing your black gabardine coat while shopping in the morning. It's just perfect for me, darling."

"I've never liked either one," fibbed Maureen. "Move them into your own closets and wear them out."

In one additional department Bronwyn's assistance could be classed as zero-plus. Having watched her aunties cleaning the house and having listened to their comment that the linen on the line was "white as snow," she undertook a project of her own. Margot entered the kitchen one afternoon to discover with a horrified shriek that the floor was covered from wall to wall with a thin sifting of flour. In one corner was a young lady who looked up in obvious expectation of praise. "Floor all white—nice and clean," she explained.

When the FitzSimmons girls were growing up, all of them were given piano lessons, but no one plays the piano today. However, Margot had a surprise for Maureen, for in her luggage was a small Irish harp. One of the most wonderful evenings of their visit together was that one during which the three girls, Will, Bronwyn, and the two sleeping boys, were gathered in the library, and Margot played the harp and everyone else lifted his voice in old Irish tunes.

Late that night when the harp was put away, Margot said with a sigh, "I wish we could do this at least once a week all the rest of our lives. It's so wonderful for us to be together in a family again, quite as though nothing had changed."

There will be many separations, however, before the three girls are together again. Florence must return to Montreal where her husband is. If theings go well, however, she will return with her husband and her son to spend Christmas with Maureen. Margot's Marine Major husband is to be transferred to the State of Washington, where she will follow him. And Maureen herself, is planning to spend two months in Ireland with her parents.

She will have great stories to tell Margot and Florrie when she returns, and once again the three little sisters are gathered around the fireplace reminiscing and thinking of songs to sing in accompaniment to the twang of an Irish harp.

"ESTHER'S LIKE THAT"

(Continued from page 49)

I'd never seen her in a picture. There are still some I've missed. I don't hang around her sets and we don't talk shop when she comes home from the studio. If I'd give in to my natural inclination to be corny I'd even say, "That's no actress, that's my wife."

I took Esther to a premiere one night. Her sister, Maureen, came along with her two daughters, Jody and Beulah. After the show, there was a line-up of kids to get the stars' autographs. Esther was too busy to notice that her nieces had disappeared. She was scribbling away when she happened to look up—and almost fell over. There, standing in line waiting their turn for an autograph, were Jody and Beulah.

"What in the world are you two kids doing here?" scolded Esther, "if you want my autograph you can get it any time."

They blushed. "But Aunt Esther," explained Jody. "We didn't know you were so famous!"

When MODERN SCREEN asked me to hold forth on Esther from a husband's-eye view, I balked. "There's nothing exciting, dramatic or glamorous to tell," I protested. "We're just a couple of plain, normal married characters." They didn't believe me. All right—

I was discharged from the army the 24th of November. Esther and I were married the 25th. We flew to Mexico on our honeymoon that night.

marital ties . . .

I packed my bags with a bunch of pre-Pearl Harbor, real silk ties. I'd been saving those ties carefully for four years waiting for that happy day when they called me "Mister" again. Frankly, I thought they were pretty darned nifty. I patted each one tenderly as I folded them in the suitcase.

The first night in Mexico City we got dressed up to go out for dinner. I hauled out the ties, spread them on the bed and spent a half hour picking out just the right ribbon. If I do say so, it was a beauty. Blue with splashes of gold. A pattern that would knock your eye out—especially the eye of a guy jaded with GI tan. I hummed, happy as a—well, as a groom—and wrapped a trim knot.

Esther was all ready to go when she spied the tie.

"D-darling," she said.

"Yes?"

"That tie."

"You like it?"

"You aren't really going to wear it, are you?"

I sulked a little but I went back and changed to another. Repeat the scene. I tried again. Ditto.

"U-m-m-m, let me see your ties," said Esther sweetly.

"Yes, dear." I actually said it.

"These four are very nice," said my wife, dangling my four last choices from her finger.

"From now on, darling," I swore, swooping all the rest into the waste basket, "I shall wear only those cravats of your choice." From that day on I've worn only those four ties. From that minute on, too, I realized I was married. I certainly was.

Seriously, glamor leaves both us Gages as cold as two cucumbers in our private life—and that's the way we like it. We're both knee deep in show business—Esther's in movies and I'm in radio. We love it. She sits in the sponsor's booth every

(Continued on page 82)

Give yourself a beautiful TONI Home Permanent for your date tonight!

Easy as putting your hair up in curlers — but the wave stays in!

You'll want to know all about this new easy way to look lovelier . . . win compliments. These questions and answers tell you everything!

Does TONI really work?

Answer: Yes! Toni will wave any kind of hair that can be permanent-waved, even grey, dyed or bleached hair.

Can you do it yourself?

Answer: Yes! If you can roll up your hair on curlers, you can give yourself a Toni. Directions are easy to follow.

How long will it take you?

Answer: The actual waving time is only 2 to 3 hours—even less for hair that's dyed, tinted or bleached, or for baby-fine hair. And all of that time you are free to do what you please.

Is TONI really a permanent?

Answer: Yes. The Toni creme wave is a genuine permanent, and the wave will last until the hair grows out.

Why is TONI a Creme?

Answer: Because Toni Creme Waving Lotion gives a curl that looks natural . . . is "frizz"-free from the start.

Will TONI work on children?

Answer: Yes! Mothers find Toni's gentle creme waving lotion is ideal for children's silky-fine hair. (And the child is free to run about and play while the permanent is "taking"!)

Is TONI guaranteed?

Answer: Yes! Your Toni wave must flatter you or you get back every cent you paid. Toni can make this guarantee because the Toni Wave is laboratory controlled for uniformity and high quality.

Good idea! Give your daughter a Toni Home Permanent today — you'll both be thrilled with results! Toni is ideal for children's hair.

Every hour of the day another 1,000 women use Toni

Toni HOME PERMANENT
THE CREME COLD WAVE

At all leading drug, cosmetic and notion counters

$1.25 plus tax

"visions of sugar plums . . ."

NEEDN'T REMAIN VISIONS

BECAUSE OF SUGAR SCARCITY! OTHER SWEETENERS

MAKE EQUALLY DELICIOUS HOLIDAY TREATS

By Nancy Wood

"Dear Santa: Please bring me a cat, a dog, a monkey and some rabbits for Christmas. And I like candy, too. Thank you. From Margaret O'Brien."

Margaret O'Brien has been a very good girl all during 1946! That means Santa Claus will just outdo himself bringing her presents! Margaret, pet of the M-G-M studios, has acted beautifully in four films, among them "Tenth Avenue Angel," to be released soon. She's had to go to school like other youngsters and get lots of 100s and American flag stickers for not erasing in her copy book. Margaret has not, however, been disgustingly good—she stalls at milk and spinach and hates to go to bed at night. But she's still entitled to a wonderfully merry Christmas with candy and lots of everything a little girl loves.

KRISPIE DROPS

1 7-oz. bar semi-sweet chocolate, melted
¼ cup butter
½ cup chopped pecans
1 teaspoon vanilla
1½ cups rice krispies

Melt chocolate and butter together over hot water, add nuts and vanilla and fold in rice krispies carefully. Drop by teaspoonfuls on waxed paper and store in refrigerator overnight.

SPICED NUTS

This holiday sweetmeat takes a minimum of effort and sugar. Shelled nut meats are coated with a crisp, thin covering of spiced, melted sugar. Here's how: Beat an egg white slightly. Add about two cups shelled, unbroken nut

Luscious squares of Cocoa Fruit Fudge can be made without a grain of sugar! Fine for gifts since it doesn't dry out easily. (Photograph courtesy Best Foods)

Molasses candy, long an American favorite, is a good sugarless holiday sweet. Do try the Raisin Peanut Clusters and Molasses Cocoanut Chews for which we are giving you recipes. (Photograph courtesy Brer Rabbit) meats and stir gently until nut meats are covered with beaten egg. Mix ½ cup granulated sugar with ½ teaspoon cinnamon, ½ teaspoon salt, a dash of allspice and ground cloves. (Omit salt if salted nuts are used.) Place sugar mixture in small bag. Put a half cup or so of nut meats into the bag and shake to cover with sugar. Remove and place on buttered cookie sheet. Cover remaining nut meats. Bake in slow oven (300° F.) about 30 minutes.

RAISIN PEANUT CLUSTERS

½ cup New Orleans molasses
½ cup corn syrup
1 teaspoon vinegar
3 tablespoons butter
1 cup shelled peanuts
1 cup raisins

Combine molasses, corn syrup and vinegar. Place over low heat and stir until mixture boils. Continue boiling to 250° F. or until a small amount of syrup forms a firm ball in cold water. Remove from heat and add butter. Stir until combined with syrup. Add nuts and raisins. Drop by spoonfuls on greased pan. If candy hardens while working with it, put it back over very low heat and stir until it softens slightly.

MOLASSES COCOANUT CHEWS

½ cup corn syrup
½ cup New Orleans molasses
1 tablespoon vinegar
2 tablespoons butter
2 cups shredded cocoanut

Combine syrup, molasses, vinegar and butter. Place over low heat and stir until mixture boils. Continue boiling to 248° F., or until a small amount of syrup forms a firm ball in cold water. Remove from heat; add cocoanut. Drop from two forks on greased surface. Makes about 28 chews.

COCOA FRUIT FUDGE

¼ cup vitaminized margarine
½ cup honey
2 cups cocoa
¼ cup boiling water
1⅓ cups (1 can) sweetened condensed milk
¼ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 cup chopped assorted candied fruits and nuts

Blend margarine, honey, cocoa and boiling water in large heavy saucepan. Add sweetened condensed milk and salt and stir constantly over low flame about 15 minutes, or until thick. Remove from heat, add vanilla, candied fruits and nuts, reserving some for garnishing top. Turn into shallow square pan, lined with waxed paper to extend above edge of pan. Brush well with melted margarine. Let candy cool. Lift from paper. Cut in squares. Yield: 36 pieces.

ONE MOTHER TO ANOTHER

My, how we Mothers wait for baby's first smile - cherish each succeeding one. There's such a world of reassurance in watching the corners of that tiny mouth curve upward, as if to say, "Everything's fine with me."

Mrs Dan Gerber

Who says babies can't talk
Any mother knows what this baby's eyes are saying: "Hurry, Mom, I'm hungry for something good."
And millions of mothers know Gerber's are good to eat and so good for baby. Babies enjoy the natural taste of Gerber's. Carefully selected vegetables and fruits are washed in pure, deep well water, cooked by steam under pressure to retain precious minerals and vitamins. Smooth, uniform texture means easy digestion.
So, get Gerber's—with America's "Best-Known Baby" on the label!
YOUR CHOICE OF THREE SPECIAL CEREALS
Serve all three Gerber's Cereals for variety! Cereal Food (Blue Box) Strained Oatmeal (Red Box) new Barley Cereal (Yellow Box). All are rich in added iron and B complex vitamins. Pre-cooked—just add milk or formula.
It's wise to check baby's feeding program with your doctor.
Gerber's BABY FOODS
FREMONT, MICH.
OAKLAND, CAL.
CEREALS (3 Varieties)
STRAINED FOODS (18 Varieties)
CHOPPED FOODS (13 Varieties)

© 1947, G. P. C.

FREE SAMPLES—Please send me samples of Gerber's Cereal Food, Gerber's Strained Oatmeal and Gerber's Barley Cereal. My baby is now ..... months old.

Address: Gerber Products Co., Dept. DE1-7, Fremont, Mich.
In Canada: Dept. DE1-7, 49 Wellington Street East, Toronto 1, Ont.

Name.....

Address..... City and State.....

GIRLS! Want quick curls?

WHAT girl doesn't want quick curls these days! Especially when that favorite fella gives you a call at the last minute. With New Wildroot Hair Set you can set that favorite hair-do in less time. It's absolutely tops for quick good grooming that's so important these days. New Wildroot Hair Set contains processed Lanolin. Leaves any texture of hair soft, natural-looking, and at its lovely best. Replaces old-fashioned thick gummy wave sets. Light bodied. Faster drying. Lets you style your favorite hair-do at home quickly, without fuss or disappointment.

NEW WILDROOT HAIR SET

5¢ EACH LITTLE BLUE BOOKS

Send postcard for our free catalogue. Thousands of bargains. Address: HALDEMAN JULIUS CO., Catalogue Dept., Desk M-2417, GIRARD, KANSAS

STAMMER? GET THIS FREE BOOK!

This new 128-page book, "Stammering, Its Cause and Correction," describes the Bogue Unit Method for scientific correction of stammering and stuttering—successful for 46 years. Benj. N. Bogue, Dept. 2291, Circle Tower, Indianapolis 4, Ind.

DON'T LET THOSE "DIFFICULT DAYS" COME BETWEEN YOU

Maybe it was his fault—that quarrel. Maybe. But next time take care! Don't let those Monthly Blues make you nervous and irritable! Instead—for nervous tension, periodic cramps and headache — help get usually grand relief with these improved Chi-Ches-Ters Pills! 50¢, or large economy boxes at your druggist. Today, get Chi-Ches-Ters Pills, and take only as directed.

The Improved CHI-CHES-TERS PILLS

For relief from "periodic functional distress"

FREE—New illustrated booklet of intimate facts every woman should know. Mailed in plain wrapper. Write today! Chichester Chemical Company, Dept. E-1, Philadelphia 46, Pennsylvania.

broadcast I make and tells me off when I make a fluff. I'm her severest critic at previews and her number one fan, too, (next to Mom Williams, of course).

One night we had an invitation to an ultra Hollywood party. The host was a good friend of mine and Esther's. "Fine," we accepted when he called. "We'd love to come." We meant it. I even sent my dinner jacket out to be pressed and Esther bought a new pair of red shoes.

So Friday night rolled around and my brother, Chuck, called.

"Say," he said, "when are we all going to see those pictures at the studio? How about tomorrow night?"

"Fine," said Esther. "I'll fix it up."

So we had a party on our hands.

We arranged to meet at a beaten up old Bar-B-Q. Driving over, Esther said suddenly and soberly, "D-a-rling—"

"Yes?"

"Do you know what night this is?" I said it was Saturday, of course. "Do you know where we are supposed to be?" I said meeting Chuck and Ann.

"Uh-uh," said Esther, shaking her head firmly, and I could tell from the look in her eyes there was some joke on us. I suddenly remembered. "Oh, my gosh—the party!" Esther laughed. "Well, I'll just have to call." And she did.

anti-phony . . .

I'll stack Esther's friendliness and good nature up against anybody's, but one night we were somewhere or other and she got mobbed by autograph fans. She was dashing off her name as fast as her fingers could fly but it wasn't fast enough for one rude brat. He yelled, "Y-a-aah—Esther Williams—ya don't even do ya own swimmin' in ya pitchas!"

Esther stopped the pencil work pronto and fixed this young Dead-Ender with her best schoolmarm gaze. "Listen," she boiled, "When I was your age, I was practicing every spare minute I had so I could do my own swimming in my pictures—instead of running around the streets insulting people!" Then she grabbed my arm and we got the heck out of there, fans or no fans. Esther won't compromise on what she thinks for anything.

Esther was my particular pin-up girl long before I ever met her. Not entirely because she looked well in a bathing suit (and still does) but because I'm a swim fan from way back. I won my letter in high school and college swimming breaststroke on the teams. But I could never do the crawl for sour apples. On our honeymoon I kidded Esther. "I really married you," I told her, "so you could teach me the crawl."

"You said you loved me, you cad," replied Esther. "Anyway, if I'm giving lessons we need a swimming pool."

We found a pool. A house went with it. Not much of a pool, not much of a house, at first. But that's another thing about Esther—she's a born pioneer. Everything was a "shortage," and impossible to get, but Esther tracked it down. I still don't know how it all happened, but pretty soon there was a house with everything working, furnished and looking swell. We've just contributed a bar.

And we had a pool. No tile, no chrome ladders, not even a springboard, and only four feet deep and small enough (it's been said) to give a goldfish claustrophobia.

A photographer from a picture magazine came out to snap Esther at her pool. Being Esther Williams, he thought she naturally had a pool to end all pools. He took one look and his face dropped to his ankles.

"Is this it?" he yelped.

"Sure—isn't it wonderful?" glowed Esther. He didn't think it was.

My wife takes a somewhat wicked delight in surprises like that. But she loves to be startled herself just as much.

Last August 8 was her birthday and it was also the date of my weekly radio show in Hollywood. As I said, Esther likes to kibitz when I work, so those nights we usually have dinner at the Hollywood Derby. I figured she wouldn't catch on if I staged it there. But I laid a false trail by having Janet Blair and Lou Bush invite us to dinner. I worked out an arrangement with the chef, Robert. I snitched Esther's glasses; she's on the near-sighted side. We met the couple and Robert came up, as advertised, and asked us to see the American Room, just redecorated, he said. Esther's a sucker for all redecorations. So we trooped back and Esther spied the room full of people—but just people; I had her glasses.

"Oh," she whispered, dismayed. "We've interrupted a party!"

Just then Johnny Green played "Happy Birthday" on the piano and I handed Esther her specs.

"Put these on and look around," I said.

"Oh!" cried Esther. "Golly!"

Was Esther dismayed at finding herself turned from a guest into a hostess for a room full of people? Not a bit. She had the time of her life. That's the kind of thing she's crazy about. But she was luckier than I was. My surprise was more on the rugged side.

It happened the first night I wangled a date with Esther. "All right," she said, "if you'll come to my house for dinner and meet my mother." That suited me fine.

"This is Mommy and this is the room I was born in," introduced Esther. I liked them both. Mrs. Williams didn't look like a movie mother and the house didn't look like it had ever been introduced to Hollywood. For the first time since I'd come to Hollywood I felt right at home. We had a perfect home-cooked dinner and then Esther curled up on the couch. "Now," Esther smiled sweetly, "you and Mother get acquainted." Then she went to sleep. She was working in a picture; she was tired. I wasn't working; I was in the Army.

flying colors . . .

I don't know how long Mom Williams and I talked. But I know what we talked about—Ben Gage. I've been examined in college and screened by the Army Air Corps, but those were mere picnics. When I left, Mom Williams knew everything about me from the day I was born, and before, including the fact that my ancestor was a British General named Gage who was a first rate heel around 1776.

I was dizzy when I told Esther good night at the door. "Who is your Mother," I asked, "the district attorney?"

"Better than that," she grinned. "She's a counsellor for the American Institute of Family Relations. Good night."

I certainly never would have walked into that session with my eyes open. But I was really lucky. I was relaxed and I came through. Esther told me next day, "You got straight A."

In fact, her favorite type fiesta is a periodic family reunion the Williams clan tosses every so often. Every family member totes along a special dish and by evening it all spells bicarbonate of soda backwards, forwards—anyway you look at it.

Mom Williams raised her daughter right, a fact I rediscover every day.

She's got a dreamy disposition. I had a date to take Esther to an important Hollywood party one night when I was still in the service. At the last minute, my commanding officer asked me to emcee a dance at the base. I dropped a quarter into the phone shakily. I mumbled out the sad news, expecting at least a disappointment.

(Continued on page 85)

RADIO AWARD BY ED SULLIVAN

(Continued from page 24)

no farther, and now McCarthy and I were back home in Chicago.

" 'Bergen,' I said to myself, 'this is where we came in.' "

So what did he do?

"Just what you'd have done, Edward," said Bergen. "I was feeling morbid, sorry for myself, so I decided to go to the Chez Paree and get plastered. The place was full of music, gay people, lights, but brother, I was the ghost at the banquet.

"I was getting gloomier by the second when something hit me a terrific blow on the back. The 'something' was the hand of Joey Jacobson, who owned the place with Mike Fritzel. 'Bergen,' said Jacobson, 'you are just the guy I'm looking for. When can you open for me here?' "

"Tomorrow night," Bergen assured him.

There's no business like show business! From the lowest point of his career, Bergen rebounded to his greatest success at the Chez Paree. Radio, which had snubbed him, suddenly discovered that the script they'd rejected was just what they wanted. The voice of Charlie McCarthy was heard throughout the land, and Bergen and Charlie not only were sitting on top of the world; they wrapped their legs around the saddle. "It was fantastic," grins Bergen. "Fantastic."

The Voice of McCarthy indeed was heard through the land, getting in sly jibes at the big shots invited to Bergen's program, making love to glamor girls, deflating stuffed shirts. The country howled at the little man with the piping tones who acknowledged no reverence to anyone or anything.

So this month, the MODERN SCREEN-Ed Sullivan Award goes to Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy, who have proved that there's no business like show business—and who have proved, too, that in the long run, talent will find its own high level.

I SAW IT HAPPEN

In 1943, when Bob Alda was still unknown to movie audiences, he was appearing at Chicago's "Latin Quarter." The night I was there was the Senior Prom of Von Steuben High School. I decided then and there that even if Bob Alda wasn't in the movies, he should be, and I was going to get his autograph. I waited until I spotted the table he was sitting at. When he got up to leave, I knew it was now or never. Grabbing a pencil and a postcard, I dashed across the room, shouting "Just a minute, Mr. Alda, I want your autograph." It seems that the contact of the rug on the floor, and my first high heels, made my dash a slide, and there I went—very ungracefully—right across the floor, smack into Bob's waiting arms. I was so out of breath and so flabbergasted, that I just thrust the pencil and postcard at him and said, "Sign here, please." He did, and also said, "This is the first time anyone has thrown herself into my arms for an autograph. Anything else I can do for you?" I got my autograph, and in due time, Bob got his fame!

Lois Gross
Chicago, Illinois

DIANA LYNN DISCUSSES A Love Problem

"Love that's strong as steel is delicate, too. A harsh touch of your hands may tarnish your shining moment. I use Jergens Lotion for my hands."...Jergens is, 7 to 1, the favorite hand care of the Stars.

DIANA LYNN, CO-STARRING IN PARAMOUNT'S "EASY COME, EASY GO"

Seductive soft hands are even surer now, when you use Jergens Lotion. Your hands feel even smoother and softer; are protected longer. Due to wartime studies, Jergens is now even finer. Two special skin-softeners, so dependably effective that many doctors use them, are included in this postwar Jergens Lotion. Still 10¢ to $1.00 (plus tax).

For the Softest, Adorable Hands, use

JERGENS LOTION

FREE!
See for yourself why Hollywood Stars, 7 to 1, use Jergens Lotion

Mail coupon today for gift bottle. (Paste on penny postcard if you wish.) Box 27, Cincinnati 14, Ohio. Please send my gift bottle.

Name _____

Address _____

City _____ State _____

(Please print name, address plainly ... Sorry, offer good in U.S.A. only) Dept. 49

SUPER COUPON

MODERN SCREEN SERVICE CHARTS

To place your order, check the boxes opposite the charts you'd like. Read carefully instructions given for ordering each chart.

WRITE TO: SERVICE DEPT. MODERN SCREEN 149 MADISON AVE. NEW YORK 16, N. Y.

don't forget your zone number!

SAVE POSTAGE! The following group of 20 charts can be mailed at a great saving in postage for you, if you follow these instructions carefully: Send ONE LARGE (4½" x 9") self-addressed, stamped (6c in postage) envelope for your choice of ANY THREE in this group. Enclose additional self-addressed envelopes (6c stamps on each) for additional choices of THREE, OR send ONE 9" X 12" envelope (30c postage) FOR THE ENTIRE SERIES OF 20.

HOW TO HAVE LOVELY EYES (10c)—Offered for the first time this month. A simplified, convenient routine for keeping your eyes free from strain, tiredness, circles, wrinkles. How to camouflage eyes that are too small, bulging, deep-set, wide apart or too close together. How to apply mascara, pencil, shadow correctly. Please enclose 10c in coin with your order.....☐

WHAT ABOUT NECKING? (5c)—by Jean Kinkead—First offered Aug. '46. So you think you know all the answers to this controversial question? Well, here are some angles we bet you never considered before. Please enclose 5c in coin with your order.....☐

SKIN CARE FOR THE TEENS (5c)—Start being good to your skin while you're young and it'll never become a "problem." Here's a simple, healthful routine for your complexion that'll keep it fresh and glowing. Please enclose 5c in coin with your order.....☐

HAIR DO'S AND DON'TS FOR TEEN-AGERS (5c)—The long and short of hair glamor. It's got everything—hair-grooming directions, latest hair styles, charts for facial types. Please enclose 5c in coin with your order.....☐

YOU CAN BE CHARMING (10c)—says Jean Kinkead—It isn't always the gal with the smoothest chassis and prettiest face who's perfect date-bait. It's a warm, friendly spirit and that glow from within that really count. Here's how to de-vel-op your per-son-al-i-ty! Please enclose 10c in coin with your order.....☐

HOW TO BE POPULAR WITH BOYS (5c)—by Jean Kinkead—The secret of making the right kind of impression on the nice boys you know. Holding-your-man tactics that really WORK! Please enclose 5c in coin with your order.....☐

BE A BETTER DANCER (5c)—by Arthur Murray, world's foremost dancing instructor—Easy-to-follow, illustrated directions that'll make you a smoothie on the dance floor. Plus dance etiquette—what to wear, how to snag the stags! Please enclose 5c in coin with your order...☐

HOW TO TALK TO BOYS (5c)—by Jean Kinkead. Offered for first time this month. Are you so tongue-tied at the approach of the nice new boy in class that you can't even squeeze out a small, "Hi?" Whether it's just small-talk or the answer to those all-important three little words, Jean throws you the correct line. Please enclose 5c with your order.....☐

PLEASE BEHAVE! (10c)— First offered July '46. Rusty manners can sometimes make you long for the ground to open up and swallow you whole. Here are simple practical rules of etiquette that'll make you sure of yourself—always. Please enclose 10c in coin with your order..☐

GUIDE FOR BRIDES (10c)—Complete guide to wedding etiquette. Covers invitations, announcements, showers, trousseau, reception, expenses for formal and informal affairs. Please enclose 10c in coin with your order.....☐

ACCESSORIES FOR TALL, SHORT, STOUT AND THIN GIRLS (10c)—It's accessories that make your outfit! How to glamor up your clothes with those little touches that mean everything. Please enclose 10c in coin with your order...☐

DESSERTS FRANKIE LOVES (5c)—by Nancy Sinatra—Seeing isn't believing. Frankie loves to eat fancy desserts—and here are the recipes for some of his favorites. (They're low on sugar, too!) Please enclose 5c in coin with your order.....☐

MAKE YOUR HOME MORE ATTRACTIVE (10c)—House-beautifying tricks to transform a drab corner or a whole room into a heavenly setting for you and yours. And it's both fun and money-saving to do it yourself! Please enclose 10c in coin with your order.....☐

HOW TO PICK THE RIGHT JOB (5c)—Career Chart No. 1—Whether it's just a good job you're after, or a full-fledged career, here are ideas and suggestions for analyzing your personality, your past interests and current aptitudes to discover the right job for you. Please enclose 5c in coin with your order.....☐

JOBS AND HOW TO GET THEM (5c)—Career Chart No. 2—Once you decide which job is for you, here's how to go about getting it. A survey of scores of career jobs. Also, the job interview, salary information—and lots more! Please enclose 5c in coin with your order.....☐

GLAMOR FOR THE TEENS (10c)—by Jean Kinkead—First offered June '46. The new teen-ager's beauty bible, revised and enlarged to give you the very latest advice on complexion, makeup, hair care, diet, exercise, grooming—everything to make you a glamorous teen! Please enclose 10c in coin with your order..☐

HOW TO BE BEAUTIFUL (10c)—First offered Sept. '46. A thorough glamorizing course, especially for gals over 18. Skin care, home facials, hair styling, makeup, manicuring, exercises, grooming, etc., for the more sophisticated miss. Please enclose 10c in coin with your order.....☐

HOW TO THROW A PARTY (10c)—Does everybody love to congregate at your house, whether it's corn popping in the kitchen or a formal dance? Solid hints for good hostessing, refreshments, novel party ideas, etc. Please enclose 10c in coin with your order.....☐

HOW TO BUDGET YOUR CLOTHES MONEY (10c)—First offered Dec. '46. A year-round plan for budgeting your fashion money that'll keep you well-dressed ALL THE TIME—not just on "occasions." 3 complete budgets! Please enclose 10c in coin with your order.....☐

HOW TO BE DATE BAIT (5c)—by Jean Kinkead—First offered Oct. '46. How to make the fellers know you're alive—and very much in circulation! How to meet boys, what to say to 'em, how to make them like you and—most important—get 'em to ask you for a date! Please send 5c in coin with your order.....☐

FASHIONS FOR TEENS (5c)—First offered Nov. '46. Never before have you teen-agers been so clothes-conscious, and because you take such pride in your togs we've whipped up a smart-looking, fashion-wise winter wardrobe of fine-quality, inexpensive clothes that you can buy at your local stores. Please send 5c in coin with your order.....☐

The following group of five charts are oversized and have to be ordered individually. Send a 4½" x 9" self-addressed, stamped (3c) envelope for EACH.

WHO'S WHO IN THE CAST (5c)—First offered Nov. '46. Complete cast sheets of over 100 movies that you'll be seeing from now to spring. It's the perfect guide for every movie-goer who's asked "Who was the guy who played . . . ?" Simply look up the title of the film—and there's the answer, right before your eyes! Please enclose 5c in coin with your order...☐

HOW TO USE MAKEUP (10c)—12 pages. A complete course in makeup for everyday and chi-chi occasions, including proper application of foundation, powder, rouge, lipstick, eye makeup, etc. Also, corrective makeup to camouflage facial defects, complete "dictionary" of makeup terms and description of makeup "tools." Please enclose 10c in coin with your order..☐

SUPER-STAR INFORMATION CHART — 1946-'47 (10c)—First offered July '46. A new, better-than-ever edition of the chart that's a 32-page pocket encyclopedia of exclusive, fascinating data on the private lives, wives, hobbies, used-to-be jobs, latest pix of all your favorite stars. 100 additional names never before listed! Please enclose 10c in coin with your order..☐

HOW TO LOSE WEIGHT (10c)—by Dr. Edwin P. Jordan, famous syndicated health columnist and assoc. editor, Journal of the Am. Medical Assn.—First offered Aug. '46. Eat your way to a lovely figure! A recognized physician has prepared—especially for us—a scientific reducing routine that you'll enjoy following. Please enclose 10c in coin with your order.....☐

HOW TO JOIN A FAN CLUB (10c)—First offered Nov. 46. Brand new, re-edited chart, listing over 100 of the best clubs for Frankie, Van, Allyson, Lawford, Wilde, Ladd, etc. Learn about the MODERN SCREEN Fan Club Assn. Also, how to write good fan letters. Please enclose 10c in coin with your order.....☐

THE FOLLOWING ARE NOT CHARTS:

INFORMATION DESK—Answers to every question that pops into your mind about Hollywood, the stars and movies. If you're hankering to know about casting, musical scores, or who socked the heroine with a tomato in last night's movie, see column on page 10 for details.

EXCLUSIVE CANDID SNAPS! These beautiful 4" x 5" glossy snapshots of your favorite stars were taken by MODERN SCREEN's own crack photographers, Gus Gale and Bob Beerman. NO POSTAGE REQUIRED! They're 10c each; 3 for 25c; 6 for 50c; 12 for $1.00, or the entire set for only $1.50. (Sorry, only one pose per star.)

I enclose $..... for the snaps checked below.

My name.....

Street address.....

City..... Zone..... State.....

☐ Entire Set of 20

☐ Van Johnson	☐ Frank Sinatra
☐ Guy Madison	☐ Cornel Wilde
☐ Ingrid Bergman	☐ Gregory Peck
☐ June Allyson	☐ Alan Ladd
☐ Mark Stevens	☐ Peter Lawford
☐ Bing Crosby	☐ Lon McCallister
☐ Clark Gable	☐ Glenn Ford
☐ Jeanne Crain	☐ Betty Grable
☐ Gene Kelly	☐ Dana Andrews
☐ Lana Turner	☐ Danny Kaye

"Tell you what," came back Es, "I'll drive down to your dance." That's Esther.

She's domestic. She'd rather be home than any place. For weeks last summer we tried to take a vacation trip. Each time I came up with an idea, Esther took it apart. "What's there?" Then she answered herself. "A bar, a pool—and sunshine. Well we've got a bar, a pool and sunshine right here." I suggested everything from Palm Springs to Sun Valley. I got the same answer. We stayed at home. Esther's a cook supreme. I've never seen her come up with a bad meal, and sometimes that's a small miracle. She can come home, tired from a day under the lights, and I've forgotten to market or the grocery man has left the wrong things. There's nothing in the house to eat. Then—presto—before I've read the evening paper, it's on the table—and it's good.

Esther's thrifty. She's a good business woman and a smart buyer—whether it's clothes, clothespins, or Cadillacs.

Esther's sentimental. The first present I ever gave her was a radio. It was while I was in the service. She couldn't get one. I had a buddy with one for sale. I worked a deal, hauled it up from Santa Ana in a trailer. I hooked it up for her on Valentine's Day. It's a beaten up old box by now but she wouldn't have a new one.

Esther's impatient; she's a perfectionist; she wants to get things done and she wants to do it the best. She can get off to work faster in the morning than any human in the world. She can work harder and longer and not get tired. She was shooting some tough water scenes when we were swamped in re-doing our house. One morning, in the gray dawn, I heard a bustle and rustle and pried open my eyes. It wasn't light yet and Esther had a hard day ahead of her. "What the heck are you doing up at this hour?" I muttered. "Putting paper in the drawers," said Esther, "It has to be done right away." Well, maybe it did. Anyway, to Esther it did.

FEBRUARY ISSUE

Our Valentine for next month will be June Allyson, whom we borrowed from that nice Dick Powell, to grace our cover. Watch for Junebug—on the stands in our February MODERN SCREEN on January 10.

Esther's not perfect—thank God. She's a terrible gambler, for instance. When she picks race horses they struggle in around midnight; I've given up trying to teach her poker; she still draws to inside straights and disgraces her aces. She has a weakness for shoes and angora sweaters—last count she had ninety-five pairs at least and as many swimming suits, shocking pink preferred. She never carries any money with her. She writes counter checks instead and forgets to enter them in her bank book and we wind up each month needing a C.P.A. She has terrible taste in her husband's ties. She talks him into shorter and shorter haircuts until he (me) is going to end up looking like a convict. She gives her heart to a droopy-eared cocker spaniel named Angie to tear into little pieces.

But whatever Esther Williams is, or will be, she's what I like, which is, as she told me the night I met her, "just Esther Williams."

In fact, there's only one time I ever thought of her as anything else—say, like a glamor girl, an actress or even a celebrity—that was before Esther and I were married.

I was headed for Hollywood from the Santa Ana Air Base and I was in a hurry. I'd promised to take Esther to a preview that night and, as usual, my pass got snafu-ed and I was late. So it wasn't any wonder that a cop chased me.

He parked his motorcycle and dismounted, agonizingly slow. He strolled leisurely over, tipped back his cap and whipped the ticket pad out of his pocket. "Well, Sarge," he said, not too originally, "just where do you think you're going—to a fire?"

"No," I explained, "I'm going to a preview."

"What's a preview?"

I told him. "It's a showing of a movie before it's released. And," I added, not kidding one bit, "if I'm late, my girl's going to be madder than all heck."

The cop clucked sympathetically as he scribbled my license number. "Too bad, too bad! But look, Sarge, I thought only important people went to those previews. How come you're invited?"

"My girl's pretty important," I said. "She's Esther Williams."

"You're kidding."

I dragged out my wallet and showed him her picture autographed to me, Sergeant Ben Gage. He looked at it a long time, I thought, darn it. Then he slipped his ticket pad back in his hip and straightened his cap.

"Any soldier who can promote a date with Esther Williams," he sighed, "deserves to be on time. Sarge," he grinned, "you know what I'd do, if I was you?" I shook my head.

"I'd get there just as fast as I could!" said the cop, waving me on.

So I did. And I've never been sorry.

Yours for a Happy Holiday!

PHILIP MORRIS

America's Finest Cigarette

ALWAYS BETTER....BETTER ALL WAYS

A CHRISTMAS HE'LL NEVER FORGET

(Continued from page 33)

When there was only Dad and Granny, and not much money for what Van's father called "fancy nonsense." The worst thing of all was that Van was terribly afraid there would be no Christmas tree. He had heard his father talking about it to Granny.

"I waited till today thinking they'd come down in price at the last minute. Then doggone if they weren't all sold out."

"We can hang the Christmas tree ornaments on strings from the mantel," Granny had suggested, "beside the boy's stocking."

Probably that was what they were doing now. And it would look fine. Sure it would. Only—it wouldn't be like a tree. For one long moment Van let his thoughts wander enviously over to the two or three big houses by the ocean which were open for Christmas. Most of the rich people closed their places in September and didn't come back to Newport until the next June. But he and Dad had walked by the Astors' and the Van Allen's tonight, and seen lights, and scarlet and green wreaths.

day-dream . . .

Through one window Van had glimpsed a towering, feathery Christmas tree. Be side it was a boy about his own age, surrounded by what looked like miles and miles of electric train. There was even a tunnel, painted green, and a station for the train to stop at. Van had pulled his father to a halt, while he stared in wide-eyed admiration. Then he started walking again, very fast. Talking about the snow, and the way he'd slide down hill tomorrow. About the Santa Claus he'd seen on the street corner that afternoon.

"He was so fat he stuck out all over, Dad. And his nose was as red as his suit, honest. He had a bell he rang, and a sort of kettle to put money in."

"Ayah. Salvation Army." His father, a true New Englander in spite of his Swedish ancestry, never wasted words.

"So—I put a dime in the kettle. Mrs. Speckman said it was to help the poor people have a merry Christmas, so I did it. Was it all right, Dad?"

"Sure, son."

Van thought, a little wonderingly, that there was quite a difference between last year and this. Last year Santa Claus gave you things. This year you gave money to Santa. But that was all right.

He got out of bed now, very quietly, and tiptoed to the old mahogany chest that held all his possessions. He crouched on his haunches and pulled out the bottom drawer, which promptly gave a loud squeak. Van stopped and listened, but the sounds from the other room went on.

He felt the comforting outline of two packages in the drawer. A long, flat box, and a small, square one. The square one held a handkerchief for Granny. A pretty one, blue to match her eyes. The girl at the store had said it was imported linen and hand embroidered. It had cost seventy-five cents. The other package was the real pride of Van's heart. Neckties for Dad—and what neckties! Just looking at them would, Van felt, brighten anyone's Christmas. One was a spiral pattern in brilliant red and green. Real Christmas colors. The other was a checkered job, black and red, that reminded Van of the old checkerboard in the parlor, only this was new and bright. The ties had cost more than Van had counted on, but they were certainly worth it. Now Dad could throw away those old dark-colored ones he always wore. Why, these would make him look ten years younger.

Van got up and stole over to the door. He peered through the keyhole.

This was wonderful.

Dad was spreading asbestos under the big window that looked out on the street. Then he put shiny silver stuff like snow over the asbestos. It sparkled in the light with a million starry twinkles. Granny moved into view, carrying a big round mirror. She handed it to Dad, and darned if he didn't put it right down on the floor in the middle of the silver stuff. All of a sudden it wasn't a mirror any more. It was the pond over on Ocean Drive where they went skating Sundays.

"Looks nice, doesn't it?" Mr. Johnson stood back to admire his handiwork.

Granny said something in Swedish. Van couldn't understand what it was, because he'd never learned Swedish although Granny spoke it so much of the time.

His father sighed. "I know. The boy loves a tree."

Just then Granny turned around, and Van realized she was starting straight at him. She could see his face peering around the edge of the door, plain as anything. He didn't know what to do, so he just stared back, his childish blue eyes wide and alarmed. Then a funny thing happened. Granny winked at him.

But in another moment Van heard his father say "Guess I forgot the most important thing. It's in my bedroom." Like a startled rabbit, Van skidded back to bed. In five minutes Van, excited as he was, had succumbed to the sandman and dreams of a Santa Claus who kept saying "I don't exist, you know, but we'll have fun tomorrow, anyway."

Van was the first one up in the morning. He leaped out of bed, pulled on his underwear and a sweater and pants, and tore over to bang on his father's door.

"Merry Christmas, Dad! Merry Christmas!"

Gosh, grownups were slow on Christmas Day! Van wandered restlessly over to the closed door of the parlor. Of course he could peek in, but they always waited and all went in together.

Then at last, they were there. Dad, red-faced, scrubbed and beaming. Granny in a clean apron, with a little glint of mischief in her faded eyes. Dad went into the parlor first, closing the door behind him. Van gulped. This wasn't the way they did things. What went on here? Then he heard a funny buzzing noise. Dad came out grinning, very pleased with himself, and gave Van a little shove.

Van stood in the doorway, gasping. There, winding around the little pond with the Dutch skaters and by it over to the big bookcase, an electric train was chugging along. As it passed the signal post, the signal changed from red to green, and Van's eyes almost popped out of his head. He gave a whoop of joy and rushed over to fling himself on his knees beside it.

it all came true . . .

"You like it, boy?" His father's voice was oddly gentle.

"Like it! Oh, gee—it's the greatest thing I've ever seen! I can hardly believe it!"

"You've been a good boy. You deserve a good Christmas present."

Van remembered his manners then, and got out the square package for Granny and the flat, long one for his father. Maybe it was just as well that he immediately became engrossed in the train again, and didn't see the look they exchanged over Mr. Johnson's ties.

Even in the midst of playing with the train, Van was conscious of a funny emptiness in the room. Every other year they'd had a tree. Maybe just a little one, but a tree. It had been a sort of—what was that word?—a symbol of Christmas. It was all very mixed up, and the thing to do was concentrate on the train and forget the tree. It was such a wonderful train! It had a little white station to stop at, and a tunnel. And a huge, glowing headlight on the engine! It was the most beautiful train in all the world. Van could hardly be torn from it long enough to eat breakfast. They had bananas and oatmeal, Granny's delicious johnny cake with maple syrup, and sausage made at a factory right there in Newport.

Later Van went sledding with the other kids. Ayrault Street, where the Johnsons lived, sloped down to Broadway. It made a fine place to slide down hill, and was designated by the City Council for that purpose during the winter. Mr. Johnson always collected ashes from all the houses around and put them across the foot of the hill so the kids' sleds wouldn't go out into the Broadway traffic.

Betty, the little curly haired girl who lived across the street, came up to Van.

"Merry Christmas, Van! I've got a present for you," she said happily.

"You have?" Van was embarrassed. He hadn't any present for Betty. Then he remembered the big bag of candy Mr. Crosby, who owned the house where the Johnsons lived, had given him that morning. "I've got something for you too," he said eagerly. "In the house. Wait a minute."

He disappeared, and came back with the candy. Betty smiled shyly. "Thank you. And here's my present—for your elephant collection. You can hang it on your Christmas tree."

"We haven't got a tree this year," Van

I SAW IT HAPPEN

The population at Big Bear Lake, California, got a real thrill when Roy Rogers and his company were there on location. I was the hotel photographer, and took many snaps of Roy. He was always pleasant and cooperative. One evening there was a huge dinner party, with Roy seated at the head of the table. Just before he took his seat, he turned and smiled to the other guests, who had started a round of applause at his arrival. Then, attempting to sit down, he missed the chair and landed squarely on the floor, legs crossed. Everyone laughed and cheered, but Roy was undisturbed. He calmly remained on the floor, drank a glass of water, then got up and sat on his chair as though it happened that way every night. It was terrific! I destroyed the shot I took in deference to Roy's good sportsmanship.

Shirley Lange
Toledo, Ohio

said straightforwardly. "But gee, thanks for the elephant."

It was a cute thing. Small and white, not ivory but something like it. A miniature elephant with an upturned trunk, for good luck. It was, Van decided, the handsomest one in his whole collection.

There was turkey for dinner, of course. Turkey with its crisp, golden skin and tender meat. Mashed potatoes with thick, brown gravy. Crimson cranberry jelly and brussels sprouts. A mince pie that tasted like something straight from heaven. After dinner, Van said expectantly to his father, "Movies?"

"Didn't think you could leave your train that long."

Van hesitated, torn between two desires. But the movies won. "Let's go to the Colonial."

"What's on?"

Van didn't know, or care. Any movie was sheer bliss to him. He put on the new grey sweater that was Granny's Christmas gift, and his good coat.

"Dad, let's take the car." The car was a Ford, a recent acquisition. Van almost burst with pride every time they rode out in it.

"Well, I'll tell you. I've got an errand to do. You walk down and I'll meet you in front of the Colonial. We'll ride back."

"Okay." Van started off briskly. It was quite a walk, but the sun was warm and the sky was soft and blue. Van stared into all the windows, and most of them seemed to have Christmas trees. But he bet they didn't have little glass ponds with skaters on, or great, long electric trains. He whistled jauntily. A tree wasn't so important. Not so terribly important.

the play's the thing . . .

At the Colonial, Van noticed that there were quite a lot of people standing around the lobby. Dressed up people. Then he saw his father coming. Mr. Johnson grinned at him, and went to the window. He planked down the usual dollar. The Colonial charged forty cents apiece for matinees.

But the cashier was frowning. "I'm sorry," she said. "We're having a regular stage play this afternoon and evening. 'The Cat and the Canary.'"

"No movie?"

"No. A play."

Mr. Johnson felt an excited tug at his coat. Van was staring up at him anxiously. He turned back to the cashier. "How much?"

"That would be four forty, sir."

"Four forty! That's too steep for me!" He started to leave the window. But Van was tugging again, desperately now.

"Please, Dad! A real play! I'll do anything! I'll—I'll even give back my train!"

Never were eyes more imploring. Reluctantly, with a feeling that he was being a soft-hearted old idiot, and with no realization that Fate had a hand in this, Mr. Johnson drew out his billfold. He looked at the tickets which were handed him with some hostility. Four forty—for little bits of pasteboard like that.

Their seats were excellent. Right bang in the middle of the third row. There was an air of subdued excitement through the theater as they waited for the curtain to go up that you never felt before a movie. Van wriggled his toes inside his stout boots. He always wriggled his toes when he was excited. A play! A real play, with actors and actresses!

The curtain went up at last, and for two hours Van was lost in fantasy. His eyes followed every movement on the stage, hypnotized by unreality. He gave a squeal of pure terror when the clutching hand came through the wall behind the beautiful heroine. He lived a whole new life

"Bill and I got another raise!"

"OF COURSE, Bill deserves most of the credit. After all, he's the 'bread winner' in this family—and just about the smartest shop foreman this side of Sunday.

"It all started back when Bill was an apprentice. We were having all we could do trying to make ends meet. Then one day I happened to see an International Correspondence Schools advertisement. It told how thousands of fellows were taking special training—in their spare time—to help themselves get ahead. That gave me an idea.

"That night I showed the ad to Bill. We talked it all over and then I suggested that he fill out the coupon and send it in.

"Soon afterwards, Bill enrolled for the Machine Shop Course offered by I. C. S. He studied evenings—while I did the dishes and put the baby to bed. It wasn't long before Bill's boss started taking notice of the way Bill was doing his work. That's when we got our first raise.

"Maybe you're in the same boat we were in four years ago. If so, why not help your husband the way I helped mine? Clip this coupon and put it next to his dinner plate tonight. It may lead to the chance for which you've both been hoping."

INTERNATIONAL CORRESPONDENCE SCHOOLS ICS
BOX 4779-B, SCRANTON 9, PENNA.

Explain fully about your course marked X:

☐ Accounting
☐ Advertising
☐ Aeronautical Engineering
☐ Air Conditioning
☐ Aircraft Drafting
☐ Architectural Drafting
☐ Architecture
☐ Automobile ☐ Aviation
☐ Blueprint Reading
☐ Bookkeeping
☐ Business Management
☐ Certified Public Accounting
☐ Chemical Engineering
☐ Chemistry, Industrial
☐ Civil Engineering
☐ Coal Mining
☐ Contracting and Building
☐ Cost Accounting
☐ Cotton Manufacturing
☐ Diesel-Electric
☐ Drafting ☐ Electrical Engineering
☐ Electronics
☐ Federal Tax
☐ Foremanship
☐ Foundry Work
☐ French ☐ Good English
☐ Heating
☐ Heat Treatment of Metals
☐ High School
☐ Highway Engineering
☐ Illustrating ☐ Industrial Engineering
☐ Industrial Metallurgy
☐ Machine Shop
☐ Marine Engineering
☐ Mechanical Engineering
☐ Patternmaking
☐ Plastics
☐ Plumbing
☐ _____
☐ Postal Service
☐ Practical Electrician
☐ Radio ☐ Railroad
☐ Rayon Weaving
☐ Refrigeration
☐ Salesmanship ☐ Secretarial
☐ Sheet-Metal Worker
☐ Spanish
☐ Steam Engineering
☐ Steam Fitting
☐ Stenography
☐ Structural Engineering
☐ Surveying and Mapping
☐ Textile Designing
☐ Toolmaking
☐ Traffic Management
☐ Welding—Gas and Electric
☐ Woolen Manufacturing
_____ (Fill in any other subject)

Name _____ Age _____

Home Address _____ City _____ State _____

Present Position _____ Working Hours _____ A.M. to _____ P.M. Length of Service in World War II _____

Special tuition rates to members of the Armed Forces. Enrollment under the G.I. Bill of Rights approved for War II Veterans.

Tired Kidneys Often Bring Sleepless Nights

Doctors say your kidneys contain 15 miles of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy. When they get tired and don't work right in the daytime, many people have to get up nights. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder. Don't neglect this condition and lose valuable, restful sleep.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may also cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, a stimulant diuretic, used successfully by millions for over 50 years. Doan's give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

If STUFFY NOSE spoils sleep tonight..

Feel how fast you get greater breathing comfort when you put just a few drops of Vicks Va-tro-nol in each nostril. This specialized medication starts instantly to open up cold-stuffed nose, brings grand relief. Follow directions in the package.

VICKS VA-TRO-NOL

there on that bright-lit stage and loved every moment of it. As they came out of the theater, he said in a hushed voice, "Dad, you know what I'm going to be when I grow up?"

"Ayah. You told me the other day. A fireman."

Van looked at him indignantly. "That was silly. No sir! I'm going to be an actor."

"That'll be fine," said his father absently. Mr. Johnson had enjoyed the show, but four forty was an awful lot of money. It was probable that if at that moment he could have seen himself twenty years later, riding around in a brand new Nash, the super de luxe model, presented to him by his son, the Hollywood star, he would have fainted dead away.

As it was, still absently, he stuck his key in the door of the Ford and fiddled with it. Nothing happened. It didn't turn.

"Jammed," he said bitterly. "A fine thing. I told you we should have walked."

"Let me try."

Van tried, with the same result.

"I'll have to break the darned window," Mr. Johnson decided crossly. That would cost more money to get it fixed. He searched for a rock and found one, a good, heavy one. But Van rushed up breathlessly and headed him off.

"Dad, look!"

Two cars behind this Ford was another Ford, as like it as a double exposure. Mr. Johnson peered at the license numbers, and carefully put down the rock with which he had been about to smash some stranger's car window. He unlocked the door of his own car, climbed sheepishly in, and they drove off.

Van was in a fog of excitement all the way home. He chattered about the play, describing it in every minute detail. Mr. Johnson was puzzled.

"How did you notice all those things, Van? Didn't miss a trick, did you?"

"I've got to notice everything if I'm going to be an actor. I've got to learn how. I'm going to plays as often as ever I can the rest of my life."

They drove slowly up Broadway and turned into Ayrault Street. It was dark now, with the quick-falling blackness of a December night. Van looked up at the stars twinkling cheerfully against their black velvet canopy. When he brought his gaze back to earth he blinked, and blinked again. Stars in his eyes, that's what he had! Because there, inside the big front window of their own parlor, he could see a lighted Christmas tree!

"Dad," he whispered, and the words caught in his throat, "Dad, look at that."

"Ayah. Looks good, doesn't it? I told Granny to turn the lights on by the time we got home."

Van scrambled out of the car and into the house like a small whirlwind.

"Gran!" he cried. "The Christmas tree! We've got one!"

"Yes, child. A lovely one."

It was lovely. Its thick, wide-spreading branches reached almost to the low ceiling. The ornaments which had hung, a little forlornly, from the mantel, now sparkled from the tree's green depths, looking just right.

"Where did it come from?" Van asked in a hushed voice. "Did—did Santa Claus bring it? But there isn't any Santa Claus!"

Mr. Johnson scratched his sandy head. "Well, I'll tell you. I guess it might have been Santa Claus that made me remember a little store down on the wharf, today. Went down and they had two trees left. Skimpy ones. I wired 'em together and brought 'em up while you were on your way to the Colonial."

trader johnson . . .

Van's eyes were wide with admiration. "You mean there are two trees there?" He went and looked, and sure enough, you could see the two trunks. He grinned at his father. "You're pretty smart," he said admiringly.

"Nope, I ain't." Mr. Johnson wore the defeated look of a Yankee outsmarted in a horse trade. "Didn't save any money in the end, havin' to buy two trees that way. Good thing Christmas only comes once a year."

It was a good thing, Van thought solemnly. Because how could you bear that much joy twice?

Year 'Round
SPRING FRESHNESS
for Your Hair, too!

Capture the beauty of the stars in your hair with GLO-VER Beauty Shampoo . . . easily, quickly, delightfully! No other shampoo gives your hair more lustre, more natural-looking sparkle, daintier springtime freshness than GLO-VER. Contains cleansing agents made from blended vegetable oils. Rinses out easily, completely. Removes loose dandruff and unsightly film, leaves scalp refreshingly clean, hair radiantly manageable! Ask for GLO-VER at any Drug Store or Drug Counter today—or mail Coupon.

GLO-VER
Beauty Shampoo

FREE TRIAL SIZE

Send Coupon for Glover's 3-Way Treatment, including GLO-VER Beauty Shampoo, Glover's Mange Medicine and Glover's Imperial Hair Dress in 3 hermetically-sealed bottles—plus useful booklet, "The Scientific Care of Scalp and Hair".

Glover's, 101 W. 31st St., Dept. 851, New York 1, N. Y.
Send Free Trial Application in three hermetically-sealed bottles, with informative booklet, in plain wrapper by return mail. I enclose 10c to cover cost of packaging and postage.

NAME.....

ADDRESS.....

CO-ED

(Continued from page 12)

brief talks, to think on your feet, to achieve a poise you've never dreamed possible.

There'll be theater parties, group visits to the star's studio (if you live near Los Angeles), fun that until now you've only read about, but never lived. Does it sound good? Well, hold your hats, then, cause we've saved one of the dandiest features of belonging to an MSFCA club till the last. Like dessert. As of this issue of MODERN SCREEN (see "The Fans," page 22), there's to be a monthly page devoted exclusively to our fan clubs. No other magazine offers you such an all-inclusive fan club department, and think what it means. A corner exclusively for you, as a club member. Late flashes about your club; tidbits about club members—and picture the thrill of seeing your very own name in print; news of forthcoming contests for literary work, for bringing in new members, for candid camera shots; and the descriptions of the prizes, all fabulous loot like compacts and watches, will make you drool.

Editing this heaven-sent page is Shirley Frohlich, MODERN SCREEN'S Service Editor and the bright-as-a-button director of MSFCA—the gal who thinks like a college professor and looks like a quite sophisticated bobby-soxer. (At the office here, we're convinced she is one, part-time, she knows that much about Van and June and people.) She's the gal who'll help you organize a brand new club (and is that fun!), the babe who'll answer your questions, who'll dream up new ideas to help you put your star on top. We're awfully thrilled to welcome her and her brainchild to the magazine, and we can promise you one thing, you are really going to love that gal!

Gee, we've sort of gone on about this business, haven't we? We couldn't help ourselves on account of we're so impressed with MSFCA clubs in general, and with Shirley's new page in particular. Have we given you the bug too? Then you'll want to turn to our Super Coupon on page 84 where you'll see the name of the chart which will tell you everything you need to know about joining a club. It's "How to Join a Fan Club," and lists names and addresses of fan club presidents, plus such important information as annual dues (usually no more than one dollar) and the name of the club journal. Imagine, if you send for the chart today, you'll be a bona fide club member in just a couple of weeks. Inside of two months you'll forget you were ever lonely, ever bored, ever hobby-less. You'll be a new person. We guarantee it! Try it and see.

LOVE SONG

(Continued from page 55)

at her, trying to summon just one glib phrase. "Say, the bar is jammed," he managed finally, "and I thought maybe I could order a beer and have it in here."

She had a nice smile, slow and kind of mysterious. "Why, fine," she said. "Go right ahead." Hardly believing his good fortune, he ordered the beer, then went into the lobby to get a couple of packs of cigarettes for her. He hurried back, swaggering a little, feeling good. And there was the beer, but the gal was gone. It was a pretty bad beginning, with Joanie thinking what a fresh guy Dick was, and Dick thinking what a Class A prune she turned out to be. Harry James got them together before long, and now that first meeting is a family joke.

It's a gay marriage, the Haymes'. They kid each other a lot, and—after a bit of trial and error—they've learned what topics are okay to kid about, and which are slightly dangerous. You can tease Joanie about her swimming or her acting, because she's astute enough to know she can hold her own in either field, but don't make light of her cooking.

dick the diplomat . . .

"We ate out quite a little when we were first married, didn't we, honey?" Dick used to say in front of friends.

"Yes, I guess we did," Joanne would return, her voice icy.

"Joanie here," Dick would go on, smiling indulgently, "well, she's awfully beautiful, but what she can do to a scrambled egg—" Joanie wouldn't speak to him for a good half hour.

Kid Dick about his singing or his ping-pong, and he'll laugh his head off, but don't josh about the way he manages his kids. On that subject he couldn't be touchier. Now and then there'll be a day when Noonie, the nurse, and Joanne are out of the house simultaneously, leaving Dick in charge of Skipper, aged four, and Pigeon, aged two. Ordinarily he's an excellent father, sensible and equal to any behavior problem, but there's something about being left to cope single-handed. Everything goes black. While he's getting Skip up after his nap, Pigeon is into Joanne's lipstick and powder. While he's cleaning her up, Skip turns a bottle of ink over his head. When, at last, someone comes home and relieves him, Dick is very nearly gibbering, but much too proud to divulge what a time he's had.

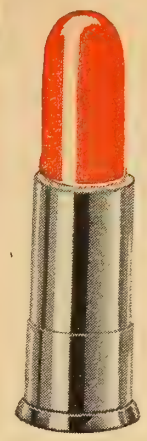
"How was it?" Joanne will ask.

"Great," Dick says. "Grand little kids." It's the kids who'll eventually tell how wild-eyed Daddy got that day.

It's unusual that a pair as young and gay as Dick and Joanne should be such homebodies, but now—after all the lean and hungry years in furnished rooms and fifth floor walk-ups—they have their dream house, and they can hardly bear to leave it. It's a Colonial house, beautifully furnished with early American and British Colonial antiques. It would have been a million times easier just to go to a store and buy all the furniture in a single afternoon, but it wouldn't have been nearly as much fun as tracking each individual piece to its lair. Their taste is very much the same, and it was almost uncanny the way they'd pounce on the same piece of furniture at the antique shops.

There was just one piece that they quibbled over. Joanne brought it home from an auction one evening, triumphantly, with an it-was-a-tough-fight look on her face. It was a big mahogany job with a

New! Exciting! Alluring!



JUMBO SIZE

25c PLUS TAX

Hot Lips

LIPSTICK

AT COSMETIC COUNTERS

GIVES your lips a come-hither, enticing, glamorous color. Comes in four sultry, seductive shades—in a beautiful metal swivel case. It stays—and Stays—and STAYS. Non-drying and non-smearing.

Mar-O-Mist, INC.

CHICAGO 14, ILL.

Let Noxzema nurse Chapped Hands

HOW FAMOUS FORMULA SOOTHES, HELPS SOFTEN AND HEAL FASTER!

Painful chapped hands are actually tiny cuts . . . or skin irritations that need healing! Care for your chapped hands the way thousands of nurses do——with soothing medicated NOXZEMA SKIN CREAM.

Actual clinical tests on scores of people prove that NOXZEMA helps heal chapped hands faster—quickly helps restore red, rough hands to normal, soft white loveliness.

NOXZEMA is a snow white cream—dainty and greaseless—can be used day and night. Millions use it regularly—get a jar of NOXZEMA today at any drug counter—10¢, 35¢, 50¢, plus tax.

DO YOU WANT . . .

LONGER HAIR?

★ THEN TRY THIS PROVEN EASY SYSTEM ON YOUR HAIR ★ ★ ★ ★

Helps Prevent Brittle Ends Breaking Off!

● AMAZING INTRODUCTORY OFFER!

Just try this System on your HAIR seven days and see if you are really enjoying the pleasure of LONGER HAIR that can capture Love and Romance for you.

● Hair May Get Longer

when scalp and hair conditions are normal and the dry, brittle, breaking off hair can be retarded by supplementing the natural hair oils, it has a chance to get longer and much more beautiful. Just try the easy JUELENE System 7 days and let your mirror prove results. Your money back if not delighted. See if Juelene's tendency to help your hair to become softer, silkier, more lustrous than it has been before—in just one short week helps your hair gain its normal beauty. Mail the coupon.

● Thrilling Results!

Just mail the convenient introductory coupon. Take advantage of this Fully Guaranteed Introductory Offer today, and know at last the happiness of possessing really lovelier hair and be envied by so many.

JUEL COMPANY, 4727 North Damen, Chicago 25, Ill.

IF YOU DO WANT LONGER HAIR

Mail This INTRODUCTORY COUPON!

JUEL COMPANY, Dept. W-603
4727 North Damen, Chicago 25, Ill.

Yes, I want easy-to-manage, longer hair. I will try the JUELENE SYSTEM for 7 days. If my mirror doesn't show satisfactory results, I will ask for my money back.

☐ I am enclosing $1.00.
☐ Send C.O.D. plus postage.

NAME.....

ADDRESS.....

CITY.....STATE.....

☞ Our Customers Participate in Gifts ☜

marble top, and instead of going off his head about it the way Joanne had, Dick sort of leered at it.

"What's the matter?" Joanne said, removing her gloves with small belligerent motions.

"What is it?" Dick asked her.

"What is it?" Joanne sputtered. "Why it's one of those old marble-topped—" She stopped suddenly and looked at it in bewilderment. "What difference does it make what it is. It's a perfectly beautiful piece."

"What'll we do with it?"

"Listen here, Dick Haymes," she said, biting off her words as if they were pieces of thread. "We found things to do with the old fashioned cradle and all the other stuff, didn't we?" The upshot of it was, of course, that they kept the piece, and they use it as a sort of a small bar.

There is also a regular full-sized bar in front of which are stools topped with alternating English and Western saddles. All the rooms in the house are unusual, but perhaps the most original one of all is the dining doom. It's decorated in English-taproom style, and instead of one large table, it has six little ones covered with red and white checked table cloths. The Haymes like intimate groups instead of mob scenes when they entertain, and this arrangement is perfect for them.

They've thought about this house for five long years, never actually believing that one day they'd be able to build it, but loving the dreaming part anyway, the super-elaborate imaginary plans.

"It'll have a swimming pool," Dick used to say.

"Sure, sure," nodded Joanie, "and a tennis court."

"And a stable full of horses."

"And a big beautiful dog to stretch out in front of the fire." And miracle of miracles, it all came true.

it all came true . . .

There are wonderful sun-drenched hours in the pool, with Pidge intermittently shedding her life-jacket to show off her powerful crawl, and Skipper very definitely and very proudly on his own. There are horseback rides in the cool of the morning, Dick on Pappy, his big palomino, Joanne on her little paint, Skipper straight as an arrow on his small, sure-footed filly. Pidge watches them go and come, a wee bit enviously, and spends all her spare moments supervising the care and feeding of the other small filly in the stable who'll be hers next year. It's all there, just as they used to imagine it, only more so. The garden, the sweeping views, the quiet evenings before the fire. Even the dog has materialized.

He's a magnificent police dog, a gift from Linda Darnell. Skipper took one look at him and christened him Boots, no one knows why. Boots took one look at Skipper and Pigeon and immediately assumed complete responsibility for them. Noonie might just as well go home as far as he's concerned. He is in charge. His most unhappy moments are when the two kids are apart. He races from the stable to the pool, from the pool to the stable, terrified lest Pigeon get into mischief while he's watching Skipper, and vice versa. To conserve his strength for his big deals, Boots has taken to lying down while he eats, his bowl between his paws.

Dick has a fabulous collection of Disney movies and other films for small fry which he runs off on the playroom screen a couple of evenings a week, and the kids are crazy about them. They sit in the almost blacked-out room, complete enchantment on their faces. The other night, Bill Burton, Dick's agent and one of his best friends, said, "Why don't you show the kids one of your movies, Dick?" Behind the youngsters' backs, Dick spread his hands in a shut-up gesture.

"What's the matter, kid," Bill asked Dick later. "Are you waiting till they get a little stronger?" Dick laughed and looked a little embarrassed.

"Maybe you'll think I'm nuts," he said, "but you see the kick they get out of a movie. To them it's something kind of out of this world. Magic—or something." Dick smiled, his good warm smile, "I don't want them to know that all those beautiful people they see on the screen are just a bunch of lugs like the old man. Not for a while yet, anyway."

"Like Santa Claus, hey?"

"Sort of."

"What a corny guy."

He is kind of a corny guy, but in such a nice way. He remembers anniversaries and birthdays and things. He's sentimental about the old songs and the Hotel Lincoln. And as we told you, he wouldn't let a day go by when he and Joanie are separated without telephoning her just to be sure that she's okay. Like a kid with a crush. These calls, however, he's thinking seriously of discontinuing, after the fright he got out of one of them while he was playing in Boston this fall.

phone phobia . . .

He sat on his bed at the Ritz, whistling a little as the operator put the call through, person-to-person, thinking how good it would be to hear the cute familiar voice again, thinking about how excited she'd be when he told her he thought it would be a good idea for them to do "Born Yesterday" in summer stock next year, thinking— He heard a lot of confusion and clicking, then the operator said, "Mrs. Haymes has asked to have your call transferred to—" and she spieled off a number that had a vaguely familiar sound. Good Lord, he thought, his mind conjuring up the list of emergency phone numbers on the telephone table at home, That's the doctor's office! There was an agonizing wait, and then the operator said, "That line is busy. We will call you." And Dick sat still, his head in his hands, picturing first an automobile accident, then a fall from the horse. A fire, a catastrophe in the pool . . . The phone cut sharply across his thoughts, and there was Joanie's voice, calm and dear.

"What's the matter?" Dick snapped.

"Everything's all right. Skip cut his head a little, and I brought him over here. I was afraid I'd miss your call."

"You're keeping something from me, Joanie—" His skull was fractured of course. That damn little filly. He'd have her disposed of. He'd—"Rich, don't be a goon. Here's Skip himself."

"Daddy?" Over the wire came a small, unbelievably wonderful voice, and Dick breathed again, relaxed his clutch on the phone. "Are you coming home soon? Will you fly? Will the plane have two engines or four?"

"How's the head, fella?"

"Will we meet you at the airport?"

"Sure, sure. How did you hurt yourself?"

It was Joanie again. "Fell over his big feet. . . . Rich, are you mowing 'em down?"

"Well, natch," he said. His heart felt as big as a football. His kid was okay, he was talking to his wife, he was going home soon. Gee, he was a lucky guy.

The week in Boston was really something. He broke even Frankie's record at the RKO-Boston. It's reported that that stint will boost his 1946 earnings to $500,000. Funny, Dick thought, as the boys in the back room at the theater were telling him how he'd cleaned up, once upon a time I'd have felt like going out and celebrating. Now all I want to do is get home." And that's what he did.

They met him at the airport, and then he was home again, catching up on news.

"I swallowed a nail and mommy had to pick me up by the feet." That was poor Skip with a bandage on his head.

"I can swim and dive now." That was Pidge with delusions of grandeur.

"How about you, mom?" Dick turned to Joanie.

"Well, cross your fingers, but the preview didn't look too awful." She was talking about "Abie's Irish Rose" in which, as Joanne Dru, she makes her screen debut.

Dick beamed at them all. "What a gang," he said, hugging them.

With two working folks in the family, the Haymes' have eliminated most of their night life, but to celebrate Dick's homecoming, they called up the gang and drove into Los Angeles for dinner at Romanoff's. Getting ready, Joannie was as excited as a bobby-soxer on her first date.

"What'll I wear?"

"Oh, something black." (He's mad for her in black.)

"Will I put my hair up?"

let your hair down . . .

"Well—" dubiously, "okay, but no flowers in it." (He likes her hair down and uncluttered.) They were off finally, and dinner was superb, and Joanie felt very festive and continental with Dick spouting French at the waiter.

"Rich," she said admiringly, "I'd give anything to be able to carry on a French conversation that way."

It was much too good a chance to miss. "Would you, honey?" Dick said. "Well, look. When he comes back again, you say to him, 'L'addition, s'il vous plait.'" Joanie repeated it, her big eyes shining. She thought it meant "the dinner was wonderful." She caught the waiter's eye and smilingly whispered her message.

"Oui, madame," he said, and from a back pocket he produced the check and handed it to her. She looked up at Dick, and then she had to roar laughing.

Their sprees into town are rare. Most evenings they play gin rummy or else see a movie—either in their own playroom or at a neighborhood theater.

"Although," Dick explains, "the kids prefer the Haymes theater. Three against one."

The kids' friends love it too. The other day, Skip gave a party, and the guests could hardly be pried away from Porky Pig long enough to eat their ice cream.

That was the party at which Joanne decided to take a picture of Skip flanked by two queens, namely Vickie James, Betty Grable's little girl, and Bronwyn Price, Maureen O'Hara's youngster—to show him when he got big. When the picture was developed, you could make out a small sad figure brooding in the background. Little Miss Pigeon, crushed because her beloved Skipper was involved in something without her.

Not long ago, a new friend of Dick and Joanne's remarked to Bill Burton about the youngsters' devotion to each other. "It's kind of wonderful to see a brother and sister who aren't tearing each other to pieces," the friend said.

"Ever notice Dick and Joanie when they think no one's looking?" Bill said. "The look she gives him and he gives her right back, doubled? Notice how neither of 'em likes the other one out of his sight? 'Where's Joanie?' 'Where's Rich?' Casual-like, but not really casual at all. Stick around and watch them. With an example like that, those kids of theirs couldn't be any other way."

"Lucky kids," the friend said. To which we say, Amen.

Can a young wife escape this threat to Marriage Happiness?

If only every married woman could learn the REAL TRUTH about these Intimate Physical Facts!

Often a marriage goes on "the rocks" simply because the wife doesn't realize how important douching two or three times a week often is to intimate feminine cleanliness, health, charm and marriage happiness—how important douching is to combat one of woman's most serious deodorant problems.

AND WHAT'S MORE IMPORTANT — wives may not know about this newer, scientific method of douching with—ZONITE.

No Other Type Liquid Antiseptic-Germicide tested is SO POWERFUL yet SO HARMLESS

No longer would any well-informed woman think of using weak, old-fashioned or dangerous products for the douche. These DO NOT and CAN NOT give the great germicidal and deodorizing action of ZONITE.

The ZONITE principle is truly a miracle! No other type liquid antiseptic-germicide for the douche of all those tested is so powerful yet absolutely non-poisonous, non-irritating, non-burning. ZONITE contains no phenol, creosote, no bichloride of mercury. You can use ZONITE as directed as often as necessary without risk of injury.

Zonite Principle Developed By Famous Surgeon and Chemist

ZONITE actually destroys and removes odor-causing waste substances. Helps guard against infection. It KILLS every germ it touches. You know it's not always possible to contact all the germs in the tract. BUT YOU CAN BE SURE ZONITE immediately kills every reachable germ and keeps them from multiplying.

Buy ZONITE today. Any drugstore.

Zonite
FOR NEWER feminine hygiene

FREE! NEW!

For amazing enlightening NEW Booklet containing frank discussion of intimate physical facts, recently published — mail this coupon to Zonite Products, Dept. MSC-17, 370 Lexington Ave., New York 17, N. Y.

Name _____
Address _____
City _____ State _____

THIS WINTER

give your hair—

New Beauty

SPARKLING COLOR—let Nestle Colorinse take away that dull-drab look. You'll be thrilled when you see how Nestle Colorinse gives your hair richer, warmer color.

GLAMOROUS HIGHLIGHTS—rinse dancing highlights into your hair. See how these sparkling highlights make your eyes and your whole face look brighter!

SILKEN SHEEN—"He" loves hair that's silken-soft, satiny-smooth to touch. Let Nestle Colorinse give your hair this wonderful sheen. Try it today — after you shampoo!

NOTE Ask your beautician for an Opalescent Creme Wave by Nestle—originators of permanent waving.

Nestle
COLORINSE

In 10¢ and 25¢ sizes. At beauty counters everywhere.

KEEP HAIR IN PLACE ALL DAY LONG

Delicately perfumed Nestle Hairlac keeps all styles of hairdos looking well-groomed throughout the day. Also adds sheen and lustre to your hair. 2½ oz. bottle 25¢

Nestle HAIRLAC

MY FRIEND FRANK

(Continued from page 29)

ing to history in the making? They did not. They had started a card game, and I might as well have said "That was John Smith." Let's face it, even Evans didn't realize what was up. Oh sure, I got out my notebook and jotted the name down.

So what happened? Nothing, as far as I was concerned, until a couple of months later. Then I came home one evening and my son, Phil, who was then fourteen, took me aside.

"Dad," he said solemnly, "will you do me a favor?"

"What's the matter? Did you get mixed up in a big financial deal and run short?"

"No, it isn't money. I wanted you to listen to a record of 'Little Town In Singapore'. Will you, dad?"

He turned it on, and I sat there thinking about a certain client that was causing me trouble. All of a sudden I did a complete double take. It dawned on me that (a) the voice singing was really out of this world and (b) that it was the same one I'd heard on that late broadcast. What the devil was his name, anyway?

"Frank Sinatra." I produced it finally.

Phil eyed me with respect. "I've got to hand it to you, dad. You really know 'em. Have you heard him in person?"

"Uh—no, not yet." I didn't admit that Sinatra was nothing but a name and a voice to me at this point.

"I've got one of his recordings made with Harry James," Phil said eagerly. "Honest, I think he's the best band vocalist in the country."

"What is it you find unusual about his voice?" I asked curiously.

"Well, dad, all the other singers are falling over themselves trying to imitate Bing Crosby. But this guy has a style all his own, completely different and original."

And when I think back to that conversation, I feel that the same thing holds true today.

"He's appearing at the Paramount this week," Phil told me. "He's with the Dorsey band. Let's go, shall we, dad?"

We went. The Paramount was jammed with Tommy Dorsey fans, plus a scattering of those more interested in the vocalist. When Frank came on the stage I was immediately fascinated. Here was a man who violated every impression of what a romantic singer should look like. At first glance you certainly wouldn't expect this slim guy with the hollow cheeks to have the qualifications of a matinee idol. But I found my attention held by the personal magnetism I felt from the beginning. I moved from the twentieth row down to the tenth. Then to the second. There was something about this boy that drew me. Yes, he was different, but I understood now why it was that even on the air or on records, his charm came through. Those candid blue eyes told you that he was singing to you and meaning every word he sang. He made the audience listen to the words of a song, even when they had heard them a hundred times before—and not just listen, but feel them!

About this time I was handling Glenn Miller's band and getting fancy results with it. They went up to number one band like a thermometer hitting ninety in July.

One day my secretary told me Frank Sinatra wanted to see me. I grinned happily, lit a cigarette with two matches for luck and called him to come in. Now Frank has never put on an act in his life. He's the most natural, direct guy in the world. He came in, gave me a quick once over with those bright blue eyes and said, "Evans, I hear you get pretty big dough for handling people."

"Depends on the people," I told him.

He didn't beat around the bush. "I haven't got big dough. But I think you and I could really do a job together. If—if you'd like to."

I got up then and looked out of the window. Not stalling, or trying to impress him, but remembering that first night I heard him on the radio, and Phil's records, and the Paramount. I had a crazy feeling that everything had been leading up to this for a long, long time.

"I'd like it fine, Frank," I said. "You're going to be the biggest thing in this country. I've felt that way about you for some time. Let's go on from here."

We shook hands. We were a little solemn about it, because I guess Frank felt the way I did—as if something pretty important had just happened. There have never been any contracts or legal papers between us. Just that handshake. There are loopholes in legal contracts—none in Frank's loyalty.

So we went on from there. One of the first things Frank did was invite me out to his place in Jersey. He and Nancy had just bought their house in Hasbrouck Heights, and he was like a kid with a new sled on Christmas morning.

I'll never forget that first evening. I drove out the winding Jersey highway, wondering a little what kind of set-up I'd find. I found the house, and pulled up in the driveway. Immediately Frank burst open the front door, and yelled "Hi, George!" exuberantly.

I climbed out. "Nice house, Frank." It was. I always liked that friendly house.

"I'm hanging pictures," Frank informed me. "Getting 'em all crooked, Nancy says, so it's a good thing you got here. You can help."

I followed him into the house. The hall was warm and bright and filled with the most mouth-watering smell I had ever encountered. Suddenly I realized I was hungry for the first time in weeks.

"What a beautiful smell!" I said.

Frank grinned happily. "Nancy's making lasagna. Ever eat it?"

"Eat it! I never even heard of it."

"You don't know what you've missed, bud. It's made with noodles and cheese and sausage and stuff."

Just then the door opened from the kitchen and there stood the prettiest girl imaginable. She had long, soft, black hair and black velvet eyes, and a smile that tangled you up in its curves. Frank went over and put his arm around her.

"Honey, this is George."

Her handclasp was as warm and friendly as her smile. "Hello, Mr. Evans," she said shyly. "I'm glad to see you."

Maybe I wasn't glad to see her! My worries vanished like soap bubbles in the sun. Then they took me in to show me the baby, and I fell in love. Little Nancy always has had Frank's charm.

I ate lasagna that night until noodles were coming out of my ears.

Frank kept right up with me.

"How can you stay so thin when you eat so much?" I asked him, puzzled.

"It's because he's so intense," Nancy said. "He goes at everything so hard he uses an awful lot of energy. Every time he sings a song he has to sing it better than it's ever been sung before. He's that way about everything."

Another time I went out to their house one Sunday afternoon. Nancy told me Frank had gone over to the woods for something. Pretty soon he appeared, carrying a knife and an armful of twigs. He was whistling merrily.

I stared at him. "What are you up to? Run out of matches so you have to make a fire the Boy Scout way?"

"Come on down cellar, and you'll see."

When we got there, he took out a saw. I regarded him forebodingly. "If you cut a leg off with that, it won't be so funny."

"Relax, Junior. Frankie boy knows what he's doing."

He did, at that. He cut a plank of wood into the size he wanted—about two feet long. Then he planed it down and varnished it. While the varnish started to dry, he cut the twigs he'd gathered into short, even lengths. By now Nancy had come down to see what we were doing. She and I craned over Frank's shoulder. Whistling absorbedly under his breath, he began to put the twigs on the sticky varnish, spelling out letters. "W-A-R-M V-A-L-L-E-Y."

"How do you like that for the name of our place?" he asked.

"It's a good name, Frank," Nancy told him seriously. "Just right."

Next day I saw him at the theater, rehearsing. "How are you today, Frank?"

"Unhappy. Somebody stole my Warm Valley sign." He was unhappy. That sign had meant so much to him.

Around that time, Hollywood heard about the thin little guy with the black magic voice. They dangled a contract in front of him and he signed it. He signed another one soon, just as important—the contract to sing on the Lucky Strike Hit Parade. I remember how he almost knocked me down running to telephone Nancy.

"Baby, it's happened!" he told her, and his voice was half exultant, half scared. "We're really going places!"

All this time I was getting to know Frank better. We spent long evenings talking together and I soon found out that his main interest was people. His most unhappy moments came when he read or heard of someone's misfortune. He has a quick, enveloping sympathy for those who are under-privileged in any way. Much of it comes from not having had things himself when he was growing up.

Which reminds me of a story that Frank will probably give me a punch in the nose for telling. He and I were on one of our drives through the old Hoboken neighborhood of his boyhood one evening. Suddenly Frank put on the brakes, pulled over to the curb and parked. I looked around. It was a block of modest little stores and at this time of night they were all closed. I couldn't see what he was stopping there for and said so.

"I just remembered something." The kid's voice was unusually serious. "I remembered something I'm pretty ashamed of, and I want to fix it up. Got any dough on you?" As usual, he had about sixty cents. He just can't be bothered with money.

"Sure. How much do you want?"

"Got twenty dollars?"

I passed it over. He wrapped it in a piece of paper and got out of the car. I watched him slide it under the door of a tiny shop whose weathered sign read faintly, "Candy. Stationery."

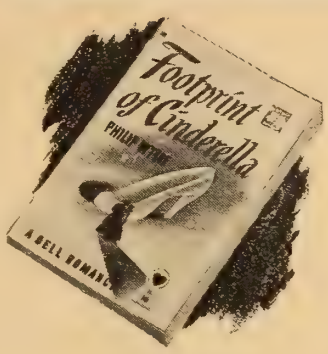
He came back to the car and drove away, grinning.

"What was the big idea?" I demanded. "You just don't care what you do with your dough, do you?"

"I always liked the little man who runs that shop. But when I was a kid, we thought it was smart to steal penny candy from him and run like hell. He was lame, see, and couldn't chase us. I didn't like myself much when I was doing it, and every time I've thought of it since, it's

new DELL BOOKS

Four new releases selected for your winter reading pleasure—and only 25c



FOOTPRINT OF CINDERELLA
by Philip Wylie

A long-forgotten baby footprint shows that a beautiful society girl is not the real person. An exciting drama of romance and mistaken identity that is both entertaining and significant.

THE SWIFT HOUR
by Harriett Thurman

A story of the struggle between a mother and daughter, each wanting the devotion they should have, each beautiful and proud and each striving for the attentions of one man. The brilliantly compelling solution is both credible and wise.

BAR THE DOORS!
Alfred Hitchcock selects a new book of terror stories.

Stories of suspense and terror, selected by the famous director of movie thrillers. Varying in degree and kind, each tale will hold the reader in breathtaking suspense from beginning to end.

COLD STEAL
by Alice Tilton

Here's a happy mixture of mystery and excitement where the antics of waggish characters will give any mystery fan many hearty laughs as well as a good many moments of spine-tingling suspense.

If you cannot obtain the titles listed, mail this coupon. Send 25c for each book wanted.

DELL PUBLISHING CO., Inc., 149 Madison Ave., New York 16, N. Y.

Please send me the DELL BOOKS checked below. I enclose $.....

☐ FOOTPRINT OF CINDERELLA ☐ THE SWIFT HOUR

☐ BAR THE DOORS ☐ COLD STEAL

Name.....

Address.....

City, Zone & State.....

many Doctors PRESCRIBE these SENSIBLY-PRICED Shoes for Infants and Toddlers

Why?

Greatest harm to little feet comes from letting baby grow into and out of shoes. Doctors who have examined WEE WALKERS know they are well-made, accurately-shaped, flexible and carefully designed to serve baby's footwear needs. The sensible price lets them give this sound advice: "Buy the correct size Wee Walker NOW and change to a larger size IN TIME"

Ask your doctor about WEE WALKERS . . . see them . . . compare them . . . try them . . . in Infants' or shoe department of stores listed. Birth to size 8.

COMMENDED PARENTS MAGAZINE CONSUMER SERVICE

W. T. Grant Co. S. S. Kresge Co. J. J. Newberry Co.
H. L. Green Co., Inc. I. Silver & Bros. Scott Stores
McCrory Stores Schulte-United Charles Stores Co.
Metropolitan Chain Stores, Inc. Kinney Shoe Stores
F. & W. Grand Grand Silver Co. McLellan Stores
Montgomery Ward & Co.

Smooth One-Piece Tongue:

Stops pressure on nerves, muscles, blood vessels caused by sewed-on tongue, still used on some shoes selling at top prices.

FREE: Pamphlet, "Look At Your Baby's Feet." Valuable information on foot care, and scale to measure size needed. Moran Shoe Co., Dept. M, Carlyle, Ill.

WEE WALKER Shoes FOR Wee WALKERS

CAN'T AFFORD DIAMONDS?

Then wear diamond-dazzling Zircons from the mines of far-way Mystic Siam. They are effective and inexpensive. Thrilling beauty, stand acid, true backs, full of FIRE. Exquisite mountings. See before you buy. Write for FREE catalog.

National Zircon Co., Dept. 8, Wheeling, W. Va.

Catalog FREE!

DEUBENER'S SHOPPING BAGS

Not only "Santa Claus' Helper" at Christmas—but a help to shoppers every day. Best Quality for Service and Value. Be Sure It's "Deubener's"—"America's Standard" since 1918.
AT YOUR FAVORITE STORE

DEUBENER'S SHOPPING BAGS
GARFIELD PARK, INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

given me a nasty cold feeling down my back. Now I can forget it."

"But he won't know who it's from!"

"Of course not. But he'll have the dough."

Another time he and I were playing gin rummy in his suite at the Waldorf. It was a Saturday afternoon. Frank wasn't paying attention to the game the way he usually does. Suddenly he threw his cards on the table and got up and walked restlessly over to the window. It was a grey November day.

"Take a ride with me, George?"

"Sure, if you want to. Looks like snow, though. Where do you plan on going?"

"There's a fellow out in Jersey that I've been thinking about all day. He's a musician who used to play around with us. I hear he isn't doing so good lately. I want to look him up."

"Know his address?"

"No, but I remember about where it is."

Well, we drove up and down the streets of Jersey City in a blinding snowstorm. I got pretty well caught up with the deal.

"Come on home, Frank, before you get laryngitis again."

But he was stubborn. "I've got to find him. It's right around here somewhere."

Eventually we found the place. It was practically a tenement. Frank got out and rang doorbells till he found out which flat his musician buddy lived in—they didn't even have cards on the mail boxes. The fellow was home and he was as glad to see Frank as Frank was to see him. They talked about old times, while I fidgeted. Finally I got Frank on his feet—he was due at rehearsal. As he got to the door, he said in a carefully matter-of-fact voice, "By the way, if you'd be interested, we could use some of your brand of music when we're making recordings. How about coming over to CBS Tuesday around two o'clock and I'll introduce you to the boys?"

Frank didn't look at his friend's face as he said it, but I did. I saw the wonder and the glory that spread over it, and I got a lump in my throat. Ever since, that boy has been making recordings with Frank and he's moved to New York with his pretty blonde wife and baby.

During the war things were tough for everybody. They were tough in different ways for different people, and what was hardest on Frank was not being able to get into the service. That perforated eardrum kept him out of everything.

I'll never forget the night I waited on a slip at South Ferry for him to come back from Governor's Island where he had been sent from the induction center. It was two a.m. when Frank's ferry pulled in. It had been one hell of a day. Early in the morning when he had reported to the center, there had been such a mob of fans around that his coat was torn practically off. I myself had been pushed against a wire fence and came out with a long gash on my right hand. Then Frank had been put through the most gruelling examination possible. They weren't going to let anyone say that Frank was shown partiality, so they leaned backward in the other direction. I suppose that was natural, but it was quite a session. Eventually he was sent over to Fort Jay for a continuation of it.

So at two o'clock on a shivery morning, I watched the ferry bang and clang its way into the slip. South Ferry isn't Park Avenue, and the crowd that got off was pretty rough and tough. Frank's face was drawn with fatigue.

I pushed forward to meet him, and he managed a tired grin. "Hi, George. How's the hand?"

It was typical of him that he thought of me instead of himself at this point. "Never mind that," I said. "How'd you get on?"

The blue eyes that looked into mine held a sadness that was hard to watch. "George, I've got a pretty good hunch they're turning me down again. They didn't say so definitely, but I feel it. What am I going to do?"

The cry came from deep inside of him. I tried to give him an answer, although I knew there was none for the hurt that was in him. "The taxes you pay, Frank, will buy ammunition to kill a lot of Japs."

"I want to be in myself," he muttered.

I don't think anyone who didn't see Frank the way he looked at that moment could realize how badly he wanted it.

"Come and get some coffee," I said, "and we'll both feel better."

We stopped in at a joint on Eleventh Avenue and drank two cups apiece. Color came back to his cheeks, and he gave me a grin, "Might as well get back to the hotel and face the reporters," he said.

We drove across town and up toward the Waldorf. I knew there would be a crowd still waiting to hear the results. I also knew there was nothing we could tell them officially. The problem was solved in a funny way. Just a block from the hotel the clutch on my car went bad.

"I'll get you a cab, Frank," I said. "I can get someone to pick me up."

Frank laughed. "What do you think I am—a sissy? We can push this heap right up to the hotel garage."

There were six inches of snow on the streets. But did he care? He did not. And the reason the reporters never spotted Frank that night was because they weren't expecting to see him pushing a car up Park Avenue through the snow!

In the last couple of years, Frank has had a lot of important things on his mind. Things have been happening in the world that he hasn't liked the looks of. I remember the day he came to me and said abruptly, "George, you may not like this and I won't blame you."

I studied him. His thin jaw was set and his eyes were dark with determination.

"What gives, Frank?"

"Look, when I was a kid in Hoboken, if I saw a big boy pick on a little one, I always got into the scrap. Right now I see people being picked on because they're black instead of white. Or because their name's Levy instead of Smith. Or because they go to the Catholic church instead of the Methodist. I don't like it and I want to do something about it."

I knew that this had been in Frank's mind for a long while. I knew he had broached the subject to various friends and advisers and they had discouraged his attitude. But they didn't know Frank as well as I did. You can't dissuade him when he feels as deeply as he does on this matter. I wouldn't have tried anyway, because I felt the same way.

A few weeks later I had one of the biggest thrills of my life when I heard Frank speak to a jammed audience in Madison Square Garden.

"I have been warned plenty of times," he told us, "that I'm treading on dangerous ground. That a performer has no right to express his views on what is right or wrong, and that it will injure his career if he does. Let me say here that if my attempting to right wrongs is going to hurt my career, to hell with my career!"

There was a roar of applause that swept you away on its rhythm. There were tears in my eyes and I'm not ashamed of it. I had watched the evolution of a little guy from Hoboken into one of the great fighting spirits of our time. He is looking ahead today with the same hope and vision he had when his career began, and take my word for it, he has an even bigger future marked out. Singer Sinatra—now Citizen Sinatra—will never stand still!

MY BEST FINDS OF '46

Lizabeth Scott

(Continued from page 51)

was a chance to shake the hooey and show her stuff.

Well, she's had it—in three star pictures since then—and three's the charm. After "The Strange Love of Martha Ivers," "Dead Reckoning" and "Desert Fury" (which you'll see before long) what comes up with Scotty is a lot more than mere hubba-hubba—whatever that is. She's a golden girl, the twin terrific of 1946—of Mark Stevens.

Believe me, that's no small order—for any girl in any year—even in 1946 when a bright new star winked in your eye every time you turned around in Hollywood. But Lizabeth led the race all the way. I could have picked her with my eyes closed—and come to think of it—that's about what I did.

I was parked in my favorite chaise longue at home one night, restoring my tissues after a marathon of Hollywood parties, and I switched on the radio. I settled back happily and closed my eyes. Because one of my favorite actresses was on the air—Tallulah Bankhead. I've been a fan of Tallu's for years and I like nothing better than listening to her twist a play script around her terrific talents. So I had a half hour of pure pure listening pleasure—and then I heard the announcer say, "Thank you, Miss Lizabeth Scott—!"

little gal, big voice . . .

I couldn't believe it! I thought there must be a mistake somewhere. But there wasn't, of course. It was Scotty all right, and if she's good enough to fool an old timer like me, she's good. If I had any lingering doubts about Lizabeth Scott they vanished that night. But I didn't have many by then. Straws in the Hollywood winds had been spelling "Lizabeth Scott" to me all year.

For one thing, you don't have to tell Humphrey Bogart who's good and who isn't. There aren't many actresses in Hollywood that Bogie will let take the place of his favorite leading lady, Lauren Bacall. But I happen to know that Humphrey refused to make "Dead Reckoning" until Columbia came up with a lady screen partner he could vibrate to. First to fill that bill was Lizabeth Scott, although she was miles across the ocean in England at the time—and that reminds me of another good reason I'm picking Scotty to lead the list. She's an alert, ambitious girl who knows opportunity when she sees it and says "Come in" at the first knock.

Lizabeth was in London when the transatlantic telephone call came. The phone call brought her the good news that Humphrey had tagged her for his next leading lady. That "Dead Reckoning" started shooting that week, that if she wanted to play with Bogie it was come home quick!

Lizabeth didn't hesitate. She hopped a plane back to America that afternoon. She landed in Hollywood at 7 a.m., two days later, had breakfast on Hollywood Boulevard and at 9 o'clock was at the studio for her wardrobe and makeup tests. That afternoon she was playing a scene with Bogie.

Lizabeth's so supercharged with vitality, she's been matched with nothing but high-voltage males in every picture she's made. That's another reason I say Lizabeth Scott is no ordinary, garden variety of new star. She's a ball of fire, full of the old divine lightning. Bogie's

In this suffering

A WOMAN'S NATURAL HERITAGE?

From Adam's rib woman was created and glorified with many charms and attributes. Nature endowed some girls with beautiful figures—others with soul-stirring eyes and laughing lips—others with vivacious personalities.

But alas! With all these precious gifts, many women—by their very physical nature—suffer from distressing symptoms on "certain days" of the month.

This Is Something You Shouldn't Joke About!

In case female functional monthly disturbances cause you, like so many unfortunates, to suffer from pain, nervous distress, irritability and feel so tired out, restless and highstrung—on such days — this is something you shouldn't joke about! Start at once—try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to relieve such symptoms. It's famous for this purpose.

Pinkham's Compound DOES MORE than relieve such monthly pain. This great medicine ALSO relieves accompanying weak, nervous, cranky feelings—when due to this cause. Taken regularly thruout the month—Pinkham's Compound helps build up resistance against such distress—A VERY SENSIBLE THING TO DO!

Lydia E. Pinkham's
VEGETABLE COMPOUND

For over SEVENTY YEARS — Pinkham's Compound has been helping thousands upon thousands of women in this way—and so many have reported truly remarkable benefits. It's also an excellent stomachic tonic. All drugstores.

Swish on this glamourizing lotion make-up base and see the film of camera-clear loveliness it forms, glorifying your complexion. Dab it on your neck and shoulders, too . . . NOW, look into your mirror . . . you'll pass the examination with an A plus!

FORMULA 301
Powder Base and Complexion Beautifier

Conceals tiny lines and minor blemishes effectively
ANTISEPTIC • ASTRINGENT • PROTECTIVE
At Drug and Dept. Stores 39c • $1.00 • $1.50
At all Ten Cent Stores—Trial Sizes 10c and 20c
If unavailable in your locality, order from us.
10c ☐ 20c ☐ 39c ☐ $1.00 ☐ $1.50 ☐
(Add 20% tax) 4
Name .....
Address .....
City & State .....
KAY PREPARATIONS CO., 522 5th Avenue, New York 18

Get Well QUICKER
From Your Cough Due to a Cold
FOLEY'S Honey & Tar Cough Compound

CASE OF BIG Money Makers FREE

I'll send you this Big Assortment of Products in a carrying case FREE (your only expense is parcel post charges) to help you get started in a Good Money Making Business of your own. Thousands now making extra money each week this way.
BLAIR, Dept. 360-CA, Lynchburg, Va.

For Your Class or Club
Pins, rings and emblems. Over 300 designs. Finest quality. Reasonable prices. Pins, 30c up. Write today for free catalog.
Dept. Z, Metal Arts Co., Rochester, N.Y.

YOU CAN LEARN TO BE AN ARTIST

Start Drawing at Home in Your SPARE TIME—Trained Artists are Capable of Earning $40, $60, $75 a Week! It's interesting and pleasant to study Art the W. S. A. way COMMERCIAL ART, DESIGNING, CARTOONING all in ONE complete course. No previous Art experience necessary—hundreds have profited by our practical methods since 1914; TWO ART OUTFITS furnished. Full information in FREE BOOK, "Art for Pleasure & Profit." Veterans Approved under "G.I." Bill.

FREE BOOK gives details

WASHINGTON SCHOOL OF ART,
Studio 801 H, 1115 15 St., N. W.
Washington 5, D. C.

Name .....
Street ..... AGE .....
City ..... Zone ..... State .....

a prime example of the kind of competition Liz stacks up against. She'd blitz a Weak Willie right off the screen.

Her boss, Hal Wallis, is the very same producer who boosted Bogart out of low down gangster roles and made him a romantic bad guy—and a very great star. He's the Columbus who discovered Bette Davis—way back when—and snatched her from sassy bit parts to stardom at Warners.

I remember asking Hal, over a year ago —when he told me about this new girl find of his—just what it was Lizabeth Scott had. "She's different," replied Hal. "You can take one look at her—as I did—and tell that."

Hal didn't say his new discovery was the most beautiful doll in the world—and she isn't. He didn't even claim she was an acting smoothie, which Liz Scott also isn't, compared to a dozen other stars I can name. "She's different." That's all Hal said.

I visited Lizabeth's "Desert Fury" set not long ago. It happened to be the day she was doing a red hot love scene with John Hodiak.

that's acting . . .

"Anybody," I ventured, "who can make a brand new bridegroom like John Hodiak forget Ann Baxter for a split second is good enough for me."

Scotty laughed. She's got a good healthy laugh and a swell sense of humor (she'll need that in Hollywood, too!) "Thanks for the compliment, Hedda," she grinned, "but I'm not sure I'm so hot." Then she told me what happened in her first picture, "You Came Along."

Lizabeth spent all one Saturday morning making torrid love to Bob Cummings in that one. At noon shooting stopped and Bob, who had hugged and squeezed Scotty for four straight hours with passionate zeal, said, "Well, so long, Lizabeth, I'm off to get married." That afternoon he eloped with Mary Elliott! That, of course, is Hollywood where acting is only make-believe. But Lizabeth can make you believe—that's the point.

I found something else about Lizabeth Scott that day on her set—or rather, I confirmed something I'd already suspected. She's a trouper. Mary Astor, an old friend of mine, and an actress whose word I'll bank on, told me what she'd been doing all the day before—slapping the stuffings out of Lizabeth Scott. Mary plays Scotty's mother in "Desert Fury" and her big scene is where she gives her wayward daughter a merciless pasting. It was a tough scene to get and they took ten takes —until Scotty's cheeks were as scarlet as a spanked baby's bottom. She never called time out, but came right back for more and Mary told me she put everything she had into those whacks. "I felt like a dog, slamming her around the stage when I knew it hurt," sighed Mary, "but Scotty insisted on it for realism."

I had a first hand look at Lizabeth's capacity to take it when I was in England, the same time Scotty flew over for the British premiere of "Martha Ivers" at the Carleton. Lizabeth was fresh from a stop-over in New York City—where she did eight national radio broadcasts and forty-two newspaper interviews—and fresh is what I mean. Bouncy Scotty radiated typical American pep and personality. From the minute she stepped off the plane, she didn't rest a minute. If there was anything Liz missed in her three weeks' stay abroad I can't guess what it was. And if there was anything anyone wanted done she did it. I think if they'd asked her to stand on her head atop Nelson's monument in Trafalgar Square, Scotty would have shinnied right up.

The result was that staid old London loved her, and even if some critics took British cracks at the artistic merit of "Martha Ivers," they kept Scotty on the front pages every minute.

Her activity wasn't all for publicity purposes, either, because Lizabeth Scott is just naturally as curious as a kitten. She owns a divine discontent and hunger to learn. You can't make Scotty mad when you tell her she doesn't know something; all she does is start learning it. John Farrow flopped in his directing that way when he had Lizabeth in "You Came Along." Johnny's a nice guy but he can be sarcastic on a set and he wasn't too happy about having Hal Wallis hand him an unknown ex-model. In fact, Scotty deserves extra credit for making her first picture under the scowls of a director who wished she was somewhere else. Once when Liz wasn't playing a scene just like John wanted he snapped, "You played that scene like you were still in dramatic school!"

"I still am," smiled Liz.

Liz ran into lots of conversational French in England; like many Americans, she felt like a dummy being a monolinguist. So she's studying French at Hollywood High next semester. When she came to Hollywood she took up photography so she'd know a thing or two about the business she aimed to star in. She's made a bosom friend of Edith Head, Paramount's dress designer, whom she pesters for advice on every fashion move she makes. In short, Liz is just twenty-three and smart enough to know she doesn't know everything. Her fame isn't fooling her.

On her twenty-third birthday, for instance, Scotty stepped out to dinner with —guess who—Barry Fitzgerald. Now, Barry's old enough to be her papa, but you can be sure he doesn't bore young Scotty to tears. Hardly. Barry's a fine actor and Liz is smart enough to cultivate older men, especially older artists like Barry She met Barry through Dorothy Blair, his secretary and Liz's stand-in. He was in Ireland when Scotty was in England and when Humphrey Bogart snatched her back she had a Fitzgerald-conducted tour of Dublin and the Abbey Theater all lined up. Scotty wanted to meet each and every Abbey player and ask questions like mad. Don't think she wouldn't have, too, if she'd had the chance.

no party girl . . .

Lizabeth Scott hasn't cut much of a social rug in Hollywood—not yet, at least—but the days are gone when that makes much difference in film fortunes. Scotty's had some dates with men about town like Helmut Dantine and Burt Lancaster, but she's no party girl and she hasn't teamed up with the younger pleasure set.

Scotty lives in half an old house that she found—by luck and typical Scott directness—on the very day the landlord dumped her clothes out on the sidewalk from her tiny temporary Beverly Hills flat. Liz has battled bravely with the Hollywood housing panic all over town ever since she came West. She found her present refuge by looking in—of all places—the want ads, then running right over and saying "I'll take it." She moved in that night. It's not luxurious and the neighborhood's no longer fashionable. But when real estate agents—scenting her sudden success—tried to tempt Scotty with fancy houses with war-debt rentals she told them off sensibly and fast.

"No, thank you," Liz declined, "Maybe it's not fashionable but I've got a two-year lease and here's where I stay!" And that's where she is and it's okay with her. She has a telephone and a dinky coupe she's learned how to drive and she's happy as a lark. Because what Lizabeth Scott wants out of Hollywood is to make movies. It's the career that counts.

MY BEST FINDS OF '46

Mark Stevens

(Continued from page 51)

It always has and it always will. Believe me, if all those enduring young charms which we gaze on so fondly today—our old standbys, the Gables, Coopers, Colmans; the Crawfords, Colberts, Davises—if they were all we ever, ever had to look at, until death do us part—well we'd probably get so fed up one of these days we'd call it cricket to picket—and go on strike!

Producers know it, exhibitors know it, stars know it (and worry about it) you know it and I know it. But still the deadly discouraging double dare that Hollywood eternally tosses right in the starry eyes of every uppity young actor is, talent scouts . . .

"So you're good—hey? Okay—Prove it!"

That's when a feller needs a friend, when a boost is a break, when a push up the path is pure paradise. At least, that's what Editors Al and Henry and I figured last year and set about doing our best to fix in the pages of MODERN SCREEN! You're in on it, too, because it's always the rave of a fervent fan who starts us off on the track of a new star.

And how're we doin'? Well, one of our biggest producers phoned me the other day. Here's what he said: "Hedda, your Gruen Watch Award series in MODERN SCREEN is helping make more new stars than anything in Hollywood history. Next to an Academy Oscar it's the most valuable recognition a newcomer can get!"

But my blouse buttons really started making like popcorn when the returns came in on one of the very first winners I'd picked. I'll give a hint by saying this was a pure Cinderella natural; as far as experience went he almost thought a dramatic role was some new kind of coffee cake. So he was pretty mixed up about his own chances, thought the star's job they were shoving him in was 'way over his head. His studio didn't and I didn't. I said so in MODERN SCREEN and proved the fans were behind him. When he read that he came to see me. "You'll never know how much confidence that gave me, Miss Hop-

LUCKY PARTNERS

Our Service Dept. announces proudly that we've distributed exactly 668,847 free charts on subjects ranging from "How To Join A Fan Club" to "How To Dance the Fox Trot." We'd like to make it a million—even two million—but, unfortunately, our printer's one of those guys who has to make a living. He just keeps showing us the figures on the rising cost of newsprint, and shakes his head sadly. Because we're convinced that our Service Charts provide you with a wealth of needed information in convenient form, unattainable elsewhere, we want to go on filling your urgent requests. To do this, however, we'll have to ask you to go into partnership with us and help defray part of the cost of the charts you want. They'll cost 5c or 10c each, depending on production expenses. When you read them, we think you'll agree that they're worth many times the price. Turn to page 84 now and send us your order.

Readers Ask: CAN WE HAVE LONGER HAIR?

NOW, AT LAST, THE ANSWER CAN BE YES!

Longer Hair can be YOURS!

DO IT AT HOME

Why wait weeks and months for results? Why use expensive, messy, complicated, painstaking treatments? You can forget everything you have ever tried before—for now in only 5 days you can see for yourself the amazing difference.

FOR EVERY TYPE HAIR

Blondes, brunettes, redheads, thin or thick, sparse or heavy hair can be improved. Your hair can glisten with highlights and shine with full vigor and life. There can be little beauty without long, gleaming, attractive hair. You, too, can enjoy romance and adventure. You, too, can make the most out of life by making the most of your hair.

EASY 5-DAY TEST

The Robertene Proven Method helps prevent brittle ends breaking off. By retarding this breaking of brittle hair ends by supplementing the natural hair oils, your hair may get longer. If your scalp and hair conditions are normal, then your hair has a chance to get longer and more beautiful and easy to manage. Prove to yourself in only 5 days that the Robertene System really works, that your hair will be more lustrous, softer and silkier than before.

FOR MEN TOO

Men, too, may find a decided improvement in the condition of their hair by using The Robertene System. No mess or bother. You'll be proud to show off your improved, smooth, lustrous, well-groomed hair. Healthy, attractive hair is one of man's best assets. Make the most of it!

NO NEED TO DESPAIR!

There's no more reason to feel that you must go through life with dull, lifeless, dry, brittle, hard-to-manage hair. For now, at last, you too, may have longer hair. You, too, as so many others have discovered, can add to your crowning glory by the simple, scientific, easy, quick Robertene Method.

MONEY BACK GUARANTEE!

If you are not 100% delighted with results, if you do not see a decided improvement in the condition of your hair in the short span of only 5 days, then your money will be immediately refunded in full. Nothing could be fairer than that. Get ROBERTENE by sending cash, check or money order NOW! It is only $1 for one month's supply and $2 for the larger, more economical 3-month's supply, postage prepaid. THE ROBERTENE CO., Dept. D-1, 871 Broad Street, Newark, New Jersey.

A VEST POCKET SIZE RADIO!

So small it will slip in your pocket or purse! Actually smaller than a pack of king size cigarettes! Weighs but ¼th lb. complete ready to play—as shown with self contained earphone for personal use. No extra wires or special attachments required. Streamlined, attractive and durable black and silver plastic cases. Uses new preset "crystal diode" rectifier same as used in Army-Navy ultra hi-frequency radar sets during the war. Has slide tuning dial for station selection. Since no tubes, batteries or electrical socket power "plug-ins" are ever required, the radio should operate for years with little or no upkeep expense. Usually receives local radio broadcasts simply by clipping self contained connection "snap" to metal of telephones.

GUARANTEED TO WORK for you in your locality if attached and used according to complete operating instructions sent with each radio. Can be used at home, in offices, hotels, cabin camps, in bed, after hours on farms or most anywhere in the United States or Canada.

SEND ONLY $1.00 (currency, express or postal money order, bank draft, or personal check) and pay postman $2.99 plus delivery and postage fees on arrival or send $3.99 for postpaid delivery (O.P.A. ceiling). Ideal gift for children or adults alike! A truly practical novelty radio capable of real radio reception. Order your "Pakette" radio today for real enjoyment. Critical material shortages may limit future production so order today—NOW—to assure the earliest possible delivery. (Canada, Mexico and foreign orders $5.00 U. S. cash with order.)

PAKETTE ELECTRIC COMPANY, DEPARTMENT MM-1, KEARNEY, NEBRASKA

STOP Scratching

It May Cause Infection

Relieve itching caused by eczema, athlete's foot, pimples—other itching troubles. Use cooling, medicated D.D.D. Prescription. Greaseless, stainless. Calms itching fast. 35c trial bottle proves it—or money back. Ask your druggist for D. D. D. Prescription.

LAYMON'S Cosmetics 10¢

Ask for Laymon's Face Powder, Rouge, Lipstick, Nail Polish. Sold from counter display cards in drug and other stores.

WORLD'S PRODUCTS CO., Spencer, Ind.

TRAVEL FOR "UNCLE SAM!"

$1,756 to $3,021 FIRST YEAR

RAILWAY POSTAL CLERKS

Veterans Get Special Preference

Many other Government Jobs, City and Rural Carriers —Postoffice Clerks—Patrol Inspectors — Accountant — Stenographers — Typists — etc. Prepare Now for next Examinations.

FRANKLIN INSTITUTE,
Dept. C108, Rochester 4, N. Y.

Sirs: Rush to me, without charge, copy of 32-page book, "How to get a U. S. Government Job," list of positions, and full particulars telling how to prepare for them.

Name .....

Address ..... Vet? ...

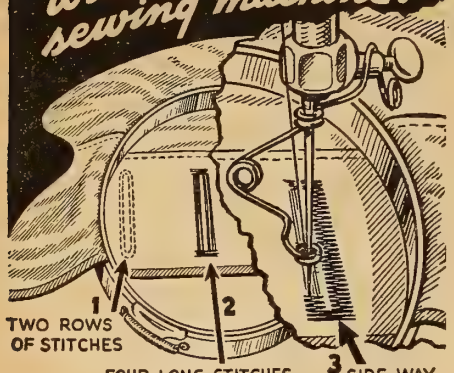
New EASY WAY Makes
BUTTON HOLES
with your own sewing machine!



Darn Stockings, Mend Tears, Attach Zippers and Sew On Buttons, too!

Once dreaded by every woman, now button hole making becomes as easy as basting a hem with this sensational new invention! You'll get twice as neat results in half the time, too! Fits any sewing machine . . . attaches in a moment. Simple to operate. Comes complete with hoop for darning stockings, a button hole guide and easy directions in picture. Test at our risk now and realize a new thrill in sewing.

New! Improved! NOW ONLY $1.00 NOTHING LIKE IT!

FREE NEEDLE THREADER. As a gift for prompt action, you will receive with your order the marvelous time-saving, eye-saving needle threader. Don't wait but send your name today.

SEND NO MONEY — ORDER NOW. Just send your name and when you receive your new improved button hole attachment and gift needle threader, deposit only $1.00 plus C.O.D. charges thru postman. Do this on the guarantee that if you aren't delighted in every way, you may return purchase for full refund. Or send cash with order, we pay postage. Special . . . 3 for $2.50 NOW . . . Mail your name and address to LONDON SPECIALTIES, Dept. 4-A7, 8505 S. Phillips, Chicago 17, Ill.

WHY SUFFER
FROM MISERY OF SIMPLE PILES?

● Think of it! A single soothing ointment that speeds relief from those tortures of simple piles. It's amazing Pazo Ointment—acts instantly to relieve pain of itching—soothes inflamed tissues—lubricates dry, hardened parts—helps prevent cracking and soreness—acts to reduce swelling and check minor bleeding. It's wonderful!

Your doctor can tell you about amazing Pazo Ointment. Get it at your druggist's today . . . with the painless, thorough Pazo Pile Pipe . . . or in handy tin and suppositories. Made by the makers of famous Grove's Cold Tablets.

Compare These Values!
MOVIE STAR PHOTOS
12 for 50c ★ 25 for $1.00
Now . . . get MORE for your money. Choose your favorite Hollywood Stars and we'll send YOUR SELECTION of beautiful, glossy photos. Smallest order 50c. Name second choices. FREE! Folder of 250 NAMES and ADDRESSES of popular stars with each order.
BRITESHINE PRODUCTS Dept.A16
Box 252 Church St. Annex N. Y. 8, N.Y.

per," he said gratefully. "I knew I couldn't let you and those fans down."

It was just twelve months ago that I picked Peter Lawford to start the parade of MODERN SCREEN's monthly finds. I'm not saying, "Move over, Elijah, and make way for a new prophet," exactly. But look at the record—

Pete's no longer just a pal of Van Johnson's, along for the publicity ride, slipped into this and that picture; he's one of Leo the Lion's favorite cubs. When I tagged Guy Madison, "the guy" was still a sailor with nothing in the hold but an unbilled bit. He was posing for those beautiful publicity stills at Selznick's and starting a dubious first picture—and that's about all. But now Guy's a full fledged member of David Selznick's elite family of stars—and there's class in that league with Jennifer Jones, Ingrid Bergman, Joe Cotten, Shirley Temple and Company. And notice—I'm not putting Guy last in my future book there. Not with two hit starring pictures under his belt by now.

good sport . . .

Look at Bill Williams and Barbara Hale, coming along neck and neck, like thoroughbreds, at RKO and Johnny Coy burning up the boards at Paramount with his flying feet. Those feet were just barely inside the Hollywood door when we spotted them, months ago. And Marshall Thompson—you should see the plans M-G-M has stacked up for that clever kid whom we caught on the first bounce. Larry Parks—when Larry got his Gruen watch nobody knew, not even Larry, what the future held. He was gambling on one picture and so was I, maybe, when I got on the Parks bandwagon. But "The Jolson Story" is no gamble now and neither is Larry.

But I can hear the howls already—"Hey, wait a minute! Hopper, your memory's failing. You've left out—"

Yep, I know, I know. But that's the dish I'm saving for dessert. There's a prize pupil in Hopper's Hall of Fame. The prince of the pickin's—that's who. And am I proud to present him!

Meet Mark Stevens—MODERN SCREEN's Find of the Year!

It takes a good man to lead that league of young shooting stars—and that's just what Mark is, good as gold. In fact, I'll make a prediction right now that Mark Stevens winds up one of the greatest male stars of modern Hollywood. I sat straight up in my seat the first time I saw Mark Stevens in "Within These Walls." When I met him, I knew I was meeting somebody special. From then on, I've liked everything about Mark. I like how he cinched his big break, how he's handled his success, how he's kept his head, his dignity and his self respect, when Hollywood gave him the works. Especially, I like how Mark grinned right in the face of the bad health that tried to puff out the bright flame of his promise. I like Mark's integrity, his humility, his honesty, his fairness—those attributes of greatness in any endeavor. I like Mark's wife, Annelle, and her sensible grasp of what a girl can do to help a Hollywood husband get started. I like Mark Stevens' chances in every direction—and they aren't just chances any more. Mark was the hard luck star of 1946. But he made 1946 peg his place high in the Hollywood heavens. That's why my hat's off to him; that's why it's Stevens—all the way, for my money, my number one find—and Mark, it makes me happier than it does you!

I stood on the set of "I Wonder Who's Kissing Her Now" not so long ago. It was the first picture Mark Stevens made since he spent those long, gritty months in the hospital, having his bad back laid open, and the longer, agonizingly inactive ones when Mark was convalescing at home, dying to get back at work. He still wasn't strong enough. Anybody could tell that. His face was drawn and his brown eyes were too bright. I was asking Mark how he felt and he was lying, "Swell," when Director Lloyd Bacon came by, took a look, and said, "Are you sure, Mark?"

"Sure," he grinned.

"I don't believe it."

"Nothing's wrong with me," insisted Steve.

They sent for a doctor anyway. He stuck a thermometer between Mark's reluctant teeth. It read—temperature, 104! They chased Stevens off the set then and sent him to the hospital. It took penicillin to fix him up.

But what can you expect of a Scotch-Irish guy with the square cut of Mark's jaw, those level brown eyes, that deep, firm voice and those copperish curls?

What makes Mark Stevens tower, head and shoulders, above even the crowd of MODERN SCREEN's watch winners, is a mettle you find only in champions. It's a mixture of confidence, courage, talent and an extra something that pays off in the pinches. It's what Bill Tilden had and Bobby Jones and Joe Louis, too. It marks a man like Stevens and makes him, as his boss, Darryl Zanuck pointed out to me, "a man you see—and you can't forget."

Otto Preminger, one of the best directors at Mark's home studio, spotted it first in Mark. He saw him on the lot, and told him, "I'd like to test you for a part in my picture, 'Fallen Angel.' Chances are you won't get it. I want Dana Andrews if I can get him and I probably will. This test is a long shot for second choice. Want to make it?"

"I sure do," said Mark. And he made such a good test—even though he knew Dana would beat him out—and he did—that the minute RKO saw it they borrowed him for "From This Day Forward," and tried to buy half of Mark Stevens' contract. But by then, of course, Darryl Zanuck had had a peek and he knew what he had when he saw it.

talent plus humility . . .

But with it all Mark has other things that land right right in my column of what-it-takes for Hollywood greatness. He has a sense of honesty and gratitude. He doesn't think he made the world, or even his own career. When Mark was down to exactly three cents in his jeans, he signed with his agent, Nat Goldstone, and took an emergency salary in advance—$50 a week—to live on until he got a job. It was a long time before that happened and Mark got in debt. He hasn't forgotten that favor now that he's clicked. Mark has paid back every cent he borrowed, of course, and the Goldstones are still his agents, with a chance to cash in on their investment. But that wasn't enough for Mark. He pesters every star he knows to sign up with his benefactors. He's already brought the Goldstones three clients, because he's so grateful. Believe me, that's a rare enough virtue in Hollywood. So is humility, in the land where hats rarely fit after the first hit. You know what he told me—the day I complimented him on coming through the toughest year any young star ever faced?

"I'm not kidding myself," said Mark seriously. "The reason I got a chance was because the good stars were off to war." How many other guys who rose to fame because they weren't army material, told the truth like that, admitted the good fortune of their Hollywood timing?

I'm for Mark, and I think I always will be, because I respect real talent. Anyone who can step into shoes designed for Henry Fonda and act scene-for-scene with Joan Fontaine—one of the best—is an actor. "From This Day Forward" was Mark Stevens' first real chance. But he didn't lose his nerve; he wasn't overawed by either Joan or his good luck. He came through with a performance any seasoned leading man in Hollywood could envy—and he wasn't well, either. He was as sick as a pup in his next one, "The Dark Corner." In the last half of that picture his injured back gave him such agony he couldn't stand up straight. Mark finished the picture knowing the serious surgeon's slicing he faced, and came through again—so much so that Clifton Webb (who certainly is no amateur) couldn't resist one of his witty cracks when I asked him how he was doing in "The Dark Corner."

"Oh, fine," said Clifton languidly. "I'm busy making Mark Stevens a star!"

stuck with a tux . . .

They say a gentleman is one who never takes advantage of a situation. In my book Mark Stevens is a gentleman on a lot of other counts. But that one will do. And what made me think of it is the forthright, honest way Mark Stevens has faced his success at the studio which gave him a break. I happen to know that Mark got bad advice from some friends when "The Dark Corner" gave him two hits in a row. They told him, "Now's the time to strike for a raise. You're not getting enough money. They'll like you better if you make them pay you more."

Mark shook his head. "Not me," he replied. "They're giving me good parts and building me up. When I'm worth it, I'll get more." He did. Just the other day, Darryl Zanuck tore up his contract and wrote a new one for three times Mark's old salary.

Mark's young, but he's adult—in his manner, his thinking, and his acting, too. Henry Hathaway, who directed Mark in "The Dark Corner," told me once, "Mark Stevens has as much authority and poise as Clark Gable or Cary Grant—and that's rare in a young star." That's right, but at the same time Mark has as fresh a boy-next-door appeal to me as Jimmy Stewart ever had.

All Mark Stevens wants is to prove himself an actor. Steve isn't interested for five minutes in anything else about Hollywood. Mark's mastered some frank weaknesses in his twenty-odd years, including a touchy temper and a wild streak. He's had his Hollywood fling and he's cured. Mark came to Hollywood with a thousand dollars he'd saved and a tuxedo. He thought then the idea was to whoop it up and get circulating. So he painted Hollywood red—until his roll was gone and his tuxedo was in Uncle Benny's hock shop. He came to his senses down on the beach with plenty of time to think. And he thought straight.

Mark thought he'd need dress clothes to wear in "I Wonder Who's Kissing Her Now." He went to the swankiest tailor in Hollywood and ordered the best in the West, fitted to every muscle ripple. Mark figured for once he'd be the best dressed star on the screen—and at half price. After the picture, he knew, the wardrobe department would buy the dinner jacket from him at a discount. Well—just as the glamor suit arrived they decided to shoot the picture in period costume!

One very good reason why Mark Stevens is a home boy is also one very good reason why he comes up my Man of the Year—although it's a lady I'm talking about now. Mark has the right kind of a wife.

Annelle took Mark Stevens for better or worse when he was out of a job and so broke that after they were married she still had to live in the Studio Club while Mark bunked with a pal—they couldn't even afford an apartment then. She's a Texas girl, and one of the sweetest, prettiest and most level headed I've run across.

Annelle came to Hollywood from Texas University with a movie career on her mind. When she married Mark, she made him her career. Annelle has her own talent and beauty to give the screen—no doubt about that. She's had tempting offers from two studios—RKO and Twentieth Century-Fox—since she became Mrs. Mark Stevens. Both times she said, "No, thanks." Annelle had other things to do she considered more important—like taking care of her husband's health and giving him the family he wants. Off and on all the last year Mark needed a trained nurse. But try and find one. When he came home from both his operations Annelle took over, nursed him, dressed his bandages, cooked him goodies, devoted all her time to bringing Steve back to condition, kept him cheered up when he fretted—although she was in a condition herself that makes most girls cross as a couple of bears.

Annelle has bent over backwards to keep out of the limelight. When Mark was making "I Wonder Who's Kissing Her Now," June Haver and some of the girls at Fox wanted to give her a baby shower. Annelle asked them not to, with thanks. "It might seem too pushing," she explained!

I'm proud of Mark because he appreciates Annelle. A man's always more of a man to me when he's a good husband. Mark's that, too. He never left Annelle's side for one evening all the time she was expecting her baby. He did everything possible to fix up the tiny little guest shack which was all the home they could find. Even when he was weak and wobbly, he started sawing and pounding on a nursery and dolling up the place to make Annelle happier. All the time, Mark kept scouting Hollywood for a better home to start a family. He ordered a station wagon, too, plugging for it to come in time to make a nursery on wheels, something Annelle had her heart set on. He never had much hope that he'd collect either one in time.

But you can't have tough breaks all the time. Just four days before Annelle went to the hospital, the Stevens' moved into their new home—in Bel-Air. And the day of the blessed event the auto agency called Mark and said, "Come get your station wagon."

family man . . .

By then, of course, Mark Stevens was far too busy to pay mind to anything—not even new station wagons—except what was mysteriously going on inside the closed hospital door. He wore out the linoleum on the hall for twenty hours—twelve o'clock to six the next night—until the nurse finally told him, "It's a boy—six pounds, twelve ounces. Perfect weight, perfect baby. Everybody's fine." But when Annelle was ready to go home, she rode in her shiny new wagon, with Mark proudly at the wheel, every inch a family man.

One thing's sure, he'll have a brand new reason to bid for glory. Annelle came through on her job for the Stevens' family, just as Mark came through on his—with what Mark wanted most, a lusty-lunged son. He looks like Mark, and from the way he yells cockily, he acts like him, too! So that's another way Mark Stevens has proved himself Man-of-the-Year. He's sired a son like himself with a name like his own.

Because the name Mark chose for his newest, most precious possession was the name Hollywood gave to him when he was off at last to fame and fortune. That's as good a slant as any on how Mark Stevens measures and treasures his Hollywood future. Mark Richard Stevens, Junior—lucky baby, that little guy.

Someday, I'll bet, he'll be mighty proud of that name!

Reducing Specialist Says:

"Thanks to the Spot Reducer I lost four inches around the hips and three inches around the waistline. It's amazing." Mary Martin, Long Is. City, N. Y.

LOSE WEIGHT
where it shows most REDUCE
most any part of the body with

SPOT REDUCER

Like a magic wand, the "Spot Reducer" obeys your every wish. Most any part of your body where it is loose and flabby, wherever you have extra weight and inches, the "Spot Reducer" can aid you in acquiring a youthful, slender and graceful figure. The beauty of this scientifically designed Reducer is that the method is so simple and easy, the results quick, sure and harmless. No exercises or strict diets. No steambaths, drugs or laxatives.

Miss Nancy Mace, Bronx, N. Y., says: "I went from size 16 dress to a size 12 with the use of the Spot Reducer. I am glad I used it."

Thousands have lost weight this way—in hips, abdomen, legs, arms, neck, buttocks, etc. The same method used by many stage, screen and radio personalities and leading reducing salons. The "Spot Reducer" can be used in your spare time, in the privacy of your own room. It breaks down fatty tissues, tones the muscles and flesh, and the increased, awakened blood circulation carries away waste fat. Two weeks after using the "Spot Reducer," look in the mirror and see a more glamorous, better, firmer, slimmer figure that will delight you. You have nothing to lose but weight for the "Spot Reducer" is sold on a

MONEY BACK GUARANTEE
with a 10-DAY FREE TRIAL

If the "Spot Reducer" doesn't do the wonders for you as it has for others, if you don't lose weight and inches where you want to lose it most, if you're not 100% delighted with the results, your money will be returned at once.

Marie Hammel, New York, N. Y., says: "I used to wear a size 20 dress, now I wear size 14, thanks to the Spot Reducer. It was fun and I enjoyed it."

MAIL COUPON NOW!

The "Spot Reducer" Co., Dept. DM-1, 871 Broad St., Newark, New Jersey.

Send me at once, for $2 cash, check or money order, the "Spot Reducer" and your famous Special Formula Body Massage Cream, postpaid. If I am not 100% satisfied, my money will be refunded.

Name _____

Address _____

City _____ State _____

SOMEHOW I JUST CAN'T GET TO SLEEP, MY NERVES ARE STRUNG UP TIGHT I BET I GET SOME MILES NERVINE BEFORE ANOTHER NIGHT.

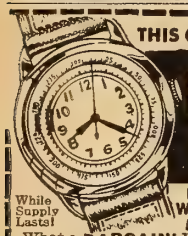
When nervous tension makes you Sleepless, Cranky, Excitable, Restless, or results in Nervous Headache, try

MILES NERVINE

Get it from your drug store today. It may save you needless distress. CAUTION: Take only as directed. Liquid 25c and $1.00. Effervescent Tablets 35c and 75c. Miles Laboratories, Inc., Elkhart, Indiana.

MILES NERVINE

THIS COUPON GOOD FOR 50c



GENUINE IMPORTED SWISS WRIST WATCH

While Supply Lasts!

Regularly $8.45 With this Coupon Only $7.95 Below Ceiling Price

What a BARGAIN! What a beauty is this handsome, serviceable, Imported Wrist Watch. Beautifully designed Dial, Sweep Second hand. Luminous Numerals shine in the Dark. Expensive-looking Stainless Steel Case and adjustable leather band. Send No Money! Just send name and address with this Coupon as your 50c deposit. Pay postman only $7.95 plus 10% tax and postage when watch is delivered.

WORLD-WIDE DIAMOND CO. Dept. H906
2451 S. Michigan Ave., Chicago 16, Illinois

WHO? ME?

There was a little dope with a fat pay envelope
And she spent every cent that was in it.
And she wondered, by-and-by, why the prices rose so high,
But she didn't blame herself for a minute.

Movie Star PHOTOS

Genuine, Glamorous, 8"x10" Matte portraits of your favorite Stars. 1600 to select from. Please give 2nd choice.

Only 25¢ each

FREE: Gift coupon and list of 1600 stars with order

Famous Players Studios

PORTRAIT DEPT. A
6055 Hollywood Blvd., Hollywood 28, California

THE FANS

(Continued from page 22)

you could hardly call us yesterday's birthday child. Actually, we're over 3 years old. For most of that time we've been publishing an exclusive little paper—for members only—called, "The Fans." It became so popular with MSFCA-ites that Editors Al and Henry came to us one day and said, "Look here, why all this snobbery? If 'The Fans' is such a good thing, why not share it with everybody?" We bristled a little. After all, we're not exactly the snooty type. "Sure," we said. We liked that fine. So, here we are. We hope you like what we do, too. But, if you don't, speak up. If you're a regular MSFCA-ite, you know we never ignore suggestions.

the msfca—what is it?

Without a doubt, the MSFCA is the only organization of its kind in existence. You know, of course, that MODERN SCREEN was the first magazine to get behind fan clubs one hundred per cent and put all of its vast resources at the disposal of fan clubbers. Each MSFCA club—and there are nearly 500—is an independent, authorized group. And that word, "authorized," is very important! No club is admitted to membership unless the star whom it honors recognizes and approves its existence. So you can be sure that belonging to an MSFCA club is something special, and that you'll have the full cooperation of your star!

membership sweepstakes winners!

One of the things we go in for in a big way is contests. We even have contests-within-a-contest, and we'll tell you all about the Trophy Cup Awards and the various categories and sub-contests, next month. Right now we want to talk about a little one-shot deal we just completed called the Membership Sweepstakes. If you're like us, you want to hear about the prizes first. And what prizes! A beautiful 17-jewel gold Gruen wrist watch! Two Eberhard Faber Effortless Writing Ball Point Pens! Four Daggett and Ramsdell Travel Charm Kits! Four handsome Volupte gold compacts! And—as additional "consolation" prizes—three genuine leather desk memo pads! All engraved, too, with the names of the winners and "MSFCA."

To start off this first MS fan club column with an exciting exclusive, we want to make the first nationwide announcement of our official Membership Sweepstakes winners. They are: First prize: (Gruen Watch) Norma Winton, Ernest Tubb Club. Second and third prizes: (Eberhard Faber Pens) Myron Welge, Movieland Photo Club, and Kay MacRae, Bill Elliott Club. Fourth, fifth, sixth and seventh prizes: (Daggett and Ramsdell Makeup Kits) Ann Serg, Danny Kaye Club; Blanche Horowitz, Riveting (Andy) Russells; Betty Kurtz, Stardusters; Bonnie Baker, Gene Autry Friendship Club. Eighth, ninth, tenth and eleventh prizes: (Volupte Compacts) Janet Wolfenstein, Frank's (Sinatra) Enthusiasts; Geraldine Kee, Marjorie Reynolds Club; Mary Cain, Charles Korvin Club; Loretta Verbin, Jack Carson Club. Twelfth, thirteenth and fourteenth prizes: (leather memo desk pads) Mary Ann Ritt, Dick Haymes Associates; Berenice Olson, Gene Autry FC; Raymond Warner, Gene Autry FC.

The idea of this contest was to try to double your club membership. The Danny Kaye and Wild Over (Cornel) Wilde Club found this feat so simple, they went ahead and tripled their membership lists in the six months' contest period. Clubs which doubled in membership were: Guy Madison, Johnny Coy (Lanzillo), Keenan Wynn, Evelyn MacGregor, Joe Cotten, Frank Sinatra (Wolfenstein), Stardusters, Sinatra (Schloss), Movieland Photo, Don Defore (Margulies), Doug Autry, Pee Wee King and Marjorie Reynolds Clubs.

andy russell awards prizes!

Now, when you get to know us better, you'll find we don't believe in doing things by half-way measures. We're so proud of our contests, we like to make a big to-do about 'em. (Didn't Dane Clark personally select the model for our Trophy Cup Awards?) This time we phoned Andy Russell, who'd just arrived in town, and blurted out our story. "Well" drawled Andy, evasive-like. He wanted to know who'd won—and what! We went down the list. Nothing happened on the other end until we hit Blanche Horowitz, prexy of the Riveting Russells. "That's enough," Andy interrupted. "I'll be right over." (There's no pride like that of an honorary star in his fan club's accomplishments!) So, it was Andy Russell himself who did the honors of making the official presentations to the New York winners.

club banter

The Club Crosby expects to better its record $215 Sister Kenny Fund collection of last year by Christmas . . . Roy Buchanan, Jr. salutes Ellen Roufs (Jane Wyman, Richard Travis Clubs) as the Queen of Fan Clubs in the first issue of his Agnes Moorehead Journal. Incidentally, it's a knockout . . . The Skippy Homeier and Tommy Dix (Washington branch) Clubs each held successful Charity Bazaars. An amateur show was the highlight of the Dix shindig. They also auctioned off autographed pics of Sinatra, Keenan Wynn, Gregory Peck, Bill Eythe and others, with proceeds donated to the National Cancer Drive. The Homeier bunch, not even waiting for the laurels to fade, is now busy planning its first dance . . . John Raitt's Club accomplished the impossible! A feature story—with pic—in the New York World-Telegram. All about their activities as Foster Parents. A swell prestige break for fan clubs . . . Don't miss the Richard Travis and Vincent Price journal covers—each a honey, in its own way. Travis' is a slick printed job, showing a jagged-edged clip from Hedda Hopper's newspaper column, plugging the club, of course. The Price number is hand-drawn by artist Ramsy . . . Pat Bemis and Helen Holbrook went down to Laguna Beach Playhouse for their honorary's (Keenan Wynn) appearances in "20th Century" and "Petrified Forest" . . . Corp. D. Whitfield, Lena Horne Club, says it's not being discontinued, just temporarily disbanded, until his discharge. Meanwhile he's dreaming up some grand new plans and wants to hear from the prexies of all other Horne clubs. Write him at P.O. Box 822, Tacoma 1, Wash. . . .

Now, we know that just belonging to a fan club is loads of fun, but sooner or later, a real clubber gets the urge to start a club of his own. If you're a special fan of Dinah Shore, Kate Smith, Abbott and Costello, or Jack Smith, and want to start a club honoring one of them, drop a note, stating your qualifications and reasons for desiring to run the club, to The Fans, MODERN SCREEN, 149 Madison Avenue, N. Y. 16, N. Y.

SWEET AND HOT

(Continued from page 76)

YEARS AND YEARS AGO—Dick Haymes (Decca)—The adaptations of classics go on and on, and here we have a number based on Toselli's "Serenade."

BEST HOT JAZZ

SANTA MONICA JUMP—Slim Gaillard (Majestic)—A whole bunch of Slim Gaillard records were bought up from very small labels and re-released by Majestic, after "Ce-ment Mixer" got Slim his big name. The "Santa Monica Jump" label says scat vocals by Gaillard and Brown, but the best thing about the record is that there's really no vocal at all. It's just a series of good jazz solos.

AFTER HOURS—Erskine Hawkins (Victor)—"After Hours" was made five or six years ago, and it features Avery Parrish playing some fine blues—it's his piano solo all the way through. It got very popular when it came out, was in all the juke boxes and so forth. Then, about three years ago, in California, Parrish was in an accident, and was badly cut up, paralyzed. He couldn't do any work at all for a long time, but was recovered enough recently to record the tune again—on the Alert label. Now Victor's reissued this very good original.

THE GENTLE GRIFTER—Artie Shaw (Victor)—Artie Shaw, who has an office in Hollywood, and who's been talking about radio shows and movie scripts, and who's one of the busiest guys alive, has done just about everything lately but lead a band. Nevertheless, he's under contract to Musicraft now, and they're promoting his Cole Porter album. So right in the middle of comparatively little musical news about Artie, and with one Artie album being pushed, out comes Victor with eighteen sides that he made back when he was under contract to them. They're flooding the market with Shaw records that were never released before. Artie's probably forgotten he made them.

BEST FROM THE MOVIES

DUEL IN THE SUN—Gotta Get Me Somebody to Love: Claude Thornhill (Columbia), Tommy Dorsey (Victor), Martha Tilton (Capitol), Bing Crosby-Les Paul (Decca)— So you go up to your local juke box, and one of the little tabs reads "Duel in the Sun" by Bobby Sherwood, and you put a nickel in, and what do you hear? "Sherwood's Forest" is what, and it has nothing to do with the movie, "Duel in the Sun." The title was changed at the last minute at the request of the movie company, and some of the juke boxes didn't catch it in time. However if you want "Gotta Get Me Somebody to Love," which is the big record from "Duel in the Sun," I recommend Bing's version, accompanied by the Les Paul Trio.

SHOCKING MISS PILGRIM—For You, For Me, For Evermore: Artie Shaw (Musicraft); Dick Haymes-Judy Garland (Decca); Changing My Tune: Judy Garland-Gordon Jenkins (Decca); Aren't You Kind of Glad We Did: Peggy Lee (Capitol); Dick Haymes-Judy Garland (Decca)—Peggy Lee made one of her rare trips away from her Hollywood home a while ago, to play six gruelling weeks at New York's Paramount Theater. She thought when she got through that she and her husband, Dave Barbour, would have a week's rest. So what happened? So the very day Peggy closed at the Paramount, the news came through that there might be another recording strike, so Peggy and Dave had to rush to the nearest recording studio and get all the sides possible made before the deadline.

SONG OF THE SOUTH—Sooner Or Later: Will Bradley (Signature), Billy Butterfield (Capitol), Merry Macs (Majestic); Song of the South Album: Tony Pastor (Cosmo)—Will Bradley was a big name when he originated "Beat Me Daddy, Eight To the Bar," and other numbers. But, after a while, he got tired of the responsibilities of leading a band, and went back to the security of being a slide man in radio orchestras. Now, with this record, he emerges again as a big-time recording band-leader, still playing trombone, and we're very glad to see him back.

RECORDS OF THE MONTH

Selected by Leonard Feather

BEST POPULAR

AIN'T THAT JUST LIKE A WOMAN—Louis Jordan (Decca), Pat Flowers (Victor), Frankie Laine (Mercury)
AMONG MY SOUVENIRS—Herbie Fields (Victor), Etta Jones (Victor)
BEST MAN (THE)—King Cole (Capitol), Les Brown (Columbia), Sonny Skylar (Mercury)
THE CHRISTMAS SONG—King Cole Trio with string choir (Capitol)
COMO, PERRY—Merry Christmas Album, with Russ Case (Victor)
I LOVE YOU FOR SENTIMENTAL REASONS—Ella Fitzgerald (Decca), Deek Watson (Manor), Dinah Shore (Columbia)
IF IT'S LOVE YOU WANT—Louis Jordan (Decca), Red Allen (Victor)
JUST SQUEEZE ME—Duke Ellington (Victor)
MERRY HA-HA—Ella Mae Morse-Ray Linn (Capitol)
SWEET LORRAINE—Bing Crosby-Jimmy Dorsey (Decca)

BEST HOT JAZZ

COUNT BASIE—Mutton Leg (Columbia)
SLIM GAILLARD—Santa Monica Jump (Majestic)
AL HALL—Blues In My Heart (Wax)
ERSKINE HAWKINS—After Hours (Victor)
BILL HARRIS—Everything Happens To Me (Keynote)
EDDIE HEYWOOD—On The 88 (Album) (Signature)
J. J. JOHNSON—Coppin' The Bop (Savoy)
STAN KENTON—Intermission Riff (Capitol)
ARTIE SHAW—The Gentle Grifter (Victor)

BEST FROM THE MOVIES

DEAD RECKONING—Either It's Love or It Isn't: Pied Pipers (Capitol), Anita Ellis (Mercury), Tony Pastor (Cosmo), Phil Brito (Musicraft)
DUEL IN THE SUN—Gotta Get Me Somebody to Love: Claude Thornhill (Columbia), Tommy Dorsey (Victor), Martha Tilton (Capitol), Bing Crosby-Les Paul (Decca)
HOLIDAY IN MEXICO—You, So It's You: Dinah Shore (Columbia), Miguelito Valdes (Musicraft)
JOLSON STORY—The Whole World is Singing My Song: April Showers: Dennis Day (Victor)
SEARCHING WIND — Title song: Dick Haymes (Decca)
SHOCKING MISS PILGRIM—For You, For Me, For Evermore: Artie Shaw (Musicraft), Dick Haymes-Judy Garland (Decca); Changing My Tune: Judy Garland-Gordon Jenkins (Decca); Aren't You Kind of Glad We Did: Peggy Lee (Capitol), Dick Haymes-Judy Garland (Decca)
SONG OF THE SOUTH—Sooner Or Later: Will Bradley (Signature), Billy Butterfield (Capitol), Merry Macs (Majestic). Song of the South Album: Tony Pastor (Como)
THE TIME, THE PLACE AND THE GIRL—A Gal In Calico: Tex Beneke (Victor), Hal McIntyre (Cosmo); Oh But I Do: Tex Beneke (Victor)

Yodora checks perspiration odor

the SOOTHINGEST way

It's New! Made with a face cream base.

It's Gentler! Yodora is actually soothing to normal skins.

It's Effective! Gives lasting protection.

Won't Rot or Fade Fabrics. Better Fabrics Testing Bureau says so.

No Irritating Salts. Can use right after under-arm shaving.

Stays Soft and Creamy. Never gets grainy in jar.

Economical. Tubes or jars, 10¢, 30¢, 60¢

You'll adore Yodora! Try it today!

McKesson & Robbins, Inc., Bridgeport, Conn.

Be Your Own MUSIC Teacher

LEARN AT HOME THIS MONEY-SAVING WAY

Simple as A-B-C. Your lessons consist of real selections, instead of tiresome exercises. You read real notes—no "numbers" or trick music. Some of our 850,000 students are band LEADERS. Everything is in print and pictures. First you are told what to do. Then a picture shows you how. Soon you may become an excellent musician. Mail coupon for our illustrated Free Book and Print and Picture Sample. Mention your favorite instrument. U. S. School of Music, 1441 Brunswick Bldg., N. Y. 10, N. Y.

FREE BOOKLET

U. S. School of Music, 1441 Brunswick Bldg., N.Y. 10, N.Y.

Please send me Free Booklet and Print and Picture Sample. I would like to play (Name Instrument).

Instrument..... Have you Instrument?.....

Name.....
(Please Print)

Address.....

Dec.-Jan. issue just out!

32 big autographed portraits of your favorite stars complete with up-to-date biographical sketches data on 100 stars!

★

special features on Betty Grable
Tyrone Power
Bing Crosby
Bill Williams-
Barbara Hale
Ingrid Bergman

charting the stars
a lot of information on fifty favorites look for

SCREEN ALBUM

on sale everywhere

(Continued from page 56)

got into bed. Some other time, please."

"But it is so important, Igor. Please!"

"All right," I said. "Come on up."

I got out of bed, slipped into a pair of trousers and a shirt and washed my face. When they came in, I found myself staring at two young girls, neither of whom, if you totalled their ages, was over 17.

"Igor?" the tinier one with glasses asked.

"Yes. Could I help you ladies?"

"We just wanted to see what Gene Tierney's brother-in-law looks like."

Then they turned heel and fled.

Fortunately, this sort of thing isn't a daily occurrence. Lots of folks don't give a hang what (of all things!) a movie actor's or actress' brother-in-law looks like.

price of fame . . .

In fact, this brother-in-law situation offers both advantages and disadvantages, some of which are slightly on the humorous side. I found that out when I joined the Army. I had hardly finished casting off my civilian clothes when a tough sergeant called me forth from a formation and said:

"Aren't you married to Gene Tierney, Private Cassini?"

"No, sergeant," I began. "I—"

"Then you're her brother," he added quickly.

"Well, not her brother either, sergeant. You see, it's this way. I—"

He cut me off again with: "Oh, a phony, eh? I've seen guys like you before. Posing as something you're not."

I could tell my sergeant was getting mad, and I happened to have been one of a few millions of soldiers who didn't like to make sergeants mad.

"I've been trying to explain, sir—" (rookies always called sergeants "sir") "—that I'm Miss Tierney's brother-in-law. Not her husband, not her brother. But only an in-law."

"Oh, I see," he said. "So you're not a phony after all. I knew you were connected some way."

After which his expression changed to one of friendliness, and friendly, too, was the pat on the back he gave me. And from that day on I was in big with the sarge. But there was a catch. He wanted (and got!) a picture of Gene, autographed especially for him.

Similar incidents occurred frequently during my Army days. Such as that day in basic training at Camp Lee when the regimental C.O. heard that Gene Tierney's brother-in-law was stationed in his outfit. A couple of nice handshakes followed—colonel and private—and from this emerged the idea that it would be swell to have Gene visit Camp Lee, watch a parade or so, then be guest of honor at a nifty officers' dance.

Meanwhile, excitement over Gene's arrival (already they had figured it to be a sure thing) ran pretty high, and I confess I felt the slightest trace of a hint—threat, rather—as to my future plans unless I urged Gene to comply with their plans.

Anyway, Gene couldn't make it—which was somewhat unfortunate, because I spent many an hour over the kitchen pots, whereas I figured I should have rated a "B" for trying.

Gene, at the time, was following Oleg around from camp to camp, just as other wives followed their husbands. Had this not been the case I'm sure she would have come to Lee. Oleg, too—by the way—felt some of the brunt. He had just become a second lieutenant at the Cavalry School at Fort Riley (I was still a private), and was being reminded by the gladhanders that he was Gene's husband.

At least in his case it was excusable. Her husband. But I found it disappointing to know that my success as a soldier hinged more on the fact that I was her brother-in-law than on my ability.

It was always interesting to me to know what others thought about Gene. Some invariably put their question this way: "What is she really like? In one movie she was a terrific siren—and in the other she was a slinky murderess."

Well, film roles fool you. Stars are flesh, blood and nerves just as is anybody else. They most generally like or dislike the same things you do. Of course Gene is not a "siren" or a "slinking murderess." She's a wife and a mother, and her home comes first. She doesn't "live" the actress once she leaves location. Like other stars, she might well like dancing, or picnicking or movies—in short, they're human. They are not far-away celluloid mannequins.

Gene isn't particularly fond of Hollywood. I mean as a place to live. She reminds you that she's an Easterner, born in Dodger-land and raised in Yankee Connecticut. She loves New York, too.

What does she do for a good time?

Take a spin or so at the night spots with husband Oleg; or perhaps visit friends in Long Island where she may attend a party; or go window shopping. About shopping, Gene is not a foolish spender. She's well aware of the value of a dollar and she possesses the keen wit of a Yankee horse-trader when it comes to doling out cash.

Gene also leans toward antiques. This, by the way, is genuine, and not affected. Her favorite style is Early American, and she's one of the few "amateurs" who can spot the difference between, say, an American Windsor chair or one of the Louis Quinze period.

At home she's lots of fun. When she arrives she kicks off her shoes and romps about in bare feet—an old habit. She is very much attached to her family, and takes deep pride in the fact that she could send her young sister, Pat, to school.

I was asked if Gene really likes games. She does. She can hold her own at swimming and plays a whale of a tennis game. Originally she disliked tennis because Oleg played it so much, and he had a habit of getting home late for dinner. Finally Oleg introduced Gene to the courts, and now he can hardly drag her away.

Like most of us, Gene has her favorite film stars. Spencer Tracy stands high on her list, along with Clifton Webb and, of course, Sweden's gift to Hollywood, scintillating Ingrid Bergman, who, she agrees, is a great actress.

Among her many habits is that of reading at night before dropping off to sleep. She's a stickler for having windows open while she sleeps, and likes orange juice and eggs for breakfast.

fence sitter . . .

If you want to argue politics with Gene, you must go elsewhere. She doesn't use them. She won't line up on either side publicly, and her ideas remain secret.

As for languages, she holds her own with French—which she and Oleg use to engage in heated arguments (and who doesn't have them?) while the servants are nearby. Gene learned her French in Switzerland, and I'm quite sure at that time she never dreamt she'd be the Gene Tierney of movie fame. And I'm even more sure that I never dreamt I'd be a brother-in-law to such a swell girl.

IT'S A WONDERFUL LIFE

(Continued from page 53)

are to go on acting in pictures, and to gain some weight. That's where we left him. Early in '41 he was stuffing himself with spaghetti three times a day, seven days a week, and dunking his breakfast doughnuts in half-and-half. Having been turned down for enlistment, he made it for the draft by one skinny pound, and the whoop he let out you could hear in Catalina.

The day he docked, Leland Hayward met him at the pier, his mother and dad waited in a hotel, and he made three calls to California.

One was to Fonda. "Can I stay at your place a few days till I get a hotel?"

One was to Frank Capra. "Can I have a job?"

One was to Billy Grady, the gruff-talking, warm-hearted Irisher who runs Casting for M-G-M and loves Jim like a first-born. Grady had business in the east that he'd been putting off till Jim arrived, so they could travel back to Hollywood together. No words were wasted—"Hi, Bill!" and "Hi, Jim!" and a couple of masculine endearments like horse thief and baboon.

Homecoming was something like a serial, told in instalments. The first instalment was when the Jap war ended. Instead of Okinawa, you were headed for America the Beautiful and you did mean Beautiful. The second instalment was when you got on the boat, after weeks of waiting and three false alarms. The third instalment was the Statue of Liberty . . .

For the rest, Jim's high spots were the same as any vet's—reunion with family and friends. With Leland Heyward on the pier, Mother and Dad at the hotel, Maggie Sullavan Heyward and the three kids in Connecticut, his sisters down in Indiana, Pennsylvania. Then back to New York where he met Bill Grady, and on to California and the Fondas, with a stopover in Washington for Army separation.

It was a handsome welcome. Even Brooke and Bridget and Bill, the Heyward hopefuls, jumped at him with glad cries of recognition. The fact that young Bill at least must have been coached into remembering him did nothing to dull the edge of his pleasure.

He enjoyed the home town reception, too. The morning after they got in, his father woke him. "Go look out the window—"

The house, built on Vinegar Hill, commands a view of the heart of town and its tallest building—the courthouse topped by a small clock tower. To the side of the tower facing Jim's window someone had tacked a white sheet with printing in bold black letters: WELCOME HOME, JIM.

"Who did it?" he asked cautiously.

"Nobody knows. Courthouse people can't figure how anyone got up there—"

He relaxed, grinning. That made it the perfect greeting—warm but anonymous, a friendly hello from all. . .

For two weeks he loafed and invited his soul, fished in the reservoir, sauntered down Main Street, admired the spruced-up store fronts, and rejoiced secretly in the fact that his father's hardware store looked just the same. Chewed the fat with neighbors downtown and with his sisters at home. Enchanted his mother by the quantities of food he consumed and was in turn enchanted by his five-month-old niece.

Someone asked him if he'd ever doubted during the war years whether the movies would want him back.

"No," he replied, not being the coy type. "I always figured I was a good enough actor to get a job—"

Remembering "Mr. Smith Goes To Washington" and "You Can't Take It With You," he wanted to make his first post-war picture with Capra. When he phoned from New York, Capra said: "I've got a story. How soon will you be out?"

A few weeks later you might have seen them together in a Hollywood restaurant, Capra pouring cascades of words into the ear of a somewhat bewildered Stewart. "And that's the story," he concluded. "How do you like it?"

Jim shook the daze out of his eyes. "Do you like it?"

"Would I be making it otherwise?"

"Think I can play it?"

"Don't ask foolish questions—"

"Okay, that's good enough for me—"

"Yeah, but do you like it?"

"How do I know?! I can't make head or tail of the damn thing—"

So they signed a contract for "It's a Wonderful Life." Shooting wasn't to start for four or five months. During that interval Jim discovered parties.

He'd never gone to parties before. Either he'd be working and couldn't stay up late, or he wouldn't be working—in which case he'd go to New York or home. This was his first crack at leisure in Hollywood. People asked him to parties and he found them enthralling. For the first time in his life he got himself a date book.

One night he was having dinner with Cary Grant, Eddy Duchin and John McClain. "I've been to so many parties," he said, "I ought to give one—"

It seems he'd taken the words right out of the mouths of his pals. They all ought to give a party. Why not give one together? Terrific idea—

"Now wait a minute," said Grant. "You can't just give a party, you've got to worry first—"

"What about?"

"Food. Entertainment. Guests—"

"Okay, let's start worrying now and get it over. Where'll we throw it—?"

"Clover Club—"

"All in favor? Unanimous. Write it down, Jim—"

"Eats by Romanoff—"

"What about the band—?"

"Let Duchin worry. That leaves people. Whom do we ask—?"

Names started popping. Jim dropped his pencil. "Who do we think we are, picking and choosing? Let's ask everyone—"

"Sure. Write it down. Everyone—"

"Hey, fellas, we forgot decorations—"

"Tell 'em to drape gardenias all over the place. Anything else—?"

They couldn't think of a thing.

The invitations, signed by all four, went out by wire. "It's about time we gave a party. Let us know quick, because we're nervous. Black tie and low-cut dresses—" home away from home . . .

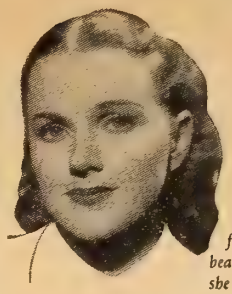
By many it was voted the party of the year, and at least one of its features was unique—a reception line of four gents who'd never looked handsomer, and who couldn't have been more perfect hosts. Romanoff outdid himself. The pickup band was a honey, composed of fellows they all knew, and it played on and on. But the best part came around six when everyone was tired, and Hoagy Carmichael sat himself down at the piano while Bing and Danny Kaye sang all sorts of old songs to a lot of dreamy people. . . .

Jim's reasons for staying with the Fondas were simple and logical. His own house

EVERY WOMAN is TWO FACED



Every woman has a second face—usually infinitely more beautiful than that with which she was born. The secret of beauty is finding that face.

Syd Simons, nationally known make-up artist, can show you the secret. What he has done to bring out the basic beauty of stars of stage, screen and radio—he can now do for you! Through his unique plan of beauty analysis—consultation with you is as personal and complete as though you conferred in his Michigan Avenue Salon. Such make-up service would cost $50 to $100—yet now it's yours for $5!

You will first receive, without charge, your corrective make-up re-styling questionnaire. Based on your answers, Syd Simons will personally prepare your own personal, detailed course of instructions and advice.

You, too, will be amazed at the magical change—fill out this coupon today!

SYD SIMONS — HOUSE OF SYDNEY
540 N. Michigan Ave., Chicago 11, Ill. MS17

If I am not satisfied, I may return it within 5 days and receive my $5.00 by return mail.

☐ I enclose $5.00 for which send PREPAID "7 Magic Steps to Beauty," especially personalized for me.

☐ Please send C.O.D. I will pay charges.

Name.....

Address.....

City..... State.....

Glamour-Eyes with LASH-KOTE

Applies easily, dries quickly. Lasts for days.

For bewitching, sparkling eyes...enhance their beauty with Lash-Kote. Water-proof . . . tear-proof . . . smudge-proof . . . harmless!

In black or brown at all 5c & 10c store cosmetic counters. 25¢

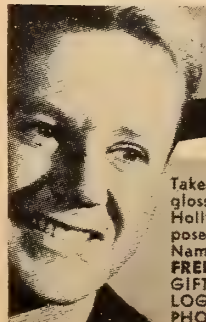
VOGUE PRODUCTS 1151 Seward Street Hollywood 38, Calif.

FALSE TEETH
KLUTCH holds them tighter

KLUTCH forms a comfort cushion; holds dental plates so much firmer and snugger that one can eat and talk with greater comfort and security; in many cases almost as well as with natural teeth. Klutch lessens the constant fear of a dropping, rocking, chafing plate. 25c and 50c at druggists. . . . If your druggist hasn't it, don't waste money on substitutes, but send us 10c and we will mail you a generous trial box.

© I. P. INC.

KLUTCH CO., Box 4787-A, ELMIRA, N. Y.



movie star photos

12 For 50c

25 for $1

Take your pick of gorgeous, glossy photos of your favorite Hollywood Stars in their newest poses. Smallest Order 50c. Name 2nd choices. FREE! THREE 8 x 10 PICTURES, GIFT COUPONS and CATALOG of OVER 200 EXCITING PHOTOS with each order.

DE LUXE PHOTO SERVICE Dept. H20
Box 953 Church St. Annex New York 8, N. Y.

THE PIN WITH THE LASTING GRIP
•
SMOOTH FINISH INSIDE AND OUT

Scoldy Lox BOB and HAIR PINS
NEVER LET YOUR HAIR DOWN

FOR QUICK EXTRA MONEY
Sell Name Imprinted
FLORAL NOTES

Each Folder Imprinted with Sender's Name
New—EXCLUSIVE IDEA! Sell to friends and others. 20 fine writing vellum folders decorated with rich watercolor florals. 10 different artistic designs. Sender's name attractively printed on front. Inside blank so sender may write own message. Sells 20 for $1.60—you make BIG CASH PROFIT.

NAME HERE Sells 20 for $1.50

FOR ALL OCCASIONS
Ideal for Thank You notes, Invitations, Get-Well Messages, all events or for correspondence. Year 'round sales to everyone you meet. Also earn extra cash profits daily with beautiful Everyday assortments to sell for $1. Get FREE samples. Write now.

FREE Samples

M. B. GROGAN CO., 30 E. Adams St., Dept. G-7, Chicago 3, Ill.

FREE ENLARGEMENT of your Favorite Photo
FROM FAMOUS HOLLYWOOD FILM STUDIOS

Just to get acquainted we will make a beautiful 5 x 7 enlargement of any picture or negative. Be sure to include color of hair, eyes and clothing and get our bargain offer for having your enlargement beautifully hand colored in oil and mounted in your choice of handsome frames. Limit 2 to a customer. Please enclose 10c to cover cost of handling and mailing each enlargement. Your original picture or negative will be returned with the FREE 5 x 7 enlargement postpaid. Act now! Offer limited to U. S. A.

HOLLYWOOD FILM STUDIOS
7021 Santa Monica Blvd., Dept. 199, Hollywood, Calif.

WHY DON'T YOU WRITE?

Writing short stories, articles on business, sports, hobbies, travel, local and club activities, etc., will enable you to earn extra money. In your own home, on your own time, the New York Copy Desk Method teaches you how to write—the way newspaper men learn, by writing. Our unique "Writing Aptitude Test" tells whether you possess the fundamental qualities essential to successful writing. You'll enjoy this test. Write for it, without cost or obligation.
VETERANS: This course approved for Veterans' Training
NEWSPAPER INSTITUTE OF AMERICA
Suite 571-A, One Park Avenue New York 16, N. Y.

WARMTH FOR BACKACHES

Backaches, sacro-iliac or lumbago pains all benefit from the comforting heat produced by Allcock's Porous Plaster. Gives relief, supports muscles. 25c . . . buy one now.

ALLCOCK'S Porous Plasters

Marvel
WHIRLING SPRAY SYRINGE for Women
At DRUG COUNTERS THROUGHOUT THE WORLD
Free Booklet. Marvel Co., 60 East St., New Haven, Ct.

LEARN MILLINERY AT HOME

Design and make exclusive hats under personal direction of one of America's noted designers. Complete materials, blocks, etc., furnished. Every step illustrated. You make exclusive salable hats right from the start. Start a profitable business in spare time. Low cost, easy terms.
LOUIE MILLER SCHOOL OF MILLINERY
225 North Wabash Avenue, Dept. 181, Chicago 1, Ill.
Please send me your FREE illustrated catalog.
Print
*Name*_____
*Address*_____

was rented, and the people in it were looking for another place to live. He'd had every intention of finding a hotel, but why change when you're comfortable? "Their home's so wonderful," he explains, "they've got two wonderful children and Frances Fonda's such a wonderful girl, that I never offered to leave and they were too nice to ask me. On the other hand, you've got to look at all sides of a question. I didn't give them much trouble. I slept in the playhouse and picked up my own clothes. I changed the Victrola records myself. I even saved them the trouble of mixing my drinks—" He looks at you like a bland owl. "They appreciated that—"

He and Hank Fonda, just out of the Navy, made a good team. Their ideas on what constituted diversion were identical. If anything got them more steamed up than building model planes, it was flying kites. They put one together that was so sensational, they decided it couldn't be desecrated by common string. So they went to a fish line store on Santa Monica Pier for something special.

"What kind of fish are you going after?" asked the man.

"Uh—herring—" said Hank.

Jim noted that the guy looked startled. "And striped bass," he added.

"That's a funny combination. Anything else—?"

"Well—some kitefish maybe—"

He gave them both a dirty look and started toward the back. "Hey, wait a sec," yelled Jimmy in desperation. "It's not for fishing, it's for flying kites—"

"Who flies 'em?"

"We do—"

He opened the door and closed it behind him fast. They waited five minutes. "Come on," said Hank. "He thinks we're loony—"

"You think he's wrong?" asked Jim.

He'd planned to sell his Brentwood house when the tenants got out, but they left it looking so shiny and beautiful that he wavered, and Daisy's offer to come back as housekeeper turned the scales. Bidding the Fondas farewell, he moved in under his own roof-tree.

There was a time when Daisy would have sympathized with the fish line man. She comes from the midwest. To her, movie stars used to be a race apart—a shade less strange and fearful than headhunters maybe, but really not a great deal to choose between them. When she first went to work for Stewart, it was with one foot in the crack of the door as it were, ready to flee. But from the day Jim's mother and dad came out to visit, Daisy relaxed. "You're not movie folks," she told Mrs. Stewart. "You're just folks—" terrible trio . . .

All musical sessions she takes in stride. Once Jim, Hank and Billy Grady got to worrying about what would happen to Bob Hope if the Pied Pipers couldn't sing any more. . . .

"Poor Bob. He'd sure need another trio bad—"

"And where would he get it? All the good ones are tied up—"

"Let's us start one for him—"

By the end of the evening they'd worked up three numbers—"Mary," "Down by the Old Mill Stream," and "My Gal Sal." These they sing whenever they find themselves and a piano together. People have been known to lock pianos at their approach. Jim's original compositions share a similar fate. He's written several songs, which he tries out on Grady, whose verdict never varies. "Believe me, boy, they stink!" Still he sings them at parties, hopeful that someone will come along and appreciate them. They all sound alike. The way Jim sings, you couldn't tell the difference between "Annie Laurie" and "Mr. Five-by-Five" except by the lyrics.

He was crazy to get back to work, and jumpy as a flea. Acting's a craft. You can forget things—timing and stuff like that—just as you can forget how to play the piano. He'd been away five years—

"So have I," said Capra. "It'll be tough at first, but we'll work it out—"

They started with crowd scenes, where Stewart had little to do. "But what's for tomorrow?" he'd want to know every night.

"A big scene—"

"Which one?"

"The subtle one. Where you fall in the water head first—" blind trust . . .

But the day came when he did have to act, and it was tough at first. He kept blowing lines, didn't know what to do with his hands, fell over his feet and wondered how much he could earn as a circus tumbler. After a couple of weeks, though, tension eased and sureness began stealing back. Capra watched the transformation, and came up behind him one day as he raved over the picture—

"Thought you couldn't make head or tail of it—"

"I can't," grinned Jim, "but it's a wonderful life—"

Throughout the long shooting schedule, he had only two days off. Now he's deep in the heart of Bob Riskin's "Magic Town," playing opposite Jane Wyman. Then he goes right into another Capra film. You won't hear him kicking.

Hollywood's as curious as it was five years ago about whom he'll marry, but so far as the nosey eye can reach, there's no lady in sight. He continues to pal around with the Fondas and Wassermans, with the Heywards when they're in town and with Billy Grady. When he takes a girl out, she's one of the gang.

Like parties, sports are a new project with Jim. What he lacks in skill, he makes up in enthusiasm. All of a sudden nothing would do but he had to go tuna fishing. Chartered a boat, ran around buying up all kinds of tackle and bait, talked Fonda and Ward Bond into going along. Grady declined. "I get seasick—"

"Nobody gets seasick going to Catalina—"

"Look, I get seasick reading 'Field and Stream'—"

They got Daisy up at 2:30 to cook their breakfast—(this they were gonna do by the book)—they left the house at 3:30, they sailed out of San Pedro harbor at half past five. No sooner had they passed the breakwater than Jim turned green and stayed that way the whole weekend. The other two came home with a fine string of fish. Jim came home so pasty faced that Bill couldn't even rib him.

The one subject they don't discuss are Jim's war experiences. In all the months he's been back, and close as he is to Grady, he's referred to them only twice, both times indirectly. Seeing how willing he is to be done with them, Bill asks no questions.

But he did ask a question of General Doolittle once. That was in June '45 when Los Angeles welcomed two famous sons, Patton and Doolittle, with a grand pageant at the Coliseum. Making his way toward General Patton's side, Doolittle caught sight of Grady and stopped to shake hands.

"How's my Jim?" Grady asked.

The other Jim smiled. "Do something for me. Tell all his friends to be very proud of Stewart—"

Knowing Stewart, you wonder out loud if he'd want that story used.

"He can't stop me," snorts Bill. "I tell it to everyone. Orders from Doolittle—" groom wears or what's new for Spring for the male contingent. But I must say, your "choice of the year" looked grand. He had a new suit in blue, and with it he wore a lighter shade tie that just matched his eyes.

GOOD NEWS

(Continued from page 41)

I stopped at Cornel Wilde's table to say hello to him and his lovely wife, Pat Knight. Cornel was having a hectic session at that time with his studio, 20th Century-Fox, over playing in "Forever Amber."

But after a brief twenty-four hours, Cornel returned to the studio and to the arms of the waiting Amber. (Remember—Linda Darnell is playing the amorous lady.) He admitted having asked for more money during the quarrel, but he was very bitter over an article I had written saying he had asked that his wife be promised star parts at his studio.

"Pat is a fine actress," he told me. "She was very successful in New York on the stage. All she needs is a chance at 20th. She is already under contract there.

"I resent very much that anyone should think I am trying to use my own career as a weapon to push her ahead."

As I sat with them for a brief moment, I almost dropped my own coffee cup in surprise—Cornel was pouring his cup of coffee over his ice cream and cake.

"That's the most unappetizing dish I've ever seen," I told him.

"I always pour coffee over my dessert," he said. "I call it 'Hungarian Delight.'

"Have some," he laughed.

"Not me," I answered. "I take my coffee straight, not even with cream and sugar."

Shirley Temple, who always looks to me like a little girl playing at being married, and her husband, John Agar, were sitting with Janet Blair and her husband, Louis Bush. The two husbands had been playing golf together and had returned home very late. As punishment, the girls said the boys had to stay until the very last and dance. I must say, the husbands didn't seem to mind it in the least.

Deanna Durbin, whom I had seen only the day before on the set looking very glamorous in a trailing black off-the-shoulder evening frock, came straight from the studio. This time, she wore a plain little brown dress and looked very tired.

I hoped her eyebrows, which were too heavy and gave her young face a too sophisticated expression, were a part of her makeup. She hadn't worn them that way when I saw her at the studio.

"How's the baby?" I asked her.

Her tired little face brightened up, "Oh, you've just got to come and see her. She is so darling. You were the first to write about me when I was a little girl, and you must be the first to tell about her."

Bob Hutton and Cleatus Caldwell sat at a table for two, as happy as two turtle doves should be, for just two weeks later they were married at Las Vegas.

They excitedly whispered the news of their wedding plans to me at the MODERN SCREEN party.

"We have our house," Bob told me, "it's in the Valley, and we want you to be the first to know."

Two nights after their marriage, I saw them again at the marvelous surprise party William Dozier gave for Joan Fontaine, his bride. The party was held at Romanoff's and there were almost as many stars as there were at the MODERN SCREEN party.

Bob and Cleatus danced every dance together at Joan's party, and I knew as I watched them that they were remembering the big costume party Mike Romanoff gave. That was when Bob went home with Lana Turner and for nearly a year, he and Lana were everywhere together. But it was Cleatus he loved, and as I have said all along, I believe all their battles, or most of them, are in the past.

At the MODERN SCREEN party, Lana, whose hair is now much darker, sat very near Bob and Cleatus. She bowed and smiled. Lana is unhappy if anyone is cross at her. She is like a child that way.

She came to the party with Mrs. Keenan Wynn and Peter Lawford. What a bored young man he is. He kept rushing to the telephone. He must have telephoned everyone in town. At least, everyone who wasn't at the party.

Since Evie and Keenan Wynn parted, there have been many rumors that she would marry Van Johnson when she is free. Evie herself denies it, but I have lived in Hollywood too long to take much stock in any denials from anyone.

Keenan brought Evie to the door. He was appearing in a play at the new El Patio Theater, a stock company of Hollywood stars, and couldn't come in with her.

"You are still going places with Keenan?" I asked Evie.

She frankly said she and Keenan would always be good friends, but their marriage was definitely over. I thought I had never seen Evie Wynn look so nice. Her large beige hat with beige plumes exactly matched her smart frock.

The Gary Coopers were having fun in their sedate, quiet way. Rocky Cooper, who always champions the cause of the wife in any separation, gave a party a week later and among her guests was Nancy, Frank Sinatra's pretty wife. Nancy never looked prettier nor had as much attention.

I remember when Errol Flynn first married Nora, and Hollywood was a little slow in greeting her, Rocky Cooper was the first to go to a luncheon introducing Mrs. Flynn to the film colony. She has been Nora's steadfast friend in good and bad times, and now it seems the bad times are over for the Flynns, who appear to have resolved their matrimonial troubles and settled down to peaceful domesticity.

Dorothy Lamour, glowing in a red and green creation, looked smarter and prettier than I had ever seen her.

"Done up like a Christmas tree," I accused her.

"Don't you dare call me a Christmas tree," she said. "This is my best dress."

It was a great tribute to the Delacortes that although an M-G-M star was chosen, every studio was represented at the dinner. This feeling of good sportsmanship is what we need, with less envy and jealousy. With so many strikes and bitterness in the world, it's important for Hollywood to have a united front.

The Dane Clarks came in ravenously hungry after a five-mile hike around Bel-Air. Dane and Margo have done a lot of their own landscaping and even laid cement walks themselves around their Bel-Air property. Mrs. Clark is very good for Dane, who has a tendency to grow cocky once in a while. It's her level head that keeps him steady and he didn't need to tell me how much he adores his "Red," as he calls her. It was written all over that impish face of his.

Cary Grant was so engrossed in the wonderful music of Carmen Cavallero and his orchestra that Mark Stevens called, "Hey, Cole Porter, how about a song?"

And speaking of enthusiastic fathers, you should hear that Stevens boy rave over his new son.

YOURS NOW...

A HAND CREAM

THAT HELPS KEEP

HANDS SOFTER,

SMOOTHER...AND

IS NOT STICKY—

NOT GREASY!

Luxor contains Carbamide, the ingredient long familiar to surgeons, which helps relieve the tiny cracks and scratches that make hands look red, feel rough!

Luxor HAND CREAM

Premiums GIVEN! Send No Money NOW!

Send name and address—Ladies! Girls! Boys! Dainty wrist watches, pocket watches, alarm clocks, flashlights, ovenware sets, blankets—other premiums or Cash Commission easily yours. SIMPLY GIVE colorful art pictures with White CLOVERINE Brand SALVE for chaps and mild burns, sold to friends at 25 cents a box (with popular picture) and remit amounts stated for premium wanted as explained in catalog sent with order of postage paid by us. Our 51st year. Write for trial order of SALVE and Pictures on trust to start.

WILSON CHEMICAL COMPANY, Dept. 10-57, Tyrone, Pa.

SUFFERERS FROM PSORIASIS (SCALY SKIN TROUBLE)

MAKE THE ONE SPOT TEST

Use DERMOIL

Prove it yourself no matter how long you have suffered or what you have tried. Beautiful book on psoriasis and Dermoil with amazing, true photographic proof of results sent FREE. Write for it.

Don't mistake eczema for the stubborn, ugly embarrassing scaly skin disease Psoriasis. Apply non-staining Dermoil. Thousands do for scaly spots on body or scalp. Grateful users, often after years of suffering, report the scales have gone, the red patches gradually disappeared and they enjoyed the thrill of a clear skin again. Dermoil is used by many doctors and is backed by a positive agreement to give definite benefit in 2 weeks or money is refunded without question. Send 10c (stamps or coin) for generous trial bottle to make our famous "One Spot Test." Test it yourself. Results may surprise you. Write today for your test bottle. Caution: Use only as directed. Print name plainly. Don't delay. Sold by Liggett and Walgreen Drug Stores and other leading Druggists. LAKE LABORATORIES, Box 547 Northwestern Station, Dept. 8709, Detroit 4, Mich.

SEND FOR GENEROUS TRIAL SIZE

BE A Nurse

MAKE $30-$40 A WEEK

You can learn practical nursing at home in spare time. Course endorsed by physicians. Thousands of graduates. 48th yr. One graduate has charge of 10-bed hospital. Another saved $400 while learning. Equipment included. Men, women 18 to 60. High School not required. Easy tuition payments. Trial plan. Write today.

CHICAGO SCHOOL OF NURSING
Dept. 23i, 100 East Ohio Street, Chicago 11, Ill.
Please send free booklet and 16 sample lesson pages.

Name _____
City _____ State _____ Age _____

"If Mark, Jr. wants to be an actor," Mark told me, "I'll give him all the help and encouragement I can."

"Isn't he a little young to decide?" I teased. "After all, most babies a few weeks old aren't interested in careers."

But Mark is sure his son is the exception. He, himself, still looks pale and thin from his recent illness.

"I have to rest," he told me, "so I am going home to bed and to see my son at his ten o'clock feeding time."

Dinah Shore and her husband, George Montgomery, sat at a table where they could see everything.

"Why don't you two dance?" I asked.

"Because this is our first visit to a night-club in a year-and-a-half," Dinah said, "and I want to see the 'cee-lebrities'."

There were no better dancers on the floor than Ginger Rogers and her tall husband, Jack Briggs. They do a mean rhumba. This marriage apparently has worked out very well. Everyone who knows young Biggs likes him. He is trying to stand on his own two feet, a difficult thing with so famous a wife.

Johnny Coy, who dances for a living on the screen, hardly left the dance floor. He and his pretty wife, Dorothy, were grace personified. I loved watching them dance. I almost said, they dance like professionals, but then they are just that, having danced together in a Paramount picture before they were married.

Charles Korvin, who I hear is excellent in his new Universal picture, "Temptation," with Merle Oberon, is a real music lover and not one of these synthetic kind who pretend to like music because it's the thing to do. How do I know? Because Charles and his lovely blonde wife whispered to me that they were leaving the party for a short time but would return later. When they came back, they confessed they'd gone to a concert of the Budapest String Quartette and loved it.

It was a grand party all the way through for the young people as well as for the more settled group. June Haver, in a sensational black satin dress, was beaued by Bob O'Neil, a wealthy young Texan. When I asked June if it were serious, she smiled and whispered, "I will always tell you first."

Just a short time ago, June went into court and had her contract approved. Her salary was given as $2,500 a week, not bad for a girl still under twenty.

She is so career conscious, I doubt if she will be in a hurry to marry. Still you can never tell—she breathes, eats, and is completely career conscious. "Three Little Girls in Blue" makes me feel that one of these days little Miss Haver will have few equals as a musical comedy queen.

Looking at her slim young figure, encased in an ankle length black dress, cut low, I thought to myself, "It's difficult to realize that that pretty thing is so overwhelmingly ambitious. But she is and plenty smart with it all, too."

Joan Crawford, who sat with Edith Gwynn, the columnist, looked stunning. When Frank Sinatra moved over to Edie's table to pose for photographers, they both called me. I was happy to be photographed with them. Edie is one of Frank's staunch friends. If the stories she's written about him were placed in one line, they'd reach around the world and back. She has that loyalty for him that she has for all her friends, and loyalty is such a great quality.

Joan's current swain is Greg Bautzer. Recently, she presented him with diamond studs—an engagement present? Yes, there is little doubt that when Joan is free in April, she'll marry the lawyer who was once in love with Lana Turner and after that, Dorothy Lamour's steady escort.

Joan and Greg battle like mad and then kiss and make up. Only two people as much in love could get into such a temper at the other's actions.

Jeanne Crain sat very demurely in a corner with her bridegroom, Paul Brinkman. There was a reason for Jeanne keeping on that new mink coat all evening other than a desire to show her coat off. Little Jeanne is to have a baby in March, and although she was just beginning to show her condition, she was a little embarrassed.

She had hoped to make one picture before the baby news came out, but I am sorry to say, I spoiled it by announcing the good news to the world. Jeanne denied the stork news until, as Sheilah Graham said in her column, "it is obvious she is approaching motherhood."

Bob Mitchum, one of the favorites on the MODERN SCREEN poll, and his wife enjoyed the dance music to the utmost.

"We had to get a sitter for our two boys," Mrs. Mitchum said, "but this party is well worth it."

A few days later, Bob and his wife parted, but I am happy to say it was only for a few days. They had the usual family spat. Only in Hollywood, a husband and wife cannot have a good old-fashioned fight without the whole country knowing it. Unfortunately, the Mitchum separation was printed, but by the time it appeared in the newspapers, they were back together again.

MINK'S A MINX

You can't buy a mink coat—more's the pity!—for five dollars, but you can buy a warm and purty sweater for that sum. Your fairy godmother, MODERN SCREEN, is anxious to finance the deal. In fact, we're just sitting here eagerly, waiting to hear the humorous or unusual anecdote about what happened on that rare day when you met a real, live movie star. Read the other "I Saw It Happens" in this issue, and then typewrite (or legibly write) your own tale to the "I Saw It Happen" Editor, MODERN SCREEN, 149 Madison Avenue, New York 16, N. Y. If we print your piece, we'll send you $5.00—and p.s.—you don't have to spend it on a sweater!

At a party of this kind, you can always spot the romances that are beginning to bloom. And you know me—always on the lookout for my MODERN SCREEN readers to be the first with the newest heart interests. When I first saw Nancy Guild dancing with Frank Latimore, I knew they liked each other. When Frank danced by my table and lifted the "Reserved" sign and placed it around Nancy's neck for everyone to see, I said to myself, "Looks like the real McCoy."

Guy Madison never left Gail Russell's side. What an attractive couple! Too bad that Gail's lovely coloring doesn't come through on the screen in black and white. I truly think this pair is in love and will be married when and if Guy's studio gives its consent. With so much depending now on the fans' approval of Guy as a young unattached male, his advisors feel it would be unwise for him to marry.

I caught a glimpse of pretty Diana Lynn with Tad Von Brunt, and I must say Diana seems unlike her old self since she broke off her engagement to Henry Willson. Diana's sincere eagerness to marry, settle down and be happy may be due to parental interference, as I have heard, at home.

She is one of the most talented young stars in Hollywood, such a fine pianist and a tremendously effective little actress. I hope she will find the happiness which she deserves.

Tom Drake came stag and had the most marvelous time table-hopping, visiting all his pals and telling some very amusing stories. Marguerite Chapman, pretty as a picture, came with Kurt Krueger. Mark my word, one of these days, you fans will be selecting Kurt as your favorite. He is such a fine actor, and he is going far.

I saw Bill Williams and his winsome little bride, Barbara Hale, wandering around arm in arm. I wondered again when I saw Farley Granger, why he hasn't been given a movie job. He's been back from overseas too long to be idle. He was with cute little Nancy Walker. I saw him lean over and kiss her.

"Wait," I said, "is this a real attachment, or a movie scene?"

"Neither," said Farley, "we are old friends and can't a fellow kiss a pretty girl like Nancy without all this fuss?"

He can indeed—and he did indeed.

Lon McCallister is another ex-service man who enjoyed the Delacorte hospitality to the fullest. I saw Mrs. George Delacorte's eyes light up when I introduced her to Elizabeth Taylor and her pretty mother. Mrs. Delacorte has a young daughter just the age of the charming little Taylor girl.

Elizabeth and that cute Peggy Ann Garner became acquainted for the first time, and it was amusing to hear the little sub-starlets discuss their careers. Each has become extremely important to her studio.

Kathryn Grayson, who recently said she would marry singer Johnny Johnson as soon as her divorce from John Shelton becomes final, was, of course, with her fiance. When I asked Kathryn if it were true that she and Johnny had gone to Mexico and were married, she said, "Of course, it isn't true. Why, I haven't been out of Hollywood in months. I'll marry Johnny right here in my own home when I am free but not before."

After her stormy experience with John Shelton, Kathryn is certainly entitled to happiness. They separated five times and planned divorce three times before she finally filed suit against Shelton. Both claimed too much temperament was the cause of their continued marital unhappiness.

On the way out—and how I hated to leave the fun—I ran into Hurd Hatfield. Hurd told me the picture he'd traveled to Paris to make was never made after all. But he did tell me of his plans to appear on Broadway. He will be starred in a musical comedy.

Sonny Tufts strolled over while we chatted, and I was surprised to discover Hurd and Sonny had never met. I had supposed everyone in Hollywood knew everyone else.

Sonny was having himself a fine time wandering from group to group.

"This is a grand party," Hurd said. "Even in Paris, I didn't taste such delicious food."

I must say again before I sign off, the MODERN SCREEN party was one of the best ever given in Hollywood. The Delacortes know the real secret of hospitality. Everyone had a good time, which is a real tribute to good planning, especially when a party is not given in a private home.

I am really looking forward to next year's MODERN SCREEN Award party—for these affairs have now become an annual event to be looked forward to by all the "cee-lebrities."

And just a word to my readers: Please continue to write and tell me whether you want parties, production news or chit-chat or a combination of all three. I promise faithfully to try to the best of my ability to give you what you want.

FOREVER!!!

YOU'LL REMEMBER 'THE WICKED LADY'

The Most Talked About Picture of the Year!

THE LUSTY ADVENTURES OF A DARING HIGHWAY-MAN AND HIS PARTNER IN DANGER 'THE WICKED LADY'

HERS IS THE STORY OF VIOLENT LOVE... AND LOVE OF VIOLENCE!

J. Arthur Rank presents

AMES ASON

MARGARET OCKWOOD

ATRICIA ROC IN

"The Wicked Lady"

with GRIFFITH JONES · JEAN KENT
MICHAEL RENNIE · FELIX AYLMER
Directed by LESLIE ARLISS · Produced by R. J. MINNEY
Executive Producer: MAURICE OSTRER
A GAINSBOROUGH PICTURE
A UNIVERSAL-INTERNATIONAL RELEASE

Natural Color Photograph by Paul Hesse—Hollywood february 15c

modern screen

THE LIBRARY OF CONGRESS
SERIAL RECORD
JAN 15 1937

JUNE

JAN 13 1947

Hitch your Hair Styles to the Stars—

No other shampoo leaves your hair more lustrous, yet so easy to manage.

Ballerina on blades . . . star of the dazzling Hollywood Ice Revue and 20th Century-Fox Films . . . Sonja Henie pirouettes, whirls and glides over the ice as gracefully as a bird in flight . . . her lovely, blonde hair gleaming in all its glory.

"I love the way Drene with Hair Conditioning action leaves my hair so smooth and shining and well behaved," she says.

Whether you are a glamorous blonde like Sonja, a beauteous brunette or a radiant red-head, you too can bring out all the natural loveliness of your hair . . . reveal all its sparkling high lights . . . dramatize all its soft, thrilling texture . . . when you use Drene Shampoo with Hair Conditioning action.

No other shampoo leaves your hair more lustrous, yet so easy to manage.

★ TIME OUT BETWEEN TAKES! Technicolor cameras demand perfection. And a movie star's hair must always be radiantly clean. Drene is not a soap shampoo . . . never leaves dulling film on hair as all soaps do . . . actually reveals as much as 33 per cent more lustre than any soap or soap shampoo. And Drene removes unsightly dandruff flakes the first time you use it. Sonja favors this softly-curled hair-do for lively action in front of the cameras. You'll like it especially for active sports and other informal occasions.

★ TABLE FOR TWO! Sonja's blonde beauty is just as glamorous in real life. For that "special evening", try the simple, but elegant up-do Sonja models here. It's so easy to fix when you use Drene with Hair Conditioning action. Comb hair up to crown, anchor, arrange in gleaming curls.

Drene Shampoo

with Hair Conditioning Action

"HUNGRY, HONEY?"

GIRL: No, I'm not hungry. Just looking.

CUPID: Just looking, she says! "Lovelorn Maiden Gazes Yearningly at Valentine, and says she's—"

GIRL: Smart-aleck! Know-it-all! Instead of poking fun at me, you might try to help!

CUPID: Me help you? Why don't you stop moping long enough to help yourself? Smile at men. Gleam at 'em, give 'em the old glitter. They'll eat it up!

GIRL: And then have stomach-ache! You should see my smile, Cupid. Looks as though it got dragged along a country road. I clean my teeth faithfully, but—

CUPID: No sparkle, eh? And "pink" on your tooth brush?

GIRL: Well, now that I think of it—

CUPID: Now that you think of it! You beanhead! "Pink" is a warning to see your dentist. Let him figure out what's what. He may say it's just a case of soft foods robbing your gums of exercise. If so, he'll probably suggest "the helpful stimulation of Ipana and massage."

GIRL: And then, as I'm walking out, he'll hand me a box containing one bright smile—

CUPID: Nitwit, bright smiles depend largely on firm, healthy gums. Ipana not only cleans teeth—it's designed, with gentle massage, to help gums. If your dentist suggests massage with Ipana, start right in ... and Baby, you'll be on the way to a smile that'll have men eating their hearts out for you!

For the Smile of Beauty—

IPANA AND MASSAGE

Product of Bristol-Myers

METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER'S
LION'S ROAR

Published in this space every month

The greatest star of the screen!

This is the year of "The Yearling" and this month we're going to let a number of America's famous authors tell you about M-G-M's finest picture.

★ ★ ★ ★

All these writers saw the preview of "The Yearling" and it's a privilege to have them as our guest columnists.

THORNTON DELEHANTY of "Redbook Magazine": "Heart-warming story, and superb acting and production. 'The Yearling' is an enthralling film, a masterpiece."

★ ★ ★ ★

LOUELLA PARSONS, Hollywood's famed columnist: "A tender, true and really lovely picture—one you will thank M-G-M for making . . . I laughed at it and wept at it and loved every minute of it and I think you will too. Claude Jarman, Jr., as 'Jody' is great!"

★ ★

URSULA PARROTT: "An enchanting background of woodland and wilderness, photographed in Technicolor so subtly perfect it deepens and intensifies every mood of the story."

★ ★ ★ ★

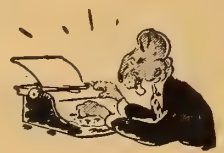
OCTAVUS ROY COHEN: "The outstanding feature of 'The Yearling' is (to my way of thinking) the superlative performance of Jane Wyman as Ma Baxter. She plays an exacting and difficult role with superb restraint and dynamic power."

★ ★

BENNETT CERF, author and columnist: "If there is any justice in Hollywood, 'The Yearling' should waltz off with just about all the Oscars in sight."

★ ★ ★ ★

And that's why: This is the year of "The Yearling"!



—Leo

★ ★ ★ ★

"The Yearling", starring Gregory Peck and Jane Wyman, is a Clarence Brown production. The cast also includes Claude Jarman, Jr., as "Jody", Clem Bevans, Margaret Wycherly, Forrest Tucker. Screen play by Paul Osborn, based on the Pulitzer Prize Novel by Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings. Directed by Clarence Brown, produced by Sidney Franklin. A Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture in Technicolor.

FEBRUARY, 1947

modern screen

the friendly magazine

stories

"BLESS THEIR LITTLE POINTED HEADS!" ... by June Allyson 28
END OF A DREAM (Tyrone Power) ... by Hedda Hopper 32
THE FLYING FILTHY FIVE (Tyrone Power-Cesar Romero) ... by Cesar Romero 34
ABOUT VAN, EVIE AND KEENAN ... by Ed Sullivan 36
WE'RE PROUD OF YOU, JUNE (June Haver) ... by Abigail Putnam 38
NONE BUT THE LONELY HEART (Cary Grant) ... by Billy Rose 40
UNSENTIMENTAL GENTLEMAN (Bing Crosby) ... by Jane Wilkie 42
BE MY VALENTINE! (Bob Mitchum-Esther Williams-Yvonne de Carlo) ... 44
MAN HUNT! (James Mason) ... by Virginia Wilson 46
THIS IS LANA! (Lana Turner) ... by Ida Zeitlin 48
WANTED: ONE GUARDIAN ANGEL (Glenn Ford-Eleanor Powell) by George Benjamin 50
"SURE, I'LL TALK ABOUT GUY!" (Guy Madison) ... by Henry Willson 54
IT SHOULDN'T HAPPEN TO A DUCK! (Kathryn Grayson) ... by Howard Sharpe 56
GREGORY PECK LIFE STORY (concluded) ... by Kirtley Baskette 58 LITTLE MISS BREATHLESS (Elizabeth Taylor) ... by Irene Kane 60

color pages

JUNE ALLYSON in M-G-M's "The Secret Heart" ... 28
TYRONE POWER in 20th-Fox's "The Razor's Edge" ... 32
VAN JOHNSON in M-G-M's "High Barbaree" ... 36
KEENAN WYNN, M-G-M Star ... 36
JUNE HAVER in 20th-Fox's "I Wonder Who's Kissing Her Now" ... 69
LANA TURNER in M-G-M's "Green Dolphin Street" ... 48
GLENN FORD in Columbia's "Framed" ... 50
GUY MADISON in RKO's "Honeymoon" ... 54
KATHRYN GRAYSON in M-G-M's "It Happened in Brooklyn" ... 57
ELIZABETH TAYLOR in M-G-M's "The Rich, Full Life" ... 60

features

GOOD NEWS ... by Louella Parsons 4
PICTURE OF THE MONTH: "Humoresque" ... selected by Dorothy Kilgallen 14
EDITORIAL PAGE ... 27

departments

REVIEWS: ... by Virginia Wilson 16
INFORMATION DESK: ... 26
BEAUTY: "Use Your Head!" ... 62
FASHION: ... by Constance Bartel 69
FAN CLUBS: ... by Shirley Frohlich 82
RADIO: Radio Award ... by Ed Sullivan 84
CO-ED: ... by Jean Kinkead 92
MUSIC: "Sweet and Hot" ... by Leonard Feather 110
COOKING: "The Way To A Man's Heart" ... 112

COVER PORTRAIT OF JUNE ALLYSON
BY NIKOLAS MURAY

ALBERT P. DELACORTE, Executive Editor HENRY P. MALMGREEN, Editor

MAGDA MASKEL, western manager
JANE WILKIE, western editor
MIRIAM GHIDALIA, associate editor
BERYL STOLLER, assistant editor
OTTO STORCH, art director
BILL WEINBERGER, art editor
LAYNG MARTINE, promotion director
CONSTANCE BARTEL, fashion director
JEAN KINKEAD, contributing editor
CARL SCHROEDER, editorial consultant
GUS GALE, staff photographer
BOB BEERMAN, staff photographer
SHIRLEY FROHLICH, fan club director
BEVERLY LINET, information desk
CHARLES SAXON, cartoon editor

POSTMASTER: Please send notice on Form 3578 and copies returned under Label Form 3579 to 149 Madison Avenue, New York 16, New York

Vol. 34, No. 3, February, 1947. Copyright, 1947, the Dell Publishing Co., Inc., 149 Madison Ave., New York. Published monthly. Printed in U. S. A. Published simultaneously in the Dominion of Canada. International copyright secured under the provisions of the Revised Convention for the Protection of Literary and Artistic Works. Office of publication at Washington and South Aves., Dunellen, N. J. Chicago Advertising office, 360 N. Michigan Ave., Chicago 1, Illinois. Single copy price, 15c in U. S. and Canada. Subscriptions in U. S. A. and Canada $1.80 a year; elsewhere $2.80 a year. Entered as second class matter Sept. 18, 1930, at the post office, Dunellen, N. J., under Act of March 3, 1879. The publishers accept no responsibility for the return of unsolicited material. Names of characters used in semi-fictional matter are fictitious. If the name of any living person is used it is purely a coincidence. Trademark No. 301778.

You'll share the intimate secrets of an amazing love affair!

M-G-M PRESENTS

CLAUDETTE COLBERT · WALTER PIDGEON
JUNE ALLYSON

"The Secret Heart"

A ROBERT Z. LEONARD PRODUCTION

with LIONEL BARRYMORE · ROBERT STERLING · MARSHALL THOMPSON

Screen Play by WHITFIELD COOK and ANNE MORRISON CHAPIN
Based Upon an Original Story and Adaptation by ROSE FRANKEN and WILLIAM BROWN MELONEY
Directed by ROBERT Z. LEONARD Produced by EDWIN H. KNOPF • AN M-G-M PICTURE

LOUELLA PARSONS' GOOD NEWS

and party postscripts

ONCE AGAIN, OUR OWN INCOMPARABLE LOUELLA PARSONS COMES THROUGH WITH THE INSIDE, INTIMATE INFO IN THAT ETERNALLY FASCINATING QUESTION, "WHAT'S NEW IN HOLLYWOOD?"

One and all were invited to the Press Photographers' Ball at Ciro's with the request that you "come dressed as your suppressed desire." Here, E. Williams and hubby Ben Gage make like a siren and a schoolboy.

Sonny Tufts insisted that gaucho Cesar Romero join him in making a gruesome twosome as a pair of high flying deep sea divers. P.S. Sonny's gone gunning for a fox on his farm—with a bow and arrow!

■ If you believe all you've read about the separations of Ty Power and Annabella and Gene Tierney and Oleg Cassini, you must be as mixed up as a jigsaw puzzle.

In all my years of covering movie news I've never read so much "stuff" without an ounce of truth. Oh, some of the yarns skimmed around the truth, but in my book, a half-truth is no better than an out and out lie.

Take that well splashed yarn that Ty and Gene would be married as soon as they were free from their respective mates. As the fellow says on the radio, DON'T YOU BELIEVE IT!

It made a hot story, I'll admit, that Ty and Gene had fallen "madly in love" during the making of "The Razor's Edge."

It also made a sizzling yarn that Oleg Cassini would set off plenty of firecrackers in his divorce action.

So I asked him pointblank if he thought Gene and Ty had fallen in love during the making of their biggest picture together.

He said, "I do not. Louella, this is what I believe: I think both Gene and Power had their hearts wrapped up in the roles they were creating. With so many deep and real love scenes to portray, it was natural that a genuine sympathy should spring up between them and that they might lunch together and have many conferences about their script."

As for Oleg setting off a powder keg when Gene files for divorce, he says, "Nonsense. I shall put nothing in the way of her obtaining her freedom. Gene and I were happy for many wonderful years. If that happiness has fled, there is nothing to be done about it except for both of us to pick up the pieces and make new lives for ourselves."

Why were Gene and Oleg so long in separating after the first rumors of "trouble" broke? I, personally, believe that their child held them together for as long as possible.

No matter what reason is ever given for the break between Ty and Annabella, I'll always believe the real one was the long enforced separation the war years brought to them.

Tyrone came back from the war a different boy than the one who went away. Before his days in the service came, I think he had been dependent on Annabella. But the war gave him a new self-confidence. He came back to Hollywood a far more mature person mentally, spiritually and physically than when he went away.

"Yo-ho-ho and a bottle of rum . . ." Two dashing desperadoes—Mr. and Mrs. Desi Arnaz. At long last, Lucille's gotten boss Louis Mayer's permission to go east next year to appear in a play.

Lay that whistle down, June Haver—David Rose is a musician, remember? Girl Scout Junie wears the uniform bestowed by her Rock Island friends on her recent trip home.

Meanwhile, a new career and interest on the stage had sprung up for Annabella. Her closest friends were people who lived in the East—particularly the Vincent Astors. The big comfortable home where the Powers had entertained so often was boarded up.

Several times after their break, Ty was seen dining with Lana Turner. But I wouldn't put too much stock in THAT romance, either.

If there IS a new, big romance in Gene Tierney's life, I think you will find that the man is a well (Continued on next page)

June Allyson's no glad-hander, but the cute little "Shriner" was kept busy all evening greeting the many Powell friends. Chivalrous Dick, who loves the sea, sold his yacht 'cause wifie got so-o-o seasick.

After four months of wedded bliss, Bob Hutton and "the woman I love," Cleatus Caldwell, still have that honeymoon glaze. Though Bob came as a sheik, he had eyes for no one but his personal harem favorite.

With the birth of her baby one month off, Jeanne Crain made a lovely Gold Rush gal. Hubby Paul Brinkman is thrilled over it, but objects to Mrs. B.'s new pet—a lion cub which waits for them in their car!

LOUELLA PARSONS' GOOD NEWS

and party postscripts

Jimmy and Harry Ritz surround sombrero'd Tony Martin, who, in turn, surrounds pretty Wilma Francis at the opening of a new night club, "The Stables." Tony's been seen with Florence Pritchett and Linda Brent.

known millionaire who has been carrying around a frustrated love for her for several years.

STRONG-MINDED JUNIE . . . Little Junie Haver called me to say that everyone can stop guessing about whom she is going to marry—and when.

"I am not marrying Dr. Duzik," she said, "and I am not marrying Dave Rose. In fact, I have made up my mind that I won't marry anyone for five years."

June is a youngster who knows her own mind—but I've heard girls say that before and then get married within five weeks or five days.

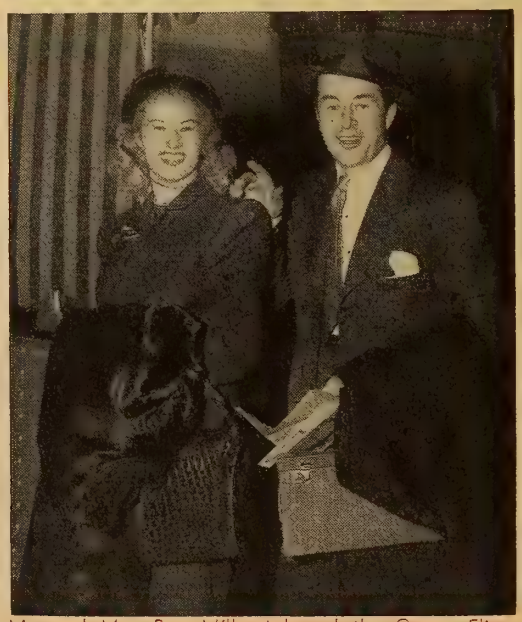
HUTTON HAM . . . Never let it be said that Betty Hutton hasn't a wonderful sense of humor. A few days before her baby was born, Betty said:

"Louella, what do you bet this baby isn't such a big ham it waits until a Sunday to be born so it can get a break on your radio show?"

One of the cutest presents Betty received at her baby shower was a diamond engagement ring which Ridgely Howard, son and heir of Dorothy Lamour and Bill Howard, presented to her. So Betty's girl baby is probably the first young lady in the world, outside of royalty, ever BORN engaged.

(Continued on page 8)

Dorothy Lamour took her son, John Ridgely Howard, to Betty Hutton's baby shower, and showed off his miniature platinum cuff links. Lucky little John has his own circus: It's painted on the walls of his nursery.



Mr. and Mrs. Ray Milland board the Queen Elizabeth for a long-promised trip to Europe. Ray bought a house in southern France, spent a month in Paris.

There's more to "The Shocking Miss Pilgrim"...than meets the eye!

Shameless?
Blameless?
Nameless?

BETTY GRABLE and DICK HAYMES in

MUSIC BY George Gershwin
LYRICS BY Ira Gershwin

"FOR YOU, FOR ME, FOR EVERMORE"
"CHANGING MY TUNE"
"AREN'T YOU KIND OF GLAD WE DID?"
"WALTZING IS BETTER SITTING DOWN"

The Shocking MISS PILGRIM

IN TECHNICOLOR

20th CENTURY-FOX

with
ANNE REVERE · ALLYN JOSLYN · GENE LOCKHART

Written for the Screen and Directed by GEORGE SEATON Produced by WILLIAM PERLBERG

From a Story by Ernest and Frederica Maas · Dances Staged by Hermes Pan · Costumes Designed by Orry Kelly

Have you seen Darryl F. Zanuck's production of W. Somerset Maugham's "THE RAZOR'S EDGE"?

Gary Cooper's deep in thought as Claudette Colbert and Joan Crawford chat during a Screen Actors' Guild meeting. Claudette's planning to play a murderess in her next pic, "The Endorsement," just bought a $3,000 red leather upholstered car.

Danny Kaye tuned his "A" string with Vaughn Monroe when he appeared on V's radio program. Danny's excited about the many roles he plays in his new "Mitty" pic, more excited over role of a soon-to-be father.

The Brown Derby nearly had a barber shop quartet when this gang got together: Reg Gardiner, Ronald Colman and Adolphe Menjou. Ronald plays his first role in 2 years as the lead in "The Late George Apley."

LOUELLA PARSONS' GOOD NEWS

and party postscripts

GODDARD VS. HAYWORTH! . . . The battle of the "Carmens" is on. One studio is determined to make it with Rita Hayworth as the star and an independent producer is just as sure that his version, with Paulette Goddard, will be tops.

Both would be good as the undying "Carmen" although entirely different. Which is your choice?

HUTTON'S HAPPINESS . . . SOME frustrated love stories eventually get around to happy endings. I'm speaking, particularly, of Cleatus Caldwell and Robert Hutton who, I believe, were in love for two years before they got around to that Los Vegas elopement.

Certainly, there was never anybody really important in Cleatus' life. With Bob, it was different. For a little while, he thought he was very much in love with Lana Turner.

When that flame finally died down, he made every effort to get Cleatus back. But her pride was hurt. Although she loved him, she couldn't bring herself to forgive and forget.

And, then, one night I ran into them together, again, at a party. I've never seen two people so happy. They had gotten together and decided that they were acting like kids.

Bob told me, "That's all behind us now. If Cleatus will say 'Yes' we're headed for a minister." I couldn't have been LESS surprised when they eloped to Las Vegas ten days later.

I believe they will be very happy. Cleatus is a very beautiful girl and she is constantly getting offers to test for the screen. But she isn't interested. She (Continued on page 10)

He's a hit with the misses...
They go for his kisses...
He's the Woman's Home Companion!

Eddie's a howl as the oil well millionaire who becomes first prize on a radio show . . . and the boy friend of 5,000,000 husband-hunting females!

"Ladies' Man"

Wait till you SEE Spike Jones play "Cocktails For Two" and "Holiday For Strings" in the year's first romantic-musical fun riot!

starring

Eddie BRACKEN · Cass DALEY · Virginia WELLES · and Spike JONES and his City Slickers with Johnny COY Virginia FIELD

Produced by Daniel DARE · Directed by William D. RUSSELL

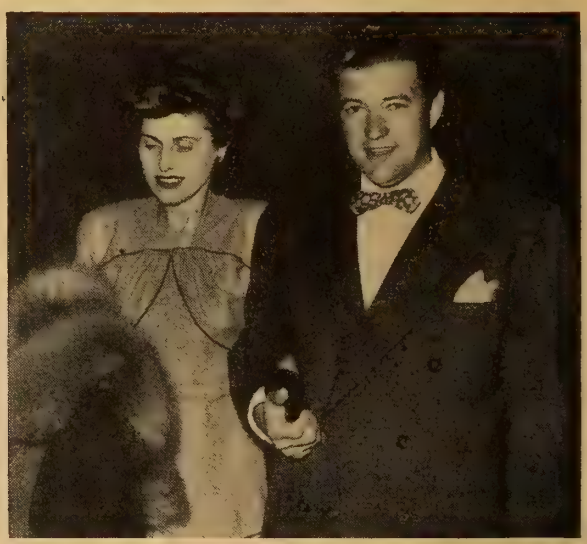
Screen Play by Edmund Beloin, Jack Rose and Lewis Meltzer · A Paramount Picture

LOUELLA PARSONS' GOOD NEWS

and party postscripts

Trying out Charles Coburn's monocle at the Screen Guild broadcast is Shirley Temple, who's been married over a year now, and asks her directors to please call her "Mrs. Agar!"

Sonja Henie and beau Stewart Barthelmess went western at the "Stables" opening in Palm Springs. Sonja, a popular gal, had been going with Van Johnson and Cary Grant before she started "going steady" with Stewart.



Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Morgan attended the Ice Follies opening, gossiped during intermission about Dennis' new picture, "My Wild Irish Rose." Ruptured ear drum won't interfere, says D.

(Continued from page 8)

wants to devote her time to being Mrs. Bob Hutton and to her two children by her previous marriage to Ken Murray. This is the right way to handle Bob, if you ask me. I think the trouble with his marriage to Natalie Thompson was that she was overly eager for a movie career of her own during the time they were married.

Guess who was the first to send them a wire of congratulations after the wedding? Natalie, herself—the former Mrs. Hutton.

PHOTOGS GO PARTYING . . . The candid cameramen and—BABIES, of all people—held the social spotlight in Hollywood this month, and I'm not kidding. In going over my date book I noticed one baby "shower" after the other and I can tell you that all the cute baby shops in these parts were practically sold out, what with the rush to buy presents for the new arrivals or about-to-be arrivals.

We'll get around to the infants in just a minute.

First, I want to tell you about all the beautiful babes who showed up for the annual blow-out hosted by the Society of Hollywood Press Photographers at Ciro's, their old stamping ground.

The invitations read, "A costume affair—come dressed as your suppressed desire—or what you would like to have been if you weren't what you are."

(Continued on page 12)

Just two years ago, Mrs. Rex Harrison (Lilli Palmer) was having her baby during a London blitz. Now she's safe in H'wood (here at the Crillon) and starring in "Cloak and Dagger."

"There ought to be a law AGAINST KNOWING THE THINGS I FOUND OUT ABOUT MEN!"
THE MORE YOU KNOW ABOUT LOVE.. THE MORE YOU'LL LOVE THIS PICTURE!
IDA LUPINO · ROBERT ALDA
ANDREA KING · BRUCE BENNETT
"The Man I Love"
WARNER HIT
Hear and hum! 'The Man I Love' 'Lisa' 'Just My Bill' 'Why Was I Born' 'Body and Soul' 'If I Could Be With You'
Directed by RAOUL WALSH
SCREEN PLAY BY CATHERINE TURNEY • ADAPTATION BY JO PAGANO AND CATHERINE TURNEY • FROM A NOVEL BY MARITTA WOLFF
Produced by ARNOLD ALBERT

Come Join Us

it's the BEST thing that ever happened

MYRNA LOY

FREDRIC MARCH

DANA ANDREWS

TERESA WRIGHT

VIRGINIA MAYO

HOAGY CARMICHAEL

and introducing CATHY O'DONNELL

Great ENTERTAINMENT

Yvonne De Carlo's doing the town with Turhan Bey now, but for competition, there's Burt Lancaster, Sterling Hayden, Howard Hughes.

That certainly gave the boys and girls plenty of leeway and don't think they didn't take advantage of it.

There were at least a dozen shieks in the crowd, and very good looking ones, too. I didn't recognize Bob Hutton with a pointed beard. His bride, Cleatus, was at his side as a harem favorite and Cleatus is just the girl who could have made the grade, too! Another sheik floating around was Charles Korvin and I heard Bob tell Cleatus to be careful she remembered which harem she belonged in.

Jane Withers, who looked prettier than she ever looked in her life, was Madame Pompadour. "I always wanted to be Madame Pompadour," little Janie said, "a siren, a lady of the court"—and she looked it. She was as cute as the proverbial bug's ear.

In extreme contrast was Shirley Temple, who came as Alice in Wonderland with a very long, blonde wig. She was much blonder than the color of her hair now and Shirley admitted that when she was a little girl she had hoped to retain her very blonde locks. "But they went and turned dark on me," she admitted with that famous Temple pout.

Shirley was dancing with her boss, David Selznick, and let me say that David, who got in so bad with photographers a few months back, was given a royal reception by the boys. To say the producer of "Duel in the Sun" is a good sport is putting it mildly. He took a full page ad in the program with Bruce Bailey's picture saying, "Producer with a short right will shortly return to his home gymnasium to make a Selznick International picture." Bruce is the boy who is supposed to have traded a few impolite punches with Selznick several months ago.

Dorothy Lamour came as a bearded lady, of all things. She was all done up in spangles, all right, but she didn't have the nerve to take the beard out of her pocketbook. Every once in awhile she would take it out and wear it as a "bracelet" over her wrist.

Apparently, every young girl in Hollywood wants to be a siren, for there were plenty of them in the crowd. Beverly Tyler was dressed to the teeth as Catherine of Russia. She was with Rory Calhoun, who was all done up in a western costume, along with another good looking cowboy, Guy Madison.

Andrea King looked out of this world as Lillian Russell on the arm of her husband, posing as Diamond Jim Brady. Cesar Romero, just back from South America with Ty Power, wore a gaucho costume he bought there, complete with a whip and everything. Glenn Ford was just "a sporty guy" while Eleanor Powell was a modest little Chinese gal.

The funniest costume was worn by Joan Davis—a plain skirt and a sweat shirt and she labeled herself "A sweater girl." "If you don't think that's a supressed ambition, you're crazy," she yelled.

Sonny Tufts wore a deep sea diving costume and I kidded him, saying, "Bet you wore that to cover up your added avoirdupois." That same night I had scolded Sonny on the radio for putting on so much weight. I tried to encourage him by saying I thought he looked thinner than in his new picture, "Swell Guy." "It's just an optical illusion," he sighed, "but I am dieting—as of your broadcast!"

Jackie Cooper was a "grown-up" Skippy in a costume exactly like the one he wore as a little boy. And there was no more beautiful girl present than Ann Rutherford, who looked ravishing as a Star and Garter girl. It was her first appearance since she announced her separation from her husband, David May, and her escort was Rand Brooks.

Turhan Bey expressed himself as an African hunter and if you want to know, he was romantically stalking pretty Audrey Totter all evening. These two seem to have discovered each other, but probably by the time this is printed, it will be a romance of the far away past.

Bonita Granville, so happy and in love she can hardly keep her feet out of the clouds, came as a cigarette girl. She was with the wealthy Texan, Jack Wrather—and they are a love match if I ever saw one. That's why she came as a cigarette girl—it's a "match"—get the point? I suppose I could add, that "Smoke (Continued on page 86)

Mrs. Richard Green didn't mind Dick's growing a mustache for his "Forever Amber" role, but she does dislike that patch on his chin!

... and it happens to YOU in

"THE BEST YEARS OF OUR LIVES"

Produced by SAMUEL GOLDWYN
Directed by WILLIAM WYLER
Screen play by ROBERT E. SHERWOOD
From a novel by MacKINLAY KANTOR
Released thru RKO Radio Pictures

IN THE Goldwyn MANNER!

dorothy kilgallen selects "humoresque"

■ It is a difficult fact for the average Saturday night moviegoer, the average $40-a-week shoe clerk, or the average budget-weary housewife to recognize with much enthusiasm, but there does exist in this world a group of people who are wretchedly unhappy because all they have is money. They live in sparkling splendor, they ride in gleaming motor cars, their wrists flash with gold and there is always more where that came from—and as they pass by, it is only natural for the man on the curbstone to look with envy and wistfully sigh: "What a life!"

Yet, impossible as it is to say without pitching into a quagmire of clichés, often these rich are desperately unhappy, often they cry into their silken pillows because they do not own such unfashionable properties as honesty and unselfishness and usefulness and true devotion, which they have found to be unpurchasable in the stylish world they whirl about in.

This is the "message" of "Humoresque," Joan Crawford's newest picture. Put in a few words, it sounds a little saccharine, but on celluloid, in the script devised by Clifford Odets and Zachary Gold, it is an (Continued on page 24)

Helen Wright (Joan Crawford), fabulously wealthy patron of the arts, is at first only interested in Paul Boray's (John Garfield) career as a volinist, but later falls in love with him. Paul's best friend (Oscar Levant) and his parents (J. Carroll Naish and Ruth Nelson) vehemently veto the match.

"You can't push me around!"

Directed by JOHN CROMWELL
Produced by
SIDNEY BIDDELL
A COLUMBIA PICTURE

movie reviews

by virginia wilson

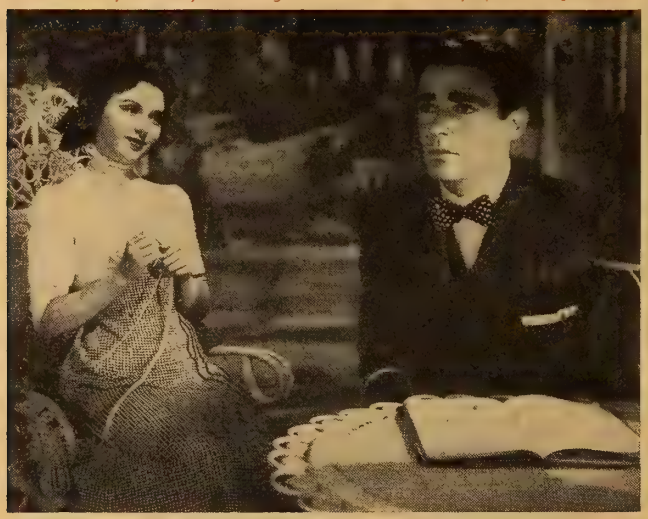
"MY BROTHER TALKS TO HORSES"

■ Maybe you don't think a little boy can talk to horses—and have them talk back. But you'll believe it when you see Lewie Penrose (Butch Jenkins) do it. Let me tell you how it happens, back in 1909.

The Penrose family have lived in Baltimore for a long time. When Mr. Penrose was alive they had lots of money, but now they only have what John (Peter Lawford) makes as a bank clerk, and that isn't much. Of course there's the board money Mr. Puddy (O. Z. Whitehead) pays them, but he's irregular about it. Puddy is an inventor, and he's working on an edible beer bottle. So far, it has resulted only in a series of explosions, and the loss of Mrs. Penrose's (Spring Byington) best Lowestoft platter. John, too, is working on an invention. Radio, he calls it. Everybody thinks it's sort of a silly name.

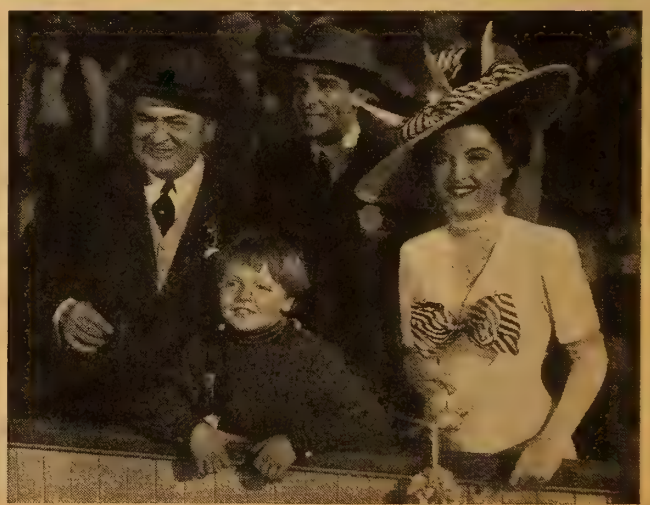
Not Lewie, though. Lewie thinks everything John does is just right. He loves his older brother so much that he even confides in him about the (Continued on page 18)

John Penrose (Peter Lawford) has been engaged to Martha (Beverly Tyler) for two years, but they can't get married till John earns more money. Everyone laughs at his invention, "that silly radio."



Little brother Lewis (Butch Jenkins) has always been fond of animals, so he isn't too surprised to find, one day, that horses will talk to him.

Big brother John isn't too excited about Lewis' talent until Lewis explains that race horses confide in him who's going to win each race.



Race horse owner (Edward Arnold), John and Martha (for whom the money would come in handy) are wild with suspense at the track. But not Lew. What's so odd about talking to horses???

Benedict Bogeaus presents

GREGORY PECK
JOAN BENNETT

in Ernest Hemingway's

"The Macomber Affair"

Only Ernest Hemingway, author of "The Killers" and "For Whom the Bell Tolls" could have written of love like this!

Also starring

ROBERT PRESTON with REGINALD DENNY · JEAN GILLIE · Directed by ZOLTAN KORDA

Produced by BENEDICT BOGEAUS and CASEY ROBINSON · Released thru United Artists

I never should have said...

"What kind of Kleenex do you want?"

NOW I've heard everything! jeered the little woman. Maybe you think all tissues are Kleenex*, but my skin says different! If you had a faceful of makeup you'd insist on a soft tissue—and you'd know there's no other kind of Kleenex!

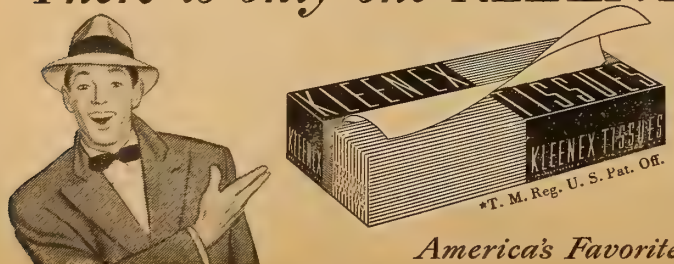
Clowning again snorted Sue's mother. And with me sneezing cold germs all over. Young man, to hear you talk a body'd think Kleenex was just like any tissue. Well, my nose knows there's only one Kleenex. You'll learn!

It's a greenhorn you are about tissues, sir! smiled our Nora. What other tissues comes poppin' up so handy-like—one at a time? None but Kleenex! 'Tis by that Kleenex box you'd be knowin' there's only one Kleenex. But whish-h-t! There's still another way . . .

Your eyes tell you! Hold a Kleenex Tissue up to a light. See any lumps, or weak spots? Divil a bit! You see Kleenex quality smilin' through—so you're sure Kleenex must be heavenly soft. And husky! Faith, your own eyes tell you there's no tissue just like Kleenex!

Now I know better...

There is only one KLEENEX



America's Favorite Tissue

(Continued from page 16)

horses. "They talk to me," Lewie says. "They tell me things."

"What kind of things?" John is skeptical.

"Well, if they're milk wagon horses, they tell me how hard they've been working. If they're race horses they tell me who's going to win the race."

John is interested, but not impressed. He has something more important on his mind—Martha (Beverly Tyler), his fiancée. They have been engaged for two years now, and it looks as if they might stay engaged forever, since they have no money to marry on. Now if someone rich would just see the possibilities of John's "radio!"

Lewie, with his passion for horses, persuades John and Martha to go out to the race track one afternoon. He picks all the winners, by asking the horses about it. This simple device attracts the attention of some professional gamblers, with extraordinary results all around.

I suppose you'd call this a fantasy. But it all seems completely real and heart-warming when you see it on the screen.—M-G-M

THE WICKED LADY

Wicked she was, but fascinating too, this lovely lady turned highwayman. She lived in England's seventeenth century, along with a handsome rogue called Captain Jackson (James Mason). Her name is Barbara Worth (Margaret Lockwood), and she's a woman men fall in love with too quickly for their own good. She is passionate, yet ruthless, seizing life greedily, selfishly.

She is invited to the castle of Sir Ralph Skelton (Griffith Jones) to be the maid of honor at his marriage to her best friend, Caroline (Patricia Roc). But when the marriage takes place a week later, it is Barbara who is the bride, while the broken-hearted Caroline serves as maid of honor. Barbara doesn't love Ralph, only the money and position she can have through him. She takes him from Caroline as coldly and calmly as she later snatches rings from her robbery victims.

Barbara turns highwayman by accident. The one thing she values is a diamond brooch left her by her mother. When she loses it gambling, she disguises herself as the notorious Captain Jackson, who is the best known highwayman of his day. Then she holds up the coach of the woman who won it from her. She gets the broach back, plus some other jewelry, but the important thing, she finds, is the thrill of power it gives her. She loves danger.

Soon Barbara is leading a completely double life. By day she is the gracious Lady Skelton, dispensing alms to the villagers. By night she is a slim, masked highwayman on a big, black horse, bringing terror to travellers. It is inevitable that she and Captain Jackson should meet, and when they do, they join forces. Jackson falls in love with her, which is a bad mistake for any man to make.

Wicked Lady: Capt. Jackson (James Mason) woos dashing Barbara Worth (M. Lockwood).

Soon murder enters the picture. Murder by gunshot, murder by poison, murder by knife. Barbara herself is in love now, with Kit Locksby (Michael Rennie) and there are so many people who stand in her way. Ruthless as ever, she determines to dispose of them all.—Univ.

THAT'S A JOKE, SON

Not since General Lee or Scarlett O'Hara has there been as famous a Southerner as Senator Claghorn. One Sunday night he boomed "That's a joke, son!" into Fred Allen's microphone, and the whole country roared with laughter. Kenny Delmar, who plays him on the air, is now starred in this picture about the man who thinks South Dakota ought to be moved down with the rest of the solid South.

Claghorn is just plain mister, not Senator, when the story opens. He isn't even a politician—just a mighty big talker. Not even that, when his wife, Magnolia (Una Merkel) is around. Magnolia stands for no nonsense from the rest of the family. That includes forbidding her daughter, Mary Lou (June Lockhart) to see her best beau, Jeff (Kenneth Farrell).

"I married a penniless good-for-nothing," says Magnolia grimly, "and I'm going to see that my daughter doesn't make the same mistake."

Jeff may be penniless, but he's not a good-for-nothing. His war record is fine, and all he needs is a little financial backing to get started in business. He wants to run a frozen food truck, and has it all planned out. Only the money is lacking.

One day the members of Magnolia's Women's Club accidentally get full of bourbon due to Claghorn's mistaking it for the grape juice he was supposed to put in the punch. They decide to run Magnolia for Senator. Meanwhile, Claghorn, also full of bourbon although not accidentally, gives Jeff fifteen hundred dollars—all the money he has in the world—to start in business.

That leads, surprisingly, to Claghorn running for Senator. Not that he wants to—he's too afraid of Magnolia. But things move too fast for him. Dan Healey (Douglas Dumbrille), the local machine boss, suspects that Claghorn may be elected. His somewhat unorthodox campaigning methods seem to be winning an amazing amount of support. So Healey has him kidnapped. It takes a dog named Daisy, and Magnolia's complete change of heart, to achieve a happy ending.—PRC

It's A Joke, Son: Senators' Claghorn (Kenny Delmar) and Leeds (Jimmy Conlin) plot politics.

You can catch a cold shoulder in mink, Pet!

YOU should be a heartthrob in mink, Honey. But that dreamy coat can leave you out in the cold if...

If you forget that even in winter there's a heat wave under your arms. For odor can form without any noticeable moisture. And heavy furs... warm woolen clothes... increase your chance of offending.

So always... after your bath washes away past perspiration... guard against future underarm odor. Use Mum.

Mum better because it's Safe

Product of Bristol-Myers

1. Safe for skin. No irritating crystals. Snow-white Mum is gentle, harmless to skin.

2. Safe for clothes. No harsh ingredients in Mum to rot or discolor fine fabrics.

3. Safe for charm. Mum gives sure protection against underarm odor all day or all evening.

• • •

Mum is economical, too. Doesn't dry out in the jar—stays smooth and creamy. Quick, easy to use—even after you're dressed.

For Sanitary Napkins—Mum is gentle, safe, dependable... ideal for this use, too.

Head of the Class

For you (even though your Math's a little weak) if you keep your hair smooth and neat and sweet to see ... You'll rate A-plus with that dreamboat sitting next to you in class ... and what more can a girl ask?

Just keep your hair clean and shiny and leave the rest to DeLong Bob Pins, those indispensable allies. They keep stray locks in place because they have a

Stronger Grip
Won't Slip Out

No fear of DeLong Bob Pins losing this vise-like grip. Why? They're made of high-carbon steel.

Quality Manufacturers for Over 50 Years

BOB PINS . HAIR PINS SAFETY PINS
SNAPS PINS
HOOKS & EYES HOOK & EYE TAPES
SANITARY BELTS

The Shocking Miss Pilgrim: Cynthia (B. Grable) spurns John (Dick Haymes).

13 RUE MADELEINE

This saga of the Office of Strategic Services plays it straight, with a documentary but exciting effect. It follows the career of four recruits in the dangerous O.S.S. from the time they enter it until their objective is achieved. By then one of them has proved a traitor and another is his victim.

The four are Bob Sharkey (James Cagney), Suzanne De Bouchard (Annabella), Bill O'Connell (Richard Conte) and Jeff Lassiter (Frank Latimore). Suzanne hopes she will eventually be sent to her native France where she may find out what happened to her husband, reported missing. Young Jeff is anxious to do anything, anywhere. He has been turned down by the other services as 4-F, but he has qualities the O.S.S. can use. Sharkey is in charge of the group. He takes his duties and the rigorous training seriously. It's an intensive course, and it's made more serious by the fact that Sharkey has been told there is a German agent among them.

"You'll have to spot him for yourself," Giblin (Walter Abel), the boss, tells him. "And watch out for him. He knows what he's doing."

It's that which tips off Sharkey to the fact that Bill O'Connell is the agent. Bill is just a little too fast on the trigger, too sure of himself, to be new at the espionage game. When he and Jeff are sent on a test job, to steal papers from a defense factory, Bill accuses Jeff to protect himself. It's a typically German reaction.

But Giblin sends O'Connell to England along with the rest of the group. Through him they will feed false information to the Germans. The burning question is where the Second Front will be, and the Germans are making every desperate effort to find the answer. O'Connell and Jeff are sent together on a mission to Holland, because Sharkey hopes to convince the agent—and his higher-ups—that the Second Front will come there. On that mission, Jeff is murdered, because he suspects O'Connell. After that, Sharkey takes over. He'll get O'Connell if it's the last thing he does—and it almost is.—20th-Fox

THE SHOCKING MISS PILGRIM

The latest Betty Grable-Dick Haymes musical is based on as unlikely a subject as you can imagine: Women's Suffrage, no less, with la Grable making speeches about Rights For Women. And Dick singing songs to prove that woman's place is in the home. It's all very gay, if a trifle unexpected.

Miss Cynthia Pilgrim (Betty Grable) is the first graduate of the Packard Typewriting School in New York. In 1912 there were only a few typewriters in the country, and even fewer people who knew how to use them. The school gets a fine position for Cynthia as secretary to the head of the Pritchard shipping firm in Boston. But when she arrives she finds that John Pritchard (Dick Haymes) was under the impression that she was a man.

"I don't believe in women working in offices," John says firmly. "They're an upsetting influence." John's aunt Alice (Anne Revere), a militant suffragette who owns most of the company stock, overhears this remark. She is furious, and makes him hire Cynthia immediately. The men in the office resent her at first, particularly Saxon (Gene Lockhart) the office manager. He almost succeeds in getting her fired. Probably would have, if Cynthia hadn't gone walking Sunday on Boston Common. She meets John, who does a triple take, because Cynthia in a light chiffon dress with her blonde curls soft around her face, is quite different from the severely garbed Miss Pilgrim of the office. John falls in love.

Okay, that's fine, up to a point. Cynthia goes for her handsome employer, too. But then Suffrage rears its ugly head. Aunt Alice has found that beautiful Cynthia makes more converts to the Cause with one speech than Back Bay feminists do with a dozen. So Cynthia has to go on spending her evenings making speeches instead of making love, and John becomes more convinced than ever that a woman's place is in the home. For a while it looks as if they'd just never get together. Believe it or not, it's a small pocket knife that does the trick.

Gershwin melodies, and some particularly lovely Technicolor almost make up for the long skirts Betty wears throughout the picture.—20th-Fox.

THE LATE GEORGE APLEY

If anyone brings up that old heredity-versus-environment argument, you might point out the case of George Apley. George (Ronald Colman) is completely the product of his environment, which is Boston in the early 1900's. Smug, punc-

Yours FOR A 3¢ STAMP if you join the Book League of America now

--JUST PICK THE BOOK YOU WANT

HERE is a sensational offer! Pick any one of the four big best-sellers shown below. It's yours for just a 3c stamp, as a New Membership Gift from "America's Biggest Bargain Book Club"! These novels are best-sellers from coast to coast. Choose the one you want, for just a 3c stamp. Also pick the one you want as your first Selection, at the Club's bargain price. Take advantage of this amazing offer now!

YOUR 3¢ STAMP BRINGS YOU ANY ONE OF THESE SENSATIONAL BEST-SELLERS

THE STRANGE WOMAN

Angel or Devil . . . Which WAS She?

TO the New England world Jenny Hager was a righteous woman. But to the eight men who really knew her—father, husbands, sons, lovers—she was a shameless, passionate she-devil!

500,000 readers have gasped at this amazing character—soon to be portrayed on the screen by HEDY LAMARR in a $2,000,000 production!

THE FOXES OF HARROW

Flaming Passion in Wicked Old New Orleans!

DEVIL-MAY-CARE Stephen Fox landed in New Orleans, with a ten-dollar gold piece, a pearl stick-pin—and a swaggering audacity. But he gambled his way to wealth and power—won the blue-blooded Odalie—then her sister, Aurore—and finally, the sultry Desiree.

"As sheer entertainment it will take backwater from nothing."—Chicago Sun.

BEFORE THE SUN GOES DOWN

He Knew the Whole Town's Secrets!

AS a physician, Dan Field knew the intimate lives and loves of the townsfolk. Yet he hid a burning secret of his own—a forbidden love for the one woman he could not have!

"GEE! What a swell book!" says the Chicago Sun. Going like wildfire at publisher's price of $2.75 . . . winner of $145,000 in cash prizes!

IN A DARK GARDEN

Even War Could Not Crush Their Love!

JULIAN CHISHOLM sought escape from his passion for his brother's wife by studying medicine. Then he became a surgeon in the Confederate army, only to fall madly in love with Jane—who turned out to be a spy for the Union! Enemies in name, they shared a love so great that even the hatreds of war could not keep them apart..

"A beautiful love story . . . action-packed reading . . . never-ending suspense."

—Chicago Tribune.

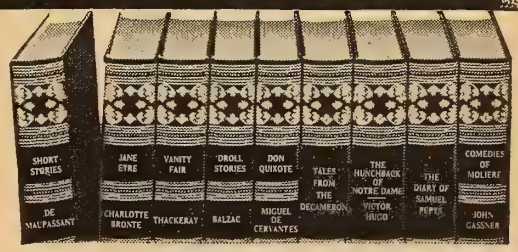
AND BEAUTIFUL BONUS BOOKS COME TO YOU FREE!

AS a member of "America's Biggest Bargain Book Club," you not only receive best-selling novels (like those shown above) by today's popular authors at the Club's bargain price—you ALSO receive FREE Bonus Books, masterpieces of world literature.

For every two regular Club Selections which you accept, you get one of these Bonus Books absolutely FREE. Typical examples of these classics are such works as Short Stories of DE MAUPASSANT; Best Known Works of SHAKESPEARE; Tales from the DECAMERON; Seven Famous FRENCH NOVELS; Best Known Works of ZOLA; JANE EYRE; THE HUNCHBACK OF NOTRE DAME, etc., etc.

These Free Bonus Books are handsomely and uniformly bound. Thus you steadily build an impressive, lifetime library of the greatest works of the greatest authors—a library that you will be proud to own and to display to others.



Your free "BONUS BOOKS" grow into a beautiful and impressive uniformly-bound library of great classics.

MEMBERSHIP IS FREE

WE want to give you, for just a 3c stamp, your choice of any of the 4 best-sellers shown at the top of this page—because they show the kind of books you can get at an amazing bargain price!

Membership in "America's Biggest Bargain Book Club" is FREE. And every month you may receive a popular best-seller by an author like Ben Ames Williams, John Steinbeck, Somerset Maugham, or Ernest Hemingway—selling at $2.50 and up in the publisher's edition. But YOU can get your copy for ONLY $1.49!

IN ADDITION, for every two Selections you accept, you get—FREE—a BONUS BOOK, a masterpiece by Poe, Balzac, Dumas, Ibsen, Voltaire, etc. These BONUS BOOKS are uniformly bound; they grow into an impressive lifetime library.

"IN AMERICA'S BIGGEST BARGAIN BOOK CLUB"

YOU DO NOT HAVE TO TAKE EVERY SELECTION

You do NOT have to accept each monthly Selection; only six of your own choice during the year to fulfill your membership requirement. And each month the Club's "Review" describes a number of other popular best-sellers; so that, if you prefer one of these to the regular Selection, you may choose it instead. There are no membership dues to pay; no further cost or obligation.

SEND NO MONEY—JUST A 3c STAMP

Send coupon without money—just enclose a 3c stamp. Indicate in coupon the book you want for that 3c stamp—and also indicate the book you want as your first Selection. When you realize that you can get popular books like these month after month at a tremendous saving—and that you ALSO get FREE bonus books—you will understand why this is "America's Biggest Bargain Book Club." Mail coupon now.

Book League of America, Dept. MM2
Garden City, N. Y.

Mail This Coupon to BOOK LEAGUE OF AMERICA
Dept. MM2, Garden City, N. Y.

I enclose a 3c stamp. Please send me the book named below:

.....
(Write title of one of books shown at top above)

Also enroll me free as a member of The Book League of America, and send me as my first Selection the following book:

.....
(Write title of another of books shown at top above)

For every two monthly selections I accept, I will receive, FREE, a BONUS BOOK. However, I do NOT have to accept each month's new selection, only six of my own choice during the year to fulfill my membership requirement. Each month I will receive the Club's "Review" describing a number of other popular best-sellers; so that if I prefer one of these to the regular Selection, I may choose it instead. I am to pay only $1.49 (plus few cents postage) for each Selection I accept. There are no membership dues for me to pay; no further cost or obligation.

MR. }
MRS. } .....
MISS } (Please print plainly)

ADDRESS.....

CITY ..... Zone No. (if any) STATE.....

Occupation ..... If under 21 age, please .....

Slightly higher in Canada. Address 105 Bond St., Toronto 2, Canada.

NOW YOU, TOO, CAN HAVE
FIFTH AVENUE'S FAVORITE FROCK
BY Bobby Lynn

Glamorous embroidered arrows accent the New York fashion highlights of this wonderful tattersall checked classic. The full shirt sleeves and collar are excitingly new . . . the slender, long line of the flyfront and braided belt is pure flattery for your figure. Be sure to check your color and size in the coupon!

ONLY $10.95

LYNN'S APPAREL, INC.
475 Fifth Ave.
New York 17, N.Y.

Please send me Bobby Lynn's FAVORITE FROCK at $10.95. I am enclosing check ☐ money order ☐

Sizes 10 12 14 16 18
Sizes 9 11 13 15 17

Color: (Write (1) for first choice, (2) for second choice). Aqua with red, oxford gray with red, maize with brown, natural with brown.

Name _____

Address _____ Zone _____

LYNN'S APPAREL, INC.
475 Fifth Avenue, New York 17, N.Y.

tilious, narrow to the point of stuffiness—that's George Apley. Yet underneath it all is a genuine love of people, and a desire to do what's best for everyone.

He is devoted to his calm, sweet wife, Catherine (Edna Best), and manages to be patient with his domineering sister, Amelia (Mildred Natwick). Yet he refuses to understand the wilfulness of his daughter, Eleanor (Peggy Cummins), who shocks him continually by her disregard for tradition. She has been known to proclaim that Boston is just like a savage tribe, with its worship of ancestors, and Harvard for a fetish.

At present Eleanor is absorbed in a young man named Howard Boulder (Charles Russell). He is an instructor at Harvard, which is good, but he went to Yale first, which is bad. Also, he is from New York. George Apley disapproves of New Yorkers—a flighty lot, with no morals or background! John (Richard Ney), Apley's son, has been worrying his father lately, too. Instead of dutifully becoming engaged to his third cousin, he has fallen in love with a girl from Worcester. He wants to marry her. In vain his father tells him the story of his own youth, when he wanted to marry an Irish girl from South Boston.

"You might have been very happy with her," John says rebelliously. George is shocked by this. One doesn't marry to be happy. "After all," he tells his son, "happiness is a very rare commodity. Especially in New England."

It is after George is turned down for the office of president of the Sunday Bird Watchers Club that he begins to have doubts of his infallibility. Perhaps John and Eleanor have the right to make their own decisions. . . .

The cast of "The Late George Apley" is superb. It includes Richard Haydn, Percy Waram and Vanessa Brown, as well as those already mentioned. Peggy Cummins makes a lively Eleanor, and Charles Russell is effective as her handsome, sardonic beau.—20th-Fox

SONG OF THE SOUTH

The new Walt Disney picture is a fascinating combination of live action and animated cartoons. It's in the cartoon sequences about Br'er Fox and Br'er Rabbit that the Disney genius shines brightest, however. They are based on the old Uncle Remus tales, which you've probably known and loved all your life.

Little Bobby (Bobby Driscoll) goes with his mother (Ruth Warrick) to visit his grandmother's plantation. Bobby is pretty unhappy because they've left Daddy at home, and what do a lot of women know about important things like fishing? The first night, he decides to run away, and go back home. The plantation turns out to be a lot bigger than he thought, and he gets lost. He wanders under the live-oak trees, a small, frightened figure, until he meets an old Negro whose name is Uncle Remus.

Uncle Remus (James Baskett) is as wise as he is old. He takes Bobby to his cabin, and tells him an absorbing tale about Br'er Rabbit. (Here's where we get into animation, and it's wonderful!) This rabbit is a cocky little creature, who spends his time outwitting his enemy, Br'er Fox. Sometimes his cockiness gets him awfully close to turning into rabbit stew, but he's a glib talker and a fast runner, and he always manages to get back to the briar patch where he was "bo'n and raised."

Bobby, fascinated, forgets about running away, and from that night on he is devoted to Uncle Remus. But things are tough, just the same. When a pretty little girl from down the road (Luana Patton) gives him a puppy, his mother won't let him keep it. Instead of taking it back, as he's told to do, he hides it in Uncle Remus' cabin. That gets them both in bad. To make matters worse, Bobby and his little girl friend sit listening to the fabulous story of the tar baby, when they should be at a party up at the big house. Verdict from mamma: No more stories. Then, like Br'er Rabbit, Bobby comes close to getting into a really fatal jam. . . .

You'll love the music, especially "Zip-A-Dee-Doo-Dah" and James Baskett, as Uncle Remus, emerges as one of the new personalities of the year. But it's Br'er Rabbit's picture.—RKO

CALIFORNIA

"California" is as big and beautiful and gaudy as the state for which it's named. The picture is a Technicolor pageant of the days when California was still "settlers' country" and you made the trip across the continent by wagon train instead of on the Super Chief.

The particular wagon train we're concerned with has as its guide Johnny Trumbo (Ray Milland), a tough, cynical ex-cavalryman. The man who organized Song of the South: Uncle Remus (James Baskett) spins tales for Bobby (B. Driscoll).

The author of "LAURA" now brings to the screen

THE WICKEDEST WOMAN WHO EVER LOVED!

MARGARET LOCKWOOD as BEDELIA who had more than her share of men, jewels, and love — and wanted more, more, more!

Beguiling... Bewitching... Bedevilling...

"Bedelia"

J. ARTHUR RANK presents

MARGARET LOCKWOOD • IAN HUNTER
ANNE CRAWFORD • BARRY K. BARNES
in
VERA CASPARY'S
"BEDELIA" with

JILL ESMOND • ELLEN POLLOCK • JULIEN MITCHELL • BEATRICE VERLEY
BARBARA BLAIR • LOUISE HAMPTON • KYNASTON REEVES • OLGA LINDO

Directed by Lance Comfort • Screenplay by Vera Caspary, Herbert Victor, Isadore Goldsmith Produced by Isadore Goldsmith • Additional Dialogue M. Roy Ridley, Moie Charles A JOHN CORFIELD PRODUCTION

EAGLE-LION FILMS, INC.

RIN TIN TIN
is back!
The Greatest Animal Star Of All-Time...

In the most human, heart-warming picture in years!

The Return of RIN TIN TIN

FILMED IN ALL THE GORGEOUS COLOR
Of The Valley Of The California Missions

starring
RIN TIN TIN III
DONALD WOODS • BOBBY BLAKE
Gaylord Pendleton • Claudia Drake
Directed by Max Nosseck • Produced by William Stephens Released by PRODUCERS RELEASING CORPORATION

California: Lily Bishop (B. Stanwyck) first hates John (R. Milland) then loves him.

the expedition is a wise old farmer named Michael Fabian (Barry Fitzgerald). It's Fabian who makes Trumbo take on a new passenger at Pioneer City. Trumbo takes one look at her and predicts trouble. He's probably right, at that. Lily Bishop (Barbara Stanwyck) isn't the quiet type, and the kindest thing the ladies of Pioneer City say about her is that she's a professional gambler.

There is a deep antagonism between Lily and Trumbo from the start. Not just because she takes him on at blackjack and wins every cent he has. It goes deeper than that. It goes, in fact, right to their hearts, where hate can be very close to love. Lily isn't popular with anyone, except Fabian. He understands the driving force that motivates her.

When the rumor of gold found in California reaches the wagon train, one group after another deserts it to rush madly ahead. Lily is one of the first to go, and one of the few to cash in on the gold rush. Not that she turns miner. She puts her savings into a gambling hall which she names the "Golden Lily." She buys it from sinister Captain Coffin (George Couloris), one-time slave trader, who now dreams of making California an empire with himself as its ruler. And Lily as his wife.

There are two people in the way of these ambitions. Fabian stands between Coffin and his empire, for Fabian wants California to be part of the United States. Trumbo stands between Coffin and Lily, for Lily's heart is traitor to her cool calculating head. So, decides Coffin, these two men must die. . . .—Par.

DOROTHY KILGALLEN SELECTS "HUMORESQUE"

(Continued from page 14)

impressive and vastly entertaining story, told with intelligence and wit and great respect for the dimensions of living people.

It is a perfect vehicle for the "new" Joan Crawford. Now that Joan's ability to play a role other than Cinderella has been recognized by the sagacious Warner Brothers, she is being permitted to reverse the ancient Crawford tradition and portray women rich in worldly goods and poor in soul—a combination which it must be admitted makes richer screen fare than the vice versa.

Miss Crawford's ability seems to grow with every film. As the beautiful and damned Helen Wright, she balances emotional power with intelligent restraint and creates a smooth, believable portrait of a cynical, alcoholic and unmoral society woman who comes upon the first honest emotion of her life when it is too late for her to do anything but renounce it. In my opinion she given an even finer performance in "Humoresque" than the one in "Mildred Pierce" for which she won last year's Academy Award.

Her partner in all this excellence is John Garfield, and although offhand you might never have thought of pairing them, it turns out that they go together like dynamite and a lighted match. Her smoothness, his roughness: her glitter, his quietness; her curried glamor, his brutal sex appeal, make an electric combination. And his portrayal of Paul Boray, the young violinist whom Mrs. Wright annexes on a whim, is splendid—tender and hard and completely real. Mr. Garfield, of all actors, seems to have been invented for the purpose of Clifford Odets dialogue; he speaks it as if it came from his own head, and it never sounds better than when he is the one saying it. Mr. Odets should be grateful for him and the rest of the cast.

Stealing "Humoresque" from Crawford and Garfield would be like stealing the Empire State Building from the corner of 34th Street and Fifth Avenue, but Oscar Levant comes as close as a human creature could come to doing it. Playing a character listed in the program as Sid Jeffers—but better known to friends of Oscar Levant as Oscar Levant—he moves through the picture with his own peculiar brand of friendly bitterness, scattering some of the fastest dialogue of the season and now and then taking to the Steinway to abet the wholly brilliant musical score. A strange thing has happened to Oscar, that most professionally pained inhabitant of Broadway. He has become such a cinematic ray of sunshine that audiences gurgle when he appears.

The Warner Brothers have themselves a real picture in "Humoresque." Women will love it, of course, as they love all Crawford pictures—and for once the men will be delighted to have been dragged along.

It's by DURA·GLOSS

"It's the bright new idea in fingertip fashion"

A John Frederics pink felt hat and Dura-Gloss bright American Beauty smartly contrast with a blue faille suit

Actual Sizes

NUTMEG · TROPICAL · LAUREL · HEATHER · CINNAMON · PINK LADY · CLOVER · AMERICAN BEAUTY · RED PEPPER · WINEBERRY · FLARE RED · RED PLUM · MULBERRY · FUCHSIA · GAY TIME · ZOMBIE · BLACKBERRY · EBONY

It's color range for costume change

"Fingertips are color accents, too," says sparkling Sylvia MacNeill. "So I have six of the eighteen fashion-right Dura-Gloss shades on my dressing table ready to complement whatever frock I choose. Give your fingertips this added loveliness, too! Whisking away the old and brushing on harmonizing Dura-Gloss takes less time than renewing facial make-up... brings you the bright new magic of fingertips keyed to the occasion, your frock, your mood!" Eighteen fashion-right shades... 10¢ plus tax.

NEW! Dura-Gloss Lipstick—creamy-smooth, long-lasting, never oily, never dry—in glowing colors to match and blend with Dura-Gloss Nail Polish. Smart gold-tone metal cap, slick-turning metal swivel... 39¢ plus tax.

© 1947, LORR LABORATORIES, PATERSON, N. J., FOUNDED BY E. T. REYNOLDS

He's Helpless in your hands with the New Hinds

YOURS FOR KEEPS because you hold his love with your hands—those ravishing, lovable hands that use the beauty-bringing NEW HINDS!

NEW HINDS is enriched with lanolin especially to soften your hands—instantly make them feel smoother . . . lovelier!

NEW HINDS works like magic—because your skin eagerly takes in the special softening ingredient. Is not sticky.

NEW HINDS protects longer against work-and-weather roughness. Always use after hands have been in water or after outdoor exposure.

Get this amazing NEW HINDS Honey and Almond Fragrance Cream—at toilet goods counters today! Four generous sizes 10¢ to $1.00 plus tax.

faster soothing lanolin-enriched

COPR. 1946 LEHN AND FINK PRODUCTS CORPORATION

INFORMATION DESK
by Beverly Linet

STEPHEN BEKASSY, who scored as Liszt in "Song to Remember," will soon be seen in "Arch of Triumph." He was born in Hungary on Feb. 10, 1910. He's 6' tall, weighs 160 lbs., and has blue eyes and light brown hair. Is married to Hagar Wilde, and has a daughter, Steffan. Write to him at Enterprise Productions, Universal City California He has no fan club

BARBARA LAWRENCE, who was Jeanne Crain's rival in "Margie," was born in Carnegie, Oklahoma, and is in her early twenties. She's a blue-eyed blonde and is 5' 7½" tall, and weighs 124 lbs. She's unmarried. Write to her at 20th-Fox, Beverly Hills. No club yet

STEVE COCHRAN, who appeared as Speed in "Kid From Brooklyn," and Eddie in "The Chase," was born in Eureka, Cal. on May 25. Real name is Robert. He has dark brown eyes and brown hair, and is 6' tall. Is married to Fay McKenzie, and hails from the stage. Write to him at Samuel Goldwyn Productions, Hollywood, Calif. Shirley Ann Brightrose, 29-47 W. 29th St., Brooklyn, N. Y., has his fan club.

Terry S., Hollywood: Rudy Wissler did the singing for Scotty Beckett, who played the young Jolson in "The Jolson Story." Scotty was born in Oakland, Calif., in Oct. 1930. He's growing, and has brown eyes and hair. Write to him at Columbia Pictures, Hollywood. Larry Parks was born in Olathe, Kansas, on Dec. 13, 1914. He is 5' 11", 160 lbs., and has brown eyes and brown hair. Is married to Betty Garrett, and can be reached at Columbia Pictures, Hollywood. Bev Davis, 2937 W. 31 St., Brooklyn, has his club.

Pauline B., Canada: Theresa Smith, 2114 Lancaster Avenue, Wilmington, Del., has the Skippy Homeier Club. Lee Garber, 2137 Cropsy Avenue, Brooklyn, has Kenny Bowers', Barbara MacEvoy, Box 611, Quogue, N. Y., has Elizabeth Taylor's, and Helen Russ, 177 Peabody, San Francisco, Cal. has Richard Conte's.

Helen Murphey, N. J.: Richard Webb, who was Parker in "O.S.S." was born in Bloomington, Ill. on Sept. 9, 1915. He is 6' 1" tall, weighs 175 lbs., and has blue eyes and blond hair. Is married to Elizabeth Sterns and has two children Write him at Paramount.

COME ON NOW! You must have some questions to ask. I'm waiting for your letters, together with a self-addressed, stamped envelope, sent to Beverly Linet, INFORMATION DESK, MODERN SCREEN, 149 Madison Avenue, New York 16. N. Y

To our Readers...

■ I address this page to our more near-sighted readers who didn't happen to notice that this issue of MODERN SCREEN sports a very gay and completely different cover. Get out your little jeweler's eye gadget, and study us deeply for a minute. Were we ever lovelier? . . . A profound change has come over MODERN SCREEN. The technical age has got into our blood. Time was when posing for our cover was as simple as dabbing a suggestion of soap and water on your face and beaming at the photog's little bird. Now it's become an involved process . . . Our Art Director, Otto Storch, confers with Cover Designer, Lester Beall, in a modernistic, air-conditioned studio, while a finely constructed Powers model takes shorthand. The talk flies high, wide and handsome. Eventually a sketch is made. Only it isn't a sketch. You call it a "visual" if you know the score. After the visual comes a comprehensive. Our photographer, Nick Muray, then pockets the comprehensive and hops a plane for the Coast. June Allyson is posed front face, semi-profile and dead man's float for the various units of the cover. Old Nick takes one last anxious look at his comprehensive and rushes back to have June put together again. And there you have your Technical-Age MS cover! . . . If you ask me (and of course you shouldn't ask me), I think it's great. It sparkles, it's radiant, it does everything but talk. But after all, what do you want for fifteen cents—talking magazines?

bless their little pointed heads!

by June Allyson

AS TOLD TO JEAN KINKEAD

■ When your editors asked me to do a story about my best friends, I thought, "Gleeps! Who are they? Let's see, there's Richard and my mother and—umm-mm—Richard. And that is positively all." First I thought I'd have to make up some friends because it's so wall-flowery to say right out in a magazine that you only have two friends, and one of them your own mother. But then I calmed down and thought about old Jeanie. She was certainly a friend. And Jane Wilkie. And Marie. Oh golly, they've been such perfectly wonderful friends, but I've been going steady with Richard for so long now that sometimes I can't seem to think any further than him.

Richard, of course, is my dearest, truest friend. He's the one person in the world I couldn't live without. That is very corny, isn't it, but it is true. Quite aside from being nuts about the guy, I respect him and like him so much. I think that just about the most thrilling moment of my whole life was when I realized that Richard and I were friends. It wasn't right off the bat, of course. That may be the way of love, but not of friendship. We had been going out together for a long time, and I was so completely crazy about him that it never really occurred to me to criticize the places he took me. I didn't like night clubs, but if he did, then they were for me. Smoke in our eyes and a loud band and okay—I like it here. Then one night he said wistfully, "Too bad you're such a one for the clubs, Stinky." I turned and looked at him hard. "Me!" I said. "Oh Richard, honey, you're wrong. Why, I like walks in the rain (Continued on page 31)

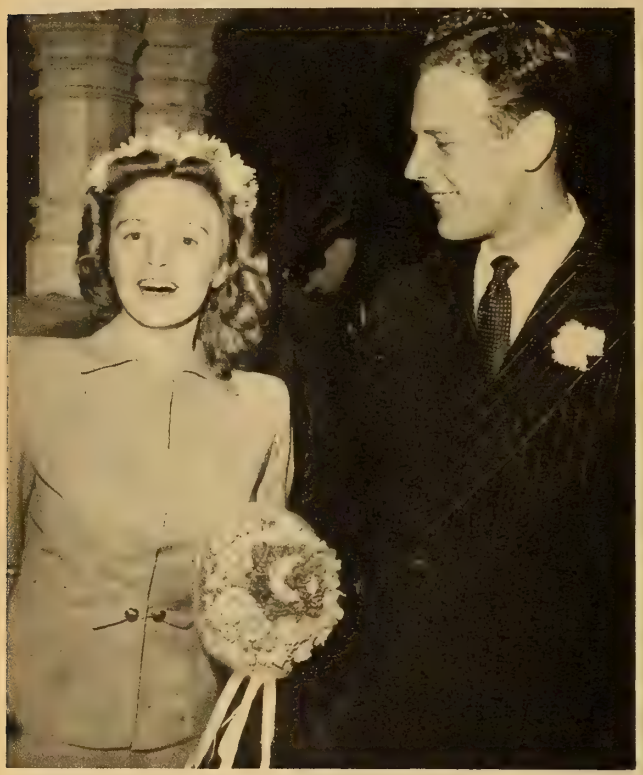
She's so-o-o-o domestic, that Mrs. Powell, what with making breakfast for Dick every morning, spending all her free time in the kitchen, and specializing in fancy salad dressings! June relaxes by shopping, collects antique silver-trimmed bottles.

▲ That look you see is known as "joy unconfined," which is how June felt when she got back home after her New York visit. She and Dick spent the first evening sitting and gazing lovingly at their house.

▼ French poodles Casey and Pat are new arrivals. Casey's not been clipped yet, because June thinks he looks cute with the fringe over his eyes, although she worries that he can't see what's going on.

SOME PEOPLE SAY, "BLESS YOUR LITTLE HEART." BUT WHEN JUNE ALLYSON LOVES YOU, SHE WHISPERS FONDLY, "BLESS YOUR LITTLE POINTED HEAD."

Jittery Junie, at whose home M.S.'s Western Editor, Jane Wilkie, was married, forgot the cake and gibbered, "Don't be nervous," at the brand new Mrs. Robert Botwinick (here, with her hubby).

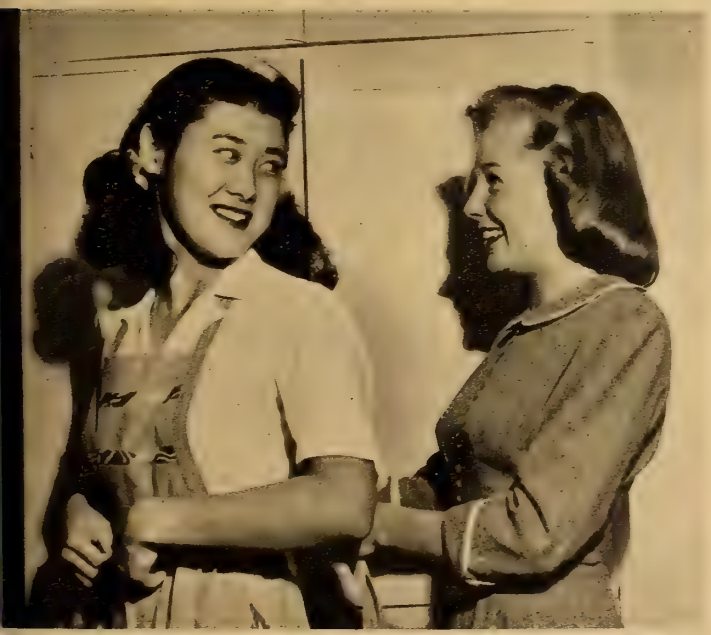


"The gal with the tiniest waist in H'wood," as designer Irene has dubbed her, has developed into a shopper. Watches avidly for sales, then trots home with loads of stuff she didn't need anyhow!

bless their little pointed heads!

Having just finished "The Secret Heart," popular June's slated for "Virtuous," wherein she'll upset all type-casting rules by playing a hard-hearted glamor gal. The first day's shooting on any new Dick Powell pic finds wifie present with her lunch—3 bananas and milk!

Young Mrs. P. startled Bunny Waters and Esther Williams when, at a recent hen party, she murmured, "I want a baby more than life itself." (Here, with Walter Pidgeon and Dick at the Ice Follies premiere.)



One of June's newest friends is her maid, Tehru, a charming Japanese girl whose husband was with the U. S. forces in the Pacific. Keeping a file of Dick's old pic scripts is Tehru's greatest thrill.

and football games and riding with the top down . . ." He stared at me and stared at me, and then he said, "You, too," in a kind of new, gentle voice. "Well, gee." And I looked at him and said, "Gee." We walked out of that place so fast, and when we were out under the beautiful black night sky we held hands very tight, and I knew that we were friends.

After that there wasn't anything about myself I couldn't tell him. I turned the pockets of my soul inside out so he'd know everything I am. Good and bad. And one afternoon I told him about my phobia, and he cured me. You see, I used to be a frightful hypochondriac. I was sure I had every disease in the book and a couple they hadn't discovered yet. "Richard," I said to him one day, "I'm not at all well. Not at all well. You may as well know it." "'Strouble, honey?" he asked, concerned, but not frantic. That in itself soothed me. "Heart, I think," I said. "Or it might be my lungs." (Continued on page 100)

THERE'S NO BITTERNESS IN TY POWER'S HEART TOWARD ANNABELLA; ONLY A GREAT SENSE OF GROWING UP AND HIGH HOPES FOR THE FUTURE

End of a Dream

by HEDDA HOPPER

Before their separation, Tyrone Power and Annabella attended this party for Marlene Dietrich. Ty's settled most of his things on Annabella, including their beautiful home. He denies rumors that he'll marry Gene Tierney, his co-star in "Razor's Edge."

■ Tyrone Power looked at me straight out of his honest black eyes, as he always has. He said, "Hedda, right now the greatest thing in the world to me is freedom. I'm free—that's all that matters."

I searched his face. It was as handsome as ever—handsomer because it was stronger. There were lines that hadn't been there before, lines that betrayed the strain he'd been through. His dark blue suit was loose on a frame thinner than it should be.

I thought, "This shouldn't happen to so nice a guy."

It was the day after Ty stepped off the plane that brought him back to Hollywood from New York, where he'd announced soberly, kindly and with dignity that the song had ended for himself and his wife, Annabella. That their marriage was through.

Ty had stepped off to face a swarm of crazy, heartless rumors. They made him out a home wrecker; they plunged him into scandal headlines. They seized on pure coincidence to brew a romance between Ty and another man's wife, Gene Tierney—all because Ty and Gene had professionally acted a romance on (Continued on page 88)

Panamanian fans kept Ty and Cesar at the desk although the boys yearned to explore the country. They toured South America and Central America, where C.'s pic, "Carnival in Costa Rica," takes place.

"Saludos Amigos!" was more than the name of their plane; John Jeffries (co-pilot at left), Ty and Cesar really meant the "Hi, neighbors!" the title implies. That's a flight map Tyrone's consulting.

by CESAR ROMERO AS TOLD TO JERRY ASHER

"THE FLYING FILTHY FIVE"

CESAR ROMERO SAW IT HAPPEN: THE HEARTWARMING WELCOME SOUTH AMERICANS GAVE TO THEIR FAVORITE "YANQUI" STAR—TY POWER.

■ Nothing ever looked so inviting as that long, lonely stretch of glistening beach. Tyrone Power dashed toward it first, peeling off clothes that marked a path of progress right down to the water's edge. The rest of us needed no further encouragement. There was co-pilot John Jeffries, now a wardrobe man at 20th Century-Fox; Jim Gallagher, Ty's secretary of many years' standing; Jim Denton, studio publicity man, and George Sanchez, our Mazatlan host. It was our first stop on the start of a fabulous flight through Mexico, Central and South America. The heat was intense, dust filled the air. The "Flying Filthy Five" we called ourselves!

Our hot, sticky bodies practically purred as we floated around in the lazy Mexican sea. The water, like sapphire blue velvet, was soft and soothing after that wild ride from the hotel through corrugated streets, where bare-bottomed urchins narrowly escaped our wheels and barking dogs, honking horns, pigs, goats and flies startled us. It was Ty who snapped us back to reality.

"Look! There's a girl up there on the beach, sitting next to our clothes. You speak Spanish, Butch, tell her we aren't wearing bathing suits and can't come out of the water until she goes away!"

Coming in as close as the laws of decency permitted, I shouted and shouted. If the girl heard me at all, she didn't bother to turn her head. Finally we were forced to swim around until our bodies tired, as it began to grow late. The girl still remained, so after a nautical consultation we decided there was nothing to do but call her bluff.

Just before Tyrone left for his air cruise, he gifted Gene Tierney with earrings made in the form of razor edges, and gave himself matching cuff links. Ty and the gang covered 20,000 miles on trip, spread good will every mile.

Slowly we approached, covering ourselves as best we could, pretending to be as nonchalant as if we were on Hollywood and Vine. Just before we reached her side, she stood up and casually removed her dress. She was wearing a bathing suit underneath. Still ignoring us, she sauntered into the water and swam out to sea. Propped up against Ty's shoes was an autograph book and pencil! Where she came from, how she knew who we were and that we were there—we never (Continued on page 130)

Big event of the trip was the boys fishing excursion at Acapulco, where they caught three swordfish. They also were guests on a yachting trip. Boys boast that they don't get seasick—or airsick!

There's just no use in Van's trying to persuade Keenan Wynn that he can grow a mustache, too. Ever since Van had to wear a fake beard for "High Barbaree," K.'s been teasing him.

by ed sullivan

about van, evie and keenan

Van's amiable disposition shines right through into his voice. He's just completed recording an album of kiddie songs and stories, and says he only hopes the kids have as much fun listening to them as he did making them.

Van and Evie Wynn (here at Ciro's) held hands at the El Patio Theater during Keenan's act, then went back to congratulate him.

■ For the first time in his career, Van Johnson has been cast as the Menace, "typing" that is so contrary to Hollywood's passion for script formula that the movie colony and moving picture fans are still dazed and baffled by it. And what a Menace! No plain, ordinary M-G-M menace, but something special, a Menace who busted up the home of his best friend, Keenan Wynn, alienated the affections of Mrs. Keenan Wynn and bought the former Cedric Gibbons' home in which to install the ex-Mrs. Wynn as the first Mrs. Van Johnson. You can pardon the agonized gasps of bobby-soxers at the revelation that their Van, in real life, was playing the sort of cad that George Sanders plays in reel life. To compound confusion, every crackpot in Hollywood, yielding to the temptation to get into the act as noted by Jimmy Durante, has added innuendoes until the thing has become an indictment, not only of individuals, but of the industry.

Hollywood gossips point out that by the time this reaches print, Eve Abbott Wynn will be within a few weeks of her February divorce, in Nevada, and then will become Mrs. Van Johnson. That may happen, but with this correspondent refusing to bet a plugged nickel on California weather, OR California romance. Whether or not Van and Eve get married, it is high time that some chronicler in possession of the facts, usurp the detective duties of Sherlock Holmes, and throw a spotlight on the three characters in Hollywood's own real-life triangle. My magnifying glass, Watson . . .

"Van Johnson and Eve certainly have been given a bum rap in this," Keenan Wynn tells me. "I've read that Van waited until I went to New York in November, and then started romancing (Continued on page 107)

BUSINESS STOOD STILL AND SCHOOLS

WERE EMPTY AS ALL OF ROCK ISLAND WENT WILD—

BECAUSE ITS OWN JUNE HAVER WAS HOME!

By Abigail Putnam

WE'RE PROUD OF YOU, JUNE

■ As far as June's concerned, it started with Harriet Jeanes, movie editor of the Rock Island Argus. She came to Chicago for an interview while June was there for the opening of "The Dolly Sisters."

"Why don't you come on home?" she asked. "They'd turn the place upside down for you."

"I'd settle for right side up," answered June. "But there just isn't time. I've got to get back to work."

She was working on "I Wonder Who's Kissing Her Now" when Herbert Grove paid a visit to Hollywood. Herbert Grove, in case you don't know, is manager of the Tri-States Theaters located in the Tri-Cities. The Tri-Cities, in case you don't know, are Rock Island, Moline and Davenport, the first two in Illinois, the third in Iowa, and all you have to do to get back and forth is skip across the Mississippi via a beautiful bridge. So says Rock Island's proud daughter, Junie Haver.

Mr. Grove told June how Rock Island felt about her, not to mention Moline and Davenport, who consider themselves aunts. How, when her pictures played, Haver was the only name on the marquee. How nice it would be if she could come home for the Harvest Festival. How they'd hold up the preem of "Three Little Girls in Blue" till she got there—

"Golly, Mr. Grove, you don't have to sell it to me!" she enthused. "Let's both go and sell (Continued on page 94)

All smiles, June Haver received a football autographed by players of the Rock Island and Moline High Schools just before the big game. Pigskin's a combined gift of coach Stuart Armbruster (left) and Moline coach Ralph Stevens.

June drove the train (with help) from Rock Island to Moline, was thrilled but nervous.

◀ October 31st, 1946, will always be remembered as "June Haver Day" in Rock Island. Junie holds the golden key to the city as she arrives at the fan-jammed Fort Armstrong Hotel.

▲ June (now in "I Wonder Who's Kissing Her Now") was guest of honor at the Harvest Festival. Her time schedule was disrupted by signing autographs, but J. didn't even care.

Ann Gray, of the Rock Island Girl Scouts, presented June with a floral tribute at a luncheon given by the local Chamber of Commerce. June's all better, now that she's rested after her near nervous breakdown.

By BILLY ROSE

none but

■ I know a girl who's in love with Cary Grant. Deeply, madly in love with Tall, Dark and Handsome himself. Now don't go telling me she's no different from fifty million other women. She's plenty different. Janice is a smart babe, sort of an Oscar Levant in lace panties. I've heard her out-witty Moss Hart, and talk horses with Swifty Morgan. She's been around, and gets a deep bow from headwaiters at the Ritz in New York or the Ritz in Paris. She's pretty as a toothpaste ad, and her eyes jolt your head back when she looks at you. She knows lots of movie stars, and they rate with her like floorwalkers.

But when it comes to Cary Grant, she's like your dopey little niece who cuts pictures out of movie magazines. She just doesn't make sense. I've seen this hep chick look up at the evening sky and say:

"Star light, star bright
First star I've seen tonight
Wish I may, wish I might Have the wish I wish tonight."

Eleanor tells me Janice writes little notes to Cary and puts them under her pillow, and my wife says if you do that you dream about the man the note is addressed to.

On the way home from the theater the other night, I started to kid Janice about her crush on Grant. I got the wifely nudge to the rib which means, "Keep your big mouth shut." Back at the house, Eleanor said, "You mustn't needle her about Cary. I'll tell you the story if you promise you'll never breathe a word."

the lonely heart

I crossed my heart and gave her a columnist's promise. Here's the story:

Some months ago, Janice was out in Hollywood visiting friends. One night she was invited to one of those parties where people keep dropping both in and over. Janice wore a gown made of dream-stuff—she had been told Cary Grant was going to be there. Behind her earlobes she had dabbed a bit of the perfume that makes the violinist kiss the piano-player. The thirty-room Bel-Air bungalow was crowded with famous stars. Jimmy Stewart was plunking the piano. Edward G. Robinson was defending Impressionist art. Two blondes kept chasing Harpo Marx. Jimmy Durante was doing an impersonation of Jimmy Durante.

It was eleven-ish when Cary arrived. When he was introduced to Janice, he turned on his famous lopsided grin and gave her the up-and-down. They made chitchat for a few moments. Cary fetched her a drink and sat on the arm of her chair while several of the local gals watched her with admiring hatred. Janice did her best to be casual. "You're a big girl now," she said to herself. "Easy does it."

But she didn't fool Cary a bit. He sensed the five alarm fire inside her. A moonstruck girl was not a novelty to Public Dreamboat No. 1. He was flattered, amused, but it had happened too often for him to be intrigued. But to Janice, this was it. She pinched herself, felt it hurt, and thanked the evening star she had wished on so often.

Parties break up early in hard-working Hollywood. Around midnight, Cary politely offered to drive her home. When they got into his car he kissed her. A thousand fiddles played for a moment, then they stopped, and Janice woke up. This wasn't her first kiss. She had been kissed before, and once or twice by men who loved her. She realized Cary had kissed her only because he was a nice guy, and thought it was expected of him. He had done it very much as one might ask his hostess for a dance. She was too much of a gal to settle for that.

A few minutes later the car rolled up in front of his home. She knew what he was going to say, and he said it. "Would you like to come up for a night-cap?"

Janice managed a smile. "Not tonight, Stardust," she said.

For the first time Cary was interested. He flashed the carefully careless smile that's good for two million domestic. "I don't get it, Sugarplum," he said. "What's the story?"

"It would bore you," said Janice, clenching her fists to keep from reaching out and touching the smile-crinkles around his eyes. "Be a darling and drive me home."

And that's all there is to the story. Janice came back to New York the next day. She tells my wife it was one of those things, and says she never thinks about Cary any more. Well, I'd believe her, except that she looked up at the sky the other night, and I'm betting it wasn't William Bendix she was thinking of when she murmured:

"Starlightstarbright Firstariseetonight . . ."

By Jane Wilkie

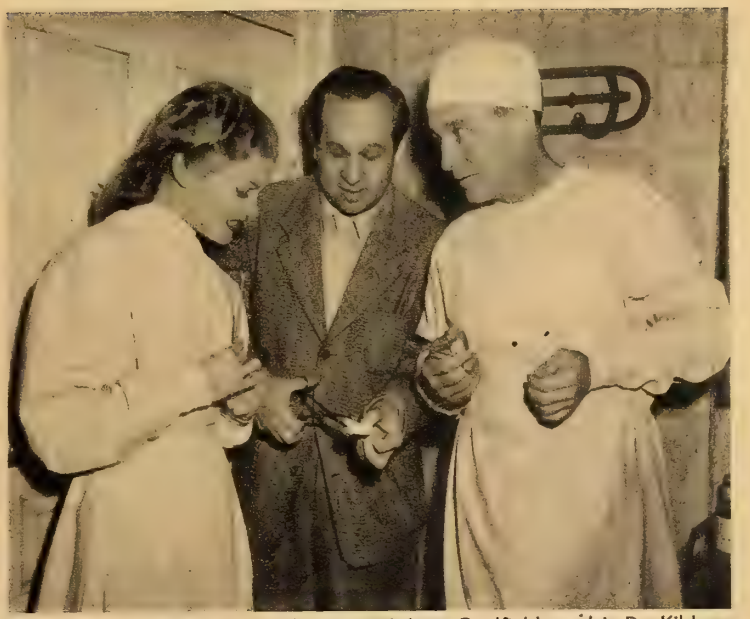
HEARTS, MR. CROSBY FIRMLY BELIEVES, WERE MEANT TO BE HIDDEN. BUT SOMEHOW, BING'S ALWAYS KEEPS SHOWING . . .

Bing lends an ear to the warbling of Olga San Juan as they rehearse scenes for "Blue Skies." An English film critic who gets reactions to American pictures, says Bing's tops with Britons!

Helping Bing pick a winner in the Racing Form is Fred Astaire, no amateur with horses either. Fred's deserting his stables to establish the Fred Astaire Dance Studios. First one's scheduled to open January in New York.

Unsentimental gentleman

This rugged, outdoor character is Rancher Crosby at his Elko, Nevada ranch, which he uses as a retreat. The ranch has no phone or radio, explains Bing, so he can't listen to his own transcriptions!



Scalpel, forceps, suture . . . All Bing and Joan Caulfield need is Dr. Kildare to add the finishing touch, as technical adviser Dr. B. Sachs instructs them in surgical procedure. Bing plays a doctor in his next pic, "Welcome Stranger."

■ One night in New York about a year ago, Bing Crosby stood in front of the Sherry Netherlands Hotel, waiting for a friend. He was idly watching a man who, although obviously headed for the hotel entrance, was taking the long way home by covering more ground to port and starboard than forward. The inebriated gentleman eventually reached the revolving doors, and just before flowing through them, caught a glimpse of Bing. He stopped abruptly, approached Crosby, slapped him on the shoulder and wheezed "Hiya, Bing!" Then, wonderfully pleased with his own humor, he continued, "Bet that's not the first time people called you that."

Crosby is seldom recognized in any city other than Hollywood, for the simple reason that no one ever expects to see him. His name a household word in every American home, he is too mythical a man to appear before the average citizen without warning and not create disbelief in his identity. Although he is mobbed in small towns when word flies ahead of his approaching arrival, he usually goes unmolested through the large cities. An inveterate walker, he often scorns cabs in Manhattan, and once walked, lugging two suitcases, from the Waldorf-Astoria to the Essex House without being recognized (Continued on page 114)

Be my Valentine!

A KITTEN, A MISDIRECTED LETTER AND A RADIO—ON FEBRUARY FOURTEENTH THEY ALL BECAME VALENTINES!

The age of 12 is in reality a tender one, and often the year for the first pangs of love. It was for Yvonne de Carlo. Her attention was split between a yearning to own a cat, and adoration of a curly-haired boy in her English class. She had to forego the cat because of a flattened allowance, but waited breathlessly for St. Valentine's Day. The students would exchange valentines in class, and Yvonne knew that if there was even a spark inside the boy, she would have some sign of it that day.

He gave her a valentine, but one which sent her into a flood of tears. It depicted her as a bow-legged girl with stringy hair and a wart on her nose, and Yvonne spent the afternoon sobbing into her handkerchief.

At home that night, she answered a ring of the doorbell to find no one there—but at her feet was a small crate. Inside was a coal black kitten, and the card attached bore the name of her blond Casanova. Yvonne learned then and there that no girl can know a man's heart by his valentine.

Joe Kaufman

Bob Mitchum wasn't the only problem child in his family. His brother John was equally endowed with cussedness.

When Bob was in his early teens he was enamored of a blonde girl who lived in the same block, but he kept his crush to himself. Or thought he did. John, of course, had found out about it. As Valentine's Day approached, Bob spent long hours whipping up a lacy little number for his girl friend. Confined to the house with the flu when the romantic day rolled around, Bob speculated on the problem of presenting the valentine. The only solution was the use of his brother as a messenger. He approached John with what he thought was nonchalance.

"By the way," he said, "would you drop this envelope up at Nancy's house? It's some homework I promised to help her with."

"Oh, sure," said John, and promptly delivered it to another girl in the neighborhood. A dark-haired girl named Dorothy Spence, who in time became the present Mrs. Mitchum.

Three years ago Ben Gage was in the service of his country. He had just met Esther Williams when he was confronted with Valentine's Day, and the pay envelope marked "Sgt. Ben Gage" contributed little to his dilemma. Then a game of Abyssinian polo, that which is played with two square cubes and well known to GIs, happened along in the nick of time and Ben's pockets were reimbursed somewhat. He bought Esther a second-hand radio-phonograph and presented it to her at her parents' home in the middle of a clan gathering.

The card read: "This is for St. Valentine's Day, St. Patrick's Day, Memorial Day, The Fourth of July, Labor Day, Thanksgiving and Christmas. Also your birthday, darling. It'll just have to last. Love, Ben."

The Gages still depend on that same radio for ether wave results, and find themselves giving only small remembrances on the bigger holidays and concentrating on Something Special in the way of valentines.

Man Hunt!

■ The man across the big desk was younger than you would expect. A lot younger. He had friendly dark eyes, and brown hair in a crew cut. He looked as if he knew exactly what he was doing—and what he wanted me to do. His name was Al Delacorte, and he was the executive editor of MODERN SCREEN magazine.

"I have an assignment for you, Virginia," he said. "It may be a tough one. Not the writing part, but getting the story in the first place."

THIS IS THE STORY OF HOW

A PACKAGE OF HERSHEY BARS WON

MODERN SCREEN THE FIRST AMERICAN

INTERVIEW WITH JAMES MASON.

Rehearsing his part for a broadcast of "Bill of Divorcement," James Mason clung to his cigar—and script. James may accept RKO's offer to star with Rosalind Russell in "Mourning Becomes Electra."

▲ Penelope Ward, now on Broadway, took time out to co-star at the broadcast. Playing J.'s daughter, she said, "What a handsome young father for any girl to have!"

➤ "You see," explains Pam Kellino, "I can't help it if we look more like brother and sister. I'm still his wife!" Pam's co-author of James' next pic, "The Upturned Glass."

By VIRGINIA WILSON

"Never mind. I'm too broke to quibble over things like that," I told him. "I just bought a fox coat I haven't paid for."

He laughed. "I'm glad it wasn't mink. We're supposed to show a profit at the end of the year. Here's the assignment. James Mason, the English star, is coming in on the Queen Elizabeth. We want you to get hold of him for an interview, but I understand he's pretty elusive."

"From what I hear, that's the understatement of all time. What do I use—a butterfly net? And I hope you're providing me with a revolver for defense. I don't want to be hit over the head with a riding crop."

"He may not be like that off screen, although I wouldn't want to make any guarantee. There seem to be two schools of thought on the Mason personality. One holds that he's a complete stinker and the other contends that he's the most charming man in the world. But one thing everybody agrees on. He is fascinating to women. I want to know why. Why do they flock to see him in every picture? What's the secret of his charm?"

"I'm normal. If I react, I'll let you know." But I didn't expect to react. That riding crop angle left me cold. Oh well, I was getting paid for this, wasn't I?

Al handed me a picture. "Just in case you haven't seen 'The Seventh Veil' or 'Man In Grey,' here's what he looks like." (Continued on page 104)

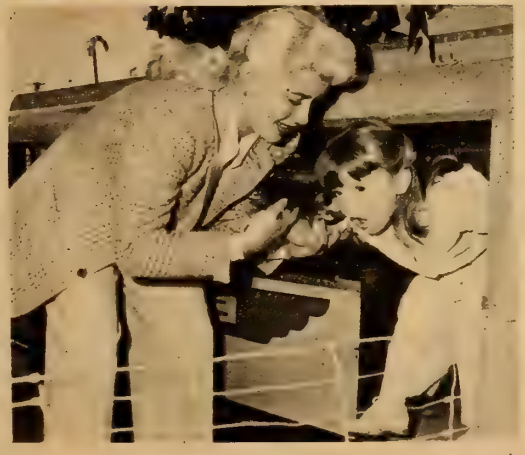
This is Lana!

AT THE MOMENT, SHE'S HEART WHOLE AND FANCY FREE. BUT FOR LANA, TOMORROW IS JUST A BIG UNOPENED VALENTINE

By Ida Zeitlin

ound and 'round it goes—also Mom and Cheryl!

Here's a whopping 'burger for a tiny tot.



"Duck—low bridge!" at the gay Lilliputian Carnival.

■ Her hair in pigtails, Lana sat cross-legged on the couch in her dressing room and plied the man with questions about his kid, who was Cheryl's age. For an hour they exchanged eager notes on bringing up baby, then the guy—a visiting newspaper man—rose to go.

"Look, maybe I shouldn't get personal," he said, "but you're hard to believe. I expected—"

"I know. A sultry siren with a long cigarette holder. Trouble with you fellows," she pointed out sweetly, "you get to believe your own publicity—"

Miss Turner's got something there. The facade built up by the word-slingers doesn't have much to do with the girl behind it, and we hope you won't misunderstand that statement. We're not out to deglamorize Lana, if only because we're not the kind of dopes to attempt the impossible. Lana and Glamor are practically one and the same, you can't divorce them. Whatever it is in a girl that bowls men over—call it Magnetism, S.A., Personality or the Fourth Dimension—Lana's got it and to spare. Granted. But that wasn't the whole, even of Helen of Troy. There must have been times when the ex-Mrs. Menelaus got good and sick of being a legend and longed to prance around as a plain human being. Okay, not too plain . . .

It was (Continued on page 121)

Their new home, which once belonged to musician Max Steiner, is being redone in a Chinese mood, has 1000 albums in the music room.

■ One day, right after Glenn Ford's baby boy, Peter, was born, Glenn rushed into the hospital room where his wife, Eleanor Powell, was in bed.

"Ellie," he cried impulsively, "what kind of flowers do you like? I'm gonna fill this whole room with flowers!"

Eleanor had to laugh at Glenn's new-papa enthusiasm. "Darling," she cracked, "just bring me a dandelion."

"A dandelion you shall have, Little Mother," promised Glenn, catching Ellie's gag on the first bounce.

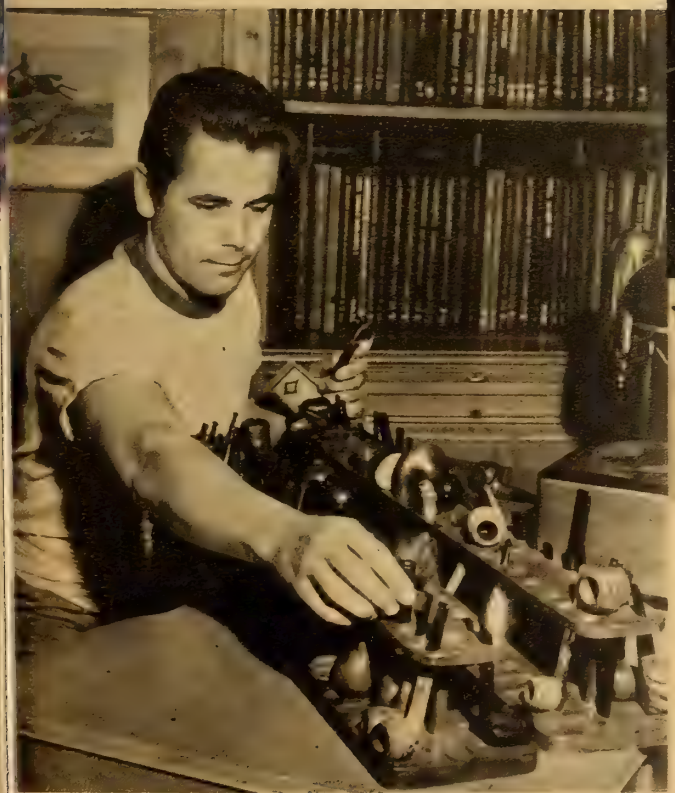
Glenn called up every florist in Beverly Hills. They laughed at him. "Dandelions? Are you kidding? We don't carry dandelions!" He raced around the yards in his neighborhood. He couldn't find even a bud. A gardener tipped him off. "Dandelions don't bloom this time of the year." That didn't stop Glenn.

He hopped in his car and toured up and down the Beverly streets. If he saw anything suspiciously yellow on a green lawn, he stomped across and investigated. Dogs barked, kids stared, irate householders rattled up their windows and demanded what the heck he wanted. "I'm hunting for a dandelion for my wife," grinned Glenn. They stared at the big, grown-up lug and shook their heads. They thought he was nuts. Glenn scoured a half-dozen districts that afternoon. Finally, in a little town twenty miles away, he spied a weak, out-of-season yellow bud. He nipped it off and raced back to the hospital. It wasn't visitors' hour at all, but Glenn broke in proudly with his prize. "Here it is, honey," he caroled triumphantly, "from me to you!" (Continued on page 53)

wanted: one guardian angel

HE FEELS LIKE ABE LINCOLN ON A DANCE FLOOR, NEVER REMEMBERS TO EAT AND THANKS GOD FOR BEING AN ACTOR. NO, GLENN FORD'S NOT CRAZY—JUST ALIVE.

Peter Newton Ford (the Newton's after his grandpop) loves to dress up in costumes, thinks overalls are "babyish." His favorite sports are horseback riding from his dad's lap—and eating from his mother's!



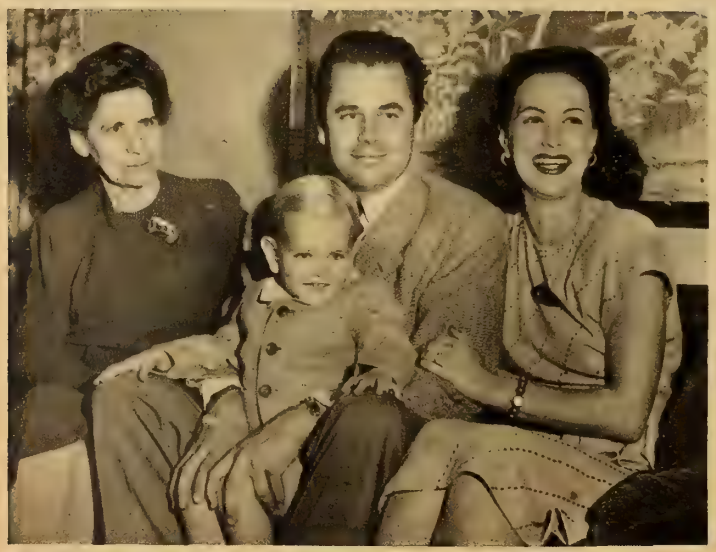
Glenn is perpetually puffing at a pipe, has 2 racks of over 75 of 'em. He's lucky, has a wife who doesn't mind his smoking in the house, but does insist he confine his target practice to the garden.

By GEORGE BENJAMIN

Glenn's given up wishing for a white Christmas in sunny (?) California, so when he and Ellie yen for a skating spree, it has to be at the local ice skating rink—fun, but no atmosphere.

wanted: one guardian angel

Rumors of a separation don't faze the Fords in the least—they know it's not so. A wild bout of their favorite backgammon, however, has been known to have one or the other threatening mayhem.



At the tender age of not-quite-two, young Pete is a clothes horse, has a rain coat, a slew of hats and a jaunty windbreaker which he refers to as "See? Baker!" (That's Glenn's mother, Mrs. Newton Ford, at his right.)

After 2½ years in the Marines, Glenn has a trusty aim; he and his Colt .38 can now hit 8 bulls eyes out of 10. Since he socked Rita H. in "Gilda," his mail's upped into the 1000's.

Glenn (who's in "Framed") and Ellie have collected records for 8 years, have some discs which music authorities say are priceless.

Glenn draws more kicks out of his daily life than a Missouri mule. He collects more interests than a loan shark, has his fingers in more pies than a baker boy. His big brown eyes spark eternally with the joy of living and the wonder of the world.

If Glenn isn't knocking his big Lincoln convertible to pieces in the garage and rebuilding it, he's digging up his back yard to plant something or other. If he isn't hot on the trail of a rare stamp for his collection, he's playing a game of chess by mail with a Marine buddy stationed in China. If he isn't leaning over the Malibu pier casting for halibut he's up on the Columbia ranch teaching Pete to stick on the back of a pony. If he isn't rallying the Beverly Boy Scouts together as Neighborhood Commissioner, he's huddling as a board member of the Screen Actors' Guild or playing an Armed Forces Radio Show. If he isn't whisking Ellie up to San Francisco to do the cafes, he's out in his own kitchen whipping up some outrageous concoction and driving the cook mad.

Glenn Ford couldn't be bored in a jail cell. Since he's not there but in Hollywood, he can't see how anyone can. His pet peeves are young Hollywood stars, struck by lucky lightning who, as he says, "act like actors" and go around yawning at their sudden success. He thinks everyone in pictures, including himself, is the luckiest guy in the world.

"Each night," grins Glenn, (Continued on page 128)

"Sure. I'll talk about Guy"

By HENRY WILLSON

■ Sure I'll talk about Madison. First, he's under contract to David O. Selznick. Second, he's a friend of mine. Third, he's an interesting character.

Three years ago they were calling him the bewildered gob. Well, he's not bewildered any more. That was only a surface confusion anyway. Pick anyone out of his accustomed spot and plant him in a strange new world, and his head'll spin for a while. Madison's quit spinning sooner than most. Maybe because his feet grip the ground harder.

He's adjusted, but not married to Hollywood. There's a difference. Guy will never go sophisticated. I'm as sure of that as I am that the sun will rise, and it's not intended as either a biff or a bouquet—just a statement. He's not the sophisticated type, and could no more pretend to be what he's not than a fish could walk. As far as any one trait can explain a man, that explains Madison. He's as real as a coin out of the U.S. Mint.

By the same token, what he values most in others is sincerity. He doesn't make friends lightly but, once made, they're likely to be for good. Take Howard Hill. He's the archery expert you've seen in so many shorts. You've seen him in big pictures too—doubling for the hero who thinks bows and arrows went out (Continued on page 125)

Guy, who made his first hit as the young sailor in "Since You Went Away," is keeping his fingers crossed that appearing with Shirley Temple again in "Honeymoon" will make history repeat itself. As to personal romance, Cathy Downs seems to have supplanted Gail Russell.

When MS gifted Guy last Xmas with an all-'round game kit, little did we realize it would provide him with a poker game that nearly "wiped out" Rory Calhoun. Rory, (of "Adventure Island") loves boogie-woogie, can only play the bass as yet.

WHAT GOES ON BENEATH THE BLOND HEAD AND SERIOUS BLUE EYES? HERE'S THE REAL GUY MADISON—AS ONLY HIS BEST FRIEND COULD KNOW HIM.

Wayne, who (hubba-hubba) resembles his brother, is still at school, gets help from Guy. The Navy man who rented them their house is returning, so the Madisons will be house hunting.

Archery enthusiast Guy pulls out some of his collection of 100 arrows, raves to Henry Willson, young Selznick executive and Guy's discoverer, about new method for sharpening the tips. Later, Henry and Rory (center) joined in making quivers.

By HOWARD SHARPE

IT SHOULDN'T HAPPEN TO A DUCK!

"It Happened In Brooklyn" is the pic, but Hollywood's where Kathryn Grayson has her hair done. K. would like to take her dog to work, but he's as big as his name: Throckmorton!

"DUCKS CAN'T DROWN," KATHRYN GRAYSON INFORMED HER LITTLE NIECES. BUT THAT'S WHAT SHE THOUGHT . . .

■ In the enormous living room of Kathryn Grayson's enormous Brentwood house—a living room large enough to accommodate a concert grand piano, two organs and a Scotts-Farnsworth—Miss Grayson and her singing coach, Earl Brent, sat on the ten-foot couch having tea. There was little else in the room, since furniture ordered for it was still being made and could not yet be afforded in any case, but neither the singer nor her instructor felt any lack in the furnishings.

The afternoon was bright, Kathryn had never been in better voice, and the tea was a rare blend. Mr. Brent, a worldly man, as persons who have coached divas and singing stars of the motion picture world are wont to be, sipped his tea appreciatively.

He raised it to his lips, and abruptly set it down again.

"Got a fly in it?" Kathryn asked, absently.

"I'll never touch another drop of tea," said Brent. "You may believe this or not, as you choose, but I just saw three ducks."

"In here?" asked Kathryn, a note of alarm in her voice.

"Passing the window."

"Not unlikely. We have three ducks."

"Oh." Mr. Brent (Continued on page 120)

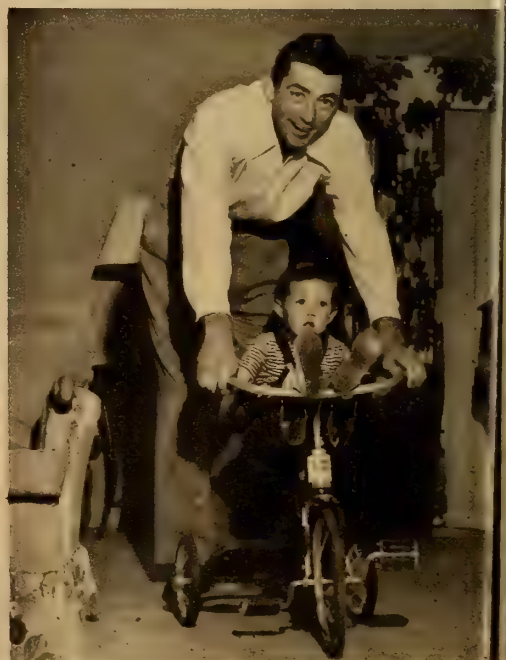
Greg and Greta Peck are such happy homebodies, it's unusual to find them cheek-to-cheeking like this (at Ciro's). While a struggling actor, he modeled for cigarette money, was so embarrassed his teeth chattered!

With three pix canned—"The Yearling," "The Macomber Affair" and "Duel in the Sun"—Greg's got a fine chance to cop 1946's Oscar. (Here, in a scene with Jennifer Jones in "Duel.")



Though he vows he's "no sissy," Jonny often begs for a bedtime song, which pop, who once sang in a show with Jimmy Savo, does beautifully!

gregory peck life story

THE FIRST DATE HE HAD WITH GRETA, TWO OTHER GUYS HORNED IN. "THEY'RE MY COUSINS," SHE DIMPLED. SO HE MARRIED HER—TO SAVE HER FROM HER "COUSINS!" (PART II)

By Kirtley Baskette

■ June was bustin' out all over New York when Gregory Peck's train from California dumped him in Pennsylvania Station. He gripped his suitcase like the wariest tourist and let the crowds swirl him out on 34th Street, and the noisy symphony of the Big City crashed around his excited head.

Greg let the sidewalk crowds buffet him, just looking and exulting. A tingling excitement ran up him from somewhere down inside and gripped his throat. "This is it," he muttered, sweeping the scene with eager eyes. "My town. My life. And I'm actually here." He laughed at an impulse to grab the next passerby and tell him, "Hey, I'm Gregory Peck. I'm going to be an actor. What do you think of that?" Instead, he snapped out of it, hoisted his bag and crossed the street. He checked in at Sloan House, the YMCA hotel, on 34th Street and Eighth Avenue.

It was the only Manhattan hotel Gregory Peck knew. His personal acquaintance was just as limited. Of all the millions in New York City he knew exactly one person, Cray Denton, from the California University Little Theater. Cray had gone on to dramatic school in New York the year before. Greg called him before he unpacked his bag.

"Come on over," invited Cray, "and meet the people—you big, (Continued on page 64)

In "the old days," Greg used to pawn his gold ring for 20 dollars, his lighter for 10, to provide coffee and cake money. Now he's signed for 9 pix, hopes to appear in one he's written "before I'm too old."

Joan Bennett kibitzed on location for "Macomber Affair," squealed as Greg crept up for candid shots. He's been offered 50% of the gross to appear in a sequel to the pic—if author Hemingway will write it!

ELIZABETH TAYLOR DREAMS OF BEING WISE AND WORLDLY, BUT SHE STILL HATES SCHOOL AND LOVES WIENIE ROASTS AND THINKS FOURTEEN IS VERY "FEMME FATALE."

By Irene Kane

Liz, whose dad is an art dealer, got her first equipment and criticism from him, now has a "studio" just for littering up with paints, canvases, etc. She's semi-grown up for "The Rich, Full Life."

Little Miss Breathless

■ She patted her stomach in the black dress, and studied herself in the mirror. People would think she was at least sixteen, she decided, and turned to her mother.

"How do I look?"

Her mother said, "Gruesome," cheerfully, and they both laughed. She looked fine, and she was waiting for Fred, who was eighteen, to come and take her out.

It was all unbearably exciting. Her first unchaperoned date, and they would be going to the Starlight Roof of New York's glamorous Waldorf, and there would be beautiful people, and soft music, and white linen on the little tables . . .

"Mother," she said, "may I wear the jacket?"

The jacket referred to is a lovely little white broadtail affair of Mrs. Taylor's. "Certainly not," Mrs. Taylor said. "We're going to the Colony, and I'll need it."

At that point, Fred arrived. Fred used to be called Sonny, and after that Freddie, but he'd decided neither one of them had enough dignity. He listened (Continued on page 79)

June Lockhart, pretty daughter of Gene Lockhart, poses in mock misery to show us how unhappy a gal can become when her curls are left neglected.

June's coif has noticeably perked up and as a happy result, so have her spirits! You will soon be seeing the blonde and curly-haired June in "It's a Joke, Son!"

Use your head!

By CAROL CARTER, BEAUTY EDITOR

■ Sometimes feel that your hair doesn't do right by you? Do you gaze with rapture at the way your movie pet wears her tresses, go home and try to copy her coif, only to find that your hair has a mind of its own and isn't taking directions from you? Pretty discouraging, or so it appears. June Lockhart in a frivolous moment mussed up her blonde hair, put a scowl on her pretty puss and slumped before our camera to mimic how depressing this temperamental-topknot business can be. But the pictures of June all slicked up show how wondrous hair can look.

So perhaps if your hair is the kind you "just can't do a thing with," mayhap I have the answer for you. Could be that yours really isn't problem hair, it's just misunderstood. Perhaps it will behave and will comb into the (Continued on page 117)

BEEN HAVING TROUBLE WITH YOUR HAIR?

WELL, HERE'S A COLLECTION OF HOLLYWOOD-ENDORSED ANSWERS FOR YOU!

Helen Neushaefer, color authority...stylist...searches for new colors at private exhibit of precious porcelains.

miracle ingredient PLASTEEN gives your nails the lasting beauty of ovals of rare porcelain

From fabulously precious porcelains, came Helen Neushaefer's inspiration for her new nail polish. For she knew the ancient porcelain art owned a priceless secret . . . how to make brilliant colors last. Now, after years of searching to capture in nail polish this same precious quality, she has a secret of her own . . . PLASTEEN . . . a miracle ingredient to help shock-proof your nail-do against chipping and to add amazing new brilliance. You'll find enduring loveliness in any of her 12 breath-taking colors . . . and for only ten cents . . . at all chain store cosmetic counters.

Helen Neushaefer

NAIL POLISH

It lasts so long . . . it looks so beautiful

The Secret of PLASTEEN

. . . is its miraculous power to "weld" color to the nail. But just as startling is the shining, jewel-like brilliance and the smoother flowing qualities Plasteen gives to Helen Neushaefer's Polish. And to hers exclusively!

Distributed by A. Sartorius & Company, Inc.
Fifth Ave., N. Y. C.

GREGORY PECK

(Continued from page 47)

beautiful West Coast hick!"

Greg didn't mind barbs like that. He accepted the gruesome fact that he was a callow nonenity. But he didn't shrink from the stage-wise kids Cray introduced him to, either. He enjoyed them, took them in, analyzed them. All, like himself, were out to act. Some were in school, others in stock or cracking Broadway in bits. All were terribly important—to themselves—and wise beyond words.

But he had to eat and he had to work if he were to stay in New York and Greg was determined to do that—until he'd learned what he came to learn. He dragged out the letter his stepdad, Joe, had given him, addressed to a Manhattan real estate man. One day, Greg presented it. Mr. Gaskins, the realtor, was pleasant.

"You want to get into the real estate business?"

"No," Greg corrected him. "I just want to stick in New York until I can get started in the theater."

Mr. Gaskins looked puzzled. "That's not my line—"

"All I want," explained Greg, "is a job—any kind of a job."

"Oh, I see. Well," said Mr. Gaskins, trying to reconcile show business with his business, "I've got $10,000 invested in a concession at the World's Fair. I'll give you a note to my partner. Maybe he can use you." That was the summer of 1939. Out on Flushing meadows the biggest world's fair of them all was opening. Greg took a train out and found himself confronting an energetic little Cockney Englishman on the Midway, beneath a huge sign that read, "The Meteor Speedway." It was a big wooden bowl about fifty feet wide. Inside, a car was fastened to an electric arm that roared around and around climbing up the side and slipping down again with the varying speed.

The little Englishman sized Greg up. "Sure," he said, after he'd read the note. "I can give you a job—taking tickets, $18 a week. Barking—$25. Which you want?"

"The $25," said Greg.

"Can you bark?"

"Sure," lied Greg.

"All right," said the hard-headed Cockney, "let's hear you."

Greg's bluff was called. He thought on his feet. "Give me a few minutes to work up a routine," he said. "I'll be back." He slipped out the door. He hotfooted it up and down the Midway, his eyes and ears open, watching the barkers before the sideshows give their pitches and rinds, catching their acts and spiels. He came back and put on his first professional audition. He wound up and let go a spiel for the Meteor. The Englishman stopped him halfway through.

"Okay, you're hired. Get outside and go to work."

Twelve hours a day was a long grind and it took Greg an hour-and-a-half each way on the subway to reach the fairgrounds from the little furnished room he'd moved into way up on West 114th Street. He paid $6 a week for the bare cubicle to sleep in, ate his meals at Riker's and other economy cafes early in the morning and late at night—too late, Greg reasoned. Heck, he just slept in New York with his odd hour job. He wasn't really living there. He wanted to get back from Flushing meadows and start going to town.

He'd barked for a couple of months when he ran into this guy on the subway whom he'd met at Cray's. A stage-ambitious character like himself, who also had to eat. He said he was working at Radio City, conducting tours, and dragging down $50 a week. That was exactly double what Greg Peck was earning and the nice part was—you were right in the heart of town, you could work day or night, whenever you could make it, since you got paid by the tour—$1.50 a circuit—if you could get on the team. On his next day off from the Meteor, he went over to Radio City and filled out an application. They called him up that night. "Start work tomorrow." And that put Greg Peck on the spot. He'd never been inside Radio City himself, and here he was booked to guide tours!

He quit his barking job and hustled down to Rockefeller Center next morning. They sent him out on a tour to learn the spiel technique. That night he lugged home a pamphlet of vital Radio City statistics.

Greg crammed all night and the next day, in his trim uniform, he took his first tour—and he came through. The barking experience helped; he could fake any sort of a spiel by now and soon he learned his stuff. That gave him a handy meal ticket for the next couple of years, when he needed it.

He took as many tours as they'd let him have and as soon as he could handle it easily, he went over to the Neighborhood Playhouse. That was the drama school he'd decided on. Cray Denton went there and the famed Sanford Meissner taught acting. Tuition was $500 a year and it might as well have been $5000.

He stated his case bluntly to Mrs. Morgenthau, who sponsored the school. "I want to learn to act. I need to go to school. But I haven't any money. Can I get a scholarship?"

"We have a lot of applications," she replied. "But we're always interested in talent. If you'll sit and wait a few minutes, we'll give you an audition."

Greg sat all morning. That afternoon the voice teacher and Meissner tested him. He waited some more. Toward evening, Mrs. Morgenthau called him in. She regarded him severely.

"You know," she began, "I don't think you ought to go in for a stage career."

Greg's heart plummeted. "Why not?" he came back.

"Well," Mrs. Morgenthau shrugged, "you haven't much chance of success. There are thousands of young men in New York with just as much looks, just as much talent, as much ambition as you have. You have one chance in a thousand to make good. My advice to you is to go back to California and do something else."

acid test . . .

Greg's lip protruded stubbornly. "Thanks," he said. "Maybe you're right. But I'm here and I'm going to take a crack at it. I'm going to learn right."

To his surprise, Mrs. Morgenthau laughed. "Okay," she said, "you win. I'll confess—I always say that to everyone we've decided to enroll. If they take my advice and walk out, we don't want them. But if they stay in spite of it, then they have a chance."

So Greg won his scholarship and entered the Neighborhood Playhouse. But this posed a perpetual problem for Gregory Peck—how to eat and pay his rent. Greg moved all around town from one barely furnished room to another. He ate in automats and cellar restaurants and shopped at delicatessens. The more time he put in at school, the more his job income dropped. For a long time he conducted the Radio City tours at nights—6 to 10—but as the tourist season dropped off, the tours turns were scarcer and scarcer. Sometimes Greg could pick up only $10 a week. He remembered his stepdad Joe's offer and more than once checks came on from San Francisco when the sheriff was breathing right down Greg's frayed collar. But he always found some way to make a quick check. Like modelling.

But there was one thing Greg Peck steered clear of—pounding Broadway. He knew that a Broadway play was not for him then. That's where he was smart.

"Thanks!"

He made lots of contacts with Broadway-wise people, and some important ones, too. They liked him and could have done him good. Some even suggested introducing him around to the big producers, but Greg always declined with thanks.

He was one of those people who have to get where they get by pure merit. That's how he won the summer stock course at the Barter Theater, which Gregory Peck still looks back on as one of the swellest experience-packed times in his life.

The Barter was located down south near Abingdon, Virginia, but the project was organized and run by a New York office. Greg learned about the scholarship tryout just as his first year at the Neighborhood Playhouse came to a close. Each year the Barter outfit chose the best actress of the year. They gifted her with a ham, an acre of land in Virginia and a plaque. And they let her judge the contest to pick out a girl and a young man to attend the Barter Theater tuition free. That year Dorothy Stickney from "Life With Father" was the honored actress and judge.

The line stretched clear up the block from the Empire Theater where the tryouts were held. They lasted three days and 260 anxious young actors like Gregory Peck made their bids. Greg read a scene from Maxwell Anderson's play, "Gods of the Lightning," and won Dorothy Stickney's nod. Pretty soon he was on a truck, helping escort scenery south to old Virginny and the Barter Theater.

jacks of all trades . . .

The drama students, like Greg, ate the country food. All students bunked together in dormitories. They built the scenery, designed the costumes, took tickets, put on the play themselves. Greg was busy day and night, because while one play was playing, another was rehearsing.

Greg played in seven out of the twelve plays the Barter put on that summer—things like "Family Portrait," "Accent on Youth," "The Lees of Virginia," and even Shakespeare's "Richard III."

All this was wonderful experience for Gregory Peck. He started back to New York that fall confident he was at last qualified to call himself an actor.

He returned that fall to the Neighborhood Playhouse School and buried himself again in his stage studies. Greg was no spring chicken — twenty-three — and maybe that's why he had the sense to take his work super seriously. It was no collegiate lark to him—he'd been through all of that at Cal. He wanted to learn.

Because he was perennially flat busted, Greg had to figure rackets to see the current Broadway hits and he got pretty smooth at slipping into a theater. His dodge was to wait until the first act broke and the crowd trailed out into the lobby to smoke. At the buzzer he joined them and drifted in, tossing a cigarette away or reading a program when the usher reached for his stub.

Greg Peck stuck with the Neighborhood Playhouse until he graduated in the spring. The school staged a big play to cap the year's work. It was rumored that Broadway producers, agents, and even Hollywood talent scouts "caught" the play, looking for new talent. Greg played a leading role and the next day came back to the Playhouse for the "death watch." That was the time when, if any offers were to come for anybody in the show, they'd come. The whole Playhouse class clustered around the switchboard in the outer office, and the minute it buzzed, dove for the receiver, like hungry wolves.

Not many calls came. When they did they were from somebody's mama or aunt. But the suspense was terrific. After all, it might, it could happen. For Greg it did.

"Peck," said the switchboard girl, "for you."

"This is Guthrie McClintic," the voice said. "Can you come up to my office right away?"

Every dope knew who Guthrie McClintic was. He was the great Katharine Cornell's husband; he produced all her plays.

"Y-yes, Sir!" said Greg.

He shot out the door like a rocket and although the Playhouse was on 50th Street and McClintic's office on 46th, Greg swears he got there before Guthrie hung up the telephone.

Mr. McClintic smiled at Greg's breathlessness. He was brief and to the point. "I saw you in your play last night," he said, "and you were all right."

"Thanks," was all Greg could pant.

"How'd you like to go on the road in 'The Doctor's Dilemma?' "

"You don't have to ask me that twice!" panted Greg.

"Wait a minute—it's just a small part—four lines in the third act."

Greg wasn't even listening. A chance at the Road with the great Cornell in a Bernard Shaw play! What a break!

"Fine," said McClintic. "Rehearsals start September 8th. We open in Philadelphia the 15th. Have a good summer."

He got a real live Broadway agent on the strength of that. Maynard Morris—who's still his agent—promptly fixed Greg up for a busy summer season in stock.

He started rehearsals for "The Doctor's Dilemma" in the fall of '41. McClintic handed Greg a pass to see the show on Broadway—the first time he'd walked in without ducking an usher—and afterwards took him backstage to meet the star. He was never so scared, so awed, so sure Miss Cornell was the most beautiful woman in the world. She received him in her dressing room and again he floated out on air. He thought she was the most wonderful woman in the world—until the day the troupe took the train to Philadelphia. Then his eyes wandered and lit on a blonde—and they've never wandered away since.

The show group was waiting to get in the train gate when Greg first saw Greta. He was pretending to read a book nonchalantly at that point. He wore glasses and looked very sober and intellectual. He also wore a suit he'd bought for $27. He really wasn't absorbing a line he read. And Greta knew it.

She was Katharine Cornell's personal makeup and hair-dressing expert, a pert, flaxen blonde of Finnish extraction. She had a merry twinkle in her eye when Greg's slipped off the blurred pages and caught hers. She smiled. Greg cleared his throat and bent back to the book.

He kept up the act all the way to Philadelphia, and it was tough work because the pretty blonde sat right across the aisle. That night, when the play opened, she was backstage and so was Greg most of the time, nervous as a flock of witches. Because, besides playing a British art gallery manager in the third act, Greg was also assistant stage manager. The only one who had time or occasion to notice his sweaty shakes was Greta. She thought it was funny—but she liked it. And she was sympathetic.

He finally got up nerve enough to introduce himself and ask for a date in Pittsburgh. His first weekly paycheck—fifty bucks—was safe in his pocket and he felt recklessly prosperous. He walked up to Greta, being as debonair as possible. "I'm Gregory Peck."

"I know."

"You're Greta Rice."

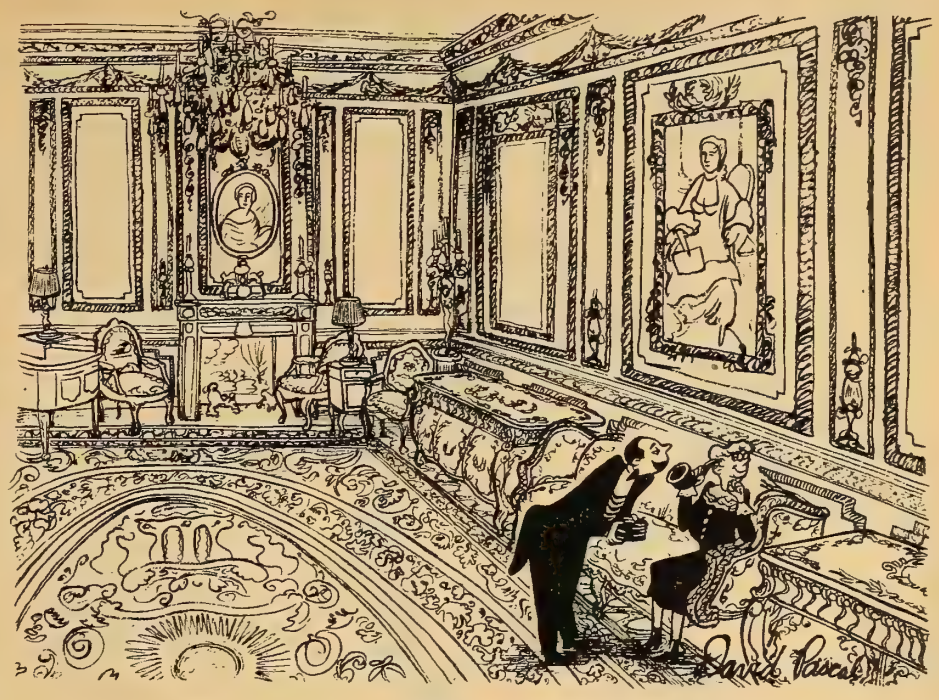
"Yes, I am."

"I—uh—how about a drink and a dance at the William Penn after the show tonight?"

"I'd love it," said Greta, "how nice!"

Greg tripped through his work that night on another fleecy cloud. He felt not only courtly, gallant and grand but a little magnanimous, too. After all, outside of Cornell, he and Greta were about the only non-British members of the troupe. She was probably lonely, poor girl. A date would make her very happy.

After the show, Greg hustled into his $27 suit, slicked his hair and showed up at the rendezvous by the stage door. "Hello," smiled Greta, "you know Mr. Fletcher, of course."



"The new 'Harry the Hipster' records have arrived, M'am."

THE perfect Valentine gift

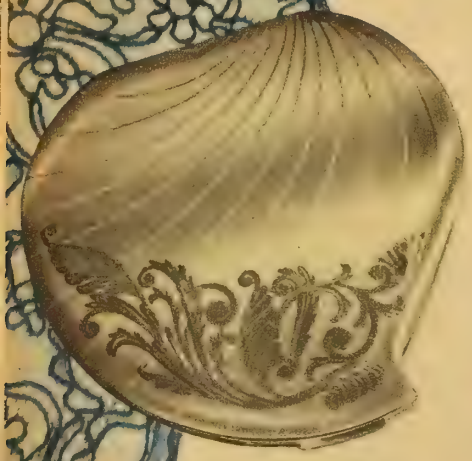
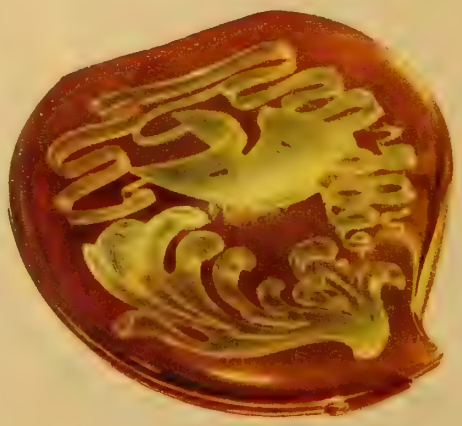
Give her a Valentine gift
That's enduring—
A compact exquisitely
Smart and alluring!
A gift that is useful
Yet glowing with glamour—
Elgin Americans always enamour!



"Heart's Desire" compact in sterling silver, $24



"Hearts Afire" compact in jeweler's bronze, $5.95

♥

Other compacts from $5 to $500 each

At better stores everywhere

COMPACTS BY

Elgin American

ELGIN, ILLINOIS

COMPACTS • CIGARETTE CASES • DRESSER SETS

Greg shook hands with Bramwell Fletcher, Cornell's leading man. "Well," he said, "let's go on over to the William Penn."

"Good idea," said Bram Fletcher. They started, and he walked along. They entered the hotel and he kept right by Greta's side. Greg thought he'd certainly say good night when they took a table in the supper room. But no—Bram sat right down, too. He even whirled Greta around for the first dance, while Greg burned.

He got Fletcher aside. "Say," Greg demanded, "what's going on here, anyway? I've got a date with Miss Rice."

"So have I."

"What!"

"Certainly. What are you doing here?"

"I've got the date!" stormed Greg.

"When did you make it?"

"Why, tonight."

"I made mine yesterday," said Bram. "Sorry, old chap." It was too true. Greg glowered but he couldn't shake Bram. They took turns dancing and split the check. They walked her home together and that was the payoff.

It was two a.m. by then and at Greta's hotel another guy was waiting around, hopping mad and ready to fight. He had a date that night with Greta, too!

Greg dated Greta regularly after that—and alone, too! So it wasn't much of a surprise to Greta when Greg blurted one night in San Francisco, "When we get back to New York, what do you say we get married?"

To his relief, she smiled, "Yes."

He couldn't afford an engagement ring. In fact, viewed logically, Gregory Peck had as much right to contemplate marriage at that point as a churchmouse.

Katharine Cornell was getting a new play together in San Francisco to follow "The Doctor's Dilemma." "Rose Burke" would play in the Bay City before heading East on tour. Greg inherited the job of assistant stage manager in that and the two-toned job of understudying Jean Pierre Aumont, in the lead, and Philip Merivale. It was Jean Pierre's first American appearance, and he had a thick French accent and a bad habit of taking cat naps before curtain time. The combination conspired later to give Greg one of the most awful evenings of his life.

"Rose Burke" played nine weeks in San Francisco. Pearl Harbor happened while Greg was there and the first blackout, but the threat of Jap bombs didn't scare Greg half as much as the awful prospect of taking over if Pierre didn't show up.

curtain going up! . . .

One night in Detroit, Greg, whose job was to see that all the cast was on hand well before curtain time, realized with horror that it was 8:15 and Jean Pierre Aumont was nowhere around the theater. The curtain went up at 8:30. Panicked, he raced out into the streets and over the half-block to Jean Pierre's hotel, to find him peacefully snoozing away in bed. Greg routed him out, helped him throw his clothes on and hustled him outside. Well, it had rained that day and then frozen. The sidewalks were like ice. Jean Pierre took a couple of strides and z-z-zip his feet flew out from under him, and he lit right on his face on the cement, out cold.

Greg's heart turned icier than the Detroit streets. He thought Jean Pierre was knocked out, possibly crippled. He was horrified, frankly, not for J. P.'s health, but because he knew an accident meant he'd have to play the tricky part, and he knew he'd murder it. "I'm fired," he gasped, "I'm through, I'm ruined!" Luckily, Jean Pierre tottered to his feet and Greg got him on stage in time, a little dizzy but there.

"Rose Burke" folded in Toronto without a Broadway opening and Greg found himself back in New York, engaged to be married, broke and out of a job. But he was a member of the Cornell-McClintic team, more or less, by now, and when McClintic presented Jane Cowl in "Punch and Julia," Greg had the juvenile lead.

The billboards were all printed and even pasted up at the Henry Miller Theater on Broadway, but Greg's chance at the Big Street died again in Baltimore. "Punch and Julia" opened in Washington, got the worst reviews known to mortal man and hastily retreated to Baltimore. There they were even worse.

His agent landed him a job at Cape Cod, in the Dennis Playhouse (where he recently returned from Hollywood to star). Greg didn't star that summer, but he gathered a sockful of experience. After six weeks on the Cape, Greg moved over to Martha's Vineyard to help put on USO benefit shows, because by now Uncle Sam had turned thumbs down on Greg's shaky sacroiliac and made him a Four-F Charlie. His dramatic godparents, Guthrie McClintic and Katharine Cornell, came up to lend a hand and Greg actually sang a comic duet with the glamorous Kit. What was more thrilling to Greg, McClintic bought a play to produce while he was up at the Cape, "The Morning Star," which the British playwright, Emlyn Williams (the "Night Must Fall" genius) had played to a smash hit in London.

He'd tried to get Williams for the lead, and Franchot Tone and a half dozen other established stage names. But all were busy so the idea struck McClintic to try young Gregory Peck.

When he learned the good news was definite, Greg ran down to see Greta. "This is it," he told her happily. "My real chance. Nothing can stop me now. We'll get married right after the play opens." Greta nodded happily but the twinkle in her eyes was still wise. She'd heard Greg say that before.

Greg was in fast acting company and his part was all-important. It carried the whole play. "Morning Star" was due to open on Broadway in September. Again McClintic took the show down to Philadelphia first.

Greg worked like the devil, but he was dramatically muscle bound. He took Greta down to Philadelphia for the opening and for moral support.

MODERN SCREEN

CLEOPATRA KELLY

"Oooh, Slug! You're so romantic!"

When your doctor says, "It's time to start cereal," buy one suitable as a starting cereal and for use all through babyhood. Millions of mothers have raised their babies on Gerber's.

Your doctor will tell you how much to serve. Measure amount right into the baby's dish. Add milk or formula, warm or cool, and mix. That's all you do—Gerber's cereals are pre-cooked, ready to serve.

Your baby gets extra food values from these cereals. For instance, they are rich in added iron. Babies are born with a store of iron which begins to run low some months after birth. This must be built up and Gerber's cereals help you do just that! All three Gerber's cereals also have added vitamin B complex as a further aid to baby's well-being.

Your baby's digestive system is delicate, so the three Gerber's cereals are finely strained. They mix creamy smooth, with uniform texture for easy digestion.

VARIETY THAT HELPS BABY'S APPETITE

Gerber's makes three different cereals: Cereal Food, Strained Oatmeal and the new Barley Cereal. Many mothers find that serving all three cereals turnabout helps baby's appetite. Be sure to get Gerber's cereals, with "America's Best-Known Baby" on the front of each box.

Gerber's Baby Foods

FREMONT, MICH. ... OAKLAND, CAL.

CEREALS • STRAINED FOODS • CHOPPED FOODS

© 1947, G. P. C.

FREE SAMPLES

My baby is now ..... months old. Please send me samples of Gerber's Barley Cereal, Gerber's Strained Oatmeal and Gerber's Cereal Food.

Address: Gerber Products Co., Dept. DE2-7, Fremont, Mich. In Canada: Dept. DE2-7, 49 Wellington St. E., Toronto 1, Ont.

Name.....

Address.....City and State.....

After opening night, they sat in their hotel room with a veteran actor named Nichcolas Joy, waiting for the morning papers. It was another "death watch" for Greg Peck. At three o'clock in the morning, Nicholas Joy went down and came back with the newspaper reviews.

"You read 'em, Nick," pleaded Greg. "I just can't."

Nick had been through things like this a double dozen times. It was old stuff. He draped himself in an arm chair and rattled the critics' judgments off. Mercilessly his voice pronounced what Greg considered a drumming death sentence.

"Obviously out of his class" . . . Nick droned, "inexperienced . . . incompetent . . . can't speak his lines . . . awkward . . . stiff . . . inept . . . amateurish. . . ." Greg listened in stony silence, but he was thinking, "This is really the end."

Greta read his thoughts in his face.

"You can do better," she said.

"I can't. I can't," sighed Greg. "I've given it all I had."

Greta shook her head. She wasn't an actress, but she'd been around the stage a lot. "Look," she said, "isn't it a lot more important what happens in New York than what happens here?"

Greg nodded, "Of course, but—"

"You've got a week's run in Philadelphia. Can't you improve in a week?"

"I don't know. I suppose—"

"Come on," said Greta, "let's work."

They made a stage out of their hotel room that minute. Greg read his lines to Greta and she and Nick kibitzed. They worked all night and far into the morning before they flopped, exhausted, in bed for a nap before show time. Every day that week, fourteen hours a day, he rehearsed with Greta in the hotel room all day and played that night.

The following Monday night "The Morning Star" opened on Broadway. Greg Peck took a deep breath before he went on stage and gritted to Greta, "This is really it. After tonight, either I catch a train for California—or I go on from here."

He went on from there. The Broadway critics liked him. Not that the play was a world beater for Broadway. But he knew he had made a step forward with "Morning Star," even though it lasted only a month, and even though, at $100 a week, he had only $400 saved up.

So, even before the show closed, Greg had the marriage license. When "Morning Star" folded, he didn't let it upset him. He knew he could handle a star part now and also that his ups and downs might go on indefinitely. Greta was thinking the same thing.

One October Sunday, after the show closed, they went out to the Yankee Stadium with a couple of friends.

As the crowds started filing out in the ninth inning, Greg and his party rose. Greg turned to his friends, "How'd you like to witness a wedding?"

"A wedding—migosh, when?"

"Right now," said Greg.

"Yes—right now," smiled Greta.

Greg ducked into a phone booth at the stadium and called up a pretty Methodist church on Park Avenue which they'd spotted long before. He made a date with the preacher and corralled a cab.

That night Mr. and Mrs. Gregory Peck moved into their honeymoon castle. It was really just Greg Peck's fourth floor walkup room on East 40th but to Greg and Greta it was twice as heavenly as a suite at the Waldorf. It was their home.

Greg woke up without a job and busted as usual but he didn't have a worry in his gay head. He knew there'd be something; the worst was over. And it was. That winter he played the lead with Martha Scott in "The Willow and I." Again it was no hit, but Peck was a man to remember.

Then Maynard Morris, who had helped Greg along so much in his early stock and Broadway jobs, joined the big Leland Hayward agency. He put in some good licks around the studios about the terrific movie possibilities of Gregory Peck.

One day Leland Hayward was in his Hollywood office when the telephone rang. It was Samuel Goldwyn.

"This fellow Peck," began Sam.

"Who?" asked Hayward blankly.

"Gregory Peck, this young actor of yours —how much do you want for him?"

"Oh, why—uh—$3,000 a week," stammered Hayward.

"Okay," agreed Sam, and hung up.

Leland Hayward grabbed his phone and called his New York office. "Who the heck," he asked, "is Gregory Peck?"

So while Greg hadn't made such a big noise along Broadway, the movie scouts certainly had their eyes on him.

Pretty soon Greg and Greta were on The Chief headed for Hollywood to meet the people—this time the Hollywood people. That was Leland Hayward's idea; for Greg to come out, look Hollywood over and prove for himself that he had a future there as well as on Broadway, because Greg Peck was still subborn that way. He had set out to make a hit on the Broadway stage and he still hadn't made it. He was sorry about Hollywood.

But it was pretty hard to say "No" to the delayed honeymoon he and Greta deserved, especially with all expenses paid and a chance to see his Dad and Mother.

When he left Hollywood, Greg carried back a contract with RKO to make a picture a year for four years. The rest of the time he could chase his Broadway star. Greg had a contract to make "Days of Glory" for Casey Robinson, a movie producer whose style Greg admired. And he had a $5000 bonus in his pocket for signing. For the first time in his life Greg had both money and leisure.

He got off the train in Phoenix, Arizona, checked in at Camelback Inn and spent heavenly days loafing in the sun with Greta, swimming and riding all over the desert. He hadn't had a vacation like that since he was a kid in San Diego.

So, being Gregory Peck, he just had to set up a hurdle for himself.

His Hollywood advisor, Leland Hayward, told Greg he was just plain crazy to sign up for the play "Sons and Soldiers." But Greg had time on his hands before his Hollywood debut, months away.

"What in the world do you want to do a play for?" Hayward puzzled, exasperated. "You've got everything to lose and nothing to gain! You've got one of the best new Hollywood contracts ever written. After you make a picture, maybe a play—sure—but right now it's not only useless—it's risky."

Greg wasn't listening.

"Suppose," argued Hayward, "the play's a flop. Suppose you're terrible and the critics murder you. Then, maybe Hollywood will change its mind about Peck!"

Greg said, "But I've never had a real hit on Broadway."

"So what?" Hayward threw up his hands. "Neither has Clark Gable!"

Greg just grinned and shrugged.

He went into "Sons and Soldiers," an artistic Irwin Shaw play and Max Rheinhardt's last production. These facts alone stacked the cards against it for popular success, but all Gregory Peck was gunning for were the critics. He missed again. But by following his star away from Hollywood, Greg Peck got his biggest break in pictures!

Because, if he hadn't played in "Sons and Soldiers" on Broadway, then Darryl Zanuck, on his way back from the war in Africa, certainly wouldn't have seen him in that play and spotted him as the perfect Father Chisholm for "Keys of the Kingdom." And Greg was going to need just that kind of a break in Hollywood, because his first picture was a dud.

Gregory Peck hasn't seen himself in "Days of Glory" to this day. It was just one of those movie ideas gone wrong as far as he was concerned. If Greg had had time to fret about that flop he'd certainly have headed right back to Broadway. Luckily, though, Darryl Zanuck called him before he could get the train reservations.

"How about starring for me as Father Chisholm in 'Keys of the Kingdom?'"

Greg had just read the book. Typically Peck, he argued honestly, "I'd love to. But I'm not the type." The description stuck in his brain—"short, red-headed, freckle-faced Scotsman."

"You don't need to be a type," said Zanuck. "You're an actor, aren't you?"

"I try to be," said Greg.

"The Keys of the Kingdom" proved Greg was—for Hollywood's money and the world's, too. That added another contract, a starring one at Twentieth-Fox. "Spellbound" tacked a Selznick contract to Gregory Peck's collection. Soon he won another at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer with "Valley of Decision." If Greg needed any confirmation that he was the brightest new star in Hollywood, he has found it in "Duel in the Sun," "The Yearling," and "The Macomber Affair"—the most expensive prestige pictures Hollywood made last year.

And Greg has collected much more in Hollywood than contracts, four-figure salaries, critical raves, prestige and fame. He's collected a happy private life with Greta and the two boys, Jonathan and Stephen, born under the sunny California skies of his own nativity. He's collected a home of his own and a host of friends. But —being Gergory Peck—he's not entirely happy.

Because Gregory Peck will never be happy until he gets what he set out to get when he left college for New York, the success on the stage he dedicated his life to.

Maybe his dreams will come true next year when Thomas Wolfe's, "The Web and the Rock," is dramatized. Already Greg has his eye on playing that tempestuous genius. Already he's worrying about it.

"If I'm ever going to be a great actor," he told me, anxiously, "I've got to start working. I've got a lot to learn!"

I've a hunch Gregory Peck will never find his dream—on Broadway or anywhere else. Because, deep inside him he carries a secret standard. A standard that has made and will keep him great—"Not Yet."

June Haver . . .

soon to be seen in 20th Century-Fox's "I Wonder Who's Kissing Her Now." June poses for MODERN SCREEN in the suit of the season—the wonderful figure-moulding swallowtail with a jacket that dips in back, and buttons that are replicas of old French coins.

On her shoulder—what we predict will be THE jewelry fashion of the year—a shining epaulette, with dangling chains like a general's. Watch for this epaulette—we're betting you'll be pinning one on your own shoulder in no time at all.

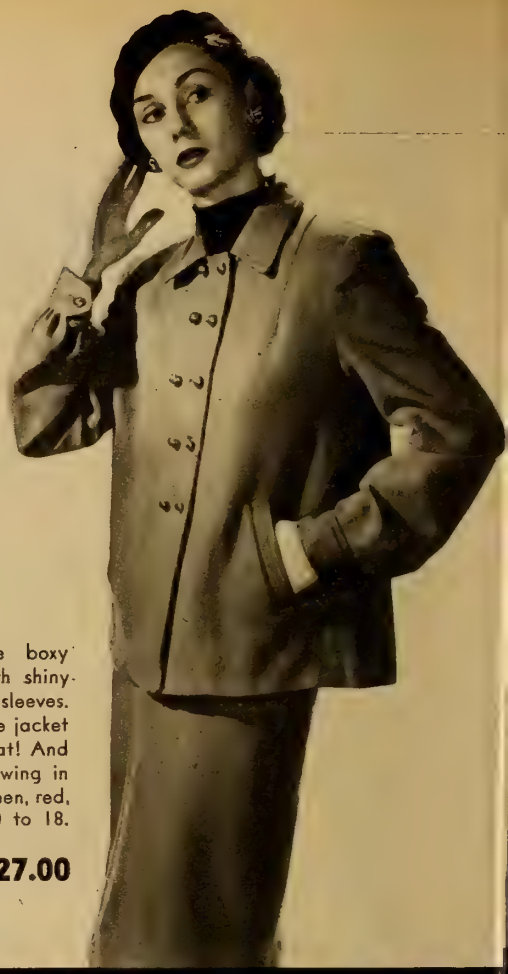
The Gladdy Colleen suit is rayon gabardine, and comes in royal blue, aqua, oyster, terra cotta and very light shades of rose, grey and blue. Sizes 10 to 18. $25.

To find out where you can buy this suit, turn to page 77)

Modern Screen
fashions

Nifty liftle bolero suit that looks as if you've inherited money. Grey wool flannel —dreamy background for any accessory color you care to mate with it. Of course you can wear skirt separately! Sizes 10 to 18. By Henry Rosenfeld.

$17.95



The suit with the boxy jacket—dashing with shiny buttons and cuffed sleeves. And you can use the jacket as a short extra coat! And it has a beautiful swing in back! All wool. Green, red, all pastels. Sizes 10 to 18. By McArthur.

$27.00

Knockout date dress—you know how black and white stands out in a crowd. Notice the sleeves—swinging deep from the shoulders and making your waist look incredibly tiny. Smooth rayon crepe. Sizes 9 to 15. By Jonathan Logan.

$12.95

Date dress that looks simple, then grows and grows on you. That hip draping is handled very cagily—and what it does for the figger! Wear with long pearls, please. Navy Romaine crepe. Sizes 10 to 18. By Winfield.

$14.95

By CONNIE BARTEL, FASHION EDITOR

WHO SAYS YOU CAN'T BE WELL-DRESSED ON A BUDGET?

Office, school, even dates—where can't you wear this shirt-sleeved sweetie? One of those good-looking, good taste basics smart girls swear by. Rayon crepe, in all pastels. Sizes 9 to 15. By Jonathan Logan.

$12.95

To find out where to buy these fashions, turn to page 77.

LOOK WHAT YOU CAN DO WITH ONE

Black Sweater!

Glentex scarf, worn military-fashion over one shoulder—$2
Criterion Belt with loops to pull scarf through—$3
Shell pin and earrings by Jordan—$3 per set

4

2

Glentex scarf, knotted like a bolero—$2
Criterion belt—$3.50

1

Black wool sweater by Featherknit—$4
Wool hood by Glentop—$2
Striped scarf by Glentex—$2

3

Gold braid collar by Ross—$4
Gold kid belt by Criterion—$2
Coro bracelets—$3.50 each
Coro drop earrings—$2

5

Two Glentex solid-color scarves, braided together into a collar—$2 each

To find out where to buy sweater and accessories, turn to pages 77 & 78

Glentex plaid scarf, draped into a bustle—$2
Three initials in gold by Jordan—$1 for three

6

Timely's white collar with bow (plus matching cuffs)—$2

There are a few basic pieces of clothing that you simply can't go wrong with—and a black sweater is one of the best. All by itself a black sweater is right—you can wear it very smartly with a skirt, a suit, or over slacks. Plus some well chosen glitter, you can even team it fashionably with an evening skirt. Besides all that, a black sweater is a super background for practically any and all accessories. These pages, based on one black sweater by Featherknit, prove that a good basic can be sporty, glamorous, sophisticated or demure.

7

WEAR THE SKIRT WITH THE BRIGHT Red LINING

■ We're heartbroken—but heartbroken—that we can't show you this skirt in color. It's grey wool flannel (yummy!)—and the lining is bright scarlet (wow!) And it has five cute little scarlet flowers at the waist. It's the twirlingest, whirlingest skirt we've ever seen—with a pirouette power of ninety-four inches—(that's how wide the hem is). And when it twirls and whirls—you see red!

On top of all that—both the flannel and the cotton airplane cloth lining are waterproofed, which makes it just the thing for skating. And no matter what size or shape you are, there's a skirt to fit you—see list below. You can get it in grey or black flannel, or in wool plaid. And it's such a hit, there'll be a spring version later. How much? About $9

Skirt by Summit Sportswear
Sizes 7-14 (for you young 'uns)
Sizes 9-15 (for juniors)
Sizes 10-16 (for teeners)
Sizes 10-18 (for misses)

To find out where to buy this skirt, see store list on page 78.

DD
Doris Dodson
JUNIOR ORIGINALS
Clean-cut as a skyline . . .
Doris Dodson's "City Wise". Smart worn with or without trim, weskit jacket. Rayon Butcher Linon
. . . it's a Brighton fabric. Black or navy with white trim. Sizes 9 to 15.
Dress and jacket about $15.00.
Write for the name of your local shop . . .
Doris Dodson, St. Louis 1, Missouri

BESTFORM

Strapless Bra

artfully wired, made of finest nylon marquisette . . . $3

BESTFORM no finer fit at any price

Don't say Sweaters, say Tish-u-Knit designed by Léon

Luxuriate...in these oh-so-soft sweaters. Pick the duet on left (short sleeve pullover, matching long sleeve cardigan) . . . or the short sleeved cardigan at right. Note the flattering new "King-size" ribbing at the necklines. All of pure wool Zephyr, softly blended with kid mohair. Lady blue, Lady pink, champagne, grey, lime-yellow or black. Sizes 34 to 40.

Write for store nearest you—and for FREE "Fashion and Exercise" book

TISH-U-KNIT Sweaters, 1372 Broadway, New York 18, N. Y. • Canada: 303 St. Paul St., W. Montreal

LOVE LETTER FROM THE FASHION EDITOR

Dear You:

Hello! . . . and it feels lovely to be the brand-new fashion editor of MODERN SCREEN.

We're more than excited to have the chance to talk about fashions to all you clothes-minded gals who read MS—because we know you're smart and lively and up-and-coming, and naturally you're interested in looking terrific.

So here's our new fashion policy, which begins with pages 69 to 78 of this very issue: We're planning to show you the best-looking, cutest, gayest and most useful clothes you can wear . . . (and here's the big point) . . . at prices that won't cause you any pain at all.

Needless to say, we know you have taste and you know fashion and that it's no trick at all for you to waltz into a store and pick out a dress or suit that makes you look out of this world. But we also know that very often the dress that makes your heart beat faster is the dress whose price tag makes your heart sink right down to your toes.

But we further know—and this is gospel—that any girl can look just plain wonderful, regardless of what she has to spend. If she knows how.

So from here on in, our Fashion Section is out to prove that a knockout wardrobe has nothing to do with knockout prices.

For example, we hope to show you lots of slick-looking day dresses under $15. And we're out to snag suits that make you look like a success story at the most attractive prices we can manage—(the one June Haver wears on page 69 costs exactly $25). Same goes for accessories. We're after the last word in gloves, scarves, belts and jewelry—at prices that will give you change from a five dollar bill.

How does that sound? Suit your fashion approach? Fit your budget? We hope so.

So, until next month . . .

Yours for looking like a million on whatever you have to spend . . .

Connie Bartel

BUYING GUIDE

BLUE SWALLOWTAIL SUIT (page 69)
By Gladdy Colleen

Boston, Mass.—R. H. White Co.
Cleveland, Ohio—Higbee Co.
Des Moines, Iowa—Younker Bros.
Detroit, Mich.—J. L. Hudson Co.
Newark, N. J.—L. Bamberger
New York, N. Y.—B. Altman & Co.

OR WRITE TO GLADDY COLLEEN, 1400 BROADWAY, NEW YORK, N. Y.

GREY FLANNEL BOLERO SUIT (page 70)
By Henry Rosenfeld

Detroit, Mich.—Himelhoch Bros.
New York, N. Y.—Arnold Constable
Philadelphia, Pa.—Bonwit Teller
Washington, D. C.—Woodward & Lothrop

OR WRITE TO HENRY ROSENFELD, 498 SEVENTH AVE., NEW YORK, N. Y.

SUIT WITH THE BOXY JACKET (page 70)
By McArthur Ltd.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Abraham & Straus
Chicago, Ill.—The Fair
Greensboro, N. C.—Meyer's
Los Angeles, Calif.—Bullock's
New York, N. Y.—Oppenheim Collins

OR WRITE TO MCARTHUR LTD. SPORTSWEAR CO., 1372 BROADWAY, N. Y. 18, N. Y.

BLACK AND WHITE PRINT DRESS (page 70)
By Jonathan Logan

Atlanta, Ga.—Davison, Paxon Co.
Chicago, Ill.—Chas. A. Stevens Co.
Los Angeles, Calif.—Broadway Dept. Store
New Orleans, La.—D. H. Holmes Co.
New York, N. Y.—Arnold Constable
Philadelphia, Pa.—Strawbridge & Clothier

OR WRITE TO JONATHAN LOGAN INC., 1375 BROADWAY, N. Y. 18, N. Y.

NAVY CREPE DRESS WITH HIP DRAPING (page 70)
By Winfield

Chicago, Ill.—Carson, Pirie Scott & Co.
New York, N. Y.—Bloomingdale's
Philadelphia, Pa.—Blum Store
Pittsburgh, Pa.—Kaufmann's
Richmond, Va.—Thalhimer Bros.

OR WRITE TO WINFIELD DRESS CO., 498 SEVENTH AVE., NEW YORK, N. Y.

BUTTON BASIC WITH SHIRTSLEEVES (page 71)
By Jonathan Logan

Boston, Mass.—Peter Flynn
Chicago, Ill.—Marshall Field & Co.
Detroit, Mich.—D. J. Healy
New York, N. Y.—Arnold Constable
Philadelphia, Pa.—Strawbridge & Clothier

OR WRITE TO JONATHAN LOGAN, 1375 BROADWAY, N. Y. 18, N. Y.

BLACK SWEATER (page 72)
By Featherknit

Boston, Mass.—Jordan Marsh
Brooklyn, N. Y.—Frederick Loeser
Chicago, Ill.—Mandel Bros.
Detroit, Mich.—Crowley, Milner Co.
New York, N. Y.—Gimbel Bros.
Philadelphia, Pa.—Snellenberg's
Washington, D. C.—The Hecht Co.

OR WRITE TO BROOKLYN KNITWEAR, 1372 BROADWAY, N. Y. 18, N. Y.

ACCESSORIES SHOWN WITH BLACK SWEATER
Picture #1 (page 72)
Wool hood by Glentop

Boston, Mass.—Jordan Marsh
Chicago, Ill.—Mandel Bros.
Cleveland, Ohio—May Co.
Detroit, Mich.—J. L. Hudson

"DAISIES WON'T TELL"... A Carole King Original printed with romantic little conversation pieces... all leading up to a tiered side drape and a waistline bouquet of daisies quaintly tied with black velvet ribbon. Of Nanking rayon crepe. Junior Sizes 9 to 15. About $15.00. Exclusively at one fine store in your city.

Etta Gaynes

DESIGN

in CEREY Wool, quality rayon lined with EARL-GLO, about $45. Ask your favorite store for ETTA GAYNES fashions or write for store nearest you:

ETTA GAYNES, 500 Seventh Ave.
NEW YORK 18, N. Y.

ACCESSORIES SHOWN WITH BLACK SWEATER

Los Angeles, Calif.—May Co.
New York, N. Y.—Gimbel Bros.
Pittsburgh, Pa.—Gimbel Bros.

OR WRITE TO GLENSDER TEXTILE CORP., 417 FIFTH AVE., N. Y., N. Y.

Picture #1 (page 72)
Striped scarf by Glentex

Boston, Mass.—Jordan Marsh
Chicago, Ill.—Carson, Pirie Scott & Co.
Cincinnati, Ohio—John Shillito Co.
Detroit, Mich.—J. L. Hudson Co.
Los Angeles, Calif.—Bullock's
New York, N. Y.—Bloomingdale's
Pittsburgh, Pa.—Joseph Horne Co.

OR WRITE TO GLENSDER TEXTILE CORP., 417 FIFTH AVE., N. Y., N. Y.

Picture #2 (page 72)
Scarf by Glentex

Boston, Mass.—Jordan Marsh Co.
Chicago, Ill.—Carson, Pirie Scott & Co.
Cincinnati, Ohio—J. Shillito Co.
Detroit, Mich.—J. L. Hudson Co.
Los Angeles, Calif.—Bullock's
New York, N. Y.—Bloomingdale's
Pittsburgh, Pa.—Joseph Horne Co.

OR WRITE TO GLENSDER TEXTILE CORP., 417 FIFTH AVE., N. Y., N. Y.

Picture #2 (page 72)
Belt by Criterion

Boston, Mass.—Jordan Marsh Co.
Chicago, Ill.—Mandel Bros.
Cincinnati, Ohio—John Shillito Co.
Cleveland, Ohio—The May Co.
Detroit, Mich.—J. L. Hudson Co.
Los Angeles, Calif.—The Broadway Dept. Store
New York, N. Y.—John Wanamaker Co.
Pittsburgh, Pa.—Gimbel Bros.

OR WRITE TO SLOTE & KLEIN, INC., 16 EAST 34TH ST., N. Y., N. Y.

Picture #3 (page 72)
Gold braid collar by Ross

Boston, Mass.—R. H. Stern Co.
Chicago, Ill—Marshall Field & Co.
Cleveland, Ohio—Higbee Co.
Detroit, Mich.—J. L. Hudson Co.
Minneapolis, Minn.—Dayton Co.
New York, N. Y.—R. H. Macy Co.
Philadelphia, Pa.—John Wanamaker Co.
San Francisco, Calif.—Livingston Bros.

OR WRITE TO ROSS MFG. CO., 34 WEST 33RD ST., N. Y., N. Y.

Picture #3 (page 72)
Gold kid belt by Criterion

Boston, Mass.—Chandler & Co.
Detroit, Mich.—Crowley, Milner Co.
New York, N. Y.—Lord & Taylor

OR WRITE TO SLOTE & KLEIN, INC., 16 EAST 34TH ST., N. Y., N. Y.

Picture #3 (page 72)
Gold bracelets and earrings by Coro

Boston, Mass.—Filene's
Chicago, Ill.—The Fair
Cincinnati, Ohio—Mabley Carew & Co.
Detroit, Mich.—Ernst Kern Co.
New York, N. Y.—Stern Bros.

OR WRITE TO R. M. JORDAN CO., 377 FIFTH AVE., N. Y., N. Y.

Picture #4 (page 72)
Shell pin and earrings by Jordan

Atlanta, Ga.—Davison Paxon Co.
Boston, Mass.—Jordan Marsh Co.
Chicago, Ill.—The Fair
Detroit, Mich.—Crowley, Milner Co.
Los Angeles, Calif.—The May Co.
New York, N. Y.—Saks 34th St.
Philadelphia, Pa.—John Wanamaker Co.

OR WRITE TO R. M. JORDAN CO., 377 FIFTH AVE., N. Y., N. Y.

ACCESSORIES SHOWN WITH BLACK SWEATER

Picture #4 (page 72)
Scarf by Glentex

Boston, Mass.—Jordan Marsh Co.
Chicago, Ill.—Carson, Pirie Scott & Co.
Cincinnati, Ohio—J. Shillito Co.
Detroit, Mich.—J. L. Hudson Co.
Los Angeles, Calif.—Bullock's
New York, N. Y.—Bloomingdale's
Pittsburgh, Pa.—Joseph Horne Co.

OR WRITE TO GLENSDER TEXTILE CORP., 417 FIFTH AVE., N. Y., N. Y.

Picture #4 (page 72)
Belt by Criterion

Boston, Mass.—Chandler & Co.
Chicago, Ill.—Mandel Bros.
Cleveland, Ohio—The May Co.
Detroit, Mich.—Crowley, Milner Co.

OR WRITE TO SLOTE & KLEIN INC., 16 EAST 34TH ST., N. Y., N. Y.

Picture #5 (page 72)
Scarves by Glentex

Boston, Mass.—Jordan Marsh Co.
Chicago, Ill.—Carson, Pirie Scott & Co.
Cincinnati, Ohio—John Shillito Co.
Detroit, Mich.—J. L. Hudson Co.
Los Angeles, Calif.—Bullock's
New York, N. Y.—Bloomingdale's
Pittsburgh, Pa.—Joseph Horne Co.

OR WRITE TO GLENSDER TEXTILE CORP., 417 FIFTH AVE., N. Y., N. Y.

Picture #6 (page 73)
White collar by Timely

Atlanta, Ga.—Davison, Paxon Co.
Boston, Mass.—Jordan Marsh Co.
Chicago, Ill.—Mandel Bros.
Dallas, Texas—Titche-Goettinger Co.
Detroit, Mich.—Crowley, Milner Co.
New Orleans, La.—D. H. Holmes Co.
New York, N. Y.—Saks 34th St.
Portland, Ore.—Meier & Frank Co.

OR WRITE TO TIMELY ACCESSORIES INC., 15 WEST 37TH ST., N. Y., N. Y.

Picture #7 (page 73)
Plaid scarf by Glentex

Boston, Mass.—Jordan Marsh Co.
Chicago, Ill.—Carson, Pirie Scott & Co.
Cincinnati, Ohio—John Shillito Co.
Detroit, Mich.—J. L. Hudson Co.
Los Angeles, Calif.—Bullock's
New York, N. Y.—Bloomingdale's
Pittsburgh, Pa.—Joseph Horne Co.

OR WRITE TO GLENSDER TEXTILE CORP., 417 FIFTH AVE., N. Y., N. Y.

Picture #7 (page 72)
Initials by Jordan

Atlanta, Ga.—Davison Paxon Co.
Boston, Mass.—Jordan Marsh
Chicago, Ill.—The Fair
Detroit, Mich.—Crowley, Milner Co.
Los Angeles, Calif.—May Co.
New York, N. Y.—Bloomingdale's
Philadelphia, Pa.—John Wanamaker Co.

OR WRITE TO R. M. JORDAN CO., 377 FIFTH AVE., N. Y., N. Y.

THE SKIRT WITH THE BRIGHT RED LINING (page 74)
By Summit Sportswear

Boston, Mass.—Filene's
Brooklyn, N. Y.—Abraham & Straus
Chicago, Ill.—Marshall Field & Co.
Detroit, Mich.—J. L. Hudson Co.
New York, N. Y.—Oppenheim Collins
Philadelphia, Pa.—John Wanamaker Co.

OR WRITE TO SUMMIT SPORTSWEAR CO., 1384 BROADWAY, N. Y. 18, N. Y.

LITTLE MISS BREATHLESS

(Continued from page 49)

politely, as Mrs. Taylor gave instructions that they were to be home by midnight.

Then he helped Elizabeth into the white broadtail jacket, and they left.

Mrs. Taylor went to the Colony in an old black coat she'd traveled with. After all, you're only that young once.

Miss E. Taylor and escort made a stunning entrance at the Starlight Roof, walked composedly to their table, sat down very hard on their chairs, and tried to look blasé. No go. After a minute or so, they gave it up, and peered around like mere children. They even grinned.

Once Fred looked down at her. "How old are you, anyway?" he said.

"Guess." She tossed the cloud of black hair back the way she imagined Hedy Lamarr would do it, and looked mysterious.

"Sixteen?"

At that point, she was feeling at least 25, so the triumph hardly even excited her. Her clear, 14-year-old eyes danced. "A woman should never tell her age."

After Fred brought her home she threw herself across her mother's bed, and sighed happily. "Such a wonderful vacation!" Wednesday night, she and Fred were going to this place on Long Island, to a ball, and then they were going to stay at this girl's house, and go yachting on Thursday.

same old grind . . .

Back home in California, life isn't nearly so worldly. For one thing, Elizabeth goes to school, which is ghastly unsophisticated.

When she's not in a picture, she goes to the studio school. Fourteen M-G-M kids are enrolled there, including Jane Powell and Dean Stockwell and Butch Jenkins. "And Margaret, only she doesn't come," says Elizabeth.

"Margaret" is Miss O'Brien, who's tutored in her dressing room.

Elizabeth loves her teachers, and hates school. All very normal. She detests homework and despises tests and wishes vacations would go on and on.

Aside from school, California is delightful. The Taylors are looking for a place now where Elizabeth and her brother Howard can have a real rumpus house, since they have lots of healthy young friends.

Mrs. Taylor loves them all dearly, but the wear and tear on the furniture is ridiculous. Elizabeth and Howard approach her sometimes with that party look, and her heart sinks. "Let them want a barbecue," she prays. "Let them want to roll eggs on the lawn. Just so it isn't a dance."

"Mother," they say, "we'd like to have a few of the kids over for some dancing—"

And she has to say, "But I'm still having the floor fixed from the last time, darlings. You left nineteen holes, just like a golf course."

Even before dancing, comes Elizabeth's love for animals. The Taylors have three horses—King Charles, Prince Charming and Sweetheart. They have three dogs named Spot, Twinkle and Monty. They have three cats named Jeepers, Creepers and Cuddles. They have a bird, a cockatoo, it is, named Chiquita Juanita Pepita Pedro Taylor. They stuck the Pedro in because they weren't sure of the sex.

And of course there's Nibbles, the chipmunk.

The menagerie was almost joined by a soft-shell crab, too. It was when Elizabeth was up at her uncle's place in Fairfield, near Westport, Connecticut, during the early part of her vacation.

Blue Swan
LOVELY LINGERIE Fashioned to Flatter
PANTIES • GOWNS • SLIPS
Clever Blue Swan lingerie styles for every figure are available in a delightful variety of rinsable rayons. Be sure to look for them at your favorite store.
BLUE SWAN MILLS
A DIVISION OF THE McKAY PRODUCTS CORP.
EMPIRE STATE BLDG. NEW YORK CITY

WHERE FORM COUNTS--IT'S

Merry-Go-Round

A PETER PAN BRA

Backstage with BETTY GARRETT, star of "CALL ME MISTER". Here, too, Peter Pan's Merry-Go-Round bra wins enthusiastic applause!

Only Peter Pan makes MERRY-GO-ROUND — the bra with Circular Bias.

PETER PAN BRASSIERES—GIRDLES
116 EAST 27 ST., N.Y. 16

DON'T LET

"Leg Feathers"

RUIN YOUR ROMANCE

Ask the Man in Your Life about "leg-feathers." Or, better...don't! Better erase all that unsightly leg-hair the E-Z way. E-Z does it!...quickly...safely... gives your nylons a chance to really flatter your legs. Use this dainty hair-eraser millions buy yearly ...at all chain store cosmetic counters. In 10¢ and 39¢ packets.

Largest Selling Depilatory

E-Z can also be used for arms, underarms, face and back of neck

E-Z HAIR REMOVING GLOVE

A HELEN NEUSHAEFER PRODUCT

Copyright 1947
A. Sartorius & Co., Inc., Fifth Ave., N.Y. 11, N.Y.

She and Uncle Jack and a girl named Joy went crabbing, and they got a whole lot of fine husky hard-shelled specimens for dinner. And then Elizabeth caught this poor scared little soft-shelled character who was obviously in the wrong place or the wrong month or the wrong season.

She picked him up, and he didn't bite or anything. "Oh, you poor little thing," she crooned. "You cute, poor little thing."

And then when they got home, by mistake, he was cooked, along with all the others. Mrs. Taylor was delighted, since she had already begun to conjure up a trip back with, item: One crab.

Elizabeth refused to come to the table though. They all coaxed her, but she wouldn't come. She just stood there staring at them, and muttering, "You're just a bunch of cannibals, that's all!"

There was the time Elizabeth went to a party given by Atwater Kent. It was a fabulous party, with animals rented from a circus, and clowns, and other circus performers, and Elizabeth fell in love with a tiny lion cub.

He was so sweet, and so gentle. "May I hold him?" she asked Mr. Kent, and Mr. Kent gave him to her, and he nuzzled on her shoulder, and chewed at her dress, and stole her heart completely.

Mr. Kent, watching, said, "You can have him, Elizabeth. I'll buy him for you."

And Elizabeth, her heart pounding, said goodbye, and went tearing home to ask her mother.

Her mother said no.

Her face fell. "But Mother, he's so cute."

Mrs. Taylor pointed out that he wouldn't stay so cute, and what in the world kind of household pet would a lion make?

wanted: spot remover . . .

So Elizabeth gave up. Later, when Mrs. Taylor took Elizabeth's party dress to the cleaner's, the man couldn't figure out what the stain on the shoulder was, and asked.

"Lion drool," said Mrs. Taylor sweetly.

The man shook his head. Such a pretty woman, and she looked quite normal. "Maybe you better come back next week, lady," he told her. "Next week we got a specialty. Lion stains removed free."

She couldn't convince him, either.

It pleased Elizabeth and Howard enormously. Elizabeth and Howard are good friends, which is fairly odd, because most guys his age think most sisters her age are swift pains in the neck. They've always been good friends, too, partly due to the fact, Howard claims, that he's had to save Liz's darn old neck so many times.

The first rescue job he ever did on her took place at the Taylors' country place in Kent, England, when Elizabeth was three.

Howard was six, and he and she both had whooping cough. They couldn't play with other kids, naturally, and they were out sunning by a pond.

The pond had been getting too full of water, and an irrigation ditch had been dug next to it, to drain some of the water off. The ditch was about three feet deep.

Howard and Elizabeth decided to explore for tadpoles. Elizabeth plopped herself down by the side of the pond. "I bet I find one first."

"Why, you're just a baby," said Howard. His eyes searching the muddy water, he stretched his hand across the narrow ditch. The slope on the other side was very slippery, he discovered.

"Don't put your hand there; it's slippery," he said importantly.

Elizabeth of course got up and waddled over and attempted to put her hand there. She went into the ditch, head first, and got stuck completely in the thick, grey mud. All Howard could see was two small feet waving frantically in the air.

He planted his fat six-year-old legs solidly in the earth, and grabbed at her ankles. After that, he hollered. Loud, too.

"Mother," he screamed. "Mother, Mother, Mother—"

Mrs. Taylor came tearing down from the house, got a load of the hysterical Howard, and the pitch-black Elizabeth, and told herself to be calm.

After a while, she got them both home, and gave Elizabeth a hot bath and put her in bed, and called the doctor.

When the doctor came, he said Elizabeth had a fever, but she'd be all right. At least no complications were going to develop with the whooping cough. "If Howard hadn't acted so quickly," he said, "the baby would have suffocated."

Howard was unimpressed by his own heroism. All he knew was that he'd warned Elizabeth, and she'd ignored him, and he kept talking about it in an aggrieved tone of voice. "I tole her not to put her hands there," he kept saying. "I tole her, Mother, I tole her."

And there was the time she was on her way home from school, thinking dreamily of the best way to talk an ice cream sundae out of her mother that afternoon, and she passed a gas station when a car was backing out of a driveway.

no men, no makeup . . .

Howard gave her a shove that almost knocked her over the state line and when she turned around to slam him back playfully, she noticed the car. "Oh," she said, in a small voice.

"Oh, what?" said Howard bitterly. "I'm going to make Mother raise my allowance. For being a bodyguard in my spare time."

Actually, he likes her. He likes her and all her girl friends, and she and her girl friends like him and all his boy friends, and the whole crowd chases around together, swimming and riding and fishing.

Elizabeth plays the piano poorly, and Howard does much better, which she will admit behind his back. To his face, she will make scathing remarks such as, "Excuse me, Mr. Paderewski."

"That's quite all right," Howard says smugly. "We can't all be talented. When I think of the sort of people they have in the movies now—tsk, tsk."

Lovely boy, Howard. Elizabeth's best girl-friend is Anne Westmore, Wally's daughter. Anne has brown hair and blue eyes and is pretty, and she and Elizabeth have long daily conferences.

Elizabeth thinks twenty-five is a splendid age for marriage, which is a perfectly safe thought for her to hold. She also thinks she will be able to combine a career with marriage (when she's twenty-five, that is).

"No man is going to boss me," she tells Anne.

And Anne grins. "You'd better wait and find out if one wants to."

Also, Elizabeth is given to sweeping statements. "I," she says, "will never wear any makeup except maybe a little lipstick."

And Anne, who is Mr. Westmore's daughter, smiles wisely.

Elizabeth's absent-minded to the point where she sat on her mother's best hat and almost demoralized that bonnet, and her favorite actors are Ronald Colman and Gary Cooper.

"For real acting, that is," she says. "But I guess my favorite person in the movies is Van Johnson."

Anne, asking about her New York trip, discovered the principal thing that had impressed Elizabeth was that so many women walked around with false braids on their heads.

"All that hair," she said, "and none of it their own. I guess they think they can fool people."

But they couldn't fool her. No sir, not Taylor. Smart as a chipmunk, that kid.

Tagil

of New York's

Figure "Flatterer" for Spring

Just wait until you see yourself in this divine figure-hugging jersey beauty! The alluring drapery of the skirt is accented by a tiny waist, zip-closed all the way up to the lovely neckline. Styled for spring in your choice of colorful printed jersey or crisp white polka dots on rich rayon crepe. Sizes 12 to 20. Check color, size and fabric on coupon below.

only $14.95

FULL SATISFACTION OR MONEY BACK

TAGIL OF NEW YORK Dept. 523
1186 Broadway, New York 1, N. Y.

Please send me Figure Flatterer at $14.95 in Printed Jersey Pink Blue Aqua White Polka Dot Crepe Navy Grey Aqua Blue
Circle color choice and check second choice: Circle Size 12 14 16 18 20
Check enclosed ..... money order enclosed ..... Send C.O.D. .....
Name .....
Address .....
City ..... Zone ..... State .....

Revolutionary New Curler Avoids Broken Hair Ends

EASIER
Patented 'Easy-Lock" snaps closed easily with one hand from any position

SAFER
Distinctive open end. can't catch or cut hair

New curler guards against split, frizzy ends

No matter how beautiful your permanent, no matter how natural your wave, broken hair ends can cause ugly, unmanageable frizz.

The revolutionary new GAYLA "Easy-Lock" curlers "baby" brittle hair-ends, treat them smoothly, gently—thanks to the unique "open-end" feature. No wonder your hair looks so lovely, so soft, so natural, so becoming!

Get a whole set of these new, safer curlers today

Gayla

"EASY-LOCK" CURLER

by the makers of the famous GAYLA Hold-Bob bobby pins and hairpins

COPYRIGHT 1947 • GAYLORD PRODUCTS, INCORPORATED • CHICAGO 16, ILL.

the fans

MODERN SCREEN FAN CLUB ASSOCIATION • SHIRLEY FROHLICH, DIRECTOR

■ We'd heard so much about Gene Autry's personal interest in the GA Friendship Club, we were beginning to envision him as the guy who personally licks the stamps on every out-going copy of "Autry's Aces" and tucks all paid-up members into bed at night. So when Gene's Rodeo hit town, we hiked up to Madison Square Garden (in a taxi, that is) to see how a busy singer-actor-cowboy keeps up with the activities of 2,000 special fans. In Gene's huge, barn-like dressing room (the four walls literally lined with his 150-odd colorful Western outfits), we found Catherine Nuessle and Pearl Wieder, two GAFers from Buffalo, waiting for Gene. We discovered that all Autry club members were invited to his quarters, below the Garden arena, and they'd been dropping in in droves from all over the Eastern seaboard. We'd just missed the Boston bunch, headed by Berenice Olson (who took the pic below), Beverly Kimball and Gladys Green. The previous Sunday had been Gene's birthday and Mrs. Helen Brown supplied a birthday cake. It had been open house all day and, since it was Sunday, he took the whole gang to CBS for rehearsals and broadcast. The wonder of it is that Gene remembers the name and face of every Autry-ite, and usually the circumstances of their previous meetings.

Gene came in shortly, wearing a blue business suit, offset by a white ten-gallon hat and fancy riding boots. While he lunched on New York hot dogs and coffee, we went into a long discussion of the value of fan clubs. Gene is well up on the activities of his GAFC and is genuinely appreciative of each member. He is always eager to meet and talk to every one, or to explain patiently for the umpteenth time just how Champion and Champion, Jr., were trained for their amazing performances in the Rodeo.

Later in the week, Bonnie Baker, Canadian chapter head, came down from Toronto and brought members Jane McQueen, Betty O'Neill, Bernice and Audrey Sellers with her. They dropped in at MSFCA quarters one afternoon and we chatted wildly about the club. We also admired their various wallet-sized collections of autographed Autrys. For our part, we dragged out an advance copy of the November MS and showed off our "Flying Cowboy" story on Gene. A fair exchange, the gals thought.

—AND IN CHICAGO . . .

While Gene was taking New York by storm, Chicago fans were attending the first national convention of the Roy Rogers Club. Roy. (Continued on page 118)

In Chicago, Roy Rogers hosted RRFC convention delegates (and their youngsters!).

In N. Y., it was "open house" for GAFers in Gene's Madison Sq. Garden quarters.

SHE CROSSES UP MENJOU... KISSES DRAKE... AND CONNIVES WITH BENDIX!

DEANNA!... dream-teamed with the screen's new young star sensation... and matched for mirth with your favorite laugh-makers!

UNIVERSAL-INTERNATIONAL presents

Deanna DURBIN · Tom DRAKE · William BENDIX

I'll be Yours

with Adolphe MENJOU

Walter Catlett · Franklin Pangborn · William Brooks

Produced by FELIX JACKSON · Directed by WILLIAM A. SEITER

Associate Producer: HOWARD CHRISTIE · Adapted by FELIX JACKSON

From the Screenplay "The Good Fairy" by Preston Sturges · Based on a comedy by Ferenc Molnar · Translated and Adapted by Jane Hinton · Director of Photography: Hal Mohr, A.S.C.

Deanna Sings

"SARI WALTZ"
"GRANADA"
"BRAHMS' LULLABY"
"IT'S DREAM TIME"

UNIVERSAL INTERNATIONAL

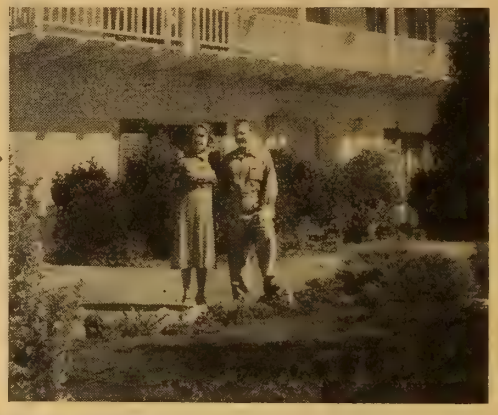
FIBBER'S HUMOR IS HOME-

SPUN AND MOLLY'S NAME IS PLAIN, BUT

THE McGEE POPULARITY—FABULOUS!

Tain't so funny when the McGees had to live in a trailer until their new home was completed!

This isn't 79 Wistful Vista, but is the real home the McGees have just sold for a smaller one.



You know 'em as Fibber McGee and Molly, but they're really Jim and Marion Jordan, with daughter Kathryn.

ed sullivan's radio award

■ Twelve years ago, on a tour of personal appearances in vaudeville with a big Broadway variety revue, I was booked into the tremendous Detroit Fox Theater, managed by Dave Idzal. "If I might make a suggestion," said Mr. Idzal, "I'd like to add an act to your show, which the theater will pay for—think it might help you do business out here."

What kind of an act did Mr. Idzal have in mind? "Well," he said, "it's a little radio team that's starting to catch on in the midwest, a little on the 'corny' side as humor goes, but people seem to like them a lot." With the utmost patience, I explained to Dave that what I had was a smart, sophisticated revue that you might find in a big Broadway night club, and that a corny little midwest radio team hardly would fit into the Sullivan "Dawn Patrol" pattern. Besides, I had Artie Auerbach for comedy.

"Maybe so," said Mr. Idzal, unruffled, "but I follow radio very closely, and this little team is going to go places. This is a chance for you to get in on the ground floor."

"What's the name of the radio team?" I asked, politely. "You've never heard of them," he said, "Fibber McGee and Molly." The Broadway columnist backed away from the Detroit Fox Theater manager in some alarm. "Fibber McGee and Molly! !" No act could have a name as silly as that. No, no, a thousand times no, that sort of thing just wasn't being done in big time vaudeville, direct from Broadway. "It's up to you," quietly observed Mr. Idzal, "But I still think you're making a mistake, because people out this way like Fibber McGee and Molly, and they're going places."

I'm not exaggerating this story. It happened just as I've related it here. Of all the blunders I've made, this easily is one of the most notable, in my personal collection. It takes rank with my prediction about "Tobacco Road," when that hill-billy shocker opened in New York. After the show opened, I sat with Producer Jack Kirkland (Continued on page 86)

JAMES DUNN
in his first role since "A Tree Grows In Brooklyn."

(Continued from page 84)

in The Tavern, on West 48th Street. "What do you think?" he asked. "It will last about a week, Jack," I consoled him. "It's too dirty, too rough on the ears." The last time I heard about "Tobacco Road," it had played not less than nine years.

Had I known Dave Idzal better, at that time, I wouldn't have refused to add the unknown Fibber and Molly to my Detroit Fox unit. Idzal is a short, husky little genius of show business. He knows what's cooking in night clubs, in radio, in television, in circuses, in summer stock theaters. His test of all performers is as simple as the yardstick he applied to unknown Fibber McGee and Molly: Does the public like them?

It was just that quality about Fibber and Molly that accounts for the national popularity they've enjoyed in the past 12 years. The little team from Peoria, Illinois, had a particularly homespun American crackerbox type of comedy that reached deep into the heart of America. It was written by Don Quinn, a discouraged cartoonist, and it was interpreted by Jim and Marion Jordan, the real tags of Fibber and Molly.

If Irving Berlin or Ethel Merman ever want any additional choruses of "There's no business like show business," the Jordans could supply some ideas. Ideas based on their own struggles. Fibber could go back to 1917, when he landed his first professional job as top tenor with a broken down vaudeville act billed as "A Night With the Poets." Despite that pleasant and beguiling billing, Jordan found that "A Night With the Poets" was a series of sleeper jumps, cheap hotels and poor food. In August, 1918, he was back in Peoria to marry Marion, before shoving off on a troop train heading for Camp Forrest, Georgia. From there he shipped out to France, and Marion supported herself by returning to her piano teaching chores.

Rehabilitation in 1919 for Pvt. Jim Jordan was just as tough as the GIs are finding it today. In succession, he became a machinist's helper, a salesman of washing machines and vacuum cleaners, a day laborer and then an insurance salesman. They needed insurance—daughter Kathryn arrived in 1920. But the show business yen was still very much alive, to the extent that shortly after, they borrowed $1,000 for a vaudeville tour that lasted four months in tank towns. This act clicked, and served as a springboard into small time vaudeville. In 1923, a son was born.

Marion Jordan went back to Peoria to raise the children; Jim wandered on to Chicago, in search of bookings in vaudeville. Shortly after, a flop, back he went to Peoria, where he got a job as a clerk in a dry goods store, $10 a week. They added to that by playing club dates—Elks, Lions, Moose, K. of C.

They were conducting a Gallup poll all their own, and when radio beckoned, in 1927, Jim and Marion Jordan were better than green hands. And when, four years later, they met Don Quinn, in 1931, and started their first NBC serial, "Smackout," they had a background of experience that could only have been acquired in the gloomy, dreary precincts of show business.

There was another element involved, the element of public acceptance. The Chicago radio stations had access to a listening audience that accurately cross-sectioned American taste. If a performer clicked over the Chicago stations, it meant that his or her type of material would be acceptable to a majority of Americans. When Dave Idzal said, of Fibber and Molly, "The public out here seems to like them," he was issuing a blank check, negotiable on demand.

So this month, the MODERN SCREEN-Ed Sullivan gold plaque of excellence goes to Fibber McGee and Molly, the Peoria, Illinois, products who have become an American institution.

GOOD NEWS

(Continued from page 13)

Gets In Your Eyes" was their favorite tune to dance to—but has this gone far enough?

The busiest guy in the whole room was Bill Holden dressed up as a waiter—and as soon as anyone spilled anything, there was Bill to wipe it up. His only complaint was—NO TIPS! Bill's wife, Brenda Marshall, looked beautiful in a spangled gown. She said she wasn't "anything in particular." Unusual to meet a lady without a suppressed desire, but I guess Brenda is just plain happy being a contented wife and mother.

As cute as peanuts was June Allyson who came as a Shriner with a little Turkish fez, the size of a teacup, on her head.

Kay Kayser was Casey Jones, and sitting with Kay and his lovely Georgia was Greer Garson, looking perfectly beautiful as a Western dance hall queen. She told me she was afraid to sneeze because the top of her dress was glued to her. Richard Ney, who, I must say, is Hollywood's most devoted husband, was also Western—a cowboy.

Diana Lynn came with her ex-fiancé, Henry Willson, but Diana whispered to me, "Doesn't mean a thing." She was lovely as a ballet girl of the late '90's and unless my eyes deceived me, Henry's "suppressed desire" was that same little ballet girl!

When it was time for me to go home and get a little of my own suppressed desire—a little sleep—they were still pouring in for the cameramen's highly successful party.

FEUDIN' WITH FRANKIE? Well, whom do you think I'm having one of "them" famous so-called "Parsons feuds" with? Frankie Sinatra, no less—although, for the life of me, I can't get as mad as I'm cracked up to be.

There's something about a young man who loses his temper as explosively as Frank must have when he sent me a telegram burning up the Western Union wires, that hands me a few chuckles.

The spark that brought on this blast was an item, printed in my daily column, saying that Sinatra had been difficult on the M-G-M lot, pouting particularly because he had been refused the rights to a song he sings in "It Happened In Brooklyn" and adding that the Voice could stand a bit of talking to. Yipes!

By return carrier Pidgeon, I received the following eye-popper—and I mean eye-popper, which I herewith reprint in the vital points:

Bearing no greeting, not even a raspberry, it goes: SUGGEST YOU READ THIS TELEGRAM WITH YOUR ARTICLE OF NOVEMBER 14th IN YOUR OTHER HAND. I'LL BEGIN BY SAYING THAT IF YOU CARE TO MAKE A BET I'LL BE GLAD TO TAKE YOUR MONEY THAT M-G-M AND FRANK SINATRA DO NOT PART COMPANY, PERMANENTLY OR OTHERWISE.

SECONDLY, FRANKIE HAS NOT BEEN A VERY DIFFICULT BOY ON THE LOT. FRANKIE HAS ONLY BEEN HEARD FROM WHEN IT CONCERNS THE IMPROVEMENT OF THE PICTURE, WHICH YOU WILL FIND HAPPENS IN MOST PICTURES WHERE YOU USE HUMAN BEINGS . . . . . YOUR ARTICLE CLAIMS MY POUT WAS CAUSED BY SOMETHING ABOUT A SONG. REGARDLESS OF WHERE YOU GOT THIS INFORMATION, FROM SOME GOSSIP MONGER OR OTHERWISE, YOU CAN REST ASSURED THAT IF I POUTED AT ALL IT WOULD HAVE BEEN FOR A MUCH BIGGER REASON THAN A BROKEN DOWN SONG . . . . . AS AN ADDED THOUGHT, I HAVE ALWAYS BEEN ONE OF THE MOST STALWART DEFENDERS OF THE PHRASE "NOBODY IS INDISPENSABLE," SO APPARENTLY YOUR LINE ABOUT MY BEING IRREPLACEABLE WAS ALL WET.

LAST, BUT NOT LEAST, IN THE FUTURE I'LL APPRECIATE YOUR NOT WASTING YOUR BREATH ON ANY LECTURES BECAUSE WHEN I FEEL I NEED ONE I'LL SEEK ADVICE FROM SOMEONE WHO EITHER WRITES OR TELLS THE TRUTH. YOU HAVE MY PERMISSION TO PRINT THIS IF YOU SO DESIRE AND CLEAR UP A GREAT INJUSTICE! FRANK SINATRA (it was signed).

Well, the irate Frankie can never say now I wasn't fair enough to give his side. But, after that bombshell, mine is this:

I obtained my information that Frankie was being difficult on the M-G-M lot straight from headquarters—the M-G-M lot. As for my right to "lecture"—I've been covering the Hollywood scene for many years and I reserve the right to call the shots as I see them.

When young actors have gotten out of line from time to time, I have said so and many of those who have been criticized have later thanked me—the bigger they are, the better they take a friendly tip, I have found out. Recently, when Clark Gable was going 'round and 'round with M-G-M, I said I thought he should think it over. And when I ran into him at a party during the midst of my campaign, he chuckled and said, "Louella, you and Louis B. Mayer are going to get me in 'The Hucksters' yet. I wasn't satisfied with the first version of the script—but I've thought it over and decided the way to settle our problems is to talk them over—not walk away from them." So, as you know, Clark is now back in "The Hucksters" and he and M-G-M are just like THAT again.

If I were the only newspaper person under fire from Frankie's wrath, I might start wondering. But other writers and publications have commented on what is unmistakably a very high-handed attitude coming from The Voice. So I'm takin' it easy—coasting along. At least, I'm distinctive. I'm probably the only fan of Sinatra's voice in the world having a feud with the Swooner. Marie, put my bobby sox away for awhile.

YOU'LL BE GASPING FOR BREATH AT THE END OF
"THE CHASE"
Seymour Nebenzal
presents
ROBERT CUMMINGS
in
"THE CHASE"
with MICHELE
MORGAN
STEVE COCHRAN
and PETER LORRE
Screenplay by PHILIP YORDAN
Directed by ARTHUR RIPLEY
Released Thru UNITED ARTISTS

END OF A DREAM

(Continued from page 33)

the screen. And all this on the premiere eve of "The Razor's Edge," Tyrone Power's first picture since the war, and the greatest performance of his life.

I thought, "What a home town reward for an ex-Marine! What a homecoming for Hollywood's good-will ambassador to South America! What a shame!"

I knew Ty would tell me the truth. I've known him a long, long time. That's why I wanted to see him at once. That's why I'll stake my reputation on what he told me.

But even I was surprised at what I saw in his face. There was no bitterness there, no resentment, no anger at the outrageous rumors. He repeated:

"I'm free, Hedda. And I'm not in love with anybody!"

I said what was on my mind, "Ty, you've grown up."

He grinned and his eyes twinkled wisely. "I'm thirty-two. Wouldn't you say it was about time?"

I nodded. Already my mind was reeling back to the Ty Power I'd known in Hollywood for the past ten years. And especially to the time, eight years ago, when Ty had hopped off from Hollywood on another flying South American movie good-will tour.

That time he came back to Hollywood facing a honeymoon. This time Ty is back facing a divorce. Neither time was anyone in Hollywood surprised.

You can't keep secrets in Hollywood. And Ty's not good at masking his feelings. He's too straightforward, sensitive and sincere. Everybody knew, eight years ago when he hopped off from Hollywood, that Annabella Charpentier Murat had him hook, line and sinker. But the fact that he'd fallen hard enough for matrimony was a surprise. Somehow worldly, sophisticated, French Annabella, and fresh, American, naive Ty just didn't match up as a team.

I remember the first time I ever saw Ty on the screen. I went to a preview of "Girls' Dormitory" and it was a pretty important preview to Hollywood. Darryl Zanuck had imported the saucy French actress, Simone Simon, and was going to make her an American star, or else. "Girls' Dormitory" was her first picture, and like anyone else, I was all agog.

I didn't stay that way long. The picture was sorry and you couldn't understand what Simone was saying. I fidgeted in my seat until the last few feet.

in walked youth . . .

Then a door opened and—like a gust of fresh air—in blew a breezy American boy, with black, flashing eyes and the USA written all over his handsome young map.

All he said was, "Well—here I am!" And there he was—for sure. Everybody knew it: You could hear the whispers run all up and down aisles, "Who is he?"

I knew who he was. I'd seen him as a kid. But I sat through that dull picture twice—just to see him again. When I left, I was telling myself and anyone who'd listen,

"There's your new America's Boy Friend!"

I'm not bragging. I was no lady Columbus. It wasn't my secret. Darryl Zanuck knew it as well as I did, and so did everyone else with half an eye to personality. Walter Winchell cracked in his column the very next day: "Who's Hollywood's biggest star of next year? That's easy—Tyrone Power!" Okay, America.

Ty's popularity zoomed higher than Buddy Rogers' ever did. He was America's boy friend in hit picture after picture. But in his private life it was different. A foreigner took him over right away. Sonja Henie landed, and soon had the situation well in hand. Maybe Ty was too American—he was a sucker for an accent.

I won't go into the first Hollywood romance of Ty's except to say it was a "publicity" affair from the start. And, although they liked each other, it was the same thing in the middle and at the end.

We all had Ty Power practically married to Janet Gaynor right after that. Janet had just made her amazing comeback in "A Star Is Born" and Ty was riding his road to fame high, wide and handsome when they discovered each other. Janet was petite, thoroughly American, sweet and a charming knockout (as she is still today) and she was fancy free after her divorce. It looked like an ideal match. For Janet, experienced and mature, with a wise knowledge of Hollywood values, was just the girl for Ty to team with. Remember, Ty Power's success was swift and heady. He was fairly bursting with life and a longing to capture all the things of life he didn't know about. Maybe that was the trouble. He'd known girls like Janet all his life. He'd never seen one like Annabella before.

I remember when Tyrone left for his desert location on "Suez." Janet Gaynor was the last girl he saw. It was her last date with Ty, too, although she didn't know it. Janet didn't know what had happened on a Twentieth Century-Fox sound stage a few weeks before, either. It was a test stage where the fatal collision occurred. Ty was on his way in for a makeup test; Annabella was on her way out from the test that put her with Ty in "Suez." They bumped, "met cute" as the Hollywood script writers say, apologized to each other and a makeup girl came to the rescue with introductions. And Ty fell like a ton of bricks.

I'm not saying Annabella married Tyrone Power to kick along her career. I don't believe that. But I wonder if she was ever as deeply in love with him as he was with her. Annabella is French—she's practical. She's not one to let her feelings go to her head, like a glass of champagne. She loves with her brain as well as her heart. She'd been married twice before. She was still wed to Jean Murat, a French actor, when Ty saw moonbeams around her blond head. She had a daughter. Ty was in his early twenties and Annabella—well, Annabella was older. Already, Annabella had had a career in French films. She had been around on the Continent. She knew the score.

two worlds . . .

All this and the complications to marriage meant nothing to Tyrone then. Annabella completely charmed him—and that she has—charm. I remember interviewing her when she first came to Hollywood. Her English was broken enough to be irresistibly cute. She was distinguée, sophisticated, smart, attractive. She was and is, blessed with all the feminine charms that are supposed to be natural to Frenchwomen. She represented a new, thrilling world to Ty, and Ty was eager for new worlds.

So Annabella travelled back to France to get her divorce and bring her daughter to Hollywood. Ty hopped off on his first good-will air tour of South America. No Hollywood star ever had a more triumphant one. Latin America loved his boyish, American personality and Ty loved Latin America. The exotic thrill of that experience only fed his love for exciting, foreign Annabella. She sailed to Rio de Janiero to meet him, they flew together back to Hollywood and the wedding bells tinkled. Charles Boyer, a Frenchman, gave Annabella away and his wife, Pat Paterson, an Englishwoman, was maid of honor at the ceremony. On Ty's side, it was All-American. Patia, his mother, and his sister, Ann, were there and Don Ameche stood up with him. They spent their hurry-up honeymoon at the Grand Canyon, but their real honeymoon came next year when they went to Europe.

I'm not saying Tyrone didn't love every bit of it, the titled foreigners Annabella introduced him to, the smart European circles he travelled in, the sights he saw, the thrill of having a smooth, sophisticated wife to show him around. Ty was happy as long as the honeymoon lasted and longer. They came back and did a play together in Eastern summer stock, they made plans for a movie together, but it didn't come through. Ty's career went on brilliantly—but Annabella's dropped away.

That wasn't the trouble in Paradise, though. You can't blame a divergence of careers for their separation, despite Ty's gallant "conflicting careers" announcement in New York. They didn't grow apart because Tyrone Power became one of the greatest of Hollywood stars and Annabella didn't. That's a trite but true enough reason for many a Hollywood split-up, but not for Tyrone Power's.

The truth was that deep inside, Tyrone and Annabella were as different as night and day—as different as an ingenuous, wholesome American young man and a sophisticated, mature French woman can be. After the honeymoon wore off, there was no real companionship to bind them together. There were no children of their own, only Annabella's daughter by another man. No mutual career. No mutual country, friends, hobbies or interests. Not real ones.

Tyrone Power is really a very plain, sincere, and sentimental man underneath. Glamor has gilded him but he's a Mid-

A FIVE DOLLAR VALENTINE

Red satin hearts with white lacy ruffles around the edge are awfully pretty, but we kinda thought the valentine you'd rather receive from MODERN SCREEN would be a crisp, yellow check for five dollars. How to become our valentine is simple as eating ice cream. All you've got to do to win this easy-earned money is to write us a true anecdote about the time you met a movie star. Of course we don't mean a commonplace asking for an autograph; we prefer unusual items which—to show you what we mean—you'd enjoy reading in this magazine. To see what we like, why not read the two "I Saw It Happens" in this issue? Then write your own brief account neatly and mail it off to our "I Saw It Happen" Editor, MODERN SCREEN, 149 Madison Avenue, New York 16, N. Y. If we decide to publish it, there'll be five dollars winging its way to you!

Ellie, the dissatisfied eyeful...

NOW ELLIE HAD...

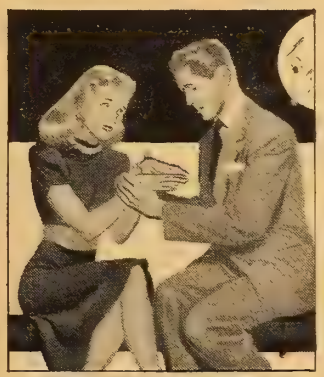
ARTICULATE ANKLES...

NIFTY KNEES...

AND A TERRIFIC TORSO!

YET ELLIE, OF ALL PEOPLE, WAS STILL DISSATISFIED WITH HERSELF! AND HERE'S WHY!

TRY AS SHE WOULD, ELLIE COULDN'T MAKE HER HANDS GIVE OUT GLAMOUR LIKE THE REST OF HER! THEY'D GET DRIED OUT, CHAPPED AND ROUGH...



SO SCRATCHY, IN FACT, THAT HALF THE TIME ELLIE'S PUBLIC THOUGHT THEY'D GOT HOLD OF A PORCUPINE!

THEN ONE DAY, NELLIE TOLD ELLIE ABOUT AN ENTIRELY NEW AND DIFFERENT HAND LOTION! THE BEFOREHAND LOTION... TRUSHAY!

SO ELLIE SMOOTHED CREAMY, FRAGRANT TRUSHAY ON HER HANDS EVERY DAY BEFORE SHE TACKLED THE DISHES... BECAUSE TRUSHAY GUARDS HANDS EVEN IN HOT, SOAPY WATER!

WHAT'S MORE, ELLIE PUT ON TRUSHAY BEFORE SHE DUNKED HER LIGHT LAUNDRY — AND TRUSHAY'S SPECIAL "OIL-RICHNESS" HELPED PREVENT THE DRYING DAMAGE OF THAT SOAP-AND-WATER TASK, TOO!

WELL, AS YOU CAN SEE BY THE ABOVE, ELLIE GOT SPLENDID RESULTS FROM TRUSHAY'S SPECIAL BEFOREHAND PROTECTION — AND ITS WONDERFUL SOFTENING HELP! YOU WILL, TOO!

PRODUCT OF BRISTOL-MYERS

P. S. Trushay's grand for softening hands at any time. Wonderful, too, for rough, dry elbows and heels... as a powder base... before and after exposure to weather. Trushay contains no alcohol, is not sticky. Begin today to use Trushay.

west kid from Cincinnati, Ohio, just like the nice boy you know next door grown up. Basically, Ty has always clung to old friends, old associations, old memories. Bill Gallagher, his remote cousin, has been close as a brother to Ty for eleven years. Tommy Noonan, an old Cincinnati schoolmate, has been his stand-in almost as long. Henry King, who started Ty to fame in "Lloyd's of London," is still his best Hollywood adviser and guide.

I've known Ty for a long time and I knew his father before him. I know what kind of stuff Ty's made of. I know his feeling for his own origin and his character. Let me tell you a story:

One day, not long after Ty had made his hit in "Lloyd's of London," I met his mother, Patia, on the street in Hollywood. We hadn't seen each other for a good twenty years, not since the days when our husbands, De Wolfe Hopper and Tyrone Power, Senior, were in Hollywood, mixing silent movie parts with stage plays. We gossiped about the good old days and I happened to mention a Tyrone Power play, "The Servant in the House."

"How did you happen to remember that one?" exclaimed Patia.

I explained: It was well etched on my memory because of a tiff I'd had with my late husband. He was a soft touch by nature and finally he'd promised to lend no more money to anyone without huddling with me first. But one day he came in and confessed he'd met an old pal of his, Tyrone Power, and lent him $500 to help finance "The Servant in the House" company. That broken promise made me mad, but what made me madder was that that day was my birthday—and my husband had forgotten it! I laughed out this story to Patia, and thought no more about it.

A few weeks later, she called up, invited me to lunch and handed me a check for $500, signed by her son, Tyrone, Junior. I was speechless (and that's something!). I couldn't believe it. I had never run across any such exhibition of sentimental honor in all my years in show business. Ty no more owed me that money than you did. What's more, he couldn't afford to pay it then. But that's the kind of a guy he is.

Ty came to a party at my house not long after he came back from the South Pacific. My son, Bill, was there, too. Bill was in underwater demolition during the war. Ty spotted him, greeted him, to Bill's surprise, with, "Why didn't you look me up on Guam?"

Bill was baffled, "Were you there?"

"Sure," said Ty, "I heard your boat was coming in, so I stayed over there three hours hoping you'd look me up." And Bill didn't even know Ty knew he was on a boat! That again is typical Ty Power. He's genuine. He's no snob.

too slick . . .

I wouldn't say Annabella was, either. But her sophisticated tastes were not Ty's. The big white mansion on Saltair Drive in Brentwood they bought from Grace Moore and remodelled to Annabella's formal tastes, never had the kind of warmth and informality I know Ty Power would have liked it to have. Annabella held herself largely aloof from Hollywood and from many of Ty's old friends. Gradually but inevitably she narrowed the Powers' social circle down to the people she liked—a few of Hollywood's cosmopolitan upper crust.

Ty can handle himself in any circle, but the tight little, right little group is not his style. And there was another important difference. Annabella could never share Ty's outdoor life. Most American girls can adapt themselves to their husbands' leisure interests. Carole Lombard did when she married Clark Gable, although Carole could be just as sophisticated as Annabella. But it was beyond Mrs. Power's native abilities to swim along with him, play tennis, sail and fly—as Ty loved to do. She could no more have camped in the mountains on a hunting expedition or wet her feet fishing than fly.

He had lots of time to think all this over during the war. Over three years of it. Flying over lonely Pacific wastes, there isn't much else to do but think. The war changed a lot of men from the USA, made them face up to realities and ask themselves the question—"Am I really happy?" Tyrone didn't know for sure when he came back. Except for scattered leaves, he had gone his way and Annabella hers all those three years. She worked on many a GI benefit show, sold bonds, worked in the Red Cross, appeared in a New York show.

But the old life wasn't what Ty Power wanted to come back to. It was as simple as that. There were no other girls to push Annabella out of his heart; there aren't any girls in the South Pacific. I heard Annabella's name coupled with this and that escort in Ty's absence, but if there's another man in the case, it's news to me.

Certainly no separation could have been more amicable. The night after Tyrone gave the papers the news in New York he was out with Annabella to El Morocco in Manhattan. He's still living in the Saltair mansion—Annabella's mansion now—where Annabella's mother lives. He'll stay there until Annabella finishes the Broadway play she's starting. He had only the nicest things to say to me about his wife. There are no hard feelings there.

But both Ty and Annabella must have known the truth when he flew into San Francisco Bay and she met him. For a time all seemed peaceful and quiet in Hollywood and Ty made outward attempts at least to pick up his old life. But the growing restlessness within him was fanned by two events since his return.

One was the tragedy that froze Ty's first attempt to relax and be gay in the old Hollywood way. The party was at his house and it was festive. And the fun and festivity led directly to the shocking accidental death of Primula Niven, the lovely wife of one of Ty's best friends, David Niven. That jarred Ty far more than people know. I saw him right afterward and he looked like a stricken man.

The other revelation to Ty's soul was his job in "The Razor's Edge." When Tyrone Power went into "The Razor's Edge," it was more than any mere starring part in a comeback movie. He was asking himself the same question that troubled Larry, Somerset Maugham's spiritual young hero: "What are the realities of my life?" Ty played the young man who seeks the ultimate truth against a background of sophistication for the greatest performance of his life. It was no accident. That questing Larry was Tyrone Power, himself. Just as it's a million other ex-soldiers in these United States trying to find the answers, the true answers of the better life they dreamed about.

no smoke, no fire . . .

So it ended, this time in New York with the words everyone expected to hear, heralding a new, a free and a forward looking Tyrone Power. I asked him when the divorce would be and where. He said, "That doesn't matter. It's all over now and what the courts do can't possibly make any difference." I know that Ty gave up most of the wealth and possessions his fame has brought him through the years. He did it gladly. But when you do that you want your freedom pretty bad.

Which brings up the subject of Ty Power and Gene Tierney. Are they in love? Will they get married? Sometimes I can hardly believe my eyes when I read the nonsense in the newspapers. Think how Ty Power must have felt when he read what I read right after he'd announced honestly that he and Annabella had decided to part. One headline screamed, "Film Love Real Thing Now For Gene and Ty." It began:

"A screen romance begun before the grinding cameras of a Hollywood movie set has swept sultry-eyed Gene Tierney and handsome Ty Power into a real life love tangle that had this jaded film capital agog today," it bleated. It went on to say that only the fact that both Ty and Gene were still married to somebody else kept them from flying to each other's arms.

Well—!

The day that was printed I was talking to Ty—and I want to tell you how this very nice guy reacted to all of that vicious hooey. First off, he told me honestly, "Sure I like Gene. I've worked with her in two pictures and she's a grand little actress, a swell and brave girl. I'd do anything in the world to help her. But I'm not in love with her. I'm not in love with anybody. This sort of stuff," he muttered wonderingly, "is so darned ridiculous!"

You can take it from me and Tyrone Power that he won't marry Gene Tierney. He won't marry anybody for a long time. He hasn't a romantic thought today in his head. It's filled only with thoughts of his new freedom and a desperate desire to get away from Hollywood and think things out for himself and for the future.

He'll get that chance soon when he goes to Mexico to make "Captain From Castile" with Henry King, the director who discovered him years ago. He'll be away from Hollywood for months and when he comes back, I know that straight thinking Ty, who's as honest with himself as he is with everyone else, will have the answers to his future, private and professional.

So the wheel turns full circle for Ty. Seven years, they say, is a full chapter in a man's life. Every seven years he changes, and so does his life.

It was just seven years ago that Tyrone Power and Annabella were married. That chapter is closed, and for keeps. There will be no reconciliation. Ty told me so. He is starting out on the path of his new life and his new dreams, and for him there's a rainbow at the end.

It's a new chapter Ty Power looks forward to eagerly. Call his broken home a war casualty if you like. Maybe so. Or call it just Tyrone Power coming of age. It doesn't matter. All that is behind him and he isn't looking back.

So I say—and I know the world will join me—good luck and Power to you, Ty!

I SAW IT HAPPEN

While sitting in a Boston restaurant, I looked up and saw several men approaching a nearby table. One of them was easily recognizable as Bing Crosby. A little, white-haired old lady, seated opposite me, looked up and gasped, "Why, it's Father O'Malley!" Bing turned, his blue eyes twinkling, doffed his hat, and winked wickedly at the delighted little lady.

Ann Waldron
Taunton, Massachusetts

On Valentine's Day, as on all days of importance through the year, a greeting card will speak your innermost thoughts.

GOLDEN BELL GB GREETING CARDS

Gartner and Bender, inc. Publishers

CHICAGO • NEW YORK

Copyright 1947, Gartner & Bender, Inc.

GREETING CARDS BEARING THE GOLDEN BELL TRADE MARK ARE FOUND WHEREVER VARIETY STORES SERVE THE PUBLIC

What spoon would you choose?

Surely the one with these

The two blocks of sterling inlaid at backs of bowls and handles of most used spoons and forks. They make this silverplate stay lovelier longer. Fifty-two piece set $68.50 with chest. (tax free)

HOLMES & EDWARDS STERLING INLAID° SILVERPLATE

Copyright 1947, The International Silver Co., Holmes & Edwards Division, Meriden, Conn. Sold in Canada by: The T. Eaton Co., Ltd., °Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

Infant and Toddler feet are S-A-F-E-R in these SENSIBLY-PRICED shoes Why?

Wise mothers know that greatest harm to little feet comes from letting baby grow into and out of shoes. They know that WEE WALKERS are well-made, accurately shaped, flexible shoes, carefully designed to serve baby's footwear needs at moderate cost. The sensible price allows you to buy the correct size NOW and change to a larger size in TIME.

Ask your doctor about WEE WALKERS . . . see them . . . compare them . . . try them . . . in Infants' or shoe department of stores listed. Birth to size 8.

COMMENDED PARENTS MAGAZINE CONSUMER SERVICE

W. T. Grant Co. S. S. Kresge Co. J. J. Newberry Co.
H. L. Green Co., Inc. I. Silver & Bros. Scott Stores
McCrory Stores Schulte-United Charles Stores Co.
Metropolitan Chain Stores, Inc. Kinney Shoe Stores
F. & W. Grand Grand Silver Co. McLellan Stores
Montgomery Ward & Co.

Smooth One-Piece Tongue:

Stops pressure on nerves, muscles, blood vessels caused by sewed-on tongue, still used on some shoes selling at top prices.

FREE: Pamphlet, "Look At Your Baby's Feet." Valuable information on foot care, and scale to measure size needed. Moran Shoe Co., Dept. M, Carlyle, Ill.

WEE WALKER Shoes FOR Wee WALKERS

WHETHER YOU'RE NOBODY'S BABY OR ANYBODY'S GAL, CHANCES ARE YOU'VE GOT A MAN-PROBLEM. AND THAT'S OUR SPECIALTY—MAKING MOLEHILLS OUT OF MOUNTAINS.

by Jean Kinkead

co-ed

■ Who hasn't got a man-problem, and is there anything more bewildering or insomnia-making? Take poor Kate. She's frantic 'cause she has no man at all. Then there's Janie who's losing sleep 'cause she has too many beaux. And look at Bets, she has a perfectly adorable fella and she still isn't satisfied. What's to be done? Fortunately, there's a solution for all of 'em, so if you're a Kate or a Janie or a Bets in need of some quick first aid, keep reading.

She's Nobody's Baby: Look, how do these things happen? Kate's a cute-looking gal, and she knows a lot about jazz and basketball, and she can whip up a Sunday night supper that simply kills the people. Yet the guys just don't know she's There. She lacks that indefinable business that makes 'em stop, look and whistle. What can she do about it? Oh, lots of things. First she should double-check on her grooming. (Cleanliness rates higher than cuteness, didja know?) Are her teeth scrubbed clean? Is her hair polished and her skin a-glow? Are her sweaters and skirts band-box fresh? Then she might give her personality a once-over. Is she so shy that people think she's a snob or a dope? Or so loud that you need ear muffs when she's around? Is she smart-alecky and always belittlin'? Is she so catty that no one can trust her? Is she so opinionless that talking to her is like talking to yourself? Let her acknowledge her defects to herself and then go about patching them up. After that she starts promoting herself. In a nice lady-like way she should let people know what a dream girl she's become. She should set her cap for a boy in the band or one on the basketball team. Why couldn't she drop a note in study hall to the cute guy who plays such beautiful piano telling him he's bettern' Eddie Heywood or Mel Henke. (Yum—have you heard him?) Couldn't she walk up to the shy lanky center on the basketball team and tell him what a gorgeous game he played Saturday night? Mentioning specific plays? How're the lads to know a gal knows anything about stuff like that if she doesn't speak up? After she's enchanted them with her interest in them, she could Sunday-night-supper them. (Not both the same night, natch.) Sort of the left hook to the jaw once she's got them groggy. Betcha it wouldn't be long before Kate was somebody's baby. Moral: If you're without a swain, it's probably because you've been making passes at all the wrong men. Find a boy with interests like your own and watch things buzz!

She's Anybody's Gal: Janie was so anxious to be popular that she wasn't very discriminating. She'd date anyone from the class rowdy to the town's bad boy. Now she's older and wiser and mad for a sweet, sweet lad in her class, but he can't see Janie for her shady reputation. Is there any way she can start all over again? Sure there is, if she has patience and a good strong will. She can stop going out with the wrong kind of boys and begin going places where she'll meet the right kind. How about the extra-curricular clubs at school that she's let slide all these years; and young people's groups at church? How about revising her clothes and makeup and too-bright line of chatter so that people will have a chance to see what she's really like? Why doesn't she take one of the gals who's both popular and respected in her (Continued on page 94)

Mrs. George Jay Gould, Jr. goes to a theatre première

"Before I go out—always a 1-Minute Mask!"

Charming young Mrs. George Jay Gould, Jr. is greatly admired in New York society for the camellia perfection of her skin. "Always when I'm dressing for an important evening," Mrs. Gould says, "I give my complexion a refreshing pickup with a 1-Minute Mask of Pond's Vanishing Cream. I know of no beauty treatment that pays such quick dividends as the 1-Minute Mask! Right away, it makes my skin look brighter and clearer—and so much softer! After a Mask, make-up is simply no problem at all. It goes on easily, smoothly—and clings!"

Smooth on a Mask of Pond's Vanishing Cream. Leave one minute. "Keratolytic" action dissolves off stubborn dirt and dead skin particles! Tissue off. Quick reward! A brighter, smoother skin!

Every day, too—for a silky powder base!

Every time you want to look your best—a 1-Minute Mask

THIS WINTER
give your hair—
New Beauty

SPARKLING COLOR—let Nestle Colorinse take away that dull-drab look. You'll be thrilled when you see how Nestle Colorinse gives your hair richer, warmer color.

GLAMOROUS HIGHLIGHTS—rinse dancing highlights into your hair. See how these sparkling highlights make your eyes and your whole face look brighter!

SILKEN SHEEN—"He" loves hair that's silken-soft, satiny-smooth to touch. Let Nestle Colorinse give your hair this wonderful sheen. Try it today — after you shampoo!

NOTE Ask your beautician for an Opalescent Creme Wave by Nestle—originators of permanent waving.

Nestle
COLORINSE

In 10¢ and 25¢ sizes. At beauty counters everywhere.

KEEP HAIR IN PLACE ALL DAY LONG

Delicately perfumed Nestle Hairlac keeps all styles of hairdos looking well-groomed throughout the day. Also adds sheen and lustre to your hair. 2½ oz. bottle 25¢ confidence. Explain to her how foolish she's been and ask for her moral support. That girl will tell others, and after a while the boys will hear, and well—Janie'll be all set. Moral: The world judges us by the company we keep, so when it comes to friends let's look for quality rather than quantity.

Nestle HAIRLAC

She's All Bill's: Bets doesn't quite know how it happened, but they'd hung out a fancy moon that night, and Bill had on a new sports coat with shoulders like this, and when he said, "Let's go steady," she had apparently said "Yes." For a month it was heaven. They were Romeo and Juliet. Ingrid and Cary. But now the whole thing is hanging a little heavy, and how is she going to get out of it? If she has any character, she'll do it the hard way. No buck-passing. No little white lies. She will swallow all her pride and tell Bill that she made a mistake. Not about him. Nope—him she likes. But about herself and her fickle eye-fickle eye. She'll tell him frankly that she's just not ready for the pipe and slippers routine yet. If she makes it clear that she's the flibberty-gibbet, the whack who doesn't know her own mind—and that he's divine, in fact out-of-this-universe, there'll be no hard feelings. He'll keep coming around, even though she's Tom-Dick-and-Harrying it again. Moral: Don't decide to go steady on the spur of the moment, and when and if you do, give some thought to the cut of his soul as well as his jacket.

WE'RE PROUD OF YOU, JUNE

(Continued from page 39)

it to the front office—"

Which they did. And that was the prelude to three days she'll never forget. "The most emotional three days I ever spent," sighs June.

In fact, the emotion started ahead of time—when she told the family. Dorothy, married and expecting a baby, couldn't go, but June took it for granted that everyone else would. It was their home town too.

Mother was pleased. Evvie went out of her mind. Not only did she have lots of friends back in Rock Island, she had a special beau whose name nobody believes because it's Don Whan. "For me it's the perfect setup," said Evvie. "June'll do all the work and I'll have all the fun—"

Grandma's voice broke in and it sounded plaintive. "When I used to take Junie to benefits in Rock Island, I always dreamed of going back with her when she made good—"

"And now you're going—"

"Am I?"

Something in her face sent June leaping to her side. "Well, you didn't think we'd leave you behind, did you?"

"Well, you never asked me—"

"Well, I thought it was under*stood*. You know they'd turn me out if I showed up without Alice."

the beautiful people . . .

So they all shed a couple of tears and got that out of their system. Those were the first tears. They weren't the last. . .

June likes to live it all over again in her mind. The idea is to start at the beginning and take it, step by beautiful step, to the end. But before she gets very far, the whole thing's a swirling kaleidoscope of laughter and thrills and lumps in the throat and people. Especially people. Lovely warmhearted people, her friends and townsfolk, smiling at her.

She always starts with Chicago. And Harriet Jeanes again. This time Harriet telephotoed a picture of June ahead, so there she was in the Argus, leopard skin coat and all, before she even arrived. The reason they weren't flying all the way was by request of Rock Island—

"After all," said Rock Island, "the airport's in Moline, and you weren't born in Moline. Our pet's the Rock Island Rocket. Would you ride the Rocket from Chicago to here—?"

She wouldn't have missed it. From a train you can see landmarks—the same landmarks she'd seen going the other way five years ago. Five years ago she'd been June Stovenour, leaving Rock Island with Ted Fiorito and his band, having made a little name for herself singing at benefits and on local station WHBF. Helen Gannon, Dorothy's best friend—they'd worked as phone operators together—had sent her a corsage of baby roses: "May this be the first of many steps up on your road to success—"

June, aged 15, had put the card away with her treasures. "If I ever get discouraged, Mother, this will remind me that my friends are hoping for the best."

Now she was June Haver, going home, eyes glued to the landscape. Every tree looked good to her. At Bureau an advance man came on with the schedule, said the Rock Island High School band would be out to meet them. She and Evvie made bets about what the band would play, and settled for the Cheer Song. Suddenly her eyes bugged out—

"Mother, I think I'm taking this too calmly—" She'd been hopping around like a Mexican jumping bean. "All your life you read about people being met by brass bands. How can it be happening to me—?"

Her hand went to her throat, partly because it felt sore, partly to keep the pulse from thumping. How excited can you get—?

old friends . . .

The crowd at Moline where they stopped for a few minutes. Then Rock Island, and the band playing the Cheer Song. The huge bouquet of red roses from Mr. Grove and his daughter Marjorie. Mayor Melvin McKay—later described by June as the "sweetest little mayor in the world who does plumbing on the side"—presenting her with the key to the city and being kissed in return. Best of all, so many familiar faces. Wherever she looked, faces of people she knew. Hi, Chuck Harrison!—Dorothy used to go out with Chuck—now he was holding the portable mike.

"I'm so happy to be here—" No speeches, June, she'd told herself. You can't make speeches anyway. Just tell them what's in your heart, and they'll understand. "It's so wonderful to see you all."

Riding through town perched on back of a car. The cops on their motorcycles ahead. "Even when generals come to town, we never gave 'em eight motorcycle cops--" It was like Christmas. WELCOME, JUNE HAVER on every lamppost, photos in the shop windows, people waving from the doors—she'd bought candy from this one, ties for her dad from the other—

"Hello, Nancy Plantz!" She almost fell off the car—

"How did you remember—?" Nancy called back.

How could she forget! They'd been like her own family—Mother and Dad Plantz, Sonny and little Nancy. But especially Helen. No sisters could have been closer "Red Majesty is terrific!"

says: MRS. RONALD COLMAN

MRS. RONALD COLMAN delightful wife of the distinguished screen star is one of many Hollywood beauties who give "rave notices" to Red Majesty.

World's Newest Shade!

No wonder this new queen of the reds—Tangee Red Majesty—is a sensation in New York and Hollywood. It's that rarest shade of all—a truly royal red. And you'll love what it does for your lips!

1947's Smartest Case!

Last word in post-war beauty! Gleaming brass—exquisitely etched. A simple twist of its swivel base and up comes your Red Majesty.

America's Top-rated Lipstick!

In a recent test of 27 leading lipsticks (conducted by a group of impartial experts) Tangee Satin-Finish lipstick was rated No. 1 ...receiving particularly high marks for "staying power" and ease of application.

PRESENTED IN:

RED MAJESTY RED-RED GAY-RED
THEATRICAL RED MEDIUM-RED NATURAL

CONSTANCE LUFT HUHN
Head of the House of Tangee and creator of Tangee Red Majesty Lipstick and Petal-Finish Cake Make-Up.

USE Tangee...

AND SEE HOW BEAUTIFUL YOU CAN BE

If You Can Read English

You can learn to play your favorite instrument

Yes, if you follow our clear home study instructions for only a half hour each day, you should soon be playing simple melodies. Easy as A-B-C! No tedious scales. You learn to play real tunes by note right from the start! Study any instrument you like for less than 7c a day! If interested, send for Free Booklet and Print and Picture Sample. See how easy it is to learn music at home without a teacher. Mention your favorite instrument.
U. S. School of Music, 1442 Brunswick Bldg., N. Y. 10, N. Y.

FREE BOOKLET

U. S. School of Music, 1442 Brunswick Bldg., N. Y. 10, N. Y.

Please send me Free Booklet and Print and Picture Sample I would like to play (Name Instrument).

Instrument..... Have you Instrument?.....

Name..... (Please Print)

Address.....

than she and Helen—they'd double-dated, lived at each other's houses—it was the kind of friendship only small town girls can have—

"Where's Helen?"

"At college, but she's coming down to see you—"

. . . The Fort Armstrong Hotel where she'd sung so often. The flower-filled suite with its new drapes. "The place doesn't look the same," a friend had written, "but they'll be very nonchalant about it. Take the cue from them. Admire, but don't be overwhelmed—"

Claus and Smitty, the cutest bodyguards, parked outside the door. Sergeant Claus Miller and Glenn Smith, but she'd gone to school with Claus's sister, so you couldn't have any great formality. Bodyguarding was new to them, but they did it as to the manner born.

Wires and calls and relatives coming in and "Where's Evvie?" It got to be a gag. The minute they hit town, they couldn't find Evvie. She'd bob up at intervals—with Don Whan who'd come in from Northwestern—but the next time you turned to look, she was gone again. . .

. . . 7:30 at the Fort Theater across from the hotel, where they were doing a Grauman and casting her feet in cement. June in a white strapless evening gown and long white gloves, orchids from the Chamber of Commerce fastened to her ermine stole. Laughing as she clung to the mayor and stuck both feet in the cement—

"I knew if I held on to this job long enough, something nice would happen—" That was the mayor kidding with the audience.

"Better than plumbing, huh, Mayor?" they kidded back.

Chuck Harrison holding the mike for her. "When I was a little girl," said June, "I loved Rock Island. Now that I'm grown, I hope Rock Island likes me—"

. . . Over to the Capitol Theater in Davenport by way of the Centennial Bridge. Arching the entrance to the bridge, a huge floodlighted banner—WE'RE PROUD OF YOU, JUNE.

You don't know what something like that does to you. She and Evvie had helped to dedicate the bridge. Evvie'd twirled in the parade. June had sung "God Bless America" with Freddy Martin's band, which happened to be in town. Now look—

"Even sitting down, I feel weak in the knees, Mother—"

. . . The big moments made your spine tingle, but the little private moments when you met old friends face to face, turned your heart over—

It was ten before they got through at the Capitol, and they hadn't eaten. June wanted a great big steak, so they went to the Hollywood Supper Club, which was new since she'd left and whose name tickled her. Imagine having your first Rock Island dinner at a place called the Hollywood Supper Club.

who's hungry? . . .

As they waited to be served, the boys started coming up to Claus and Smitty. Boys she used to date. Boys who used to come to the house for cokes and cookies. So shy and cute. "Would it be all right if we asked June for a dance—?"

"She has to eat," said Claus.

"I'm not hungry," said June. "I'm too excited to eat. I'd rather dance—"

It was dreamy and sweet and even a little sad, like dancing with your past, except your past isn't really sad at 21. And it had a topper. A call from Bob Goodell, leader of the school band she used to sing with. He was playing the organ in a little nightclub down the street— "I know you're awfully busy, June, but we'd sure appreciate it if you could stop by for a minute and say hello—"

Of course she could. But when he asked her to sing, she had to say no, her throat had been sore since they got off the plane.

"You do something for me instead. Play my favorite song. Only I bet you don't remember it, Bob."

He didn't answer—just smiled and started playing "Embraceable You." June thought it was a lovely way to end the evening.

haver day . . .

Next day was Hallowe'en all over the country, and June Haver Day by proclamation in Rock Island. The way Mayor McKay read it out, it even sounded legal. . .

But that came later. Thrill No. 1 was Lucia Thompson Clarke, who lived in Cedar Rapids now with her husband and two little boys, so June hadn't expected to see her. But in the midst of breakfast with the press, all of a sudden there stood Lucia, and the reunion was slightly damp, even though public. "Excuse us," said June, "but for five years we went everywhere together. I'd emcee the program, and she'd play the piano, and she'd get three dollars and I'd get five—"

That morning they went to the Harvest Festival together, and to their alma mater, station WHBF, where Miss Polly interviewed them for an informal broadcast in their same old Studio A—

"Remember the party they threw when you left, June?"

"Remember the watch they gave me?"

Ben Potter, owner of the station, drew them out to the lobby. "Remember this girl?"

Pictures of June—skinny legs, awful-looking bob, and all you could say for the clothes was, they covered her. She eyed her younger self appraisingly. "If they could turn that into glamor, there's hope for everyone—"

. . . Back at the hotel. Dressing for the Chamber of Commerce luncheon. Elsie Rogers coming in. For years Elsie'd planned all the banquets at the Fort Hotel. "You never thought we'd be fixing one up for you, did you, June?"

"I should say not—"

She cupped her palms round June's ear. "Don't tell anyone, but it's the best we ever had here—"

For June it was the crowning event of her trip. Not because she was guest of honor at the flower-decked table. But because all these people had thought enough of her to come. Dr. Barding, who'd brought her into the world. Earl Hansen, superintendent of schools. Looking out, she saw teachers who'd taught her, parents of boys and girls she'd played with. Seemed as if the whole dear town had turned out.

. . . Mr. Hansen telling about her at school. "—These aren't things I had to look up. I knew June—I remember—"

Mr. Claude Lee, a high-up man at Paramount who was passing through town and had kindly agreed to speak. "I never met June Haver till today. But from what they tell me, here's a striking example of how Hollywood can be maligned. Her friends seem to think she's pretty much the same as when she left—"

Mayor McKay proclaiming June Haver Day. Little Barbara Ann Pruden, a scout from June's old troop, presenting a bouquet of yellow roses and dyed green chrysanthemums—the girl scout colors—and a miniature girl scout pin.

June sitting there feeling shyer and humbler by the minute. How would she ever be able to thank these people? Where would she find the words?

As she rose, a face way at the other end of the room smiled at her—Helen Gannon's face—and she found the words. Told about the corsage from Helen five

Which Twin has the Toni?

(And which had her permanent at a beauty shop ? No one could tell the Ring twins' permanents apart—can you? See the answer below!)

Yes, you can give yourself a lovely TONI Home Permanent for your date tonight

Take a tip from the Toni Twin, Kathleene Ring of Chicago . . . give yourself a Toni Home Permanent today . . . and look lovelier tonight. It's this easy:

1. Roll your hair up on curlers, dabbing on Toni Creme Lotion as you go.
2. Tie a turban round your head and relax for 2 to 3 hours. (No sitting under a hot dryer.)
3. Saturate each curl with Toni Neutralizer and rinse.

With your hair set, step to the mirror and admire your new Toni Permanent. See the deep, wonderful waves. Feel the silky softness of your hair. Notice its radiant natural luster. Toni is a Creme Lotion that gently coaxes your hair into deep waves that are frizz-free and easy to manage from the start. And they last as long as a $15 permanent.

Toni works like a charm on any hair that will take a permanent—even gray, dyed, bleached or baby-fine hair. Every hour of the day another 1000 women use Toni. So ask for the Toni Home Permanent Kit. On sale at leading cosmetic, drug and notion counters.

Kathleene, the twin with the Toni Home Permanent is on the right above. Did you guess?

Easy as rolling your hair up in curlers—but the wave stays in

Toni HOME PERMANENT
THE CREME COLD WAVE

$1.25 plus tax

years ago. About all the wires and flowers, the good will and good wishes when she left. "Only out of kindness to one of your Rock Island girls. Well, now that I'm back, I'm still your Rock Island girl—who sang at so many banquets in this very room—I still can't believe it's me at the big table—" Tears stinging her lids, blocking her throat—"I'll never forget you—" Brimming over—"I'm sorry, I can't go on—"

Dead silence for a moment—("we were all sniffling," said Mother afterwards, "even that supposedly hardboiled newspaper crew—") Then applause and babble and the usual relief after tension, and people asking for autographs, and somebody saying, "We're on a time-table schedule," and June putting her foot down. "I don't care what the schedule is. I want to sign every autograph anybody wants—"

Kids filing past the big table. So many she knew. "Don't give me that Miss Haver stuff, Don, I can't take it—" "Oh Peg, you don't want my autograph, I'm Junie Stovenour, we used to go halves on all-day suckers, remember—?"

After that, it was really a whirl, like a movie montage. To the firehouse, where they made her honorary chief. To the corner drugstore, where she used to have chocolate sodas, and they photographed her having a chocolate soda. Next day there was a sign in the window. "Kilroy was here. So was June Haver—" Two personal calls she had to make, no matter what. The Plantzes—and little Ann Potter, Ben's daughter, down with rheumatic fever. She had a little kitten in bed with her, so June sent her some flowers in a kitten bowl. . .

. . . Franklin Junior High, and that was really going home. From the first minute. Because who should be at the door but the same old janitor who used to open her locker whenever she lost her key, and she was forever losing her key. Beaming at her—"Do you have your key with you tonight, Miss Haver—?"

Nancy Plantz introducing her. Mrs. Lindquist, the principal: "We wanted to give you what nobody else could give you, and you're the first girl it's ever been awarded to. But you used to be our cheerleader, so in a way that makes it legal—" Of course it was the school letter—

June telling them about her own days at Franklin. Interrupting herself to call to people she knew. "Hello, Mrs. Louisberg, remember the time I was "Sunbonnet Sue?" Looking for faces she missed. "Is Miss Zeroth, my old home room teacher here?" And Miss Zeroth calling back from way up in the balcony—

. . . Last stop, the Elks Ball. Mayor McKay was an Elk, and June used to sing at all their parties. By now they were calling her and the Mayor the double act of Rock Island, or Romeo and Juliet. Suddenly, from behind her—"Want a ride on my bike?" She whirled. Another face, and another picture from the past. Dick Gutzweiler riding her round on the handlebars of his bike. She'd had such a mania for riding on handlebars. "How about it?" he smiled. "Little too dressed up for a ride. And a little too tired," she confessed.

. . . Frances Willard School, where she'd taken the fifth and sixth grades. June found herself dreading it. Just before leaving Hollywood, word had come of the death of its principal, Miss Gertrude Hickman, whom June had dearly loved. She wished that somehow they could have skipped Frances Willard—

Which goes to show that cowardice doesn't pay. Miss Hickman's brother gave her a hand-painted plate from his sister's collection. "She loved you too, June. When you marry, I wish you'd put a piece of wedding cake on this plate. In that way, she'll be with you—"

. . . Home for a nap before dressing for the game. She was nearly asleep and thought she was dreaming when suddenly there stood Helen Plantz in the doorway, and just said Hi!

She'd had trouble getting to see June. So she wandered out and, luckily, Mother—about to drive off with a relative, caught sight of her—. "Helen! How wonderful! Have you seen June?"

"No, they wouldn't let me—"

Well, Mother fixed that, but she sent Helen in alone, which did more to rejuvenate June than twenty naps.

Before the game, the two coaches gave her a football, autographed by all the players. After the game, she felt like any Rock Islander. Rock Island lost. . .

But she'll remember Ralph Slentz longer than she will the score. Ralph's the boy she sat next to in study hall at Franklin High, and copied algebra problems from. She caught sight of him on the sidelines as they went driving round the field. "Hi, Ralph! Come on over and see me—"

He seemed shy at first, but got over it quickly. There was so much to reminisce about, so many questions to ask and answer—

"Remember our dates on the Rock Island-Davenport ferry—?"

"Oh Ralph, that's the only thing that went wrong in the whole three days. I'd so looked forward to just one trip on the ferry—"

"Why didn't they take you?"

"It's out of commission—"

"They should've told me," grinned Ralph. "I'd've fixed it for you—"

They left by the Rocket next morning.

. . . At home there was a beautiful letter from Lloyd Keepers of the Chamber of Commerce. "We all want you to know that, aside from the publicity—and every town likes it—it was wonderful having you back, and we all loved you and we hope you'll come again. If you want the fanfare, we'll give it to you. If you want to slip in quietly and see your friends, you can do that. Claus and Smitty will take care of you—"

Next time without the fanfare. Such an experience can't be repeated.

But you can live it all over again in your mind. Start at the beginning and take it step by step, and each time you remember something new.

Which is fine with June. She can always start all over again at Chicago. That way, it'll never end.

FREE SUBSCRIPTIONS!

Did you know that every MODERN SCREEN reader is actually a member of our editorial board? Here's what we mean: You read each of the stories and features in this issue carefully, give us your candid opinions via the Questionnaire below, and we pass along your decisions to our editorial staff. Results: 1. You lend us a guiding hand in making future story assignments. 2. You may be one of the lucky 500 who'll receive a three months FREE subscription (March, April, May issues) to MODERN SCREEN!

QUESTIONNAIRE

What stories and features did you enjoy most in our February issue? WRITE THE NUMBERS 1, 2 and 3 AT THE RIGHT OF YOUR 1st, 2nd AND 3rd CHOICES—AND THAT'S ALL!

Bless Their Little Pointed Heads! (June Allyson) ☐

Wanted: One Guardian Angel! (Glenn Ford) ☐

About Keenan, Van and Evie (Johnson-Wynn) ☐

Unsentimental Gentleman (Bing Crosby) ☐

None But the Lonely Heart (Cary Grant) by Billy Rose ☐

We're Proud of You, June (June Haver) ☐

Be My Valentine! (B. Mitchum, E. Williams, Y. de Carlo) ☐

Gregory Peck Life Story (Conclusion) ☐

Little Miss Breathless (Elizabeth Taylor) ☐

End of a Dream (Tyrone Power) by Hedda Hopper ☐

The Flying Filthy Five (Tyrone Power-Cesar Romero) by Cesar Romero ☐

This Is Lana! (Lana Turner) ☐

"Sure, I'll Talk about Guy" (Madison) by Henry Willson ☐

Man Hunt! (James Mason) ☐

It Shouldn't Happen To a Duck! (Kathryn Grayson) ☐

Good News by Louella Parsons ☐

Which of the above did you like LEAST?.....

What 3 MALE stars would you like to read about in future issues? List them, 1, 2, 3, in order of preference.....

What 3 FEMALE stars would you like to read about in future issues? List them, 1, 2, 3, in order of preference.....

Which one of the following four female newcomers would you like to read about in a future issue (Check One): Viveca Lindfors (Warner's new Swedish discovery) ☐; Dorothy Malone (Cole Porter's cousin in "Night and Day") ☐; Martha Vickers (Lauren Bacall's sister in "Big Sleep") ☐; Janis Paige (Joan Leslie's girl friend in "Two Guys From Milwaukee") ☐; Would not be interested in any of these. ☐

Which one of the following four male newcomers would you like to read about in a coming issue? (Check One): Steve Cochran (Fighter in "Kid From Brooklyn") ☐; Kirk Douglas (Stanwyck's husband in "Martha Ivers") ☐; Douglas Dick (Robert Young's son in "Searching Wind") ☐; Dean Stockwell (Tom Drake as a boy in "Green Years") ☐; Would not be interested in any of these. ☐

My name is.....

My address is..... City.....Zone.... State.....

I am ..... years old.

ADDRESS THIS TO: POLL DEPT., MODERN SCREEN
149 MADISON AVENUE, NEW YORK 16, N. Y.

College girls learn something NOT IN THE BOOKS!

IN TESTS AMONG COLLEGE GIRLS— 99 OUT OF 131 REPORT NO CHAFING WITH NEW FREE-STRIDE MODESS

College girls from coast to coast recently learned something not in the books. Something that will make happy reading for every girl who chafes.

Here's the story . . .

Interviewers asked college girls who had suffered chafe with their regular napkin to try out a new, improved napkin—Free-Stride Modess.

Naturally, the girls weren't told the name or brand. They were simply asked to try this new napkin—to see if it gave them freedom from chafe.

At the end of the test, 99 out of 131 girls reported no chafing with Free-Stride Modess.

The secret of the chafe-free comfort so many college students found in Free-Stride Modess lies in the clever fashioning of the napkin edges!

Modess has extra cotton on its edges—extra softness—right where the cause of chafe begins.

The extra cotton helps create an "absorption control." This acts to direct and retain moisture inside the napkin, keeping edges dry, smooth longer. And dry, smooth edges don't chafe!

So safe, too! Every Free-Stride Modess has a triple safety shield to guard against accidents. A fine, sealed-in deodorant to help keep you flower-fresh, too! And never a telltale outline—Modess is silhouette-proof!

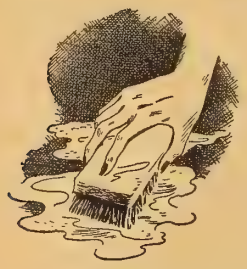
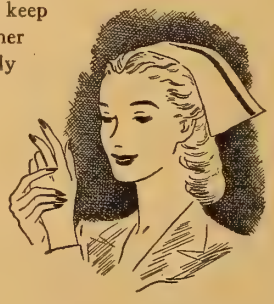
Try this luxury-comfortable, luxury-safe napkin. Free-Stride Modess is on sale everywhere.

Walk with comfort!
Move with freedom!
Try the new Free-Stride Modess!



Don't let housework be unfair to your hands

Yes . . . housework can leave your hands rough, red, and dry as dust. But . . . don't blame the housework . . . blame yourself for not taking care of your hands. Pacquins helps keep your hands looking smoother and whiter in spite of daily hard housework.



Doctors and nurses use Pacquins

Doctors and nurses scrub their hands in hot soapy water from thirty to forty times a day. Pacquins was first made especially for them. If Pacquins can help their roughly treated hands . . . imagine how much it can do for your hands!

AT ANY DRUG, DEPARTMENT, OR TEN-CENT STORE

Pacquins

HAND CREAM

Creamy-smooth, fragrant . . . not sticky, not greasy, More hands use Pacquins than any other hand cream in the world.

BLESS THEIR LITTLE POINTED HEADS!

(Continued from page 31)

"Is it a pain?" He inquired, still calm, still interested. I tried to explain to him how it was. "It's not really a pain. It's more of a feeling that to-day's the day I keel over with thrombosis." He didn't laugh at me or pamper me. He just asked me if I'd seen a doctor about it, and I said, "A doctor! I have seen at the very least thirty-five doctors." "Then look, hon," he said, "now why don't you try this. Instead of ruining your life with constant worry about keeling over with this or that, make up your mind to enjoy yourself to the fullest while you have your health, then—when and if you do keel—go about doing something to get yourself well." It made sense to me. Richard changed my whole outlook on life, bless his little pointed head. (If one more person says to me, "But his head isn't pointed," I'll screech. I know it isn't, but I just like the sound of bless his little pointed head.)

a friend in need . . .

My idea of a friend is someone who loves you when you look awful, who bears with you when you're in a black mood, who lets you have things your way now and then. But a really good friend isn't a sucker or a yes-man. A good friend tells you off when you need to be told and isn't too everlastingly pussy-footishly subtle about it. Take my husband Richard. Now he is a good friend. . . . I usually wash my own hair, and then I put it up and I look like a peeled onion. I'm not awfully beautiful to begin with, and I do need my hair to sort of doll up my face. Well, anyway, you know what Richard says to me when I have my hair up and couldn't look worse and am very much depressed with myself? "Stinky," he says, "you're cute and I love you." It does things for a woman's morale. And he does give me my way, too. This fall we went East for a little vacation. We dreamed about it for months, and in my dreams we'd always be staying at the Waldorf, and in Richard's we were at the Sherry-Netherlands. But we went to the Waldorf. He's the most unselfish, the most adorable man in the whole world. And Allyson's got him. Gee.

He's strict with me, though, and he tells me off, too. Which is good. I'm so grateful that he bothers to. Last Christmas, Jane Wilkie—Modern Screen's cute Hollywood editor—gave me a cocker spaniel. A lovely, soft-eyed champagne-colored fellow by the name of Heathcliff. He was absolutely irresistible. That animal was out of this world. But he wasn't the least bit smart. In fact we don't think he had any IQ at all. I tried to keep it from Richard that he was such an utter dope, but it was pretty obvious, what with his inability to grasp even the rudiments of house-breaking and not even coming when you called him. He chewed slippers and knocked over lamps and did all the things that are so cute on the cover of the Saturday Evening Post, and so infuriating when they happen to you. One day Richard said, "We're getting rid of that dog." Heathcliff put his head on his paws and did those Charles Boyer eyes at us. I couldn't bear it. "Richard dear," I said. "Please let me keep him. He's so beautiful, and I love him so." Richard said he'd give him one more chance. He gave me one month to train him. And I failed. I was busy with other things and that whole month I didn't train Heathcliff at all. So at the end of the month, we gave him away. I wept over him, but I know Richard was right. I wanted the fun of a dog, the pleasure of looking at him and patting him, but I was too immature to assume any responsibility for him. We do honestly think that I'm more grown-up now, and the other day Richard gave me two miniature French poodles named Casey and Pat. They are canine Einsteins. We practically have to spell things we don't want them to understand. Imagine. Those darling bell-bottomed trousers, and all those brains too.

There was one time that Richard told me off that I shall never forget. I guess the day it happened I learned the hardest lesson of my whole life, and though Richard tries to tell me it hurt him more than it did me, I doubt it. It was gruesome. Well, as you probably know, before I got to be a movie star, I didn't have very much money. I learned to outfit myself on next to nothing. When I came to Hollywood it was awfully hard to realize that now I could afford forty-dollar blouses if I wanted them, and for a long time I clung to my old thrifty ways. Then, after the salespeople began to recognize me when I came into the stores, I got feeling embarrassed about pricing everything, and eventually I'd buy boxes and boxes of stuff without any idea in the world what it all cost. Then Richard found out about it. I bought a white wool dress and had it sent home, price unknown as usual. That night I tried it on, and my fella fell in love with it.

"How much was it?" Richard asked me casually, after admiring it at length. "Why, I honestly don't know," I told him, still twirling in front of him. He put down his newspaper. "You mean to say you don't know what it cost?" He didn't raise his voice, but he didn't need to. There was such a quality in it. Of disgust and unbelief. Of disillusionment in me. I stood still. "No, I don't, Richard," I said, and suddenly I wanted to cry my eyes out because I'd disappointed him so. "You'd better take it off," he said then, "and in the morning take it back to the store." My heart broke for my beautiful dress, but more than that, for Richard's loss of faith in me. Afterwards he talked to me about false pride, about my sense of values, and the next day I took the dress back and discovered that it cost six hundred dollars!

"Are you going to read all night again, or are you coming to bed?"

THE LOVELIEST

Permanent Wave

YOU EVER HAD AT ANY PRICE!

NOW CONTAINS

Aluminum Curlers

FOR EASIER HOME USE

Takes only 2 to 3 hours at home!

The soft, lovely permanent that he finds enchanting . . . is yours so easily with Chic. Chic Aluminum Curlers are so easy to wind and lock . . . never break off or become soggy . . . can be used over and over. And what a beautiful permanent you'll have. Rich, abundant curls . . . the kind men love . . . and deep, lustrous waves that look so gloriously natural. You'll say it's the finest permanent you've ever had. He'll say you've never looked so lovely.

chic

HOME PERMANENT

creme cold wave

Complete with 60 new Aluminum Curlers $1.00 plus tax

Chic refill kit everything except curlers 79¢ plus tax

TRIAL KIT Now you can try it!

THE LINHALL COMPANY Dept. M-1
500 Robert Street, Saint Paul, Minnesota

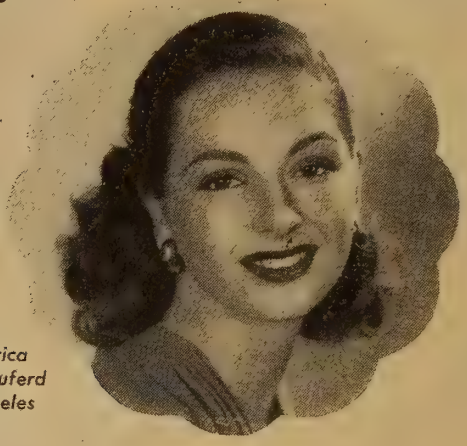
Please send me (HOW MANY?) "Chic Trial Kit" containing 12 Aluminum Curlers and everything I need to try CHIC permanent on my end curls. I enclose 25c for each kit to handle postage and mailing.

Name_____

Address_____

City_____ State_____

Glamorous Hair Invites Romance



Miss America is Marilyn Buferd of Los Angeles

Miss America uses Fitch Shampoo. Your hair can be like Miss America's . . . velvety soft . . . sparkling with radiant highlights! Do as Miss America does . . . use Fitch's Saponified Cocoanut Oil Shampoo. Made from mild cocoanut and pure vegetable oils, this efficient shampoo does not "dry" the hair. Delightfully fragrant, it "suds-up" into a rich, billowy lather that completely removes all scalp odor. Fitch's Saponified Cocoanut Oil Shampoo contains its own patented rinsing agent, so only an ordinary water rinse is needed. No dull film remains. At drug or toilet goods counters . . . or have professional applications at beauty shops.

Fitch's
SAPONIFIED COCOANUT OIL SHAMPOO

Scoldy Lox BOB and HAIR PINS
NEVER LET YOUR HAIR DOWN

Lovelier Nails with TUFFENAIL

Enhance and glorify the natural beauty of lovely nails . . . Hollywood's own daily nail-care with easy-to-use applicator. Nails stay lovelier longer . . with TUFFENAIL. 25¢

AT ALL 5 AND 10c STORE COSMETIC COUNTERS

LEARN MILLINERY AT HOME

Design and make exclusive hats under personal direction of one of America's noted designers. Complete materials, blocks, etc., furnished. Every step illustrated. You make exclusive salable hats right from the start. Start a profitable business in spare time. Low cost, easy terms.

LOUIE MILLER SCHOOL OF MILLINERY
225 North Wabash Avenue, Dept. 182, Chicago 1, Ill.
Please send me your FREE illustrated catalog.
Print
Name _____
Address _____

"Richard," I told him when I got home, "Can you imagine it. Six hundred dollars! Sweetheart, I'm so glad you made me take it back." He whistled softly under his breath. And then he said, "Six hundred dollars is a heck of a lot of money to spend without knowing what it's for."

Most good friends have their heated battles, but so far we've honestly never had what you could call a real fight. Oh, I get absolutely purple at him when he wins my whole allowance from me at backgammon, then lures me on to play some more, but as for screeching at each other and getting all in a big stew, it just doesn't seem to happen. What really could we argue about? He doesn't run my career or even advise me on it, and I have no finger in his. That way there's no chance to say, if things go wrong, "Well you said to take that part," or "That was your idea." We've never had any in-law trouble Richard's dad, who died last year, was the darlingest man in the world, and Richard is crazy about my mom. Not to mention vice versa. When she visited us last Spring her parting shot was, "Don't you ever do anything to hurt that husband of yours. He's one man in a million." I said, "Gee, mom, I'm not such a bad kid myself," to which she replied, "You're all right, Junie, but he's something pretty fine."

Jane Wilkie and I had our little spats, but we always managed to patch them up. I remember when I first came to Hollywood, she was one of the first writers to interview me. I was awfully thrilled. And then the story came out, and she hadn't made me sound like me at all. She had me sounding like her. "Hey, look," I said, "This is your line, I don't say that. And all this business—why the whole thing's like your autobiography." We were both getting a speck huffy about it when it suddenly struck us funny. Later we decided that actually we are alike in a lot of ways. We're both kind of slap-happy and sentimental. We're both pretty high-strung. Fortunately, our nerves act up at different times. Jane was my bridesmaid, and a week or so before the wedding she moved in with me to help me keep cool and to take care of last minute details. I was like a flibberty-gibbet, and she was a rock of strength. The eve of the wedding, her nerves snapped, whereas a deadly calm came over me. She took the sleeping medicine she'd brought to knock me out. I put the nail polish on her palsied fingers, gave her stuff for her nervous stomach. In her state of nerves, she forgot to bring either the rice or my going-away bag to the reception. Don't know why, but I still love that gal. She doesn't believe this, but I know I'm responsible for her marriage. Last year I gave her a set of dishes for Christmas. "These will be for your house," I told her, and she said, "All I need now is The Man." "First dishes," I said, oracle-like, "then a man." Practically the very next day she met her dream boy, and now she s Mrs. Botwinnick. She was married from our house on October 27th, and I'll never be the same. Now I know that it's two billion times more nerve-wracking to marry someone off than to get married yourself. Jane's wedding was at half-past nine at night, which gave us all day in which to lose our minds. At one I went over to her house, and we jittered pleasantly all afternoon. Casey and Pat didn't help at all, although obviously they were trying to give last minute suggestions They kept getting under our feet and tripping us, and feuding with Jane's beautiful Irish setter, Corky. At six, Jane's mom fed us a magnificent chicken dinner, and after that the flowers for our hair came, and we fussed with them and fussed with them. Just try to fashion a chic little hat some time with ten thumbs on your hands. In the end we got slightly wild and tore the flowers apart, emerging with two small flower gadgets instead of the divine daisy hats we'd visualized. It was a beautiful wedding in spite of us, and Jane and Bob looked so earnest and so happy. When it was over we went to our house for the reception, and wait till I tell you the frightful thing I did. Me, the gal who never forgets a face. Never muffs a line. I had completely forgotten to pick up Jane's wedding cake, and there was just a great void on the table where it should have been. Have you ever, ever heard anything more awful? Jane whispered in my ear, "Getting back at me for the rice, hunh?" which got us both giggling, and I made amends by bringing the cake to a luncheon someone gave for Janie later.

Jane and I met after we were both fairly prosperous so that, although we share secrets and giggles, we don't borrow each other's clothes or money. I went through all that with Jeanie Phreaner Copeland when we roomed together for two lean years in New York. She was an art student and I was in the chorus of various shows, and the first time I saw her in the American Women's Club, I liked her. She looked smiling and warm and not all sharp edges and high polish like a lot of the career gals who lived there. A boy who knew us both introduced us, and we roomed together for two years.

We couldn't have lived a less plush existence or a more wonderful one. It was so heavenly having Jeanie for a room-mate, because eighteen is such an enchanted age and you shouldn't have to share it with just anyone. There was the whole wide city to have fun in. The Museum of Modern Art and peanut-gallery seats at "Hamlet" and "Life with Father;" Fifth Avenue bus rides and exciting afternoons poking around Washington Square and fifteen cent Automat suppers. But there was one thing that she did for me that changed my whole life. I didn't know it then, and I don't suppose I ever even said thank you. I'm not too good on the sloppy talk, but hey, Jeanie, thanks chum, for making me wait for Richard.

Y'see, back in those days I had a very heavy beau. Jeanie went up to Wood's Hole, Mass., one summer, and in her absence I got engaged. I wrote her about it, and she wrote back that she wished me all sorts of bliss and couldn't I come up the next weekend. I went, and when I came back to town I broke my engagement. By the subtlest possible means she had made me see that he wasn't for me. She never once said, "I don't like him," or "You'll never be happy with him." She just painted a glowing picture of our sophisticated, fast-paced marriage and while it was an exciting picture, it wasn't in the least what I wanted, and that foxy grandpa knew that it wasn't. But for Jeanie, I'd have married the man, and there'd have been no Hollywood and no Richard. No Richard. I can't even think about that.

There was a cameraman on the set of "Two Girls and a Sailor." One day he saw me looking sort of wistful while they shot candid after candid of Glo De Haven. "I know I'm ugly," I was thinking, "but if they'd just take me once. Even if they never developed it." And this lad came up to me and said very quietly, "Whatcha bet I'll be doing you in kodachrome one of these days?" "Chum," I said, and I felt all soft inside.

There are all you fans who take the trouble to write and say you like me.

There are such nice people, and gosh I'm so lucky to have run across so many of them. And to be married to the dearest, to the sweetest, the most pointed of head. Which is just about where you came in, isn't it?

His LOVE cooling?

VERA-ELLEN says: "Maybe you're discouraging love with roughened hands. Hands can be excitingly smooth and soft with Jergens Lotion care. I use Jergens." It's so easy and lovely.

VERA-ELLEN, SAMUEL GOLDWYN DANCING STAR, APPEARING WITH DANNY KAYE IN "THE KID FROM BROOKLYN"

OTHER STARS AGREE WITH VERA-ELLEN

The Stars, 7 to 1, use Jergens Lotion. Amazingly finer than ever, now. Makes your hands even smoother and softer; protects even longer against distressing roughness. It's due to wartime research that Jergens is now more effective than ever. Blessed, still, with two ingredients superb for skin-smoothing—used by many doctors. Still 10¢ to $1.00 (plus tax) for this famous hand care of the Stars.

For the Softest, Adorable Hands, use

JERGENS LOTION

FREE!
See for yourself why Hollywood Stars, 7 to 1, use Jergens Lotion

Mail coupon today for gift bottle. (Paste on penny postcard if you wish.) Box 27, Dept. 77, Cincinnati 14, Ohio. Please send my gift bottle.

Name _____

Address _____

City _____ State _____

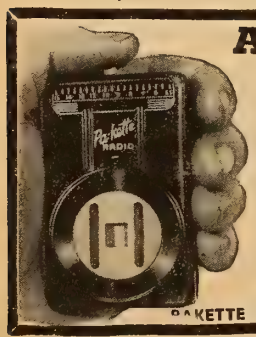
(Please print name, address plainly.....Sorry, offer good in U.S.A. only)

"Soaping" dulls hair—
Halo glorifies it!

Yes, even finest soaps and soap shampoos hide the natural lustre of your hair with dulling soap film

- Halo contains no soap. Made with a new patented ingredient it cannot leave dull soap film!
- Halo reveals the true natural beauty of your hair the very first time you use it, leaves your hair shimmering with glorious highlights.
- Makes oceans of rich, fragrant lather, even in hardest water. Leaves hair sweet, clean, naturally radiant!
- Needs no lemon or vinegar after-rinse. Halo rinses away completely!
- Carries away unsightly loose dandruff like magic!
- Lets hair dry soft and manageable, easy to curl!

HALO REVEALS THE HIDDEN BEAUTY OF YOUR HAIR!



A VEST POCKET SIZE RADIO!

So small it will slip in your pocket or purse! Actually smaller than a pack of king size cigarettes! Weighs but ¼th lb. complete ready to play—as shown with self contained earphone for personal use. No extra wires or special attachments required. Streamlined, attractive and durable black and silver plastic cases. Uses new preset "crystal diode" rectifier same as used in Army-Navy ultra hi-frequency radar sets during the war. Has slide tuning dial for station selection. Since no tubes, batteries or electrical socket power "plug-ins" are ever required, the radio should operate for years with little or no upkeep expense. Usually receives local radio broadcasts simply by clipping self contained connection "snap" to metal of telephones.

GUARANTEED TO WORK for you in your locality if attached and used according to complete operating instructions sent with each radio. Can be used at home, in offices, hotels, cabin camps, in bed, after hours on farms or most anywhere in the United States or Canada.

SEND ONLY $1.00 (currency, express or postal money order, bank draft, or personal check) and pay postman $2.99 plus delivery and postage fees on arrival or send $3.99 for postpaid delivery (O.P.A. ceiling). Ideal gift for children or adults alike! A truly practical novelty radio capable of real radio reception. Order your "Pakette" radio today for real enjoyment. Critical material shortages may limit future production so order today—NOW—to assure the earliest possible delivery. (Canada, Mexico and foreign orders $5.00 U. S. cash with order.)

PAKETTE ELECTRIC COMPANY, DEPARTMENT MM-2, KEARNEY, NEBRASKA

THIS AD IS WORTH $1.00

Amazing NEW OFFER gives you 2 enlargements of your favorite photo FREE!

To introduce you to the superb quality of our workmanship, that has gained us millions of regular customers, we will make you a free gift of two 5 x 7 enlargements which regularly sell for 50c each. Just send us any snapshot, photo or negative. Be sure to include color of hair, eyes and clothing—and get our bargain offer for having these enlargements beautifully hand colored in oil and placed in your choice of handsome frames. Please enclose 10c each for handling and mailing. Originals returned with FREE prints worth $1. Act AT ONCE. Limit 2 to a customer.

HOLLYWOOD FILM STUDIOS • Dept. 213, 7021 Santa Monica Blvd., Hollywood 38, Calif.

MAN HUNT!

(Continued from page 47)

What he looked like was my dream man. I remembered hastily that this was business, and thrust the picture into my bag.

"Operative 66 starting work," I said, and went out, feeling very cheerful. It didn't last long.

The Elizabeth docked at noon, pier 90, Fiftieth Street and the Hudson River. A mob-sized crowd milled around in the street outside the pier building, flourishing autograph books and shrieking to each other. I stood by the dock and looked up a hundred miles or so at the enormous grey hulk looming above me. The smoke stacks were freshly painted orange and black, and the super-structure was glossy white like spun sugar on a wedding cake. It was the biggest boat I had ever seen. There were, I knew, over two thousand passengers aboard, and I was supposed to find one dark haired guy who would probably not be carrying a riding crop for identification purposes. There must, I thought, be easier ways of making a living. Still, that picture. . . .

I went into the building, up the stairs and over to the press desk by the gangway. A pleasant, blond young man asked what he could do for me.

"I'm looking for James Mason."

He grinned. "Who isn't?"

"But this is business. I'm from MODERN SCREEN. Can you tell me his stateroom?"

He consulted a neat red diagram. "Mr. and Mrs. Mason are in M73 and M75. They aren't," he added thoughtfully, "coming out for some time."

"I can wait."

I waited. Four hours. By that time most of the passengers had gone ashore. But not Mr. James Mason. I parted with a fast five bucks expense money to the steward who took care of M73 and M75.

"Mr. and Mrs. Mason," he said, "have been waiting for the crowd to disperse."

"They should live so long. That crowd's going to have Mason's autograph if they have to tear his hair out to do it."

The steward smiled gently. "I doubt it, miss. Mr. Mason is not one to be bullied. And he keeps himself to himself."

That was great. So helpful.

"Anything special happen on the trip across?" I asked. "Any excitement in Mason's suite?"

"Nothing happened, miss. They're very nice, very pleasant. Of course the cats were a bit seasick at first, you know."

"Cats? Cats on a boat?"

"Yes, miss, four cats. Three Persians, one Siamese. Very good cats, they were, but I don't think they cared for the sea."

"How about the Masons? Were they seasick?"

"No, miss. But then, they didn't eat much. I only served two meals to Mr. and Mrs. Mason the whole voyage."

"Did anyone try to bother them on the way over? Ask for autographs?"

"Well, you see, miss, his name wasn't on the passenger list. People did ask me now and again what room James Mason was in, but I pretended I didn't know."

"You mean they didn't go out of their suite at all?"

"No, miss."

That was just dandy. That gave me a lot of clues.

"He's kind, you know, Mr. Mason is," the steward was saying hesitantly. "My wife, now, she fair idolizes him on the screen. I wouldn't half be in wrong if I'd come home without a picture of him. So he gave me this one, autographed."

He showed it to me proudly. It wasn't like the one I had, but it was just as good. Good, heck, it was terrific. Then I pulled myself together and said briskly, "It's almost six o'clock. They can't stay on the boat all night, can they?"

The steward's blue eyes surveyed me serenely. "Oh, they've gone now, miss. I told you, he's a very clever man, Mr. Mason."

I went to the nearest telephone and called Al Delacorte. I didn't bother with alibis. I didn't have any.

"I lost him," I said. "In fact, let's face it, I never found him. He's off the boat and by now he may be anywhere from the Battery to Bronx Park."

"He isn't," Al said. "Or rather, he is, but I know where. The Plaza."

"Thanks. Going right up," I screeched.

You know the Plaza. Pleasant and courteous and unhurried. That's the way they were when I asked them about James. They gave me wide, innocent glances, and denied that they'd ever heard of him.

I got hold of a bell hop—more expense money—and found out that Mason had gone to a rehearsal of the Theater Guild of the Air. He was to do "Bill of Divorcement" Sunday night for them. So I went and hung around outside the theater.

In about half an hour, the mob suddenly tensed.

The stage door opened. There was an "A-a-h!" from the kids. I caught a glimpse of a downturned hat, an upturned coat collar. Also a copper-haired girl. Mr. and Mrs. Mason? I didn't have a chance to find out.

I decided to call in some expert assistance. I telephoned MODERN SCREEN'S Beverly Linet, of the Information Desk.

"Beverly," I said, "could you help me track down James Mason? He's the world's most elusive man."

"You mean he's here in town?"

"So the rumor goes," I said grimly.

"But how wonderful! I'm dying to see him. He wrote me such a sweet letter about those chocolate bars."

"He—what?"

"Wrote me a letter. Do you want an interview with him? Where's he staying?"

"At the Plaza."

"Fine. I'll call you tonight."

She called. She said, "Virginia, you're to have tea with Mason at the Plaza tomorrow afternoon. Okay?"

"Okay," I said weakly, and hung up.

The next day at five I appeared at the Plaza. I still had a sneaking suspicion that this was too good to be true.

But I was told to go right up to 1714. The elevator went both too slow and too fast. Now that I'd found the man, I was terrified.

I knocked on the door and there was the copper-haired girl I'd glimpsed the day before. She smiled at me and said, "Do come in. I'm Pamela Mason."

Then I was inside and everything was suddenly warm and friendly and all right. My dream man rose from his seat at the desk and shook hands. The impact of that personality is really something. What you get on the screen is only a watered down version. Face to face, it's hypnotic.

We sat down and before I had a chance to start being afraid again, or wonder what to ask them, they had started asking me questions.

They wanted to know what plays they should go to.

"I'd like to see a typical Broadway musical," James announced. "Lots of music and color and rhythm—something really hot, you know."

I suggested "Annie, Get Your Gun." We went on to a discussion of other plays. James knew about most of them.

He finds New York almost too exciting, but he likes it.

Pamela wanted to do some shopping,

Sandra found shopping packed plenty of punch...

-But GAYLA HOLD-BOB'S kept her hair stylish till lunch!

● Invisible heads, rounded-for-safety ends, long-lasting, springy action make Gayla Hold-Bob pins America's favorite brand.

Gayla
HOLD-BOB*
BOBBY PINS

COPYRIGHT 1947 *TRADE MARK REG. U. S. PAT. OFF.
GAYLORD PRODUCTS, INCORPORATED • CHICAGO 16, ILL.

but said ruefully that she hadn't had time yet. They had gone from the boat directly out to the house they had rented in Connecticut, because of the cats.

"They wouldn't let us keep them here in the hotel," he said. "And the cats don't like being away from us. You always hear that cats are attached to places, not to people, but it isn't true of ours. They're happy as long as they're with us."

"How about on the boat?" I asked.

He gave me the quick smile. "They were a bit melancholy the first two or three days," he admitted.

"Seasick?"

"Only slightly. About one little 'sick' per cat. After that they adjusted."

"You did have rather a stormy crossing."

"Yes, I think we'll wait a bit before we go to Bermuda. I've had enough of the sea for a while, haven't you, Pam?"

Pamela definitely agreed.

James wore a gray suit that had obviously been tailored by a genius—not that he needed it—and a dark blue tie.

"How do you manage to buy such clothes in postwar England?" I asked.

"Being a cinema actor helps, because after all, you can't appear in a picture in a barrel, now can you?"

We talked about some of his pictures then. He was pleased with "The Seventh Veil" but was unhappy over his performance in "The Man in Grey."

"Stewart Granger was magnificent, but I was so bad I can't understand why people went to see it."

"I do think, though," Pamela remarked, "that it's rather unfair to release those awfully old ones now. Jimmy has changed and developed so much since his pictures of say, five years ago."

I asked about the one, "I Met a Murderer," which James and Pamela had collaborated on some years ago.

"It was good, I think," James said. "But the collaboration almost killed us both."

Now Pam and Johnny Monaghan had collaborated on the new Mason picture, "The Upturned Glass."

"Are you as brutal in that as you are in your others?" I asked James.

"Oh, I'm not brutal at all. Very well behaved. Of course," he added thoughtfully, "I do murder my wife."

Whoever dreamed that up about the English not having a sense of humor? I decided it would be all right to bring up the subject of all the trouble I had reaching him.

"Were you deliberately being unapproachable or did it just happen?"

He was honestly surprised. "I'm not unapproachable. I gave an interview to the press when the Elizabeth docked. I signed dozens of autographs."

"But when I tried to reach you I couldn't. They said you were out of town. Oh—" I did a double take—"you were weren't you? In Connecticut."

"Yes, most of the time. We did stay in town last night. We thought it might be fun to go downstairs to the Persian Room and hear Hildegarde, but when we called they told us they had no tables."

This time I did a triple take. "Did you tell them who you were? James Mason, the English star?"

"Well, no, I couldn't say that, could I?"

This was the guy who had been called difficult and conceited and various other uncomplimentary things, yet he had just told me a few moments before that he was quaking with nervousness over his coming radio appearance on the Theater Guild of the Air. He was being as charming to me as if I were Queen Elizabeth. In fact, he was without doubt one of the most attractive men I ever met or saw or heard. Suddenly I remembered that what Albert wanted to know was why he was so attractive. I went into a phone booth and called Al.

"Look," I said, "you can say the sun is a planet so many miles and a half from the earth and that its surface temperature is so many thousands of degrees Centigrade or whatever it is, but does that explain how it feels when you sit in the sunshine on a nice Spring day?"

Al said, "Virginia, do you feel all right?"

I told him I felt fine. "I'm just saying you can't explain James Mason either," I said and hung up.

Probably I'll get fired. Mason was worth it.

I SAW IT HAPPEN

The airport lunchroom was almost deserted when I dashed in to get a sandwich before plane time. When the only other customer finished his hamburger and rose to pay his check, I was startled to recognize him as Cary Grant. Then the glass door swung shut behind him and the waitress, in a happy daze, asked me if I had recognized him. But her face changed when she went to clear away his dishes and saw two pennies lying beside the plate. I glanced at the door, and there was Cary, watching with a wicked grin. And I knew the reason why when the girl lifted the plate and found a half dollar underneath!

Jim Ellyson
San Francisco, California

The Flavor's All Yours... when you smoke
PHILIP MORRIS!

CLEAN, FRESH, PURE
America's FINEST Cigarette!

An important difference in PHILIP MORRIS manufacture lets the FULL FLAVOR of the world's finest tobaccos come through for your complete enjoyment—clean, fresh, pure!
That's why the flavor's ALL yours!

No Other Cigarette Can Make This Statement!

Of all the leading cigarettes, PHILIP MORRIS is the only cigarette recognized by eminent medical authorities as being to the advantage of those who smoke!

CALL FOR PHILIP MORRIS

ALWAYS BETTER...BETTER ALL WAYS

ABOUT VAN, EVIE AND KEENAN

(Continued from page 37)

my wife. That is the stupidest thing I've ever heard, and I'll tell you why, Ed. Actually, there was nothing sudden about Evie and me splitting up. You can trace it as far back as March of 1945, about the time my motorcycle crashed into a car and tossed me into the Santa Monica Hospital with a fractured jaw, concussion of the brain, a wrenched back and miscellaneous bruises. That happened just before I was to go into the Navy, and the first wire I got was from Navy Commander Gene Markey: 'Dear Keenan, Sort of a shoddy way to escape Navy duty, old boy.'

"If it hadn't been for that accident, I think Evie and I would have split up then. You see, Ed, I'm not an easy guy to get along with. Actually I'm not selfish, in the true meaning of the word, but undoubtedly I am thoughtless, and whether you call it selfishness or thoughtlessness, the net effect is that a wife resents it. Particularly so, because Evie is brilliant, and accustomed to lead rather than follow. I liked to go whizzing around Beverly Hills on my motorcycle, and after the accident ended that phase, I became just as intense about my repertory theater at Laguna. So it was a series of little frictions of temperament that started building up to a big one."

leave of absence . . .

Keenan Wynn dug into his shirred eggs and speared up a forkful.

"It was Evie's loyalty that averted a split-up at that time," he continued. "I was in the hospital, all beaten up, and she wouldn't walk out on me. Then I got out of the hospital, and again she stood by, instead of quitting, because as a result of the accident and the crack on my head, I suddenly decided that I'd drink all of the bonded liquor west of the Rockies."

"You found out that was mathematically impossible?" I asked. "Uh, huh," he smiled. "I've been on the 'wagon' for the past ten months, and I'm staying there."

At what point did Van Johnson enter the picture?

"As one of my closest pals, Van was in the picture ALL the time," explained young Wynn. "All of us were together all the time. And it was wonderful, because while I was being thoughtless, and concentrating on my repertory theater idea, Van was available to take Evie around. He likes to do the sort of things which she likes—hunt up odd restaurants, putter around in the garden—all of the things which I dislike intensely. So for anyone to suggest that Van has been a false friend is idiotic."

What about the Hollywood insistence that Van and Eve would get married?

"I really don't know," said Wynn. "Personally, I don't think so. I think, however, that at the end of a year, you'll find Evie and me re-married. What's going on now with the two of us, is a period of readjustment—I guess you might call it a legalized Sabbatical holiday."

Had Mrs. Wynn exerted the influence on Keenan Wynn's career that popularly has been ascribed?

"Definitely," said Wynn. "But to explain her influence, Ed, I've got to go back to the night in 1938 when we first met. I was playing in Garson Kanin's 'Hitch Your Wagon,' at the 48th Street Theater, and sharing a dressing room with Jimmy Backus. Jimmy told me that he was expecting a visitor after the night show, so I got dressed in a hurry. I'll never forget it, because my Dad was taking me out and I was togged out in white tie and tails, hot stuff. At that moment, in came the loveliest looking creature I'd ever seen, and

. . . for a lovelier complexion

let Noxzema nurse Your Skin

YOU want a skin lovely to look at—smooth to touch. Every woman does! Do as thousands of nurses do, use Noxzema Medicated Skin Cream regularly as an aid to lovelier skin. Greaseless. Use it as a night cream and a long-lasting powder base. See for yourself if this famous beauty aid doesn't help make your skin look more attractive . . . far more beautiful.

Discovered by nurses. Nurses in Baltimore were among the first to find that Noxzema is a valuable beauty aid that helps to soften rough, dry skin. They discovered, too, that Noxzema helps heal blemishes and other externally-caused skin irritations . . . soothes and smooths. Today Noxzema is used by thousands and thousands of women.

Over 20,000,000 jars bought yearly. Get your jar of Noxzema today. Use it regularly for that softer, lovelier look. Start now to let Noxzema nurse your skin!

Sold at all drug counters
10¢, 35¢, 50¢ plus tax

WONDERFUL FOR CHAPPED HANDS

Actual clinical tests by physicians on the painful cracks and other skin irritations of badly chapped hands demonstrate that Noxzema soothes, helps heal hands faster—helps make red, rough hands become softer, whiter, lovelier—often overnight!

BORDERLINE ANEMIA*

steals your energy and spoils your fun!

How thousands who are pale and tired because of this blood deficiency may find renewed energy with Ironized Yeast Tablets.

THERE are people in every "crowd" who seem always weary and dispirited. Yes, and so many of these pale, drab people may trace their lack of personality and fun to a Borderline Anemia, resulting from a ferro-nutritional deficiency of the blood.

Results of medical studies show that up to 68% of the women examined—many men—have this common Borderline Anemia. And if you have noticed a loss of color and energy in yourself, you too may be a victim. Perhaps you need to build up your red blood cells—supply line of energy.

Build up Blood and Energy with Ironized Yeast Tablets

If your face is too pale and you tire too easily it may be the result of a Borderline Anemia and you should take Ironized Yeast Tablets. They are formulated to help combat Borderline Anemia by restoring puny red blood cells to normal size and color. Vigor and healthy looks depend on energy released by healthy red blood cells.

Continuing tiredness, listlessness and pallor may be caused by other conditions, so consult your physician regularly. But when you have the signs of this depressing Borderline Anemia take Ironized Yeast. It can help you build up your blood—and your natural vitality and appeal.

BORDERLINE ANEMIA
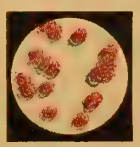
resulting from a ferro-nutritional blood deficiency can cause
TIREDNESS • LISTLESSNESS • PALLOR

Energy-Building Blood. This is a microscopic view of blood rich in energy elements. Here are big, plentiful red cells that release energy to every muscle, limb, tissue.



Borderline Anemia. Many have blood like this; never know it. Cells are puny, faded. Blood like this can't release the energy you need to feel and look your best.

Improved, Concentrated Formula

Ironized Yeast

TABLETS

Jimmy introduced her as Eve Abbott. Holy smokes, she was really a knockout. You just jumped to the conclusion that anybody as gorgeous as this one couldn't be quite bright in the head, but suddenly she said to me: 'You probably aren't aware of it, but you are really quite good. Why don't you take the stage seriously?'

"Well," remembered Keenan, "we got into the darndest coffee-klatch. For fifteen minutes we had a big discussion on the theater, and she was as smart as a whip. 'What about you and me carrying on this conversation in the immediate future?' I proposed, and she told me to call her. I did. I think I got more solid and skilful theater advice from Evie than from anyone else I'd ever met. She insisted on an improvement in my diction—I was passing through that phase when young actors want to talk very Long Islandish, slurring words and giving the 'a's' the Boston treatment. She was a perfectionist, loved the theater deeply and she communicated it to me. It had been latent—after all, I'm of the third generation of the theater—going back to my grandfather, Frank Keenan, but Evie set it on fire. It was a cinch that we'd get married—and we did."

fire meets fire . . .

Well, then, with this background of mutual interest and co-operation, at what point did the two start tugging apart?

"Probably, it was happening imperceptibly," said Keenan Wynn, "but I first became aware of what was happening when I was in the hospital. I had a lot of time to think. By the time I came out of the hospital, I'd decided that from then on, I'd do the things I wanted to do. There was the rub—Evie's accustomed to authority, accustomed to making decisions, and when you have two in the same family, there's bound to be a clash of wills and temperaments. And that, I guess, is what happened."

What is this burning ambition on the part of Keenan Wynn that is spurring him on?

"It's twofold," he grinned. "I'd like to become a movie director, with a clause in my contract that would permit me to go back to Broadway once a year and act. That's the reason I love my M-G-M setup. It's the one studio where, if you're steamed up about the business, they'll let you direct a screen test. At night, you'll find me in one of the projection rooms running old Metro pictures, learning the technique that made great directors click. That's my whole life; I'm daffy about any phase of acting."

How has his famous Pop, Ed Wynn, reacted to Keenan's movie success?

"I think he's relieved," smiled the third generation. "You see, years ago, when I started on the stage, naturally I was lucky to get one-line parts. At night, when I'd come home, Dad would adjust his eyeglasses, and say kindly to me: 'Well, Keenan, shall I cue you?' I always dreaded it, because the same thing always happened. He'd take the one page of script and he'd say: 'Another one-line part?' Then he'd look at me accusingly. 'Frank Craven's son has quite a big part in this play, Son.' By this time, my stomach would be doing nip-ups, and then he'd ask me to read my broken-down line. I'd read it, and Dad would say: 'Is THAT the way you'll do it on the stage, before an audience?' I'd say 'Yes.' He'd shake his head: 'When you make your entrance, attract some attention, Son. Perhaps you could fill your mouth with beans. Then, as you come through the doorway, pull a fake collision with the doorjamb and blow the beans out of your mouth. That is always good for quite a big laugh, and the audience will remember you.'

"I can't do that, Dad," I'd protest. "The director wouldn't like it, and besides my line is quite sad. I have to say: 'Madam, your husband has just died in an auto crash.' Dad would look at me, sadly, and he'd say: 'Son, you just don't belong on the stage. Isn't your name listed in the program? It says Keenan Wynn, son of Ed Wynn. Well, believe me, audiences expect you to make them laugh.' I'd try to argue with him, try to explain that his instinct for comedy was one thing, my effort to develop technique was another thing. 'But young Owen Davis isn't reading one-line speeches, he'd say. 'And mind you, he's not the son of a performer; his father is only a playwright.'"

Keenan Wynn chuckled at the recollection: "Probably you couldn't blame Dad. I was in more flops! One night, so help me, the show folded after the second act. It was the third night, and nobody was in the audience, so after two acts, the producer told us we could go home."

Then, I asked, it wasn't a bed of roses to be the son of a famous father?

a rose by any name . . .

"I should say not," he said. "Right off the bat, your name puts you behind the 8-ball. Inevitably, they compare you to your father. If you're any good, they are shocked. If you stink, they let you know that famous fathers always have jerk offspring. And if you finally get work, they say: 'But why are you taking the bread out of the mouths of actors who need it?' A stage 'name' is wonderful, but only for the one who created it. It's a real handicap to the children. I think, probably, that it was the realization of this, as a kid, that turned me to flying and speedboating. I think, subconsciously, I wanted to excel at something that my father hadn't beaten me to—I wanted to be an individual, in my own right. Actually, I must have been quite an impossible young jerk, but I took the cure one day, in an airplane hangar. As I came into the hangar, one of the mechanics called up to a flier: 'Hey, Charlie, this is Ed Wynn's kid.' I waited smugly for the flier to express adequate astonishment, but he floored me: 'Yeah, what does that make me, an Elk?' From that point on, I was aware that probably there were a lot of people equally unimpressed. It was a good thing to learn—that guy and I became fast friends."

Was Keenan Wynn satisfied with his career, to date? "I'm making progress," he said, "but I figure it's going to take 10 years more. By the time I'm 40, I ought to reach the position that I'm aiming for. What I'm working for is change of pace. The three 'drunks' I've done in the movies have been different types of drunks, and that's what gives me a kick, to know that I'm doing things in different ways. For the same reason, that's why I got such a tremendous rap out of Anne Baxter's performance in 'The Razor's Edge.' She is a wonderful little actress. In that hospital scene, she actually cried three times, and each time, she expressed a different meaning. Those are the things which indicate a performer's capacity, and understanding."

Was every youngster in Hollywood as intent on his goal, and as conscientious in improving himself as Keenan Wynn?

"Sure," he assured me. "Van Johnson, for one. Out of 30 years, I'd say that Van has devoted 22 years to making a success. When other kids spent their money for candy, Van spent his for dancing lessons, and things like that. He worked through the mountain borscht circuit, he played bits in vaudeville and in night clubs, danced in roadway choruses—all he thinks of is how to improve himself. Gene Kelly is another with tremendous ambition and will-power. I don't know what Gene wants to be eventually, but whatever it is, he'll achieve it. There's no stopping that sort of determination. As a matter of fact," smiled Keenan, "I feel that way myself."

If Your Little One Has A Cold-

Tonight Relieve His Distress This Way-As He Sleeps!

It's easy to understand why most young mothers depend on this modern way to relieve distress of children's colds. It's so easy . . . and it brings such wonderful relief. What you do is rub warming, comforting Vicks VapoRub on throat, chest and back at bedtime. Its 2-way relief-bringing action (shown below) starts to work instantly . . .

PENETRATES into upper bronchial tubes with special medicinal vapors.

STIMULATES chest and back surfaces like a good warming poultice.

This wonderful, special penetrating-stimulating action (brought to you only by Vicks VapoRub) quickly relieves discomforts and invites restful sleep.

WORKS DURING THE NIGHT

For hours the special penetrating-stimulating action of VapoRub keeps on working during the night to relieve coughing spasms, ease muscular soreness and tightness and bring grand relief. Try it yourself the next time a cold strikes.

Used by 88 out of 100 Rochester Mothers

In a special door-to-door survey in Rochester, N. Y. — a typical American city — 88 out of every 100 young mothers called on said they use Vicks VapoRub when a cold strikes in their family. So profit from their experience—get VapoRub today and rub it on at bedtime when your child catches cold. Just be sure you get the one and only Vicks VapoRub.

Best-Known Home Remedy You Can Use To Relieve Distress of Colds. For Children or Adults

"How to Relieve PERIODIC PAIN? I'll answer that"...

Just take a Midol tablet with a glass of water. That's all!

Then you can forget that old-fashioned idea that functional periodic pain means suffering, for you will be doing what millions of girls and women do, to get relief from periodic pain, headache, backache and that "let-down" feeling.

You see, Midol's formula is so compounded that it doesn't interfere with the normal menstrual process, yet it helps give quick relief from pain and discomfort in 3 ways: 1—Midol contains an exclusive ingredient that relaxes tense muscles—soothes cramps fast. 2—A second ingredient relieves menstrual headache quickly. 3—Still another ingredient acts to dispel "blues", picks you up!

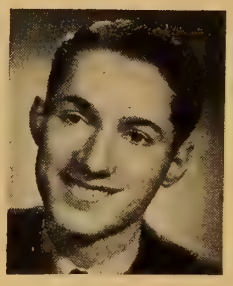
So take a Midol tablet with a glass of water at the first sign of menstrual pain, and learn how easy you can go through your period. Your druggist has Midol.

MIDOL

PERSONAL SAMPLE—in plain envelope. Write Dept. C-27, Room 1418, 41 East 42nd St., New York 17, N. Y.

CRAMPS - HEADACHE - "BLUES"

sweet and hot



BY LEONARD FEATHER

■ You may all stand up now and take off your hats, because this is Salute to Louis Armstrong Month. Louis is celebrating his 30th anniversary as a musician, and he's just made "New Orleans," the picture in which he has his biggest part to date (it'll have its world premiere in New Orleans, Mardi Gras week) and he's giving his first Carnegie Hall concert in February, and later this year he's going to Europe.

After all these years, he's still one of the greatest musicians and one of the greatest people I've ever known. His records got me started as a jazz fan in high school and I still get a thrill out of every new disc he makes.

As for the best records of the month, how about King Cole's sentimental "That's the Beginning of the End" for your popular choice and Stan Kenton's sensational album for your hot jazz. Both, coincidentally, on Capitol records.

BEST POPULAR

CARNIVAL IN RIO—Desi Arnaz (Victor)—Lucille Ball sings on this, but that information is in very small type on the label. Which just goes to show (as my lawyer always told me) that it pays to read small type. The way it all happened was that Lucille was in the studio when her husband, Desi Arnaz, was making the record. He was singing in Spanish, but there was a little interlude, an extra vocal passage, that called for some fast double talk, and in stepped Lucille. If you listen very carefully, you'll hear her singing eight bars in a voice that sounds like Donald Duck. If you listen even more carefully, you'll hear that she's singing "Peter Piper Picked a Peck of Pickled Peppers." So it isn't edifying; it's fun. GUILTY—Margaret Whiting (Capitol), Tony Martin (Mercury), Artie Shaw (Musicraft)—The Margaret Whiting version of "Guilty" is probably done with a lot of special feeling. "Guilty" was composed by her late father, Dick Whiting, who wrote "My Ideal" and "Poor Butterfly."

The Artie Shaw rendition has Mel Torme and the Meltones singing the vocal. And speaking of Artie, did you know he was being referred to as Young Manville With a Horn? Incidentally, it's a dirty lie that Kathleen Winsor is Artie's fifth wife. She's not; she's his sixth. Lana Turner was his third. Betty Kern (Jerome Kern's daughter) was his fourth. And Ava Gardner was his fifth. All I know about the first two is that one of them was a nurse. I've only met Artie with his fourth and fifth wives, and he seemed very happy both (Continued on next page) times. I hope this one lasts.

A rose between two horns is singer Billie Holiday, making music with "Satchmo" Armstrong and Barney Bigard on the set of "New Orleans." Picture's a jazz saga.

WILDER, ALEC—Frank Sinatra Conducts (Columbia Album)—This is all music written and arranged by Alec Wilder, who has done tunes and arrangements for Benny Goodman, Red Norvo and Mildred Bailey. (His best-known popular song was "I'll Be Around.") Frankie got interested in Wilder when he heard some transcriptions of a couple of the pieces that are in this album. He was playing the Paramount at the time, and he met Wilder after that, and the album was the result. Frank really conducted—it's no publicity gag—and even though he'd never led an orchestra before, he proved himself a good enough musician to turn in some constructive work. Except for swing passages in the last two of the six 12-inch sides, it's all classical, with the Columbia String Orchestra and woodwinds. The Frankie angles are played up, with a big picture

(Continued on page 114)

RECORDS OF THE MONTH

Selected by Leonard Feather

BEST POPULAR

CARNIVAL IN RIO—Desi Arnaz (Victor)
GUILTY—Margaret Whiting (Capitol), Tony Martin (Mercury), Artie Shaw (Musicraft)
HE'S JUST MY KIND—Peggy Lee (Capitol)
SEPTEMBER SONG—Frank Sinatra (Columbia), Dardanelle Trio (Victor), Hal McIntyre (Cosmo)
SONATA—Perry Como (Victor), Larry Green (Victor)
THAT'S THE BEGINNING OF THE END—King Cole (Capitol), Perry Como (Victor)
THERE IS NO BREEZE—Gene Krupa (Columbia), Alvino Rey (Capitol)
WHEN YOU MAKE LOVE TO ME—Bing Crosby (Decca), Bob Chester (Sonora)
WILDER, ALEC—Frank Sinatra Conducts (Columbia Album)
YEARS AND YEARS AGO—Les Brown (Columbia), Phil Brito (Musicraft)

BEST HOT JAZZ

ALBERT AMMONS—Swanee River Boogie (Mercury)
DIZZY GILLESPIE-COLEMAN HAWKINS—52nd St. Jazz Album (Victor)
EDMOND HALL—Ellis Island (Continental)
LIONEL HAMPTON—Tempo's Birthday (Decca)
J. C. HEARD—Bouncing for Barney (Continental)
WOODY HERMAN—Ebony Concerto (Columbia Masterwork)
EDDIE HEYWOOD—You Made Me Love You (Decca)
BILLIE HOLIDAY—Good Morning, Heartache (Decca)
STAN KENTON—Artistry In Rhythm Album (Capitol)
OSCAR PETTIFORD—Somethin' For You (Manor)

BEST FROM THE MOVIES

CARNIVAL IN COSTA RICA—Mi Vida; Another Night Like This: Dick Haymes (Decca)
DEAD RECKONING—Either It's Love Or It Isn't: Frankie Carle (Columbia), Larry Green (Victor), Lily Ann Carol (National)
IF I'M LUCKY—One More Kiss: Harry James (Columbia)
KERN, JEROME—Album of Songs: Bing Crosby (Decca)
LYNN, DIANA—Piano Album (Capitol)
MARGIE—Title Song: Eddie Cantor (Decca)
Ray Anthony (Sonora), Tony Pastor (Cosmo)
SHOCKING MISS PILGRIM—For You, For Me, For Evermore: Benny Goodman (Columbia); Aren't You Kind Of Glad We Did?: Gene Krupa (Columbia)
SMASH-UP—Life Can Be Beautiful: Harry James (Columbia)
THE TIME, THE PLACE AND THE GIRL—A Gal In Calico: Bing Crosby (Decca), Johnny Mercer (Capitol), Tony Martin (Mercury), Louis Prima (Majestic); Oh But I Do: Margaret Whiting (Capitol), Harry James (Columbia), Skinnay Ennis (Signature), Frances Langford (Mercury), Gordon Mac Rae (Musicraft); Through a Thousand Dreams: Dinah Shore (Columbia)

IT'S THE NEW
RCA VICTOR
"Dream" ALBUM!

66 VAUGHN MONROE'S Dreamland Special"

I'll See You in My Dreams • Meet Me Tonight in Dreamland
Drifting and Dreaming • Did You Ever See a Dream Walking?
My Isle of Golden Dreams • I've Got a Pocketful of Dreams
Dream • My Dreams Are Getting Better All the Time

Smooth, danceable arrangements, featuring Vaughn's romantic baritone voice, the Moon Maids and Norton Sisters. Ask for Album P-160, $3.15.

"...MORE NEW RCA VICTOR HITS!"

"On the Moon-Beam" by Vaughn Monroe and his Orchestra. Includes Paper Moon, Racing with the Moon, Moonglow, Moon Love, six other "moon" hits. Album P-142, $3.75.

"New 52nd Street Jazz" by Dizzy Gillespie, Coleman Hawkins and their All-Star Orchestras. Includes Night in Tunisia, Say It Isn't So, Ol' Man Rebop, Low Flame, four others. HJ-9, $3.75.

Swing and Sway with Sammy Kaye: Zip-A-Dee Doo-Dah; Sooner or Later. Both from "Song of the South." With vocals. RCA Victor 20-1976, 60¢.

Perry Como: That's the Beginning of the End; Sonata. 20-2033, 60¢.

Tex Beneke with the Miller Orchestra: Uncle Remus Said (from Walt Disney's "Song of the South"); Anybody's Love Song. Both with vocals. RCA Victor 20-2017, 60¢.

• RCA Victor Records are recorded by the latest electronic methods—their tone is wonderfully true to life! And be sure to hear them on a new Victrola* radio-phonograph with the exclusive "Golden Throat."

All prices are suggested list prices exclusive of taxes
*Victrola—T. M. Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

THE STARS WHO MAKE THE HITS ARE ON RCA VICTOR RECORDS

"HIS MASTER'S VOICE"

Photograph courtesy Margarine Mfrs. Assn.

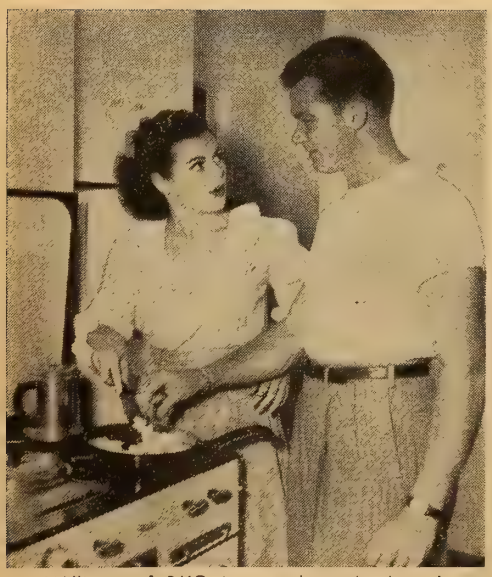
Chinese Pepper Steak is a six-lane highway to any man's heart! It's really yummy and there's nothing to cooking it. Use less expensive cuts of beef, but do simmer it gently until tender.

Photograph courtesy Ore.-Wash.-Calif. Pear Bureau

Beauty and the feast—some lovely, red-cheeked ripe pears and an assortment of fine cheeses make a very tempting dessert. It's so easy to serve you'll have plenty of time for primping!

"Feed the brute!" is ancient but still sound advice to a gal who is trying to impress her very favorite man! • By NANCY WOOD

THE WAY TO A MAN'S HEART



Mr. Williams of RKO is not above hooking home-fries right out of the pan! Mrs. Williams, also of RKO, permits it because he's her Valentine!

■ It's getting near St. Valentine's Day so we ought to say something about Love. Newlyweds Bill and Barbara (Hale) Williams have the leading roles in our little one-reeler entitled "The Course of True Love Never Did Run Smooth." The plot is this: Barbara, as decorative as she is useful in the kitchen, is a really wonderful little cook. She adores trying new recipes and takes special delight in a perfectly flavored sauce. What perfectly flavored sauce doesn't call for at least a sniff of one of the onion family? Meanwhile, she discovers that her otherwise happily omnivorous Bill is allergic to onions! But love is stronger than onions, so Barbara now omits that tear-jerking bulb and our plot ends happily.

That just shows you—you've got to cater to men! Here are some recipes for the kind of dish they particularly like:

VEAL PAPRIKA

2 lbs. veal, cubed (breast of veal most frequently used)
Garlic salt
Pepper
1 large onion, finely minced
3 tablespoons fortified margarine or butter
1 fresh tomato or 1 tsp. tomato powder
1 tablespoon cornstarch
1 tablespoon paprika
¼ cup cold water
1¼ cups meat stock*
¼ cup dry red wine
¼ to ½ cup sour cream

Rub cubes of veal with garlic salt and sprinkle with pepper. Saute veal cubes and minced onion in margarine in heavy pot or frying pan over low heat until a delicate brown. Add finely chopped tomato or powdered tomato flakes. Mix cornstarch and paprika; add cold water slowly and mix smooth. Add stock to starch mixture and stir. Add this liquid to meat with the sherry or dry wine. Turn heat low, cover tightly and cook 1 hour, or until very tender. Just before serving, add sour cream and stir over low heat until cream is bubbly and nearly melted. Serve at once with riced potatoes. Serves 6.

---

* Or use hot water and 2 bouillon cubes.

CHICKEN MUSHROOM SALAD

- 2 6-ounce cans broiled-in-butter mushrooms
- ¼ cup French dressing
- 1 8-ounce package elbow macaroni
- 2 cups diced, cooked chicken
- ½ cup mayonnaise
- ¼ cup chopped chives or 1 tablespoon finely minced onion
- ¼ cup chopped green olives
- 1 teaspoon salt

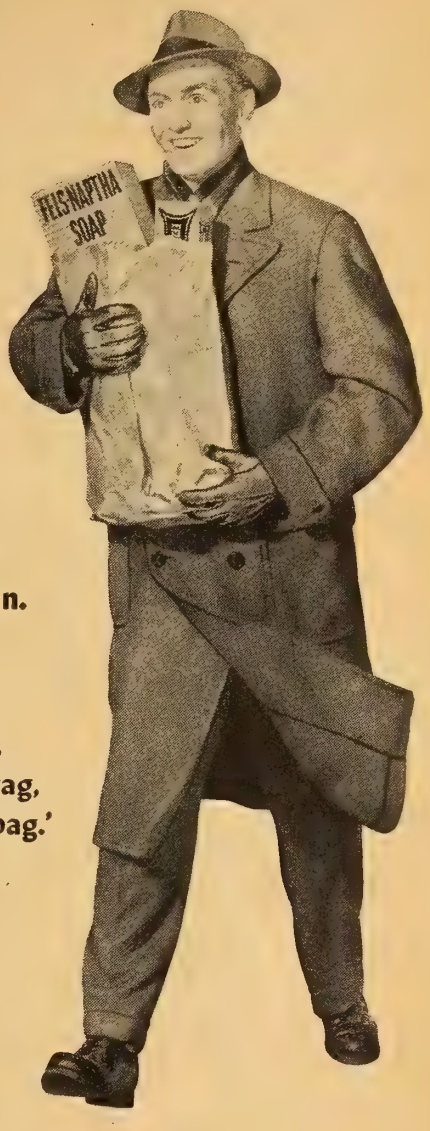
Drain and quarter mushrooms and place in a bowl. Sprinkle with French dressing. Meanwhile cook elbow macaroni in boiling salted water until tender. Drain, rinse with cold water and drain thoroughly. Place in bowl with mushrooms and toss lightly. Allow to chill in refrigerator. Add chicken. Blend together mayonnaise, chives, olives and salt. Combine with salad. Garnish with water cress. Serves 8.

CHINESE PEPPER STEAK

- 1 lb. chuck or round steak
- Flour, salt, pepper
- 2 green peppers
- 2 large onions
- 4 stalks celery, optional
- ¼ cup fortified margarine
- ½ teaspoon celery seed
- ⅛ teaspoon ground cloves
- 1 teaspoon turmeric
- ¼ teaspoon powdered ginger
- ¼ teaspoon dry mustard
- 1 teaspoon sugar
- ½ teaspoon salt
- Juice of ½ lemon
- 1 cup boiling water

Cut beef (or other lean meat) in strips. Sprinkle with salt, pepper and flour. Cut peppers, onions and celery (if used) into strips. Melt margarine in heavy frying pan and brown meat. Take meat from pan and keep hot while vegetables are sauteed in same pan over low heat for 8 to 10 minutes. (Add a little more margarine if needed.) Return meat to pan. Make a mixture of spices, sugar, salt, lemon juice and boiling water and pour over all. Cover and simmer until meat is tender and well cooked. Serve with mashed potatoes or rice. Serves 4 to 6.

The Good Provider



Bye, baby bunting,
Daddy's gone a-hunting,
To get a little rabbit's skin
To wrap the baby bunting in.

★ ★ ★

Bye, baby bunting,
Daddy's back from hunting,
He landed 'baby' modern swag,
He has Fels-Naptha 'in the bag.'

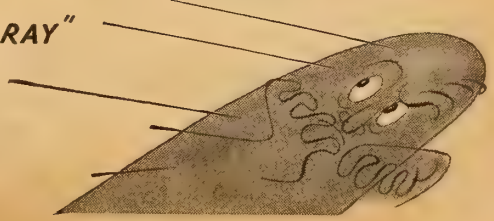
Even if a man can't manage mink these days, he might do a fair job just keeping 'the little woman' in Fels-Naptha. To a housekeeper faced with a big wash this grand laundry soap is almost priceless.

There's magic in the simple word naptha—when it's blended with good mild soap, the Fels way. Magic that makes dirt do a disappearing act—that makes your washing machine a 'quick change' performer.

When buying laundry soap means hunting instead of shopping—Fels-Naptha is the prize 'catch.'

Fels-Naptha Soap

BANISHES "TATTLE-TALE GRAY"

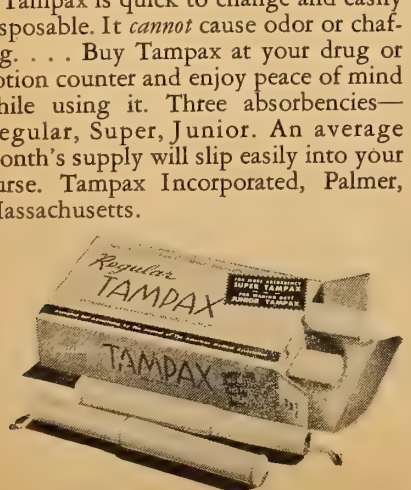


Tampax is a modern application of an old medical principle

Not a novelty, nothing tricky, Tampax is a simple and natural method for obtaining sanitary protection each month without resorting to the usual belt-and-pin arrangement supporting bulky outside pads. . . . It is just the well-known principle of internal absorption put to new use for the convenience of normal women at those "trying times" of the month.

Perfected by a doctor, Tampax is made of pure absorbent cotton throughout. It is so daintily inserted with patented one-use applicator, that your fingers need not touch the Tampax. . . . When it's properly in place you cannot feel its presence and other people cannot detect its presence, because Tampax causes no bulges, no wrinkles, no ridges to "show through."

Tampax is quick to change and easily disposable. It cannot cause odor or chafing. . . . Buy Tampax at your drug or notion counter and enjoy peace of mind while using it. Three absorbencies—Regular, Super, Junior. An average month's supply will slip easily into your purse. Tampax Incorporated, Palmer, Massachusetts.



Accepted for Advertising by the Journal of the American Medical Association of him on the album's front cover.

(Continued from page 111)

BEST HOT JAZZ

DIZZY GILLESPIE-COLEMAN HAWKINS—52nd St. Jazz Album (Victor)—Here are four sides with an octette led by Coleman Hawkins. Charlie Shavers is on trumpet, Mary Osborne on guitar, and Pete Brown on alto sax. The other four sides have an all-star group led by Dizzy Gillespie, with Don Byas on tenor sax.

EDMOND HALL—Ellis Island (Continental); LIONEL HAMPTON—Tempo's Birthday (Decca); J. C. HEARD—Bouncing For Barney (Continental)—These three numbers are grouped together for sentimental reasons. "Ellis Island" was named for Ellis Larkins, who wrote it, and who played on it. "Tempo's Birthday" was named for Lionel Hampton's dog. And "Bouncing For Barney" was named for Barney Josephson of Cafe Society Downtown.

WOODY HERMAN—Ebony Concerto (Columbia Masterwork)—There's been a lot of talk about this three-movement concerto. It's on two sides of a twelve-inch record, and it was written especially for Woody's band. It's very unusual music.

STAN KENTON—Artistry in Rhythm Album (Capitol)—Here's the Artistry man, and in this album you get "Artistry in Bolero," "Artistry in Percussion," and "Artistry in Bass." One of the highlights is June Christy on "Willow, Weep For Me," but the whole album is sensational. Stan shares the credit for this album with Pete Rugolo, who wrote five out of the eight arrangements. Rugolo came out of the army last year, and he's an extremely talented, but shy young man.

UNSENTIMENTAL GENTLEMAN

(Continued from page 43)

by a single soul. Even at home in Hollywood, where he has ambled the eight miles from his home in Holmby Hills to Paramount Studios, natives do not place him until their cars have passed him five hundred yards. Someone says, "Wasn't that Bing Crosby we just passed?"

"Couldn't have been," comes the flat reply.

This is a common occurrence, even though Bing carries with him a distinctive trademark, a golf club, which he swings rhythmically as he walks. He is, of course, mobbed by fans at any planned occasions, such as broadcasts or recordings. But unlike Sinatra, who is a man of habitual routine and therefore easily located by fans, Bing consistently refuses to observe any set schedule for his daily life.

he's just bing . . .

A restless man, his friends find him difficult to describe.

"He's—well, he's just Bing. That's all," said one man. "There isn't any one else like him."

"He changes roles every day," says Johnny Burke, the lyricist. "On Monday he might be all wrapped up in a golf game, and talks of nothing else. On Tuesday, he'll be making a recording for his broadcast and as far as he's concerned, that's the only thing going on in the world. The next day he devotes to plans for his ranch, and after that, his horses.

He is endowed with a phenomenal memory which never fails to amaze his coworkers. Having read a script once or twice for approval, he ignores it from that time on until the picture starts shooting. Each morning he reads his lines for the day, and without further reference to the script, proceeds to emote for nine hours.

Considering that he is snowed under by activities and has a multitude of irons in the fire, plus the fact that he is seldom alone, people wonder where he finds time to think. It is obvious that he does think, as he is an astute conversationalist on a variety of subjects. His mind works rapidly and Bing refuses to clog it with details. Where the average Hollywood business man spends hours in conference, Crosby makes his decisions simply. He may be teeing off at Lakeside Country Club and will look up at his companion.

"Would you like to do a picture?"

If the answer is yes or no, Bing merely nods and proceeds to swing. As far as he's concerned, that's the answer and all there is to it.

His conversation on a golf course, or anywhere else, is the same; a bland chatter filled with beautiful rhetoric and thoroughly seasoned with his own unique slang. When he has displaced a divot, he picks up the clump of turf, throws it to the caddy and says, "Here—file that!"

His singular command of the language has always been one of his fortes. Men who played in the old Paul Whiteman band can remember being stumped by his vocabulary, and Kate Crosby still has letters from her son written twenty years ago with the same easy flow of words.

His conversation is humorous and always marked by its casualness. A naturally amusing man, born with an Irish sense of humor, his ability to ad lib is in a class by itself. Such as the quip used on this season's air show when his voice lost the meter and slid past the orchestra. Without batting an eye, Bing said into the microphone, "Was anybody hurt?" and picked up nonchalantly where he had left off. He handles any situation with complete poise, such as the air show which occurred on his birthday last year. Bob Hope, who was not scheduled to appear on the program, walked on stage in the middle of the show, bearing a huge birthday cake flaming with 900 candles.

"You shouldn't have put my correct age on that thing, Robert," quipped Bing. "You'll burn the place down."

easy does it . . .

Seeing Crosby show signs of uneasiness is as unlikely as roses blooming at Christmas. Studio audiences at his radio programs remark time and again that everyone on the show seems nervous except Crosby. Some mistake his habit of tapping his foot in time to music as a sign of nervousness, probably because of the singular manner in which he does it. While most people tap their heel or toe up and down, Crosby does it from side to side, crab-wise, but this is merely an idiosyncrasy and not a matter of nerves. Al Rinker, one of the old Rhythm Boys, has seen Crosby nervous only once. That was just after Bing had left the trio and was contracted to star in an air show for the first time. He was so upset that he caught a cold and after giving proper notice to his sponsor, disappeared for three days. Johnny Mercer remembers that on one of the opening Kraft shows of a new season, he saw Bing's hands shake and has never forgotten it.

At the time the Crosby home in Toluca

Lake burned to the ground, Bing was lunching at the Brown Derby. Contacted by telephone, he rushed home and found Dixie and the boys, plus a roomful of friends, gathered in the neighboring home of Bill Goodwin. As Bing came into the room, somebody said, "Hi, Bing. What's new?" The humor of it struck Bing so forcibly that they had to pound him on the back to keep him from choking to death. His own first remark was typical.

"Did you save my tuxedo?" he said. Anyone who knows Bing knows that his tuxedo is the least treasured of any of his possessions. Clothes to him are merely something to keep him warm. Friends often figure that Crosby must actually work at some of his combinations. The truth is that he opens a closet door and grabs for the nearest thing. His wardrobe closet is hung with myriad sweaters of all colors and shapes, rare old slacks used for golf or evening, levis by the dozens and, strangely enough, dozens of well-tailored suits. For each movie that he makes, Bing is outfitted with a wardrobe, and these suits are taken home and hung in his closet, sometimes to be forgotten and never worn. He has occasionally appeared in a suit with matching coat and trousers, which is every bit as unintentional as his unique sports outfits. Less frequently, he is obsessed with a suit and wears it constantly with no thought of changing for days at a time. Some of his more outlandish costumes are the result of the fact that Bing is partially color blind.

old-timer . . .

Crosby never wears a watch because timepieces annoy him, but is unfailingly and miraculously prompt for appointments. A sixth sense of perfect timing guides him through his daily routine, and companions are constantly bewildered when he will say, "Guess we're going to be a little late," and steps on the accelerator. He always arrives on the dot, and has little patience with others who are tardy. If he has an appointment with someone for five o'clock, he arrives when the minute hand is straight up. If the associate has not arrived in ten minutes, Bing leaves. He is not angry, and never refers to the occasion, but figures that if someone is that late, they don't intend to arrive at all. He possibly also feels that his time is too costly to spend in idleness.

Despite his crowded calendar, Crosby seems to find time for everything and everyone important to him. He never visits Spokane without stopping off at his alma mater, Gonzaga University, and talking with the students. A fluent correspondent, Crosby writes scores of people, and always in longhand. He writes even business letters in longhand, then gives them to his secretary to be typed. He takes time out, and always has, to help anyone whom he considers talented along the way to success, including writers, actors, arrangers, singers—anyone in show business who is floundering for want of a helping hand. Performers enjoy working with him because his poise is infectious and they know that if they fluff, Crosby will instinctively cover up for them with one of his best ad libs.

He finds time for his home and his sons, and is one of Hollywood's best hosts. The food is always the finest to be had, and the atmosphere is totally informal. Bing often sings for guests in his home, but never as a soloist. He is particularly fond of harmony and more often than not will get together a group to sing some of the old fashioned songs, always taking the bass part himself.

His sons are an integral part of his life. All of them chips off the old block, they have their own repertoire of songs and jokes. Bing has no particular plans

ARE YOU REALLY SURE OF YOUR PRESENT DEODORANT? TEST IT AGAINST FRESH
SEE FOR YOURSELF WHY MORE AND MORE WOMEN ARE SWITCHING TO FRESH—THE NEW CREAM DEODORANT THEY FIND THE MOST EFFECTIVE AND SO SAFE

Use FRESH and be Lovelier to Love

Lovely to Know... that you can really rely on Fresh. Fresh contains the most effective perspiration-stopping ingredient known to science!

Lovely to Use... gentle Fresh stays smooth... never greasy, gritty or sticky... doesn't dry out.

And Safe... because Fresh contains a patented ingredient that makes it truly safe for skin and fabrics. No wonder . . . more and more women are switching to Fresh.

FRESH
CREAM DEODORANT
STOPS PERSPIRATION
FRESH is safe. Approved by the American Medical Association for advertising in their publications.

Copyright, 1947, The Pharma-Craft Corporation, Inc.

JUDY CLARK

Featured in Monogram's "In High Gear," a Jan Grippo Production.

So Easy to Have Lovely Hair

The undertones of beautiful hair glow with rich, radiant color; fleeting, brilliant flashes shimmer in the high lights. Its tresses are soft, silky, snarless and easily arranged. People say, "Oh! What lovely hair! Isn't it beautiful!"

If that's the kind of hair you want, you can have it—today! But you will have to do something more than just wishing and shampooing to get it.

The right shade of Golden Glint will set free the true beauty of your hair as silver polish reveals the true luster of silver or as bluing brings out the true whiteness of linen. Golden Glint rinses come in 12 shades. They are harmless, quick and easily removed. Why not have beautiful hair today?

Get a 10c or 25c package now from variety or drug store.

GOLDEN GLINT

1–FORMULA 301 will skillfully conceal externally caused pimples and minor skin blemishes.

2–Does not leave a mask-like appearance . . . just sheer, transparent loveliness!

3–Use this glamourizing lotion skin aid as a powder base and complexion beautifier day and night.

4–You will look lovelier after the first application!

FORMULA 301

Powder Base and Complexion Beautifier

Conceals tiny lines and minor blemishes effectively

ANTISEPTIC • ASTRINGENT • PROTECTIVE

At Drug and Dept. Stores 39c • $1.00 • $1.50

At all Ten Cent Stores—Trial Sizes 10c and 20c

If unavailable in your locality, order from us. 10c ☐ 20c ☐ 39c ☐ $1.00 ☐ $1.50 ☐ (Add 20% tax)

Name.....

Address.....

City & State.....

4

KAY PREPARATIONS CO., 522 5th Avenue, New York 18

for the boys to grow up into show business, but prefers to have them choose their own vocations and has no intention of interfering. He worries about them much the same way as any other father, separates them occasionally because he thinks it's good for them, sending one or two up to the ranch, and puts Gary on a diet when the boy shows signs of plumpness. He dislikes publicity in connection with the boys, and has a particular horror of their becoming too smart for their britches. When any one of them gets out of line, Bing handles the situation briefly by saying, "Get back in your trunk, junior."

As the boys grew older, Bing saw to it that each of them studied a musical instrument, and they now play the trumpet, the piano and the trombone. On Christmas Eves, Bing and the kids make a tour of the neighborhood, singing carols and tooting their trumpets. After each rendition, the kids hold out a hat for contributions, and at the end of the evening, Bing painstakingly counts the money, divides it into five parts, winks at the kids, and pockets his own share.

A man of great earning power, Crosby seemingly pays little attention to money. Actually, he is a shrewd business man and makes all major decisions himself.

tough—like butter . . .

An incurable giver of gifts, which he sprays liberally among his circle of friends, Bing is sometimes hard put to hide the sentiment he has put into his purchases. He usually covers up by presenting a gift package and saying to the recipient in an offhand manner, "Here. For you. Something a fan sent me and I thought you could use it."

His dislike of obvious sentiment is shown in the songs he sings, particularly the ones written especially for him. He refuses to sing any tune whose lyrics are maudlin, and has managed quite well through the years with this policy, inasmuch as he is beyond doubt the most versatile singer of songs in America today. John Burke and Jimmy Van Heusen, who write songs for Bing's Paramount pictures, find him extremely easy to write for due to this versatility. A born minstrel, Bing likes to sing. He starts the minute he wakens in the morning and continues throughout the day, sometimes humming, sometimes blasting with the full power that few people realize is in his voice. He rambles from a popular tune of the day to an obscure Irish folk song, and has at times been seen riding a bicycle through the Paramount lot, unconcernedly singing a tune.

His modesty is starkly unbelievable and yet is evident in everything he does. He pays no attention to publicity, and has never had a scrapbook of clippings in his home. He never plays his own records and when listening to playbacks of his voice at the studio will cover his face with one hand and mutter unprintable criticisms. According to his older friends, Bing never expected to be a success, and today is torn between not believing the accomplished fact and trying to ignore the obvious adoration lavished on him by the public. Jim Van Heusen says that Bing was sincerely surprised at winning the Oscar last year. He kept repeating, "It's Barry's picture, it's Barry's picture," and when presented with the statue, told the radio audience, "It's a great America when a guy like me can win an Academy Award. Fact is, there's hope for everybody."

Manhattan's Stork Club has a rule that no guest may smoke a pipe, yet when Crosby appeared there, took his pipe from his breast pocket and lighted it, not a word was said. Unaware of the rule, and the last man to ask for special privileges, Bing would have been quick to cooperate, but the management hesitated to approach him with a reprimand. This type of deference amazes Bing, yet his poise and complete self-confidence render most people incapable of criticizing him. His disbelief in his own success and the casualness with which he accepts it make him the master showman that he is. The question of his eventual retirement goes unanswered, by both the industry and Bing himself. No one knows if he wants to retire, but the odds are against it. He is too restless a man to be without his present interests and he is a going concern whose momentum has become too great for him to control.

His fans are greatly responsible for the force behind his activities. Crosby is a rarity in show business, in that both men and women all over the world admire his personality and his talent. The affection which they lavish on him is often embarrassing to Bing. Take the young flier who, in the early days of the war, met Bing on a movie set.

"I joined up for you, Mr. Crosby," said the boy. "I'm going to shoot down enemy planes—and every one will be for you, because you represent America to me."

Bing turned five colors.

Years later, the boy came back and managed to see Bing again. He had shot down eighteen enemy planes and was hung with ribbons and medals.

"You see, Mr. Crosby," he said. "I told you I'd do it."

Although not usually so vehement, the admiration of Crosby continues by all who know him, either personally or professionally. Johnny Burke sums it up by saying, "If anybody said he didn't like Crosby, he'd be a faker looking for attention. And if anybody really disliked Bing, he'd be afraid to say so because he'd probably get a punch in the nose. At least he would if I heard him."

Support the 1947 Red Cross Fund

THE JOB AHEAD . . .

SERVING

in peace as in war, in the quiet of the hospital, in the fury of the hurricane,
the veteran at home,
the troops overseas.

GIVING

necessities such as clothing, shelter, food, and medicine in time of disaster.

TEACHING

Home Nursing, Nutrition, Accident Prevention, First Aid, Life-Saving.

LEADING

millions of women in volunteer services in their community . . . millions of young people in the Junior Red Cross crusade.

HELPING

sister Red Cross Societies, so that kindness, mercy, and mutual aid may bind together the people of this planet.

DEPENDS ON YOU!

USE YOUR HEAD

(Continued from page 62)

hairdo of your dreams with just a little of the right kind of attention.

YOU CAN'T DO A THING WITH YOUR HAIR BECAUSE IT'S SO THIN

Have permanents more often, either the store-bought type or the kind you give yourself. Curl gives a bulky look to hair and so just naturally makes it seem thicker. For the thick look, keep your hair cut in uneven lengths or, if you prefer it long and in an "updo," back-comb your curls to make them look fat and heavy.

YOU CAN'T DO A THING WITH YOUR HAIR BECAUSE IT'S SO THICK

Have your hair thinned regularly by a hairdresser who can do it so ends don't poke through the longer hair. Don't wear fluffy hairstyles which make your head appear too large, but rather go in for close-to-the-head, straight hairdo's like the barretted pageboy or the smooth short bob.

YOU CAN'T DO A THING WITH YOUR HAIR BECAUSE IT WON'T CURL

Try rolling your hair on ribbons or strips of cloth torn to even lengths. Divide your hair into about eight sections around your head, dampen each section slightly, then starting at the tip ends of the hair, roll each section over the cloth or ribbon till the curl reaches the scalp. Tie the cloth ends together to hold the curl firm until it is dry. If you want very tight curls, leave your hair rolled up over night, but 30 minutes setting time will produce a soft curl which is what most gals want.

YOU CAN'T DO A THING WITH YOUR HAIR BECAUSE IT JUST WON'T GROW

Chances are that your hair is split on the ends and breaks off, keeping your hair at a constant length. Avoid having too many permanents and always have the old permanent cut off before you subject your hair to more curl. Brush your hair regularly and use brilliantine or a hair cream on the ends to counteract dryness. Avoid using combs with broken teeth, or sharp hairpins or curlers. If your hair is split so badly that ends look discolored, better have them cut, then embark on a be-kind-to-your-hair campaign.

YOU CAN'T DO A THING WITH YOUR HAIR BECAUSE YOU JUST WASHED IT

Try using a liquid shampoo with hair conditioning action for greater manageability. If your hair is unusually dry, rub brilliantine or a hair cream into it right after the shampoo.

YOU CAN'T DO A THING WITH IT BECAUSE YOUR HAIR IS SO CURLY

Curly hair has a will of its own, so set it in the direction it wants to go. Use a very heavy wave lotion for the setting and don't comb your hair until it is thoroughly dry. Wrap your head in a heavy towel when you bathe. This will keep the steam from undoing your precious set.

YOU CAN'T DO A THING WITH YOUR HAIR BECAUSE YOU CAN'T MAKE UP YOUR MIND HOW TO WEAR IT

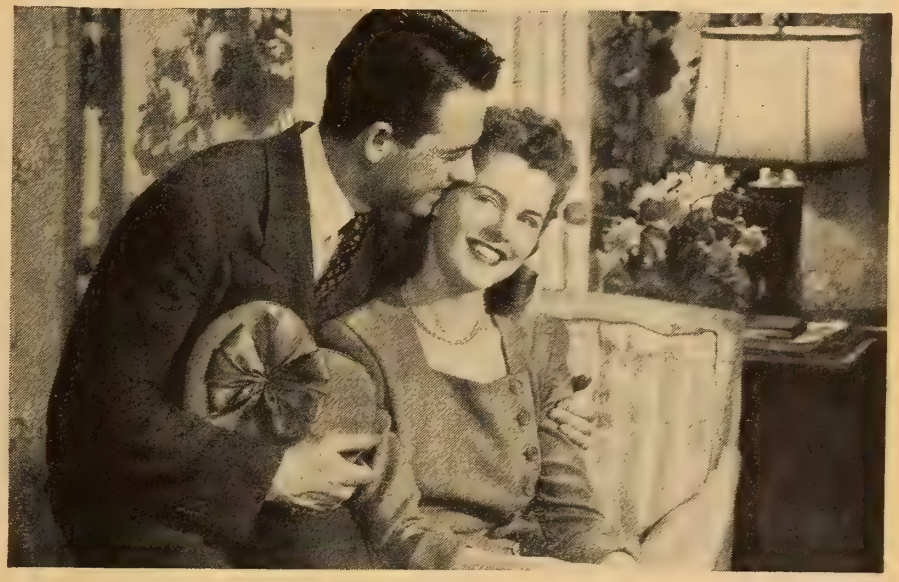
Watch for the new short hairdos, very youthful and flattering. Started last spring with the revival of the 1920 bob, the trend for short hair seems more popular than ever. The 1947 version is slightly curled, with the front hair cut to the tip of the ear, while the back hair dips to almost shoulder length.

* * *

You have another problem? Drop me a note telling me all about it and as your Beauty Editor, I'll be happy to help you overcome that bulging waistline or that spotty complexion. My address: Carol Carter, Beauty Editor, Modern Screen, 149 Madison Ave., New York 16, N. Y.

"Divided hearts at our house . . ."

Somehow, somewhere, we'd lost our lovely, thrilling oneness. I didn't realize that I was at fault. Sure, I knew about feminine hygiene . . . or so I thought. But finally I learned, from my doctor, that the careless, now-and-then care I'd trusted to, was a frequent cause of marriage failure. He said a wife can't afford such neglect . . . advised my using "Lysol" brand disinfectant for douching—always.



"Now it's one heart again"

"Two hearts that beat as one"—that's us again! I wouldn't have believed careful feminine hygiene was so important in married happiness. But my doctor was right! I always use "Lysol" for douching, now, and can recommend its thorough yet gentle cleansing. "Lysol" is thorough—far more so than salt, soda or other homemade solutions. It's a proved germ-killer—it works—and it's so easy and economical to use.

More women use "LYSOL" for Feminine Hygiene than any other germicide . . . for 6 reasons

Reason No. 4: CLEAN ODOR—"Lysol's" clean, antiseptic odor disappears quickly after use. Being an effective deodorant, "Lysol" helps to solve an important problem of personal daintiness.

Note: Douche thoroughly with correct "Lysol" solution . . . always!

For Feminine Hygiene use "Lysol" always!

"Lysol" Brand Disinfectant

GIRLS! Want quick curls?

WHAT girl doesn't want quick curls these days! Especially when that favorite fella gives you a call at the last minute. With New Wildroot Hair Set you can set that favorite hair-do in less time. It's absolutely tops for quick good grooming that's so important these days. New Wildroot Hair Set contains processed Lanolin. Leaves any texture of hair soft, natural-looking, and at its lovely best. Replaces old-fashioned thick gummy wave sets. Light bodied. Faster drying. Lets you style your favorite hair-do at home quickly, without fuss or disappointment.

NEW WILDROOT HAIR SET

Premiums GIVEN! Send No Money NOW!

Send name and address—Ladies! Girls! Boys! Dainty wrist watches, pocket watches, alarm clocks, flashlights, ovenware sets, blankets—other premiums or Cash Commission easily yours. SIMPLY GIVE colorful art pictures with White CLOVERINE Brand SALVE for chaps and mild burns, sold to friends at 25 cents a box (with popular picture) and remit amounts stated for premium wanted as explained in catalog sent with order postage paid by us. Our 52nd year. Write for trial order of SALVE and Pictures on trust to start.

WILSON CHEMICAL COMPANY, Dept. 10-57, Tyrone, Pa.

DRAW for MONEY

Be An Artist!

Trained Artists are Capable of Earning $50, $60, $75, a week

Learn to draw at home In Your Spare Time for a Fascinating Hobby and Profitable Art Career! Study Art the pleasant and interesting W.S.A. way. Commercial Art, Designing, Cartooning all in ONE complete course. No previous art experience necessary—hundreds have profited by our practical step-by-step methods since 1914. TWO ART OUTFITS FURNISHED. Mail coupon. (COURSE AVAILABLE UNDER G.I. BILL.)

FREE BOOK gives details!

WASHINGTON SCHOOL OF ART,
Studio 802-H, 1115 15th St., N. W.,
Washington 5, D. C.

Send your booklet and full particulars.

Name_____ AGE_____

Street_____

City_____ Zone ( ) State_____

THE FANS

(Continued from page 82)

whose own Rodeo packed the Stadium there, played host to 350 club delegates at a reception at the Ambassador East Hotel. Dale Evans and the Sons of the Pioneers helped Roy entertain the delighted guests.

msfca diary . . .

Jeanette MacDonald's appearance on the Family Hour brought Marie Waddy and Martha Farrington to town and we club-talked over luncheon at the St. Moritz . . . Anne Boeger, prexy of the Wilbur Evans Club, dropped in to tell us about the theater party which Theatre Consolidated is planning in conjunction with several clubs for legit stars . . . Ed Dukoff, Danny Kaye's manager, called to say that Danny and Sylvia are now so far behind on the mail, they hope you Kaye clubbers will understand and be patient . . . Roddy McDowall, in town for a p.a., phoned to put the official stamp of approval on a new club in his honor . . . the Evelyn MacGregor Club's birthday party for Evelyn at the Barbizon was another gay and charming success for that club.

the msfca trophy contest . . .

The coveted MSFCA Trophy Cups are awarded every six months to the three fan clubs which MODERN SCREEN's editors judge the most active and outstanding among the 503 MSFCA clubs. (And the competition is really tough!) The clubs are rated on the basis of points scored in a series of monthly contests.

All MSFCA clubs are fairly divided into three leagues. League One includes those clubs having 600 or more members; League Two covers those with a membership of from 200 to 599, and League Three is for the under-200 classification. One cup winner is selected from each league.

getting to the points . . .

Here's how to score in the Trophy Cup race: 1. "This Is My Best" Contest. Six articles and/or poems selected from your journals each month, each 100 points. 2. Six Candid Camera Contest winners each month; first prize, 100 points; five others, 50 points. 3. Best journal of the month (one in each league), each 500 points. 4. Best editor of the month (one in each league), each 250 points. 5. Best original piece of art work (one each month), 150 points. 6. Best cover of the month (one in each league), each 250 points. 7. Most worthwhile club activity of the month (one in each league), each 250 points. 8. Greatest percentage increase in club membership each month (one in each league), each 100 points. 9. Best MS correspondent of the month (one in each league), each 50 points. 10. For each regularly scheduled edition of a club journal, 100 points. Next month we'll announce the winners of the fourth consecutive Trophy contest for the Winter, 1947.

and prizes, too! . . .

Now just take a gander at the precious loot we've scared up for you lucky winners: to the authors of the six best articles and/or poems (as selected from your club journals by MS's editorial staff, in our "This Is My Best" contest) will go gorgeous gift-combos of Faberge's famous perfumes and colognes! M-m-m! Tweedy Woodhue, man-menacing Tigress, sophisticated Aphrodisia and saucy Straw Hat! For the guys, we've got the wonderful new Faberge Men's Cologne. But there's more! Each month's best editors will receive a

NO DULL DRAB HAIR

When You Use This Amazing

4 Purpose Rinse

In one, simple, quick operation, LOVALON will do all of these 4 important things to give YOUR hair glamour and beauty:

1. Gives lustrous highlights.
2. Rinses away shampoo film.
3. Tints the hair as it rinses.
4. Helps keep hair neatly in place.

LOVALON does not permanently dye or bleach. It is a pure, odorless hair rinse, in 12 different shades. Try LOVALON.

At stores which sell toilet goods

25¢ for 5 rinses
10¢ for 2 rinses

Guaranteed by Good Housekeeping
IF DEFECTIVE OR NOT AS ADVERTISED THEREIN
REPLACEMENT OR REFUND OF MONEY

BACKACHES CAUSED BY MOTHERHOOD

Muscles are often strained by motherhood and cause backaches for years. Allcock's Porous Plasters give prompt effective relief . . . They support the muscles, bring heat to painful spot. 25c at druggists.

ALLCOCK'S Porous Plasters

STAMMER?

This new 128-page book, "Stammering, Its Cause and Correction," describes the Bogue Unit Method for scientific correction of stammering and stuttering—successful for 46 years. Benj. N. Bogue, Dept. 2292, Circle Tower, Indianapolis 4, Ind.

GET THIS FREE BOOK!

PLENTY OF EXTRA CASH

AMAZING OPPORTUNITIES FOR WOMEN

How would you like to turn your spare mornings or evenings into cash? Later on, devote FULL TIME to this fascinating, big-pay work. If you're married—earn good money showing friends, neighbors glorious new Sheba Ann Frocks direct from Hollywood & New York. Be a proud, prosperous Sheba Ann Fashion Counsellor.

NO EXPERIENCE NEEDED

START EARNING MONEY RIGHT AWAY

Getting orders for lovely Sheba Ann Originals is just like chatting with friends. It's easy—dignified . . . and you come away with ready cash.

MAKE MONEY VERY FIRST DAY

We show you exactly how to go about earning BIG CASH BONUSES, too. We deliver & collect.

Have Your Own Money. Start Now!

Send coupon NOW. We'll furnish FREE SAMPLE OUTFIT. Then watch cash come your way. Act now!

SHEBA ANN FROCKS, Dept. K-11
407 South Austin Street, Dallas 2, Texas

FREE SAMPLES

SHEBA ANN FROCKS, Dept. K-11
407 South Austin Street, Dallas 2, Texas

Please rush me FREE Sample Outfit and complete details on how I can make a big, steady income, get CASH BONUSES taking orders for advanced style, top-quality, Sheba Ann Frocks.

NAME_____

STREET ADDRESS_____

TOWN_____ ZONE____ STATE_____

lush box of glamor-goodies especially packaged for us by the Ponds people! (They're lovely to do that, no?) Also in line for prizes are the monthly creators of the best original art work. For them—the smartest-looking makeup kit ever—the Tangee Trip Kit, bulging with lipstick, rouge, cologne, pancake, etc! (Note: suitable prizes will be substituted for male winners!) And there's a fair share of booty waiting for the six winners of our monthly Candid Camera Contest, too! More about this next month!

club banter . . .

Didja know that every edition of the Nelson Eddy Golden Notes (NE International Club) is on file with the Library of Congress? . . . Jackie Jerrolds of the Gene Autry Club, was chosen Queen For A Day, on that well-known program . . . John Carbone, movie reviewer of the Gene Kelly Club News, doesn't use stars or bells to rate films. He uses flowers: Orchids for the best; then, gardenias, lilies and petunias in descending order . . . N. Y. chapter of the Dick Haymes Associates (Edith Pell, chairman) is seeking to combine all local branches of Dick's clubs into a co-operative group . . . Jive, journal of the Bob Crosby Club, announces the results of its third annual members' poll (Bob was exempt): Favorite band, Tommy Dorsey; musician, Harry James; male singer, Bing; female singer, Dinah Shore; actor, Bing; actress, Bergman . . . A poll of Allyson Clubbers reveals these faves: Actress, June and Bergman; actor, Van and Pete Lawford; male vocalist, Bing and Frank; female vocalist, Dinah and Jo Stafford . . . John Raitt Club is running a baby contest. The three members judged to have been the cutest babies (via infant photos) will win prizes from Johnny . . . Joe Beasley, prexy and editor of the Pee Wee King Club, is a sports reporter for his local newspaper . . . Chuck Rini is looking for a capable prexy to take over his Alan Ladd Club. Please send your qualifications to The Fans, care of MS.

msfca club plugs . . .

Each month we'll try to plug as many qualified MSFCA clubs as we have room for. Each of the following clubs has published at least one journal; some are established clubs of long standing. Write to The Fans, care of MS for their addresses: All Stars (Sylvia Pall); Harry Babbitt (Jean Kurowsky); Joseph Calleia (Ena Svedise); Chopin Music Club (Philip Swindell); Perry Como (Bella Conover); Lloyd Cornell (Viola Myers); Bing Crosby (Philomena Vendetti); Ken Curtis (Bernice Harbaugh); Don DeFore (Delores Privitera); Jimmy Dorsey-Bob Eberle (Lorraine Brault); Tommy Dorsey (Marilyn Stevens); Joe Dosh (Arlene Maxon); Jessica Dragonette (Florence Brubaker); Bob Eberle (Virginia Wellington); Nelson Eddy Music Club (Rita and Jo Mottola); Vincent Price (Amena Peacock); Basil Rathbone (Margie Goode); Margaret Whiting (Ann Paparello); Jack Berch (Ginger Bagnall); Vivian Blaine (Shirley Weis); Kenny Bowers (Lee Garber); June Christy (Mary Downey).

MARCH ISSUE

Gable's back—and nobody's got him on their cover but our own March MODERN SCREEN. If Clark's the guy you dream about, he'll be on your newsstand on February 11th—all yours!

HONOR BOUND
Week-end Marriage
MEN are such fools
These famous FAITH BALDWIN romantic novels
now available in the DELL BOOK series for only 25¢
HONOR BOUND
A DELL ROMANCE
No. 116
WEEK-END MARRIAGE
No. 73
men are such fools
A DELL ROMANCE
No. 138
These DELL ROMANCES also available now:
No. 99 NOW, VOYAGER by Olive Higgins Prouty
No. 117 WOMEN ARE LIKE THAT by Alice Elinor Lambert
No. 118 HALF ANGEL by Fanny Heaslip Lea
No. 119 ROBIN HILL by Lida Larrimore
No. 130 THE HARVEY GIRLS by Samuel Hopkins Adams
No. 139 LOVE—and the Countess to Boot by Jack Iams
No. 140 FOOTPRINT OF CINDERELLA by Philip Wylie
No. 141 THE SWIFT HOUR by Harriet Thurman
If you cannot obtain the titles listed, mail this coupon. Send 25c for each book ordered.
DELL PUBLISHING CO., Inc., 149 Madison Ave., New York 16, N. Y.
Please send me the Dell Books checked below. I enclose $.....
☐ No 73 ☐ No. 99 ☐ No. 116 ☐ No. 117 ☐ No. 118 ☐ No. 119
☐ No. 130 ☐ No. 138 ☐ No. 139 ☐ No. 140 ☐ No. 141
Name.....
Address.....
City, Zone & State.....MS

Use this famous
Canadian Formula

for CHAPPED DRY HANDS

1. Quicker results. Softens roughest, driest skin over night.

2. Proved effectiveness for 65 years in cold Canada.

3. A pure, rich concentrated emollient. Aids healing. Choice of countless doctors, nurses, housewives, mothers.

4. Economical—spreads widely —single drop serves both hands.

At cosmetic counters—10¢, 25¢, 50¢ and $1.00 a bottle.

Campana Balm
THE SKIN SOFTENER

Millie was a morning glory...

neat at nine. Her hair combed and curled—every strand in place. On her way to work, she caught admiring glances and a few low whistles. But look . . .

tousled at twelve. After a few hours, Millie's hair-do just seemed to 'come apart! Drat . . . no lads looking now . . .

'til she discovered Nestle HAIRLAC
— the delicately perfumed hair lacquer

Now Millie pats a few drops of Nestle Hairlac on her finished hair-do and presto! she's all set for a whole day of blissful hair-smoothness. Follow Millie's example to keep your own hair neat and shining all day long. Get Nestle Hairlac at your drug or dept. store.

KEEPS HAIR UNDER CONTROL AND LUSTROUS

IT SHOULDN'T HAPPEN TO A DUCK

(Continued from page 57)

reflected for a moment. "But these were marching along in single file."

"Ducks have a way of doing that sometimes, I believe."

"Shepherded by two small girls in pink?"

"Those are the children's party dresses. They're my nieces who've been staying with me all summer, and they're due at a sort of farewell party one of the neighborhood mother's is giving for them—tomorrow they go home. To Las Vegas."

"You say those are your nieces?"

"Among others. My oldest brother, Buddy, has six offspring. Mike, the youngest, had two. My sister Francis has only one, so far."

"Very fertile, you Graysons."

"Practically the source of American population," Kathryn agreed cheerfully, "all except me. I just sing.

"You know," said Kathryn thoughtfully, "we might do well to look into the matter of those ducks, and Maddle Addle and Teenie Weenie—"

Brent winced. "What did you say?"

"Children of that age enjoy nicknames. Let's face it. But Madeline and Patricia—if you prefer—are supposed to stay immaculate until the party. And if they followed those ducks to the pond. . . ."

At that moment the French doors from the garden opened and the two children entered. Dripping, mud-streaked and supremely happy in their ruined party dresses, they wore an air of triumph.

"Dick said ducks can't drownd," Madeline said.

"Drown," corrected Kathryn.

"But they can," Patricia said.

"We drownded 'em," added Madeline. She giggled, and added, "dead."

"Help," yelped Kathryn. "Quick!" She was already dashing through the door into the garden. Brent caught up with her as she was fishing the limp bodies of the three drowned ducks from the pond, and helped her carry them into the kitchen. She snapped on the oven, wrapped the ducks in dish towels, and shoved them inside, leaving the door open. She got milk from the refrigerator, poured it into a pan and set it on to warm.

Dick, tall, handsome and thirty—major domo of her establishment—came wandering in from the garage, his levis grease-stained, his hair tousled. He sounded only mildly astonished as, surveying the scene, he said, "What on earth—"

"They very nearly disproved you," Kathryn said. "If held under water long enough, even ducks drown. See if the darned things show any signs of life."

"This one's got its bill open a little," Dick said.

"Then pour some of that milk into it."

Fifteen minutes later, with the partially revived ducks set out in the sun, Kathryn glanced at her watch and set out at a run. The girls must leave in ten minutes for the party, which—in their present condition—added up to a crisis.

As she ran, Kathryn used her "Valkyrie" voice. "Jean! BETTY!"

"Baths," said Kathryn, "and clean dresses. Hair ribbons. Ten minutes." . . .

Madeline and Patricia arrived at the party on time.

"I just can't understand it," Grace, Buddy's wife, was saying. She and Buddy had arrived from Las Vegas at noon, just in time for lunch, and would leave before dinner with Madeline and Patricia. "They drank their milk like darlings, without a word. And they've gained weight. How on earth did you do it?"

"The milk?" Kathryn asked. "Oh, simple. I gave them prizes for drinking it. The one that drank the most, the fastest—"

"But good heavens," Grace protested, "that's simply terrible psychology. Now they'll want a reward every time they have a glass of milk."

"Not at all. I stopped giving them prizes, after awhile, and they went right on drinking milk anyway. They'd got used to it, and it called up pleasant associations."

"Oh. Well, did you have to spank them very often, or anything?"

"I never spanked them. They were relatively good—although Teenie Weenie's a little devil when she wants to be. I bought them slides, you know, and tricycles and things, and the first thing Teenie Weenie did was to take the front wheel off her tricycle."

"And you didn't spank her?"

Kathryn looked shocked. "It was her tricycle. I asked her, 'Don't you like your trike?' She said she did. So I just left the wheel off for a week. She saw Madeline riding hers, and got good and restless. Then I had Dick put the wheel back on. Teenie Weenie left it on after that."

Grace plopped down on one of the beds. "I'll never understand how you run this house," she said. "You don't appear to have any servants, just a group of charming people who live here casually with their children. What's the deal, anyway?"

Kathryn grinned. "It's the only way to live. You remember when I had the Bel Air house, with the Guatemalan housekeeper and the couple from Central Avenue? I never could understand why the grocery bill was $300 a month. Then I came home unexpectedly one night and there was the explanation—a party for 25 people going on, with turkeys and fried chicken and champagne. It was just about then that Dick came around to deliver some horse meat for Throck, and we got to talking. He's an engineer, and he said he needed a year to accumulate a little money so he could get started again. So he and Jean and the two children came to live with me—not in the role of servants, that wouldn't have worked.

"And after I bought this house, he found Don and Betty. Don's just out of the service and is going to school, and it was a perfect arrangement for him as well. You see each couple has two rooms and a bath and a private entrance, so we all have our privacy. But we are like a community family. On birthdays we have a home party, and when I'm lonely I go out and sit in the kitchen and sew.

"Alice—she's my secretary—often stays too, and Johnny often comes around.

Grace came to the point. "D'you think you'll marry Johnny Johnston?" she asked.

"He hasn't his divorce at the moment. And I don't want to take any chances, especially on marriage. But he's really a marvelous person. You'll get an invitation, when, as and if."

"That's all I wanted to know," Grace said. She stood up. "We'll have to be starting back. And if you've spoiled the children, I just won't let you have them again."

"They'll be here next summer," Kathryn said cheerfully, "drowning ducks and teasing me and calling me Sissy, and putting their dresses on backwards."

She was still waving after the car when she heard the phone ringing and remembered that Johnny always called at this hour on Sundays. She ran to answer it with a light heart, thinking, I'll ask him for dinner and tell him about the ducks.

THIS IS LANA!

(Continued from page 49)

only as The Ziegfeld Girl that Lana walked on mink. As herself, she steps out in shoe-leather like you and me. She'd rather munch pretzels and cheese than toy with a grape, and she sleeps in high-necked flannels as often as in silks. With a hot-water bag to toast her toes yet. No Susie Doakes has a deeper maternal instinct. Her heart belongs to Cheryl. She carries pictures around like any other pest, and if you don't bring the subject up within a reasonable time, she'll plop it into your lap. "Did you know I had a baby? Look, isn't she cute—?"

She doesn't act the way movie queens are supposed to act and lots of them do—as though they were real queens condescending to their subjects. She's too healthy-minded for that kind of sham. Any mood she gets into she soon laughs herself out of. As a rule, studio people don't look forward to going on tour with stars. There's too much babying to be done. Lana's an exception—wakes up good humored, no matter when she's dragged out of bed, and stays that way most of the time. If things go wrong, she doesn't take it out on others who have their own headaches and aren't as well paid as she is for wrestling with them. She doesn't have to be handled, she handles herself. "I feel crabby, I'll go lie down for a while—" and that's the end of it.

She doesn't expect you to suit your convenience to hers. In the course of a crowded shooting schedule, she's sometimes asked to sit for stills on a Sunday. Before committing herself, she calls the photographer. "Doing anything Sunday—?" If he is— "Okay, okay, I'm busy Sunday too. Just forget I mentioned it—" who's lotta? . . .

She loves to poke fun at the Legend of Lana. Tell her she's the hottest thing in town and she'll ask if you ever heard of Lotta Turnover. That's her favorite story. It happened on the Superchief. Lana and a girl friend, en route to New York, discovered the Edward Arnolds on the same train. That night they had dinner together. Lana enjoys taking her meals in the dining-car. She's not the type to hang back, squealing: "Oh, this'll be murder—" If it's going to be murder, she keeps out of it. But under a few turned heads and some curious stares, she feels she's hardy enough to bear up.

Next morning Arnold's wife and the girls slept late. Breakfasting alone, Arnold struck up an idle conversation with the steward. "How's business?"

Business was good. Too good. Too many customers and not enough food. Couldn't get this, couldn't get that. No call to kick though. Come right down to it, folks were pretty understanding. Take these movie stars, for instance—supposed to be temperamental, but they're not. Can't get what they want, take what they can get and like it. Plenty of movie stars riding this train. Barbara Stanwyck last week, Spencer Tracy the week before—

"This week Lana Turner," said Arnold.

"Oh yes, yes—lotta turnover, four thousand a week," and the steward moved on.

Between Arnold's booming basso as he told the story later and Lana's hysterics as she listened, people ran in to find out what the riot was about. "I'm a big star," Lana gasped, tears rolling down her cheeks. "I'm Lotta Turnover—"

She doesn't kid her career though. About that she's in dead earnest and always has been. Only somewhere along the line she got pretty discouraged. Being a girl of

Is your daughter's marriage being ruined by half the truth?

A Mother's Ignorance of These Intimate Physical Facts Often To Blame!

Before your daughter marries—it's your solemn duty to instruct her on how important douching often is to intimate feminine cleanliness, health, charm and marriage happiness—how important it is to combat one of woman's most serious deodorant problems.

But FIRST—make sure your own knowledge is just as up-to-date and scientific as it can be! And it will be if you tell her how important ZONITE is for the douche—

No other type liquid antiseptic-germicide tested is SO POWERFUL yet SO HARMLESS

Thanks to a world-famous Surgeon and a skilled Chemist who have given the world the remarkable ZONITE principle—wise women no longer use old-fashioned, weak or dangerous products for the douche.

The ZONITE principle is truly a miracle! No other type liquid antiseptic-germicide for the douche of all those tested is SO POWERFUL yet absolutely non-poisonous, non-irritating, non-burning. ZONITE positively contains no bichloride of mercury, phenol or creosote. You can use ZONITE as directed as often as needed without risk of injury.

What Zonite Does —

ZONITE's powerful strength and safety to tissues make it of great worth for feminine hygiene. Ask your doctor.

ZONITE actually destroys and removes odor-causing waste substances. Helps guard against infection. It's so powerfully effective no germs of any kind tested have ever been found that it will not kill on contact. You know it's not always possible to contact all the germs in the tract. But YOU CAN BE SURE ZONITE kills every reachable germ and keeps them from multiplying.

Buy ZONITE today. Any drugstore.

Zonite
FOR NEWER feminine hygiene

FREE! NEW!

For amazing enlightening NEW Booklet containing frank discussion of intimate physical facts, recently published — mail this coupon to Zonite Products, Dept. MSC-27, 370 Lexington Ave., New York 17, N. Y.

Name_____

Address_____

City_____ State_____

AT LAST!

A HAND CREAM

THAT HELPS KEEP

HANDS SOFTER,

SMOOTHER . . . AND

IS NOT STICKY—

NOT GREASY!

Luxor
HAND CREAM

Luxor contains Carbamide, the ingredient long familiar to surgeons, which helps relieve the tiny cracks and scratches that make hands look red, feel rough!

LEG SUFFERERS

Why continue to suffer without attempting to do something? Write today for New Booklet—"THE LIEPE METHODS FOR HOME USE." It tells about Varicose Ulcers and Open Leg Sores. Liepe Methods used while you walk. More than 40 years of success. Praised and endorsed by multitudes.

FREE BOOKLET

LIEPE METHODS, 3284 N. Green Bay Ave., Dept. B-25, Milwaukee, Wisconsin

RACHEL
FREE FACE POWDER

Send today for free liberal supply of this high grade Face Powder & also our FREE BEAUTIFUL Cosmetic catalog in colors. Help bring out your loveliness by using our glamorous blend of Face Powder. Mention shade wanted—☐ light or ☐ dark. Be Lovely to Look At—Nice to Know. Don't wait. Send Now!

J. E. McBRADY & CO., (Est. 1894)
1041-49 W. Van Buren, Dept. 710, Chicago 7, Ill.

BEAUTEE
Make-Up Remover

Removes creams, soaps from face. Massages. Cleans pores as it works. No sharp edges. Can't scratch. Sent postpaid for only..... $1.00

MABEL ANN FRISZ
203 K STREET • SAN BERNARDINO • CALIF.

FREE!

36 page album with hundreds of miniature photos of Hollywood stars sent absolutely FREE with each order of . . .

MOVIE STARS' PHOTOS—12 for $1.00

Super hi-gloss photos of your favorite stars in latest poses.

ALPHA PHOTO SERVICE 1233 AVENUE OF THE AMERICAS DEPT. B-2 NEW YORK 19, N. Y.

sense, she knows the box-office value of her face and figure. But she also felt, reasonably enough, that an actress should be given a chance to act and began to despair of finding anyone to agree with her. So she slipped in and out of the tailormade roles, hoping that something better would come along but not quite sure what she could do about it. Till one day she looked the situation in the face, took it by the hand, led it to the front office and said:

tough gal turner . . .

"From now on I fight for parts. I've got a child and I want security for her. How long can you last in this business as a personality kid? I'm through being a clothes horse, I want to act. If I don't know enough about acting, teach me—"

At about the same time a producer named Carey Wilson was preparing a script called "The Postman Always Rings Twice," and trying to visualize the girl. She had to be physically exciting, but with force of character as well. Suddenly Lana popped into his mind. He'd given her her first part on the M-G-M lot—the redheaded girl who liked to kiss in "Love Finds Andy Hardy"—and he remembered now how she'd struck him then. No sweater girl, no rose geranium all dressed up—but a kid who was scared to death, yet in whose frightened eyes burned the will to succeed.

Through the years he'd lost touch with her. Now he looked her up on the set of "Weekend at the Waldorf," and told her his idea. If she went slightly crazy, you can't blame her, she'd waited so long! But what would the front office say?

The front office looked startled, then thoughtful, then told Wilson: "Maybe you're right—" The picture proved him right.

So next on his program came "Green Dolphin Street." Hepburn was considered a natural for the role of the bitter Marianne. But it turned out that Hepburn wouldn't be available for months, and the picture couldn't wait. Now who in his right mind would dream of Lana in a part originally meant for Katie Hepburn? Answer: Carey Wilson, who bethought himself of an old old rule that says when you cast an actress to type, you hurt your suspense—

Again he went to the front office. "Why not play this one on the opposite beat? Why not play it with Turner—?"

This time the pause was a little longer. They didn't, however, say "Wilson, you're nuts," as they might have done before "The Postman." They were open to persuasion. How did Wilson figure Lana, the alluring, the desirable, as the harsh and relentless Marianne? — Here's how. What Turner did best in "The Postman" were the scenes of temper and spirit and violence—the murder scene, for instance. She made you believe in her as a woman tigerish enough to go almost willingly to the chair herself, provided she could take the man along. As far back as "Andy Hardy," Wilson had felt the force in her composition. In "The Postman," everyone felt it. All right, here was another iron-willed woman. If Turner could give her the ruthless strength she needed, what law said she couldn't be attractive at the same time—?

So the front office said, "Go ahead. We'll tell her it's official—"

Next day Wilson phoned her. "Well, how do you feel about the part?"

"Oh Carey, you know I'd give my right arm to play it—"

"You're playing it, haven't they told you?"

Pause. "Say that again—"

"You're Marianne. It's official!"

Squeal, clatter of a dropping phone, three seconds of silence, then a small voice. "I heard you right, didn't I?"

"You heard me—"

"Then all I've got to say is this. I'll do anything, up to and including killing myself, to play it right—"

At the moment, her life is bounded by Cheryl and work. Yes, of course she goes out—not often, her shooting schedule's too tight—but she'll have dinner or go to a Saturday night party with Pete Lawford or Ty Power or Henry Willson, the young Selznick executive who was her first agent. But romance? No. So far as men are concerned, she's fancy-free and likes it. Please note we said at the moment. Anyone who makes predictions about Lana is crazy. Tomorrow's another day, and for youth and beauty like hers there are lots of tomorrows. We're talking about today. Today her career looks good, her daughter's healthy, she's got a nice house to live in and, after emotional turmoil, her heart's at peace. There isn't a thing about today that she'd change. . . .

In a small way, Cheryl's part of "Green Dolphin Street." She contributed the color of her hair. No one connected with the picture could see Marianne as a silver-blonde, which was fine with Lana. She'd been carrying that white mop around with her long enough. But they couldn't decide what color to change it to till one day they brought the baby in for pictures. The mass of Cheryl's hair is golden-brown, the ends much lighter. "Kind of a café-au-lait," said Lana, lifting a curl. "Let's cut off a bit and see how it photographs—"

It photographed beautifully, and Lana's hair is now café-au-lait. Incidentally, if you're one of the fans who's been worried about her hair, you can now relax. Letters have been pouring in—

"Oh Lana, they say you've ruined your hair with dye. We hope it's not true—"

It's not. Hedda Hopper will vouch for that one. She'd been told the same thing, and you all know Hedda—she uses the approach direct. "I hear your hair's coming out in bunches," says Hedda to Lana.

"Feel it," says Lana, equally simple and direct.

Hedda ran her fingers through it, shook it, tugged at it, then paraphrased Lincoln. "Tell me the name of your hair-dye," she said dryly, "and I'll use it myself."

To get back to Cheryl. She takes it for granted that her mother's a movie star,

I SAW IT HAPPEN

Although I am unable to get around, by myself, being a chair-bound arthritic, my friends wheeled me all the way to the big auditorium where Danny Kaye was appearing. I was ushered to the front row, center aisle. Just a few minutes after his show began, Danny turned to me and casually addressed his lines to me! To my surprise, I was on the beam, and responded to his quips. I received the thrill of my life when Danny stopped the show and leaped off the stage, came down to my chair and chatted with me. Cameras clicked, the crowd laughed and clapped, and I was in seventh heaven. To cap it all, my picture appeared in the paper next day, with Danny's arm around me! I felt like a queen for the day, and the memory of that evening will never be forgotten.

Georgia Hauke
Milwaukee, Wisconsin

Double Charm with the "TURNABOUT"
PHOTO FRAME

U. S. Pat. No. D140103
Other Pat. Pend.

Fits up to 5" x 7" photo 98c

The gleaming beauty of highly polished chrome plate and sparkling glass combined with ingenious design make this new, reversible, double-view frame one you will cherish. Swivel hinge acts as spring and is easily operated.

Fits up to 3" x 4" photo 69c

Send cash or money order. We pay postage.

TURNABOUT PRODUCTS CO. 75 Spring St. New York 12, N. Y.

DEVELOP NATURA
FIGURE LOVELINESS

Bust-Aid, a simple mechanical device, develops and firms your bust . . . naturally! No embarrassing pads or messy creams. Physician endorsed and recommended . . . Proven at New York's Charm Clinic. Bust-Aid Exerciser plus Chart plus Manual of Bust Care . . . all for only $5.95. Money Back Guarantee!

The CHARM CLINIC
210 Fifth Ave, New York, N. Y.

BRUSH AWAY
GRAY HAIR
AND LOOK 10 YEARS YOUNGER

● Now, at home, you can quickly tint telltale gray to natural-appearing shades—from lightest blonde to darkest black. Brownatone and a small brush does it—or your money back. Approved by thousands—Brownatone is guaranteed harmless when used as directed. No skin test needed. The principal coloring agent is a purely vegetable derivative with iron and copper salts added for fast action. Cannot affect waving of hair. Lasting—does not wash out. Just brush or comb it in. One application imparts desired color. Simply retouch, as new gray appears. Easy to prove on a test lock of your hair. 60c and $1.65 at druggists. Get BROWNATONE now, or

Send for FREE TEST BOTTLE

The Kenton Pharmacal Co.
292 Brownatone Bldg., Covington, Kentucky
Without obligation, please send me, free and postpaid, Test Bottle of BROWNATONE and interesting illustrated booklet. Check shade wanted:
☐ Blonde to Medium Brown ☐ Dark Brown to Black

Name_____
Address_____
City_____ State_____
Print Your Name and Address

just as your child takes it for granted that you're chief cook and bottlewasher, or a writer for MODERN SCREEN. She's interested without being impressed. Lately, she's taken to studying the fan magazines for pictures of her mother. On finding one, she says: "Why hello, Lana Turner, how are you—?"

One day she visited the set of "Green Dolphin Street"—an exquisite brown-eyed child in black velvet jumper and white organdy blouse, a black velvet band around her Alice-in-Wonderland hair.

"How do you like it here?" Frank Morgan asked her

"I'd like it better if you had a drugstore with ice cream cones."

live her own life . . .

Lana's never bothered to wonder whether some day the name Cheryl Crane would be up in lights. From the first, she's had definite ideas on what she could give her daughter that would be of value—the happiest childhood and the best education possible. After that, her life's her own. From the start, she was also determined not to have a spoiled child. Parents who over-indulge their children are really over-indulging themselves, thinks Lana. It's the kid who takes a beating later on.

Lana makes it a rule not to correct the baby in front of others. She takes her somewhere else, sits her down and says, "Let's talk this over—" Cheryl has a will of her own and can put up a good argument but, on the whole, she's willing to listen to reason. Like all children, however, she gets her sassy, crabby or rebellious spells and if Lana has to spank, she spanks. . . .

There's always a last warning. "I've told you and told you not to do that, baby. Don't do it again—"

By now baby's in a mood where she's got to do it again, if only to assert her individuality. With a sidelong glance at her mother, she does it again. "All right, young lady, now you get it—" We might add that she can take it. No tears. Her feelings are hurt and she's pretty quiet for a while, but then she's over it—tantrum and spanking both forgotten.

A few months ago they moved into a new house, just big enough for the two of them. Mrs. Turner, who'd been living with them, decided she'd like to do some traveling and then come back to an apartment of her own. The thought of running a household appalled Lana at first. "I don't even know how to plan a meal—"

"You'll learn," said her mother. "Remember how you learned to swim?"

She remembered all right. They'd tied a 12-foot rope round her waist and pushed her in. Scary but exhilarating. Any challenge stimulates Lana. Pushed into the stream of domestic responsibility, she floundered for a while, then began finding her way—

"How?" asked a skeptical pal.

"Well, first you get yourself an efficient couple—"

"That's what I thought—and turn it all over to them"—"

"Certainly not. You have to supervise—"

"For instance—?"

"For instance, you check the bills and they're too high, so you say fun's fun but don't let's overdo it, who says we've got to have pheasant every night—"

Being Lana, she kids it. Just the same, she's learned to swim and her house is run as she wants it run. And it's furnished to suit herself, not some decorator. With modern pieces against a background of color. Pale blue for the baby's room, white and yellow for her own. The walls of the living room painted the loveliest yellow, with chintz drapes hanging from under green cornices, two huge red chairs and a 10-foot couch the exact color of

INTIMATE FACTS
you should know about
THIS HIGHER TYPE
Intimate Feminine Hygiene
Easier—Daintier—More Convenient

Greaseless Suppository Gives
Continuous Medication For Hours.
Easy To Carry If Away From Home!

Too many wives still live in much ignorance about this higher type intimate feminine cleanliness. If only they'd learn about Zonitors—one of the most effective methods ever discovered and so widely used among highly intelligent and exacting women.

Zonitors are so much easier, daintier and more convenient—so POWERFUL yet ABSOLUTELY SAFE to delicate tissues.

Positively Non-Irritating; Non-Smarting

Zonitors are greaseless, stainless, snow-white vaginal suppositories. When inserted, they instantly begin to release their powerful germicidal properties and continue to do so for hours—assuring you hours of continuous medication. Yet they are SAFE to the most delicate tissues. Positively non-burning, non-irritating, non-poisonous.

Leave No Tell-Tale Odor

Zonitors actually destroy offending odor. Help guard against infection. They kill every germ they touch. You know it's not always possible to contact all the germs in the tract. BUT YOU CAN BE SURE Zonitors immediately kill every reachable germ and keep them from multiplying. Buy at any drugstore.

Zonitors

(Each sealed in separate glass vial)

FREE: Mail this coupon today for free booklet sent in plain wrapper. Reveals frank intimate facts. Zonitors, Dept. ZMSC-27, 370 Lexington Avenue, New York 17, N. Y.

Name_____
Address_____
City_____ State_____

Swimproof "Dark-Eyes"

EYELASH DARKENER

To keep lashes and brows bewitchingly dark and alluring . . . even after swimming, crying or perspiring, use "Dark-Eyes". This indelible darkener never runs, smarts or smudges. One application lasts 4 to 5 weeks . . . thus ending daily eye make-up bother. Caution: Use only as directed on the label. Try it! Get a package of "Dark-Eyes" today!

$1.00 (plus tax) at leading drug and department stores. If your favorite dealer does not yet carry "Dark-Eyes", mail coupon today!

"Dark-Eyes", Dept. GB-7
218 S. Wabash Ave., Chicago 4, Ill.
I enclose $1.20 (tax included) for regular size package of "Dark-Eyes", and directions.
Check shades: ☐ Black ☐ Brown
Name .....
Address .....
Town ..... State .....

ITCH
CHECKED IN A JIFFY

Sufferers from the torturing itch caused by eczema, pimples, scales, scabies, athlete's foot, "factory" itch, and other itch troubles are praising cooling, liquid D. D. D. Prescription. This time-proved medication—developed by Dr. D. D. Dennis—positively relieves that cruel, burning itch. Greaseless and stainless. Soothes and comforts even the most intense itching in a jiffy. A 35c trial bottle proves its merits or your money back. Ask your druggist today for D. D. D. Prescription.

DON'T DYE GRAY HAIR

until you try Mary T. Goldman's Gray Hair Coloring Preparation. This famous "Color Control" method gives hair the lovely, appealing color you desire, quickly —or so gradually even close friends won't guess your secret.

So simple! Safe! Sure! Comb this clear liquid through your gray, bleached or faded hair. Watch "Color Control" action give your hair the youthful-looking shade you want. Pronounced harmless by medical authorities (no skin test needed). Won't harm wave or hair texture. 50 year favorite of millions. Now help yourself to lustrous hair beauty easily—in the privacy of your home!

Buy a bottle today! Sold on money-back guarantee by drug and department stores. Or if you prefer, order direct from Mary T. Goldman Co., St. Paul 2, Minnesota. Send $1.92 (includes tax) for regular size, mailed postpaid in plain wrapper. State color desired: Black, Dark Brown, Medium Brown, Light Brown, Blonde, Auburn.

the walls. It's a living room to live in—not like the formal drawingroom of the big house she gave up because it was so big. Lana's not at home with formality. She likes her small dining room and the smaller kitchen. She's crazy about the den with its copper apron in front of the fireplace. The other house had elegance and wide-open spaces. This one has charm, and every corner spells home.

Lana's been on "Green Dolphin Street" since before they moved in, but she does get an occasional day off and there's always Sunday. Needless to say, these are Cheryl's red-letter days. Life begins when Mommy wakes up, which isn't too early. Time was when the baby'd watch her chance to slip away from Nana and bang at the door. Now she's reached an age of understanding. "Shh!" she warns her nurse as they tiptoe past. "This is Mommy's rest-day—" But the angelic effect is ruined five minutes later. "I think Mommy would like me to wake her up—" little beggar . . .

Then comes the eternal "Mommy, I want a pussy cat."

Lana's heart sinks. This comes up at least once a day. It's a painful subject because, for some unfathomable reason, cats terrify Lana. She's tried to sell her child dogs and rabbits, ducks and canary birds—

"No, I want a kittycat."

At this point she sees nothing left but to buy a spaniel, look her daughter in the eye and say firmly, "This is a kittycat."

After lunch Cheryl takes a nap, preparatory to the day's big event—a drive. They wind up at a drive-in for the treat of the week—what Cheryl calls "supper-out"—a hamburger, Susy Q. potatoes and a glass of milk.

But the best is yet to come. Cheryl loves seeing her mother dressed to go out. She'll go happily to bed so long as Lana promises to come in and kiss her goodnight when she's all dressed up. There's a game she plays—keeps her eyes tight shut till her mother comes in—

"Here I am, baby."

"What dress are you wearing, Mommy?"

"Look and see."

Slowly the eyes come open. It would suit Cheryl fine if Lana went out formal every night. Dark dresses are all right, but anything sparkly brings a long sigh of bliss up from the toes. "Oh Mommy, I love you so much I could eat you."

At the risk of bringing on the usual howls of derision, we're about to use the good-friends-though-divorced line. There's no denying the fact that Lana and Steve Crane are friends. For this they undoubtedly share the credit, and if we stress Lana's share, it's because we know her and don't know Steve. Whatever her shortcomings are, pettiness isn't among them. She doesn't bear grudges, and her sense of fair play is like a man's.

Seeing them together, you're conscious of no strain between them. The past is past. On her third birthday Cheryl had a lovely party—with a dog act to entertain her guests, with Raggedy Ann and Andy souvenirs, with a five o'clock supper of creamed chicken and milk, ice cream and birthday cake. One little girl hung shyly back from the group. Unprompted, Cheryl walked over, patted her cheek, took her by the hand and said, "Come on, let's play—" It was sweet and funny and touching, and you couldn't help noticing that Cheryl's parents instinctively sought each other's eyes to smile into.

As for Lana herself—the real, not the legendary Lana—there's not a thing about today that she'd change. Her career looks good, her baby's healthy, she's got a nice house to live in and her heart's at peace.

But with Lana you never can tell about tomorrow. That's what makes her Lana.

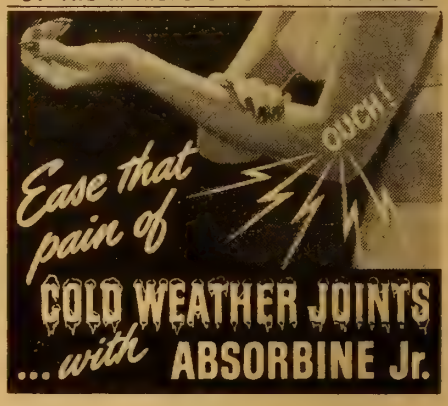
SILHOUETTE SMOOTH

SAY 'SIT-TRUE'

Fine mesh with elastic

SITROUX HAIR NETS

BY THE MAKERS OF SITROUX TISSUES



TRULY SENSATIONAL VALUES!
GENUINE DIAMONDS
14 KT. SOLID GOLD

NO PRICE INCREASE!

16 gen. diamond, 14 kt. Solid Gold wedding and engagement set, each with a guarantee bond, in a beautiful gift box! Pay postman price plus postage and Fed. tax.

FREE CATALOG OF GREAT RING VALUES!

Each ring $10.50
Both for only $18.00

L'AMOUR JEWELRY CO., INC.
DEPT. D2, 545 FIFTH AVENUE, NEW YORK 17

BE A NURSE STUDY AT HOME

HIGH SCHOOL NOT NECESSARY

Prepare for experience as a Trained Practical Nurse. Ages 18 to 55. Many earn while learning. Easy payment plan. Write for facts and fascinating free sample lesson pages.

WAYNE SCHOOL OF PRACTICAL NURSING, Inc.
2301 N. Wayne Ave., Dept. K-23, Chicago 14, Illinois

Movie Star PHOTOS

Genuine, Glamorous, 8"x10" Matte portraits of your favorite Stars. 1600 to select from. Please give 2nd choice.

Only 25¢ each

FREE: Gift coupon and list of 1600 stars with order.

Famous Players Studios
PORTRAIT DEPT. M
6055 Hollywood Blvd., Hollywood 28, California

"SURE I'LL TALK ABOUT GUY"

(Continued from page 55)

with the Indians. Well, Guy's been an archery fan for years, and the dream of his life was to own a bow made by Hill. One day he came to town on a Navy pass, got hold of Hill's phone number and called. What chance of buying a bamboo bow?

Not much, said Hill. He'd had six promised for a year and hadn't been able to get round to them. Besides, he was short of bamboo as well as time— Maybe Guy's disappointment registered on the wire. Anyway, Hill started asking questions—found that this kid was in the Navy, crazy about archery, stationed where there was a lot of hunting—

"Well, I tell you," he said, "I've got a bow here that I made for myself. Come on out and I'll talk to you—"

The upshot was that he sold Guy his own bow for half its value. And got something in return that you can't put a price on. Madison's reticent, but there's plenty of wallop packed in the little he does say. "Hill didn't know I had any connection with pictures. I used the name Mosely. There was nothing behind what he did but good feeling. Those are the kind of people you look for. That's the kind of guy I'd put myself out for—"

If I'm giving the impression that he high-hats any phase of his career, then I'm doing him wrong. Certain things seem to him kid stuff, that's all. But aloof he isn't. Someone was telling about Sinatra heckling a bunch of admirers—"Come on, kids, who's my biggest competition?"—and they yelled "Guy Madison!" He got a terrific boot out of that.

poor guy . . .

By the way, his slant on the young fans is pretty much the same as Frank's. "Just kids having fun in their sloppy sweaters and slacks. Let 'em have it. They've got time to grow up—"

Personally, I like the Seattle story. He and Bill Williams were there for the opening of "Till the End of Time," and the cops finally had to take over to prevent mayhem. One child lost her temper and told Madison off. How she figured it was his fault I don't know—she was probably tired. But her pal didn't like it. "Poor Guy," she said, smiling sympathetically. It gave him the same kind of lift as when Hill sold him the bow, and he said the same thing, only he said it straight to her. "That's the girl I've been looking for—"

The kid looked like stars were exploding in her eyes, Williams told me. "That's worth a million autographs," she said.

Another thing that happened on this northern tour. Rory Calhoun happened to be in San Francisco at the same time. Rory's under Selznick contract too and may be in Madison's next picture. So Guy kept trying to shove him into the limelight—

"Come on out on the stage and get into the act with me—"

"You're nuts. They wouldn't know me from Adam—"

"What's the difference? They didn't know me till yesterday, they'll know you tomorrow—"

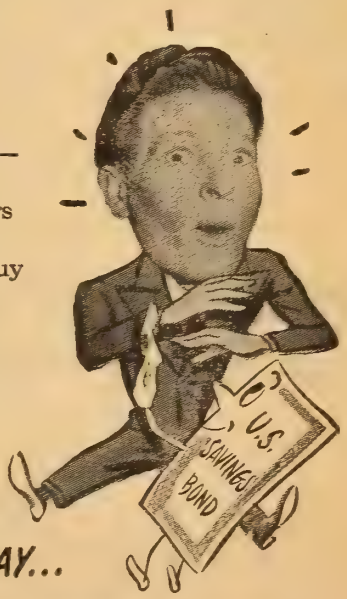
Rory's one of his few close pals. They double date—Guy with Gail Russell mostly, Rory with Natalie Thompson or Cathy Downs or Lana Turner.

Well, let's talk about Gail Russell—you've been champing at the bit ever since her name came up. There's not much I can tell you beyond what everyone knows. They're tremendously fond of one another and date frequently but I doubt that they

How to Avoid Saving Money

by DANNY KAYE

First, cut off all your pockets. By carrying your money you will—1. spend it, 2. lose it, 3. get it taken from you—quicker! Also avoid piggy banks and sugar bowls. The kiddies are victimized by such devices, often saving quite a bale of moolah. And shun budgets! It is best to draw your pay and walk down Main Street buying anything you don't particularly hate.



Above all, don't buy any U. S. Savings Bonds—or it's impossible not to save money! These gilt-edged documents pay fat interest—4 dollars for 3 after only 10 years! There is even an insidious Payroll Savings Plan by which you buy bonds automatically. Before you catch on, you have closets full of bonds. You may even find yourself embarrassed by a regular income! Get-gat-gittle!

Danny Kaye

SAVE THE EASY WAY...

BUY YOUR BONDS THROUGH PAYROLL SAVINGS

Contributed by this magazine in co-operation with the Magazine Publishers of America as a public service.

A PUBLIC SERVICE FEATURE — The Advertising Council

In 36 Minutes—wing your way to Romayne Cahoon, charming Pan American World Airways stewardess, uses Glover's 3-Way Medicinal Treatment for lovely highlights!

Yes, in 36 minutes your hair can look lovelier! Fresh lustre and radiance, natural color tone and glamour—these are yours with Glover's 3-Way Medicinal Treatment—quickly, in your own home! Ask for Glover's Mange Medicine, GLO-VER Beauty Shampoo, Glover's Hair Dress at your Drug Store —or mail Coupon today for samples.

Glover's
Medicinal Treatment

Glover's, Dept. 852
101 W. 31st St., New York 1, N. Y.

Send free Sampler Package in plain wrapper by return mail—Glover's Mange Medicine, GLO-VER Beauty Shampoo, Glover's Imperial Hair Dress in 3 hermetically-sealed bottles—with free booklet. I enclose 10¢ to cover cost of packaging and postage.

Name.....
(PLEASE PRINT PLAINLY)
Address.....
City.....Zone.....State.....

AT LAST! SOMETHING NEW and SENSATIONAL in EVERYDAY CARDS

Greetings

Gorgeous Satin and Velour Designs

SHOW friends rich new Satin and Velour Greeting Cards. Never before offered. Astounding value, 15 for $1. Get easy orders FAST! Pays up to 100% cash profit. 14 other money-making assortments retailing 60¢ to $1. No experience needed. Start now—earn all year 'round. Samples on approval. Write today.

Make Money Easily

PURO CO., 2801 Locust, Dept. 75-B, St. Louis 3, Mo.

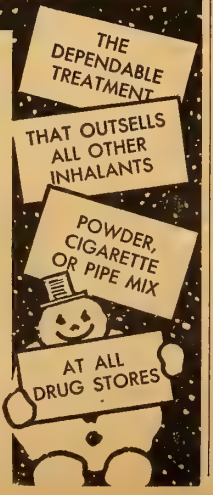
TO THOSE WHO WRITE

WORDS FOR SONGS, BUT CAN'T WRITE MUSIC: We may be able to help you. Our organization of trained composers and songwriters is at your service. Collaborate with professional songwriters; make the most of your song-writing ability. Send us your words for free examination and details.

FIVE STAR MUSIC MASTERS, 475 Beacon Bldg., Boston, Mass.

ASTHMADOR

Bitter winds... snow, slush... stuffy, overheated houses... no wonder winter usually spells a-g-o-n-y for the asthmatic who has not yet tried Dr. R. Schiffmann's ASTHMADOR! Take pity on the poor sufferer...tell him how ASTHMADOR'S rich, aromatic fumes cut right through congestion, let in life-giving air, help reduce the severity of the attack. Tell him to ignite ASTHMADOR powder when he's too stuffed up to sleep, or smoke an ASTHMADOR cigarette anytime, anywhere. No costly sprays to buy —nothing to take internally— just welcome relief the time-tested ASTHMADOR way. The leading inhalant—sold under a money-back guarantee.



contemplate a sudden marriage . . .

I've heard Guy on the subject of Hollywood marriages: "I can understand," he says, "why so many of them don't turn out—this is a pretty rough racket for marriage. Actors and actresses give so much to their work, there's not an awful lot left to give between husband and wife. Things happen to make you irritable, set you on edge—more than in most professions. If you have domestic troubles on top of career troubles, it's just about more than you can handle."

If I were pinned down, I'd say that he and Gail were enjoying today and letting tomorrow take care of itself. It's not all night life either, not by a long sight. They ride and hike together, and she's even gone fishing with him. Not hunting, no. Rory's his hunting companion—Rory or Howard Hill or his brother Wayne.

Wayne's 21, goes to L. A. City College on the GI Bill of Rights. Came down to register, planning to find a room. That's typical. The Mosely clan's close, but they're just as respectful of one another's rights as if they were strangers. Wayne would no more have moved in on Guy than he would on me. It was Guy who suggested it. "Be good for us both. You won't have to look for a room and I'll have company—"

"Well, if you think it'll work out—"

"It'll work out fine—"

That's all the talk there was. No production numbers. But they get along like a house afire. Or as Guy puts it: "I'm never in his way—I don't think—and for sure he's never in mine—" stokes up on steak . . .

It's a self-sustaining household. Guy cooks, Wayne does the dishes. They tried a maid for one day, but Guy couldn't stand it. Sit in the dining room and wait to be waited on!—that's punishment, he says. Besides, he doesn't like coming in and finding someone around, ruins his sense of privacy. As for eating out, he got tired of that long ago. "Time you get home, cleaned up and out again, they're standing in line twenty deep. People checking you over. 'What're you doing here alone?' That stuff gets old," says Guy.

Cooking? He picked it up the way so many men do. Outdoor men especially. When he worked as a lineman with the phone company, he'd get home late, bring along a couple of pounds of steak and fixings. Nothing fancy. No desserts even now. By dessert time he's too full of good solid food to be bothered.

He's always rushing to make the market before six. Don't ask me how he knows where the steak hangs, it's an instinct with him. If every market but Schmidt's ran out of steak and he'd never seen Schmidt's, he'd still head for it the way steel heads for a magnet. Of course if Schmidt's ran out too, he'd make do with liver or chops. But he'd just as soon not. Noon or night his favorite meal's steak, tomatoes and lettuce and a quart of milk. For breakfast he changes to orange juice, oatmeal, bacon, six eggs, toast stacked that high and a quart of milk.

Which reminds me of his favorite joke. We'd all stopped at a drive-in one night and I'd asked for a bacon and tomato sandwich, pronouncing it tomahto as I always do—

"Are you kidding?" said Rory. "It's tomayto—"

"In Pennsylvania," I explained patiently, "we say tomahto—"

"In hamburger joints," he informed me, "we say tomayto—"

Later my father, also from Pennsylvania, double-crossed me. He said tomayto. At table Guy never misses a chance to pass them. "Tomahtoes?" he'll ask me elegantly, then shove the plate toward Rory. "Have a tomayto, bud—"

Wayne takes over after dinner. Guy hates dishwashing. Wayne doesn't love it, but both believe in a fair division of labor. That's how the housework gets done too. Guy is convinced that women like to fuss. Proof: They fuss over housework, than which nothing is simpler. Try the Madison method. Relax. Just because your mother cleaned house every Thursday doesn't mean you'll be clapped in jail if you wait till Friday. Or even Monday. Guy waits till things get dirty, then they pitch in. Each boy takes a room. They hit the Venetian blinds first, and not with brushes. Brushes are easier, but damp cloths are better. The well-trained Mosely brothers use damp cloths. Then they dust, vac the rugs, run a wet mop around the outside and that's all there is to it. Wash up and eat an apple. Smell the lemon oil. Drape your legs over the side of a chair and feel virtuous. Think how proud your mother'd be. The way they tell it, you wonder what you've been missing all your life, not cleaning house.

All this is done to music. Only thing Guy bought when he moved in was a combination radio and record player. He's got to have music. Anything from symphony to swing. As long as it's got a beat, he'll listen. Turns on the car radio with the ignition. Now he's got a bedside model —from Mr. Selznick for Christmas—so he falls asleep with it on and wakes up with it on— No, I'm not kidding. Are you a music-lover? Well, stick around with Guy for a while and you won't be. He drives me nuts. It's got so I walk in, make blindly for the dial and turn it off. He gives me that lazy grin—"Why didn't you phone? I'd have turned it off myself—" But it's on again before I'm through the door. Which is fine, but try talking against it.

Since he finished "Honeymoon" with Shirley Temple, we've kept Madison pretty much on the go. Dramatic lessons, personal appearances—and you know he did "Dear Ruth" down in Laguna. That's when Selznick decided to test him for Laurie in "Little Women."

Guy didn't want to do the play—not at first, anyway—yet in the end it was his own decision. Right after "Honeymoon" he went in for a talk with Mr. Selznick—

MODERN SCREEN

"Let's talk shop."

WITH PURCHASE OF 4 POUNDS (Approx. 25 Yds.)

FREE BAGFUL BUTTONS 500 YDS. THREAD PATTERN BOOK

QUILT PIECES

EXTRA LARGE PIECES, ALL NEW REMNANTS CUT FROM COLORFUL BOLTS of EXPENSIVE DRESS GOODS $1.49

Furnished us by the largest and finest dress manufacturers. SATISFACTION GUARANTEED or we make full refund including postage. Send no money; pay only $1.49 plus C.O.D. fee upon delivery. Remember, FREE BUTTONS, FREE THREAD and FREE PATTERN BOOK.

THE QUILTING BEE DEPT. 114
P.O. DRAWER 449 ST. LOUIS 3, MO.

SEND NO MONEY • ORDER TODAY!

Get Well QUICKER
From Your Cough Due to a Cold

FOLEY'S Honey & Tar Cough Compound

Is yours an Allergic Skin?

In cosmetics, too, physicians know best. Ask your doctor about AR-EX Cosmetics. At leading drug stores. Write for FREE BOOKLET: "New Facts on Skin Care."

AR-EX Cosmetics
FOR SENSITIVE SKINS

AR-EX COSMETICS, INC., 1036-CM W. Van Buren St., Chicago 7, Ill

WE WILL PAY YOU $25
FOR SELLING 50—$1 ASSORTMENTS

Great Demand for our Birthday and All Occasion Cards. Sell for $1—your profit 50c. It costs nothing to try. Write for samples today.

MERIT CARD CO., Dept. K
70 William St., Newark 2, N. J.

LOVELIER LEGS

Let Phillips of Hollywood help you! Many cases of bowlegs and knock-knees may now be corrected. Large hips, heavy thighs, thick calves and ankles—streamlined! Ugly knees improved! Thin legs developed! Contours made sleek and lovely! Feet and arches strengthened! A most remarkable course! Send $1.00 TODAY for "Straight Legs" and "Beautifying the Legs"—or order C.O.D.!

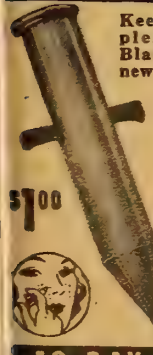
PHILLIPS, 418 W. 64th St., Dept. M-40, Los Angeles 3, Calif.

PINS 30¢ up RINGS $1.50 up

For your class or club. Over 300 designs. Finest quality. Write Dept. Z, Metal Arts Co. Rochester, N. Y.

FREE CATALOG

Ugly BLACKHEADS OUT IN SECONDS



Keep your complexion free of Blackheads this new way — look attractive instantly!

Try VACUTEX Blackhead-Remover

The amazingly effective Vacutex extracts Blackheads automatically — WITHOUT squeezing the skin or injuring tissues. Easy to use with three fingers. It reaches Blackheads anywhere. Try it 10 days and if not delighted, return VACUTEX and your money will be refunded.

$1.00

At Your Dealer or Use Coupon

10 DAY TRIAL COUPON

BALLCO PRODUCTS CO., Dept. 1902,
19 West 44th St., New York 18, N. Y.

☐ Enclosed find $1. Send postpaid.
☐ Send C.O.D. I will pay postman $1 plus postage; $1 refund if not delighted.

SORRY, NO C. O. D.'s OUTSIDE U. S. A.

What popped the idea into David's head I don't know, but when I came in he sprang it on me—

"What would you think of Guy's doing a stage play?"

I was about to say fine, but a quick look at our hero threw me into reverse. Selznick caught it too and grinned. "Why don't you talk it over with Henry, Guy?"

So we talked it over. What it amounted to was Guy thinking out loud. He laid out the arguments himself. Pro: This was a challenge, and a challenge should be picked up. Con: What he needed right now were encouraging words. Later, with more confidence, a panning wouldn't bother him. Now it would.

Next day he called Mr. Selznick: "I don't think the play would be such a good idea—"

"Okay, Guy, it's up to you—"

A few days later Mel Ferrer walked into my office. Said he wanted to put on "Dear Ruth" down at Laguna, with Natalie Thompson as the girl and Guy as the boy. We've got Ferrer signed to one of those acting-directing contracts, and he's tops in both departments. I could see how working with him would be great for Guy.

At noon I found Guy in the commissary. "When you were in New York, did you see a play called 'Dear Ruth?'"

Yes, he had.

"Think you could do the lieutenant?"

Pause to count ten. "Maybe—"

"With Mel Ferrer directing—"

You could see at least half the load slide off his back. "Sure, why not?"

Any way you figure, it wasn't an easy job. First appearance on a live stage. Four-and-a-half days to learn the part. An earlier date in San Francisco that couldn't be cancelled, so he had to hop up there, hop back at four in the morning and be down at Laguna by noon to resume rehearsals. He lost fourteen pounds, but after the first few minutes onstage, he relaxed. All of a sudden he was easy and assured.

"What happened?" I asked him later.

"Well, I just figured you can't do better than your best. You want them to like it but if they don't, the heck with it—"

They seemed to like it. The play did the biggest business of the season and the notices were excellent. On Sunday Mr. Selznick brought Jennifer Jones down. We went to supper after the show, and he kept looking from Jennifer to Guy. She's set to play Jo in "Little Women," you know. Finally he said: "You're not exactly the type, but—how'd you like to test for Laurie, Guy?"

Anyone else would have fallen flat on his face. I'm sure Guy did inwardly. But all he said was, "I'd like it fine, Mr. Selznick—"

One more story and I'm through.

If you're a friend of his, you'll soon notice that he's got what seems an uncanny knack for gifts. It's always something you want. Maybe you mentioned it idly six months ago, maybe you never mentioned it at all, maybe you didn't even know you wanted it. But he knew—

I asked him once how he knew—

"By keeping my ears open—dropping questions when nobody's looking. As a kid," he went on, "I'd get handkerchiefs for Christmas. You can't mistake a handkerchief box. I'll never forget that flat feeling when one of those flat boxes hove into sight, and I knew it was more handkerchiefs I had no use for. Promised myself then never to give people things they couldn't use—"

I like that story. It may sound slight, but dig underneath and you've got a kid's application of the golden rule—learning through his own disappointment not to disappoint others. I don't know a better way to use experience.

FAT IN SPOTS?

☐ THIGHS ☐ ABDOMEN
☐ HIPS ☐ WAIST
☐ CALVES ☐ BUTTOCKS

LOSE TO 15 POUNDS

IN LESS THAN 30 DAYS

(Many report even greater success)

LOSE POUNDS — INCHES where they show most and in such a short time. Stimulate Active-Revitalizing Blood Circulation in Fatty Tissues . . . help Tone Sagging Muscles and Flabby Flesh to Normal, Desirable Firmness. Use a method proven in World Famous Reducing Salons, the HOLLYWOOD TWO-WAY PLAN. Sensible, Harmless, Effective, External. Designed by Hollywood Figure Experts for Movie Personalities. Now made available to YOU.

$2.25

REDUCE

Fatty "Spots" without Drugs Laxatives

Here is a "PLAN" that is designed for YOU, the normal healthy, Busy Woman who has no time for Strenuous Exercise . . . Severe Diets, YET . . . Rolls and Bulges mar Beauty and Happiness. Slender Loveliness may be Yours again if you use the HOLLYWOOD TWO-WAY PLAN, an External, Scientifically proven method that includes Internal-External Correction, Caloric Guidance, and the Hollywood Body Toner for effective Self-Massage and "SPOT" TONING.

"SPOT" TONE

ANY PART OF THE BODY

Self-Massage and "SPOT" TONE Any Part of the Body with the Hollywood Body Toner. This external applicator works like a Good Firm Hand Massage. Passive and Soothing, its action Stimulates Active Blood Circulation in Fatty Tissues. It takes a few minutes a day to Tone and Tighten Flabby Flesh and Sagging Muscles to Normal, Desirable Firmness. FEEL YOUR BODY GLOW FROM "TOP TO TOE."

REDUCE or MONEY REFUNDED

ORDER TODAY . . . At No Risk To You . . . Either REDUCE NOTICEABLY within 10 days or your money will be refunded immediately. You are "Sole Judge." Just mail Coupon TODAY . . . NOW . . . for the "HOLLYWOOD TWO-WAY PLAN" including the self-massage "Hollywood Body Toner" and a liberal supply of Body Cream. Not a monthly purchase but complete at $2.25. SEND NO MONEY.

Hollywood Beauty Consultants
6808 Sunset Blvd. Dept. 2-DM
Hollywood 28, California

Send me in plain package the "HOLLYWOOD TWO-WAY PLAN," including the "Hollywood Body Toner" for "Spot" Toning, and a liberal supply of Hollywood Body Cream. I'll pay Postman $2.25 plus postage. This money will be refunded immediately if I'm not satisfied within Ten Days.

NAME_____
(Print Plainly)

ADDRESS_____

CITY_____ ZONE____ STATE_____

(Canada and Foreign, $2.60 in advance)

We Pay Postage if Check or Money Order Enclosed

Accentuate the beauty of your eyes, invite flattering compliments. The use of KURLASH makes the eyelashes look longer and the eyes look larger. Because of the protective cushion KURLASH will not cut lashes. Now at drug and department stores all over the country.....KURLASH $1.00

KURLENE—a pomade to add sparkle and enhance the appearance of your eyelashes, lids and brows..... 50¢—$1.00*

TWISSORS—sure grip—scissor handle tweezers, a beauty care necessity.....50¢

*PLUS TAX

Kurlash

THE KURLASH COMPANY, INC.

Rochester 4, N. Y. ● NewYork 17, N. Y.

Extra Money Every Day

SELL EVERYDAY CARDS

Easy to sell stunning folders for Birthdays, Anniversaries, etc. 15-card Assortment sells $1. You make good profit. Also sell other Everyday card assortments, engraved Stationery $1 a box. Samples on approval.
PROCESS CORPORATION, Dept. G-8
Troy at 21st Street, CHICAGO 23, ILL.

Blonde Mothers and Children

Shampoo Hair Shades Lighter!

When They Use This New SAFE 11-Minute Home Shampoo

Made specially for blondes, this new shampoo helps keep light hair from darkening—brightens faded hair. Called Blondex, its rich cleansing lather instantly removes the dingy film that makes hair dark, old-looking. Takes only 11 minutes at home. Gives hair lustrous highlights. Safe for children. Get Blondex at 10c, drug and department stores.

WANTED: ONE GUARDIAN ANGEL!

(Continued from page 53)

"I say a little prayer before hitting the hay, 'Dear Lord—thanks for making me a movie actor!' "

When Glenn brings home a script from Columbia, Ellie grabs it right off and riffles through anxiously. "Just to see," she explains, "what kind of a character I've got to live with the next few months!" She's not kidding.

beat-up romeo . . .

Glenn wore a sailor suit around the house all the time he made "Destroyer" and had the joint jumping with gobs on leave. He brought two professional dice dealers down from the Las Vegas gambling clubs to sop up gamboleering color and jargon when he did "Gilda" and "Framed." Playing a lighthouse keeper with Bette Davis in "A Stolen Life," Glenn hauled home all his salty Santa Monica fishing boat pals. He cluttered up the carpets in every room with model planes and motor parts when he made "Gallant Journey."

"For Heaven's sake," Ellie protested. "Don't sign up for any jungle pictures. You'll be bringing home lions and tigers!"

Glenn had one of the best times of his life when he made "Texas." He's horse happy anyway and that picture was a wild and wooly Western. Glenn rode his black horse, Count, all through it, scorned a "double" and risked his neck, not only for camera shots but for the fun of it.

Glenn even gets a kick out of the lady killing, caveman parts they've been handing him lately. He'd out-Bogey Bogart if they let him because he's crazy about anything that lets him romp around with a character. The major fear in Ford's life is that someday he might have to play wishy-washy, stuffed-shirt parts.

Glenn had to rough up his leading lady, Janice Carter, pretty brutally when he made "Framed." He tossed her around like a basketball in some scenes and she limped home one night aching like a tooth. Next day Glenn got a wire from Janice's husband, "Stop playing so rough—my wife's black and blue."

Glenn sent one back, "Sorry about the color scheme. We're mixing up some new ones today." They had another slam bang scene and Janice went home to her hubby with new and attractive rainbow shades in her bruises. When he had to wipe up the floor with Rita Hayworth in "Gilda," Glenn paved the way for the dirty work. The morning Rita showed up on the set for her workout she found four dozen American Beauty roses from Glenn and a card, "Honey, I hate to do this—but you know how it is in the movies." If Rita didn't, she found out. When Glenn got through, she needed the roses.

Another thing about Glenn, he can do the most unpredictable things in the most unpredictable way sometimes. Even his wife, Ellie, knows that only too well.

When war broke out, Glenn didn't say much to anyone about his plans to serve.

Glenn's one ex-GI, incidentally, who hasn't a gripe in the world about the days he spent in uniform. He got a huge kick out of the service. He was especially glad he enlisted and stayed an enlisted man, rising to a sergeant's chevrons. "You learn a lot being an enlisted man," Glenn explains, "and you have twice the fun."

But when he enlisted, no one except Glenn Ford knew what he was thinking, not even his best girl, Eleanor Powell. They weren't married then. One day Glenn and Ellie drove downtown to Los Angeles. Glenn had some business at the City Hall. "I'll just wait in the car," said Eleanor. "Okay," breezed Glenn, "I'll be right back."

He was gone two hours. When he returned, Ellie couldn't help remarking, "You were gone a long time, honey."

"Yeah," said Glenn. He climbed in and started back to Beverly Hills. Driving along Wilshire Boulevard, Glenn suddenly remarked, "Oh, by the way—I just enlisted in the Marine Corps."

"You what?"

"Yep," grinned Glenn. "I leave for boot camp in a week."

Ellie didn't say anything the rest of the way to Beverly Hills. But when Glenn let her out at her house and kissed her goodbye, she sighed and smiled, "Well—that's my Glenn!" And it is—it certainly is.

Ellie found out about their new house recently in the same startling way. They've been looking for a bigger, better place to live for eight long months with no luck at all in the housing panic. One day Glenn came home from work and Ellie asked him the usual question, "Anything happen today?" and got the usual "Nope." Then,

"Oh, by the way—I bought Max Steiner's house today."

"You what!"

"Yep," nodded Glenn breezily. "Like to run by and take a look at it?"

Ellie was speechless. If she'd had a rolling pin or something handy she very probably would have heaved it at her mate in sheer exasperation.

music mad . . .

But Ellie calmed down the minute she saw the beautiful place Glenn had acquired with a quick look and a quicker check. It's a handsome French chateau style, white brick mansion sitting snugly on three acres in the rolling hills below Pickfair with the lavish estates of wealthy Hollywoodites like David Selznick, Charlie Chaplin and Fred Astaire surrounding it on all sides. The neighborhood glamor wasn't what made Glenn Ford whip out his checkbook, though. The land space, the six bedrooms, the fireplaces in every room, the cozy bar-den and the music room were what he was looking at.

All the walls are sound proofed so Glenn can play his most crashing Wagnerian symphonies at four o'clock in the morning and nobody can hear a peep, even in the next room. There's an automatic record player next to the bed in his room so he can lull himself to sleep with Beethoven, Bach or Brahms. It shuts off automatically, then starts up again in the morning. That might seem like a silly gadget to anyone who didn't know how absolutely record happy both Glenn and Ellie Ford are.

Glenn's a natural born collector and a walking hobby horse. He's got volumes and volumes of stamp albums he's saved since boyhood; he owns a stack of old theatrical playbills he started hoarding in his stage-manager days. He's got pipes stashed in every nook and cranny of his house. One pipe rack stretches halfway across the wall of his room. He collects biographies with emphasis on Abraham Lincoln's life. His particular treasure is a signed portrait of the late President Roosevelt. Glenn bagged that in typical direct Ford fashion.

He was back in Washington for the President's Birthday Ball one year. Like all visiting stars he was warned by the presidential secretary, Stephen Early, not to ask for autographed pictures.

But when Glenn came up before FDR the president recognized him because Ellie for Nervous

HEADACHE

I HAD A NERVOUS HEADACHE IT ALMOST DROVE ME MAD

BUT NOW I TAKE MY MILES NERVINE BEFORE THEY GET SO BAD

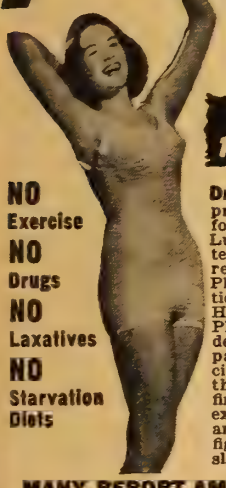
. . . Miles Nervine is wonderful! Try it when you feel a nervous headache coming on. It may save you hours of needless distress. Try it also when you are cranky, restless and can't sleep. It helps relieve nervous tension, helps you calm down—permits refreshing sleep. CAUTION—Take only as directed. Miles Nervine Liquid 25c and $1.00; Effervescent tablets 35c and 75c at any drug store. Miles Laboratories, Inc., Elkhart, Indiana.

MILES NERVINE

REDUCE

UP TO 8 lbs. IN 10 DAYS

OR . . . PAY NOTHING



NO Exercise
NO Drugs
NO Laxatives
NO Starvation Diets

Dr. George E. Hayunga, prominent physician, founder of New York's LutheranHospital, tried, tested and proved this remarkable Reducing Plan in his private practice for over forty years. His 10-Day Reducing Plan has worked wonders for so many of his patients that he decided to release it to the public. You will find it easy to lose those extra pounds and inches and get the attractive figure you long for—slim, glamorous, lovely.

MANY REPORT AMAZING RESULTS

Thanks to Dr. Hayunga's Reducing Plan, I lost 21 pounds in 4 weeks. — Miss G. M., Brooklyn.

I lost 11 pounds in two weeks. Dr. Hayunga's Reducing Plan is marrelous. —Miss J. F., Fla.

I lost 19 pounds with Dr. Hayunga's Reducing Plan. Now I wear size 12. — Mrs. C. B., L. I.

All you do is follow the simple directions of the famous Dr. Hayunga 10-Day Reducing Plan, while enjoying three satisfying meals daily, and watch your inches and pounds of ugly fat disappear as if by magic.

10-DAY FREE TRIAL

If you do not lose at least 8 pounds in the first ten days after you faithfully follow Dr. Hayunga's safe, easy plan, we will promptly refund your money. Take advantage of this sensational money-back offer NOW. You Have Nothing to Lose Except Your Weight.

WAY-LESS CO., Dept. D-12
275 Seventh Ave., N. Y. C. I, N. Y.

I enclose $2.00. Please send in plain wrapper Dr. Hayunga's complete 10-day Reducing Plan on a money-back guarantee. If I am not completely satisfied, I can return everything within 10 days for full refund.

Name.....

Address.....

City.....State.....

Canadian orders — $2.50 in advance.

Powell was always a Roosevelt family favorite.

"Hello," beamed FDR. "Well, how are things going, Mister Ford? Having a good time in Washington? Anything I can do for you?"

Glenn hasn't any inhibitions. He said what was on his mind. "Yes, Mr. President, there is. I'd like an autographed picture." He caught a severe frown from Steve Early on that. But the president smiled. "Fine—I'll take care of it." When Glenn got home, the handsome picture was there, "To Glenn Ford" and then the famous signature. He keeps it right over his bed.

Glenn caught the horse bug 'way back in the days when he was a groom at the Riviera Country Club Stables. His big ambition is still to play polo, but when that comes up Ellie just says, "Be sensible!" It's a millionaire's game, Glenn knows, but he can dream, can't he?

The closest he's got to that dream are his two horses, Count and Pancho, who graze on the Columbia Ranch and get a workout under Glenn or Ellie or even two-year-old Pete now and then. He's done a little better on his motor dream, though.

Glenn was purring along the highway a few months ago when a kid in a hopped up "hot rod" teased him into a race. The minute Glenn stepped on the accelerator of his blue Lincoln convertible the "hot rod" gave him bronx cheers from its cut-out exhaust and walked right away from him. "I'll fix you," Glenn muttered. No kid could make him eat dust—not after he'd worked in a garage—as he did once.

Glenn overhauled his motor, rebuilt the carburetor, redistributed the body weight, did all the things the hot rod experts do to his big Lincoln. He took it out on the road again just laying for a hot rod. The minute one came along Glenn stepped on the gas and—Zowie—he ripped away.

young abe lincoln . . .

Definitely the outdoor boy, Glenn can not be lured out of the house for anything resembling nightlife except a good French or Italian restaurant. He and Eleanor have been to Mocambo and Ciro's exactly once apiece since they were married. Both times were on business. "What fun is there paying fifty bucks for a sandwich?" snorts Glenn. When Glenn was married, Ellie talked him into having a suit of dress "tails" made. He hasn't worn it yet.

Ellie and Glenn stepped out and circulated most when he was in the Marines. With a scrubby haircut and an o.d. uniform, Glenn was practically disguised and Eleanor Powell had been off the screen long enough to escape notice, too. With that wartime incognito, they roamed the jitterbug haunts.

But now that he's a red hot rave, Glenn Ford can't have much fun stepping out. He gets a complex when he dances with Ellie anyway, if he knows anyone's watching. She's a dream dancer, naturally, and Glenn gets a weird idea in his bean that everyone's expecting a ballroom exhibition, like Veloz and Yolanda or something. So he tightens up. "I look like young Abe Lincoln when I get out on the floor," he sighs.

Glenn's definitely no clothes horse, but he's tidy about himself—a two or three a day shower man if he's active. He sticks to one stimulating masculine scent, but appreciates good perfume on women and can spot it every time Ellie changes from the brand she wore when he met her. Glenn shaves twice a day to be presentable; he and Ty Power have the heaviest beards in Hollywood. He sports no jewelry doo-dads whatever besides the plain gold wedding band he acquired when he married Ellie. It's got a simple senti-

Too Strong!

Forcing a child to take a harsh, bad-tasting laxative is such needless, old-fashioned punishment! A medicine that's too strong can leave a youngster feeling worse than before!

Too Mild!

A laxative that's too mild to give proper relief may be worse than none at all. A good laxative should work thoroughly, yet be kind and gentle!

The Happy Medium!

Ex-Lax is thorough in its action. But Ex-Lax is gentle, too. It works easily and effectively at the same time. And Ex-Lax tastes good—just like fine chocolate. It's America's most widely used laxative, as good for grown-ups as it is for children.

As a precaution use only as directed

IF YOU NEED A LAXATIVE WHEN YOU HAVE A COLD—

Don't dose yourself with harsh, upsetting purgatives. Take Ex-Lax—the chocolated laxative! It's thoroughly effective, but kind and gentle.

EX-LAX

THE "HAPPY MEDIUM" LAXATIVE

10c and 25c at all drug stores

FOOT RELIEF

Soothing, Instant-Acting Foot Plaster

To quickly relieve corns, sore toes, callouses, bunions, tender spots, instep ridges, chafed heels—use Dr. Scholl's Kurotex—a superior type flesh color moleskin. Very effective. Economical. At Drug, Shoe, Dept. and 10¢ Stores. Try it.

Dr Scholl's KUROTEX

Oh, how I need you now

You've gotta help me, folks. I'm feeling worn out as yesterday's bone, and it's because worms are dragging me down, sapping my resistance.

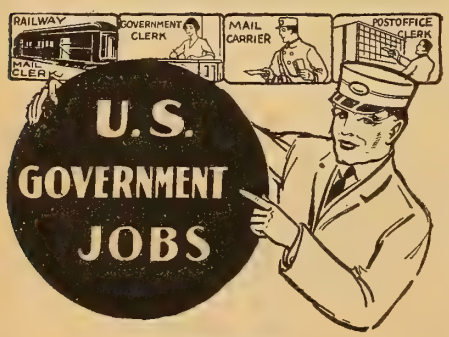
Like most puppies over a month old, I need Sergeant's Puppy Capsules. They're safe for me and fatal to worms. Later on, when I weigh 10 pounds, you can keep me worm-free with Sergeant's SURE SHOT Capsules.

Don't wait, folks, get these reliable Sergeant's products for me today—at your favorite drug or pet store.

• The new Sergeant's Dog Book is full of good and dependable advice on dog care. Ask for your FREE copy at any drug or pet store. Or write Sergeant's, Richmond 20, Va.

Sergeant's

DOG CARE PRODUCTS



START $1756 to $3021 YEAR

Many 1947 Examinations Expected. Prepare NOW! Veterans Get Special Preference! 32 Page Civil Service Book—FREE Mail Coupon Today—SURE

Franklin Institute
Dept. D-108
Rochester 4, N. Y.

COUPON

Gentlemen: Rush to me, FREE of charge, list of U. S. government big pay jobs. Send FREE 32-page book describing salaries, vacations, hours work, etc. Tell me how to prepare for one of these jobs.

Name.....

Address..... Vet?.....

ment engraved inside—"Glenn—Love, Ellie" and then, "Mizpah"—which represents an old Scottish sentiment, "The Lord watch between thee and me."

Most of the time, since they've been married, though, it's not only the Lord but Ellie too, who watches over Glenn. He's the kind of big comfortable male who takes to domesticity like a kitten to cream. Between Agnes (the Scotch cook Eleanor's had for eight years) and Ellie, Glenn wonders how he ever got by before he was married. Ellie even takes all his gear—his pipes, tobacco, money, even aspirins, in her bag when they go out anywhere. He's practically helpless without her—but both of them like it that way.

"Since I married you and left the screen," Ellie tells him, "my job is you." She adds, "It's nice work," and Glenn purrs like a cat. But he doesn't let his head get oversized. When he gets to reading his own publicity or fan mail and feels any such symptoms coming on, all he has to do is pick up a scrap book of Ellie's and look through it—particularly to the page which shows her "Broadway Melody of '36" on one side of Broadway and on the other side of the street, the marquee of her stage hit, "At Home Abroad."

Then he asks himself, "Wait a minute, brother—just who are you and what have you done? You'll never be the star Eleanor Powell has already been."

Ellie Powell can be a star again, tomorrow if she wants to—but she's not sure she wants to. Recently, she thought she'd like to keep her tapping toes in practice and signed for floor show star appearances at the Copacabana and the Chez Paree, back East. The minute the news got out, Hollywood producers started chasing her with picture offers.

But Ellie isn't so sure she wants to say "Yes." The career of being Mrs. Glenn Ford is lots of fun and she's pretty thoroughly domesticated by now.

Glenn Ford has nothing whatever to worry him. Right now he's happy about the whole thing, in every department—as he has been practically all of his life—being Glenn Ford. The only possible cloud on his private horizon popped up the other day.

His boy Pete, aged two, toddled into the room, spied his dad and chirped, "Hi, Glenn!"

That made Old Man Ford sit up and rub his whiskers. Well, now! For a sprout of two to call his popper "Glenn" could hardly be proper. Yet, darn it, Glenn didn't want to get "Daddy," either. That would make him feel definitely older generation. Glenn was wrestling with the Right Steps To Take and was up a tree on that one the last time I saw him. I imagine he'll find the answer though. He always has to everything else—and had tons of fun doing it.

THE FLYING FILTHY FIVE

(Continued from page 35)

learned.

This was the first of many amusing and heart-warming adventures on a trip that came about quite casually one noon, when Ty walked into the studio commissary. I was sitting alone at a table, so he joined me. He scanned the menu, but obviously there was something on his mind.

"What are you doing the next few months?"

"Nothing that will make history!" At that time I wasn't even sure I'd be with Ty in "Captain From Castile."

"How about taking a trip? I'd like to fly my plane and John Jeffries said he'd like to go along as co-pilot. We might ask a couple of other guys and have some fun."

"Count me in, brother!" Ty's casual attitude suddenly became contagious.

"Don't you even want to know where we're going?" He roared with laughter.

Several weeks before our departure we picked up Ty's Beechcraft Twin Engine plane in Wichita. As we said goodbye to Mrs. Beech, the charming wife of the plane manufacturer, she presented us with individual leather cases, inscribed with our names and good wishes. Little did we realize that fate had reserved a moment for us to be especially grateful for this gesture. Inside the cases were the lucky silver dollars we always carried with us.

At 7 a.m. on August the 19th, we took off from the Lockheed Air Terminal in Burbank. The fog was thick. Except for the roar of our engines, the outside world through our windows looked unusually peaceful and still. With complete confidence in Ty's flying ability, we still felt a bit funny inside. Instinctively each man asked himself—will I get back in one piece? We said nothing. I looked around at the others and it seemed as if we were actually seeing each other for the first time. Then suddenly, as if released by some silent signal, we all began to grin.

Ty and Jeff deserve all the credit we can give them. In ten weeks we were in the air 120 hours, we covered 23,500 miles and visited 25 countries. Like the excellent flyers they were during the war, they never jeopardized our lives or took chances. Ty held the stick most of the time, Jeff did most of the navigating. We hit every designated stop on the nose and with weather conditions permitting, the trip was always smooth, the plane expertly under control.

No sooner had we registered at the El Mirador Hotel in Acapulco, than Ty unpacked his sneakers, dungarees and an old sweat shirt.

"You've never seen a sailfish as big as the one I'm going to catch," he announced.

The sun was just coming up over the water as we started out the following morning. Even at that early hour the day promised to be a scorcher. At the end of two days I caught the first sailfish, Jim caught the second, followed by Jeff. Ty just looked grim while we winked at each other when he wasn't looking.

"What's the matter Ty, forget to bait your hook?"

"Maybe the sailfish saw his last picture!"

Our last night in Acapulco, it was so hot sleep was next to impossible. So we decided to go walking. From a tiny, primitive house clinging to the side of a hill came the sound of music. Thinking we were unobserved, we stopped to listen to the laughing, singing and shouting—obviously some special celebration.

"Senor Romero, won't you all join us? It is a birthday party my friend is giving for his sister. They would be honored to have you."

It was a man I had last seen at Saipan when we both landed in the same outfit. These people were poor but their hearts were rich with the joy of living. Playing outside on the porch, a ten piece orchestra had somehow been engaged for the star occasion. Inside, the hot, stuffy little house was choked with people.

We danced with the guest of honor, who was genuinely thrilled at our presence

They showered us with attentions and shared their humble refreshments. Hot, tired, with aching feet and our clothes soaking, we said goodbye and started back up the hill to our hotel again. Slowly, we walked along in silence.

"Wonder if they had as much fun back at Ciro's tonight?" Ty looked straight ahead as he said it. No one ventured an answer.

From that moment on, things happened so fast—sometimes so furiously—our adventures became a series of impressions. Guatemala City! Meeting our first president. The lottery salesman bent on beating up a waiter, who tried to keep him away from us. Everyone's surprise when we allowed the salesman to join us. San Salvador! Our corner hotel suite overlooking the plaza, jam-packed with seething, hysterical students.

terpsichorean turn-about . . .

Signs, songs, banners, fireworks, wild, confused dancing in serpentine fashion. The threat of revolution! Those bullet holes in the cement casement, where Ty and I looked out the window. Our sudden discovery by the crowds, "Viva Power," "Viva Romero." Thousands of hoarse voices, then back to their demonstration again. Us waving our acknowledgement—and ducking! Later that day, sneaking out the back way for a scenic trip to the top of a volcano. How quiet! How peaceful!

Managua, the capital of Nicaragua! Cathedral bells heralding our arrival. Those crowds pouring in at dawn, on mules, on horseback, afoot. The police at the airport so excited, joining forces with the mob and charging our plane. Pressure too great to open the door. Whirling propellers narrowly missing their heads.

The great ball honoring us that night. Buttons ripped, handkerchiefs stolen, complete confusion, trying to brave the mobs outside the hotel. Crashing plate glass windows at the club, policemen and soldiers crushed in the path of autograph seekers. That look of pride on the Club official's face. The Club official's voice:

"Señors, there haven't been this many people here since our last revolution!"

The music no longer playing as the dance floor clears. The señorita inviting Ty to be her partner in a gay exhibition dance. My pal Mr. Power, so charming, so smooth! That ingratiating smile:

"I only wish I was a good dancer. I do apologize. But my good friend Mr. Romero, who is also an expert fisherman, he loves to dance!"

San Jose, in Costa Rica! My cousin, Douglas De Fort and some beauty contest winners meeting us at the airport. Those cozy group pictures for the morning papers. Douglas' party at the Union club (there's always a Union Club in every Central American city). One of the girls called to the phone by an irate father, who saw her published picture. My beautiful cousin, Flor del Carmen, finally explaining we were merely visitors, not "romantic strangers."

presidential bounty . . .

The original Club El Sesto, not the movie version where Celeste Holm and I danced a few months previous in "Carnival in Costa Rica." Dawn breaking, badly needed sleep before our luncheon date with the President and his family. Late breakfast, one hour later seated at the great table with the President, his wife and daughter. Soup, aspic, fish. Vegetable patties, croquettes. Mental Academy Awards for the best performance of "looking hungry." Steaks, sizzling hot, three inch steaks! Ty not daring to look at me. I daring not to look at him. Dessert. Coffee. Imaginary headlines: "Hollywood movie stars pop open at President's lunch table!"

Knowledge is cancer's greatest enemy

Even on the basis of our present knowledge, one in three may be saved through early diagnosis and prompt, effective treatment. Learn cancer's "danger signals". Be on the alert for them in yourself and your loved ones. Remember, knowledge is cancer's greatest enemy.

American Cancer Society

47 Beaver Street, New York 4, N. Y.

MOVIE STAR PHOTOS IN FULL COLORS

Van Johnson M-G-M Star

CORNEL WILDE—RITA HAYWORTH—ROBERT MITCHUM—TYRONE POWER —ESTHER WILLIAMS—PETER LAWFORD—TOM DRAKE—JANE RUSSELL—GREGORY PECK—JUDY GARLAND—ROBERT WALKER—PERRY COMO—JEANNE CRAIN — DICK HAYMES — HELMUT DANTINE — DANA ANDREWS —INGRID BERGMAN—JOHN HODIAK—GENE TIERNEY—FRANK SINATRA —VAN JOHNSON—JUNE ALLYSON—ALAN LADD—LANA TURNER—ROY ROGERS—BETTY GRABLE—ALICE FAYE—SONJA HENIE—GENE AUTRY—DANE CLARK—GLORIA DeHAVEN—GUY MADISON—SHIRLEY TEMPLE—WILLIAM EYTHE — BOB HUTTON — LON McCALLISTER — BING CROSBY —CLARK GABLE—BETTY HUTTON—LAUREN BACALL—GREER GARSON—MARGARET O'BRIEN.

These gorgeous photos are printed on heavy coated paper, size 8 x 10, in FULL LIFELIKE COLORS. Your choice of any 8 listed above for 50c—16 for $1.00—34 for $2.00—entire set of 42 only $2.50. DON'T WAIT. Mail your order NOW.

IRVING KLAW : 212 EAST 14 ST.

Dept. G-18 New York City 3, N. Y.

HERE IS THRILLING NEW HOPE FOR MILLIONS

Do You Want LONGER HAIR?

Just try this SYSTEM 7 DAYS and see if you are really enjoying the pleasure of LONGER HAIR beauty that so often captures Love and Romance for you.

HAIR may get LONGER!

when Scalp and Hair conditions are normal and dry, brittle, breaking off hair can be retarded, it has a chance to get longer and much more beautiful. Just try JUELENE System 7 Days and let your mirror prove results. Send $1. (If C.O.D. pstge extra). Fully Guaranteed! Money back if not satisfied.

MAIL COUPON NOW!

JUEL COMPANY, Dept. A-603,
4727 N. Damen, Chicago 25, Ill.

I will try the JUELENE SYSTEM 7 days. If my mirror does not show satisfactory results, I will ask for my money back.

☐ I ENCLOSE CASH
☐ I WILL PAY POSTMAN

NAME_____

ADDRESS_____

CITY_____ STATE_____

OUR REGULAR CUSTOMERS PARTICIPATE IN GIFTS!

REDUCE UP TO 7 lbs. A WEEK

DOUBLE MONEY BACK

EAT WHAT YOU WANT

Thousands have used amazing MYLO method to banish ugly fat, and gain gloriously beautiful figure. Easy! Safe! No Starving. You get all daily required vitamins and minerals—delicious concentrated food energy to keep up pep. Just eat sensibly and take healthful, wonderful MYLO as directed—and it is possible for you to lose up to 7 lbs. in a week.

NO STARVING
NO DRUGS
NO MASSAGE
NO LAXATIVES
NO EXERCISE

MYLO 7-DAY NO-RISK TRIAL

Either you are more than delighted with the results MYLO brings you in loss of weight or you get double your money back. SEND NO MONEY! Just mail us your name and address and on delivery of MYLO pay the postman $2.00, plus C. O. D. charges or send $2.00 with your order and we will pay the postage. Follow direction for 7 days. Then, if you are not truly amazed at the loss of weight, if you don't notice remarkable improvement in your figure, if you don't look better, feel better, you will get double your money back. Don't let ugly fat distort your shape. Send for delicious, nutritious MYLO today.

INTERNATIONAL LABORATORIES
329 S. Wood St. • Dept. 15-BB • Chicago 12, Ill.

Want EXTRA Money?

Sell Everyday Greeting Cards

Show beautiful 14-card $1.00 assortments of Birthday, Get-Well, Easter cards; also Baby Congratulations, Sympathy cards, many other big values. Quick sales . . . easy profits. Write today for amazing SAMPLE OFFER!

WETMORE & SUGDEN, INC.
749 Monroe Avenue, Dept. 17-X, Rochester 2, N. Y.

PAIN OF SIMPLE PILES GOES FAST

• Think of it! A single soothing ointment that speeds relief from those tortures of simple piles. It's amazing Pazo Ointment—acts instantly to relieve pain and itching—soothes inflamed tissues—lubricates dry, hardened parts—helps prevent cracking and soreness—acts to reduce swelling and check minor bleeding. It's wonderful!

So, to speed this relief from itching and pain of simple piles, get Pazo Ointment. Your doctor can tell you about it. At all druggists in tubes complete with perforated pile pipe—also tins and handy suppositories.

High School Course at Home

Many Finish in 2 Years

Go as rapidly as your time and abilities permit. Course equivalent to resident school work—prepares for college entrance exams. Standard H.S. texts supplied. Diploma. Credit for H. S. subjects already completed. Single subjects if desired. High school education is very important for advancement in business and industry and socially. Don't be handicapped all your life. Be a High School graduate. Start your training now. Free Bulletin on request. No obligation.

American School, Dept. H214, Drexel at 58th, Chicago 37

Real regret at leaving these warm, hospitable people. Beautiful girls, also beautiful scenery, kindness of my relatives our warmest memory. Panama, our last stop in beautiful Central America!

Giggling, squealing, screaming, shrieking girls outside our door, making sleep impossible. In desperation, explaining we can't come out, we are resting, we are sleeping, we haven't any clothes on. Shouting and more shouting:

"We don't believe you."

The door bursting open, catching me standing there just as mother nature made me! Females disappearing faster than nylons at Macy's!

bucking their luck . . .

Enroute to South America! Our first bad weather, hitting the Equatorial belt over dense jungles—boom! Like crashing into a solid cement wall. Reaching for our belts as Ty climbed, trying to get out. On top—no way of seeing the ground, no way for Jeff to navigate. My first prayer, while Ty and I squeezed our lucky dollars. Ty, the intelligent and expert pilot, turning around and returning to Panama. Refueling, out again, this time following a Pan-American passenger plane bound for Colombia.

Lima, Peru! Modern, cordial, enthusiastic Lima. Their beautiful presidential palace, their charming president. The world-famed Carmen Amaya dancing at a local theater. Discovering we were her guests when we called for our tickets at the box office. That note from Carmen during intermission. Her kind invitation to visit back-stage after the last number, her gracious speech and dedicating the number in my honor. No sun in Lima! No rain in Lima! Our clothes always sopping from what the natives refer to as—"heavy dew."

Pisco beach on the coast of Peru! Paracas Hotel, clean, attractive, quiet, beautiful. A movie star's paradise. Mental note to tell the folks back in hustle-bustle Hollywood.

Preparing to leave for Santiago. My accident, slipping on the composition marble floor, chipping my elbow on the edge of a chair. Rumors flying thick and fast. "Romero broke his back." "Romero broke his head." Santiago, Chile! Three days in bed with the flu. Chills, fever. Hotel maids gathering 'round my bed, just looking. Local doctor wringing hands—in mental anguish—"What shall I do?" He's asking me!

Buenos Aires! Luncheons, parties, receptions, banquets! Eight days of social activity in gay, modern, abundant Buenos Aires. Cocktails starting at nine. Leisurely dinner ending at midnight. Business men reporting to work early in the morning. How those frenetic-paced Argentinians can take it!

just like the movies . . .

Montevideo, Uruguay! Stepping out on a balcony and greeting the people with their President. The Iguazu Falls that dwarf our own Niagara, swimming beneath the smallest in next to freezing water. On to Puerto Fonciere, an Estancia (we'd call it a ranch in this country) of one-and-a-half million acres. Mr. and Mrs. Paul Cox, the overseer and wife, our very nice host and hostess. Alligator hunting at night on the river. Pitch black, canoes slowly pulled by small yachts. Alligators' eyes—red balls of fire held spellbound by the glare of flashlights. All around us—alligators. Ty got the first one. Just like in the movies, pinching ourselves to make sure it's real.

That short flight, sixty miles away to meet the Gauchos. Landing in a clearing, surrounded by a frame of fire. Those gay, never-to-be-forgotten, fantastic, fabulous

Help yourself to BEAUTIFUL FINGERNAILS

Don't be embarrassed by short, broken, thin nails. It's so easy to cover unsightly nails with NU-NAILS. Applied in a jiffy, they bring you long, lovely nails that everyone admires. Can be worn any length and polished any shade. Help you overcome nail biting habit. Set of 10 only 20c at all 5c-10c stores . . . and at Sears.

NU-NAILS ARTIFICIAL FINGERNAILS
5251 West Harrison Street
Dept. 15-B Chicago 44, Illinois

ALMOST INCREDIBLE NEW scientifically compounded treatment for PIMPLES

TING works while it helps hide them!

You simply apply TING to pimples, let it dry—and whisk off excess powder TING is both fungicidal and germicidal—really works wonders for externally caused pimples. Even if other products have failed, ask your druggist for new TING antiseptic medicated cream. Stainless, greaseless. Only 50c.

Ting
ANTISEPTIC MEDICATED CREAM

RARE! INTIMATE! THRILLING! SNAPSHOTS OF STARS

Informal glimpses of stars taken without posing, make-up, re-touching! As they look in real life, on the street, in restaurants, at play. These extremely rare snapshots make the stars seem as familiar as your friends. Regularly 2 for 25c. Special offer: send 10c for one sample shot and complete catalog.

STARDUST HOUSE, INC. DEPT. M S-27
6411 HOLLYWOOD BLVD.
HOLLYWOOD 28, CALIF.

COLOR YOUR HAIR THE MODERN WAY

Shampoo and color your hair at the same time with SHAMPO-KOLOR, quickly, easily, yourself, at home. Any shade, close to scalp. No dyed look. Will not rub off. Permits perm. wave. No experience needed. Caution: Use only as directed on label. Free Book. Valligny Prod. Inc., Dpt. 31-R, 254 W. 31 St., N. Y.

Sell GREETING CARDS

FAST SALES, BIG PROFITS. Show exquisite Everyday, Birthday, Easter, Humorous Boxes, Gift Wraps, Stationery, Correspondence Notes, Special Offers, Boxes on approval. Request $1.00 Everyday Box on approval.

100 MONEY MAKERS

HEDENKAMP & COMPANY
343 Broadway, Dept. F-8, New York 13, N. Y.

Marvel

WHIRLING SPRAY SYRINGE for Women

At DRUG COUNTERS THROUGHOUT THE WORLD

Free Booklet. Marvel Co., 60 East St., New Haven, Ct.

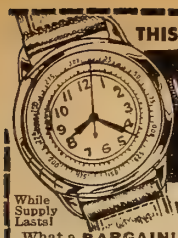
BE A Nurse

MAKE $30-$40 A WEEK

Practical nurses are needed in every community . . . doctors rely on them . . . patients appreciate their cheerful, expert care. You can learn practical nursing at home in spare time. Course endorsed by physicians. 48th yr. Earn while learning. High School not required. Men, women, 18 to 60. Trial plan. Write now!

CHICAGO SCHOOL OF NURSING
Dept. 232. 100 East Ohio Street, Chicago 11, Ill.
Please send free booklet and 16 sample lesson pages.

Name_____
City_____ State_____ Age_____



THIS COUPON GOOD FOR 50c

GENUINE IMPORTED SWISS WRIST WATCH

While Supply Lasts!

Regularly $8.45 With this Coupon Only Below Ceiling Price $7.95

What a BARGAIN! What a beauty is this handsome, serviceable, Imported Wrist Watch. Beautifully designed Dial, Sweep Second hand. Luminous Numerals shine in the Dark. Expensive-looking Stainless Steel Case and adjustable leather band. Send No Money! Just send name and address with this Coupon as your 50c deposit. Pay postman only $7.95 plus 10% tax and postage when watch is delivered.

WORLD-WIDE DIAMOND CO. Dept. H906
2451 S. Michigan Ave., Chicago 16, Illinois

MANY NEVER SUSPECT CAUSE OF BACKACHES

This Old Treatment Often Brings Happy Relief

Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, a stimulant diuretic, used successfully by millions for over 50 years. Doan's give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

3¢ A DAY HOSPITAL PLAN

PAYS HOSPITAL & DOCTOR BILLS

In case of sickness or accident, you may go to any Hospital in the U. S. or Canada under any Doctor's care. WE PAY YOUR EXPENSES in full accordance with Policy Provisions.

INDIVIDUAL or FAMILY

You are eligible for this low cost Protection from birth to age 70 . . . without medical examination. The famous North American Plan is sold direct at a saving to you. The Company is under the supervision of the Insurance Department. BE PREPARED! Sickness and accident strike suddenly. Insure now! Send for free details at once. No Agent will call.

POLICY PAYS

Hospital Room and Board for Sickness or Accident Per Day Up to $6.00

Doctor Visits In Case of Accident Per Visit $3.00

Surgical Operations Up to $150.00

Time Lost from Work In Case of Accident Per Week $25.00

Accidental Death Up to $2000.00

Physical Dismemberment Up to $2000.00

Identification Service Up to $100.00

Ambulance Service $10.00

FREE! MAIL COUPON

NORTH AMERICAN MUTUAL INSURANCE COMPANY
Dept. MM7-2, Wilmington, Del.

Please send me, without obligation, details about your "3c A Day Hospitalization Insurance Plan".

Name.....

Address.....

City.....State.....

Gauchos. Spurs strapped to bare feet, blue baggy pants, white baggy pants. Guarani, their amazing sing-song native tongue, an old Indian language once spoken in Paraguay. Lemonade and horses, true South American cowboy hospitality. John Jeffries' horse, of all names called—"Hollywood." Jeff's "Yooo-o, Hooo-o-o" cries a là Roy Rogers, delighting the Gauchos who immediately start copying him.

Flying down to Rio! The magnificent city of Rio de Janeiro. Sudden fog. Great mountain peaks rising out of nowhere, not ten feet away from our window.

"Where do you think we are, Jeff?"

"Don't you think we'd better climb out of this, Ty? Other planes might be flying around here, too!"

Visions of other planes, crashing right into us. This is what you read about in the papers! Air getting hotter, collars getting tighter. Eureka! Presto, like magic. Right out of nowhere, right out of the fog, the whole city of Rio spread out below us in splendor. The gigantic figure of Christ atop their highest mountain—arms outstretched—peace on earth. Welcome to Rio!

neighbor sabu . . .

Those beautiful mosaic sidewalks. Our top floor apartment, its verandah overlooking the sea. King Carol and Madame Lupescu, our immediate neighbors. Having to leave before taking advantage of their gracious invitation to visit. Those endless stacks of autograph books waiting in the lobby. The Club Atlantico, the inimitable songs of the famous French Lucienne Boyer. A cocktail party to remember: Miss Boyer, the girls from the show, the manager of the club. Our last sight of Rio, suspended in a cable car reaching up to Sugar Loaf mountain. The bay and lights of the city, snapping on and forming a great glowing carpet beneath us.

Belem in north Brazil, after a seven hour flight over the jungle. Our boarding house hotel with, of all people, Sabu and his eight-week-old pet jaguar, making an English movie. The Port of Spain in Trinidad, the Pan-American guest house, the "Royal Lion" and "Lord Pretender," famed calypso singers making up songs that included the names of our pictures.

Cayenne in French Guiana, populated by the liberees from Devil's Island. Swooping down low over Devil's Island, those catwalks, open cells now choked with weeds, strange and unbelievable and terrifying in contrast to the beauty recently witnessed.

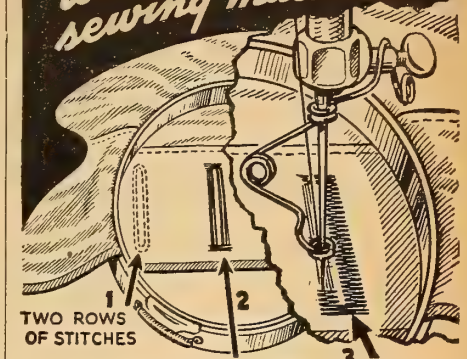
Trujillo in the Dominican Republic! The house of Columbus, historic, close to ruins. Refueling—Haiti, Port of France, Kingston, Jamaica. Havana, Cuba! Home of a long line of Romeros. Hundreds of relatives, old and new! Old family friends. The little old lady who knew my grandmother. My mother's first beau, his gift to me of a picture of my mother as a little girl. Cuba, the great heart of Cuba tied up with memories in my heart.

Florida—New York—home!

gone, but not forgotten . . .

Our trip is over, but of places, South American, Central American and Mexican, we will never forget. Of people who accepted us as their own. Long will we remember hotel doors covered with lipstick (God bless the movies!), marble-floored suites, gold fixtures, no hot water! Do they have jeeps in the United States? What about "lend-loose?" Tell your producers not to send us dubbed pictures. We have our own Spanish speaking stars—we want your stars to speak for themselves. They said it in every country. These warm-hearted, warm-blooded good neighbors. To them we are all eternally grateful.

New EASY WAY Makes BUTTON HOLES with your own sewing machine!



Darn Stockings, Mend Tears, Attach Zippers and Sew On Buttons, too!

Once dreaded by every woman, now button hole making becomes as easy as basting a hem with this sensational new invention! You'll get twice as neat results in half the time, too! Fits any sewing machine . . . attaches in a moment. Simple to operate. Comes complete with hoop for darning stockings, a button hole guide and easy directions in picture. Test at our risk now and realize a new thrill in sewing.

New! Improved! NOW ONLY $1.00 NOTHING LIKE IT!

FREE NEEDLE THREADER. As a gift for prompt action, you will receive with your order the marvelous time-saving, eye-saving needle threader. Don't wait but send your name today.

SEND NO MONEY — ORDER NOW. Just send your name and when you receive your new improved button hole attachment and gift needle threader, deposit only $1.00 plus C.O.D. charges thru postman. Do this on the guarantee that if you aren't delighted in every way, you may return purchase for full refund. Or send cash with order, we pay postage. Special . . . 3 for $2.50 NOW . . . Mail your name and address to LONDON SPECIALTIES, Dept. 4-B7, 8505 S. Phillips, Chicago 17, Ill.

WHY WEAR DIAMONDS

When diamond-dazzling Zircons from the mines of far-away mystic Siam are so effective and inexpensive? Thrilling beauty, stand acid, true backs, full of FIRE! Exquisite mountings. See before you buy. Write for FREE catalog. National Zircon Co., Dept. 8 Wheeling, W. Va.

Catalog FREE!

MORE MONEY for YOU

SELL EVERYDAY CARDS

EARN EXTRA CASH selling stunning Everyday Box Assortments of 14 cards. Sell for $1.00—pay you up to 50c cash profit. Other Big Values: — Sensational "Little Dear" Notes, Gift Wraps, Personalized Stationery, etc. No experience is needed.

WRITE FOR SAMPLES

CARDINAL CRAFTSMEN, Dept. 556
117 W. PEARL STREET, CINCINNATI 1, OHIO

YARN 100% Pure Virgin Wool

Knitting Worsted; Baby Yarns; Floss; Sport Yarn; Cordes and Gimps and plastic yarn. At Worthwhile Savings. Free color card.

PETER PAN YARNS
363 Grand St., N. Y. City
Dept. 130 . . . Estab. 1920

SUFFERERS FROM PSORIASIS (SCALY SKIN TROUBLE)

MAKE THE ONE SPOT TEST

Use DERMOIL

Prove it yourself no matter how long you have suffered or what you have tried. Beautiful book on psoriasis and Dermoil with amazing, true photographic proof of results sent FREE. Write for it.

Don't mistake eczema for the stubborn, ugly embarrassing scaly skin disease Psoriasis. Apply non-staining Dermoil. Thousands do for scaly spots on body or scalp. Grateful users, often after years of suffering, report the scales have gone, the red patches gradually disappeared and they enjoyed the thrill of a clear skin again. Dermoil is used by many doctors and is backed by a positive agreement to give definite benefit in 2 weeks or money is refunded without question. Send 10c (stamps or coin) for generous trial bottle to make our famous "One Spot Test." Test it yourself. Results may surprise you. Write today for your test bottle. Caution: Use only as directed. Print name plainly. Don't delay. Sold by Liggett and Walgreen Drug Stores and other leading Druggists. LAKE LABORATORIES, Box 547 Northwestern Station, Dept. 8809, Detroit 4, Mich.

SEND FOR GENEROUS TRIAL SIZE

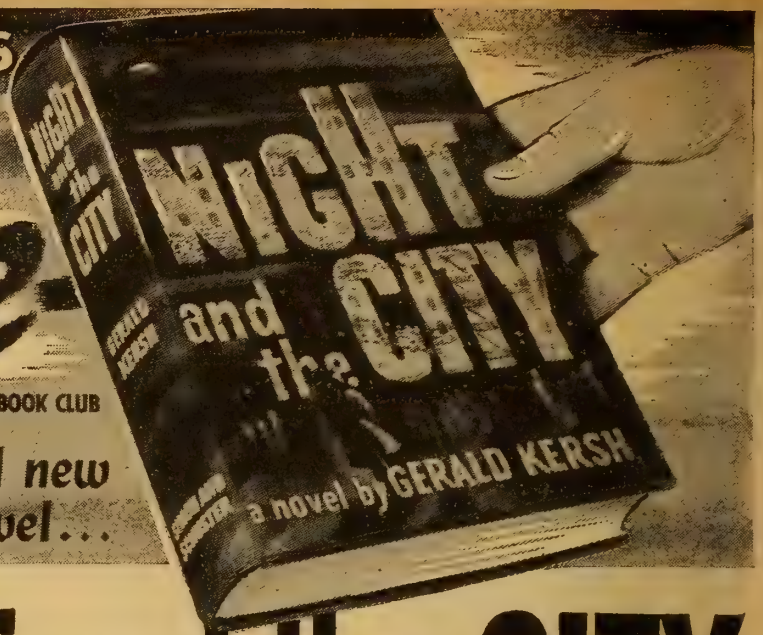
©1935 LAKE LAB

IT'S YOURS

Free—

When you join The FICTION BOOK CLUB

the sensational new best-selling novel...



NIGHT and the CITY

From the sinister shadows of the underworld comes this passionate and revealing story of two young lovers caught in the rip-tide of big city vice and greed

Not a "Pretty" Novel...
There's very little sweetness or delicacy in "Night and the City." But if you like tense, dramatic reading, and fearless frankness, you'll surely rave about this best-seller. New York Times says:— "... Exciting, unflagging in its headlong narrative pace."

ADAM and Helen were young and fine—strangers to the sordid night life of the city. Yet fate brought them together in the "Silver Fox" where they both took jobs rather than starve. And there in the midst of frenzied night club gaiety and human corruption they found in each other the kind of love they were made for—honest, strong and beautiful. But Helen in her work as a hostess met Harry Fabian (one of the most loathsome yet fascinating characters in modern fiction) and become infected with his passion for easy money... began to dream of the security that comes from wealth and possessions. Adam, on the other hand, hated material success... wanted only to return to the creation of beauty as a sculptor. Could their love—strong as it was—stand this cleavage?

You'll find the answer in the terrific climax of this fast and tense novel of cabarets and clip joints and the waxen-faced creatures of the night who prey on pleasure-seekers . . . yours FREE—when you mail coupon—to introduce you to the savings, convenience, and wonderful reading pleasure of Fiction Book Club membership. Read below and act today!

"It haunts you...then keeps on haunting you for days after you've read it." —The San Diego Union.

"A novel you won't forget for a long, long time." —New York Post.

"Throws a sharp searchlight on the underworld. No book for the queasy or squeamish, this is, however, a startling and compelling narrative."—Los Angeles Times.

It's the best novel . . . in many months. You just can't put it down." —Providence Journal.

No wonder this magnificent novel became an immediate best-seller, with 3 large printings ordered within 72 hours of publication! No wonder more and more book sellers wired in reorders and recorded it a front-rank best-seller—with sales of more than 1000 copies a day at $2.50 a copy. For your FREE copy of this best seller, mail the coupon below right now!

Send No Money! Mail Coupon!

YOURS FREE..."NIGHT AND THE CITY"

Powerful, revealing novel of love and hate!

The FICTION BOOK CLUB, 31 West 57th St., New York 19, N. Y.

I want to take advantage of your special introductory offer to send me free the outstanding best-seller "Night and the City," and at the same time (and also FREE) make me a fully-privileged member of The Fiction Book Club. I understand that each month I will be offered a new and popular best-seller at only $1.39 (plus a few cents postage). This means savings to me of $1 and $2 on each book from the regular price of the publisher's edition. (The current selection is that $2.75 sensational best-selling romantic novel "Duchess Hotspur.") However I can accept or reject monthly selections as I please. My only agreement is to purchase 6 of the entire year's offerings. Rush me my free copy of "Night and the City" and begin club service with current selection.

NAME_____
Please Print Plainly

ADDRESS_____

CITY_____ STATE_____
Zone No. (if any)

(Slightly higher in Canada—Address 266 King St. West, Toronto)

DM-2

Membership is FREE in The FICTION BOOK CLUB

...and you get all these Money-Saving advantages too!

You will be sent immediately FREE your copy of the best-seller "Night and the City" when you mail the coupon. You'll also become a member of The Fiction Book Club with your choice of the club's monthly best-seller selections and you'll get these four big advantages, too:

1. You save $1 to $2 on every book! Fiction Book Club contracts for big special editions—prints from original plates and in return for mass distribution, authors accept lower royalties. These savings are passed right on to you. You save $1 to $2 on every book you get. And you get the best-seller, "Night and the City," FREE as an introductory gift!

2. You get outstanding new books! Selections are made only after a careful study of current books from all publishers. From these reports of top-quality novels at $2.50 to $3.50, our editors select the available books that are "the cream of the crop." No guess-work. No opinions. Fiction Book Club selections are always outstanding best-sellers... books by leading authors ...brand-new, full-size, cloth-bound books you will be proud to own.

3. You pay no special dues or fees! No trick obligation clauses. You simply agree to accept any six of the twelve outstanding books offered in a year. You do not have to accept every book offered—just those you decide you want after you have read a detailed description well in advance.

4. You'll find plan so simple and easy! If you decide you don't want the book simply notify us not to send it. Otherwise simply do nothing, and it will be mailed to you. For each monthly selection YOU decide you want you pay just $1.39 plus a few cents postage.

SO ACT NOW!

Get your FREE copy of "Night and the City"— this powerful novel of love and hate and all the conveniences and savings of free Fiction Book Club membership! But hurry—offer is limited! It's first come — first served. Mail coupon NOW to The Fiction Book Club, 31 West 57th St., New York 19, N. Y.

CURRENT SELECTION!
the best-selling novel everybody's talking about
"DUCHESS HOTSPUR"
by Rosamond Marshall author of "Kitty"

Now Sweeping the Country! High on Best-Seller Lists! If you liked Scarlett O'Hara, Amber, and Kitty, you'll really love "Duchess Hotspur." Says the New York Times: "You'll find the Duchess a rousing companion for your next idle evening." And no wonder—for her pranks and passions were the scandal of England's most scandalous age!

MAIL COUPON NOW! HURRY... OFFER

Women! YOU JUST CAN'T IMAGINE AN EASIER PART-TIME WAY TO EARN EXTRA MONEY QUICK!

...and get all your own dresses as a bonus without cost!

Style 837
An Evergrand crepe dress for after-dark excitement.

It's really astonishing—this unbelievably easy way to earn good money quick! You make up to $18, $20 and $25 in a week, and also get your own lovely spring dresses without a penny of cost! You don't have to invest any money—all you do is take orders for FASHION FROCKS—famous Hollywood-inspired creations in rich fabrics and exquisite tailoring, yet surprisingly low in price. You take these orders when and where you please, from friends and neighbors. We deliver and collect—you get paid on the spot! And, in addition, you receive all your own dresses as a bonus!

NO CANVASSING—NO EXPERIENCE NEEDED!

This wonderful offer is open because we must have more representatives to introduce a great added feature of FASHION FROCKS—striking new styles personally designed by the lovely screen star, Constance Bennett, "one of the world's ten best-dressed women." Miss Bennett, idolized for her magnificent style sense, now designs dresses exclusively for FASHION FROCKS. Millions of women will want these Constance Bennett creations. They'll welcome your presentation of the big, colorful FASHION FROCKS Portfolio featuring Constance Bennett originals and scores of other appealing models for as little as $3.98. And since FASHION FROCKS cannot be bought in stores, women must come to you if they want to be admired for wearing these magnificent styles. Door-to-door canvassing is unnecessary! And, as for experience, you simply don't need it for work that's as easy as this! Our special plans help you make exceptional weekly earnings such as $28.84 made by Claude Burnett, Ala., or $27.10 made by Marie Patton, Ill.

THESE FASHION FROCKS ARE PRACTICALLY TWINS OF 'E I CREATED FOR MY PERSONAL 'SE AT $200 TO $300 EACH. I AM UD TO PRESENT THEM AT LESS THAN ONE-TENTH THOSE PRICES

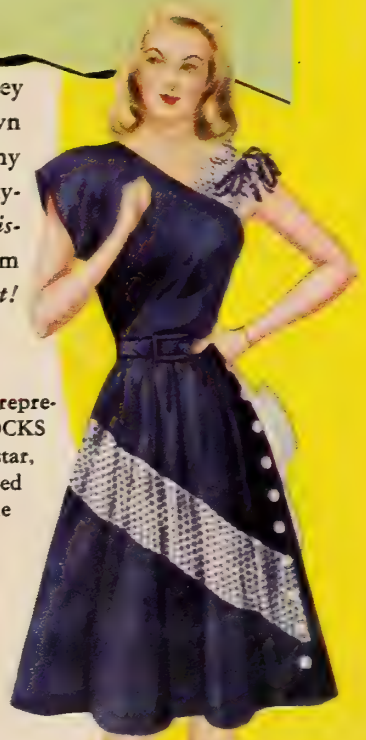
Constance Bennett

glamorous star of stage, screen l radio. One of the world's 10 t-dressed women, she designs exsively for FASHION FROCKS.

Style 812
A candy-stripe cotton with big sleeve news.

r 39th Successful Year

Fashion Frocks



Style 809
A peek-a-boo charmer highlighted by special side interest.

GET THE Free Portfolio of LATEST SPRING DRESSES as low as $3.98

EVERYTHING FREE — RUSH COUPON

Warning! Since news of Constance Bennett's FASHION FROCKS has gotten around, our openings are being filled fast. Don't wait another minute—mail the coupon now for all the details of receiving the valuable Presentation Portfolio FREE. Paste coupon on a postcard if you wish, but make sure it's mailed today!

FASHION FROCKS, Inc.
Desk 42054 Cincinnati 25, Ohio

TEAR OUT COUPON . . . AND MAIL!

FASHION FROCKS, Inc.
Desk 42054, Cincinnati 25, Ohio

YES—I am interested in your opportunity to make money in spare time and get my own dresses without a penny of cost. Send me full information, without obligation.

*Name*_____

*Address*_____

*City*_____ *Zone*____ *State*____

*Age*____ *Dress Size*____

HER Charm-Kurl COLD WAVE MAKES THE DIFFERENCE!

Imagine! A Permanent Like This in 2 to 3 Hours, at Home . . . Yet Costs only 98c

Millions of thrifty women now Cold Wave their straight, stringy hair to glamorous new beauty at home with Charm-Kurl Supreme. They know, that regardless of price, there's no finer COLD WAVE on the market.

You, too, may thrill to breathtaking curls and waves by tonight, if you use Charm-Kurl Supreme. It's laboratory tested and SAFE for every type of hair. Be sure to get the genuine,—it's your guarantee of perfect results.

NO OTHER PERMANENT LEAVES HAIR SOFTER, MORE LUSTROUS, MORE BEAUTIFULLY WAVED OR CURLED

Given closer to the scalp with crystal-clear Charm-Kurl solution, your curls will be tighter, your waves more manageable and longer lasting. And, best of all, you'll save up to $14.00 or more. If your hair style is "flat top" with end and ear curls,—try Charm-Kurl to keep frizzy ends in place. You'll be amazed with the results and save up to $4.00 to $5.00 besides. Children's soft, fine hair responds marvelously. Satisfaction or money back. Get a Charm-Kurl Supreme COLD WAVE kit or two today,—at any Drug Store, Cosmetic or Notion Counter.

THE NEW

Charm-Kurl

SUPREME COLD WAVE HOME KIT

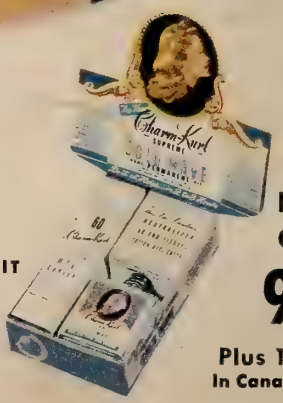
MORE THAN 10 MILLION CHARM-KURLS HAVE BEEN SOLD



Now Only 98c

Plus 14c Tax
In Canada $1.35

FEB 11 1947

17002

march | 15c

modern screen

©CIB 61075

THE LIBRARY OF CONGRESS SERIAL RECORD FEB 21 1947

CLARK GA

A DELL MAGAZINE

"You're right

Red Majesty

is the New Queen of the Reds!"

—says MRS. CORNEL WILDE...

radiant wife of the screen star.

"BECAUSE," enthuses lovely Mrs. Wilde, "there is something really wonderful about Red Majesty! It gives you confidence that your lips are looking their best. So I think you were perfectly right when you named it the queen of your glamourous family of Tangee lipstick shades."

CONSTANCE LUFT HUHN
Head of the House of Tangee and creator of Tangee Red Majesty Lipstick and Petal-Finish Cake Make-Up.

Five Famous Glamourous Shades by TANGEE

Red Majesty NEW HIT SHADE BY Tangee

About Rosalie...who started from scratch...

NOW ROSALIE HAD...

MAGNETIC EYES...

A SENSATIONAL SMILE...

AND LOVELY LEGS!

BUT IN SPITE OF ALL THIS, ROSALIE WASN'T DOING SO COSILY, AND HERE'S WHY...

HER HANDS WERE SO DRIED OUT AND ROUGH THAT THEY SCRATCHED LIKE A PUSSY CAT!

RESULT? HER BEAUX FELT DISAPPOINTED AND LET DOWN — AND SO DID SHE!

THEN ONE DAY SALLY LEE TOLD ROSALIE ABOUT AN ENTIRELY NEW AND DIFFERENT HAND LOTION! THE BEFOREHAND LOTION... TRUSHAY!

SO ROSALIE SMOOTHED CREAMY, FRAGRANT TRUSHAY ON HER HANDS BEFORE SHE TACKLED DISHES...BECAUSE TRUSHAY GUARDS HANDS EVEN IN HOT, SOAPY WATER!

AND SHE ALSO PUT TRUSHAY ON HER HANDS BEFORE SHE LAUNDERED HER PRETTY-PRETTIES! AND TRUSHAY'S SPECIAL "OIL-RICHNESS" HELPED PREVENT DRYNESS AND ROUGHNESS.

WELL, ROSALIE IS DOING QUITE COSILY NOW...FOR TRUSHAY IS KEEPING HER HANDS SOFT AND SMOOTH...THEY'RE NOT SCRATCHY ANY MORE.

TRUSHAY

The "Beforehand" Lotion

PRODUCT OF BRISTOL-MYERS

P. S. Trushay's grand for softening hands at any time! Wonderful, too, for rough, dry elbows and heels . . . as a powder base . . . before and after exposure to weather. Trushay contains no alcohol, is not sticky. Begin today to use Trushay.

modern screen

the friendly magazine

stories

YOU MAY CALL IT MADNESS (Lana Turner, Tyrone Power)....by Florabel Muir 14
YOU CAN'T PRINT THAT!....by Dorothy Kilgallen 27
"THE GABLE I KNOW" (Clark Gable)....by Hedda Hopper 28
WHO WANTS TO BE A GENIUS?....by Billy Rose 30
MARK STEVENS LIFE STORY (Part I)....by Kirtley Baskette 32
PORTRAIT OF AN AMERICAN (Gary Cooper)....by Cecil B. De Mille 34
TO EACH HIS OWN (Perry Como)....by Jean Kinkead 36
CAN STARS STAY MARRIED? (Betty Grable)....by Ida Zeitlin 38
THAT'S LIFE WITH THE BOGARTS! (Lauren Bacall and Humphrey Bogart) by Jack Wade 40
HELLO, GORGEOUS! (Alice Faye and Phil Harris)....by Carl Schroeder 42
BRIEF ENCOUNTER (Greer Garson)....by Howard Sharpe 44
HE'S A KILLER! (Burt Lancaster)....by Hank Jeffries 46
LITTLE MOTHER (Betty Hutton)....by Abigail Putnam 48
STRICTLY FOR LAUGHS (Judy Garland)....by George Benjamin 50
MODERN SCREEN GOES SKIING (Yvonne De Carlo and Turhan Bey).... 52
IT'S A HEAVENLY AGE! (Joan Leslie)....by Arthur L. Charles 54
QUEEN FOR A DAY (Lon McCallister and Mary Snee)....by Christopher Kane 56
GABLE'S GOT HER! (Deborah Kerr)....by C. A. Le Jeune 60

color pages

CLARK GABLE in M-G-M's "The Hucksters".... 28
MARK STEVENS in 20th-Fox's "I Wonder Who's Kissing Her Now".... 32
PERRY COMO, 20th-Fox star.... 36
BETTY GRABLE in 20th-Fox's "The Shocking Miss Pilgrim".... 39
ALICE FAYE, 20th-Fox star.... 43
GREER GARSON in M-G-M's "A Woman Of My Own".... 45
BETTY HUTTON in Paramount's "The Perils Of Pauline".... 48
YVONNE DE CARLO in Universal's "Slave Girl".... 52
TURHAN BEY, Universal star.... 52
FRANCES RAMSDEN, in Paramount's "The Sin Of Harold Diddlebock".... 65

features

GOOD NEWS....by Louella Parsons 4

departments

REVIEWS:....by Virginia Wilson 16
RADIO: Radio Award....by Ed Sullivan 62
FASHION....by Constance Bartel 66
BEAUTY: "Here's A Pretty Complexion!".... 78
INFORMATION DESK:.... 79
FAN CLUBS:....by Shirley Frohlich 90
MUSIC: "Sweet and Hot"....by Leonard Feather 100

COVER PORTRAIT BY NIKOLAS MURAY
DESIGNED BY LESTER BEALL

ALBERT P. DELACORTE, Executive Editor HENRY P. MALMGREEN, Editor

MAGDA MASKEL, western manager
JANE WILKIE, western editor
BERYL STOLLER, associate editor
SHIRLEY FROHLICH, assistant editor
OTTO STORCH, art director
BILL WEINBERGER, art editor
LAYNG MARTINE, promotion director
CONSTANCE BARTEL, fashion director
JEAN KINKEAD, contributing editor
CARL SCHROEDER, editorial consultant
GUS GALE, staff photographer
BOB BEERMAN, staff photographer
BEVERLY LINET, information desk
CHARLES SAXON, cartoon editor

POSTMASTER: Please send notice on Form 3578 and copies returned under Label Form 3579 to 149 Madison Avenue, New York 16, New York
Vol. 34, No. 4, March, 1947. Copyright, 1947, the Dell Publishing Co., Inc., 149 Madison Ave., New York. Published monthly. Printed in U. S. A. Published simultaneously in the Dominion of Canada. International copyright secured under the provisions of the Revised Convention for the Protection of Literary and Artistic Works. Office of publication at Washington and South Aves., Dunellen, N. J. Chicago Advertising office, 360 N. Michigan Ave., Chicago 1, Illinois. Single copy price, 15c in U. S. and Canada. Subscriptions in U. S. A. and Canada $1.80 a year; elsewhere $2.80 a year. Entered as second class matter Sept. 18, 1930, at the post office, Dunellen, N. J., under Act of March 3, 1879. The publishers accept no responsibility for the return of unsolicited material. Names of characters used in semi-fictional matter are fictitious. If the name of any living person is used it is purely a coincidence. Trademark No. 301778.

METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER'S
LION'S ROAR

Published in this space every month

The greatest star of the screen!

There have been some memorable moments in movies that have rolled us into the aisles with laughter, but nothing compares with the big one in "Love Laughs at Andy Hardy".

To say this picture is the best of the Hardy series would be an understatement. It is, indeed, one of the most entertaining comedies that has ever been produced.

★ ★ ★ ★

When Mickey, five-foot-five, tangles with Dorothy Ford, six-foot-six, the stage is set for a merry field-day. And director Willis Goldbeck makes the most of it.

★ ★ ★ ★

That's the short and the long of it. But the story itself is sure-footed and solid. It is a real reflection of certain aspects of American life.

★ ★ ★ ★

BONITA

A true descendant of a tradition once started by the late Booth Tarkington, Andy Hardy and his trials and tribulations, his affaires d'amour or even du coeur, as the French would say, are superbly contrived in this picture from producer Robert Sisk.

★ ★ ★ ★

Mickey Rooney's back in his famous role and no doubt about it, this artist is a master of all the keys. He can be funny as they come and as serious as the soul.

★ ★ ★ ★

LINA

His blind dates, his romance with Bonita Granville, his rhumba interlude with the talented and alluring Lina Romay, his tragi-comedy episode when he is locked out of the house in a lady's wrapper, all are so deftly interwoven into story that the total is a film fan's delight.

★ ★ ★ ★

The writers deserve to be in the billing. A hand to Harry Ruskin, William Ludwig and Howard Dimsdale's original story.

★ ★ ★ ★

And an extra hand to you. You'll want it to applaud with.

★ ★ ★ ★

Love Laughs at Andy Hardy. Love is you.

—Lea

HE JITTERBUGS WITH A 6-FOOT HEPCAT!
THE LEAP FOR LOVE IN THE POOL!
HE ESCAPES IN AUNT MILLY'S NIGHT DRESS!
OUCH! THAT RHUMBA MOVEMENT!
LOVE HITS HIM WHERE IT HURTS!

Mickey's back! And you'll howl!

M-G-M's NEW and DANDY ANDY HARDY HIT!

"Love Laughs at Andy Hardy"

with

MICKEY ROONEY
LEWIS STONE

SARA HADEN · LINA ROMAY · FAY HOLDEN · BONITA GRANVILLE · DOROTHY FORD

Screen Play by HARRY RUSKIN and WILLIAM LUDWIG • Original Story by HOWARD DIMSDALE

Directed by WILLIS GOLDBECK • Produced by ROBERT SISK

A METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER PICTURE

Richard and Greer Garson Ney were among Jimmy Stewart's well-wishers at Frank Capra's It's A Wonderful Life party. Greer heads for England soon—her first trip home since Goodbye Mr. Chips.

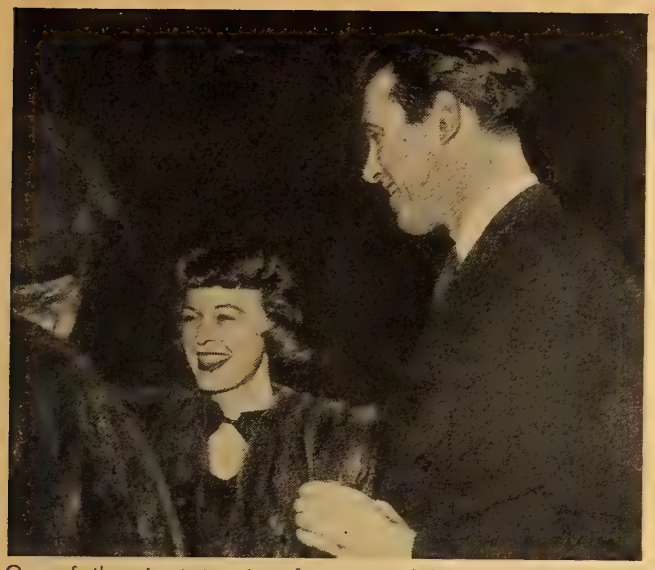
Brenda Marshall won't worry about husband William Holden's balanced diet any longer. Bill, whose first post-war film will be Dear Ruth, is going into the vitamin-manufacturing business.

Lionel Barrymore—one of the Capra regulars (he's in Wonderful Life, too)—boasted to Lucille Ball that he's now an honorary member of the Mark Twain Society! He knew Twain as a boy.

Maybe it's a kiss Roz Russell is going to plant on Frank Capra—or is he just whispering a few director's tricks? For Roz and Bing Crosby plan to produce a slap-stick comedy—starring themselves!

It wouldn't be a party without a cut-up or two—so the otherwise dignified Edward G. Robinson and Frank Morgan oblige. Robinson's extensive art collection, incidentally, is now valued at $1,000,000.

Clark Gable, an old Capra graduate (It Happened One Night, remember?) squired lovely Anita Colby. It's Virginia Grey, however, whose name is seriously linked with Clark's—at this moment, anyway!



One of the nicest surprises for guest of honor Jimmy Stewart was meeting up with old friend and co-star Margaret Sullavan. Maggie, who's Mrs. Leland Hayward, now has three daughters!

Bob Stack danced with Yvonne de Carlo all night at the Wonderful Life party; then went home to bed with a bad case of bronchitis. But he's all right now, after recuperating at Palm Springs.

Fred and Mrs. MacMurray approve the filet mignon. Fred, who's one of the smartest businessmen in Hollywood, will follow the trend with his independent producing company, after The Egg and I.

louella parsons'

Good news and party postscripts

■ THE PASSING of W. C. Fields on Christmas Day saddened many hearts. I almost believed that I would get a telegram saying, "It's not true, Louella. Don't believe it." So many times in the past, when I would say that he was sick and ailing, I would hear from him, saying, "Now don't kill me off yet." Bill Fields joked about everything. He joked with his nurses and doctors almost to the moment of his death. He even joked about his large red nose, which was really his stock in trade. He used to say it was caused by "spiritus fermenti," and his jokes in radio and vaudeville became famous. I have known Fields for about twenty-five years, first when he was with the Ziegfeld Follies, where he won great fame as a juggler. He was 67 years old, and his real name was Claude William Dunkenfield. He disliked the name Claude, but a few of his friends called him Uncle Claude. He didn't like the name William, either. So he was always known as W. C. Fields. There's never been anyone quite like W. C., and he'll be missed by all his friends who loved his company.

* * *

It's nothing new for the public to be bewildered about Hollywood romances. In my time, I have been a little giddy on the subject myself.

But this month, I swear, it's the sweethearts who know from nothing about their own heart affairs. S'help me, I've never known so many scrambled romances—or romancers.

Evie Wynn, for instance, picked out Van Johnson's first home for him and then set about getting it furnished in her own favorite colors. But the day Evie announced she was divorcing Keenan (prelude to marrying Van) she was spotted in an interior decorator's shop picking out drapes—not for Van's place—but for Keenan's new apartment!

"Well," as one philosopher mused, "they were all friends when Evie was married to Keenan, so there's no particular louella parsons' Good news and party postscripts reason why they shouldn't remain buddies when she marries Van!"

But that isn't all, kids—that's just the beginning.

Perhaps the MOST undecided lady of the year is pretty little Nancy Guild who met millionaire Edward Lasker one week, fell madly in love with him, set their wedding day for a week hence, and then called the whole thing off the day before the marriage!

Nancy says her parents begged her to wait and think it over, and apparently that was what she was doing when she left young Lasker with a $20,000 diamond ring cooling in his pocket.

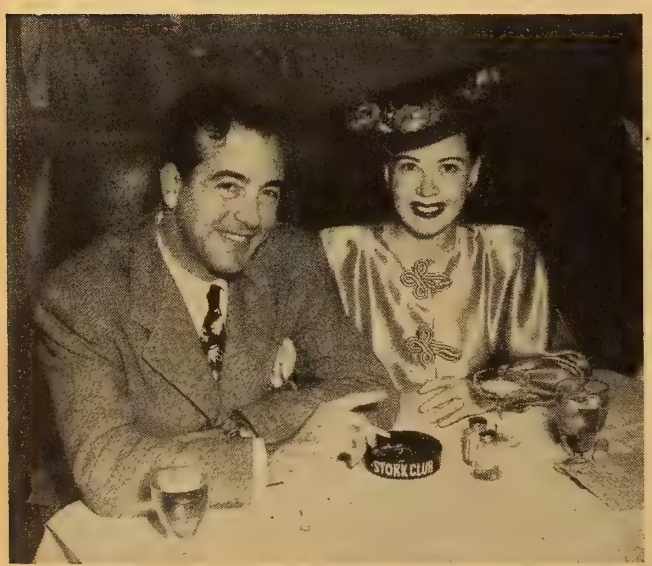
I must say Lasker is game. He told me he thought Nancy might change her mind again and they would be married next year if not before. Meanwhile, a fur coat and a Cadillac he'd picked out for her wedding gifts—along with the costly sparkler—have all been taken back to where they came from, making young Edward richer—but not happier.

And then there's the Lana Turner-Tyrone Power romantic fireworks. Is it love? Well, Lana is quoted as having said Ty is "the only man I have ever loved"—which, from Lana, is an extravagant statement you'll admit. The day this interesting "quote" reached print, Ty was dining with his ex, Annabella, in New York. When Lana's remark was relayed to him, Ty had no comment to make, although there's no chance of his making up with Annabella. She's said to have her next picked out—a rich radio biggie. See what I mean? They all get more and more involved as we roll along.

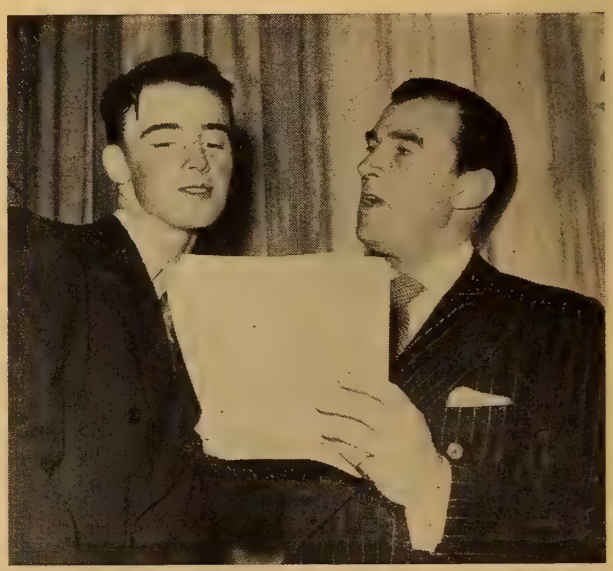
Take Linda Darnell. She says, "I will divorce Pev Marley as soon as I finish 'Forever Amber.'" But here is what she does: The only gent she dines with is PEV MARLEY!

But the topper of them all came in a newspaper headline heralding the (Continued on page 10)

The Biltmore Bowl banquet for newspaper editors brought out Ann Todd and husband Nigel Tangye. Ann's a hit with N. Y. newsmen, too!



Courting Gloria De Haven—just like the old days—is husband John Payne, here at the Stork Club. John blames their separation on "a case of nerves caused by the excitement of their new home."



Completely recovered from his accident in Japan last year, Jerome Courtland appeared with Walter Pidgeon on a Lux Radio Show. Walter and Greer Garson have vowed not to co-star again.

"Stop apologizing for sex, George Apley...you didn't invent it!"

He's the immovable object!
She's the irresistible force!
It's the incomparably entertaining movie!

RONALD COLMAN

The LATE GEORGE APLEY

"But it's better late than never!"

and introducing
PEGGY CUMMINS

FROM THE PULITZER PRIZE NOVEL

20th CENTURY-FOX

Directed by
JOSEPH L. MANKIEWICZ
Produced by
FRED KOHLMAR

with

VANESSA BROWN · RICHARD HAYDN · CHARLES RUSSELL · RICHARD NEY

PERCY WARAM · MILDRED NATWICK · EDNA BEST · NYDIA WESTMAN

Screen Play by Philip Dunne · From the Play by John P. Marquand and George S. Kaufman

Based on the Novel by John P. Marquand

WINNER OF THE 1945 ACADEMY AWARD

JOAN C
JOHN G

THE NEW WARNER
– ONE OF THE GREATEST

"Humo

WITH

OSCAR LEVANT · J. CARROL NAISH · DIRECTED BY JEAN N

FOR 'MILDRED PIERCE' IN ANOTHER HISTORY-MAKING ROLE!

JOAN CRAWFORD ARFIELD

ACHIEVEMENT OF THEM ALL!

"Rescue"

PRODUCED BY
EGULESCO · JERRY WALD

Screen Play by Clifford Odets and Zachary Gold • Based on a Story by Fannie Hurst • Music Conducted by Franz Waxman

Jack Benny couldn't resist Irene Dunne's lighter tresses at a broadcast. Irene's new color is a little like the redheaded hair-do she wears for her technicolor role in Life With Father.

Both Robert Montgomery and Charles Boyer are very much interested in politics, but they're usually too busy with screen assignments to participate much. Bob's producing a Broadway show, The Big Two.

Gracie Allen points with pride as our own Louella Parsons admires the Christmas tie Gracie bought George. Louella also had to hear all about son Ronnie—and look at pictures, too!

louella parsons' Good news and party postscripts

(Continued from page 6) finish of the tangled Artie Shaw-Kathleen Winsor romance. Artie, and the authoress of "Forever Amber," you remember, eloped to Mexico, obtained secret divorces and were married before they were legally shed of their former mates in Los Angeles.

So out comes the headline: "BOB HERWIG DIVORCES ARTIE SHAW'S WIFE!" And I claim that's a statement that would baffle the unbafflable Mr. Anthony! How untangled can you get?

* * *

There was something very heart-warming in the dinner given by Frank Capra, George Stevenson, Sam Briskin and William Wyler to launch their hit, "It's A Wonderful Life," and bring Jimmy Stewart back to his fans and friends.

I say "heart-warming" because the famous hosts had invited all the actors who had EVER appeared in any of their pictures to be present along with the top-notchers of today, and so the whole charming affair at the Ambassador Hotel was a sentimental reunion of old and new stars and old and new friends.

At one table, I saw Viola Dana (she was the darling of her day), Shirley Mason (who was the June Allyson of her time) and still-lovely Claire Windsor who was once called the most beautiful woman in Hollywood. Just a few tables away, Claudette Colbert and Clark Gable, who hit the heights together in Capra's "It Happened One Night," had their heads together talking about old times. Sitting next to Clark was Greer Garson. This was really "get together" night! There were many tales of how cool Greer and Clark had been to one another when they were making "Adventure."

Loretta Young stopped to tell me that her husband was in New York, so she came with Joan Fontaine and Bill Dozier. Another real beauty sitting at the same table with Joan and Loretta was Anita Stewart, glamorous star of the silent days, who had a career equalled by few stars even to this day. She was Louis B. Mayer's first movie star, and he says a great deal (Continued on page 12)

"What this Country needs is more Farmers' DAUGHTERS!"
Here's the year's biggest laugh
...about a country maid who lays down the law to a Congressman!
RKO PRESENTS
LORETTA YOUNG
JOSEPH COTTEN
ETHEL BARRYMORE
in
"The Farmer's Daughter"
with
CHARLES BICKFORD
A DORE SCHARY PRODUCTION
Directed by H. C. POTTER
Written by ALLEN RIVKIN and LAURA KERR
RKO RADIO PICTURES

louella parsons' Good news and party postscripts

Felix Jackson dates Hollywood's latest redhead: it's wife Deanna Durbin! Like Irene Dunne (see p. 10), Deanna changed color for Central Park, now likes it that way.

After all, reasons Trigger, why shouldn't every horse have his day? At the opening of the Hitching Post Theater, Trigger allowed Roy Rogers—assisted by Dale Evans—to leave his footprint, too! Trigger's gone Hollywood, with a peroxide blonde mane!

of his success was built on Anita's beauty and popularity. I also noticed Irene Dunne, and with her was her husband, Dr. Griffin, who has been ill, and consequently makes few appearances.

I was fortunate enough to sit at Frank Capra's table with Jimmy Stewart right beside me. Jimmy was with Margaret Sullavan, who never seems to age and still has that little girl look. At one time, Jimmy was deeply in love with Maggie—but that was years ago. Now they are just old friends. When her husband, Leland Hayward, was unable to make the party because of illness, Jimmy, of course, wanted his good friend, Margaret, to share his big night with him.

And believe me, it was a big night for him. Sitting so close to him I could see that he was trembling and shaking like a newcomer who had never before appeared on the screen. He was as nervous as a kid during the dinner and before we saw the movie. Jimmy said, "This one means everything, Louella. I've been away a long time and I'm afraid they've forgotten me."

Well, he didn't feel that way AFTER the showing! What a wonderful movie it is, living right up to the full meaning of its title, "It's A Wonderful Life." Everyone was dashing around congratulating every one else, and one of the first hands I grabbed belonged to Lionel Barrymore, who plays an old meanie in the picture. He didn't seem like an old meanie to me when he bent down and kissed me on the cheek. Over the top of his head, I glimpsed Rosalind Russell, wearing a spangled lace shawl over her head, and looking like a dream boat.

As I left, I stopped to speak to Jack Holt, who is so good looking I didn't mind in the least when he reminded me that we had first met 20 years ago. And then there were dark, exotic Estelle Taylor, quite as alluring as when she was Mrs. Jack Dempsey; Sally Eilers, pert and blonde, bringing back memories of "Bad Girl," Tom Moore, Lee Tracy and dozens of other former great names, all come to do honor to their director friends, Capra, Briskin, Stevenson and Wyler.

But the Hollywood scene is not all romance and frivolity these days—not by a long shot. Back of the scenes is the most stirring race for Academy Award honors I've witnessed in over 20 years of covering this town.

Believe me, the rivalry is bitter and real. Good friends among producers, directors and stars, who have a chance for the coveted honors, are suddenly chilling toward one another. The suspense is getting them down!

The heat is on—and while a great many people think this might be a bad thing, I think it is perfectly wonderful. With such spirited competition, you, the paying public, are bound to win. With every producer, star and director in the business wanting to get there "Fustest with the Bestest," you fans can't lose.

Next month, all the shouting will be over and the race forgotten for another year, but I hope this feeling of trying to make the best picture and turn in the best performances carries over among all our top people. It's good for the business and it's good for us fans.

When you read this you still won't know who won because the Awards are not until March but remember this: If the winning picture and the winning performers are not the ones you would have selected, it's because here is Hollywood voting for its own—and it's not an outside popularity contest.

* * *

The very youngest guest of honor ever to inspire a Hollywood party is Miss Candace Patricia Bergen, known to her pals as "Candy."

Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Bergen, Mr. Bergen (Continued on page 121)

It's The All-Time
Laugh Hit
Streamlined for Now!
5 YEARS ON BROADWAY!
ABIE'S IRISH ROSE
32 MERRY MONTHS ON THE AIR!
NOW ON THE SCREEN!
Bing Crosby Producers Inc.
presents ANNE NICHOLS'
"ABIE'S IRISH ROSE"
with MICHAEL CHEKHOV
and introducing JOANNE DRU*
and RICHARD NORRIS
Produced and Directed by A. Edward Sutherland
Screenplay by Anne Nichols • Released thru United Artists
*by arrangement with Howard Hawks

by Florabel Muir

Ah, you may call it madness, but Lana calls it love—and here's our scoop-of-the-month on the Mexico City romance of Ty Power and the torchy Miss Turner

You may call it Madness...

■ Every once in a while a girl comes along in Hollywood who makes all the imaginings of the poets about love come true. And, of course, everybody loves her because it's so easy to love her and so hard not to.

Hollywood remembers girls like that. Neither Hollywood, nor the world, can forget Barbara Lamarr, Jean Harlow, Clara Bow. They were "all or nothing at all" girls. Just now we have another lush little beauty who reminds you of the girl in Marlene Dietrich's song: "Falling in love again, never wanted to, what am I to do? Can't help it."

Naturally, you know that I'm writing of Lana Turner. No halfway girl is Lana in the matter of falling in love. Her romantic exploits have been so spectacular that when she set Hollywood by the ears just as everyone was settling down to the post-New Year's doldrums, the effect was an emotional atomic bomb.

In complete defiance of studio discipline, the rule against flying while making a picture, and the elementary business of getting to the set on a working day, blonde Lana hopped a plane and flew down to Mexico City. Lana wanted to see Tyrone Power. Ty's down there starring in Captain from Castile for Twentieth Century-Fox. She was hungry for the touch of his hand, for the melting glances of love from those limpid dark eyes of his.

Lana had a picture of her own to worry about. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is tossing $3,000,000 into its Green Dolphin Street, and already it's being whispered on the lot that this is to be the company's big entry in the 1948 Academy Award Sweepstakes. The film is three weeks away from being finished at this writing. All Lana had to do was wait until the first of February to fly to romantic Acapulco and have her delectable fill of the tender passion.

Did she stop to reason why? Did she pause to think of her benign boss, Louis B. Mayer, who finds it good policy to indulge his stars but must also worry about budgets just like any other producer? Not little Lana!

It never occurred to her that if anything happened to the plane she rode in, Metro would have to write off a $3,000,000 investment and start all over again. The only thing she knew

"He's the only man I ever loved," Lana told reporters, before joining Tyrone in Mexico.

Lana bought $5,000 worth of new duds for her trip; held up Green Dolphin Street for a week!

for sure was that Ty Power would be dancing at Ciro's in Mexico City's Hotel Reforma on New Year's Eve and she had to be there dancing with him.

"Nobody will even know I've gone," I can imagine Lana telling herself.

But when the crew assembled to start shooting on the morning after New Year's, a telephone call came for Director Victor Saville.

"Hello, Victor, this is Lana," the voice said across the wire.

"You're not ill, I hope, darling," said the solicitous Saville.

"No, but I'm in Mexico City and I can't get back. The planes are all grounded."

In about two shakes the whole Metro plant was in an uproar. Saville rearranged his schedule and everyone prayed that the star would make it back safely.

It wasn't until three o'clock in the afternoon of the next day that a demure little Lana walked on her set ready to face the camera —and the music. There wasn't a soul in sight. She was all alone. It was very, very disconcerting, Lana told me afterward. She stood there wondering what to do when all of a sudden Victor Saville and George Folsey, the cameraman, strolled out from behind some scenery. They were dolled up in serapes and sombreros, strumming guitars, and crooning "Cielito Lindo," that haunting love song of Old Mexico. All the cast and crew joined in the chorus, Van Heflin crashing out with a gusty baritone.

I think everyone will agree that it was all very sweet, and if it proves anything at all, it's that all the world still loves a lover—which is very much to the good, if you ask me.

This time love moved upon Lana like an army advancing on a beautiful beleaguered city and took her by storm. It all happened —and this is going to surprise you—at a gala party given by Gene Tierney. It isn't so long ago that Gene was being talked about as the new girl in Ty's life. That was just when people were getting over the shock of Ty's separation from Annabella—another "perfect marriage" gone on the rocks.

Lana and Ty had known each other casually for years, but they have both told friends that neither was really aware of the other until that night of Gene's party. They danced together. The music was soft, seductive, and they were young; he the dashing hero home from the war, she the soft, the yielding, the voluptuous, earmarked for love even while she was a pretty lass attending Hollywood high school.

Lana knows love's storms and tempests. She had just weathered one, a thrilling encounter of hearts with the fabulous romancer Howard Hughes, a man who might have been a d'Artagnan in another age. One day I purposely put Lana to the test. We meet often in Westmore's and trade gossip. I own to great admiration and some awe of Howard Hughes, whom I've known for nearly twenty years, but I said to Lana: "He's not good enough for you." "Oh, Florabel, you're wrong, so wrong," she protested vigorously. "Howard is a wonderful man!"

Wonderful, yes, (Continued on page 81)

Are you in the know?

If you're higher than your squire, should you—

- ☐ Wait for a taller date
- ☐ Come down to earth
- ☐ Play stooper-woman

What if he isn't tall and terrific? A short beau in tow is worth ten highboys on the loose. If you like him, come down to earth: avoid towering hats; swap spike heels for new, smart flats! No need to stoop. Even at "those" times, your bearing can be poised and proud, because with those flat pressed ends of Kotex, no telltale outlines show. And you get extra protection with that exclusive Kotex safety center.

Which gal can wear bangs best?

- ☐ Babs
- ☐ Sue
- ☐ Pam

A hairdo should fit the face that wears it. The pageboy's okay for Pam's oval face. But for chubby-cheeked Sue, bangs are bad. So-o? Babs could use the bangs: they're best suited to her long features. For coiffure-allure, be sure your hairdo befriends your type of face. And for confidence, on problem days, remember Kotex befriends your daintiness. Yes! There's a deodorant inside each Kotex napkin. See how this Kotex safeguard helps you stay charming!

Could she look trim as a bellhop, by—

- ☐ Steaming in a Turkish bath
- ☐ Dusk-to-dawn jitterbugging
- ☐ Wearing a girdle

Now there's the "bellhop look" she'd like! A girdle will help. The kind that belittles her waist, straightens that slump. Girdles are made so cleverly nowadays, you scarcely know you're wearing them. Like Kotex . . . and Kotex belts. For Kotex is made with lasting softness . . . made to stay soft while you wear it. And that adjustable Kotex Wonderform Belt fits so comfortably, smoothly (it's elastic) . . . lets you bend freely without binding.

*T. M. Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

More women choose KOTEX* than all other sanitary napkins

A DEODORANT in every Kotex napkin at no extra cost

movie reviews

by virginia wilson

IT'S A WONDERFUL LIFE

■ Most of us say at one time or another, "I wish I had never been born!" Here's a case where a man has a chance to see what would have happened to the people his life has touched if he, himself, had never existed.

The man is George Bailey (played by James Stewart in a performance that surpasses everything he did before the war). George lives in a small town, and would tell you, meaning it, that he has never amounted to much. But let's not take his word for that; let's see for ourselves. . .

When George is twelve years old, he saves his kid brother from drowning, and gets a deaf ear as a result. Later, when he's working at Gower's drug store after school, George keeps Gower (H. B. Warner) from a prescription error that would have killed a child. But no one else knows about that, and George has forgotten it himself.

He has always wanted to travel, and has saved money from the time he was a child for a trip around the world on a freighter. Shanghai, Capri, Calcutta—these are magic words to George. He can't go to college because he must help his father in the little building and loan company Mr. Bailey owns, and anyway he figures it's more important for his brother, Harry, to get an education. At last, though, George has saved enough money for his long awaited trip, and even his suitcases are packed.

But Fate says "No." George's father dies, and to save the loan company from grasping, evil old man Potter (Lionel Barrymore), George has to take it over himself. He gives up the trip, settles down and marries March Hatch (Donna Reed) and they go to live in a draughty, desolate old house that they get for practically nothing a month. Mary, by sheer magic, makes it a happy home. Then comes a catastrophe precipitated by old man Potter, which makes George see suicide as the only solution. That's when a meek little angel named Clarence (Henry Travers) appears on earth to show George what would have happened if he had never been born. . . . RKO (Continued on page 18)

Uncle Billy (Thomas Mitchell) is a good listener as George (James Stewart) dreams about traveling.

But he must save his father's business from greedy Mr. Potter (Lionel Barrymore)—so he stays home.

George marries his childhood sweetheart, Mary (Donna Reed), and plans an exciting life ahead.

But life gets grim. George has an eerie experience before he realizes it's a wonderful (family) life!

JOHNNY'S DANGEROUS... but that's how women like him!

COLUMBIA PICTURES presents

Dick POWELL · Evelyn KEYES

in

Johnny O'clock

with

Lee J. COBB · Ellen DREW · Nina FOCH

S. THOMAS GOMEZ · JOHN KELLOGG

Screenplay by Robert Rossen

Directed by ROBERT ROSSEN • Produced by EDWARD G. NEALIS • Associate Producer MILTON HOLMES

A Hair "Make-Up"

Created for Your *Color Type!

Created for
BLONDES
Three of Marchand's twelve Rinse shades are created for you! The Blonde shade highlights your natural hair color. Light Golden Blonde adds a touch of copper, while Titian Blonde gives a deeper tone.

Highlights for Every Color Type . . . brownette, brunette and redhead, as well as blonde! Choose the Marchand rinse shade you want . . . dissolve it in warm water, after your shampoo . . . then, brush or pour it through your hair. In a jiffy, dulling soap film vanishes! Your hair is softer and easier to manage, lovelier than ever.

More Color . . . a little or a lot. Marchand's color chart tells you which rinse to use for the effect you desire for your hair. If gray strands are your problem, there's a shade to blend them in with your original hair color!

Absolutely Harmless . . . Marchand's Rinse is not a bleach, not a permanent dye. It's as safe to use as lemon or vinegar and washes out easily the next time you shampoo your hair.

Marchand's

"Make-Up"

HAIR RINSE

6 RINSES—25c • 2 RINSES—10c
Plus Tax

By the Makers of Marchand's Golden Hair Wash

Dead Reckoning: Rip Murdock (H. Bogart) warns Martinelli (Morris Carnovsky) and Coral (L. Scott) he'll stop at nothing to find his friend's murderer.

DEAD RECKONING

Dead Reckoning packs as much suspense as a loaded gun. Humphrey Bogart is terrific, as usual, in one of his casually tough characterizations. Lizabeth Scott makes a sultry foil for him, and William Prince handles a smaller part with smooth precision.

Rip Murdock (Humphrey Bogart) and Johnny Carver (William Prince) were paratroopers together, and now they're back in the States to receive the Congressional Medal. Only Johnny doesn't want a medal, or anything else that involves publicity, so he disappears. Rip has a worried feeling that the kid is in danger, and he goes after him.

This pursuit lands Rip in Gulf City, Louisiana, and a peck of trouble. He soon finds the reason for Johnny's not wanting publicity. Carver is not his right name, and he was arrested for murder before he escaped and enlisted in the Army. The murdered man is a millionaire named Chandler, who had married a night club singer. Chandler had hired Johnny, who was a professor of English, to teach his wife, Coral (Lizabeth Scott) how to speak properly. But Coral taught Johnny about love, and that wasn't in the contract. So there was a fight, and Chandler was shot.

Rip, searching Gulf City for Johnny, wonders why the kid came back here now. He doesn't wonder any more, after he meets Coral. Any man would come back from anywhere for Coral. But apparently there were people who didn't want Johnny around. His body is found in a wrecked car, and Rip grimly decides to stay in Gulf City until he finds out who's responsible, and "takes care" of them.

He is soon so entangled that he couldn't get out if he wanted to, what with finding a corpse in his other twin bed, getting beaten up in a gambling club, and being exposed to Coral's high-octane sex appeal. Nobody but Rip could juggle all those ingredients and come up with a murderer.—Col.

EASY COME, EASY GO

Let me introduce you to Martin L. Donovan (Barry Fitzgerald), known to his Third Avenue neighborhood as Himself. Himself is a shiftless old rascal, the owner of a broken-down boarding house which his daughter, Connie (Diana Lynn), runs as best she can. She operates under difficulties, since Himself usually manages to collect the rent money before she can get at it, and loses it on the horses. This leaves Connie to cope with the tradesmen who come around with long overdue bills.

The boarders, an eccentric lot, all love Connie. They even have a sneaking fondness for Himself who, after all, has an enchanting store of charm and optimism to call on when he gets in a tough spot. Also he can give you the past performance of any horse you name—which makes it strange that he practically never wins a bet. Frequently, when Connie gets discouraged, Himself paints glowing pictures of all the money they'll have when his brother, Tim, shows up one fine day. Tim, it seems, is a deep sea diver, and he'll have a great store of pearls and gold from the ocean depths, and they'll all be rich, with cars and servants and fine clothes.

"That'll be lovely," Connie says, "but in the meantime how about getting to work on that sign you promised to paint for the Twilight Bar And Grill?"

A young patrolman named Whipple (Dick Foran) is in love with Connie, but Himself has no intention of letting her leave him and the boarders just to get married. Craftily, he tells Whipple that she loves another, and when he's forced to name him, picks on Kevin O'Connor (Sonny Tufts), an old beau of Connie's, now safely away with the Seabees. But Kevin shows up, a wounded hero, with money saved to buy Connie an engagement ring. Himself inveigles Kevin into betting on a horse or two and, before you can say "Daily Racing Form," the two of them have been hauled off to court for frequenting a bookmaker. I'm not even going to try to tell you the rest—you'll have too much fun seeing it.

Frank McHugh, Allen Jenkins, Frank Faylen and Rhys Williams are a few you'll meet in this saga of Third Avenue.—Par.

A SWELL GUY

A war correspondent named Jim Duncan (Sonny Tufts), who has a spectacular reputation for bravery under fire, is the "swell guy" of the title. You hear it everywhere in the town of Carmelita—

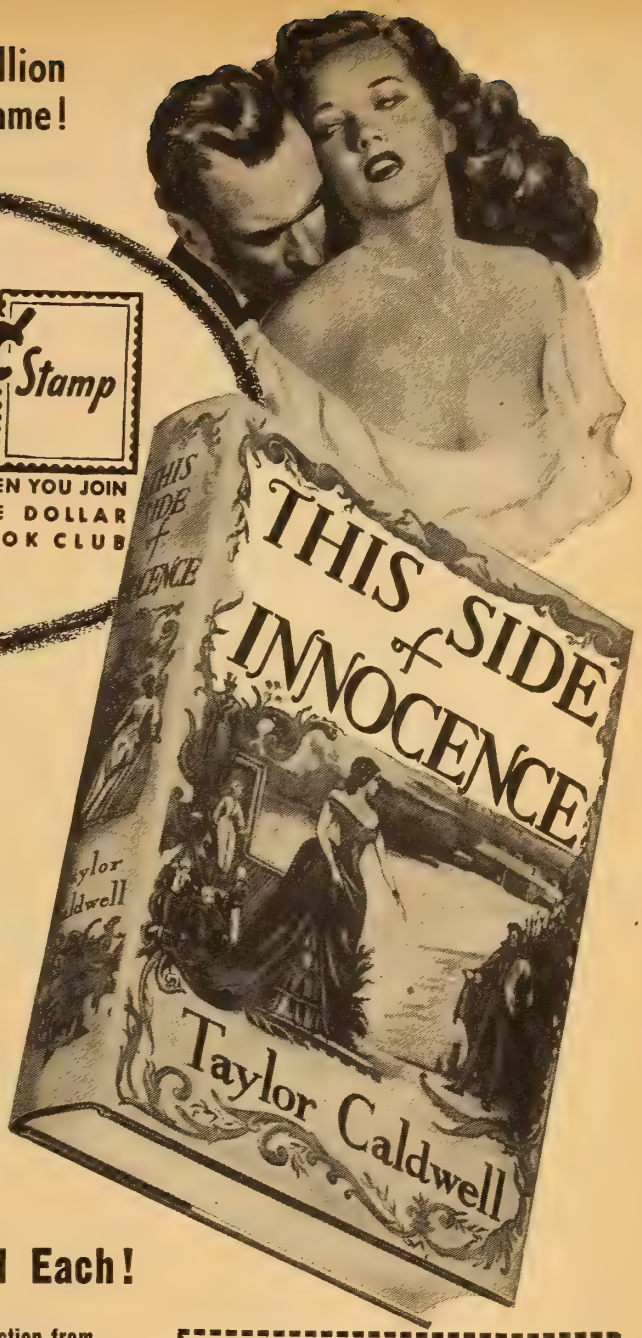
Reckless, Ravishing Amalie! Over a Million Readers Have Rocketed Her Story to Fame!

THIS SIDE OF INNOCENCE

Yours for just a 3¢ Stamp

WHEN YOU JOIN THE DOLLAR BOOK CLUB

Taylor Caldwell's Sensational New Best-Seller!



She Had to Decide Between a Loveless Marriage and a Lawless Love!

AMALIE was a nobody, the daughter of a drunken tenant farmer. Alfred was rich, respectable. But he loved this fascinating, red-mouthed woman, and married her despite his bitter knowledge that she did not, and probably never would, love him.

His half-brother Jerome, the devil-may-care wastrel, the man no woman had ever yet resisted, tried vainly to prevent the wedding. Jerome and Amalie hated each other on sight. He threatened her, tried to compromise her, tried to buy her off—and she laughed at him. Then, suddenly, caught in a passion as ruthless as themselves, they found they were deeply, recklessly in love. Did Amalie choose her loveless marriage—and security, or a lawless love—and disgrace?

"This Side of Innocence," by Taylor Caldwell, is a brilliant, swiftly-moving, and intensely alive story that will stand with the great dramatic novels of the decade. Says the Philadelphia Inquirer: "A masterful piece of story-telling . . . 500 pages so solidly satisfying, so pulsing with life, that one resents their coming to an end." It's at the height of its popularity; everyone's talking about it; it's soon to be a $2,000,000 movie; and yet you may have it now for just a 3-cent stamp when you accept this membership offer of the Dollar Book Club!

The ONLY Book Club That Brings You Outstanding Current Books for Only $1 Each!

YES, the DOLLAR BOOK CLUB brings you newly printed, current books by famous authors for only $1.00 each. This represents a saving to you of 50 to 75 per cent from the established retail price. Every Dollar Book Club selection is a handsome, full-sized library edition, well printed and bound in a format exclusively for members. You are privileged to purchase as many Club books as you wish at the special price of $1.00 each.

Although one outstanding book is chosen each month for exclusive distribution to members at $1.00 each, you do not have to accept a book every month; only the purchase of six a year is necessary. In fact, for convenience most members prefer to have shipped and pay for books every other month.

The Economical, Systematic Way to Build a Library of Good Books

Dollar Book Club selections are from the best modern books, selected from the important new titles submitted by the leading publishers. Best-sellers by such popular authors as W. Somerset Maugham, Mary Roberts Rinehart, Louis Bromfield and Kenneth Roberts have been received by members at $1.00 each, while the public was paying from $2.50 to $3.00 for the publisher's edition at retail. A membership of more than 600,000 enables the Club to offer book values unequaled by any other method of book buying.

Choose Your First Selection from These Best-Sellers

Upon receipt of the attached coupon with a 3c stamp you will be sent a copy of "This Side of Innocence." You will also receive as your first selection for $1.00 your choice of any of these three best-sellers:

- Before the Sun Goes Down, by Elizabeth Metzger Howard. Dr. Dan Field knew the whole town's secrets—yet hid a burning secret of his own! This great novel won the M-G-M $125,000 prize and the publisher's $20,000 award.
- The Foxes of Harrow, by Frank Yerby. The 1,000,000-copy best-seller of the man who parlayed a jewel and a gambler's ruthless cunning into power and a Creole plantation dynasty.
- The Strange Woman, by Ben Ames Williams. The unforgettable story of a "Maine Cleopatra," by the author of Leave Her to Heaven—soon to be seen as a spectacular $2,000,000 movie starring Hedy Lamarr.

Every other month you will receive the descriptive folder called The Bulletin, which is sent exclusively to members of the Club. The Bulletin describes the forthcoming two months' book selections and reviews ten or more additional titles (in the original publishers' editions selling at retail for $2.50 or more) available to members at only $1.00 each. If, after reading The Bulletin, you do not wish to purchase either or both of the two new selections for $1.00 each, you may notify the Club any time within two weeks so that the books will not be sent you. In any case, you may purchase any of the other titles offered for $1.00 each. There are no dues or membership fees at any time.

Send No Money—Mail Coupon with 3c Stamp

When you see "This Side of Innocence" and your first selection and consider that these books are typical of the values you will receive for only $1.00, you will realize the great advantages of free membership in this popular Club. Don't miss this wonderful offer. Mail the coupon now!

DOUBLEDAY ONE DOLLAR BOOK CLUB
Garden City, New York

MAIL THIS COUPON

"This Side of Innocence"* yours for 3c stamp!

DOUBLEDAY ONE DOLLAR BOOK CLUB
Dept. 3 M.M., Garden City, New York

Please enroll me free as a Dollar Book Club subscriber and send me at once "This Side of Innocence" for the enclosed 3c stamp. Also send me as my first selection for $1.00 the book I have checked below:

☐ The Foxes of Harrow ☐ The Strange Woman
☐ Before the Sun Goes Down

With these books will come my first issue of the free descriptive folder called "The Bulletin" telling about the two new forthcoming one-dollar bargain book selections and several additional bargains which are offered for $1.00* each to members only. I am to have the privilege of notifying you in advance if I do not wish either of the following months' selections and whether or not I wish to purchase any of the other bargains at the Special Club price of $1.00 each. The purchase of books is entirely voluntary on my part. I don't have to accept a book every month—only six during the year to fulfill my membership requirement. I pay nothing except $1.00 for each selection received plus a few cents handling and shipping cost.

Mr.
Mrs.
Miss.....
(PLEASE PRINT)

St. and No.....

City..... Zone No. (if any).....

State .....

If under 21,
Occupation..... Age, please.....

*Same Price in Canada: 105 Bond St., Toronto 2, Canada

"Bill and I got another raise!"

"YOU BET I claim part credit for Bill's raise! It all started the night I showed him the I.C.S. ad that told how thousands of fellows take special training—in their spare time—to get ahead.

"We talked it over and Bill sent in the coupon. Soon afterwards, he enrolled for the Machine Shop Course and it wasn't long before 'the boss' began to take notice of the way Bill was doing his work. That's when we got our first raise.

"Why not help your husband the way I helped mine? Clip this coupon and put it next to his dinner plate tonight. It may lead to the chance for which you've both been hoping."

Special tuition rates to members of the Armed Forces. Enrollment under G.I. Bill of Rights approved for War II Veterans.

INTERNATIONAL CORRESPONDENCE SCHOOLS

BOX 4780-B, SCRANTON 9, PENNA.

Explain fully about your course marked X:

☐ Accounting
☐ Advertising
☐ Aeronautical Engineering
☐ Air Conditioning
☐ Aircraft Drafting
☐ Architectural Drafting
☐ Architecture
☐ Automobile
☐ Aviation
☐ Blueprint Reading
☐ Bookkeeping
☐ Business Management
☐ Certified Public Accounting
☐ Chemical Engineering
☐ Chemistry, Industrial
☐ Civil Engineering
☐ Coal Mining
☐ Contracting and Building
☐ Cost Accounting
☐ Cotton Manufacturing
☐ Diesel-Electric
☐ Drafting ☐ Electrical Engineering
☐ Electronics
☐ Federal Tax
☐ Foremanship
☐ Foundry Work
☐ French
☐ Good English
☐ Heating
☐ Heat Treatment of Metals
☐ High School
☐ Highway Engineering
☐ Illustrating ☐ Industrial Engineering
☐ Industrial Metallurgy
☐ Machine Shop
☐ Marine Engineering
☐ Mechanical Engineering
☐ Patternmaking
☐ Plastics ☐ Plumbing
☐ Postal Service
☐ Practical Electrician
☐ Radio ☐ Railroad
☐ Rayon Weaving
☐ Refrigeration
☐ Salesmanship ☐ Secretarial
☐ Sheet-Metal Worker
☐ Spanish
☐ Steam Engineering
☐ Steam Fitting
☐ Stenography
☐ Structural Engineering
☐ Surveying and Mapping
☐ Textile Designing
☐ Toolmaking
☐ Traffic Management
☐ Welding—Gas & Electric
☐ Woolen Manufacturing
☐ _____ (Fill in any other subject)

Name _____ Age _____

Home Address _____

City _____ State _____

Present Position _____ Working Hours _____ A.M. to _____ P.M.

Length of Service in World War II _____

"That Jim Duncan is a swell guy!" Only one person in the whole town knows that Jim is actually a complete heel. That person is his mother (Mary Nash).

She is sure there is going to be trouble as soon as Jim shows up to live with her, and his brother and his family. He says he's tired of bouncing around the world—wants to stay in Carmelita and write a novel. The truth is, he's broke, and no one in the newspaper business wants any part of him. He drinks too much, he's unreliable, and he's bad news for any woman who comes in contact with him.

Marian Tyler (Ann Blythe) is too young to know that much about men. But she's old enough, Jim figures, to know what she's doing, and if she isn't, that's her headache, not his. So when she falls in love with him, he treats her the way he always treats women—"Let's live for tonight, baby, and the hell with tomorrow."

There's another woman to whom Jim is dangerous, too, in a different way. She is Ann (Ruth Warrick), the wife of his brother, Martin (William Gargan). To Ann, Jim represents glamor and sophistication and excitement—all the things she has missed in the little town of Carmelita. He makes her suddenly tired of Martin and her little boy and washing clothes and cooking meals.

Jim soon organizes a floating crap game that is more profitable than it is honest. And gradually rumors get around the town that maybe Jim isn't such a swell guy after all. That he is, in fact, no good. Which isn't true, either, only it takes death to prove it.

Ann Blythe is exceptionally fine as the reckless girl who finds out too late that she doesn't know as much as she thinks. And you'll be surprised at the way Sonny Tufts handles the lead role.—Univ.

BOOMERANG

Dana Andrews represents the forces of law and order with as much authority as a Police Positive .38. He plays Henry Harvey, a young District Attorney who is on the side of the Reform administration in a city where the radio and press are with the opposition. His position is difficult at best. After the murder of Father Lambert, a well-loved Catholic priest, it becomes really tough.

There aren't any clues in the murder, although it was done on a street and half a dozen witnesses saw the murderer. It was at night, and about all they agree on is that he wore a dark overcoat and grey hat—a description which applies to most of the men in the city. The police superintendent (Lee J. Cobb) comes to see Harvey and says they haven't been able to discover any possible motive. Their only guess is that, since Father Lambert was a man with a strong sense of duty, he may have been a threat to some criminal, through something he discovered.

Meanwhile the opposition papers, led by a clever and unscrupulous reporter, Woods (Sam Levene), are banging away at the old theme. "A murderer is among us and the police have done nothing." The police have done something, however. They have had a composite picture made from the descriptions of the various witnesses. It has been circulated around, and has resulted in the picking up of about twenty suspects. Most of them have alibis, but there is one who doesn't. His name is Waldon (Arthur Kennedy). At first he denies that he ever heard of Father Lambert. But the good Father's housekeeper identifies him as a man who came there just a few days before the murder—a man she heard quarreling with Father Lambert, and threatening him.

Several of the witnesses say that Waldron is the man they saw at the scene of the crime. The police are pleased with the solution. Only Harvey has a strange little suspicion that it's too pat to be true; that the real killer is laughing at them.—20th-Fox

THAT WAY WITH WOMEN

Sidney Greenstreet, the fat man who used to convey more menace per pound than anyone on the screen, is no longer a villain. In That Way With Women he plays a retired business man with a heart of gold. Also, he's on a diet. I feel a distinct sense of loss about the whole thing.

The picture, however, is entertaining, with Dane Clark and Martha Vickers taking care of the love interest. It tells the troubles of James Alden (Sidney Greenstreet) who was a happy man when he was working eighteen hours a day as head of the Alden Motor Company. Now Boomerang: Reporter Woods (Sam Levene) heckles district attorney (D. Andrews), who's trying to prevent an innocent man from being convicted.

CHARLES R. ROGERS presents

TOMMY DORSEY · JIMMY DORSEY · JANET BLAIR

in

"THE FABULOUS DORSEYS"

with

PAUL WHITEMAN

and

WILLIAM LUNDIGAN

Sara Allgood · Arthur Shields

Associate Producer JOHN W. ROGERS

Original Screen Play by Richard English, Art Arthur, Curtis Kenyon

SWINGDOM'S GREATEST ... IN ONE GREAT FILM!

BLOW-BY-BLOW STORY OF DORSEY BATTLE TO TOP!

The heart-warming history of their thrilling battle to the top makes one of the most exciting pictures of its kind ever filmed!

Charlie Barnet
Henry Busse
Helen O'Connell
Bob Eberly
Ray Bauduc
Mike Pingatore
Ziggy Elman
Art Tatum
Stuart Foster
and
Tommy Dorsey's Orchestra
and
Jimmy Dorsey's Orchestra

See TOMMY and JIMMY play the hits that made them famous...

"Marie"
"I'm Getting Sentimental Over You"
"Green Eyes"
"Object Of My Affections"
and many more!

Produced by CHARLES R. ROGERS · Directed by ALFRED E. GREEN · Released thru UNITED ARTISTS

Instantly, You'll See the Results of this Famous

3-WAY MEDICINAL TREATMENT

You don't have to wait week after week—try just one application of the Glover's 3-Way Medicinal Treatment tonight — and tomorrow you'll see the difference! Compare the lovelier, natural-looking color tones—the fresh radiance —the sparkling highlights and clear, soft, exquisite beauty of your hair. Get all three today — Glover's Original Mange Medicine — GLO-VER Beauty Shampoo—Glover's Imperial Hair Dress—and use separately or in one complete treatment. Ask for the regular sizes at any Drug Store or Drug Counter—or mail the Coupon for FREE application!

GLOVER'S

with massage, for DANDRUFF, ANNOYING SCALP and EXCESSIVE FALLING HAIR

REPLACEMENT OR REFUND OF MONEY
Guaranteed by Good Housekeeping
IF DEFECTIVE OR NOT AS ADVERTISED THEREIN

FREE TRIAL

Send Coupon for all three products in hermetically-sealed bottles, with complete instructions for Glover's 3-Way Treatment and useful FREE booklet, "The Scientific Care of Scalp and Hair."

GLOVER'S, 101 West 31st St., Dept. 853, New York 1, N. Y.

Send Free Trial Application package in plain wrapper by return mail, containing Glover's Mange Medicine, GLO-VER Shampoo and Glover's Hair Dress, in 3 hermetically-sealed bottles, with FREE booklet. I enclose 10c to cover cost of packaging and postage.

Name .....

Address .....

City ..... Zone ..... State .....

That Way With Women: Two-fisted Dane Clark falls for his boss' daughter (M. Vickers).

he's retired, and the doctor won't let him eat anything but toast, or drink anything stronger than hot water with a slice of lemon, and he feels terrible all the while. Life wouldn't be worth living if it wasn't for his gardener, Herman (Alan Hale). Herman is a lousy gardener but he's a great chef, and, occasionally, Alden steals over to his place for a good meal.

What the old boy needs, though, is a business interest, so he secretly buys a partnership in a gas station. The other partner is an ex-GI, Greg Wilson (Dane Clark). Greg has no use for millionaires, but he doesn't know who Alden really is, since he's using the name of his gardener, Herman. Greg has met Alden's pretty daughter, Marcia (Martha Vickers), at a garden party, and doesn't think much of her, either—he keeps telling himself. Maybe the fact that she ignored him in favor of an out-of-town operator named Andrews (Craig Stevens) has something to do with it. Anyway, he takes her to a ball game and dinner one night, just to prove how little he likes her. They quarrel violently, but have to admit their attraction for each other.

The gas station is flourishing—so much so that a gang of crooks tries to shake down its owners for "protection." Neither Alden nor Greg is the type to pay off a racket like that, but when they don't, they find themselves in plenty of trouble—War.

THIS HAPPY BREED

Some of the finest acting of the current cinema is to be found in this Noel Coward Technicolor production. It's a cavalcade of twenty years in the life of a British family, stretching from the end of World War I to World War II. It is full of quiet humor and, if it is somewhat over-sentimentalized, the acting of Robert Newton, Celia Johnson and Johnny Mills keeps you from realizing it.

Frank Gibbons (Robert Newton) spent four years in the infantry, and is a happy man when he is demobilized in 1918. He and his family move into number 17 Sycamore Road and, although the house is small and a bit damp, at least they're together again, he and Ethel (Celia Johnson), and their children. Ethel's mother (Amy Vaness) comes to live with them and so does Frank's sister, Sylvia (Alison Liggett). They are an unfortunate combination, since the old lady's acid tongue keeps Sylvia in tears or temper most of the time.

Fortunately, Frank is too easy-going to let these disturbances bother him. He likes to drop into the pub of an evening with his friend Bob (Stanley Holloway), who lives next door. Sometimes they have a drink or so too many, and Ethel scolds when they come home. But on the whole Frank is a good husband and an equally good father.

As the children grow up, life gets more complicated. Young Reg (John Blythe) goes all out radical in his ideas during the General Strike of 1926, infuriating his conservative father. "When you're older, my lad," Frank tells him, "you'll find that most of the injustice in the world comes from human nature, not from government."

Queenie (Kay Walsh), their pretty daughter, goes off to work as a manicurist. Instead of marrying the sailor who is in love with her (John Mills), she runs away with a married man. But by the time World War II comes along, the Gibbons family has proved that it, like most middle class families, is sound and strong at the core.—Univ.

SUDDENLY IT'S SPRING

Spring or not, things are tough in the Morely family. Here is Mary Morely (Paulette Goddard) arriving in New York after three years overseas with the WAC. And here is her husband, Peter (Fred MacMurray), greeting her not with kisses and a corsage but with divorce papers for her to sign.

The cause of the debacle is a red-haired dream puss named Gloria (Arleen Whelan). Gloria combines a Botticelli face with a very practical mind. She wants to legalize her romance with Peter, and she wants to do it now. She is furious when he calls her that evening and admits Mary hasn't yet signed the papers. "If I take her out to dinner, maybe I can talk her into it," he suggests, and Gloria agrees, with considerable reluctance.

While Peter is telephoning, Mary encounters a young man with a million dollars and a sense of humor. Jack Lindsey (Macdonald Carey) is the name, and he's a client of Peter's. He surveys Mary, and the situation, and likes the looks of both. He has a feeling they hold possibilities for him. He shows up with Gloria at the Sky Club, where Peter takes Mary for dinner, thereby neatly breaking up the party.

Mary is definitely unhappy. She loves Peter and doesn't want to hand him over to another woman, even as decorative a one as Gloria. Also, Mary's job in the WAC is to conduct a bureau of marital relations. If her own marriage breaks up, so will others she has managed to keep going. She is amused by Jack and flattered by his attentions, but she wants Pete and no one else. She has to leave for Chicago on WAC business the next day, and Peter and Jack follow her. Jack is busy handing out advice. "Turn into the kind of a guy she hates," he tells Peter. "Smoke big, black cigars. Develop a hyena laugh. Tell stories about traveling salesmen." All of which leads to hilarious slapstick, if not to Reno—Par.

This Happy Breed: Kay Walsh loves a married man; worries her mother (Celia Johnson).

ADVICE TO READERS FOR BAD SKIN

Stop Worrying Now About Pimples, Blackheads And Other Externally Caused Skin Troubles

JUST FOLLOW SKIN DOCTOR'S SIMPLE DIRECTIONS

By Betty Memphis

Have you ever stopped to realize that the leading screen stars whom you admire, as well as the beautiful models who have lovely, soft white skin, were all born just like you with a lovely smooth skin?

The truth is that many girls and women do not give their skin a chance to show off the natural beauty that lies hidden underneath those externally caused pimples, blackheads and irritations. For almost anyone can have the natural, normal complexion which is in itself beauty. All you have to do is follow a few amazingly simple rules.

Many women shut themselves out of the thrills of life — dates, romance, popularity, social and business success — only because sheer neglect has robbed them of the good looks, poise and feminine self-assurance which could so easily be theirs. Yes, everybody looks at your face. The beautiful complexion, which is yours for the asking, is like a permanent card of admission to all the good things of life that every woman craves. And it really can be yours—take my word for it! — no matter how discouraged you may be this very minute about those externally caused skin miseries.

Medical science gives us the truth about a lovely skin. There are small specks of dust and dirt in the air all the time. When these get into the open pores in your skin, they can in time cause the pores to become larger and more susceptible to dirt particles, dust and infection. These open pores begin to form blackheads which become infected and bring you the humiliation of pimples, blackheads or other blemishes. When you neglect your skin by not giving it the necessary care, you leave yourself wide open to externally caused skin miseries. Yet proper attention with the double Viderm treatment may mean the difference between enjoying the confidence a fine skin gives you or the embarrassment of an ugly, *un*beautiful skin that makes you want to hide your face.

A screen star's face is her fortune. That's why she makes it her business to protect her complexion against pimples, blackheads and blemishes. Your face is no different. Give it the double treatment it needs and watch those skin blemishes go away.

The double Viderm treatment is a formula prescribed by a skin doctor with amazing success, and costs you only a few cents daily. This treatment consists of two jars. One contains Viderm Skin Cleanser, a jelly-like formula which penetrates and acts as an antiseptic upon your pores. After you use this special Viderm Skin Cleanser, you simply apply the Viderm Fortified Medicated Skin Cream. You rub this in, leaving an almost invisible protective covering for the surface of your skin.

This double treatment has worked wonders for so many cases of external skin troubles that it may help you, too —in fact, your money will be refunded if it doesn't. Use it for only ten days. You have everything to gain and nothing to lose. It is a guaranteed treatment. Enjoy it. Your dream of a clear, smooth complexion may come true in ten days or less.

Use your double Viderm treatment every day until your skin is smoother and clearer. Then use it only once a week to remove stale make-up and dirt specks that infect your pores, as well as to aid in healing external irritations. Remember that when you help prevent blackheads, you also help to prevent externally caused skin miseries and pimples.

Incidentally, while your two jars and the doctor's directions are on their way to you, be sure to wash your face as often as necessary. First use warm water, then cleanse with water as cold as you can stand it, in order to freshen, stimulate and help close your pores. After you receive everything, read your directions carefully. Then go right to it and let these two fine formulas help your dreams of a beautiful skin come true.

Just mail your name and address to Betty Memphis, care of the New York Skin Laboratory, 206 Division Street, Dept. 33, New York 2, N. Y. By return mail you will receive the doctor's directions, and both jars, packed in a safety-sealed carton. On delivery, pay two dollars plus postage. If you wish, you can save the postage fee by mailing the two dollars with your letter. If you are in any way dissatisfied, your money will be cheerfully refunded. To give you an idea of how fully tested and proven the Viderm double treatment is, it may interest you to know that, up to this month, over two hundred and twelve thousand women have ordered it on my recommendation. If you could only see the thousands of happy, grateful letters that have come to me as a result, you would know the joy this simple treatment can bring. And, think of it!— the treatment must work for you, or it doesn't cost you a cent.

PURSUED

In New Mexico, back in 1900, a deserted ranch-house is the scene of a strange reunion which intermingles love and death, the past and the present. The reunion of Jeb Rand (Robert Mitchum) and his wife, Thor (Teresa Wright).

The events that lead up to this scene begin over twenty years before, on a night of violence and bloodshed in this same ranch-house. Jeb was only three then, but he still remembers the tramp of heavy boots, the flashes of gunfire, and the sight and sound of death.

After that night, little Jeb is adopted by a neighbor, Mrs. Callum (Judith Anderson), and raised with her son, Adam (John Rodney) and daughter, Thor. Adam and Jeb never get along together. When Jeb is twelve, someone shoots at him one day and he accuses Adam. Mrs. Callum knows better. She knows it was her brother-in-law, Grant Callum (Dean Jagger), and that the dead fingers of the past are still reaching out for the boy.

When Jeb is twenty, he enlists to fight in the Spanish-American War. He and Adam had tossed to see which should go, and Jeb lost. But he won Thor, who tells him she loves him and will marry him when he gets back. That is enough for Jeb, who makes a good soldier and becomes a much-decorated hero—only to return and find that Adam refuses to let him come back to the ranch. The old enmity between them flares up, and in the gunfight which follows, Adam is killed.

After that, Thor will have nothing to do with Jeb. The death of her brother stands between them. Later, Jeb kills another man—unintentionally—who has been courting Thor. She decides quite coldly and unemotionally that she will marry Jeb, for just one reason—so she can shoot him on their wedding night. But she loves him too much to do it, and now they are here in this deserted cabin, waiting for death, with only one chance in a thousand of getting away.—War.

LADY IN THE LAKE

You've seen Dick Powell and Humphrey Bogart as Phil Marlowe, the Raymond Chandler detective. Now Bob Montgomery has taken over, and with a completely new angle, which will fascinate you.

It's a matter of photography. After the first five minutes, you don't see Marlowe on the screen at all, except when he looks into a mirror. He's just a voice, and you see the action through his eyes. As a result of this technique, it seems as if everything were happening to you.

Marlowe gets involved in this case because he writes a mystery story. He sells it to Adrienne Fromsett (Audrey Totter), editor of a string of pulp magazines.

Lady In The Lake: Detective Marlowe (R. Montgomery) quizzes Leon Ames, Audrey Totter.

The Secret Heart: Penny (June Allyson) can't understand how Brandon (Marshall Thompson) and her stepmother (Claudette Colbert) can smile—not when her own heart is almost broken . . .

Adrienne is an attractive young woman who has calmly decided to marry her boss, Derrace Kingsby (Leon Ames). He has a wife named Crystal, but she has disappeared, three weeks before. Adrienne wants Marlowe to find her so Kingsby can start divorce proceedings.

The last he heard from Crystal was a telegram from Mexico, saying she was with Chris Lavery. Chris (Dick Simmons) is a glorified gigolo, and just the kind of guy Crystal would go for. She is lush, blonde and beautiful, but not bright. Marlowe looks up Chris and gets a fast right to the jaw for his pains. It's bad luck that a couple of days later he finds Chris murdered, and the cops find him.

They aren't enthusiastic over Marlowe's story of a woman who wandered in with a gun she said she found on the stairs. Neither are they interested in his theory that Chris' murder ties in with a blonde who has been found drowned in the lake near Derrace Kingsby's cabin. But the murderer is interested—too much so for Marlowe to escape alive, unless he guesses awfully fast!—M-G-M.

THE SECRET HEART

For the first time, June Allyson has a really difficult role to play and she handles it beautifully. She is Penny Adams, a seventeen-year-old whose life has been thrown off balance by the suicide of her adored father when she was five. Penny doesn't know it was suicide, or that her father had stolen money. She only knows that he is still more important to her than anything in the world. It isn't a normal attitude, and Lee (Claudette Colbert), Penny's step-mother, finally takes her to a psychiatrist (Lionel Barrymore).

He says the only way Penny will get over her fixation is to bring it out in the open. He advises re-opening the old farm in Rhode Island which Lee and Penny and her brother, Chase (Robert Sterling) left after Larry Adams' tragic death. Lee is afraid of what will happen. And she's afraid of meeting again their next door neighbor at the farm, Chris Matthews (Walter Pidgeon). She and Chris were in love before Larry died, although they never admitted it. Afterwards, Lee took the children away to New York and told Chris she could never see him again. She went to work and has been paying off Larry's obligations. Now she will have to see Chris, and she's frightened.

She needn't have been afraid for herself. From the moment they get together, she and Chris know that everything is perfect. They are as much in love as ever, and now there is nothing to keep them apart. Nothing but Penny. She has, incredibly, transferred her fixation about her father to Chris. She is, in her childish but terribly serious way, in love with him. It isn't a pretty situation.

Marshall Thompson, Patricia Medina and Elizabeth Patterson are among the excellent cast.—M-G-M.

NORA PRENTISS

It's no sort of life for a girl like Nora Prentiss (Ann Sheridan)—all this sneaking around corners, spending surreptitious, stolen weekends in the country, because the man she loves is married to someone else. His name is Richard Talbott (Kent Smith) and he is a doctor. He has a wife and two children, and before Nora came along his days—and nights—were respectable, routine and dull.

Nora is a night club singer, a girl who has been around, but not too much. She's still eager, and a little naive about love, in spite of her surface cynicism. She doesn't mean to get involved with Dr. Talbott, but it happens before she realizes it. Then she doesn't care. Nothing matters except their being together.

Talbott knows he can't go on this way. His wife is suspicious, his practice is falling off, he himself is miserable over the situation. Yet he loves Nora too much to give her up. Eventually, she gets an offer to sing in a New York night club, and he persuades her to accept. Perhaps a separation will solve their problem. But on the night before she leaves, two things happen. One is that he suddenly realizes he can't stand to let her go without him. The other is that a patient dies in his office, and it is a man whose general appearance tallies with his own.

So the next day the papers carry a story that Dr. Richard Talbott has been killed in an auto accident. Actually, of course, it is the body of the other man which is found in the car. And Talbott is on his way to New York with Nora. She knows nothing about what has happened, because Talbott told her his wife had agreed to a divorce. "Everything is going to be all right, now, darling," he said. "We'll be together always." He couldn't have been more wrong.—War.

A Glamorous NOW... a lovelier TOMORROW

"Pan-Cake" creates a lovely new complexion; it gives the skin a softer, smoother, younger look

"Pan-Cake" helps hide tiny complexion faults; the exclusive formula guards against drying

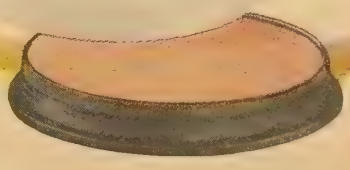
A "Pan-Cake" make-up takes just a few seconds; and it stays on for hours without retouching

BRING new glamour into your life today. Add a delightful new loveliness to your natural beauty with "Pan-Cake" ...in just a few seconds. "Pan-Cake" will bring you many lovelier tomorrows, too. It safeguards your skin against sun and wind that bring drying, aging signs to mar your beauty. "Pan-Cake" was originated by Max Factor Hollywood for the stars of the screen. Now it is the favored fashion of millions. Try "Pan-Cake" for a glamorous today – for a lovelier tomorrow.

Pan-Cake* Make-Up

An Exclusive Formula Protected by U. S. Patent Nos. 2034697-2101843

*Pan-Cake ...Trade Mark Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.



CARPENTER

JUDY GARLAND

in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's Technicolor Musical

"TILL THE CLOUDS ROLL BY"

ORIGINATED BY

Max Factor • Hollywood

Its cleaner, brighter Taste means cleaner, brighter teeth!

New Pepsodent, the only tooth paste containing

Irium, removes the film that makes your teeth look dull—uncovers the natural brilliance of your smile!

Use Pepsodent twice a day—see your dentist twice a year

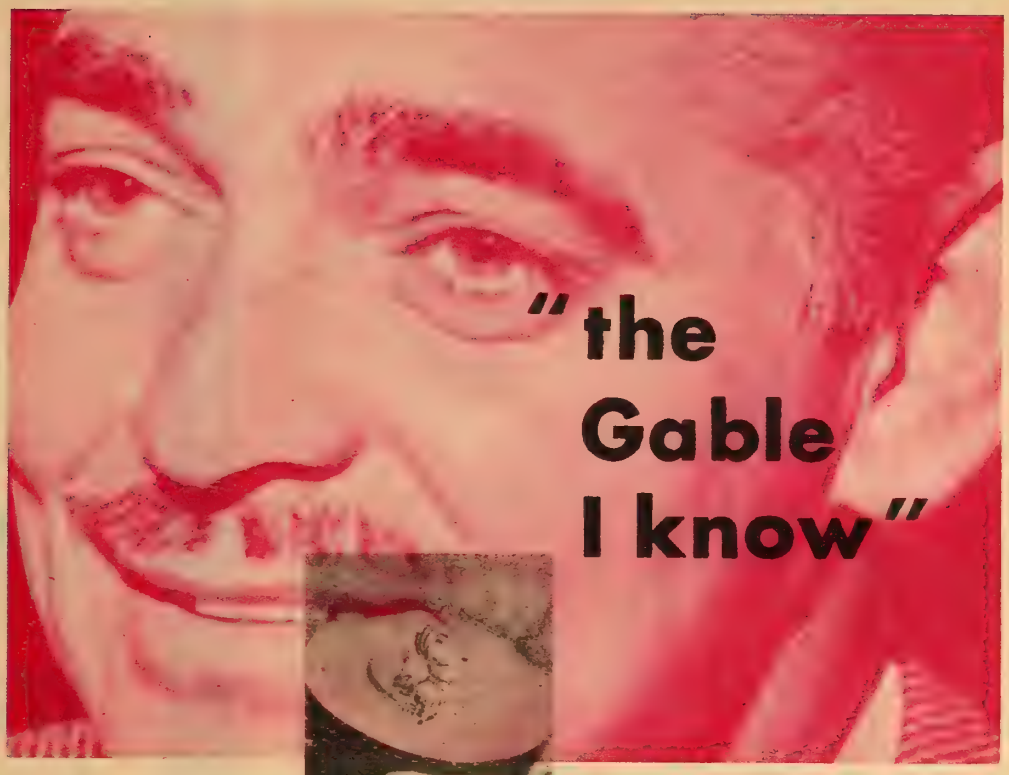
You can't print that!

by Dorothy Kilgallen

■ Some seasons ago, when I was just a baby in the cradle of columning, I learned that any news about Hollywood fascinates the bug-eyed readers of the syndicated item-hunters, but that often the most enchanting stories are ones you can't print—can't print with names, I mean. Utterly irresistible are the tales that drift to a writer's ear from behind the scenes, behind the screens and behind the hands of ladies sipping cocktails. And since nothing gives a columnist a headache faster than gossip locked up in the medulla oblongata, I was forced to devise a method of imparting these stories without embarrassing anyone, particularly the nervous legal gentleman who watches my copy for libel.

My method is very simple and I am about to demonstrate it here. I tell the stories, but I change the names. The facts are true, but the monickers are fictional. In that way I get the whole thing off my mind and you go out of yours trying to figure (Continued on page 88)

RICO
TOMASO



"the Gable I know"

BOBBY SOCKS BRIGADE OR SILK STOCKING SET, GABLE'S GOT THE HEART OF HOLLYWOOD WRAPPED UP IN HIS POCKET

by Hedda Hopper

■ Whenever I get the Horrible Hollywood Blues I take a look at a telegram I have framed right over my desk. It reads, "Thank you, darling. You were right. My love. Clark."

No matter what my trouble may be, one long look at that yellow message and I'm okay. "At least," I tell myself, "there's one regular guy in Hollywood who never changes!" I'm talking about Clark Gable.

Clark sent that telegram when it was pretty important to me.

I had said in my column that he was enlisting in the U. S. Air Corps and I had said it first—what day, when and where. My scoop hit Manhattan streets late one Saturday night. At two o'clock the next morning I got a long distance telephone call in Hollywood. It was the editor of my New York paper.

"The Associated Press denies your story on Clark Gable's enlistment, Miss Hopper," he said. "So does M-G-M. Where did you get your information?"

"I can't reveal the source," I told him, "but it's on the level."

Well, they cut the big news out of the later editions and I didn't blame them. I was on the spot. The only one who could make an honest woman (Continued on page 84)

by billy rose

who wants to be a genius?

■ I had lunch the other day with the head of a Hollywood studio. Out where they grow the gold cocoanuts, when you mention his name half the population faces Mecca and hits its head on the ground. There's an old gag about this executive. He was fishing in a boat with a couple of yes-men. Suddenly he reeled in his line, looked around and said, "Can anybody see us from shore? I've always wanted to try walking on water."

When we got down to the coffee and cigars, he blew a cloud of expensive smoke in my face and said, "How would you like to come out and make a movie?"

"No, thanks," I said, blowing a cloud of cheap smoke back at him. "I'm flattered, but I'd rather stick around New York. I don't want to get any nuttier than I am already!"

I could see he didn't dig me, so I continued, "I'm afraid that after six months of Hollywood I'd get to believe my own press releases. You use the word 'genius' out there as we use the word 'mister' around here. A chunk of celluloid, barely good enough to cut up for banjo picks, is advertised as the greatest thing since kissing. You press a button and last year's Pulitzer Prize winner comes running. You walk into a restaurant and people neglect a real meal to try to smile a hello out of you. Eighty-five million customers want to meet Hedy Lamarr —Hedy Lamarr wants to meet you. After a while you go nuts. You're only human, and you get to believe the applesauce is gold."

"My boy," he beamed, "you've got us wrong. The big people in pictures don't kid themselves."

"Of course not," I agreed. "You hire experts to do it for you. If a man doesn't tell you what you want to hear, you hit him over the head with his own option. Oscar Levant once told a producer he didn't like a certain picture. The big shot raged, 'Who the hell are you not to like it?' I like Oscar's answer, 'Who the hell do you have to be not to like it?' "

The Great Man shook his head. "You're talking about the Hollywood of twenty years ago," he said. "We're not like that any more. There's real dough riding on pictures these days. We can no longer afford yes-men."

"Maybe you can't afford them," I said, "but they still get those envelopes on Saturday. Last year when I was there, I sat in on the screening of a new picture. For my dough it was just another picture. When the lights went up in the projection room, the producer asked me what I thought. To be polite, I said it was a good movie. He turned on me like an angry cat and snarled, 'Only good, eh? Another New York wise guy!' "

The studio chief smiled tolerantly. "Well, perhaps we do kid ourselves a little," he said. "Maybe we do believe our own press releases. But what's the harm? No one ever died from it."

"Did you ever hear of Ivar Kreuger?" I asked him.

"You mean the match king?"

"The same. Kreuger was even richer than you are. Every time a cigarette was lit or somebody got a hotfoot, Ivar got his cut. He was making more in a week than Gable does in a year. One day a newspaper Sunday supplement printed a piece calling him the Mystery Man of Europe. It hinted several kings didn't shave unless this match manufacturer gave them the all-clear to go ahead. It had some mumbo-jumbo about his controlling an empire so big that even Rand couldn't handle it without McNally. Without checking, other editors ran similar pieces. Kreuger read this malarkey and began to believe it. He posted guards around his estate and hired six halfbacks to protect him—from nothing. Financiers, who should have known better, swallowed this Mystery Man hokum and lent him money. He bought mines, railroads, ship lines, forests. He pyramided corporations till he made Insull look like a pushcart peddler. Sure enough, it wasn't long before kings were checking with him before shaving. Then one day a worried auditor shoved a balance sheet under his nose. Kreuger looked it over, went up to his bedroom and put a bullet through his head."

"Interesting story," said the technicolor tycoon, "but what's it got to do with you?"

"Well, it goes to show," I said, "what can happen when you believe your own press releases. And I need a hole in the head like I need a hole in the head."

illustrated by virgil partch

By KIRTLEY BASKETTE

MARK STEVENS LIFE STORY

HE WAS A REBEL RIGHT FROM THE START, WITH A TALENT FOR TROUBLE AND A TERRIFIC TEMPER, BUT A SOUL THAT BRUISED EASY—AND HEALED SLOW • (PART I)

■ Sonny Stevens faced the principal squarely, his brown eyes smoldering under his ginger mop of curls. A red spot where the teacher had slapped him mottled his freckled cheek. He hid his palms, still stinging from the ruler whacks, in his pockets. He was in second grade and he was in disgrace.

The teacher had caught him staring idly out the window behind his book. When she asked him what she'd been talking about, he had said, "I don't know."

"You mean you haven't been listening—again?"

"No I haven't."

"Put out your hands!"

The ruler bit as hard as she could make it. Then she slapped his resentful face and marched him in to the principal. It wasn't the first time. In fact, it was an annoyingly regular occurrence with young Mark Stevens. "Sonny," as they called him then, was plainly a problem child.

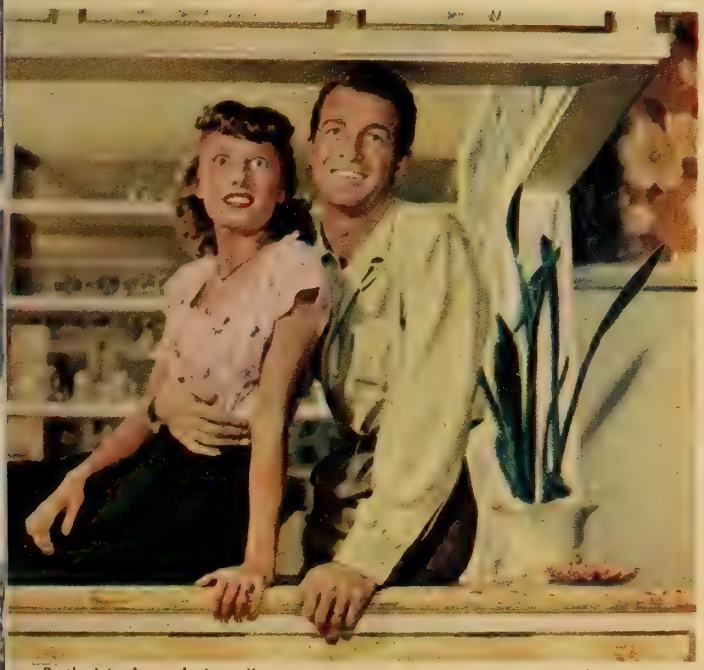
The principal had the familiar, infuriating evidence. His neck reddened. He was mad at the defiant little guy, a fourth his size, challenging him coolly again with his steady, dark eyes.

"Inattention again—hey?" he growled. "What do you do behind your book, if you don't listen?"

"I don't know," said Sonny. "Dream, I guess."

The principal grabbed his strap and pounced. He strapped the taut, unflinching body in a rage. "Now," he panted, "maybe you'll know that you're here to listen and learn—not to dream. Maybe this will wake you up!" He sunk his trembling nails in Mark's neck and pushed him tumbling down the stairs. At the bottom, Sonny Stevens pulled himself to his feet, his rage dulling (Continued on page 105)

The back injury which Mark Stevens suffered years ago still acts up when he's over-worked. After I Wonder Who's Kissing Her Now, Mark went East for radio appearances and a Mayo Clinic check-up.



Both Mark and Annelle were born on the 13th; the 13th was their wedding date, and he signed his first film contract on the 13th. Even Mark, Jr. was scheduled for Sept. 13, but the stork was tardy.

Mark's gift to his wife, on her 21st birthday, was a cluster ring with 21 diamonds. That swank station wagon, complete with portable nursery equipment, was another present for Annelle, but Mark's been using it.

Portrait of an American

■ Gary Cooper has starred in four pictures of mine—and each time I've had trouble. Not with Gary—but with people who think he isn't acting.

I usually keep an assistant director beside me when I shoot, to check and double-check on everything. Screen realism and authenticity are old hobbies of mine. And every time I make a Gary Cooper picture, that kibitzing director will grab my sleeve after the first scene.

"Say," he'll whisper indignantly, "you aren't going to let this guy Cooper get away with that, are you?"

"With what?" I ask, but I know what's coming.

"Why—" he sputters, "he's not even trying! That scene was an emotional one and it fell flat. He didn't get anything out of it! He's just lazy, that Cooper, he—"

"Wait until you see it on the screen," I suggest. "And, meanwhile, let Gary take care of his own acting. Believe me, he knows how!"

When I say that I mean it. And the first rushes always prove it. What Gary did is always right. He has the best sense of timing and technique for a movie camera of any star I know. That's why I'd like to explode an idea that's persisted all through Coop's great Hollywood career: that he's (Continued on page 64)

Gary and Rocky Cooper are looking forward to an African hunting trip later in the year. But before they're off on a safari, Gary will run for president —in State of the Union, with Claudette Colbert as his first-lady-to-be.

Sam Wood (left), who directed Gary in For Whom the Bell Tolls, and De Mille share a mutual admiration for "Hollywood's laziest actor." They're on the Unconquered set.

Audrey Korn gets a cold shoulder from Coop, "The Unconquered." Gary's strong, silent technique even delights the ladies of Sweden, who voted him No. 3 in a national poll.

by cecil b. de mille

TIGHT-LIPPED AS A NEW ENGLANDER, EASY-GOING AS A TEXAN, AND GALLANT AS A SOUTHERN GENTLEMAN—THAT'S GARY COOPER, THE LONG AND LANKY YANKEE.

PUPPY LOVE DOESN'T LAST—THEY SAY. BUT YOU CAN'T PROVE IT BY THE COMOS, WHO MET AT 13 AND MARRIED AT 21.

■ There wasn't any moon, and it wasn't a particularly romantic night. Hot and mosquito-y, and you know how July nights are. Roselle looked over the lads at the wienie roast and found them all sort of wilted and unappetizing. Except one. There was this one guy with warm eyes and a shy smile and the crispest, whitest shirt in the world.

"Who is that?" Roselle asked her chum.

"His name is Pierine," the chum whispered back. "Why?"

"He has a cute nose," Roselle said. A dozen times during the evening she glanced over at him, and each time he was looking at her. After a while he came over and stood near her, and before they went home, he said, "I'm Pierine Como," and she said, "I'm Roselle Belline."

"I know," he told her. "I asked." That was all. Just a couple of sentences. But there was something magic between them. Something beautiful and not quite real. Maybe you don't fall in love when you are thirteen—but you can't prove it by Mr. and Mrs. Perry Como.

They didn't see each other again for a long while. She was at Trinity High, and he was at Canonsburg, a few miles away, and the schools only got together for dances and things once in a blue moon. But months and months later there was a joint dance, and Pierine and Roselle met for the second time. And after that they didn't lose each other again.

They were too young for real dates, but whenever the gang got together for skating and sleigh-riding, for hayrides and picnics, he would manage to stay pretty close to Roselle. When he was old enough to drive a Model-T (one of those racy jobs with (Continued on page 112)

By JEAN KINKEAD

To each his Own

It's the Ferdinand in Perry that makes him prefer staying home sniffing posies to going out. When Roselle does coax him to go dancing, he just "shifts" on the dance floor. "Shifting" is balancing on one foot and then the other!

Of course Ronnie's a little young for the Navy just yet, but Perry's resolved that his son will have an athletic life, unlike Perry's quiet boyhood. Both Comos are natural athletes.

can stars stay married?

By Ida Zeitlin

■ First we went to Clifford R. Adams, who runs the Marriage Clinic for the Woman's Home Companion and knows everything anyone can know about marriage.

"Do Hollywood marriages fracture easier than most?"

"The incidence of divorce," he said in his psychological way, "is greater—" Translated, that means yes.

We said, "Give us eight good reasons," then took the list to one of our favorite Hollywood wives. For that we also had eight good reasons. Nos. 1 to 6, we like to look at her. No. 7, you can count on her for honesty and good sense. No. 8, she's been married to Harry James for three and a half years, and it's a fine marriage.

We found Grable on the set of Mother Wore Tights. At the moment she was wearing a full-length 1907 model, complete with hat and parasol, but tights couldn't have done more for her nor she for them. We settled down to wait, and didn't give a damn how long. It wasn't long enough. When the scene was finished, she came over and we handed her the list.

"What's this?"

"Shoals," we explained. "Or, if you prefer, pitfalls. The eight best reasons why Hollywood marriages fail. As charted by an expert. We'd like to know how you and Harry steered clear of them."

She gave another look, and a smile curved the corners of her mouth. Eve must have smiled like that in the Garden of Eden, when she first discovered the simplicity of the male. "I could— No, never mind. It's an elegant list . . ."

"Then what's funny about it?"

"I'll tell you later. Maybe. C'mon, let's tackle No. 1—"

1. BRIEF COURTSHIP AND HASTY MARRIAGE. THEY DON'T GIVE THEMSELVES A CHANCE TO KNOW EACH OTHER—

"Hmmmm," Betty said, like the quartet on Jack Benny's show. "Well, our courtship wasn't long . . ."

But you can't always measure time (Continued on page 110)

"it's tough,"
says Clifford R. Adams
Director, Woman's Home Companion Marriage Clinic

"it's easy,"
says Betty Grable
Wife of Harry James and star of "The Shocking Miss Pilgrim"

These are the dangers:

1. Short courtship and hasty marriage, primarily based on physical infatuation with little regard for differences in interests, temperament and personality.

2. Few common goals: evidenced by childless homes, separate activities, including careers, and few mutual interests.

3. Spouses who were quite satisfactory in pre-Hollywood days now seem burdensome misfits in this new rarefied and exotic atmosphere.

4. Hectic work schedules and strenuous personal appearance tours, all interfering with companionship and talking things over.

5. Columnists' rumors, belief another mate will further a career, desire for publicity, encourage break-ups.

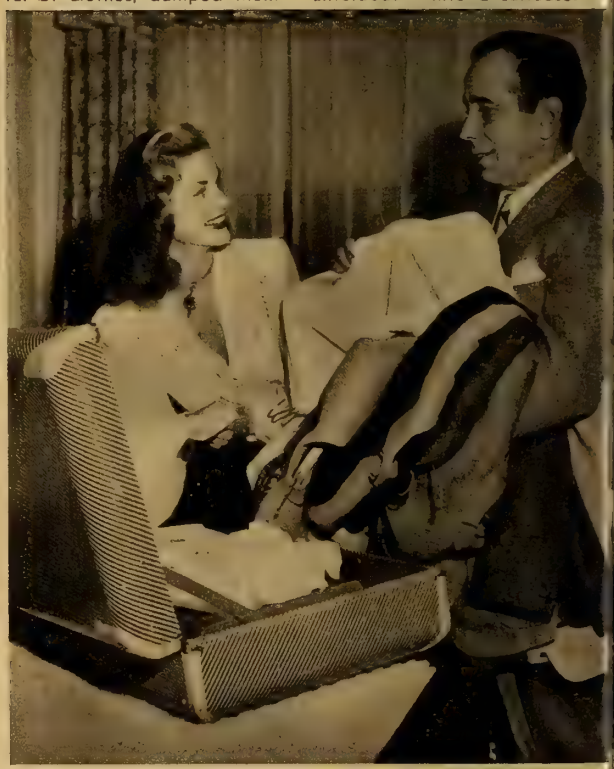
6. Financially independent wives, knowing that remarriage is easy, wanting careers of their own and jealous of their husbands, become quickly dissatisfied.

7. Constant temptations, with their aftermath of triangles and infidelity, create strains that destroy mutual trust and affection essential in marriage.

8. The threat of age and the vain hope that a youthful mate will miraculously restore vitality, spur many to divorce.

Bogey's not the least bit shy about telling Lauren off if he doesn't like her makeup or clothes. Because she thinks he's a good "supervisor," L. usually agrees. See the famous "whistle" bracelet from Bogey that Lauren wears?

Lauren did the packing for both of them on their San Francisco jaunt, and Bogey was no help. He brought over armsful of clothes, dumped them —unfolded!— into a suitcase.



The manager of the Sir Francis Drake Hotel gave the Bogarts golden keys to their suite, but what impressed Humphrey most of all was the phone. At home they have none, and Bogey's threatening to train carrier pigeons!

TRAVELING'S FUN, BUT FOR LAUREN AND HUMPHREY, THERE'S NO PLACE LIKE THE PEACE AND QUIET OF THEIR OWN LITTLE MADHOUSE . . .

By Jack Wade

She's no Tugboat Annie, but Lauren pleases Bogart right down to the ground by doing all the cooking on their boat. Her own idea of a good time is pictured below: a book, a box of chocolates, and Bogey around.

oth Bogarts are in Dark Passage. Bogey took time off from reading ie novel to listen to radio reports about the coal strike, in which e was deeply interested. He's extremely current-events conscious.

that's life with the Bogarts

■ Mrs. Humphrey Bogart, having spent a pleasant two hours and several hundred dollars in a Sunset Strip antique shop, stepped out of the warm, brightly lighted showroom to discover, with only mild dismay, that it was raining cats and dogs. She turned up the collar of her coat, said a mental goodbye to one of her favorite hats, and started across the street.

At the same moment, a uniformed chauffeur, carrying an enormous umbrella, stepped out smartly from the opposite curb. They met in the middle of the intersection.

"Allow me, milady," said Frederic Nathaniel Clark in his clipped British accent. Holding the umbrella so that the water dripping down from its edge struck just the back of her hat and ran down her neck, he escorted Mrs. Bogart regally to her car, before the amused eyes of a dozen motorists.

Fred had come through again.

When they had reached the relatively small, French Provincial house, and Fred had gone to put the car away, she stood for a moment in the hall listening to the silence. The few things she had bought that afternoon were for the living room, and for a moment she deliberately denied herself the pleasure of walking into it and visualizing the new pieces in place. Then she heard sounds at the service entrance, of Fred coming in and of Harvey, the Boxer (named after a certain play for reasons of the Bogarts' own), greeting him; and the spell was (Continued on page 102)

HELLO. GORGEOUS!

It's no pose, this desire to be Mrs. Phil Harris first and a movie star in between. Rumor was that the studio got mad when she turned down The Razor's Edge, but Zanuck says Alice is always welcome.

LIFE WITH PHIL IS AS GIDDY AS THEIR RADIO SHOW, BUT ALICE FAYE WOULDN'T CHANGE THE SCRIPT FOR ANYTHING

By Carl Schroeder

■ The big man picked the little woman up in his arms and carried her across the threshold. Once inside the hotel room, he put her down by the window that looked out over the San Francisco harbor.

Alice Faye said, "Why Phil, how nice—just like another honeymoon!"

Phil looked down, across the golden blonde head snuggled on his shoulder, at the tip of his wife's snub nose. Then he said, expressively, "Yeah."

"Why Phil, what's the matter?"

The blonde head left the broad shoulder. Alice looked up into the weatherbeaten, laugh-lined face of the guy she married. "Come on, Phil," she persisted. "This was going to be so wonderful—what's happened?"

"What's happened?" Phil retorted. "That's what I want to know. Maybe we should have our heads examined. Yesterday we are home. Today we are in a hotel room in San Francisco. I don't like it."

"You don't like San Francisco?"

"Naw, Baby—not that. San Francisco's fine . . . for everybody but us. We got a swell home in the valley and we got no business up here. What are we trying to prove, anyway?"

"Phil—"

"Yeah, Alice."

"I wonder what the kids are doing now."

"Me too."

"Phil—"

"Yeah, Alice."

"Phil, would you mind awfully if we checked out right now and caught the next train home?"

And that is how it happened that Mr. and Mrs. Phil Harris never got around to the second honeymoon. The first was good enough for them.

Alice Faye and Phil Harris were married twice. The first time was in Ensenada, Mexico, on May 12, 1941. The way Phil told it on their radio program,he had driven (Continued on page 122)

No matter how much Greer Garson primps him, Gogo's canine vanity will never be the same. He was rejected as a war dog, and hasn't been able to hold his muzzle up since.

"Don't believe everything Gogo says," protests Richard Ney. "He does not always win." Greer's a tiddlywink fan from 'way back, plays between scenes of new pic, A Woman Of My Own.

A CHANCE MEETING, A HASTY INTRODUCTION, AND WHOOSH! SUDDENLY GREER GARSON'S BRIEFEST ENCOUNTERS TURN INTO UNFORGETTABLE MOMENTS

By Howard Sharpe

Brief ENCOUNTER

■ Greer Garson harbors the quaint and charming belief that her road to glory is paved with other people's generosity. This story is dedicated to all those dear friends, sung and unsung, who have given her a helping hand when she needed it most.

When Greer was eight she won, to her great surprise, third prize in her class for scholarship. "If I can do that without even trying," Greer said to her mother, "maybe I can win first prize next year if I really try." And she did. She kept on winning prizes, in fact, until it became apparent she was really rather a bright child and that, given enough opportunity and help, she might be able to win a scholarship to pay her way through school—perhaps even the University.

In school, Greer made the hockey team, the tennis and swimming teams, and the fencing club and then her doctor discovered that she had a heart murmur and would not permit her to do any violent exercise. While the other girls played games she had time for (Continued on page 95)

Burt Lancaster taught Christine Miller (with him in I Walk Alone) the trick to a movie "knock-out." (You sock the other guy's hand; on film, it looks like a right to the jaw.) When she tried it, his hand was too close to his face and he nearly went down for the count.

Christine lives in a house full of Bergmans-in-training. When they learned she was Burt's new leading lady, they gave her no peace until she promised to invite him over some Sunday afternoon. Their kibitzing confused Burt, spoiled his gin rummy game.

Cards were ruled out, so Christine led Burt to the back yard for a fast badminton workout. Her penalty as loser was to draw his caricature on flagstone patio.

WHERE BURT LANCASTER GREW UP, A POLICEMAN WAS A COP, SCHOOL WAS SOMETHING YOU IGNORED, AND THE LAW WAS YOUR OWN TWO HANDS.

By Hank Jeffries

He's a Killer!

Burt scored such a solid hit in The Killers, that producer Mark Hellinger has him penciled in for the lead in his next film, Brute Force. But love had first call when Burt married his home-town (New York) sweetheart, Norma Anderson, at Yuma, Ariz., on Dec. 30.

■ Burt Lancaster came out of the projection room where he had just been shown the rushes of his latest Hal Wallis picture, Desert Fury, and barely avoided knocking down the Famous Columnist who was standing outside. "Darling," she said, "how lucky! I'm doing a profile on you next Sunday and I wanted to ask you how you want me to handle your marriage."

He gaped at her in astonishment. "How did you find out about that?"

"Why—I thought everybody knew about it."

"I'll be darned," he said. "Well, okay—but just don't mention her name for a while. D'you mind? She's a New York girl, and she's working as a secretary, and it might embarrass her with her employers. Time enough for that in a couple of months, when we're married."

"You're going to *re*marry her?"

The tall young man and the Famous Columnist stared at each other in silence for a long minute. Then light broke over the Columnist's face. "Good heavens," she said, "I was talking about your ex-wife. I didn't know—but you've given it away, haven't you?"

(Continued on page 82)

Little mother

BETTY HUTTON WAKES UP SUDDENLY AND SMILES INSIDE. THERE'S A BABY IN THE NEXT ROOM, AND WHEN SHE YAWNS, IT'S A SMALL MIRACLE.

By Abigail Putnam

Papa Ted Briskin prepared for twins. (Note twin pair of booties over bed.) He heaved a big sigh, though, when "they" turned out to be Lindsay Diane, shown at 10 days. Betty (of Perils of Pauline) was so lonesome for Ted, she came home in one week.

■ The baby was already a week late, so Betty asked Cassie to whip up a banana cream pie. "Sure as shootin'," said Betty, "if we have banana cream pie, the baby'll come before I get a chance to eat it."

Dinner was set for six. At five-thirty the pains started.

Two minutes later Betty's doctor was saying to get her down to the hospital. Two minutes after that Ted had her in the car. They didn't even stop for the bags, which had been carefully packed and ready for three weeks.

As they drove off, Betty turned a transfigured face on Ted. "What did I tell you?" she crowed. "Banana cream pie—"

At first the baby was expected around midnight, and there was quite a reception committee. Ted's sister and brother-in-law, Rose and Fred, had come right down after dinner. They were followed by Frances and Van Heflin, who'd heard the news when they dropped in at the house. At 11 or so, Sue and Alan Ladd arrived. By that time Baby Briskin had decided to stand them up.

"Not till morning," said the doctor.

Rose had brought sandwiches for Ted, but he (Continued on page 126)

Strictly for laughs

Liza May Minnelli only cries when she's got a good reason—like being christened. "I knew she'd be sprinkled with a few drops of water," says Judy, "but she looked more like a baby duck taking her first bath."

Judy's stand-out performance in "Drive In," on the "Suspense" radio show (she's rehearsing here) sparked her ambition to be a dramatic actress. So she'll try a Broadway play shortly.

■ Judy Garland had reached the boiling point. She felt a small flame growing along the roots of her hair as she sat alone in a dingy office, waiting.

She looked at the clock. She'd been waiting for thirty minutes, with other appointments stretching out ahead of her like arrivals and departures on a bus schedule. Judy began to pace the floor and to think that it was perfectly all right to have practically grown up on one studio lot, but if you are the girl everybody has known since she was knee high to a contract, people are going to start taking unfair advantage.

The clock said that Judy had been pacing the floor for almost forty-five minutes, and Judy thought that any second it would start laughing right out loud.

The door opened. A brisk, attractive, blonde lady in her middle twenties skidded in, somewhat out of breath.

"I'm Kay Thompson," she announced.

Judy froze.

"I know," she retorted. "I'm the Statue of Liberty. They set me up in here eight years ago."

"Look," Kay declared, evenly, "I'm completely, absolutely, thoroughly sorry. Something went wrong with a number down on the (Continued on page 119)

The Minnellis are happy about Judy's new contract with M-G-M, which spikes reports that she would say goodbye to her studio. She'll be Gene Kelly's girl again in The Pirate.

Judy talks things over with Kay Thompson and her husband, Bill Spier, producer of "Suspense." Kay is Judy's singing coach and "my best critic and severest friend." Liza bawls at Judy's voice; gurgles at Kay's.

THE BORESOME FOUR-SOME—THAT'S WHAT JUDY GARLAND CALLS THE MINNELLIS AND THE SPIERS. BUT WHEN A LAUGHING JAG HITS 'EM, WHO WANTS TO GO HOME?

By George Benjamin

modern screen goes skiing

■ Turhan Bey is one of those hardy people who has tried everything rugged and athletic. He began skiing for the first time at the age of twelve. That was in Austria, in Sennering to be exact, and his companion was a man named Telalkahrt, a champion Scandinavian skier. Turhan was fond of the sport from the beginning. In his extreme childhood he was often ill and therefore barred from sports, and it had been his constant dream to ski. Since that time, he has projected himself down hills in Switzerland, Germany, Norway, Turkey and the United States.

Turhan feels that skiing in America is still in its adolescence, that only in Europe, which offers such slopes as the Tyrol and the Bavarian mountains, is the sport practised in its advanced stage. Yet he believes that it will one day soon be one of the most popular sports in America, both in New England and the West. In general, skiing is easier in America. It is not as cold, and it is much safer. Europeans must avoid high altitudes in sunny climes. If the sun is too warm, the snow melts, begins to move, and envelopes the skier. This is known as an avalanche and means no more pork chops or breathing for anyone in the vicinity.

Turhan, with love of the sport firmly lodged within him, has known fear on skis only once. This was (Continued on page 117)

Just back from Guam, Turhan Bey whisked Yvonne de Carlo to Snow Valley, 3 hours' drive from L.A.

Turhan gets set for diagonal run. Despite six feet of snow, sun was hot.

Antoinette Clay, 4, traded pointers with Turhan, the expert; then beat him in a down-hill run!

After a dozen spills, Yvonne (in Song of Scheherazade) was ready for lunch.

It's a Heavenly Age!

Joan is nuts about sister Mary's six-months-old baby, Richard —"Rusty" to the family. Could be because she's his god-mother! It's the first grand-child for proud Papa Brodell.

Mrs. Brodell's too scared to hold Rusty—it's so long since she held Joan on her knee. Mike, Joan's wire-haired terrier who went blind, has passed on, and Yankee now rules the house.

Mary and Joan visit at each other's homes often, amuse their parents with the sister act they did in vaudeville. Joan's just bought a Chrysler town car —and shocked everyone by driving it all the way back from Chicago.

JOAN LESLIE'S OLD ENOUGH TO VOTE, GAME ENOUGH TO FIGHT, AND BUSTIN' TO SPREAD HER WINGS—AND FLY!

By Arthur L. Charles

Joan Leslie is thrilled with the Oleg Cassini-designed clothes she'll wear in her first Eagle-Lion film, Repeat Performance.

■ The bell of a particular house on Rose Street in Toluca Lake, California, rang with a very commanding tone.

Doorbells, Joan Leslie mused, can ring a number of ways. Respectfully, indicating a messenger with a special delivery letter. Ambitiously, suggesting a hopeful salesman. Timidly, as on the arrival of the little girl next door who would please like to borrow a cup of sugar.

Joan stole a quick look at herself in the mirror on her dressing table. The face was as good as it ever would be—but the hair! She tucked away a straggling strand and rushed to the front door, expectantly.

Hmmm—what a handsome man! Lean and tall, with sandy hair and a twinkle in his eyes as though he were ready to share a brand new joke without first saying, "Stop me if you've heard this one." That's exactly what he was going to do.

"Miss Leslie?"

"Yes?"

"I have something here for you."

That little flicker of anticipation disappeared from Joan's mind.

"Just a second," she pleaded, almost closing the door. "I think I left something burning on the stove."

Then Miss Leslie turned and fled—not to the kitchen, but to the telephone. She dialed briskly and quickly reached her party. (Continued on page 98)

QUEEN FOR A DAY

SHE WAS QUEEN OF THE NEWSPAPER GUILD'S BALL —AND HER IDEA OF A PERFECT KING WAS LON McCALLISTER

By Christopher Kane

1. Poor Atlas, with the weight of the world on his shoulders, frowns down on Lon McCallister and Mary Snee. An autograph hunter (left) snagged Lon near Rockefeller Center's International Building, wouldn't let go!

2. Romance on ice: Mary, who'd just been elected Queen of the Newspaper Guild's Ball, felt it was only queenly to say "Yes" when Lon suggested they go ice skating at the Rockefeller rink.

3. "This isn't ice, it's banana skins," muttered Mary, who looked anything but dignified on skates. Lon staggered to her rescue, but ended up, Mary swears, doing more holding than helping!

6. "Gee!" murmured Lon as they toured the News Bldg., "was I that far from home?" Mary had the News meteorologist point out Lon's former Army bases.

4. "Let's see," debated Mary after they'd given up skating and gone to lunch at El Borracho's Kiss Room, "should I take the chocolate . . .?" Lon was more interested in warming up his frozen fingers.

. Well, it's called the Kiss Room, isn't it? And what with the spiration of the ceiling and walls, which are decorated with famous stresses' lip prints, what could they do but be decorative too?

7. Lester Toloff, News photog, posed Mary with great care—aren't they fellow workers? Mary's in the Addressograph Dept., giggled when Lon asked her to "addressograph" him a letter.

■ First of all, there was this girl named Mary Snee. She'd just been voted Miss Page One, and she was going to be crowned Queen of the Newspaper Guild's Page One Ball at New York's famous Waldorf-Astoria, and John Frederics gave her a hat and somebody else gave her a big cosmetic kit and 20th Century-Fox promised her a screen test, and she was very happy.

Then they said to her, "Mary, what would you like more than anything else?" Just like the genie, in Aladdin. Go on, kid, name it

(Continued on the following page)

Queen for a day

All the champagne you can drink? Nah, you're only eighteen years old. A trip to the moon on the next space ship?

And Mary blinked her big blue eyes. "A day with Lon McCallister?" she whispered.

So somebody called up MODERN SCREEN, and asked Al and Henry to play Santa Claus, and Al and Henry called up Lon, who was in New York, and said, "Look, we've got this beautiful little girl over here—" and there was a click on the other end of the phone.

McCallister had hung up, and was pulling on his coat. His alter ego, Ray Sperry, whose leg almost got broken in the rush, stared. "Where are you going?"

"Got a date with a beautiful little girl," Lon said.

Ray stood up. "Fine." Then he put on his overcoat. He liked beautiful girls, too.

That was how it all started. Lon and Mary met, grinned at each (Continued on page 96)

9. Hot dogs for a queen? Sure thing! Didn't Mrs. Roosevelt serve them up for the Queen of England? Besides, Lon simply can't pass a wiener without drooling. Neither can Mary. So pass the mustard . . .

8. Waiting for your ship to come in, especially if it's that Statue of Liberty boat, is cold business. But it really isn't bad with plenty of hot coffee and someone to wait with you.

10. Dancing in a dream . . . to the wheeze of a push-box on the boat. Mary snagged her nylons, so Lon just had to start in humming, "I'm dancing with a doll with a hole in her stocking."

11. Lon knew better than to wear a hat; Mary held tight to hers and let the breeze rip. "She's carrying one big torch," remarked Lon . . . meaning the statue.

12. Liberty at last! They didn't stay long with only an empty thermos bottle to keep them warm. Lon, who's now in The Red House, was wishing he had any color house right then—with a fireplace, maybe, to warm his toes.

13. The Waldorf's Wedgwood Room is the perfect end to a delightful day. By then, Lon and Mary had swapped so much talk they felt like old friends.

14. No, Lon didn't swipe that piece of pastry at the El Borracho. He got it right there in the Wedgwood Room. Jean Sablon, Mary's pet singer, teased Lon about Bob, Son of Battle, claiming that the dog in the picture would steal the scenes!

FROM OUR LONDON CORRESPONDENT—AN INTIMATE PORTRAIT OF BONNY DEBORAH KERR, WHOM METRO HOPES TO CO-STAR WITH GABLE IN THE HUCKSTERS.

She and her husband, Tony Bartley, rent an apt. in town, but do their real living at their cottage in Sussex. Here, they grow vegetables and roses, play tennis like mad and never discuss "the cinema!"

Deborah loves dancing, concerts and shopping, but would rather tramp in the woods with her dog. She hates dressing up, loves tweeds and is wild about her role in The Adventuress.

Bach and Beethoven top her list of pet composers, but seat her at a piano and probably boogie-woogie will swing out! Good art and books are next in order of preference.

By C. A. Lejeune

Gable's got her!

■ She's the talk of the town—England, that is. Falling heir to a pocketful of clothing coupons or a shiny new Cadillac wouldn't have generated as much envy among Deborah Kerr's actress friends as has the exciting news that Metro's called her to Hollywood to test for The Hucksters—opposite Clark Gable, no less! There's no guarantee, of course, that she'll finally get the role, but for that matter—who can predict tomorrow morning's headlines . . . ?

The first impression you get of Deborah is of an eager face with enormous, candid, blue-green eyes, which look at the world as if they found it very new, rather big, but pretty nice. After that you notice her shining, heavy, dark-red hair, and the way she wears it, back from the temples, smooth and glossy as a horse-chestnut.

Deborah is tall for a film star—5 feet, 7 inches—slimly built, moves beautifully, and knows how to carry clothes. She also knows how to choose them. She is shy of meeting strangers, but has the art to hide it. Partly from breeding, and partly from sheer kindness of heart, she cannot bear to hurt people. She is really interested in other people's interests, and when you talk to her, she has a trick of listening in an eager way, lips just a little parted, like a child who is hearing a particularly good fairy story. When she talks about the things she loves, like music and horses and her handsome aviator husband, her voice gets quick and excited. Her voice gets very quick and excited when she talks about her first trip to America (Continued on page 92)

ED SULLIVAN'S RADIO AWARD TO Bing Crosby

One of Bing's biggest thrills was knowing the late Damon Runyon, famous newspaper writer. With another Irishman, Morton Downey, they loved to sit in Stork Club, swap tall yarns.

Bing's first success came as one of Paul Whiteman's Rhythm Boys (Bing, Harry Barris, Al Rinker, above). Among his recent honors was N. Y. Paramount Theater's selection as its all-time star.

IT was as long ago as 1925 that Bing Crosby stepped nervously on the stage of the Clemmer Theater in Spokane, Washington, cleared his parched throat and signalled with a frozen smile to the house organist to finger the introduction to "Red Hot Henry Brown." The 21-year-old Gonzaga University kid has been singing ever since, although the Clemmer Theater audience, that day, had no crystal ball to reveal that here was a home-town boy who, through the enlarged focus of radios, phonograph records and movie screens, was destined to become internationally famous.

Bing tells me that his father passed along the singing talent which has made the son of a Crosby and a Harrigan world famous. "Pop was never a professional," says Bing, "but in all of the amateur musical productions in Spokane, Pappy contributed a robust tenor to Gilbert and Sullivan operettas—Pinafore and things like that. From my mother, who was a Harrigan, I think I got an Irish heritage that gave me a feeling for the profession."

I asked Crosby to re-shuffle the 22 years of his professional life and figure out some of the things that had given him his greatest thrills. "Naturally, I'd have to start off with Going My Way," smiled Bing, puffing at his pipe, "and 'Too-ra-loo-ra' and Barry Fitzgerald and Leo McCarey, (Continued on page 125)

Wednesday is Bingsday

Listen to Bing Crosby on Philco Radio Time, his one and only radio program.
Every Wednesday at 10 P. M. in the East,
9 P. M. everywhere else. ABC Network and many additional stations.

Bing Crosby, star of Philco Radio Time, enjoying the sensational Philco 1201

The amazing new way to play records, invented by Philco. You just slide a record in and it plays automatically . . . no lid to lift, no tone arm to set, no bother with controls or needles. An overnight sensation . . . the largest selling radio-phonograph in the world. Available now at your Philco dealer.

PHILCO

Famous for Quality the World Over

PORTRAIT OF AN AMERICAN

(Continued from page 34)

slow and awkward—just a great big, naturally good looking hunk of man who doesn't know beans about acting and doesn't have to. I've heard people who ought to know better tag Gary that way. They couldn't be farther off the track.

I've directed a great many stars in my thirty-five years in Hollywood. Gary Cooper knows the art of acting as well as any of them. He's casual and smooth as silk, he acts from deep inside, he never overacts and he always knows exactly what he's doing and why. As for being lazy—let me tell you a story:

The first picture in which I ever directed "Mister Cupper," as I call Gary, was The Plainsman. He played Wild Bill Hickok and Wild Bill could draw and shoot a six-shooter faster than any American who ever roamed the West. The star who played him had to do what Wild Bill did once, outdraw and out-shoot three gunmen at once who were out to "get" him.

two-gun gary . . .

One day, when we met for rehearsals, I handed Gary two old-fashioned, single-action Colt 45's and a brace of holsters.

"Here," I said. "Maybe you'd like to play around with these for a while."

Gary turned the shooting irons over slowly in his big hands and his steely blue eyes glistened. He loves guns. He buckled on the holster belt and started slipping the six-guns in and out right there.

"Wait a minute," I told him. "You can't wear these the way they do today—with the gun butt back. Wild Bill always wore his backwards, with the butt foremost. That makes it tougher to draw and slip back. You have to cross your arms."

Coop's eyes narrowed. "Yeah," he said, "Thanks."

That's all he said and that's all I said about the guns during the next six weeks until we came to the shooting scene, and I was hoping and praying Gary could do it right. If he did, he was Wild Bill Hickock to a terrifying T. If he couldn't, he was just another actor, because Wild Bill's dexterity was his trademark. I don't mind admitting I didn't see how Gary could match his fabulous gunplay for the accurate eye of a camera.

When we shot the scene, Gary's guns were out and blazing in three directions before his attackers had theirs out of the holsters. I yelled "Cut" happily. But even then I didn't know what a miracle of action I'd witnessed. I thought maybe my old eyes were just a little slow. So when the film was developed I took it over to the cutting room. I wanted to see how Gary had done it.

We took the film clips, one by one, and put them under a magnifying glass. Now, a movie camera is a very fast thing indeed—quick enough to catch every split second of action. But even under that careful scrutiny, there was almost no camera record of Gary Cooper's lightning draw. In one frame the guns were in Gary's holster—the next they were out and blazing. The cutter shook his head. "Gary almost beat the camera."

It wasn't until weeks later that I dragged the secret out of Gary. He'd practiced every day of those six weeks during every spare minute at home until he could whip those 45's in and out like lightning.

Cooper is one of the fastest action men I ever met. He can rein a horse to miss disaster in a rough riding scene quicker than any western star I know since Tom Mix. He never has to stop and think to act right. He does it by instinct.

When I have a story that shouts "Gary Cooper" to me, I start building it around Gary, shaping it to the clean, manly American personality I think he gives the screen more than anyone in Hollywood. I want to be sure I have what is perfect for Gary Cooper before I call him in to see me. And I want to be sure I have a yarn to spin that will get Gary excited.

I remember when I wanted Gary to star in Northwest Mounted Police, I was in sort of a spot. Gary owns a conviction—and a valid one usually—that if he's to be the romantic hero of a movie then he ought to get the girl. Well, in the first picture he made for me, The Plainsman, he hadn't got her, because Gary got killed in that. Now again my story didn't have a beautiful prize for Coop in the end.

"Gary," I told him as soon as he'd tossed his hat on my desk and sprawled on the sofa, "you don't get the girl in this one, you know."

Gary straightened up indignantly, as if he'd been slapped.

"Why not?"

"Because," I said, "she likes another fellow better."

He asked, "Why should she?" He wasn't conceited. But he was intrigued.

I had him interested and a little sore, I could see, so I changed the subject. "Yep," I nodded, "the other guy gets the girl—but you get the last line—and it's a humdinger!"

"What is it?" He was sitting on the edge of his seat now. I didn't answer that for a while. I launched instead into my story and began with the final scene: "A Northwest Mountie sergeant is riding along with the girl. Back of them you're riding with the bad man you've been after all during the picture. A mountie always gets his man, you know. He's the prize of the picture. Well, the sarge turns to the girl and says, 'Come on, Sweetheart.' Then they ride away and leave you."

Gary had wounded indignation all over his face. I could see him about to grab his hat and walk out of my office.

"Wait a minute," I said. "You're jilted. You sit there stunned. Then you look over your shoulder and see this brutal character you've captured sitting there trussed up on the horse. Gary—think what your face looks like, what your voice sounds like when you yank the rope and growl at the ugly mugg, 'Come on, sweetheart!'"

"I'll play it," Gary said, grinning broadly.

I think folks look upon Gary as the American of our story books, the perfect frontiersman, the walking ideal of every American kid's dreams when he reads about Kit Carson, Jim Bridger, Daniel Boone or Davy Crockett. I've always thought Gary's power is in his steel blue eyes. Whenever I shoot him in a Technicolor picture I always spot blue somewhere on his costume to bring out the piercing color of his eyes. Gary comes through best, too, when he's pitted against an adversary. I always play for that, too, by opposing him with a strong he-man actor. Some of the best conflict scenes I have ever filmed were made in Unconquered, with Gary versus Howard Da Silva and big Mike Mazurki. In a scene in the picture several persons step in to keep Gary and the giant-like Mike from flying at each other's throats. Gary, observing Mike's frantic efforts to get at him, said, "Okay, you men hold Mike now. One guy's enough to hold me."

On the screen, I prefer Gary in rawhide knots and buckskin fringe with a six-shooter at his side or a long rifle across his knee, but I didn't hesitate a minute to cast him as Doctor Wassell, a hillbilly American country doctor from Arkansas who found himself in a situation remote from his native hills but acted exactly as American heroes have always acted.

The only time Gary is a bad actor is when he is called on to say or do something that doesn't ring true to him inside. If it isn't satisfactory to Gary's acting conscience, he's stiff, awkward, and unreal.

When we were making Dr. Wassell, we came to the climactic scene where Commander Wassell receives the Navy Cross for his heroism. Gary was self-conscious. We were shooting the scene during the war. Lots of men about then were winning the Navy Cross in real life. For him to be photographed receiving that honor when other Americans were losing their lives seemed all wrong to him and made the scene distasteful to do. He couldn't look like a hero receiving that medal because he—Gary Cooper—hadn't really won it.

I told him this wasn't Gary Cooper getting the medal. It was Corydon Wassell, an American hero, who deserved it.

After all his years as a star, Gary still shrinks from praise which, I can assure you, is rare in Hollywood actors. So I never tell him how good he is. Maybe if he reads this he'll know.

My little granddaughter, Cecilia, aged 10, came on the set of Unconquered to watch Grandfather make movies one day and told Gary what she thought.

"You know, Mister Cooper," said Cecilia, "you're Grandfather's pet. He uses you in all his pictures. But," she added, "you're really very nice looking and you act very well."

That's about as strong a compliment as Gary can take face to face and even that made him blush. But truth comes from the mouths of babes, and what Cecilia said is true. Gary Cooper is a pet of mine. I've always admired him and I still do—as a man and as an actor.

What Gary thinks of me I'm sure I'll never hear expressed in words. Gary doesn't wear his thoughts or his feelings on his sleeve. But he's never said he didn't like me—which is almost equal to a burst of emotion—from Gary Cooper!

Frances Ramsden . . .

soon to be seen as leading lady in Preston Sturges' "Sin of Harold Diddlebock"—one of 1947's most important movie events, because it returns Harold Lloyd to the screen.

Frances poses for MODERN SCREEN in a two-piece turquoise butcher rayon, with the new longer blouse; little collar and big patch pockets in smooth cocoa. The dress is by Majestic. Also yellow or pink with navy pockets; black, navy or brown with white; beige with brown. Sizes 10 to 18. $12.95.

And now look at Frances' shoulder. Remember last month when we predicted that epaulets were going to be worn all over the place? Well, they are! This one by Jordan is gold-finished with a sprinkling of rhinestones. Price, $1. To find out where to buy these fashions, turn to page 75.

Modern Screen
fashions

by Constance Bartel, Fashion Editor

one of these suits is for you

2 For you who like classic tailoring . . . curved revers, big pockets. Grey or tan wool tweed. Sizes 10 to 18. By Joselli $35

3 The very new long jacket suit cut to flare out in back. Rayon gabardine in yellow, blue, aqua, pink. Sizes 12 to 20. By Lombardy $15

1 Slim and simple, with a scroll of beading and a curving jacket. Pacific wool in navy, brown or grey. Sizes 10 to 18. By Gladdy Colleen $25

To find out where to buy these suits, see list of stores on pages 75-76

4 The swank of pure simplicity. All wool in lime, aqua, black, navy, red, peacock blue or white wine. Sizes 10 to 20. By Joselli
$35

5 Up and coming fresh young junior suit. All wool brown tweed jacket with brown skirt, or black tweed with black. 7-15. By Judy 'n Jill $30

6 Beautifully cut, beautifully simple grey wool flannel—a fabric that takes to all your accessories. Sizes 10 to 18. By Joselli $35

6

one of these suits is for you

7

8

8 Cardigan suit with one-button closing and slanting pocket flaps. Rayon gabardine in ice cream colors. 10-18. By Gladdy Colleen $25

11

11 If you crave color—a blazing orange jacket with dark blue skirt. Aqua with blue, gold with grey. Wool and cotton. 10-18. By Sacony $23

7 Slick long jacket suit, with a yoked high-collared neckline, shining buttons. Blue, aqua, or winter white wool. Sizes 12-20. By Suzy Perette $24

9 Button interest on a cardigan jacket suit. All wool shetland in grey, pink, green, aqua, blue, coral, gold. Sizes 10 to 18. By Joselli $30

10 Look closely to see the soft shadow plaid on this weskit-front suit. All wool, in red, aqua, black, others. 10-18. By Donnybrook $30

12 News-making long jacket again—with pocket flaps accenting the hips. Dexter wool, in blue, beige, aqua, tan. 12-20. By Lombardy $23

13 Darling junior suit with jaunty shoulder flaps. Tan and brown, or green and white striped wool. Sizes 9 to 15. By Joselli $35

To find out where to buy these suits, turn to list of stores on pages 75-76

what a cute Print!

Crisp beige and white rayon, with a scattering of tiny black squares. Notice the demure little tie at the throat, the waist-curving black patent belt, the three-quarter cuffed sleeves. Sizes 9-15. $12.95
By Jonathan Logan.

Bright little dress in tuchsia and blue stripes—sprinkled with love-letter bowknots. The tie at the neckline can be crossed, as shown, or tied in a whopping big bow. Printed rayon. Sizes 9-15. $14.95
By Donna Hale.

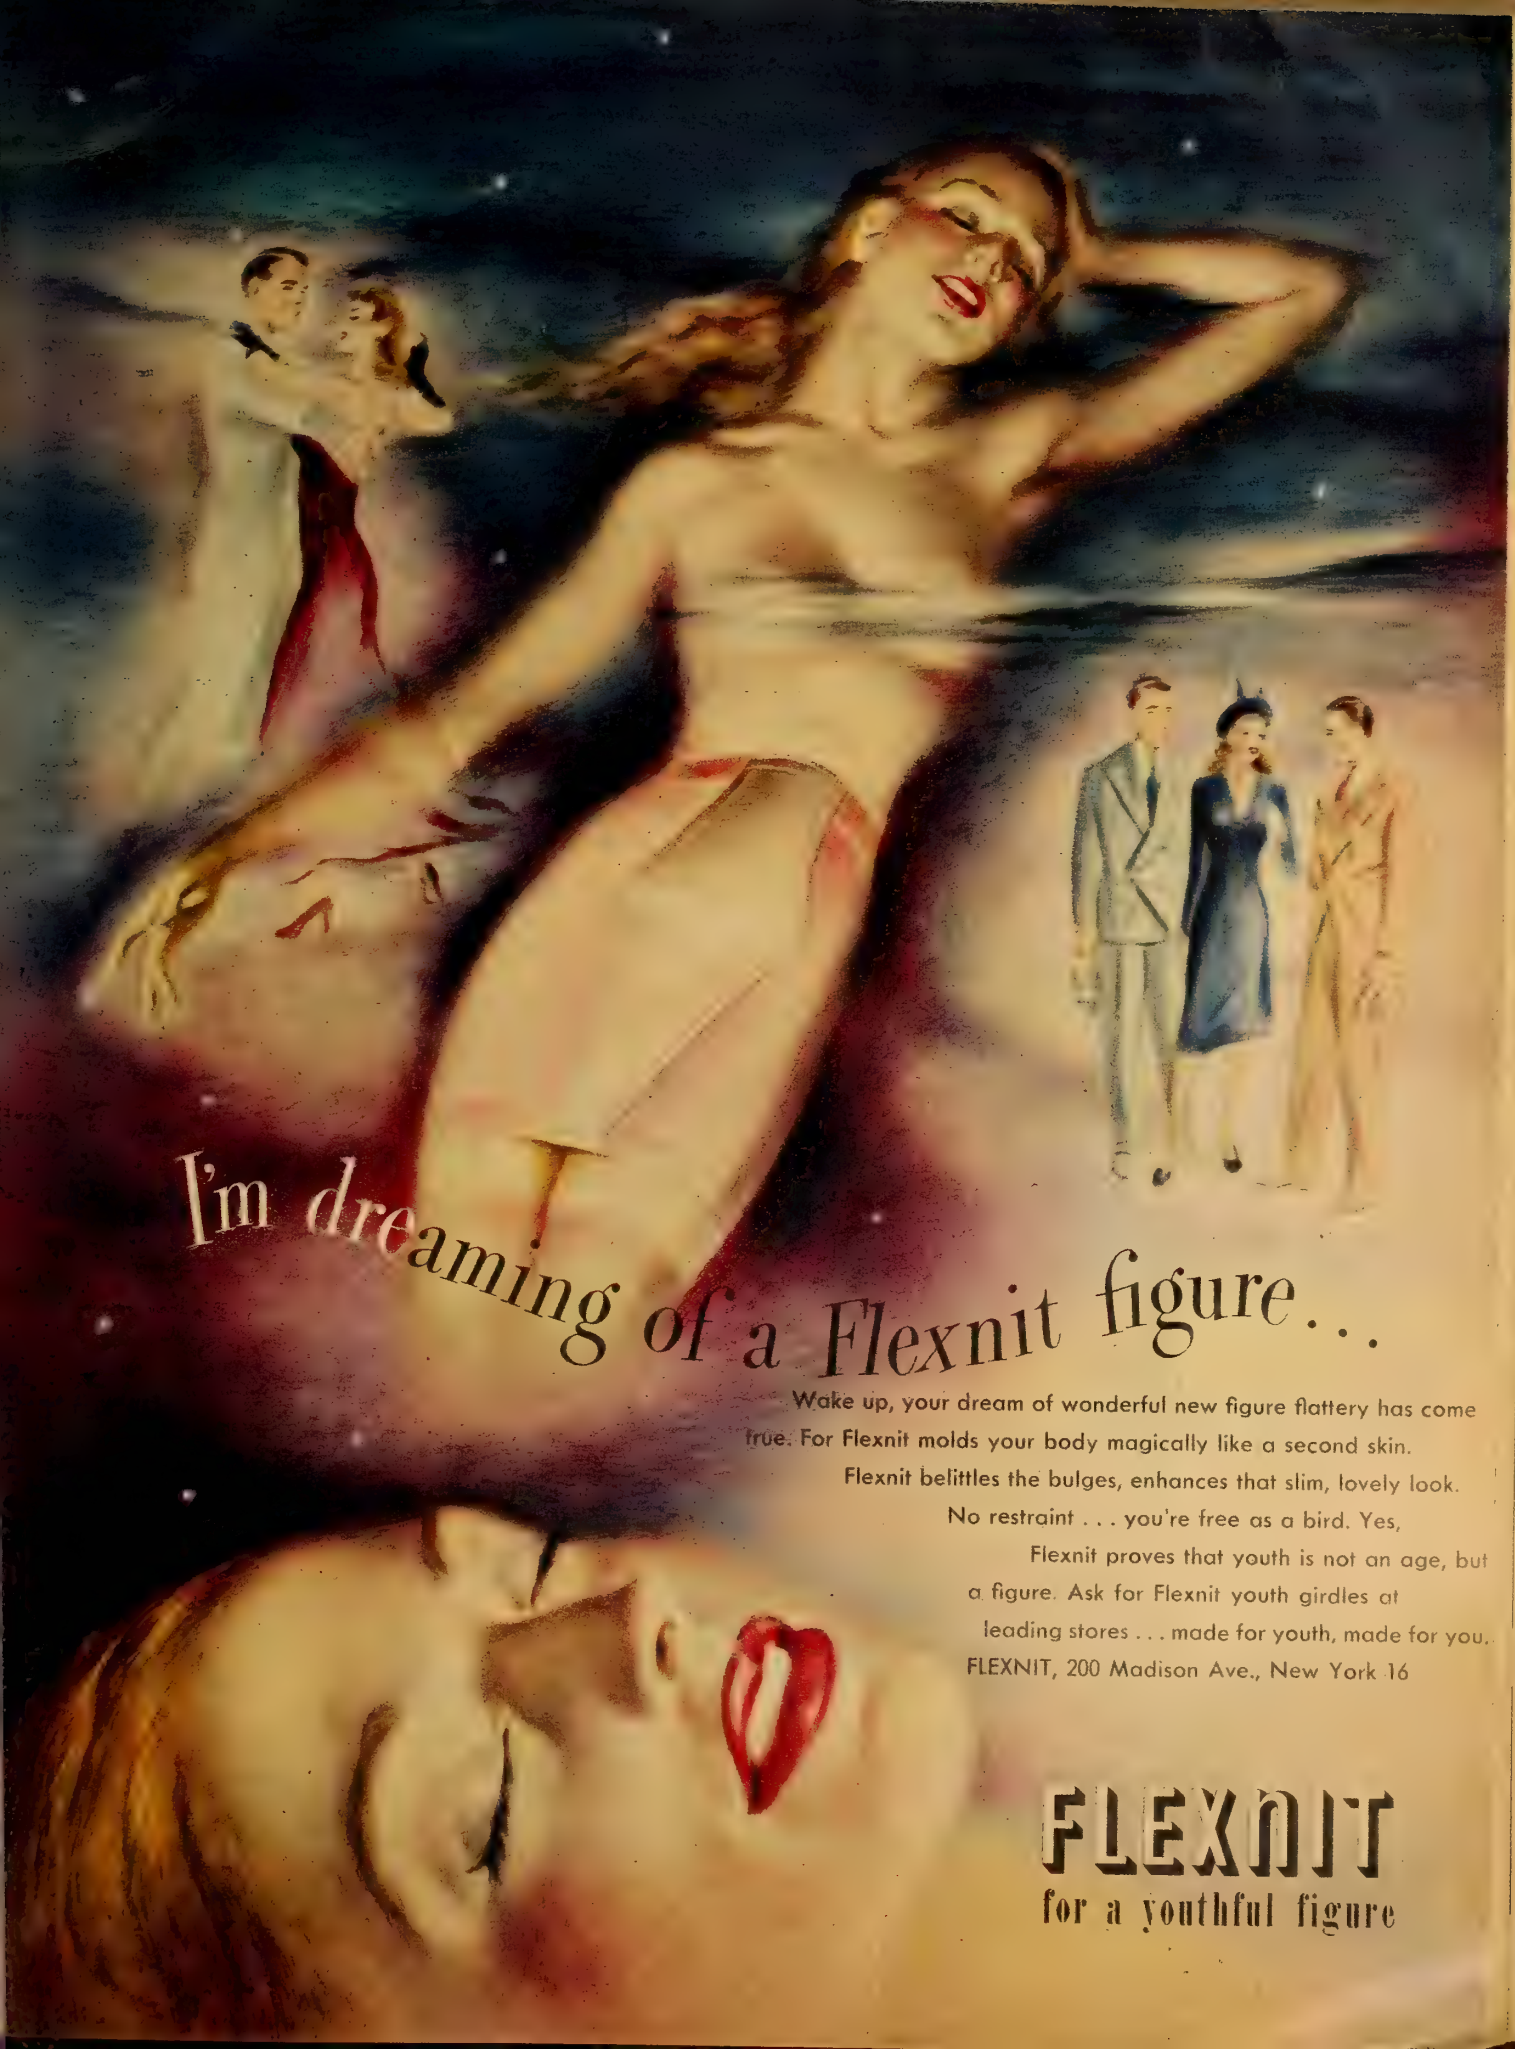
THIS IS THE TIME OF YEAR

WHEN YOU CRAVE A GAY

PRINT JUST TO HURRY

SPRING ALONG A LITTLE

To find out where to buy these prints, turn to page 76



I'm dreaming of a Flexnit figure...
Wake up, your dream of wonderful new figure flattery has come true. For Flexnit molds your body magically like a second skin.
Flexnit belittles the bulges, enhances that slim, lovely look.
No restraint . . . you're free as a bird. Yes,
Flexnit proves that youth is not an age, but a figure. Ask for Flexnit youth girdles at leading stores . . . made for youth, made for you.
FLEXNIT, 200 Madison Ave., New York 16
FLEXNIT
for a youthful figure

Deep cuffed sleeves and a blue leather belt. By June Bently in Dan River's Cordspun. 9-15. $10.95

It's not a minute too soon to Pick Cottons

■ Think it's too early to buy cottons? Unh, uh. It isn't. Not if you want the pick of the prettiest, like these. The cotton crop is coming up earlier and earlier these days—and somehow the nicest are the ones which bloom while the snow still flies. So snatch them now, flaunt them later. Naturally, if you live in the sunny south, enough said.

On this page, early bird's choice—all crisp, all fresh, all singing blue and white. And when we say it's a Dan River fabric—you know these dresses wash and wear as only good cotton can.

Two-piece dress with red belt, shiny studs. By Joan Miller in Dan River's Cordspun. 9-15. $14.95

Off-shoulder picture dress with drawstring neck. By June Bently in Dan River's Starspun. Sizes 9-15. $10.95

To find out where to buy these cottons, please turn to page 76.

Brilliant New CUTEX really rates with Young America!

College girls, career girls, high-schoolers wear it . . . love it . . . swear by its long-wearing qualities! A special ingredient, used only in the NEW CUTEX is what makes it so enduringly alluring. Test it yourself and see! Put NEW CUTEX on your one hand . . . any brand on the other. See how NEW CUTEX laughs at peeling . . . defies chipping. See if you don't love its greater luster, too!

P.S. Ask for "Deep Velvet"—the NEW after-dark shade Young America is clamoring for!

WHY, THEY'RE ALL WEARING THE

Donna Hale.

PRINT VERSION
Shantung with a sheen—scattered with tiny cotton bolls. In luggage or green. Sizes 9 to 17.
$15

POLKA VERSION
75 denier (that means super-fine) crepe. Grey with chartreuse dots, navy with white, aqua or gold with luggage. Sizes 9 to 17.
$15

PLAIN VERSION
Solid! Solid color rayon crepe in powder blue, aqua, grey, toast, gold, orange. Sizes 9 to 17.
$15

Just to prove you can't have too much of a good thing:—
one body-beautiful dress in three different spring fabrics.
Like plain?—printed?—polka?
Take your choice!
Dress by Donna Hale.

To find out where to buy these fashions, turn to page 76.

BUYING GUIDE

Turquoise dress worn by Frances Ramsden
(page 65)

Boston, Mass.—Filene's
Brooklyn, N. Y.—Abraham & Straus
Los Angeles, Calif.—The May Co.
Nashville, Tenn.—Harvey's
New York, N. Y.—Arnold Constable
Washington, D. C.—The Hecht Co.

Epaulette worn by Frances Ramsden
(page 65)

Boston, Mass.—Jordan Marsh Co.
Brooklyn, N. Y.—Abraham & Straus
Detroit, Mich.—Crowley, Milner Co.
Easton, Pa.—Orr Co.
Los Angeles, Calif.—The May Co.
New York, N. Y.—Bloomingdale's
Philadelphia, Pa.—John Wanamaker Co.
San Francisco, Calif.—The Emporium
Seattle, Wash.—The Bon Marche

"ONE OF THESE SUITS IS FOR YOU"
(pages 66-69)

Suit No. 1

Boston, Mass.—Filene's
Chicago, Ill.—Chas. A. Stevens Co.
New York, N. Y.—Arnold Constable
Washington, D. C.—Woodward & Lothrop

Suit No. 2

Chicago, Ill.—Chas. A. Stevens Co.
New York, N. Y.—Macy's
Washington, D. C.—The Hecht Co.

Suit No. 3

New York, N. Y.—Macy's
Philadelphia, Pa.—Strawbridge & Clothier Co.
Washington, D. C.—Woodward & Lothrop

Suit No. 4

Boston, Mass.—Chandler's
Chicago, Ill.—Chas. A. Stevens Co.
New York, N. Y.—James McCreery

Suit No. 5

Boston, Mass.—Jay's
Washington, D. C.—Woodward & Lothrop

Suit No. 6

Chicago, Ill.—The Hub
New York, N. Y.—Macy's
Philadelphia, Pa.—Blauner's

Suit No. 7

New York, N. Y.—Arnold Constable

Suit No. 8

Boston, Mass.—R. H. White Co.
Chicago, Ill.—Chas. A. Stevens Co.
Washington, D. C.—Woodward & Lothrop

BESTFORM

*YOUR CHANCE FOR FAME... Pictured is lovely Joan Smith, winner of the last Stardust Beauty Contest, now a Walter Thornton Pin-Up Girl. Enter our 1947 Contest now. YOU may be the lucky winner of $500 first prize or 27 other awards! Just send recent non-returnable photo, with height, weight, bust, waist and hip measurements before May 31, 1947. Decisions of famous beauty judges are final. Mail entry to P. O. Box 65, Station F, N. Y.

Which Twin has the Toni?

(and which had her permanent at a beauty shop?)

"No one could tell our permanents apart—can you?" asks the Toni twin, Kathleene Ring of Chicago..."My Toni Home Permanent looked soft and lovely from the start! No wonder my sister says after this we'll be Toni Twins!"

Yes, you can give yourself a lovely TONI home permanent for your date tonight!

This twin test shows you how beautiful a Toni Home Permanent really is—so soft, so smooth, so natural looking. No trick to give yourself a Toni, either. Easy as rolling your hair up on curlers. And it's so comfortable. You have a lovely permanent in just 2 to 3 pleasant hours at home—no sitting under a hot dryer. And your Toni lasts as long as a $15 permanent. That's why every hour of the day another 1000 women use Toni. That's why you'll want to get a Toni Home Permanent Kit today. On sale at all leading cosmetic, drug and notion counters. Kathleene, the twin at the right, is the one with the Toni Home Permanent. Did you guess?

Listen to "Give and Take" C. B. S. Network Every Saturday 2 P. M., E. S. T.

Toni
HOME PERMANENT
THE CREME COLD WAVE

Suit No. 9

Chicago, Ill.—The Hub
New York, N. Y.—Gimbel's
Washington, D. C.—S. Kann Sons & Co.

Suit No. 10

New York, N. Y.—Oppenheim, Collins
Philadelphia, Pa.—N. Snellenburg Co.
Washington, D. C.—The Hecht Co.

Suit No. 11

Cleveland, Ohio—The Higbee Co.

Suit No. 12

Philadelphia, Pa.—Strawbridge & Clothier Co.

Suit No. 13

Chicago, Ill.—Chas. A. Stevens Co.
New York, N. Y.—James McCreery

"WHAT A CUTE PRINT!"

Bowknot print
(page 70)

Boston, Mass.—Filene's
New York, N. Y.—Russek's
Washington, D. C.—Woodward & Lothrop

Beige and white print
(page 70)

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Martin's
Detroit, Mich.—D. J. Healy

"IT'S NOT A MINUTE TOO SOON TO PICK COTTONS"

Wide-striped dress, and off-shoulder dress
(page 72)

Boston, Mass.—Jordan Marsh Co.
Philadelphia, Pa.—Lit Bros.
Washington, D. C.—The Hecht Co.

Narrow-striped dress
(page 72)

Boston, Mass.—Filene's
Los Angeles, Calif.—The May Co.
New Orleans, La.—D. H. Holmes Co.
New York, N. Y.—Bloomingdale's

"WHY, THEY'RE ALL WEARING THE SAME DRESS!"

Polka, print and plain version
(page 74)

Boston, Mass.—Filene's
New York, N. Y.—Russek's
Washington, D. C.—Woodward & Lothrop

If a store in your city is not listed write: Fashion Editor, Modern Screen 149 Madison Ave., N. Y. 16, N. Y.

LETTER FROM THE FASHION EDITOR

Dear You:

Hello! . . . and we might as well confess immediately that we're going to talk about the very same subject we sounded off on last month. You remember (we hope!): how you can dress bee-yutifully, on just a handful of dollars.

In fact, you might say we're going to harp on the subject—because if there's anything we're convinced you want to do, it's look like a million—no matter how midget your budget.

Okay. So in this issue, we've rounded up thirteen—count 'em!—thirteen suits. Each one is the last word in pure fashion. And there's so much variety, that you're bound to find the one suit that was absolutely born for you. For example, if you're a girl who likes to wear the latest—soonest—there are several of those swanky new long jacket suits—which you tall girls can carry off with quite an air.

Or if you like the simplest of tailoring, take your pick of our chosen classics. If femininity is for you—there are some soft dressmaker suits. And, of course, we've included junior suits for you teeners. And no! you don't have to break the bank to buy your favorite among our super suits. Not one of them costs more than $35—and they range from that figure—downward!

As for hats to wear with your suit—the stores are bursting with all kinds of spring - must - be - coming bonnets. But there is one special type of chapeau we'd like to point out to you—because we think it's going to be the success hat of the season. We mean the cute little knitted or crocheted number—that you yank down close over your head and angle any way you choose. We show five of them—numbers 1, 4 and 6 on pages 66 and 67, and numbers 10 and 11 on pages 68 and 69. If you don't lose your head to these hats—we'll eat ours!

Plus scarves and fresh cotton gloves—you've got a costume that will get you many a second glance on the Avenue.

Especially if you top it off with one of our favorite epaulettes on the shoulder—remember, we're placing our money on that one as the jewelry scoop of the spring.

Here's to your stopping the show in your slick suit and fixings . . .

Connie Bartel

YOUR CHANCE FOR FAME... Pictured is lovely Joan Smith, winner of the last Stardust Beauty Contest, now a Walter Thornton Pin-Up Girl. Enter our 1947 Contest now, YOU may be the lucky winner of $500 first prize or 27 other awards! Just send recent non-returnable photo, with height, weight, bust, waist and hip measurements before May 31, 1947. Decisions of famous beauty judges are final. Mail entry to P. O. Box 65, Station F, N. Y.

Send for this big...

FREE

CATALOG

of HOLLYWOOD FASHIONS

100 pages of gorgeous misses' and women's styles — suits, coats, dresses, blouses, slacks, lingerie, etc. Also men's-wear, shoes, luggage, gifts, housewares, etc. Low in price, high in quality —

MONEY-BACK GUARANTEE

Send one dime (no stamps) to cover mailing & handling charges

BETTY CO-ED OF HOLLYWOOD

Dept. F-23
6253 HOLLYWOOD BLVD.
HOLLYWOOD 28, CALIFORNIA

BETTY CO-ED OF HOLLYWOOD, Dept. F-23
6253 Hollywood Blvd., Hollywood 28, Calif.
Please send catalog. I enclose a dime.

Name_____

Address_____

City_____ Zone_____ State_____

Keep your Beauty up!

There's new beauty in Bias-Cup, the bra whose patented feature holds your breasts gently but firmly in place... prevents shoulder straps from slipping. In individualized cup depths at better stores.

Write for NEW Beauty Hint Booklet

Made by MODEL BRASSIERES

DEPT. 3D 358 Fifth Ave., New York 1

*U. S. PAT. NO. 2267595

It's the Fit in the Cup that Counts

Maureen (Sinbad the Sailor) O'Hara uses lipstick artfully.

A flurry of face powder enhances Maureen's smooth, flawless skin.

by Carol Carter,

Beauty Editor

HERE'S A PRETTY COMPLEXION!

■ "Freckles!" the O'Hara repeated indignantly. "Why, there's nothing wrong with them. My mother always called them 'beauty marks.'" Maureen seemed right proud of the light scattering of golden ginger snaps that adorned her pretty nose. I know her attitude makes me happier about my own freckles and I'm sure that many of you readers who write so woefully about your freckles will appreciate Maureen O'Hara's common-sense thinking.

I had cornered Maureen at a Hampshire House cocktail party in her honor and was busily pelting her with questions on how-to-be-a-stunner. And Maureen's good looks were assurance enough that I had come to an authority on the subject. Why, the gal is stunning, terrific, colorful . . . here I'm running out of adjectives, but all of you have seen her in Technicolor, so you appreciate my predicament.

Besides being such a vivid Venus, Maureen is also a lass with a definite personality and a keen mental apparatus. (Hate to disillusion you, but I have met some Hollywood beauties who were "but dumb." A very few, I quickly add.) The reason she champions freckles is because they look so good when they call attention to a peach-bloom complexion. Maureen stressed the importance of a healthy skin. She first said that, beginning in her early teens, every girl should know the fundamentals of make-up. As Maureen posed to illustrate her ideas for the camera man she added, "Using makeup the right way is only the sign of an intelligent, well-educated girl." She paused. "Why, it's the civilized thing to do!"

Maureen was adamant about the subject of a clean, healthy skin. Your Beauty Editor agrees thoroughly with her about the importance of a clear complexion. Cooperate, I say, with powder base, rouge, lipstick and mascara, by giving them the smoothest, cleanest background possible.

Now let's face it—the ideal "face cleansing" must not only remove every trace of makeup, dust, grime and perspiration but must leave the skin looking and feeling clean, not the least bit drawn or dry, not faintly sticky, but fresher and (Continued on page 91)

INFORMATION DESK

by Beverly Linet

RICHARD HART is the young man who was given the lead opposite Greer Garson in "A Woman of My Own," in which to make his film bow. He was born in Providence, R. I., on April 14. He did summer stock work, and then the lead on Broadway in "Dark of the Moon." Is 6' tall, weighs 170 lbs., and has blue eyes and brown hair. Is married to Louise Valery. Write to him at M-G-M, Culver City, where he is currently working in "Green Dolphin Street."

You loved ANN TODD in "Seventh Veil," and now she is in America for the femme lead in "The Paradine Case." She was born in England, 37 years ago. Has blue eyes and blonde hair and is married and has two children. She can be reached at Selznick Studios, Culver City, Cal. No fan club.

GLENN VERNON, most recently seen as Shorty in "Bamboo Blonde," was born in Fall River, Mass., on Oct. 27, 1924. His real name is Elmer George Vernon and he is 5' 9" tall, weighs 125 lbs., and has blue eyes and light brown hair. He's married. Write to him at RKO, Hollywood, California.

OLGA SAN JUAN is a "Latin from Manhattan," born in the big town on Mar. 16, 1927. She is unmarried, has hazel eyes and just dyed her dark tresses blonde for her latest picture, "Variety Girl." She's a petite 5'2" tall. Write to her at Paramount, and Ruth Crivello, 776 Chestnut Street, San Francisco, California, has her club.

MACDONALD CAREY has recently been released after three years service in the Marine Corps, and you'll be seeing him again in "Suddenly It's Spring." He was born in Sioux City, Iowa, on Mar. 15, 1913. He is 6' tall, and weighs 170 lbs. He has brown hair and eyes, is married to Betty Heckscher, and is crazy for fencing. Welcomes mail at Paramount Pictures, Hollywood. Was discovered while appearing opposite Gertrude Lawrence in "Lady In the Dark," on Broadway. No fan club.

Can you tell...

which is the expensive blouse ?

Both are charming...both were laundered with LINIT* Starch to keep them fresh, crisp, dainty. But one cost $39.75...the other $7.85. (Look below and see if your guess was right.)

The point is, whether your budget is orchids or oatmeal, anything starchable looks its best when you use LINIT. It gives the perfect finish to all fabrics. Easy directions on every package.

It's the blouse at the top that cost $39.75

...ADDS THE "finishing touch"

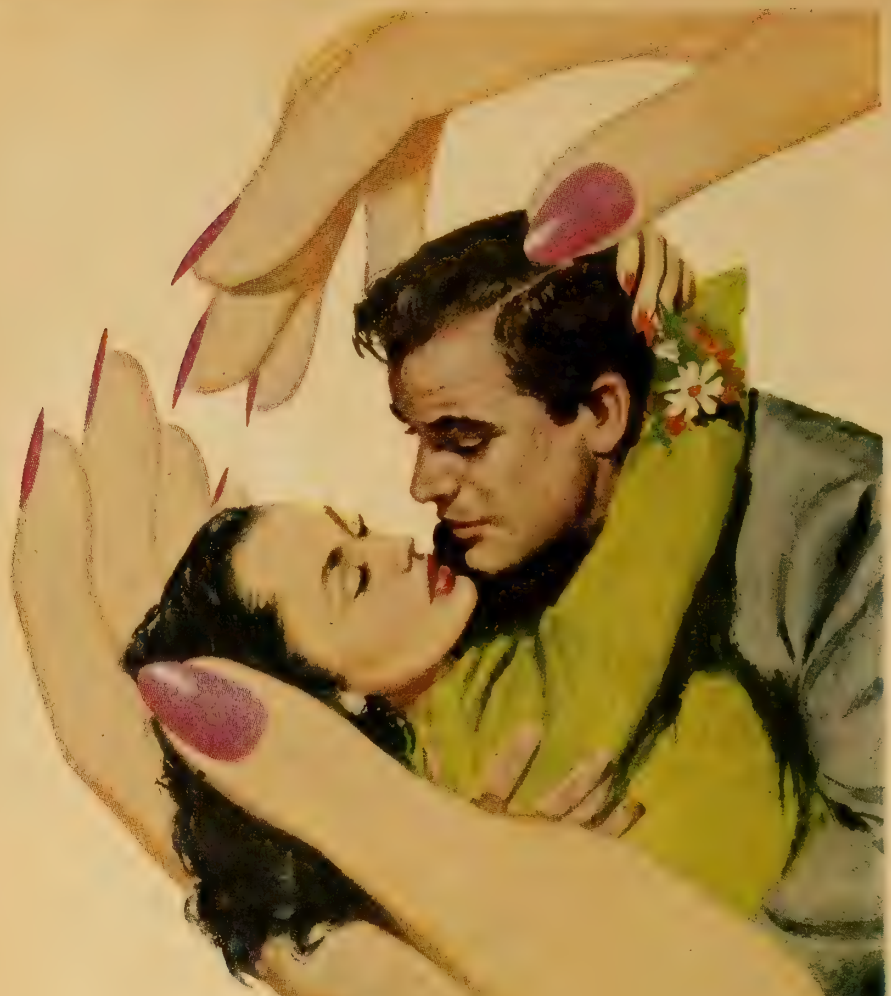
*LINIT IS A REGISTERED TRADE-MARK OF CORN PRODUCTS REFINING COMPANY, NEW YORK, N.Y. © C.P.R. CO., 1947

LINIT is the smooth, penetrating starch that makes cotton look and feel luxurious as linen. By restoring the original finish, LINIT resists muss and soil. And irons fly—with LINIT!



He's Helpless in your hands with the New Hinds

For all eternity the cherished beauty of your hands can hold him close. Thrilling-soft, enchanting hands . . . pampered with NEW HINDS!

NEW HINDS is enriched with lanolin especially to soften your hands—instantly makes them feel smoother . . . lovelier!

NEW HINDS works like magic—because your skin eagerly takes in the special softening ingredient. Is not sticky.

NEW HINDS protects longer against work-and-weather roughness. Always use after hands have been in water or after outdoor exposure.

Get this amazing NEW HINDS Honey and Almond Fragrance Cream—at toilet goods counters today! 10¢, 25¢, 50¢, and $1.

faster soothing lanolin-enriched

PRODUCT OF LEHN & FINK PRODUCTS CORPORATION

INFORMATION DESK (Continued)

CATHY O'DONNELL who debuts as Wilma in "Best Years of Our Lives," was born in Siluria, Alabama, on July 6. She is 5'4" tall, weighs 110 lbs., and has brown hair and brown eyes. She's still unstung by cupid. Can be reached at Samuel Goldwyn Productions, Hollywood, and she hasn't a club yet.

DOROTHY PATRICK who plays Mrs. Kern in "Till The Clouds Roll By," was born in Winnipeg, Canada, on June 3. She's 5'5", weighs 110 lbs., and has blonde hair and blue-green eyes. Used to be a model. No fan club, and she can be reached at M-G-M. Next pic: "The Mighty McGurk."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Anna Lee Chiappetta, Pgh.: Here are the songs from "Till The Clouds Roll By": Ol' Man River, One More Dance, Why Was I Born?, All The Things You Are, A Fine Romance, Long Ago and Far Away, Yesterdays, Land Where the Good Songs Go, She Didn't Say Yes, They Didn't Believe Me, I Won't Dance, Look for The Silver Lining, Sunny, Who, Can't Help Loving That Man, Make Believe, Till The Clouds Roll By, How'd You Like to Spoon With Me?, The Sun Shines Brighter, Leave It To Jane, Cleopatterer, The Last Time I Saw Paris, and Smoke Gets in Your Eyes (danced by Cyd Charisse and Gower Champion). Terry Recknagal: Billy Daniel is now a dance director at Paramount. But if you'd prefer to see him dancing again on the screen, then bombard the studio with letters telling them so. He has no fan club, but Pat Seminez, 6351 Cedar St., Huntington Park, Calif., has one for Janis Paige. Audrey Goldick, 1565 Theriot Avenue, Bronx, N. Y., has Sid Caesar's, and Florence Ufolla, 315 Semple St., Pittsburgh, Pa., has Andrea King's.

SPECIAL OFFER

HOW TO JOIN A FAN CLUB (10c)—First offered Nov. '46. Brand new, re-edited chart, listing over 100 of the best clubs for Frankie, Van, Allyson, Lawford, Wilde, Ladd, etc. Learn about the MODERN SCREEN Fan Club Assn. Also how to write good fan letters. Please enclose 10c in coin with your order.....☐

SUPER-STAR INFORMATION CHART — 1946-'47 (10c)—First offered July '46. A new, better-than-ever edition of the chart that's a 32-page pocket encyclopedia of exclusive, fascinating data on the private lives, wives, hobbies, used-to-be jobs, latest pix of all your favorite stars. 100 additional names never before listed! Please enclose 10c in coin with your order.....☐

There you are: the longer Info Desk that you've been requesting! Hope that you like it, and will continue to send in your questions and requests for charts with self-addressed, stamped envelopes, to Beverly Linet, INFORMATION DESK, MODERN SCREEN, 149 Madison Avenue, N. Y. 16, N. Y. Should you like to see your favorite newcomers on the list . . . let me know who they are, and I promise you very prompt action.

YOU MAY CALL IT MADNESS...

(Continued from page 15)

but oh, so elusive! The story went around that Lana had her trousseau prepared, her wedding plans all set, even the little church at Del Monte, California, chosen. Mrs. Keenan Wynn was to be matron of honor. But on the day people thought she would become Mrs. Howard Hughes, he was in Washington trying to obtain a permit for a radio station.

There was Lana, free and on the rebound. She'd been there before. If her heart was broken, or even injured, she never betrayed it by look or sign. Pausing never a moment in her round of gaieties, she was seen in the swank spots on the arm of Peter Lawford, being beaued by Robert Hutton and others, head high, chin up, merry, witty and vivacious.

None the worse for another bout with love. But eternally questing, yes.

Tyrone Power, too, was questing. He knew that freedom was just around the corner for him. The first few times that he and Lana met they were so secretive about it that no one suspected a torrid romance was bursting into flower overnight.

I knew there was more than a mere flirtation between Lana and Ty when my maid dropped the information one day that Tyrone's housekeeper, who had given her notice when he and Annabella split up, had decided to stay on. "You know," my maid remarked innocently, "she likes that pretty Miss Lana Turner and Miss Lana will be moving in as Mrs. Power soon."

rumors were flying . . .

Just a day or so after that, Ty and Annabella officially announced the rift that everybody in the know already was aware had come. It must have been very funny to Ty and Lana to read the speculations of professional gossips about him and Gene Tierney, the hot romance that was supposed to have started while they were co-starring in The Razor's Edge. True enough, Ty was going about a lot with Gene, swimming and playing tennis at her house, adding heaps of spice to the rumor. At that very time Gene was calling it a day with Oleg Cassini. And a sudden blooming of love between two stars of such explosive potency was hot news.

It was too pat. Ty denied and Gene denied, but he denied nothing about Lana because no one asked him. And all the while that was where his heart lay.

I must tell you of a strange thing Annabella once said to me. "I am a pink-seeing person," she said, "and my husband is a black-seeing one." Certainly he returned from his flying service with the Marines in the Pacific a changed young man.

It soon became evident that he was not seeing eye to eye with Annabella. She agreed to get a divorce and a financial settlement which is said to have been extremely generous on Ty's part.

Could it be that Ty entertains some thought of obtaining a Mexican divorce while he is in that country? Perhaps it is not too hazardous to suggest that there might be a honeymoon at Acapulco. "I wouldn't want to predict what he might do," Harry Brand, 20th-Fox's head of publicity and a close pal of Ty's, told me.

One thing is certain: Lana is wearing his huge, glittering diamond on her engagement finger, and the lovely diamond earrings that gleam in her little ears are his gift. I put the question to her directly: "Are you going to marry Ty?" She smiled, dreamily happy. "Please don't ask me that just now, Florabel," she pleaded, and there was a mist in her eyes.

FEBRUARY
THE Lovable GIRL-OF-
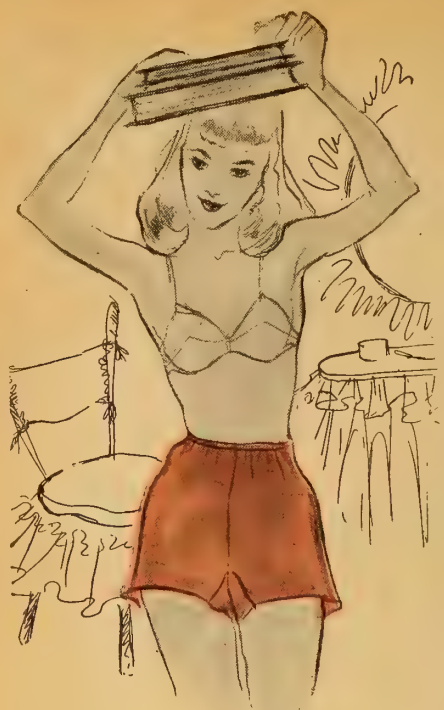
THE-MONTH
14
DRESS BY MARTINI FROCKS
Miss Korky Kelley wears Lovable's new TWINSY...the bra that comes in two parts...for greater freedom, comfort and that smart separation.
You'll be Lovely too, in a Lovable BRASSIERE
Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.
LOVABLE BRASSIERE CO., 358 Fifth Ave., N. Y. C.



Smart girls say... "McKay Lingerie!"

Once you've worn these cleverly styled McKay undies you'll readily see why they're everyone's favorite!

They fit so smoothly and comfortably without binding or riding up... and they wash just like a hanky!

There's a style to fit every figure, and every budget, at all S. S. Kresge & Co., S. H. Kress Co., and Sears & Roebuck stores.

Next time say, "McKay Lingerie"!

McK McKay LINGERIE

Empire State Bldg. New York

HE'S A KILLER

(Continued from page 47)

Solemnly, a moment later, Burt came up to a friend, turned, bent over, and ordered, "Kick me. Hard. . . ."

The area around 109th Street and Tenth Avenue 30 years ago was, and still is, one of the toughest districts in New York City.

Through the faded, but clean, glass curtains of her parlor in the three-family house at 209 E. 106th Street, Elizabeth Lancaster saw a familiar sight—her thirteen-year-old son Burt approaching along the sidewalk, propelled in his halting progress, at intervals, by the strong right arm of Patrolman John Flanagan. She had the door open by the time they reached it.

clash of wills . . .

Mother and son looked at each other with unwavering, hostile eyes: the one a martinet who ruled her family with the iron hand required in that neighborhood, a woman whose one hope was to keep her sons out of serious trouble and whose one fear was that she couldn't; the other a restless, too-intelligent, too-energetic boy who wanted excitement and escape.

"You can have him now, Mrs. Lancaster," said Flanagan in his rich brogue. "He's done about as much damage as a boy can do in one day."

"How much?"

"That Red Pepper Gang of his again. They swiped some stuff from old man Bradley's store, and when we chased 'em, they went up on the warehouse roof and threw bottles down at us. They got a little working over at the station house, and Burt got his share. No use you wearing yourself out on him."

"Thank you, Mr. Flanagan."

When he had gone and Mrs. Lancaster was alone inside the house with her son, she stared at him for a long moment. There was in her eyes despair and curiosity.

She turned away and left him alone. After a moment he went along the hall to his own room, closed the door, locked it, and undressed. Outside, the late afternoon light was fading fast. A sense of the dramatic stopped him from turning on the gas light above his bed—lest the cheerful crack of light be seen beneath his door and give the impression that he was indifferent to the general situation—but instead, he took a flashlight from a dresser drawer, and a library copy of Louis Bromfield's "The Strange Case of Miss Annie Spragg."

He got into bed. Under the covers, the flashlight created a warm, friendly cave of light, and the characters of the book were there to keep him company. In a moment the day was forgotten, the squalid neighborhood, the small hatreds. This was his life, this world of books, and in it he could survive.

DeWitt Clinton High School, when Burt went to it, was located at 59th Street and Tenth Avenue, and was not exactly a model institution of higher learning. It was over-crowded and filthy.

The only thing about DeWitt Clinton High that Burt could see at all was his history teacher, slim and tawny, with a Bacall voice. He was a big boy for his age and he fell somewhat in love with her, even going to the trouble of turning his lessons in on time and making A's. It didn't occur to him until after he had finished the course that he'd used the wrong tactics—he might otherwise have been kept after school. . . .

But he discovered something else, almost as dangerous as love: he didn't have to work in order to get along. He could read or sleep through class all year, taking the inevitable row of F's on daily assignments, then cram for his finals and make an A, which would be enough to pass him. He was monumentally bored.

But there was one thing he could do. The school gym was open, and the fellows in the neighborhood had organized a basketball team. He was already nearing his full height of 6' 2", and he was fast and intelligent. By the time he had finished high school, New York University had told him that he could have a basketball scholarship there.

He spent two years at NYU, but not studying. He had run into a man named Charles Brent, an Australian, who had been a professional gymnast and, by the time Brent got through with him, the boy was an artist on the parallel bars. He was also, once and for all, through with school, and hit the road instead.

It was 1932, still summer and sticky hot when the Bragley Brothers Circus hit Petersburg, Virginia. Burt, with a classmate of his, named Nick Cravat, hitchhiked into the town just as the tents were going up. They found the manager.

"We're stick actors," Burt told him. "How about a job?"

"You any good?"

"Watch us and see."

They did the act they had built to near-perfection in New York, but which had grown rusty during their month-long hike south in search of a job. In its difficult finale, Burt fell.

He got up and tried it again, and fell again.

He did the same thing a third time. When he picked himself up he was shaking, and the manager was roaring with laughter. "It's a swell comedy act," he said. "I don't see how you take those falls—I'd think they'd kill you. But okay. Three bucks a week and room and board."

comes marriage . . .

Three years later Lancaster and Cravat were getting $50 a week. It was not what Burt considered being a success. But then, the year before, a bad year for circuses, he had pulled down less than that from the W. P. A. And it was enough, he thought, to get married on. He had met a little dancer in Pawtucket, Rhode Island, and fallen desperately in love with her. They were married in March, 1935, and lived and worked together for a year.

Burt had always been amused when he read stories by Edna Ferber and others about the special 'family feeling' people in a circus had, one for the other. The clannishness, the warm affection, the I'll-stick-by-you,-you-stick-by-me sort of thing. This was certainly not true of the Bragley outfit. He had never known so many mean, jealous, suspicious, cantankerous people gathered together in one outfit.

They were, however, united in their scorn of grift show people—carnival people—who in turn sneered at circus people and anyone connected with them.

Unfortunately, the gentleman who owned Bragley's also owned a grift show, which he insisted on bringing along to out-of-town engagements where they could appear as mutual attractions. This proved a mistake, at least on one hot summer evening in Leeds, Alabama.

The afternoon show was over and Burt was washing up in his trailer. He heard running footsteps and straightened up, dripping, as a grip opened the door.

"There's trouble," the grip panted. "One of those gimmick games next door clipped a rube for 400 bucks this afternoon, and there're twenty guys with shotguns coming up the road."

Half an hour later the immediate crisis was over. Standing with the entire circus population behind him and the three bulls massed abreast at his side, the owner of the circus met the twenty townsmen as they marched up the road. When they halted he shouted, "If one of you takes another step, I'll send these bulls after you. Now blow!"

They blew. Turning, the owner said quietly, "We're getting out tonight. Make it as soon as you can. They'll be back."

In the trailer again, Burt began packing his tights and other paraphernalia. But he knew it was for the last time. The feeling of boredom and unrest that had beset him the last few months found culmination in the incident of the vigilantes.

Soon after, Burt and his wife separated. They realized their interests were worlds apart and that it would be better for each to go his own way. She continued with the show.

It was 1940 and the Lancaster and Cravat act had graduated to vaudeville and was getting $400 a week, when it worked, because it was the best thing of its kind in the United States. "That's just it," Burt told Nick one night in the dressing room, after the show. "We've perfected a lost art. I always thought that if you're better than anyone else, you ought to be paid for being better. $400 is tops for us, and it's not enough. I'm quitting."

For five weeks, in Chicago, he lived in a kind of private heaven, sleeping late, reading, going to every concert he could find. Then a check bounced, bringing him to reality, and he took stock of his situation. Well, he thought, I can drive a truck.

So he went to the garage at Marshall Field and asked for a Christmas rush season job. The personnel manager looked him up and down.

"That'll teach you not to make blind dates over the phone!"

In five minutes Burt Lancaster was the new floorwalker in the ladies' lingerie section, and within the next six months sales jumped 50%. He was a curious floorwalker. He kidded the customers, sang as he worked, and often appeared for only three or four hours a day. But when he left, they even offered him a raise to stay. "I'd go out of my mind if I did," Burt said. He wasn't sure that it hadn't already happened.

Burt worked at a dozen odd jobs until Uncle Sam sent him "greetings."

The Army did a good job of casting in his case. They put him into special services with the Fifth Army, made him a sergeant, and sent him to North Africa and Italy for twenty-six months. He thought the system in his outfit was stupid, and that the fault lay with some top brass, and he relayed this point of view to his colonel.

Whereupon he was no longer a sergeant, but a private; and in point of fact emerged from the Army as a technical corporal, still unreconstructed, still fighting mad. He could resume his last job with Columbia Concerts, if he liked, and had in fact already accepted when a producer, whom he met during his first week in the promotion department, said to him, "You've got a kisser that bears a faint resemblance to the Siegfried Line. I'd like to cast you as a top sergeant in A Sound of Hunting."

"I've never done any acting," Burt said.

"All you have to do is yell at the top of your lungs. Can you do that?"

Burt gave a short demonstration that was heard in Queens and Brooklyn. The producer shut his eyes. "You will definitely do," he said, in what amounted to a whisper.

Hal Wallis, when he saw A Sound of Hunting, thought more than that. He caught the impression of rugged strength, the sensitive intelligence, the innate feeling for acting in the sergeant character, and forthwith signed him. He lent him to Mark Hellinger to play the lead in a little picture called The Killers, and you know what happened after that.

You made him a star.

But only Norma Anderson, who became Mrs. Lancaster on December 30th, can do anything about making Burt a happy man.

BEE-HIVE
Susan Shane
JUNIOR ORIGINAL
. . . and the queen bee you'll be with beaux busy buzzing 'bout you. A two-piece Susan Shane butcher linen, by Auburn Fabrics. Silver Gray, Petal Pink, Dawn Blue and Buttercup, all with black bee-hive print. Junior sizes 7 to 15. About $22.
Write for name of store nearest you.
SUSAN SHANE
SAINT LOUIS (1)

Head of the Class

For you (even though your Math's a little weak) if you keep your hair smooth and neat and sweet to see . . . You'll rate A-plus with that dreamboat sitting next to you in class . . . and what more can a girl ask?

Just keep your hair clean and shiny and leave the rest to DeLong Bob Pins, those indispensable allies. They keep stray locks in place because they have a

Stronger Grip
Won't Slip Out

No fear of DeLong Bob Pins losing this vise-like grip. Why? They're made of high-carbon steel.

Quality Manufacturers for Over 50 Years
BOB PINS HAIR PINS SAFETY PINS
SNAPS PINS
HOOKS & EYES HOOK & EYE TAPES
SANITARY BELTS

THE GABLE I KNOW

(Continued from page 28)

out of me was Clark Gable.

That's when I got his telegram, "Thank you, darling. You were right. . ." No reporter could ask for better backing-up. But I didn't have to ask Clark—that's the point. It was his own idea and maybe you think I don't love him for it!

The first time I fell for Gable all I saw was his back! I was sitting twelfth row center at a Broadway play called Machinal. Although I leaned in my seat and craned my neck like a hick I never did see his face. Just his back. But that was enough. It had strength and vigor and the comforting maleness that women adore.

"Who is that?" I whispered to my companion. He peered at his program. "Let's see—it says, 'Clark Gable.' Never heard of him."

"Neither have I," I sighed, "but you can wrap him up and send him over!"

Hollywood took care of that. Soon afterwards I was acting on a picture set right beside the glamor-back guy.

Clark played a laundry truck driver in that picture. Me, I was a sassy baggage, as usual. Neither of us was a star. In fact, we were both VUP's—very UNimportant people—then. But the star was a VIP—definitely! And did she know it! She didn't deign to speak to the rest of the cast.

Pretty soon Clark got disgusted. One day when Miss Temperament sashayed by without even a nod, he raised his black eyebrows and then gave them a puzzled knit. "Say," he asked me, "what's eating her, anyway?"

"A common Hollywood affliction," I cracked. "'Big-head' we called it back in Altoona."

Clark whistled and shook his head. "If that ever happens to me," he said, "I hope somebody kicks me right out of town!"

Janet Gaynor told me a story once about Clark that's typical of another facet of his personality. It happened back in the days when he was an extra.

So was Janet. Janet came to work on the bus, but Clark was slightly grander. He owned an old broken-down, rickety flivver. One night Clark saw Janet trudging along after work, as he rattled his flivver out the gate. "Hop in," he smiled. "I'll take you home," offered Clark gallantly. "Where do you live?" Janet told him and they chugged away in that direction. Neither said much because they didn't really know each other. That's why Janet thought it was so funny when Clark pulled up at the curb, halfway home, said, "Well, see you later," and ambled off, leaving the jalopy parked there!

It wasn't until years later that Janet learned why her ride had ended so abruptly. She and Clark were both big stars by then. They met at a party and got to laughing about their hungry extra days. Janet remembered that puzzling ride and asked Clark right out why he'd ditched her half way home.

embarrassing moments . . .

"I always felt bad about that," Clark grinned. "I ran out of gas. I didn't have a dime to buy any more either. And I was just too embarrassed to admit it!"

No one could have been nicer to his coworkers than Clark. One day I was on the set of Jean Harlow's picture, Red Headed Woman. It was just another picture for Clark. He already was Mister Hollywood then, as he is now. Jean had made Hell's Angels, and proved a one-picture sensation. She was anxious to come through again and very nervous about it.

When I arrived, Jean was in tears. She'd been blowing take after take in her nervousness. The director was at his wits end. After spoiling another take, Jean finally gave up and ran to her dressing room. Clark followed her, put his arm around her like a big brother and I heard him say:

"Listen, honey, that's just a little bit of film running through a camera. It doesn't amount to a hill of beans. They've got plenty more, so take your time and don't be nervous. Let's try it again," he grinned, "while we're all worked up, hot and bothered." Jean laughed and the ice was broken. He's as comforting as a doctor when he wants to be. On the other hand, if you're gone on him, Gable in the flesh can be very upsetting.

"please, mr. gable . . . "

I'm thinking of Judy Garland, who toted a teen-age torch for Clark that was a lulu. Clark was her god. That's why Judy got such a thrill when Roger Eden wrote that song for her to sing at an M-G-M exhibitor's convention in Hollywood. You remember—"Please, Mister Gable?"

I happened to be lunching on the M-G-M lot with Clark when he got the idea he'd like to meet Judy and hear that song in person. "Come on," he grinned. "Let's go over to Judy Garland's set and say hello."

Clark walked in, beamed his most charming smile and draped his arm down over the canvas chair that said "Judy Garland." Judy was in it and her eyes opened up as wide as saucers.

"Judy," Clark pleaded in his most persuasive voice, "will you sing my song for me?" Judy didn't answer; she couldn't. The crew gathered around sensing an occasion and Judy, little trouper that she was, climbed up on a table, a piano player twirled his stool and she went into "Please Mister Gable," singing right to Clark. She sang it as she never had before, because Judy Garland was singing to a very special audience.

When she was through, Clark stepped up, lifted her down and gave her a great big kiss. "Thanks, honey" he smiled. "That was a real thrill."

What kind of a thrill it was to Judy you can imagine. I saw her that evening and she was still trembling like a leaf.

I always admired the way he stuck up for Lew Ayres when all Hollywood was yelling for Lew's scalp. Most of his old friends turned their backs when Lew turned "Conshie." Lew's back now with added stature as a man and an actor. But there weren't many who cheered him in democracy-prating Hollywood then. One of the few who did was Clark Gable.

In the midst of the hub-bub, Clark went to see Lew, and said: "Remember, this is America, and you've got a right to your convictions. If I can do anything to back you up, let me know."

I don't know anyone in Hollywood who's ever been a good friend of Clark's who still isn't. And that includes both his first two wives. I know them both, Josephine Dillon and Rhea Gable. I've never heard them run Clark down in any department; I've never heard him say anything but the best about them. Jo Dillon taught Clark how to act and Rhea, a wealthy society woman, gave him polish and social poise. Clark was and still is grateful for both. In both cases he parted friends. Clark was particularly fond of Rhea's children and they adored him and still do. I've always thought it a downright shame that in three marriages Clark Gable never

Mrs. Ellen Tuck Astor attends the Musicians' Fund Opera-benefit

"Before I go out—always a 1-Minute Mask!"

Startlingly lovely against her rich auburn hair and white gown is Mrs. Ellen Tuck Astor's exquisite skin, smooth and cream-white as a gardenia petal. "Always before I go out, I refresh my complexion with a 1-Minute Mask of Pond's Vanishing Cream," Mrs. Astor says. "No beauty treatment I've ever tried gives my skin a so much clearer, brighter, softer look—so quickly!" You'll discover, too, that the 1-Minute Mask makes a wonderful difference in the smoothness of your make-up!

Smooth on a cool, lavish Mask of Pond's Vanishing Cream. Leave one minute.

"Keratolytic" action dissolves off stubborn dirt and dead skin particles! Tissue off.

Quick reward! A lighter, brighter, smoother skin! Have a 1-Minute Mask every time you want to look your best!

It's a lovely foundation cream, too!

Tips for 2 lovely you's

Two smart hair-dos from a single Tip-Top setting—Tip-Top shows you how to do it at home!

Charming by day. You need no special skill to set exciting new hair styles with Tip-Top Curlers.

Glamorous by night. Just recomb and in minutes you'll be beauty-perfect for that evening date.

How much lovelier you look, under the sun or stars, when Tip-Top Curlers provide the setting. Using Tip-Top is as simple as grip...turn ...close. In less time than you dreamed possible, Tip-Top gives you soft, natural-looking hair beauty. You'll wonder that you ever found your hair unmanageable!

At Notions Counters Everywhere

FREE!

"Professional Hair Styling at Home". Tip-Top booklet tells how you can arrange these 2 becoming hair styles—and 10 others. Packed with helpful hints, pictures, and easy-to-follow instructions.

Tip-Top CURLERS

MAIL THIS COUPON NOW!

TIP-TOP PRODUCTS CO.
2106 Graybar Bldg., New York 17, N. Y.

Please send me your free booklet, "Professional Hair Styling at Home".

NAME.....

ADDRESS.....

CITY..... ZONE..... STATE.....

had any children of his own. He's a frustrated father if I ever saw one.

Even all during the war, when he was in Europe and busy with a dozen duties in a topsy-turvy world, Clark never forgot the birthdays of the Goff kids, children of his best Hollywood pal and fishing companion, "Tuffy" Goff, who comes at you over the radio as "Lum" of Lum 'N' Abner. For every birthday and Christmas, too, a present came winging across the Atlantic from London, or wherever Clark was.

Clark has always yearned and reached for the realities of life to compensate for his artificial existence as a movie star. That's the reason he just had to go to war —even though he was over-age.

When Clark enlisted, he wanted to sever all his Hollywood ties. The break in his life, occasioned by the tragic death of Carole Lombard, made him want to leave everything behind.

something for the future . . .

I recall pleading with him not to sell his ranch. "You'll regret it," I warned. "You'll need a place to come home to, a place to think about while you're away. Save that for the future."

Clark gave me a dusty look, as if to say, "What future?" And maybe that's the way he felt then in his sorrow. But I know he was mighty glad he had a home when he came back to Hollywood and he was glad to get back to Hollywood. Just as Hollywood was mighty glad to have him. The King was still King.

I know how much to heart Clark took his war duty and how hard he tried. If there's anything, for instance, that makes Clark die inside it's making a speech. But when they picked him to make the graduation speech at his Officers' School, he did it. And he came up with one of the best speeches ever made—so good it was circulated all through the Air Corps.

I know, too, how hard Clark worked—night and day with his writer pal, John Lee Mahin—to make his Air Force combat movie. It was easily the greatest disappointment in his life that another combat movie beat his to the punch and his labor of love ended up in a film vault.

Clark has always looked more lightly on his Hollywood career.

I remember in one picture, years ago, Clark played a scene where a bulldog chased him and nipped off the seat of his pants. It's pretty hard for a director to tell a bulldog just how far to go and this one went too far. He took some of Clark's skin, too, and they sent Clark to the hospital. I sent Clark a note, "What have you got, anyway? Even bulldogs can't resist you!"

Well, right after that, death, as it must to all dogs, came to this bowser. I'm sure it had nothing to do with the Gable diet, but Clark thought the joke was on him, and it was. He sent me a wire. "The ham was just too tough!"

He still grins at his own romantic screen illusion. He was making a scene in Adventure where he chased Greer Garson up a steep hill and caught her just at the top. They'd been having technical trouble with the takes and Clark did it three times. At the end of the third, he puffed like a porpoise and mopped his face. A prop man dragged up a chair. "Here," he said, "sit down, Clark."

"Let's face it," Clark grinned. "What I need is Lionel Barrymore's wheel chair!"

He may kid about himself, but he's a conscientious workman. I popped in on Adventure one day around quitting time. I got my usual "Hello, darling, how are you?" and a great big Gable hug. But I got the brush-off, too, after that—until Clark was through with his job.

It was almost five o'clock. The rest of the cast were due to quit anyway in a few minutes. "Go on home, Clark," said the assistant director, glancing at his watch. "We can kill this set tomorrow."

"Let's kill it tonight," said Clark, "then we can all have a drink." I had to wait a spell to have my cocktail with him. But I've never minded waiting for Gable. Who would?

What Clark wants out of life is about the same as it was before he left Hollywood for the war. Only now is the time, he figures, to do it—before, as he grins, "I fall apart at the seams." He's got a hunting trip to Wyoming on the sheet, a fishing one, in Oregon. He's got a Sun Valley trip planned this winter, and another jaunt East to New York for the shows and some city life. He's been collecting dope on Central America and Alaska, too; object—big game shooting. He's started digging a swimming pool on his ranch. And now, too, he's definitely set to do Frederick Wakeman's The Hucksters.

He wants to catch up with himself and follow as much as he can the kind of life he and Carole Lombard had planned before, but by himself.

I don't think Clark will ever get married again until he finds a girl who can do for him what Carole Lombard did—be his pal.

I was ragging Clark just recently about a romance rumor, and I should have known better. But the Eastern papers were full of Clark and New York society woman. When he came back to Hollywood, I collared him. "Hey," I said, "What's all this about, anyway? Are you going to marry the gal?"

Clark shot me an annoyed "come-off-it-Hopper" look. "Now listen, Hedda," he said. "I'll ask you a question: Can you imagine So-and-so (and he named her) leading a pack horse?"

Clark Gable's happiest days were the short years of his marriage with Carole Lombard. She loved life and she'd want Clark to get all the fun that's coming to him out of his.

Clark can't look at a woman without a marriage rumor. I suppose in his Hollywood career, Clark has had his name linked with as many women as Errol Flynn. But there's a difference. In Clark's case, there has never been one drop of scandal.

In fact, the only scandal I know about my old friend Clark Gable is an item I doubt if even Clark himself knows. I'll just have to tell it on him before I let him off the hook, so he won't look too much like a saint.

scandalous gable! . . .

There was a little girl in Hollywood, the daughter of a producer, who trotted off to a movie matinee one Saturday afternoon. Her mother thought she was going to see a Walt Disney Silly Symphony—obviously harmless—and when she came home they asked her how she liked it.

"Fine," said the little girl. "Norma Shearer's so pretty!"

They didn't get it. What was Norma Shearer doing in a Disney movie? They questioned the child and found she'd seen the burning adult drama, A Free Soul with Shearer and Gable, instead.

But the kid had another question. "Mother," she asked, "is Norma Shearer sick?"

They said no—what made her think so?

"She must be," insisted the tot. "Because in the picture she was lying down all the time!"

That set this producer and his wife to thinking—and talking—and that's when the Hays office was born. So I guess that makes Clark Gable the first real swoon king whether he knows it or not. For my money, he always will be.

"Be Lovelier Tonight!"

Constance Moore

Star of Republic's
"HIT PARADE OF 1947"

"My Beauty Facials leave skin softer, smoother!"

says this famous star

"Lux Soap's fragrant creamy lather caresses skin so gently!" says Constance Moore. "Work it well in, rinse with warm water, a splash of cold. Pat with a soft towel to dry. Now skin is softer, smoother, takes on radiant loveliness!" Don't let neglect cheat you of Romance. Be lovelier tonight!

In recent tests of Lux Toilet Soap facials by skin specialists, actually 3 out of 4 complexions improved in a short time.

"These facials... give my skin... NEW LOVELINESS!"

A product of Lever Brothers Company

9 out of 10 Screen Stars use Lux Toilet Soap

Lux Girls are Lovelier!

Keep Fresh!

Feel Smooth!

Stay Dainty!

. . . with this truly luxurious talcum powder

KEEP FRESH! Bathe! Then shake Cashmere Bouquet Talc over yourself. All over. It leaves every inch of you excitingly fresh.

FEEL SMOOTH: For ultra comfort treat the little trouble spots to extra Cashmere Bouquet Talc. It protects chafable places with a silken-smooth sheath.

STAY DAINTY: Keep your daintiness on high by showering your person, often, with Cashmere Bouquet Talc. It leaves on your skin—the fragrance men love.

Pamper your person with Cashmere Bouquet Dusting Powder. Smartly packaged with a big velour puff.

Cashmere Bouquet Talc

with the fragrance men love

YOU CAN'T PRINT THAT

(Continued from page 27)

out whom I mean.

* * *

Bartholomew is a Hollywood producer and Winifred is his wife. They live in a charming house, they are happy, and, so far as Bartholomew knows theirs has always been a sterling kind of marriage. He looks at life through spectacles tinted American Beauty rose.

Yet there was a day not long ago when those spectacles came close to being ripped off with a rude jerk.

It all happened because Winifred decided to go to New York for a few weeks to see the shows and visit her friends and spend some of Bartholomew's easily-earned revenue on a few frocks.

Jeffrey was a Gotham glamor boy—toothy, broad-shouldered, rugged. (Winifred was to learn just how rugged.) He was a smooth talker, a slick dancer and a practically glassy operator, and Winifred succumbed to his charms one night during a slow rumba at El Morocco.

For a few days Winifred's existence was a distillation of gardenias and honeyed phone calls, lunches at little French places and cocktails at Jeff's place.

Then one evening—the night before she was to return to Hollywood—she said something Jeff didn't like and he boffed her just like Jimmy Cagney in the movies.

When she got up off the floor he hit her with everything in the room.

It was an old habit of his, flaring up—something he hadn't mentioned under the crimson stars at Morocco—and when she reeled out of his streamlined nest that night she was a battered chick.

Next day she crawled aboard the train for California, a little wiser and a lot sadder. She had a black eye showing, plus a dozen large Technicolor bruises that were hidden by her clothes. Her conscience had acute indigestion and, worse than all these put together, was the terrible question that kept running through her head like ticker tape: How was she going to explain the bruises to Bartholomew?

As she worried, her thoughts were interrupted suddenly by a violent crash—a noise, a jolt, then a spinning sensation and darkness. When she came to she learned that she had just figured in one of the most serious railroad accidents of the year.

Winifred's injuries that day put her name on all the casualty lists, but she didn't feel a thing. She was the happiest beauty in all the land, with the world's greatest alibi for a set of bruises.

But you can't print that!

* * *

When Edna first hit Hollywood as a minor leading lady, she had a fresh pink-cheeked prettiness and a lush figure and not much else. Her acting was elementary, her off-stage manner had sweetness but not much style, and she dressed in a strictly saddle-shoes and polo coat manner.

But early in her career she met Carl.

He was one of those men who make a career of women and the things that make them glamorous. He knew more about clothes than an editor of Vogue, he was a gourmet and something of a wit. He was a perfectionist and he had more than a streak of Pygmalion in him.

When he saw Edna, he saw what she could be with the proper guidance and grooming, and he fell in love with her.

Edna's parents disapproved of the match from the very beginning. They were ordinary Americans of the class wherein males who understand perfume are viewed with suspicion.

When Edna announced that she intended to marry Carl just the same, her worried mother and father grew actually nasty. They placed every obstacle in the way of the union, even to the point of garnering some unpleasant publicity by their actions. And when Galatea became Mrs. Pygmalion despite all the battling, her parents stopped speaking to her.

But other people started speaking to her who hadn't bothered before—mostly producers who now wanted her for their films. Under Carl's expert handling she had become elegant, lovely, even a trifle mysterious and exotic. And before long she was a star.

Eventually her mother and father broke down and forgave her for marrying against their wishes, and she was a contented girl. The four were reconciled and her career was prospering.

But that was a couple of seasons ago.

Now Mother and Dad are mad at Edna again. This time they vow they'll never forgive her.

Because they've learned to like Carl a great deal. And Edna, who has grown tired of him and found a new charmer—a different type—is threatening to divorce him.

But you can't print that. Now, can you?

* * *

This one is a trifle complicated, so let's have the cast first.

Bridget is a young and pretty star—going places.

Arthur is a famous producer.

Evangeline is Arthur's most famous protegee—and favorite love.

Joseph is a pretty well-known director who, as our story opens, has just been jilted by the girl he thought was going to marry him.

Now while Joseph is having his troubles, a simultaneous action is taking place on the other side of town.

Bridget, who has been wooed with considerable ardor by Arthur for several moons, has just discovered that he is still romancing with Evangeline, despite earlier declarations that that part of his life was over. She delivers the grammatically shocking ultimatum: "It's either her or me!"—but Arthur refuses to be stampeded into a choice and says gallantly "I adore you both." Bridget, in a huff, packs and leaves.

Of course, you know, you amateur script writers, where this plot is going. Bridget, carrying her torch—and considerable alcoholic consolation—goes to a party and meets Joseph, who is carrying the same. Their twin sorrows weld them firmly, if incoherently.

A wag sizes up the situation and murmurs, "You two are so miserable you ought to be very happy being miserable together. Why don't you get married?"

And darned if they don't.

The next day, awakening with a large headache, Joseph moans, and groans, and turns to find an only slightly familiar face—someone he'd seen in a movie, no doubt—beside him. "Who are you?" he asks with as much graciousness as he can muster at the hour.

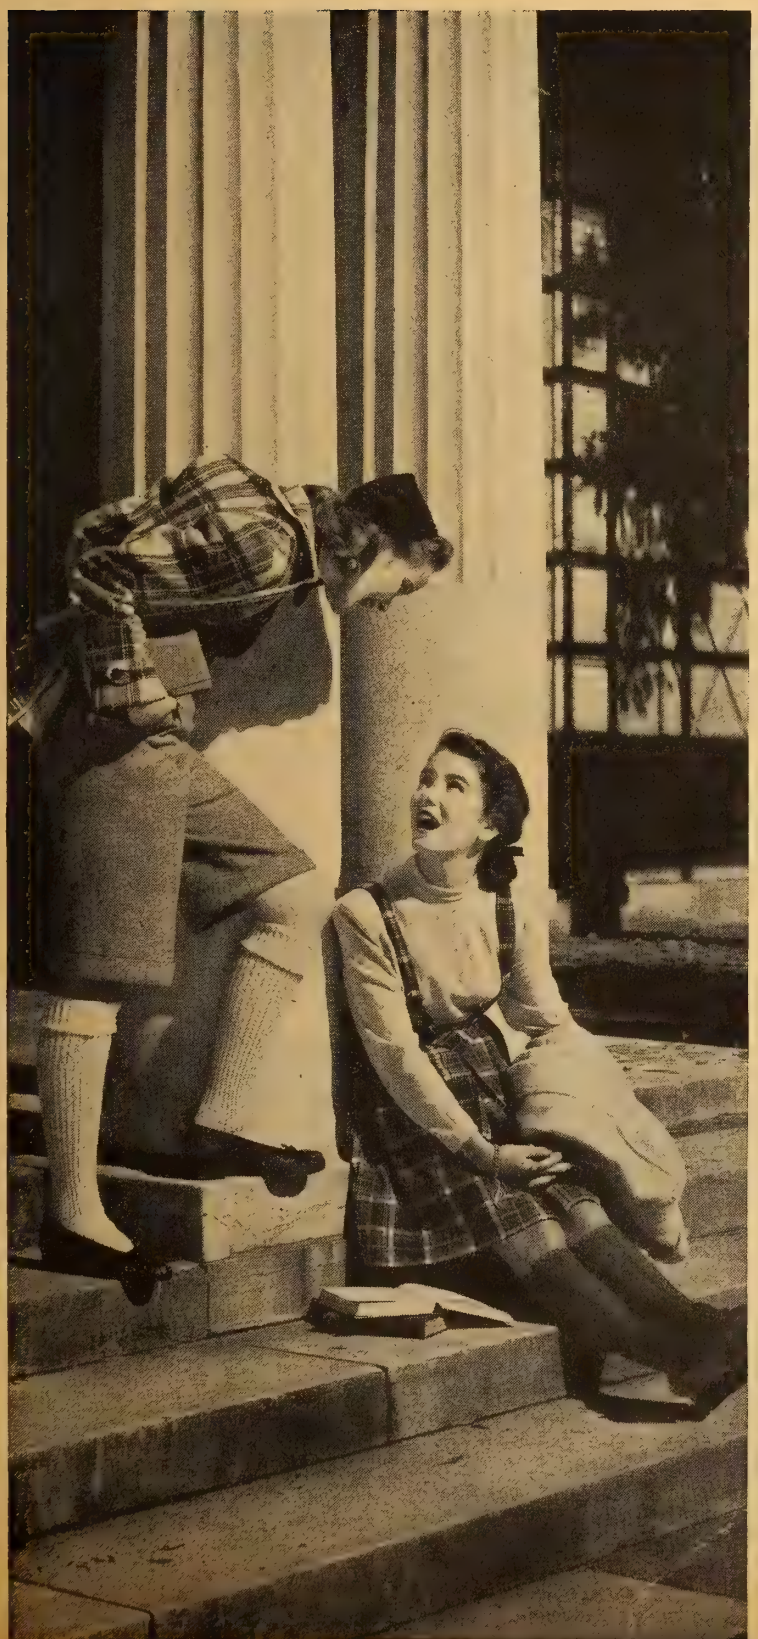
"Your wife," says she. "I think."

Well, the Hollywood columnists wrote up the wedding as very romantic—and so sudden! Why, they said coyly, even the very closest friends of the bride and groom were surprised.

Nobody mentioned how surprised the bride and groom were.

But, really. You can't print THAT!

High school girls could tell mothers a thing or two!



TEST NEW NAPKIN—
88 OUT OF 108 REPORT NO CHAFING
WITH NEW FREE-STRIDE MODESS

The teen-age crowd in high schools across the country recently made a discovery that will be smooth news to girls everywhere.

It all started when interviewers asked school girls who had been bothered by chafing with their regular napkin to try out a new, improved napkin—Free-Stride Modess.

The girls weren't told the name or brand . . . just that it was a new napkin . . . would they see if it gave them freedom from chafe?

The answer? 88 out of 108 reports said: No chafing with Free-Stride Modess!

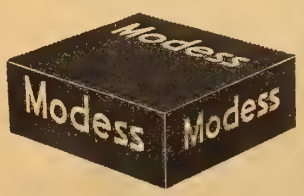
The secret of the chafe-free comfort so many students found in Free-Stride Modess lies in the clever fashioning of the napkin edges!

Modess has extra cotton on its edges—extra softness—right where the cause of chafe begins.

The extra cotton also acts to direct and retain moisture inside the napkin, keeping edges dry, smooth longer. And dry, smooth edges don't chafe!

So safe, too! Free-Stride Modess has a triple safety shield to help keep you confident—to chase away accident fears. Modess' fine, sealed-in deodorant guards your daintiness, too! And no telltale outlines—Modess is silhouette-proof!

Free-Stride Modess—so luxury-comfortable, so luxury-safe—is on sale everywhere now! Get a package today. Product of Personal Products Corporation.



Walk with comfort!
Move with freedom!
Try the new Free-Stride Modess!

Perfect
AS THE KISS THAT SEALS YOUR VOW

A magnificent vow to share and fulfill a lifetime's dream is this pledge of your lips. Can the diamond that unites two people and radiates their love be any less perfect? You can be sure of such perfection only by selecting a Bluebird Registered Diamond. Fine color, full brilliance . . . every Bluebird is guaranteed perfect.

FAMOUS Bluebird
Registered
DIAMOND RINGS
They're Perfect!

SEND FOR FREE COPY of "The Book That Lovers Love." Complete details of judging diamonds. Address:
BLUEBIRD DIAMOND SYNDICATE, Dept. 3-M
55 East Washington St., Chicago 2, Ill.

the fans

MODERN SCREEN FAN CLUB ASSOCIATION • SHIRLEY FROHLICH, DIRECTOR

■ Whew! We've just been through our regular, semi-annual, shush-don't-nobody-breathe week here at MSFCA headquarters. That's the time our staff gets into a huddle over your last-minute entries in the Trophy Cup contest. They check and re-check everything that comes in from your club; then they award the last round of all-decisive points, and start adding up the final scores. Meanwhile, the phone keeps ringing—"Any results yet?"—the grape-vine from the front office wilts under the strain, and even the bravest of prexies have been known to crack!

Then Al Delacorte kicks open the door and Henry Malmgreen—who somehow always manages to get elected foreman—issues the momentous decisions! Except for the sound of dishes rattling and Bob Hope's quips you'd think it was an Academy Award dinner! And, seriously, that comparison isn't so far-fetched, because the awarding of the MODERN SCREEN Trophy Cups has undoubtedly become the most important event in the fan club world.

Now, without further delay, we'll give you the recipients of the Winter, 1947 awards. They are: League One (clubs with a membership of over 600)—the Gene Autry Friendship Club. League Two (201 to 599 members)—the Danny Kaye International Club. (This is their second consecutive cup!) League Three (under 200 members)—the James Stewart Club.

We're particularly proud of this season's crop of cup-snatchers because, while they all merited the award fairly, on the basis of points gained in our series of monthly contests, they each boast certain qualities that can't be measured in points: the close co-operation of their respective stars, the expert know-how of their super-efficient prexies, the active participation of the members in all club projects and, finally—and this is so important—there's a warm, friendly club spirit in all three!

"oldsters" versus teen-agers

There's been a lot of debate lately about who makes the best prexy—the "oldster" (over 21, anyway) or the teen-ager. So we think you'll be interested to know that Mrs. Dorothy Crouse, prexy of the Autry Club, and Dee Fling, Stewart Club pilot, are in the first classification, while Virginia Vickery, who has already steered her Kaye Club through two victories, is barely out of her teens. Our feeling is this: age doesn't count one bit. Intelligence a (Continued on page 115)

Danny Kaye can't believe it! For the second time in a row, the DK International Club, piloted by Virginia Vickery (above) wins MSFCA's Trophy Cup, in League 2. Gene Autry and James Stewart Clubs win similar awards in Leagues 1 and 3, respectively.

HERE'S A PRETTY COMPLEXION!

(Continued from page 78)

softer than before.

The new "Blush-Cleansing" does all of that! And here's how it works.

First, dip a face cloth into warm water and press it gently against face and neck —makeup and all. Next, without drying your face, apply Pond's Cold Cream from hair-line to collarbone, smoothing it on in little spirals. Tissue this off thoroughly. Then cold cream once more and tissue off again. Last of all, splash cold water onto your face and pat dry.

The whole process takes just four and a half minutes and is practically a facial in itself. Honestly, once you give yourself this "Blush-Cleansing" you'll want it to become a habit.

Incidentally, I want to say a word about what I consider the greatest twentieth-century invention (yes, I, too, have heard about the atom bomb). I'm speaking about the cleansing tissue. Try to imagine life without it. Pretty dreary.

I thought that with all this talk of "tissuing off," you might like a few very special words on the subject. The trick in this is to use a clean piece of tissue for each "wipe," to avoid all chance of tracking dirt back on again. Take two tissues, one in each hand, and work up and out from the center of your face, switching to a clean spot for each swing. There are a million and one uses for tissues, but we are concerned here with the important business of cleaning the face.

Yes, a thoroughly clean face is the one that is smoothest, most flawless. It's the face that teams best with makeup. Why, it is the face that has the best chance of looking as pretty as Maureen O'Hara's!

* * *

MS does it again and makes life more convenient! Because you and I are so interested in beauty, we moved the exclusive MODERN SCREEN how-to-be-a-charmer charts to this department. Here you have 'em. A really thorough collection of good looks information which I have carefully checked. Read the list, decide which charts or chart you want and drop me a note telling about it. With the note enclose the necessary coins and a large, stamped, self-addressed envelope. You'll find that you've taken the first step on the road to good looks. My address: Carol Carter, Beauty Editor, MODERN SCREEN, 149 Madison Ave., New York 16, N. Y.

SKIN CARE FOR THE TEENS (5c) Be good to your skin while young and it will never be a "problem." A healthful complexion routine to keep it fresh.

HAIR DO'S AND DON'TS FOR TEEN-AGERS (5c) The long and short of hair glamor. It's got everything—hair-grooming directions, latest hair styles, charts for facial types.

GLAMOR FOR THE TEENS (10c) by Jean Kinkead. First offered June '46. New teen-agers' beauty bible, revised and enlarged to give you the very latest advice on diet, grooming, makeup, hair care.

HOW TO BE BEAUTIFUL (10c) First offered Sept. '46. Special for gals over 18 —a thorough glamorizing course. Facials, hair styling, manicuring, makeup, etc., for the more sophisticated.

HOW TO LOSE WEIGHT (10c) by Dr. E. P. Jordan, syndicated health columnist and assoc. editor, Journal of the Am. Medical Assn. First offered Aug. '46. Eat your way to a lovely figure! A recognized physician has prepared a scientific reducing routine you'll enjoy following.

Your glamourous skin will devastate him if you wear...

Jergens New Face Powder

You're specially dreamy in Jergens Rachel—such a creamy look on your skin. His lips want to touch.

But all 6 glamour-shades of new Jergens Powder are sparked with heart-catching color to brighten even a dull complexion.

Velvetized for clinging smoothness; helps hide tiny skin faults. Try Jergens fragrant new Powder today and you'll see you're prettier.
In beauty-wise compact-size boxes; 10¢ and 25¢ (plus tax).

$1.00 SPECIAL . . . Boudoir box of Jergens new Powder plus Jergens velvetized Make-up Cake —boxed together—in shades that match gloriously on your skin.
Ask for Jergens Twin Make-up.

PREVIEW
ALL 6 GLAMOUR-SHADES!

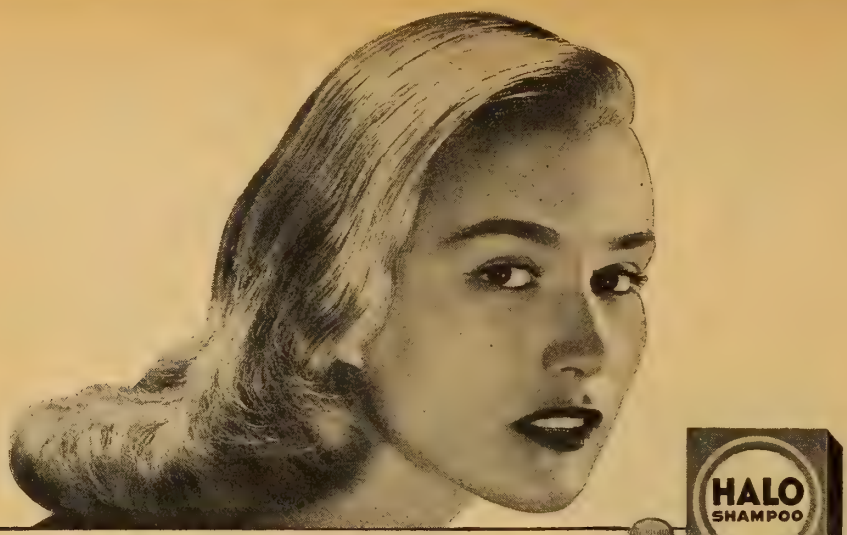
Naturelle . . . . . for Pink Skin
Rachel . . . . . for Ivory Skin
Peach . . . . . for Medium Skin
Brunette . . . . . for Dark Skin
Rachel No. 2 . . for Golden Skin
Southern Rose for Sun-Rose look

FREE!
POWDER KIT—contains generous samples of all 6 Jergens skin-glow powder shades.

Please send my Free Powder Kit.
Mail coupon to: Box 37, Dept. 252, Cincinnati 14, Ohio

*Name*_____
*Address*_____
*City*_____ *State*_____

(Paste coupon on penny postcard, if you wish. Print your name, address plainly. Sorry—offer good in U.S.A. only.)



"Soaping" dulls hair—
Halo glorifies it!

Yes, even finest soaps and soap shampoos hide the natural lustre of your hair with dulling soap film

- Halo contains no soap. Made with a new patented ingredient it cannot leave dull soap film!
- Halo reveals the true natural beauty of your hair the very first time you use it, leaves your hair shimmering with glorious highlights.
- Makes oceans of rich, fragrant lather, even in hardest water. Leaves hair sweet, clean, naturally radiant!
- Needs no lemon or vinegar after-rinse. Halo rinses away completely!
- Carries away unsightly loose dandruff like magic!
- Lets hair dry soft and manageable, easy to curl!

HALO REVEALS THE HIDDEN BEAUTY OF YOUR HAIR!

SOMEHOW I JUST CAN'T GET TO SLEEP, MY NERVES ARE STRUNG UP TIGHT I BET I GET SOME MILES NERVINE BEFORE ANOTHER NIGHT.

When nervous tension makes you Sleepless, Cranky, Excitable, Restless, or results in Nervous Headache, try

MILES NERVINE

Get it from your drug store today. It may save you needless distress. CAUTION: Take only as directed. Liquid 25c and $1.00. Effervescent Tablets 35c and 75c. Miles Laboratories, Inc., Elkhart, Indiana.

MILES NERVINE

WALDORF BUBBLE BATH
For a Tub of Joy
Thrilling, Exotic Relaxation
Softens Water—No Tub Ring!
GENERAL PRODUCTS, CHICAGO 16, ILL.

Say Goodbye to DIM-OUT DAYS

If you "dim-out" certain days on your calendar—if you give up things you like to do—Chi-Ches-Ters Pills may brighten your month. They give welcome relief from cramps, headache and nervous irritability of functional menstrual pain due to muscular contraction. Take them a day or two in advance and say "yes" to that invitation.

ALL LEADING DRUGGISTS CARRY

CHI-CHES-TERS PILLS

For relief from "periodic functional distress"

50 CENTS AND LARGER ECONOMY SIZES.
FREE—Illustrated booklet of intimate facts every woman should know. Mailed in plain wrapper.
Write: CHICHESTER CHEMICAL COMPANY
Dept. E-3 Philadelphia 46, Pa.

GABLE'S GOT HER!

(Continued from page 60)

and the things she wants to see.

"Most of all," she says, "I want to see the real country. My husband has been about in America a great deal, and it fills me with envy and longing to hear him talk about all those wonderful places. I very much want to visit Kentucky, and see with my own eyes the lovely old houses and the beautiful horses. I want to look at mountains and canyons—and I am quite determined, if I can, to get to Mexico."

Deborah and her husband are planning to spend a week in New York before they cross to the Coast. "I want to do a lot of shows—Annie Get Your Gun, and my favorite actress, Betty Field, in Dream Girl, and lots of others—oh, and I want to see Twenty One, and all the night clubs I've read about and—well, just everything," she ended breathlessly.

She is going out to Hollywood without any fixed plans. "All I know is that I'm going to do one or two pictures for M-G-M, and after that I hope to make alternate pictures here and there. It's a good routine to keep, don't you think?"

There's only one thing Deborah is afraid of—that they'll take one look at her, say "English type," and rush her into some English country-house vehicle with butlers and tweeds. She doesn't want, in her first Hollywood picture, to be surrounded by a cast from Hollywood's British colony. "I'd like to be in a film that deals with American life, but in which, in some ingenious manner, I wouldn't have to be American."

Deborah hopes, too, that the picture will be modern, and that she'll be allowed to wear some nice clothes in it, and "be a woman." She is getting a little tired, she says, of appearing in peasant costume or uniform. In her first film, Major Barbara, she played a Salvation Army lass. In her second, Love on the Dole, she was a Lancashire mill-girl. Penn of Pennsylvania made her a Quaker, and The Day Will Dawn, a Norwegian peasant. The Life and Death of Colonel Blimp gave her three changes of costume, but two of them were "period," and the third was an A.T.S. uniform. In Vacation from Marriage, she appeared as a Wren, and in her latest picture, The Black Narcissus, she plays a nun. So, for a girl who made the headlines at her wedding in a gown of white elk-skin, the movies can hardly be said to have given her a clothes-break.

Deborah was married just a year ago at the fashionable St. George's Church, Hanover Square, to Squadron Leader Anthony Charles Bartley, D.F.C. and Bar. The Squadron Leader is the son of Sir Charles and Lady Bartley, and a Battle of Britain fighter pilot. He ought really to have met his wife years before, when she was working at Denham Studios on The

APRIL ISSUE

Shirley Temple's been married a whole year! So we couldn't resist celebrating her paper anniversary by putting her on the April cover of MODERN SCREEN. And she tells her own story of this ecstatic thing called marriage—on your newsstand March 11th.

Day Will Dawn, and he had a role in Leslie Howard's film, The First of the Few. In a way he did meet her. What happened was this: young Bartley had spent the morning stunting and looping and rolling in a Spitfire, and was having a quick one with the boys in the bar, when the Day Will Dawn unit broke for lunch, and a pretty girl in Norwegian peasant dress passed through. "That's a nice ype; I like her," observed the Squadron Leader, lowering his Scotch. "That's Deborah Kerr," said Leslie Howard's publicity man, "not on our unit, but quite a coming young actress, so I'm told." "Good work, good work," said the Squadron Leader, and went on with his drink.

If you ask Deborah Kerr where she and her husband first met, she'll tell you that it was "frightfully casually, in Brussels." Nearly four years had passed since the one-sided encounter in the Denham bar. Deborah was appearing in an ENSA production of Gaslight, with Stewart Granger. Tony Bartley was engaged in dropping troops across the Rhine. One evening the Public Relations Officer attached to the 21st Army Group, a crisp little brunette who had been a school friend of Deborah's, persuaded her to come along to a "pub" where the War Correspondents used to meet. The P.R.O. was interested in one particular war correspondent, whom she subsequently married—Paul Holt, of the London Daily Express. Deborah wasn't interested in anyone in particular—until three Air Force boys from the neighboring squadron turned up.

gold-tiled bathroom, yet! . . .

"After that" she says, "we used to meet a lot. The Squadron had an amazing house in Brussels that belonged to a rich collaborator—he had marched out when the British came in. It was a typical German house, with a gold-tiled bathroom and every luxury you can think of. The boys used to throw all sorts of parties, and we had a wonderful time. The old collaborator had left a big collection of phonograph records behind. But the record Tony and I liked best was a French one, Jean Sablon's 'Je Tire Ma Reverence.' I don't think I shall ever be able to hear that again without feeling choky."

The Bartley-Kerr wedding was one of the first slap-up, full-dress affairs in London after six years of war, and it drew a big gallery. Aside from the bride's cinema fame and her elk-skin gown, the bridegroom's reputation and his father's title, the attractions included at least five Battle of Britain fighter aces. Although he is a civilian now, Tony Bartley is still a professional flyer. He works as a test pilot for Vickers, and the current trip with his wife to America is only in the nature of a leave.

All her life, Deborah Kerr has been surrounded by modestly comfortable and gracious things, and that's the way she hopes to go on living. The thought that she may be introduced to America as a Cinderella-girl, a rags-to-riches heroine, strikes her almost cold with horror. She feels it would be dishonest to herself, to her family, and to her audience. She was born and brought up in a solid, middle-class British home, and she went to a solid, middle-class British school. As a little girl she was protected and happy, and she isn't claiming any allowances.

At 15, she left school to become some sort of an actress; she learned elocution and ballet dancing; and at 18, just when war was beginning to hover over Europe, she set off to London to make a name for herself on the stage.

But it didn't work out that way. There are two versions of the way it did work out. According to one story, she was lunching sparsely one day in a tea-shop

STUBBORN FILM ROBS YOUR SKIN OF half its Beauty!

You can't see or feel this stubborn film . . . and ordinary cleansing fails to remove it.

BUT

Once you try this treatment you will instantly see and feel the difference!

JUST ONE TREATMENT with unique Lady Esther Cream shows how much clearer, fresher, younger your skin can look!

Every woman's skin has this insidious enemy . . . a stubborn film, which is a combination of your natural skin oils and cosmetics and dirt. Ordinary cleansing methods don't remove this stubborn film. Massage or rubbing only forces it deeper into the mouths of the pores.

This stubborn film dulls the natural freshness and beauty of your skin . . . makes even young skin look older.

Here's the safe and sure way to get rid of this insidious film that dulls the true freshness of your skin.

See for yourself—tonight

Tonight, smooth on Lady Esther 4-Purpose Face Cream . . . then wipe it off. Look at your cleansing tissue. See how surface dirt and cosmetics have been removed. But your skin itself is not yet free of that dulling film.

Now comes the important part! Apply my unique Lady Esther cream again . . . and wipe it off. This second cleansing really rids your skin of that stubborn film which improper methods fail to remove!

My cream does not need to be rubbed in, massaged in . . . because its unique texture is so soft, so effective. Lady Esther 4-Purpose Face Cream itself does the work —not your fingers! And it needs no help from any other cream or lotion!

A Complete Beauty Treatment

Each time you use my unique cream, it does four of the things your skin needs most for beauty. 1) thoroughly cleans your skin; 2) softens your skin; 3) helps Nature refine your pores; 4) leaves a perfect base for face powder.

Difference is amazing!

Immediately after your first Lady Esther treatment, you see the big difference in your skin. Your skin looks so much fresher, clearer . . . actually looks younger! And instantly, you feel the new softness and smoothness!

Get Lady Esther 4-Purpose Face Cream today! Let this unique cream work its beauty wonders on your skin!

Lady Esther

4-PURPOSE FACE CREAM

Needs No Help From Any Other Cream

BORDERLINE ANEMIA*

a drain on energy—a damper on charm!

Thousands who are tired and pale may find renewed energy—restore healthy good looks—with Ironized Yeast Tablets

How do you appear to others? Are you tired-looking and listless? Is your face pale? Have you lost charm along with the vitality you once had?

Such effects often come from a blood condition. You may have a Borderline Anemia, due to a ferro-nutritional blood deficiency. Your red blood cells may be too puny and faded and weak to transmit full energy to your body, leaving you pale, weary. Results of medical surveys show that up to 68% of the women examined—many men and children—have this Borderline Anemia.

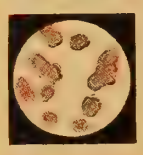
How Ironized Yeast Tablets Build Up Your Blood and Vigor

When your color is fading—your energy too low—due to this common blood condition, take Ironized Yeast Tablets. They are formulated to help build up faded red blood cells to healthy color and size—to help restore your usual vigor. Of course, continuing tiredness and pallor may be due to other conditions—so consult your doctor regularly. But in this Borderline Anemia, take Ironized Yeast Tablets to help build up your blood. Take them to start your energy shifting back into "high," to help restore your natural color! Take them so you can enjoy life again!

Resulting from ferro-nutritional blood deficiency*

BORDERLINE ANEMIA
why it can make you
TIRED • PALE • LISTLESS

Energy-Building Blood. This is a microscopic view of blood rich in energy elements. Here are big, plentiful red cells that release energy to every muscle, limb, tissue.



Borderline Anemia. Many have blood like this; never know it. Cells are puny, faded. Blood like this can't release the energy you need to feel and look your best.

Improved, Concentrated Formula

Ironized Yeast

TABLETS

with an old school-friend. According to Deborah, she was lunching very well at the Mayfair with a casual acquaintance. At any rate, the friend was looking for a job in pictures; Deborah was not. And at the next table sat Gabriel Pascal, busy casting for Major Barbara.

"Gabby," having found another friend who would introduce him to the girl-friend, rolled his black gypsy eyes on Deborah and said: "Who is zis sweet girl?" On learning the name, he asked: "Are you an actress?" and on learning yes, he said promptly, "You have a spiritual face. I make you my Jenny." So Deborah, all tremors and excitement, went down to the studio for tests, and Gabby, all Shaw-worship and Hungary, hailed her on the floor. "Take off your shoes" he said, "your shoes are terrible. Say me the Lord's Prayer." So Deborah said it. And that was the way she got into pictures.

Since Major Barbara, Deborah has made eight pictures, and taken time off for a stage appearance in a revival of Shaw's Heartbreak House, with Robert Donat and Edith Evans. If you ask her to choose her favorite film star, she will unhesitatingly pick on Betty Field, and then play canny, like a born Scotswoman. "I don't know yet," she says. "I want to meet all of them and see what they are like before I make any definite decision."

About her own work, though, Deborah is definite. She thinks the most interesting film she ever did is her last one, Michael Powell's Indian story, Black Narcissus. She didn't always think so. It worried her that she had to play a Sister Superior and underplay clear through the picture. But it is typical of Deborah Kerr that she soon got over that early trepidation, that she has made a job a job, and relished the very challenge that made it difficult.

England is reluctant to say goodbye to Deborah Kerr. She is one of the few film stars about whom you never hear a mean word, front or back of the screen. The public likes her because she seems a nice girl. The grips and prop men like her because she works just as hard as they do. Directors like her because she seems to know by instinct what they are driving at. Cameramen like her because her wide forehead and high Scottish cheekbones are a cinch to photograph. A good face, a good head and a good heart has our Deborah—and what introduction could be fairer than that?

MODERN SCREEN

"Will you stop a minute, Dear? I want to give someone a lift."

BRIEF ENCOUNTER

(Continued from page 44)

extra study.

Then she developed insomnia. She came home for a holiday looking so groggy and drawn that her mother, in alarm, called in the doctor.

"I just can't sleep at all," Greer told him. "Finally I doze off about three in the morning and am just settled into a deep sleep when the warning bell sounds at seven."

"The answer to that is simple enough," the doctor said. "Begin your day later."

"That would be impossible," Mrs. Garson told him. "Miss Cross, the head mistress, would never hear of it."

The doctor smiled. "I will write a note for Greer to take to Miss Cross."

Miss Cross read the note without expression. She stared across her desk at the pale, earnest little girl for a long time. Finally, her stern face broke into a number of new wrinkles which must have indicated that she was smiling. "Child," she said, "you shall sleep as long as you like in the morning, and come to class when you are ready. We'll make up the difference some way."

And because of the kindness of Miss Cross and the extra tuition generously given her by her teachers in English, French and history, Greer was able to take top honors and win another scholarship. And after a few months the insomnia cured itself.

knights in armor . . .

Right through the University and her brief tussle with the world of commerce, Greer had a way of bringing guardian angels down to roost. Above all, her stage career was furthered by more knights in shining armor than you could shake a spear at. Greer had been chosen to play a middle-aged Jewish woman in Street Scene, a sort of martyred character who was a caricature of her type.

Greer, even with a black wig and an accent, just couldn't make the character look believable, being inexperienced in the art of character makeup.

One evening after dress rehearsal, Oswald Dale Roberts, a character actor in the play, stopped her.

"Your makeup is no good," he said. "Come along to my dressing room and I'll give you a bit of help."

That evening, and for many evenings after that, Mr. Roberts taught her little makeup tricks, giving of his time and his experience as generously as veteran actors and actresses are wont to do for earnest beginners.

After the opening night she stood backstage, listening to the comments of important theater people.

One of them said to Roberts, "Extraordinarily good performance that young lady gave—the sister, you know. But I suppose she won't go too far in the English theater. Not enough roles of that sort turn up. She's such a marked type."

. . . And there was Sylvia Thompson. . .

Greer was dining alone, between jobs, at the University Women's Club.

She had just finished her cutlet and was beginning on a sweet when a distinguished-looking young woman, very chic, came up to her table.

"I," said this woman, "am Sylvia Thompson. I've just written my first play. May I sit down?"

"Of course," said Greer. "I've read and enjoyed some of your books immensely. . ."

"I've been watching you for the past

JUNE VINCENT talks about Love

JUNE VINCENT, LOVELY STAR OF UNIVERSAL-INTERNATIONAL PICTURES

At her Westwood home, the charming Star says: "A girl is luckier in love when her hands keep that feminine softness. My hand care is Jergens Lotion." ...The Stars, 7 to 1, use Jergens.

Finer than ever, now. Due to wartime studies, Jergens Lotion now "protects longer;" "makes the hands even smoother, softer;" women say. Still includes the two fine ingredients many doctors use for skin-smoothing. Still 10¢ to $1.00 (plus tax).

For the Softest, Adorable Hands, use

JERGENS LOTION

FREE!

See for yourself why Hollywood Stars, 7 to 1, use Jergens Lotion

Mail coupon today for gift bottle. (Paste on penny postcard if you wish.) Box 27, Dept. 105, Cincinnati 14, Ohio. Please send my gift bottle.

*Name*_____

*Address*_____

*City*_____ *State*_____

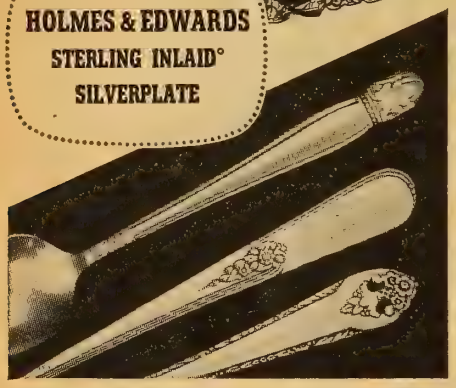
(Please print name, address plainly. . . . . Sorry, offer good in U.S.A. only)

Thank my lucky stars!

I chose these

The two blocks of sterling inlaid at backs of bowls and handles of most used spoons and forks. They make this silverplate stay lovelier longer. Fifty-two piece set $68.50 with chest. (tax free)

HOLMES & EDWARDS
STERLING INLAID° SILVERPLATE



Copyright 1947, The International Silver Co., Holmes & Edwards Division, Meriden, Conn. Sold in Canada by: The T. Eaton Co., Ltd., °Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

you DO NOT need to buy EXPENSIVE SHOES to safeguard your Toddler's feet

Why?

No shoes at any price are better than sensibly-priced WEE WALKERS for a toddler's normal feet. Cost less because they are made by America's largest exclusive baby shoe manufacturer, and sold through mass distribution stores. The best safeguard is to not let baby grow into and out of shoes. Buy the correct size NOW and change to a larger size IN TIME.

Ask your doctor about WEE WALKERS . . . see them . . . compare them . . . try them . . . in Infants' or shoe department of stores listed. Birth to size 8.

COMMENDED PARENTS MAGAZINE CONSUMER SERVICE

W. T. Grant Co. S. S. Kresge Co. J. J. Newberry Co.
H. L. Green Co., Inc. I. Silver & Bros. Scott Stores
McCrory Stores Schulte-United Charles Stores Co.
Metropolitan Chain Stores, Inc. Kinney Shoe Stores
F. & W. Grand Grand Silver Co. McLellan Stores
Montgomery Ward & Co.

Smooth One-Piece Tongue:

Stops pressure on nerves, muscles, blood vessels caused by sewed-on tongue, still used on some shoes selling at top prices.

FREE: Pamphlet, "Look At Your Baby's Feet." Valuable information on foot care, and scale to measure size needed. Moran Shoe Co., Dept. M, Carlyle, Ill.

WEE WALKER Shoes
FOR Wee WALKERS

hour. They tell me you are an actress."

"Yes."

"Frankly, I think you'd be perfect for the lead in my play. We've been looking for weeks for someone. It's all ready to go, aside from that. A young actor named Lawrence Olivier is going to direct.

"Would you care to read for the part? Unless, of course, you're engaged for the next few months."

Young Miss Garson looked solemnly at her finger nails. "If the role is right for me," she said, after the proper length of time, "I might manage to get free of my engagements for three months or so."

Golden Arrow was not a strong play, but the lead was a good solo part for any actress. Larry Olivier heard Greer read it once and decided to play opposite her himself. "It might give you a little more confidence," he said.

cold feet . . .

They had been in rehearsal for a week when the producer suddenly got cold feet. "Greer's good, I'll admit," he told Sylvia, "but I just can't see opening with an unknown actress when so much of the play depends on that role. We'll just have to get someone else."

Sylvia and Larry talked it over for an evening, and made a quick decision. They would simply get a new producer. . .

Opening night, Greer was supposed to wear a stunning pair of Sulka pyjamas in the first act, but the dressmaker didn't return them in time and she had to rush into Larry's dressing room, panic stricken, ten minutes before curtain time, to confess she had nothing to wear.

"Good Lord!" he said. He went thrashing around the room and unearthed a large paper package of laundry, tore it open, and found a clean pair of faded blue silk pyjamas. "They may be a little big," he told her, "but we can play the scene for comedy instead of glamor."

Greer was an overnight sensation and after that she was really on her way. She went on to three years of starring in such plays as Vintage Wine, opposite Seymour Hicks, Accent on Youth and Mademoiselle, directed by Noel Coward. Then came Hollywood, where, by one of the strange quirks which fate constantly has up its sleeve, she spent her first year in miserable inactivity. In fact, she became ill.

The head specialist among the four specialists who had been trying to find out what in heaven's name was the matter with Greer finally told her—as head specialists always do in extremity—"You must enter the hospital tomorrow for a rest and general check up. We may decide on an exploratory." Greer left his office in a kind of blue haze.

But whenever she recalls this gloomy occasion, however, it is with pleasure, surprisingly enough, for that evening she made a friend whose words lifted her right out of her mental abyss. She had promised to go to a dinner party at the Edward G. Robinsons' and decided that she might as well keep her promise and forget about the hospital for tonight.

That evening she met Josef Von Sternberg. He was astounded that she should be keeping social engagements the night before hospitalization.

"How can you have the spunk?" he kept asking wonderingly. Then he set about distracting her; he told her about his amusing new house in the valley, designed by Richard Neutra, with the moat around it and one of the garages made especially long to accommodate a Dusenberg.

Finally, when the party was over, she went home feeling calm and more cheerful. The next day, when she arrived at the hospital, there was an orchid waiting for her in a big cellophane box, and in the afternoon, while she was resting, he came to see her. A fresh orchid and Mr. Von Sternberg turned up in her room daily for the duration of her stay there.

Of course, Greer survived that first incredible year and M-G-M finally found the right part for her in Goodbye, Mr. Chips. It was Gabriel Pascal, whom she met unexpectedly in Hollywood with his successful picture Pygmalion, who encouraged her to make this picture.

even louis b. mayer . . .

Since Chips, Greer's success story is well known, and there have been dozens of friendly people along the way to lend a helping hand and give words of advice and encouragement, from Mr. Louis B. Mayer to the electrician on the set who whispered behind his hand, "Why don't you move over there so the baby spot will catch the left side of your face? It's a better camera angle, too . . . " There's the wardrobe girl who hunted and hunted until she found just the right costume for that first all-important test; the prop man who would make her tea and serve it piping hot to buck her up just before a difficult scene was to be shot; an entire crew which got together and gave her a ruby and diamond ring at the end of filming Madame Curie, as their expression of appreciation.

And, of course, when you get right down to it, Greer wouldn't make such a bad guardian angel herself. But that's another story.

QUEEN FOR A DAY

(Continued from page 58)

other, said, "Gosh, isn't it cold?" simultaneously, and set off for the Rockefeller Center ice-skating rink.

Once there, they walked in bravely, hired skates, laced them up and hobbled out onto the ice. A Strauss waltz was drifting over the loud-speaker, and small children were whizzing past professionally, while Lon and Mary clutched at each other.

Every so often, one of the professional small children would sneer. A few minutes of this, and Mary was unnerved. "I've never been on ice-skates before in my life," she wailed pitifully.

"I hate skating myself," Lon admitted.

The corners of both their mouths began to tremble.

"Then what are we doing out here?"

"I thought you—" he said.

"And I thought you—" she said.

Shouting with glee, they made their way back into the skate-room to set their feet free, and then Lon asked Mary where she'd like to go for lunch. "Some place with an ice show, perhaps?"

She hesitated. She'd heard of a restaurant, El Borracho—it had lipstick kissprints all over the ceiling, and a talking Minah bird—

They went to El Borracho. The Minah bird was over the bar, in a cage, and he was educated, but limited. "My name's Tom," he said briskly. "How are you?"

They said how they were. "My name's Tom," Tom repeated. "How are you?"

"I guess his name's Tom," said Mary, sitting down. "I'm hungry."

McCallister looked reproving. "Queens shouldn't get hungry. It isn't refined."

Mary argued the point. She was such a new queen she hadn't lost her appetite yet. So they ordered lunch, and it was delicious.

After they'd had dessert, Mary said, "Come on; I'll take you over and show you where I work."

At the News, they met Lester Toloff, a gay little Russian photographer, and Mr. Toloff sat Mary down in a chair and adjusted her dress for her. "Some chizz-cake," he said happily.

McCallister was mumbling to himself. "What?" said Mr. Toloff.

It turned out that what McCallister was mumbling was, "My name is Lon McCallister," but he was mumbling it in Russian.

"Hmm," said Mr. Toloff in a cheerful manner. "Hmm. Soch a lousy Russian." Then he turned back to photography. "Give anodder light."

Which was when Lon decided he had a hankering to visit the Statue of Liberty.

In an hour, they were where they could see the statue, rising from the water.

"She's waving, by God," Ray howled.

When they got to the dock, the boat wasn't in. The wind howled around the Battery, and everybody's feet started to get numb. Still, Lon and Mary insisted on staying out and feeding pigeons.

Pretty soon the little boat came puffing in, and someone suggested a walk on the deck. It was much too cold for a walk on the deck. Any fool could see that.

"Going to send me roses when I'm in the hospital with pneumonia?" Mary demanded.

"Where do you think we'll be?" said Lon.

And suddenly they were there, at the statue. They got off the boat, and Lon stood and gazed up for a long time. Mary approached him respectfully. "What are you thinking?" she asked, her voice soft.

"I'm thinking she's almost as big as Helen O'Hara," McCallister said proudly. (Helen O'Hara, in case you didn't know, is one of Hollywood's Glamazons—those towering six-foot ladies.)

So that was that. On the trip home, a lot of little kids asked Lon for his autograph. He was delighted until one came along and said, "I like you in the movies. Didn't you play Private Hargrove?"

Lon nodded. Let Robert Walker sue him. What are you going to do—break a kid's heart?

And Mary smiled contentedly. But the best was yet to come.

That night, Lon took her to the Wedgwood Room of the Waldorf Astoria. Jean Sablon, her favorite singer, was there, and the lights were dim, and she wanted to cry because everything was so beautiful.

Hollywood may give her a career and a million dollars but New York had handed her one day she'd never forget.

LIKE A TOOTHBRUSH

There's nothing so scary about the atom bomb if you know how to think straight. And some people in Hollywood like Danny Kaye, Frank Sinatra and Edward G. Robinson have plenty of brains—along with people in other places. They know that everybody in the world belongs to one family. That this country is one big team and you don't blackball a fellow or refuse to be on the team because you don't like somebody's race, color, religion or haircut. That's why we're going to celebrate AMERICAN BROTHERHOOD WEEK from February 16 to 23. You don't have to do much. Just, the next time somebody starts knocking a guy for his religion or race, tell him where to get off. It's a citizen's duty. Freedom from prejudice isn't something you study in school. It's something you use—daily, like a toothbrush.

Yodelayee-hoo!

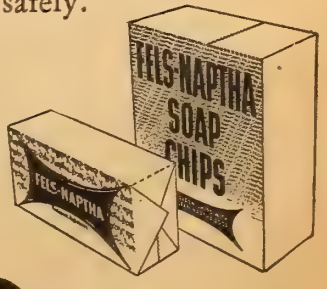
What makes Mr. L. W. (Long Winter) Heavies slightly 'pixilated'? The American Housekeeper knows.

Fels-Naptha Soap is back on her grocer's shelves.

Here is real proof that 'days of doing without' are past and gone. Once more the words 'clean' and 'white' apply to every washday—not just the times when she was lucky enough to find Fels-Naptha.

Now she can use Fels-Naptha Soap wherever its gentle, thorough action is needed. Now she can get out all the dirt, quickly and safely. Now she can have Fels-Naptha Soap whenever she wants it.

And so can you!



Fels-Naptha Soap

BANISHES "TATTLE-TALE GRAY"

Beautiful kitchen – but QUICK!

• In minutes, you add glorious color and banish that "bare-shelf" look, using wonderful Royledge. It's shelving paper and edging all-in-one—just fold edge down.

• Only Royledge has long-lasting doubl-edge, such wide choice of patterns, colors. Inexpensive—less than a penny a day to change pattern monthly. Ask for Royledge at 5-and-10's, neighborhood, hardware and dept. stores.

Royledge
SHELVING
9 FT.-7¢

RENO BROWNE
Lovely young Monogram film actress.

Have Beautiful Hair Today

"Why is my hair so dull and lifeless?" Have you ever asked yourself that question? You know it cannot be failure to wash it frequently. Of course not! Clean hair is brighter than dirty hair but no soap or soapless shampooing can alone bring out the full sparkling, natural beauty hidden in your hair.

To do that, you must add a little hint of color—a "tiny tint" of just the right contrasting shade to emphasize the natural color, as bluing, which is definitely blue, makes dingy grayish linen snowy white. The right Golden Glint rinse will bring out the full vivid beauty of your hair—without changing its color. Applied quickly—just as easily removed. Why not select the right rinse for your hair from the twelve shades Golden Glint offers and have truly beautiful hair today? 10c and 25c at variety and drug stores.

GOLDEN GLINT

Movie Star Photos

Genuine, glamorous 8" x 10" Matte portraits of your favorite stars. Check list below and enclose 25 cents for each one selected. FREE: Gift coupon and list of 1600 stars with each order. Immediate delivery, postpaid.

- ☐ June Allyson
- ☐ Gene Autry
- ☐ Ingrid Bergman
- ☐ Bing Crosby
- ☐ Jeanne Crain
- ☐ Arturo deCordova
- ☐ Helmut Dantine
- ☐ Glenn Ford
- ☐ Errol Flynn
- ☐ Betty Grable
- ☐ Paul Henreid
- ☐ Robert Hutton
- ☐ Rita Hayworth
- ☐ Sonja Henie
- ☐ Van Johnson
- ☐ Alan Ladd
- ☐ Guy Madison
- ☐ Dennis Morgan
- ☐ Gregory Peck
- ☐ Roy Rogers
- ☐ Frank Sinatra
- ☐ Ann Sheridan
- ☐ Shirley Temple
- ☐ Lana Turner
- ☐ Gene Tierney
- ☐ Cornel Wilde

PRINT YOUR NAME AND ADDRESS HERE

NAME_____

STREET_____

CITY_____ STATE_____

Famous Players Studios
PORTRAIT DEPT. 21
6055 Hollywood Blvd., Hollywood 28, California

IT'S A HEAVENLY AGE

(Continued from page 54)

"There's a man at the door—I think he has a summons."

"Oh," said the voice at the other end of the telephone, "Don't worry about that. You might as well accept it."

Joan went back to the front door. She took what the gentleman with the sandy hair and the twinkle in his eye offered—a neat, official-looking paper, the first paragraph of which read, as all legal bad news does in these parts: "The People of the State of California Send Greetings."

Joan suppressed a giggle.

The least a girl should do when greetings are sent by the people of a great state is to answer in kind, and ask the sandy haired representative of same in for a cup of tea. She swallowed the invitation, though. This legal document in its friendly frame was no doubt an order to "show cause," or some other maneuver in the long legal battle she and her attorney, Oscar Cummings, had set off in the fight to break her contract with Warners.

At least six regiments of girls would like to have a contract like the one Joan is trying to break, and a logical question is, "What's she so steamed up about?"

The answer is important to Joan Leslie and the hundreds of teen-aged girls who will hereafter work their way up in the movie business. To put it simply, Joan wanted to find out whether or not a girl reaching the point at which she was old enough to vote could disaffirm or abrogate a contract, which in simple language means to call the whole thing off.

This revolt of a member of the Brodell clan is nothing new, nor is it exactly a revolt. More precisely, Joan Brodell, age 21, and more popularly known as Joan Leslie, was exercising a firm declaration of personal rights as she saw them. These she saw with a clarity few girls her age could because of the family experiences she remembered, beginning way back when.

the great depression . . .

The "when" was that time of the Great Depression. Joan grew up with a whole generation at a time when its elders were asking wearily, "Where's it all going to end?" Her father, John Brodell, was a young bank executive to be envied his $200 a month position in that rapidly expanding institution—the People's State Bank. His wife was the pretty brunette, Agnes Brodell, who had worked in the Transit Department of the same bank.

One day the bank closed its doors to reorganize. John was out of a job. So were thousands of other men.

That night when he opened the door to his Highland Park home, complete with its $7,000 mortgage, it was not necessary to say a word to Agnes Brodell. She knew. $250,000 in bank stock, shared with other Brodells, was now as financially gratifying as morning coffee poured down the drain.

Agnes Brodell talked to her husband of more cheerful matters.

"I can't get over it," she said. "You know, we agreed not to let the girls do so much entertaining because of their school work. $15 seemed a lot of money to ask the other night. And today a man from the Knights of Columbus called. I said we'd have to charge $25, and would you believe it, he didn't bat an eyelash!"

There came a day when the Brodell family packed itself into the Ford and took off for Montreal. There they worked on the stages of every theater and, after that, John Brodell couldn't have returned to investment banking if he'd wanted to. Betty, Mary and Joan were now a going concern in the song and dance business. John Brodell found himself counsellor, travel agent, business manager and guardian of the tender enterprise.

Their new family career took them all over the country in search of bookings. They joined a horde of moving, hungry Americans. And they learned to take their accommodations where they found them.

Like the time they had just rattled into Battle Creek, Michigan, to keep a vaudeville engagement. They were late, and the ten o'clock rehearsal was ready to begin.

"You go on to the theater," Dad Brodell instructed, parking the Ford in front of an almost deserted cemetery. "I'll be right here when you get back."

He was. The tent was set up in a vacant spot, among the headstones. An open fire was blazing, from the vicinity of which came the aroma of coffee and stew. There was a small audience looking through the gate at those "poor show folk who have to live in a cemetery." The Brodells didn't notice. They ate well, slept well, with due appreciation for their temporary home.

When the Brodells reached New York, Broadway did no quick double take. No manager rushed them into a big salary. Instead, they lived meagerly at the Whitby Apts., across from the Martin Beck Theater, while Dad hunted up more bookings.

dad loses his temper . . .

Then he lost his temper as he did sometimes, deliberately and with fine effect. John and eight-year-old Joan were standing around backstage at a benefit. John hoped to persuade a talented dancer to show Joan a new trick step. The impresario said with some irritation, "A girl her age can't do any of his routines."

"Is that so?" John demanded. "Let me tell you something—there's nobody in your entire show can do a triple wing tap. This young lady can—and I'll thank you not to be insulting her ability!"

The impresario turned to the orchestra and murmured an order. The musicians swung into a fast, tricky arrangement. Joan began to dance—a triple wing tap. Fred Astaire couldn't have done it better.

"That's all," the impresario said. "You're booked."

Joan and Dad Brodell went home to their upstairs flat to break the news. $250 a week at the Park Central! They were rich—for two weeks. Then, one day, a labor board investigator came around.

"How old is the girl in the middle?" he asked John.

"You mean the midget?" John retorted, "Why, that's Joan—she's 41!"

The investigator laughed. Some joke. Then he said, "Get 'em out of here."

A few days later, the Brodells were on again. This time at Ben Marden's Riviera, where the George Washington Bridge links New Jersey with Manhattan. This time they weren't thrown out. They were catapulted. A Metro talent executive wanted a screen test of Joan.

This turned out to be a monologue written for Joan by her mother. The original material involved a little boy talking to his horse—but Mom rewrote the script to include Mike, the family terrier. A little boy might steal the test, Mom reasoned. "Besides," she said, "Mike is on our side."

It was not until the Brodells were on the road again that Joan received the good word. With her mother, she entrained for Culver City.

She worked exactly six days in six months. During those six days, Lionel Barrymore kissed her on the head six times in a scene. Then a kindly executive said, as Mother Brodell listened, not believing a word of it, "You just go on back to New York, Joanie. We'll be sending

(Continued on page 101)

that Always-Fresh look

"Beautify skin as you cleanse . . . with Woodbury Complete Beauty Cream" says Teresa Wright

one of the stars in Samuel Goldwyn's "The Best Years of Our Lives"

this Woodbury-Wonderful Way!

8 A.M. Smiling very pretty, Teresa sits for hairdresser—Woodbury Complete Beauty Cream handy. "Between movie 'takes', I Woodbury-beauty-cleanse," says Teresa. "Skin comes aglow!"

The Woodbury-Wonderful Way. Cleanse with Woodbury Complete Beauty Cream. Tissue off. Repeat for plus-softening. Splash with cold water! Woodbury's rich oils soften, beautify—for that "Always-Fresh Look"!

9 P.M. Should be television . . . to "send" that dewy look! Teresa's beauty tip: "A Woodbury 'cream-bath' . . . a second film for my powder base . . . that's my skin-beautifier!" Results—simply captivating!

11 P.M. Teresa's Beauty Nightcap. "Whisk off make-up with clean-cleansing Woodbury! Add a film to soften overnight." For Teresa . . . for you, Woodbury 'round the clock for that "Always-Fresh Look"!

Yodora checks perspiration odor

the SOOTHINGEST way

It's New! Made with a face cream base.

It's Gentler! Yodora is actually soothing to normal skins.

It's Effective! Gives lasting protection.

Won't Rot or Fade Fabrics. Better Fabrics Testing Bureau says so.

No Irritating Salts. Can use right after under-arm shaving.

Stays Soft and Creamy. Never gets grainy in jar.

Economical. Tubes or jars, 10¢, 30¢, 60¢

You'll adore Yodora! Try it today!

Guaranteed by Good Housekeeping

The GENTLER cream deodorant

McKesson & Robbins, Inc., Bridgeport, Conn.

For Quick Earnings SELL Everyday Cards

Fast profit-maker for you! Everybody buys these smart Everyday greetings for Birthdays, "Get-Well," etc. 14 beautiful folders retail $1. You make fine profit. Many other big value assortments that pay you extra income the year 'round. No experience needed. Write for details and FREE Sample Stationery.

SOUTHERN GREETING CARD COMPANY
McCall Bldg., Dept. K-21, Memphis, Tenn.

YOU CAN LEARN TO BE AN ARTIST

START DRAWING AT HOME IN YOUR SPARE TIME—Trained Artists are capable of earning $50, $80, $75 or more a week! Our practical home study training makes it fun to learn COMMERCIAL ART, DESIGNING and CARTOONING all in ONE course. No previous Art experience necessary. Write for details in FREE BOOK, "Art for Pleasure & Profit." STATE AGE. VETERANS! Course approved for training under "G.I." Bill.
WASHINGTON SCHOOL OF ART
Studio 803 H, 1115 15th St., N.W.
Washington 5, D. C.

sweet and hot

BY LEONARD FEATHER

■ So there's a flood of articles about how swing is on the way out, and every time you pick up a paper you read a statement by some band leader which goes: "When we played a fast number, they all walked off the floor." And I, for one, claim it doesn't mean a thing. I don't think there's ever been any very strong trend one way or another, and there's certainly room for all kinds of music. As a matter of fact, right now, some of the loudest bands in the country are making the most money. Not that loud necessarily means good. And not that you have to play loud to swing, either. Anyhow, I'd like to get your ideas about the whole business. How about writing? Just choose one of the following:

a) I like sweet music only
b) I like swing music only
c) I like both sweet and hot music if they're played right

And for the most interesting letter I get, I'll give a prize—a special all-star record album. Write me in care of Modern Screen, 149 Madison Avenue, N. Y. C. 16.

As for the best records of the month, I think Frank Sinatra's "Among My Souvenirs" is tops in the pops department, and Hal McIntyre's "Scarlet and Amber" takes first place as hot jazz. Frankie's on Columbia, Hal on Cosmo.

BEST POPULAR

I'LL NEVER LOVE AGAIN—Desi Arnaz (Victor)—Remember last month when we were talking about "Carnival in Rio" and I said it paid to read the small type on record labels? Because Lucille Ball (Mrs. Desi Arnaz) had filled in on the number with a Peter-Piper-pepper routine? Well, Lucy herself is the one who's being peppery right now. She's suing Victor for one hundred thousand dollars because they released that record with her name on it! She claims she only did it for a gag. (The record, not the suit.) To me, it doesn't sound like a record that was made for a gag. To me, it sounds as if the band had waited for the little red light to go on at the beginning, and then proceeded in an orderly and business-like fashion to polish the thing off. At any rate, Lucille's probably miserable about the publicity. Movie stars hate that sort of thing. It gets their names in so many dirty old papers. On his latest recording, Desi seems to have found satisfactory vocalists outside the family. "I'll Never Love Again" (also known as La Borrachita) has a vocal by Elsa Miranda, the Chiquita Banana lady. And on the two (Continued on page 118) for you again one of these days." So Joan went back to the Brodell sister act.

At N. Y.'s Cafe Society Uptown, L. Feather (left) and Django Reinhardt chat with Hazel Scott and Buddy Rich. Hazel's now a mama as well as a singer-pianist.

(Continued from page 99)

This extended period of night club bookings explains why she doesn't care for the glamorous spots.

Because of this, a lot of uninformed persons suspect that Joan leads a life barren of romance. Nothing could be further from the truth.

Of a recent evening, a young man arrived to escort Joan to a premiere. He was met at the door by Dad and Mom Brodell, while Joan finished dressing.

"I could hardly finish my makeup," Joan said later. "I felt sorry for the poor man. I knew that Dad was giving him the gentle inquisition. He puts everybody through that. My folks have a normal interest in any young man who comes to the house.

"I didn't need to feel sorry, though. He was just like the rest. When I made my notoriously late entrance I found my date out in the kitchen, chinning with Mom and Dad, and I had to pry him away."

An outstanding Brodell family trait Joan in particular seems to have inherited is her amazing powers of concentration. As Mother Brodell tells it: "When she was six years old, we were sitting in an audience, watching Bill Robinson dance. Bill said that dancing was easy and he'd prove it. He asked Joan to come up on the stage. He did five steps. She did them right after him. He looked startled and exclaimed, 'You go back and sit down. You're spoiling my racket—it's not that easy!' " learns too quickly . . .

This business of learning so quickly might easily have put Joan out of the movie business through a serious accident. While working in Susan and God, with Joan Crawford and Fredric March, she was required to ride horseback for several hours. Although just a beginner, she went through the difficult paces with expert riders, who assumed she was an expert.

Late in the afternoon, when she was tired, the horse threw her. She landed on her face, skinning it so badly that she had to finish the picture with only one side of her face to the camera.

The last time Joan took a role in which she rode a horse, Mother Brodell was on the set, as usual, but she went around behind the barn to keep from watching her daughter work. Sure enough, after a little time there was a loud thump. Joan had done a cartwheel over the animal's head.

Margin for accident is narrowing down, however. On Joan's last trip out, for pleasure purposes, she found her horse could single foot. She tried it. The horse bolted, and when her friends caught up with her two miles later, she was still in the saddle, with the situation well in hand.

"Wow!" a companion exclaimed. "I thought we'd pick you out of the cactus and you could cancel your new picture."

Joan thought about that; then said:

"I think I'll save further experiments until Repeat Performance is finished."

This is a note of extraordinary caution for Joan, but nothing is going to interfere with this picture in which she, for the first time, casts off the dramatic shackles of the sweet heroine. She plays a young wife who shoots her husband.

Following that comes the great adventure of a trip to England to star opposite Stewart Granger in Precious Bane. Would she have had equal opportunities at her own studio? Joan, whose long years of trouping have earned her at least a try at the best her profession has to offer, believes these two opportunities are the direct result of her decision to carry her "right to disaffirm" directly to the Supreme Court. With a decision in her favor, she will be able to do any darned thing she pleases, and what more could she ask?

TOMMY'S MOST REQUESTED NUMBERS!

Tommy Dorsey

HAS A SENSATIONAL NEW ALBUM BY RCA VICTOR—

"ALL TIME HITS"

Boogie Woogie ★ On the Sunny Side of the Street ★ Hawaiian War Chant
Chicago ★ Opus No. 1 ★ Somewhere a Voice is Calling (featuring Frank Sinatra)
After You've Gone ★ Embraceable You (featuring Jo Stafford and The Pied Pipers)

SEE "THE FABULOUS DORSEYS"! You'll really enjoy this new Charles R. Rogers movie about the Dorsey brothers, in which they play themselves. After you see it, you'll want Tommy's new album more than ever! Album P-163, $3.15.

"LOOK!...MORE SWELL RECORDS BY RCA VICTOR!"

"GETTING SENTIMENTAL with Tommy Dorsey and his Orchestra." Includes Marie, Who?, Star Dust, Song of India, I'll Never Smile Again, Little White Lies, others. Album P-80, $3.15.

"TOMMY DORSEY, 'STARMAKER'." Includes Everything Happens to Me, Swing High, None but the Lonely Heart, Will You Still Be Mine?, others. Featuring Frank Sinatra, Jo Stafford, Connie Haines, Ziggy Elman, Buddy Rich, Sy Oliver, The Pied Pipers. P-150, $3.15.

"SHOWBOAT," by Tommy Dorsey and his Orchestra. Includes Ol' Man River, Can't Help Lovin' dat Man, Bill, Why Do I Love You?, others. P-152, $3.15.

Naturally* . . . on RCA Victor Records! Victor's billion-record skill . . . plus RCA's electronic wizardry . . . make music sound so natural on RCA Victor Records! And, naturally, the big-name stars prefer to be on these finer records. For an extra treat, hear them on a Victrola* radio-phonograph.

*Victrola—T. M. Reg. U. S. Pat. Off. All prices are suggested list prices, exclusive of taxes.
Radio Corporation of America, RCA Victor Division

THE STARS WHO MAKE THE HITS ARE ON RCA VICTOR RECORDS

RCA "HIS MASTER'S VOICE"

THAT'S LIFE WITH THE BOGARTS!

(Continued from page 40)

broken. She re-focused her green eyes.

She was still standing in the half-furnished living room, contemplating the latest lamp that had been delivered, a globe-shaped affair that was essentially authentic and cheated only insofar as it was electrically wired, when she heard Bogey's car in the drive.

She met him at the door. He seemed inordinately pleased with himself. "I'm late," he announced, "because I stopped in that antique place in the Valley and found the chair we've been hunting for. The one we want for the fireplace."

She followed him into the living room, where he threw his hat on a table, lit a cigarette and rang the bell for Fred. "Tell you about it when we've had a Martini," he said.

Fred brought the Martinis, served them, and then, instead of leaving, stood with an air of expectancy beside the table. "Want something, Fred?" Bogey asked.

"It's my vacation, Mr. Bogart. I thought of running up to Vancouver for a bit, to buy some Argyles and things, and I want to fly. I wondered if I might use your name?"

"You mean you want to go incognito, under the alias of Humphrey Bogart?"

Fred drew himself up. "That," he said with hauteur, "is hitting below the belt, milord. But Humphrey Bogart can get plane reservations when Frederic Nathaniel Clark cannot."

"Oh, by all means then, use it," Bogey said. "You can bring me back some Argyles in return."

When Fred had left, Lauren turned to Bogey with an air of decision and said, "Now then. About that chair?"

"Right. It's traditional and heavy, and darned comfortable. It's been re-upholstered in some sort of dark stuff—" he waggled his hands descriptively—"and it's right for this room. It has a nice patina on the wood, too."

Lauren took a deep breath. "We may as well face it. I bought the identical sort of chair for that spot this afternoon, on the Strip. Plus some other things."

They looked at each other in silence. Finally, Bogey broke it with a nervous laugh. "That's a good gag," he said, "but there's too much coincidence in it. What are we doing tonight?"

two of a kind . . .

"I bought a chair for that spot this afternoon on the Strip," Lauren repeated, emphasizing each word. "They told me the same thing about labor costs and scarcity of materials so I bought it. For three hundred bucks. I am not gagging."

Bogey reached automatically for the shaker, then withdrew his hand, remembering his two-a-day limit.

Lauren went on relentlessly. "We can't use two chairs of that sort at that price, I guess you know."

"Well, ring your people first thing in the morning," Bogey said. "What else did you say you bought?"

Lauren examined her nails.

"Hey."

"Yes?"

"What else did you get?"

"From your description of this chair you bought in the Valley," she said, looking over his right shoulder into space, "I'd say I had the better buy. Why don't you ring your people in the morning?"

Bogey began to laugh. In a moment the absurdity of the situation was manifest and both of the Bogarts were yakking happily. "Okay," Bogey said, "I'll go see your chair, and you go see mine. We'll leave the choice to you."

As she held a match for his cigarette, she said, "You're a nice guy. In case you haven't heard, we're going to the Nunnally Johnson party tonight."

An hour later, while he was wrestling with his collar, Lauren came out of her dressing room completely ready, from sandals to hairdo. He turned and looked at her. "At least," he said, "Louella will say tomorrow, 'Baby and Bogey Bogart were there. Lauren never looked lovelier.'"

At eleven-thirty on the following day, with the great Johnson party behind them, they had lost track of time, and were feeling a trifle haggard.

"I wonder where Nunnally got that real mermaid in the third tent, beyond the buffet," Lauren said. "You saw her, I suppose."

"Well, at any rate she was a real girl. Of course, I saw her. Could anyone have missed her?"

"All the men kept making little trips back to the buffet for more food. I must say I don't blame them."

"Speaking of food, shall we stop in at Romanoff's for lunch, and watch the hats go by?"

"There's a friend of mine, a model I

The Flavor's All Yours...
when you smoke PHILIP MORRIS
CLEAN, FRESH, PURE...
America's FINEST Cigarette!
Of course the flavor's ALL yours—and here's why... There's an important difference in PHILIP MORRIS manufacture that lets the Full Flavor of the world's finest tobaccos come through for your complete enjoyment—clean, fresh, pure! That's why PHILIP MORRIS taste better—smoke better—all day long!
PHILIP MORRIS & Co. Ltd. Inc.
CALL FOR PHILIP MORRIS
ALWAYS BETTER... BETTER ALL WAYS

knew in New York, coming to the house for lunch. I'd hoped you'd be here. She's crazy to meet you, of course."

"A model, hm? Good?"

"Very good."

Lauren's friend, Rita, was indeed very good, Bogey decided when they were introduced. She was dark and not too tall, and there was that sharp New York air about her clothes, and she was not in the least blasé. While they were showing her the house she stopped before the living room mantel and, pointing to its centerpiece, said, "That's a charming touch. Not what I'd have expected to find in the Bogarts' house, though."

"Those are the little porcelain bride and groom figurines that were on our wedding cake at Malebar, Louis Bromfield's farm," Lauren explained. "I brought them home in a little box, and when I got off the train at Pasadena I gave it to a studio man named Jack Diamond to hold while the photographers took pictures, and then asked for it back the minute we got into the car.

"He said, 'What's that, crown jewels?' and I said, 'Something a lot more valuable,' and showed him. So the other day he found that iridescent goldfish bowl in an antique shop, and he got the wooden platform from a carpenter—it used to be the top of a stair-post—and there you have it."

Rita said, "I do believe you two are in love. And after two years, at that. Remember when everyone said it wouldn't last?"

"Come in here," Bogey said, "and we'll show you something."

His hand on the knob of a closed door, he paused a second. "This is one of the big reasons why we bought the house," he said. "We told the real estate broker that we wouldn't take any house, however much we liked it, if it didn't have this room."

Then he opened the door. The room was a spacious, airy, sun-filled nursery, completely equipped and decorated.

"Is this by way of being an announcement?" asked Rita, managing somehow not to sound coy.

"I wish it were," Lauren said. She looked at Bogey. "It's a nice room, isn't it? We intend to fill it."

Harvey, the Boxer dog, sat with them at lunch, occasionally romping after imaginary butterflies and showing off in general. "He comes by that naturally," Lauren told Rita. "His mother was one of Louis Bromfield's prize bitches, and she lay on the judge's feet all the time he was marrying us." She laughed suddenly. "Do you know, I think her doing that addled the man's mind, because he gave me his Phi

I SAW IT HAPPEN

While we were having dinner at the Hollywood Brown Derby one night, Van Johnson came in and sat down at the table next to ours. A few minutes later, one of his fans came over and spoke to him very seriously for several minutes. He smiled and nodded his head. After the girl had left, Van turned to one of his friends and laughed. "How do you like that?" he grinned. "She wants me to join the Peter Lawford Fan Club!"

Marguerite Munson
Los Angeles, California

Are you really sure of your present deodorant? Test it against Fresh
See for yourself why more and more women are switching to Fresh—the new cream deodorant they find the most effective and so safe

Use FRESH and be Lovelier to Love

Lovely to know . . . that you can really rely on Fresh. Fresh contains the most effective perspiration-stopping ingredient known to science!

Lovely to use . . . gentle Fresh stays smooth . . . never greasy, gritty or sticky. . . doesn't dry out.

And safe . . . Fresh contains a patented ingredient that makes it truly safe for skin and fabrics.

No wonder . . . more and more women are switching to Fresh.

FRESH
CREAM DEODORANT
STOPS PERSPIRATION
FRESH is safe. Approved by the American Medical Association for advertising in their publications

©1947, Th. Pharma-Craft Corporation, Inc.

Beta Kappa key after the ceremony. I don't know when anything has pleased me more."

"Harvey's out of his mind today," Bogey said. "Of course, everyone in the house is a ham. Even Fred, here, was once in the movies."

Fred, distributing a soufflé, made a deprecating sound in his throat. "It was a frightful picture, really," he said. "With Marion Davies. But it paid me enough money to go to Europe. I was charmed with Paris."

"I'm curious about that nursery," Rita said. "You mean it was like that when you bought the place?"

"But we bought it from Hedy LaMarr," said Lauren, "so naturally—"

"Oh."

"Everything stays in the orbit of the picture business out here." Bogey tossed a small piece of toast to Harvey, who caught it in mid-air. "Except politics. You buy a station wagon, and it turns out to have been Gable's. And there's the Santana. She was Dick Powell's, and before that George Brent had her."

"She's been around, whoever she is. Lucky girl."

"The Santana is Bogey's 54-foot yawl," Lauren explained. "It's already entered in the Honolulu and Bermuda races for next year. Bogey's going to skipper her himself."

"What'll you do, take care of the galley?"

"Women aren't allowed in these races, worse luck. I'll take the steamer over to Honolulu when the time comes."

At this point, Bogey interrupted, "There's that Rhode Island Red out again. I'll have to have Fred catch her before she flies over the cliff and is never heard from again."

"She can't. I clipped her wings."

"Chickens?" said Rita incredulously. "You clipped her wings?"

"Fourteen chickens, and ducks too," Lauren said. "Of course I clipped her wings. She laid a double-yolked egg three days in succession. That makes her a valuable hen."

"But where do they live?"

"Come along," Lauren said, "and I'll show you my egg-and-I routine."

On their way to the hen-house they had to walk close to the edge of the lawn, which ended on a 75-foot sheer cliff and was encircled by a white rail fence. Suddenly, in an excess of good spirits, Lauren clambered to the top of the fence and went balancing along the narrow railing, with nothing but air on her right between her and oblivion.

Bogey inhaled sharply but said nothing until she had reached the end and had jumped back to the lawn. Then he went over and gripped her arm, too harshly for comfort. "Don't do that again," he said.

She was laughing, but she stopped when she saw his face. It was dead white, and there was horror in his eyes. "Suppose you had fallen," he said simply, and she knew then what her little escapade had done to him.

"I'm sorry," she said, and she meant it.

He released her, at that, and lit a cigarette. He had to strike three matches before his hand was steady enough to hold the flame.

As they were dressing for dinner that night, Bogey, still damp from his shower and wrapped in an enormous terry-cloth robe, wandered into his wife's dressing room for a cigarette before climbing into his clothes.

"She's a nice gal," he said.

"Yes."

"She was curious about something you did this afternoon, and I've been wondering about the same thing for weeks."

Lauren turned, lipstick in hand, to face him. "Let's have it."

"First, something else I've always wondered about. Why do women put on lipstick first, and do their hair, then pull a dress over their heads and muss up their hair and smear their lipstick, and then have to do everything all over again? Why not just dress, and then do this makeup thing?"

"We are like Fred," she said. "We can't organize our minds. Next question."

"Why, when you go up to the door of the hen coop, do you knock first, wait a minute, and then go in? Are you being delicate about the hens' private lives, or do you expect to find people in there?"

"Why, it's very simple," Lauren explained. "Someone told me that if you frighten chickens it puts them off laying. So I knock, to give them a chance to compose themselves."

After a moment Bogey got up and crushed out his cigarette. "Who've you invited tonight?"

"The Hellingers, Thornton Delahanty, Efrem Kurtz . . ."

"Some of the finest minds in the country," Bogey said resignedly. "And my wife knocks on chicken coop doors before entering. Oh well, we can always be sure of some things. Fred, for instance, will be chewing a mouthful of food all the time he's serving dinner, so he can get out in time for his date, and I'll probably speak to him about it, and he'll be sore. And Harvey will get loose and come in and put his forepaws in somebody's plate."

"And nobody'll mind," Lauren said, complacently, "even when the cook comes in to say goodnight in her bare feet. After all, that's life at the Bogarts'."

Bogey grinned. "Yeah," he said. "That's life."

ADVERTISEMENT

"Now this would be fine for your wife, daughter, girl-friend or mother-in-law. It's Pepsi-Cola."

MARK STEVENS

(Continued from page 32)

his bruises. He shot a deadly look up the stairs at his tormentor. Then he walked out. He never went back to that school. He was only six years old, but nothing could make him go back. Nothing could make Sonny Stevens do what he didn't believe in doing. Nothing could shake him out of the dreams he had to dream, ever.

The conflict that was to keynote Mark's youth began before he was conceived. His grandfather, Captain William Morrison, was a doughty Scotch sea-captain, solid as Britannia itself. He boasted an honorable record at sea. He'd steered King George, Queen Mary and the Prince of Wales often across the Channel to France and had gold cuff links and cases presented by them to prove it. He'd been honored by the King of Norway for a dangerous rescue of a Norwegian ship in distress. Captain Morrison gazed with a cold, disapproving eye on the reckless, curly haired, Indiana Hoosier who met his 16-year old daughter in Folkstone and captured her heart. He bellowed an angry "No" to marriage ideas. But the handsome Yank with the irresistible way with women was about to go to the front to fly a rickety crate, and it seemed a safe bet he wouldn't return. So he gave his consent if Richard Stevens came back alive. And darned if he didn't.

But the marriage was not starred for success. After the excitement of battle, Dick Stevens couldn't fit into family responsibilities. He brought his young bride back to the States and took a job in Cleveland, Ohio. That's where Willimina's baby boy was born one bitter December 13, as icy winds swept in off Lake Erie. His first home was a square, weatherbeaten, two-story wood house on East 79th Street, in the poor section of the city. But it wasn't home for long. Before he was four years old, Mark had been bustled around to six or seven other homes. His early childhood is a bewildering kaleidoscope of new and strange places, of sooty trains, bare furnished flats and boarding house rooms, as his irresponsible dad chased the rainbow.

one against the world . . .

They moved to Chicago, to Youngstown, Ohio, to Cleveland again, to Halifax, Nova Scotia, and back to Chicago. His dad was a bus driver, a hat salesman; he worked in a roundhouse, in the steel mills. He couldn't settle down. He was away somewhere and they couldn't find him the night Mark was born, so his mother had her baby alone. When Mark was three, Willimina Stevens decided that old Captain Morrison had been right. She packed up Baby Richard, sailed back to Canada and moved in with her sister's family in Montreal. That was the city, at last, where Sonny Stevens would grow up and which he'd call his home town. But the restless, roving babyhood had twisted his sense of security, and no doubt he had inherited the rebellious blood of his father. Anyway, from the start, Sonny Stevens sized himself up as one against the world.

It was a pleasant world, too, certainly one no normal kid could kick about. Mark's mother took a job as hairdresser for a while but soon she met and married James Cooke, a steady, capable, self-made immigrant from England who'd worked all his life and was to rise to vice-president and treasurer of a big Montreal engineering firm. Until recently, Dad Cooke, as Mark soon called him, hadn't missed a day at work in 25 years.

It was hard for steady, normal, industrious folk like his mother and Dad Cooke

Kiss-smooth Skin

Skin men can't resist . . . silky-smooth with Jergens Vitone-enriched Face Cream! The only face cream containing Vitone . . . a special dry-skin "smoother"... unsurpassed in effectiveness. Doctors' tests show 8 out of 10 complexions beautifully improved. Softer, smoother, fresher!

All-Purpose plus Vitone

For younger-looking skin —Jergens All-Purpose Treatment daily. Vitone-enriched, Jergens Face Cream works like 4 creams. Softens, cleanses, beautifies. Helps smooth away tiny dry-skin lines! Vitone-enriched... yet no higher-priced than other fine creams. 10¢ to $1.25. Plus tax

VITONE: special Dry-Skin "Smoother" in

JERGENS FACE CREAM

A Cleanser....
A Softener.....
A Dry-Skin Cream
A Powder Base...

Free! Prove to yourself at our expense what Vitone can do for your skin!

Please send me generous trial-size, free, of Jergens Vitone-enriched Face Cream.
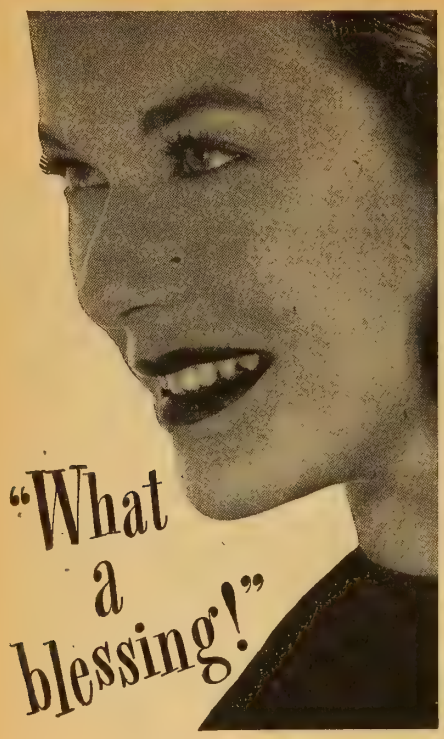
MAIL TO: Box 57, Dept. 412, Cincinnati 14, O.

*Name*_____

*Address*_____

*City*_____ *State*_____

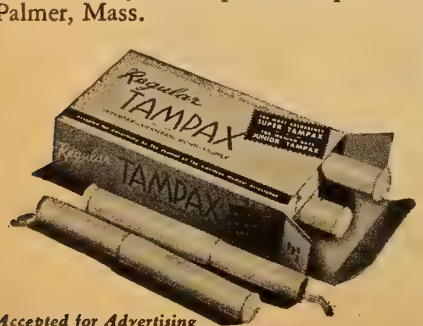
(Paste on penny postcard, if you wish. Sorry, sample offer good in U.S.A. only.)



Can you blame a girl for feeling elated on the day she discovers Tampax? On the day she really proves to herself how easy and neat this kind of monthly protection can be—worn internally, invisible in use and not even felt when in place . . . "What a blessing!" You can say this and say it again, every time that you remember the discarded belts, pins and other external rigging!

Perfected by a doctor, Tampax is modern and streamlined in every respect. Its absorbency is provided by pure surgical cotton contained in smooth, slim applicators. Your hands need not even touch the Tampax, for daintiness is the motto. No odor; no chafing; easy disposal. No embarrassing bulges or ridges under the clothing.

Tampax is comfortable at all times. Just think of the difference as compared with older, more familiar methods. A whole month's quota will slide into your purse. . . . At drug stores and notion counters in 3 absorbencies (Regular, Super, Junior) to suit personal needs on different days. Tampax Incorporated, Palmer, Mass.



Accepted for Advertising by the Journal of the American Medical Association to understand a kid like Sonny. He had a talent for trouble. If he wasn't messing up his mother's best rugs making mudpies, he was letting the red cat he adored into the parlor to claw up the upholstery. When he raced after his cousin Iris, three years older, he always managed to come to grief. Mark carries a scar to this day when he fell and ran a two-inch spike into his face. Nobody could make him eat his cereal. If he didn't like it, Mark stuffed his cheeks and then got rid of it after dinner. He was a rebel.

Mark wasn't deliberately mean, vicious or wicked. In school, for instance, he just had a knack for living perpetually in hot water, because his young mind was off half the time romancing.

He wasn't dumb, just indifferent. He loved drawing and spelling and, later on, manual training, shorthand and typing. He hated mathematics with a fury, and dull history lessons. In his last year at grammar school (it was his third school in six years!), Mark got interested in basketball and made the team. But that triumph only made his rebellion worse. On the eve of the big game with the school's arch rival, his teacher sent a bad report to the principal and they jerked him from the lineup. He hated her for that. Mark wound up his career as the only boy in a class of girls, the ultimate punishment.

hookey-player mark . . .

Mark didn't know what it was he wanted—yet—but he knew what blocked his visions—school. He became a hookey artist supreme. Once Mark managed to duck classes for two whole weeks. He wrote his own fantastic excuse notes from his mother. Finally, he was graduated and went on to Argyll Junior High. He still was a problem student there, but all men teachers and organized sports helped. He managed, of course, to break his collarbone and busted his ankle, too. Trouble just seemed to chase Sonny Stevens—even when he was off to summer camp.

One summer, for instance, Mark was sent to Camp LaFond, a military camp run by an army major. His parents thought that might give him some discipline. Unfortunately, Mark ran into a sadistic counsellor who kept him marching extra duty tours all day on a hot parade ground and whacking him with a cane. Mark lashed out at him and wound up in disgrace.

Mark's temper and touchy aloofness won him no popularity prizes. He didn't care. His black Scotty, "Jock," was enough of a pal for him throughout his boyhood. At school and in his neighborhood, he was mostly a lone wolf. He had few chums. He was mostly bored with his kid colleagues because his ambitions were 'way ahead of his age. In high school, Mark skipped the usual school boy antics and parties. He thought they were silly: he wasn't interested in girls; had no dates.

He began to feed his dreams at Montreal's movie houses, and it irked him no end that kids under sixteen were barred at the boxoffice. There'd been a disastrous theater fire in Montreal and the law was passed. Mark and his pal, Bill Shelley, had the movie bug together. Bill, one of Mark's few friends, had an older face than Mark had. He could get by the ticket taker although he was only Mark's age, 13. Several times it was "Run along, Sonny—you're too young," and when the manager said that in front of Bill and everyone, Mark got so mad he'd burst into tears. He couldn't stand slights in public. He resolved to fix that. He went home and crammed his feet into an old pair of his mother's high heeled shoes. It worked. From then on "under age" meant nothing to Mark. He lived every spare hour in movies and shows.

To be an actor became a holy resolve. He knew his family would be horrified. So he kept his dream secret like the first cigarette he'd smoked out in the shed—and passed out cold.

Tap dancing fascinated him in the stage shows. Secretly, he took lessons. He couldn't learn it. He loved music. Bands on the stage thrilled Mark. He got lost when a piano or violin played, and still does. But he couldn't pipe a note, saw a string or tinkle a key himself. It made him rage at himself that he had no obvious talent.

One thing Mark could do a little. He could sing, or fancied he could. He'd play Bing Crosby's crooning records and copy them in his solitude, groaning and boo-booing to himself until he thought he was good. One day when he was thirteen, he thought he was ready to do something about it.

So after school Mark hustled downtown to the Dominion Square Building and to the offices of "Ten Per Cent Green," Montreal's best booking agent.

Ten Per Cent's office walls were covered with autographed pictures of famous performers. Mark stood in the doorway, awed. Ten Per Cent himself perched behind a giant desk, a small man with a mammoth cigar. He didn't know what the scared-looking, curly headed kid wanted.

"What can I do for you, Sonny?"

Mark's plan was to open his voice pronto and croon out a song, which would wow Green and have him say, "My boy—you're a natural! We'll book you right into the Loew's circuit next week!" or something like that. But Mark couldn't find any notes that would come out. So he turned around and ran.

Mark's ignominious retreat from Ten Per Cent Green's only made his gnawing ambitions and their frustrations more unbearable. In his mind one idea dinned: "Get to the States . . . Get to the States."

He wanted to get out of Canada to America. It was an idea his mother had planted early in his head. She talked a lot about America. "You're an American. Someday maybe when you grow up that's where you'll want to be. That's where you were born and where your future lies."

His first, groping move toward that future was to enroll in the Montreal Repertory Theatre. As the name implies, it was a dramatic school. Mark knew that when he enrolled but, typically, he stubbornly ignored it. He told Martha Allen, the director, "I don't want to go to classes, I want to act, work—now." She laughed. "You've got to learn how first."

no actor he . . .

They put him in a play to start him off happy—Family Portrait. After his first performance, if you could call it that, Martha Allen drove him home. "My boy," she told him kindly, "you'll never be an actor. Why don't you forget it? You've got a wonderful face for moving pictures. It's a shame you can't act because you'd be good for Hollywood one of these days. But you can't act."

"I can too," said Mark.

"You might learn—" suggested the director, "if you studied—"

Mark tried—enough to get parts in some other plays, things like Golden Boy and Night Must Fall. He loved doing the plays, but the classes fretted him. It was his old rebellion against school. Besides, he'd seen a lot of movies by now and to him screen actors seemed real. When he looked around the dramatic school, he spied arty students overacting all over the place. He didn't want to be like them; he wanted to be like the Hollywood actors. So he stopped going to classes and he stopped getting parts.

In fact, about this time Mark Stevens' troubles in all schools ended. His painful academic progress came to a close when he quit high school in his junior year.

He knew his stepdad would be dead set against it. So Mark didn't tell anyone when he walked into the Corona Barn, a "mellerdrama" spot in Montreal, where the customers swizzled beer and the actors burlesqued the old Gay Ninety Thrillers like The Drunkard and Our Little Nell. Mark knew the leading man was sick; he asked for the job and lied about his triumphs with the Montreal Repertory. Oddly enough, they gave it to him. He got $15 a week, his first show business check. He pasted on a moustache and played "John Middleton" in The Drunkard.

Mark kept the secret from his family for almost six months—until one night the Corona Barn burned down. Then they learned about his shame and Dad Cooke put his foot down. "If you've quit school," he decreed, "then you've got to go to work at a respectable job." He took Mark down to Railway and Engineering Specialties, Ltd., where he was an executive by now. He put Mark to work in the filing department. Mark lasted at that musty task exactly two weeks. Then he quit. "All right," shrugged his stepdad. "You're on your own." That's the way Mark wanted it—he thought. But his attempts at a commercial career—all in all—were just about as stormy as his school days.

nix on loafing . . .

After a hopeless year of short lived jobs, the family deal with his stepdad was: "Work at whatever you want. The stage, if you insist. But work. No loafing." Mark agreed. His choice of work prompted family sighs, but at least it was something to keep him busy. A new stock company was forming in Montreal, the Atterbury Players. Mark promoted a job for himself on the strength of his Corona Barn days. He got $25 a week. He played leads in old time thrillers—Jesse James, Billy the Kid, Sweeny Todd, The Mad Barber of Fleet Street and such. He played off and on for a year before the Atterbury company folded. He made tours around to neighboring Canadian cities. He proved to himself that he was right: the only way for Mark Stevens to learn acting was to act. He couldn't study acting; he had to learn the hard way—profit by his own mistakes.

When the Atterbury troupe disbanded and Mark found himself idle again, Dad Cooke reminded him of his bargain, "No loafin'." So Mark took his second try at his dad's plant. He worked this time in the Motor and Service Assembly department and he did all right. The foreman liked him and Mark stuck to his job—he was always handy mechanically—but the job wasn't enough and it wasn't what he was really hankering for. After a month, he lined up a job acting for the local Canadian Broadcasting Company station, reading characters in a serial, Miss Trent's Children. About then, too, the Club Norgate, a Montreal nitery, staged a Gay Nineties floor show. The proprietor had seen Mark in the Atterbury plays. He offered him a spot in the floor show. Mark snapped it up. But he knew he couldn't quit his stepdad, just when he was beginning to be proud of him at the shop.

So Steve found himself handling three jobs at once. His steady one at the plant, 9 o'clock to 5:30. Three shows nightly at the Norgate—8 o'clock, 10 and midnight. Mark doubled up as leading man in the "mellerdrammer," emceed at the mike and sang in the chorus. On Tuesdays and Thursdays, he skipped around the corner to his radio spot, from seven to eight.

They didn't know about all this at home. Mark kept it a secret. Mark's mother and James Cooke thought he was just chasing around when he dragged in every night

Works while child sleeps—relieves distress during the night.

Yes, Mother . . . tonight you can actually relieve distress of your child's cold while she sleeps! For as your little one slumbers peacefully, this soothing medication keeps right on working to relieve discomforts of her cold.

To give your child this welcome relief, simply rub throat, chest, back with warming, comforting Vicks VapoRub at bedtime. Even as you rub it on, VapoRub starts to relieve distress and invite restful sleep.

It Penetrates to upper bronchial tubes with special soothing medicinal vapors.

It Stimulates chest and back surfaces like a warming and comforting poultice.

And . . . it keeps up this wonderful penetrating-stimulating action for hours . . . to soothe distress, ease discomforts while the child sleeps. Often by morning most misery of the cold is gone.

Used By 88 Out Of 100 Mothers in Rochester

In an independent door-to-door survey in Rochester, N. Y., 88 out of every 100 young mothers called on said they use Vicks VapoRub to relieve distress of colds. You'll know the reason for this overwhelming preference when you use VapoRub yourself. Because only Vicks VapoRub gives you this special penetrating - stimulating action. It relieves distress of colds while you sleep!

Best-known home remedy you can use to relieve distress of colds. For children or adults.

MAKE Spare Time PROFITS
Sell EVERYDAY GREETING CARDS
Easy to earn extra CASH. Show lovely Everyday Greeting Cards for Birthdays, "Get-Well", etc. Assortment of 14 sells for only $1. Take orders, make up to 100% cash profit. 12 other Assortments, Stationery, Gift Wrappings, retail 60c up. START NOW—write for samples now!
SEND FOR SAMPLES on Approval
PHILLIPS CARD CO., 724 HUNT ST., NEWTON, MASS.

after midnight and sneaked upstairs to his room. Mornings, Mark bolted his breakfast, sleepy-eyed and silent. He was too groggy to talk.

"What's the boy doing, anyway?" Dad Cooke asked his wife. And answered it with his next headshaking remark. "He can't stand dissipating himself away like this!"

His stepdad was away from the plant that day when the president of the firm came through Mark's department on inspection and criticized something he was doing. Mark snapped back at him like a cranky dog. "Get out of here!" yelled the prexy. Mark took off his work coat, threw it on the floor and walked out. He knew he would leave home then. He'd let Dad Cooke down for the last time and he knew he could never go back to that convenient job again. It was time to head for the States.

Mark had been making good money at his day and night jobs, and in spite of his snappy new clothes, he had about $150 saved up. He packed his bag and left the familiar brick house, he thought, for keeps. He was eighteen and Mark was fretting to try his wings. He was so enthusiastic that even his canny Scotch mother, and Dad Cooke too, fell in with the idea. They saw him off at the bus station. "Good luck," they told him. "Now see what you can do—and remember, you can always come back home."

heartaches and headaches . . .

Mark stifled some tears as the bus roared away from Montreal's familiar sights. He was sorry he wasn't the kind of guy his folks had hoped he would be. He'd caused them nothing but heartaches and headaches. But now they would be proud of him at last. He resolved fiercely to crash New York, and figured, as Steve has always figured, that he'd do it alone. He had an uncle in Manhattan, Joe Kelley, who was the successful, wealthy vice-president of a big corporation. His mother had said, "Be sure and look up Uncle Joe. He can get you a job." Mark never considered that. He would do it himself. He wasn't too sure Uncle Joe approved of him, anyway. Wealthy uncles didn't usually cotton to would-be actors.

Instead of looking up a rich relative, Mark headed for a Montreal pal, Don Tuppen, who was working in New York. Don got him a room next to his in Sunnyside, Long Island, and Mark set out to conquer the city he'd dreamed about since he was a kid. He thought he'd get a good-paying job right off, something thrilling and exciting—maybe a radio spot or a part in a show, where he'd make swell dough and make everyone back home really proud of him.

In a few weeks, Mark was haunting the employment offices of Horn and Hardart, Riker's and Childs' restaurants, hunting a job as a dish washer. His $150 had melted, to his surprise, like butter in an oven. He couldn't get a job anywhere, not even pearl-diving. It was 1938 and jobs were scarce. He was stunned, lonely, forlorn and disillusioned. But, even then, Mark Stevens was bristling with the same old pride.

nuts to uncle joe . . .

He never did call rich Uncle Joe. When his pocket went flat he left the Sunnyside room without telling Don Tuppen goodbye, although he knew Don would stake him to room rent a while.

Mark had no place to go so he walked the streets, bewildered—all day and all night for a couple of days. Then he found the benches in Central Park and curled up on their slats for another couple of nights until the cops whacked him awake in the morning on the soles of his feet. Luckily, it was summer and outdoor living was healthful. But one night the rain chased Mark inside a Mayflower Doughnut Shop. There were seats at the counter but Mark didn't sit down. The hasher on duty sized him up quickly. He slid a cup of steaming coffee and a couple of crullers across the board. "Here," he said. "Have one on the house." Mark hadn't eaten since the night before. You could tell it by the way he gulped the doughnuts. The waiter caught that, too.

"Got any place to stay?"

"No."

"Stick around," said the guy, "and come home with me." Mark's benefactor had a basement apartment nearby. He was a natural born humanitarian, interested in people and their problems. He pumped Mark for his. Mark stayed there two days and found himself telling his whole sad story.

"Um-hum," said his friend. "Well, now—New York ain't the place for you, Sonny.

"Boy! After all that waiting, wouldn't it be a riot if this wasn't the line for the Roxy?"

Suppose you get a job—what you got? Suppose you crack Broadway—still what you got? Not much. But if you want to be an actor—why, why not shoot the moon?"

"What do you mean?"

"Hollywood," explained Mark's host. "The movies. The big money—a fortune. That's worth the riffle, ain't it? Listen—I'll bet I see your face on the screen someday, if you'll give it a try. You've got the looks and I bet you can cut it."

Mark had to laugh. He seemed a very long way from fame and fortune at that point. But it was funny: this was the second time someone had touted him away from Broadway and on to Hollywood. He laughed acidly. "Like this?" What a joker this guy was. Hollywood was a spot somewhere in the middle of the moon. And who had a rocket?

"Na-w-w-w—" Mark's friend frowned. "Not like this! You can't do nothin' when you're busted except get in trouble. But you've got folks, ain't you? Then go home and—"

Mark's face tightened. He'd starve first! "I can't—"

"Sez you! Get a stake and then start out again. But next time don't come here. Head for Hollywood!"

Mark's new pal was a persuasive talker. He must have been, because under his spell Mark Stevens did what he had never done before. He admitted he was stumped and asked for help. He borrowed the price of a telegram and wired Dad Cooke for bus fare back to Montreal.

Mark dates the first step in his education as an adult to that return to Montreal, back home and broke. It taught him his first lesson in humility. It took a restraining first hitch at that terrible temper of his. It made him realize that a cocky chin and a flashing eye couldn't make the world hand you dreams on a silver platter. He had come to New York to win success overnight, cocky as a rooster. Well—he hadn't got past a single secretary in a Broadway producer's office. He hadn't even landed a job as a dishwasher, and a doughnut shop waiter had given him food and shelter. He didn't have much to say when he got off the bus in Montreal. Dad Cooke and his mother understood how Mark felt. They didn't pester him with questions or tell him what to do next. They just said, "Welcome home, Sonny." Mark appreciated that. Most parents would have rubbed it in unmercifully.

never say die . . .

But Sonny Stevens knew that home would never be the same. He was back licking his wounds but he wasn't licked. Mark got an emcee job in a Montreal waterfront night club. For the next few months he drifted around from frowsy night joint to night joint. He sang a little, cracked cheap jokes, clowned and introduced third rate artists at the mike. But behind his glib patter his voice was gritty and over his professional smile his brown eyes were hard. He was wholeheartedly sore at himself.

It was okay to flop at something you didn't like. But when it was at something you did—well—that kind of failure wasn't in Mark Stevens' book. And now more than ever "Get back to the States" was pounding inside him until he thought his head would pop.

As soon as he had scraped a few fast bucks together, Mark told his folks goodbye again and climbed on another bus headed South.

"This time," he told them, "I'm going to stay—if I starve to death!"

A good many times—before he reached Hollywood—and after, too—Mark Stevens thought that was exactly what was going to happen.

Lovely hair deserves fine care
. . . use Du Pont combs
The girls men care about . . . somehow . . . are girls who care about their hair. Keep yours neat and shining with gay, plastic Du Pont Combs . . . gentle to your scalp, your curls, yet strong, strong, strong! Colors to match your room, your purse . . . Du Pont quality . . . 10 to 50 cents . . . at good stores.
DU PONT
Du Pont Combs
BETTER THINGS FOR BETTER LIVING . . . THROUGH CHEMISTRY

Prove to yourself . . . Chapped Hands heal FASTER with this famous cream

• Give your chapped hands quick relief as so many doctors and nurses do! Use Noxzema, the greaseless cream with the medicated formula.

Baltimore nurses were among the first to discover that Noxzema gives double aid to hands—brings quick, soothing relief—softens, helps whiten red, rough skin. Actual clinical tests prove it helps heal tiny cuts and skin irritations quickly—often overnight!

Millions of women rely on Noxzema as a skin aid to lovelier hands. 20,000,000 jars bought yearly! Get your jar today. Let Noxzema nurse your chapped skin back to beauty!

THANK GOODNESS FOR THIS HELP!

MAKE THIS EASY 7 DAY TEST

☆LONGER HAIR DRESSES BETTER IN LATEST STYLES

DO YOU WANT...

LONGER HAIR?

★THEN TRY THIS PROVEN EASY SYSTEM ON YOUR HAIR ★ ★ ★ ★

Helps Prevent Brittle Ends Breaking Off!

● Hair May Get Longer

when scalp and hair conditions are normal and the dry, brittle, breaking off hair can be retarded by supplementing the natural hair oils, it has a chance to get longer and much more beautiful. Just try the easy JUELENE System 7 days and let your mirror prove results. Your money back if not delighted. See if Juelene's tendency to help your hair to become softer, silkier, more lustrous than it has been before—in just one short week helps your hair gain its normal beauty.

● BRUNETTES, BLONDES, TITIANS!

Just try this System on your HAIR seven days and see if you are really enjoying the pleasure of LONGER HAIR that so often captures Love and Romance for you.

● Send No Money!

Just mail the convenient introductory coupon. Take advantage of this Fully Guaranteed Introductory Offer today, and know at last the happiness of possessing really lovelier hair and be envied by so many.

JUEL COMPANY, 4727 N. Damen, Chicago 25, Illinois

Mail This INTRODUCTORY COUPON!

JUEL COMPANY, Dept. B-603,
4727 North Damen, Chicago 25, Ill.

Yes, I want easy-to-manage, longer hair. I will try the JUELENE SYSTEM for 7 days. If my mirror doesn't show satisfactory results, I will ask for my money back.

☐ I am enclosing $1.00.
☐ Send C. O. D. plus postage.

JUELENE Comes in 2 Forms
☐ POMADE ☐ LIQUID

NAME _____

ADDRESS _____

CITY _____ ZONE ____ STATE _____

Our Customers Participate in Gifts

CAN STARS STAY MARRIED?

(Continued from page 38)

in days and hours. Before they were married, they knew each other by heart. . . .

They met at the Hollywood Canteen, where Harry'd gone to play, and Betty to dance with the soldiers. He took her home. They stopped at a drive-in for a bite, and talked about music—the first major interest they discovered in common. Harry asked for a date. Most men dating Grable for the first time would have headed for a night club. To Betty's delight, Harry said, "How about a movie?" They went to see Alice Faye in Hello, Frisco, Hello. "You'll Never Know" has been their song ever since.

But not till they were separated did Betty really fall in love. His schedule took Harry to New York. An operation took Betty to a hospital. Gifts and flowers came daily, but gifts and flowers are easy. All they cost is money. What made all the difference were Harry's letters. It's difficult to realize that a girl like Grable—courted, adored, the toast of a continent—should have been moved to tears because a man showed his love by writing her letters. No one else ever had. They'd wired, they'd phoned—

"But a letter's different. I knew how busy he was. And still he took time to sit down and write every day—"

Naturally, it wasn't only that he wrote, it was also what he wrote. Betty read and re-read the letters, kept them under her pillow. By the time she was well enough to go to New York with her mother, she felt she knew Harry better than people she'd known all her life—

"I did too. All the good things I thought he was, he is. Only more so—"

2. FEW COMMON GOALS; CAREERS WHICH MEAN MORE TO THEM THAN THEY MEAN TO EACH OTHER; SEPARATE ACTIVITIES.

"Harry means a thousand times more to me. It's silly to compare them—"

"Then why don't you quit—?"

"You wouldn't understand, not being in show business. Harry understands—"

Harry understands that, when you're in show business, something keeps you going as long as the public wants you. If he asked her to quit—or even if he didn't and she thought it was hurting their marriage, she'd quit tomorrow. She's never been one of those do-and-die-for-a-career gals. . . .

Most picture people talk pictures. If you hear a picture mentioned at the Jameses, it'll be that horse opera they saw last night. Never by any chance a Grable opus. It's not that she's afraid of boring her husband, because she used to be the same way with her mother—

"What happened at the studio today?" Mrs. Grable would ask.

"Oh, Mother, let's not talk about it, huh? By the time I get home, I've had enough of the studio—"

On the other hand, there's plenty of talk about music at the Jameses. If Harry were a plumber, maybe there'd be talk about plumbing. As it is, Betty doesn't have to force herself. She's just naturally more interested in Harry's recordings than in tomorrow's dialogue—

"Look at all you can do with music—sing it, play it, listen to it. What can you say about dialogue? It's dialogue. Period—"

We'd hate to give the impression that Betty's indifferent to her own professional success. Far from it. But as a movie star she doesn't run true to form—gets a bang, for instance, out of being ignored for Harry. That happens in New York, when they run into a crowd of band fans, all yelling for his autograph and paying not the smallest attention to her. . . .

She gets an even bigger bang out of the fact that Vicki doesn't know who Betty Grable is. . . .

"Who's that man playing the horn?" Vicki's grandma asks her.

"Daddy—"

"What's his name?"

"Harry James—"

"And who's this lady in the magazine?"

"Mommy—"

"What's her name?"

"Betty James—"

. . . They sing songs about Betty Grable. "Betty James," says the lady, "sounds more like a song to me—"

"As for goals, I can't think of a goal we don't have in common—"

It's not only that their fundamental values are the same—that what they want out of life are children, love and peace. They also share the same everyday interests. Music was first. Baseball comes a close second. Betty'll tell you it was Rogers Hornsby who put her in really solid with Harry—

"When I was four or five," she told him idly, "we lived in the hotel where the team stayed, and Hornsby used to bounce me on his knee—"

Harry, she says, bowed three times to the ground and proposed.

Kidding aside, baseball's his passion. Before sitting down to listen to the last World Series, he'd put on the Card uniform Mort Cooper gave him. In season, the radio's always tuned to the game. Lots of wives would walk in and say, "Turn that jabber off—" Others would shrug and walk out. Betty sits down and listens. She's almost as crazy about the game as he is. But that's not the point. The point is, if his hobby were the home life of the dinosaur, she'd make it her business to find out all there was to know about dinosaurs. "It's the only way that makes sense. Otherwise you're deliberately shutting yourself out of a whole part of your husband's life—"

Then there's the ranch. But first there were the saddle horses. As a child in St. Louis Betty rode every day. Her folks used horses as bribes. "If you'll take your dancing lessons, we'll buy you a saddle—" Naturally Harry loved horses, he'd been born in a circus. So they bought a pair of saddle horses. Then they had to buy a ranch to give the horses a home and themselves a place to ride. . . .

But Harry didn't know what a racetrack looked like till his wife put him wise, and it happened this way. Betty had once owned a horse named Can Jones. He'd been out of her life for quite a while when she and Harry went to New York for one of those sieges of his at the Astor Hotel. Since they couldn't show their noses without being mobbed, most of the day was spent in the hotel room. That's where Betty met Can again—on the racing page—

"Ooh look, honey, here's a horse I used to own. Let's make a bet—"

—And later in the day, "What do you think, the horse won?"

In appreciation, they paid Can a visit, watched the nags work out, got to know them by their first names. Then a friend who owned a race horse gave Harry half. Then Betty's maternal instinct started working overtime—

"Let's raise one, so we can have our own little babies—"

They bought a brood mare in foal, and had her shipped to the ranch. They bought practically everything but a glass window for the child's father to look through. Did you ever see a baby horse? Well, if only for the sight of Vicki and that foal together, it was worth double the money and then some. Now the mare's in foal again. And meantime they've acquired a stable that's up front with the live ones. . . .

To keep from getting homesick for horses, they go at least twice a week to The Hitching Post, a theatre devoted exclusively to westerns. Any time they find themselves with a spare minute, they head for the ranch—

"Now I ask you," she asked us, "where would we squeeze in a separate interest?"

3. HUSBAND OR WIFE, SATISFACTORY BEFORE SUCCESS, SOMETIMES SEEM A MISFIT IN THE HOLLYWOOD ATMOSPHERE.

Betty paused. They were both at home in Hollywood before they married—

"Besides, any atmosphere Harry didn't fit into, there'd be something wrong with the atmosphere, not with him—

"The subject of childless marriages doesn't fit either, but it gives me a chance to talk about Vicki, and her brother—we—hope—"

Vicki's not quite three and has a sweet disposition like her Pop. She's also shy like her Pop—very warm with friends, but shuts up like a clam if she doesn't know you. Calls both parents Honey, because that's what they call each other. . . .

Every night at 6:30 the three Jameses eat together—nothing's allowed to interfere with that. Actually, five of them gather round the table in front of the fireplace. Punkin the poodle, and Kilroy the spaniel, wait like gentlemen till Vicki pulls her little chair up, then plunk themselves down on either side. Betty smiles, remembering what she said to her mother soon after her marriage—

"I've got everything in the world I want. Wouldn't it be awful if I didn't have a baby—?"

For herself, she was enchanted when the baby turned out to be a girl. For Harry, the baseball fan, she was disappointed. "Never mind. Next time it'll be a boy—"

The boy is expected in late June or early July. "But, honey, what if it's another little girl? I can't bear for you to be disappointed again—"

"If it's another like Vicki," says Harry, "I'll buy her. We'll make it a girl's team—"

4. FEVERISH WORK SCHEDULES WHICH INTERFERE WITH COMPANIONSHIP.

"That could do it, but not if you both make up your minds that it won't—"

Betty's contribution was to cut her picture schedule to two a year—

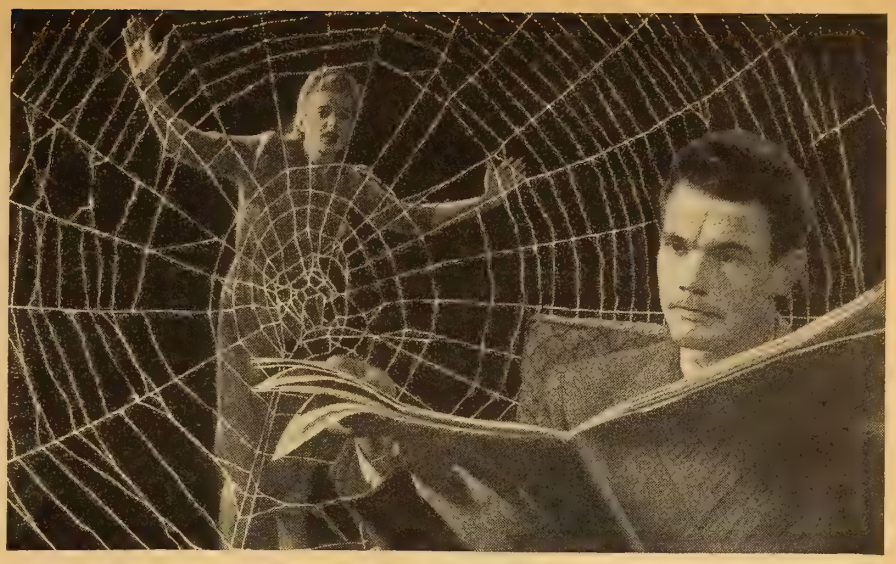
Harry's contribution is being an angel. His schedule has to be set up a year in advance. He tries to arrange it so they'll be off together. But time and again her picture starts late, and he'll be free while she's working.

When it's the other way round, there's no problem. Betty has the house and baby to keep her busy, and if Harry goes on the road, she and Vicki go with him. But for him a holiday alone isn't much fun. Yet he's never once made an issue of it, never once complained. In other words, he's an adult. Having accepted the fact that his wife's a movie star, he accepts all its conditions and doesn't find it necessary to take his disappointments out on her.

As it is, she probably takes them harder than he does. "Honey, it's not fair to keep you down here. Why don't you run up to Las Vegas or Bay Meadows?"

"No, I don't want to leave you—"

By day it's not so bad. Sometimes he'll come in and have lunch with her. If there's a chance of her getting off early, he'll wait. Otherwise, he'll play golf or baseball with the boys in the band. And phone her between innings. . . .



"Held in a web of indifference . . ."

Day after heartbreaking day I was held in an unyielding web . . . a web spun by my husband's indifference. I couldn't reach him any more! Was the fault mine? Well...thinking you know about feminine hygiene, yet trusting to now-and-then care, can make all the difference in married happiness, as my doctor pointed out. He said never to run such careless risks...prescribed "Lysol" brand disinfectant for douching—always.

"But I broke through it!"

Oh, the joy of finding Tom's love and close companionship once more! Believe me, I follow to the letter my doctor's advice on feminine hygiene . . . always use "Lysol" for douching. I wouldn't be satisfied now with salt, soda or other homemade solutions! Not with "Lysol," a proved germ-killer that cleanses so gently yet so thoroughly. It's easy to use, too, and economical. The very best part is—"Lysol" really works!

Many doctors recommend "LYSOL" for Feminine Hygiene...for 6 reasons

Reason No. 5: DEPENDABLE UNIFORMITY . . . Uniform in strength, "Lysol" is made under continued laboratory control—is far more effective than homemade douching solutions.

Note: Douche thoroughly with correct "Lysol" solution . . . always!

For Feminine Hygiene use "Lysol" always!

"Lysol" Brand Disinfectant
REG U.S. PAT. OFF.

Use this famous
Canadian Formula
for CHAPPED DRY HANDS

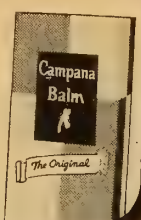
1. Quicker results. Softens roughest, driest skin over night.

2. Proved effectiveness for 65 years in cold Canada.

3. A pure, rich concentrated emollient. Aids healing. Choice of countless doctors, nurses, housewives, mothers.

At cosmetic counters—10¢, 25¢, 50¢ and $1.00 a bottle

Campana Balm
THE SKIN SOFTENER



CLEAN HAIR
in 10 minutes
WITHOUT WATER

★ No soap • No rinsing • No drying
★ Removes oil, dirt, hair odors
★ Retains wave; restores sheen
★ Grand between water shampoos
★ Ideal during colds and illness

30 SHAMPOOS WITH MITT 1.00 Plus tax,
At all good drug and department stores.

MINIPOO
DRY SHAMPOO

Cosmetic Distributors, Inc., Jersey City 6, N. J.

At night he's fresh and she's exhausted. All she wants is bed. Yet with anyone else, you'd feel at least once in a while that you had to say, "Let's go out tonight—" No use saying it to Harry, he wouldn't let her go. Won't go himself either.

"I'd rather stay home and read—"

. . ."Companionship," mused Betty, "is a funny thing. Two people can be in the same room and miles apart. Or they can be close together, even when one's asleep in bed and the other's in front of the fireplace, reading. . . ."

5. GOSSIP COLUMNS STARTING IRRESPONSIBLE RUMORS.

We hated handing her that one. Her face turned grim. . . .

They do it to everyone—especially to people whose names are top news—yet it always comes as a shock. The Jameses have hurdled twenty such rumors—beginning from shortly after their wedding to just the other month—

"Why?" Harry used to ask, completely baffled and less experienced than Betty in the ways of Hollywood. "What good does it do them—?"

"When there isn't any news, they have to make it—"

That's about the size of it. Newspaper space and air time can be filled by starting a rumor one week and denying it the next. Last month one guy had Judy Garland's mother in the hospital with a brain operation at the very moment when that lady was cheerfully rustling Sunday night supper for twelve. . . .

After their fourth or fifth press separation, Harry said, "Look, honey, let's not get hot and bothered. If you ever fall for another guy, come and tell me. I won't believe it unless I hear it from you—"

"That goes both ways—"

Harry does a better job of ignoring the whispers. They still infuriate Betty. But that's the worst they can do. You can't sow suspicion where there's perfect faith—

6. FINANCIAL INDEPENDENCE MAKES IT EASIER FOR WIVES TO BREAK AWAY.

It doesn't bother Harry how financially independent Betty gets. There's no halvesies in the James budget. Whether it's a ranch or a potato, Harry's money pays.

. . ."So according to your expert," said Betty—

"Look, he's not my expert—"

"You brought me his list, didn't you? According to him, that makes it easier for me to leave Harry. You tell him something from me. The United States Mint wouldn't make it easier."

7.THEIR WORK THROWS THEM INTO CONTACT WITH HIGHLY ATTRACTIVE PEOPLE OF THE OPPOSITE SEX, EXPOSING THEM TO CONSTANT TEMPTATION.

"Lots of folks get exposed to smallpox too, but they're vaccinated—"

Betty thinks it's up to you. She started dancing in the line at 12, and didn't run up against nearly as much of that "Come here, Sugar" stuff as popular fiction would lead you to imagine. If you want it, you can get it. If not, there are sixteen different ways of avoiding it, all legal.

As for the attractive men you meet on sets, she's so tired by the end of the day that she couldn't date the Prince of Wales if there was one. Apart from the fact that nobody else but Harry looks good to her.

8. THREAT OF AGE AND HOPE OF RECAPTURING YOUTH BY MARRYING A YOUNGER MATE.

"Look, I'm a practical person. I don't kid myself. I know everyone either dies young or gets older. When an actress gets older, she can play older parts. I'm not an actress, I'm an entertainer. I want to do musicals, and that's all I want to do. As long as people like me in them, I'll go on. But the day they tell me I'm too old for musicals, that's the day I quit—

"I've worked a long time. It'll be wonderful to sit down and relax. When Harry says, let's take December off, it'll be wonderful not to have to ask anyone else. My life'll be full without pictures—full of my husband and family and the things we do together. I'll take the years as they come as long as Harry comes with them. Every age has its own pleasures. You watch the kids grow up, step out, start their own lives, have their own children—

"Oh. You people with your charts and statistics. I could tell you in two words why marriages flop—Hollywood or any other kind—"

"Why?"

"People don't love each other enough—"

TO EACH HIS OWN

(Continued from page 37)

things like "Don't Talk to the Driver" and "Pay as You Leave" written on it), he'd come up after work at the barber shop and sit on her porch. It was a gentle, leisurely romance, with time to talk about everything in the world.

"I want a million children," Perry would say, and Roselle would say, "Me, too. And a white house with a garden."

"And not too much money. Just enough."

"And time for each other," Roselle would say softly.

It ran smoothly for the most part, this love affair, and there was really just one time when Roselle wondered whether Perry was, after all, The One. It happened like this: Saturday nights, Perry worked late at the barber shop, usually till nine. Then he'd grab a bite and run over to Roselle's. Roselle worried about his never having a nice hot meal on Saturday, and so this time she promised to cook him something absolutely out of this world to make up for all the quick snacks. She got started in the kitchen around four, and by eight everything was pretty well under control. By nine, Roselle was bathed and dressed, a vision in blue linen, and there was no sign of Perry. No sign of him at ten, nor moreover, eleven. Roselle put the dinner away in the icebox, carefully, deliberately, in a series of covered dishes, then she faced her family.

"It is definitely all over between us," she announced, pitching her voice high, above the lump in her throat. "I never want to see him again." Then, stiff-lipped, she went upstairs to bed, to bawl into her pillow all night long. The next day she heard that Perry had been at a dance and had danced continuously with the one girl in Canonsburg Roselle could not bear. (You know how there's always one character you know is gunning for your man? That was whom Perry had been with.) That cinched it. He called to explain, and she'd have none of him; and for six weeks she sulked. Oh, not so you'd notice it. She was very, very gay.

"I'm really not in the least angry," she'd say in the new impersonal voice.

After six weeks of it she broke down. The old Model-T was at the station one afternoon when she got off the train from school, and she wanted to walk by it with her chin up; but her feet double-crossed her. Somehow she found herself on the worn leather seat holding Perry's hand.

"Honey," he was saying. "Oh, gee honey—" And then the story came out. He'd been closing up the barber shop that Saturday night, when a mob of his buddies came in. They were all going to the dance, and they wanted Perry to go. He hemmed and hawed, embarrassed to let on that he had this really heavy date. "Boy, that babe sure has you hog-tied," one boy said, and another one said, "No female's gonna get me under her thumb." The upshot of it was that Perry went, was stuck with That Girl almost all night and had an utterly miserable time.

"It's all right," Roselle said. "I should have known it wasn't your fault."

"I'm such a jerk," Perry said, and they looked at each other and looked at each other, and they couldn't stop smiling.

They were married when they were twenty-one, after Perry had given up an eighty-dollar-a-week barbering job for a $24 singing spot with Freddie Caralone.

Roselle is a home-maker. If they ever played one town as long as six weeks, she really dug in. She'd sand down the furniture and refinish it, hang fresh curtains, buy pots of ivy and join the public library. She'd put down roots in the twinkling of an eye, pull 'em up again when they put the show on the road.

tubes, tubes, tubes . . .

They were in Chicago, finishing up an engagement before going on to Denver; living in the inevitable hotel room, the bathroom of which was crowded—as always—with tubes of toothpaste. (It's one of Perry's vices, loading up on dozens of tubes of toothpaste of every conceivable brand, compounded of all sorts of exotic ingredients.) One morning Roselle tried one of the new ones, and it made her deathly ill. She shook Perry awake.

"I'm poisoned," she said. "I'm desperately, desperately ill." She made him throw out all the toothpaste and extracted his solemn promise that he'd stick to one safe brand thereafter. That should have settled it, but it didn't. Roselle didn't seem to get better, and Perry was worried to death, wondering what had been in the paste—arsenate of lead, or what. He took her to the doctor that afternoon, and when she emerged there was a kind of radiance about her, sort of a lilt to her walk. "Are you all right?" Perry asked her. "Are you going to be better soon?"

"Why, yes," she said in that superior voice only a brand new expectant mother can assume. "In about seven months I should be absolutely cured."

When Ronnie was born, Perry wanted to stop batting around and go back to his first trade. but Roselle put her small foot down.

"You're good at this stuff, doll," she'd tell him. "Some day you'll be as well-known as Bing."

"Think so, baby?" How he loved that pint-sized blond.

"Think so! Why I'm so darn positive—"

So they bought a great big Packard, had the back seat taken out and a real custom-made baby's mattress installed in its place. When the band rolled, Ronnie rolled too, snug as a bug in his zipper robe.

Perry became a real family man. He bought a camera, carried around fistfuls of snapshots of "The Punk." Some of the boys had movies of their kids, so he brought home a movie camera. "Can you operate that thing?" Roselle was awed.

"Sure," Perry said. "It says here—" He followed the directions to a T, and he got some pretty good movies. He's not Cecil B. DeMille, you understand, but he caught Ronnie standing on his head at six months,

New! Bewitching!
Glamorous!
Hot Lips
LIPSTICK
If you must—throw caution to the winds—add daring, enticing new color to your lips with alluring Hot Lips Lipstick. Comes in four sultry, seductive shades in a beautiful metal swivel case. Jumbo size—at cosmetic counters.
Jumbo Size 25¢ PLUS TAX
MAR-O-MIST INC. CHICAGO

ONE OF THE MOST EFFECTIVE METHODS ever discovered for

Intimate Feminine Hygiene

Easier—Daintier—More Convenient

Greaseless Suppository Gives Continuous Medication for Hours

Leaves No Tell-Tale Odor!

You can readily see why this higher type of intimate feminine cleanliness — Zonitors — has become so widely used among highly intelligent and exacting women. And why you, too, should bless the day you learned about this method.

Zonitors are so much easier, daintier, and convenient—so POWERFUL yet so ABSOLUTELY SAFE to tissues.

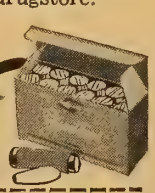
Positively Non-Irritating; Non-Smarting

Zonitors are greaseless, stainless, snow-white vaginal suppositories. When inserted, they instantly begin to release their powerful germicidal properties and continue to do so for hours—assuring you hours of continuous medication. They are positively non-burning, non-irritating, and non-poisonous.

Easy To Carry If Away From Home

Zonitors actually destroy offending odor. Help guard against infection. They are so effective they immediately kill every germ they touch. You know it's not always possible to contact all the germs in the tract. BUT YOU CAN BE SURE Zonitors kill every reachable germ and keep them from multiplying. Any drugstore.

Zonitors



(Each sealed in separate glass vial)

FREE: Mail this coupon today for free booklet sent in plain wrapper. Reveals frank intimate facts. Zonitors, Dept. ZMSC-37, 370 Lexington Avenue, New York 17, N. Y.

Name_____

Address_____

City_____ State_____

taking his first steps at a little past a year. He caught Ronnie eating, burping, sleeping. "Reading" at eighteen months, cutting his birthday cake at two. That was the year they had to light the candles every night until the last crumb of cake was gone. That was the year Perry began to worry in earnest about the future.

"He'll be going to school soon," he told Roselle. "We can't be gypsies forever."

"We won't be," little Mrs. Como reassured him. And she was right. Ronnie is six-and-a-half now, and the Comos have finally settled down.

Most of you know how Perry gave up singing for a while, went back to barbering so that his kid could grow up in one place, like other kids. Then how he got a good offer from CBS and another from the Copacabana in New York and another from Hollywood—and how he went back to singing because his little blond wanted him to. Came the offer to do the thrice-weekly spot on the Chesterfield supper club. Came the beautiful contract with Twentieth Century-Fox that only takes him (and of course his adored family) coastward about nine weeks a year. Maybe you know all about that. But maybe you don't know how wonderful it all is for Perry and Roselle and Ronnie.

nice fat acre . . .

They have their dream house now, a really lovely spot, beautifully decorated by Guy Lombardo's brother, Joseph, with a garden and a terrace and a million trees. A nice fat acre in Manhasset, Long Island, where Perry is close to his beloved golf course; where Ronnie keeps three frogs named Slowy, Fasty and Jockey in a tree well and is readying a doghouse that's a miniature replica of the big house for a cocker spaniel puppy; where Roselle can dig in in earnest and uncrate all her treasured antiques.

It is heaven for the three of them, and sometimes Perry and Roselle will sit on their terrace in the evening and talk about it. "Looks like we have pretty nearly everything." That's Perry's nice, quiet voice, and he's talking humbly, gratefully. He's the guy who can't take a thing for granted.

"We've always had everything," Roselle said. "This house—it's wonderful. I love every inch of it—but if we should lose it somehow—I'm trying to say that it's not all the things we own that make me happy. It's us and Ronnie, and evenings like this. You know what I'm talking about, doll?"

"I know."

Sometimes the evenings are less idyllic, but it's the variety that makes their life so much fun. Say it's a Tuesday night—that's one of Perry's nights off. The three of them will be sitting around, Perry reading the sport pages, Roselle and Ronnie playing one of their everlasting games. Train or bomb or something.

"Look, there's this mechanism, mom. See it here?"

"Yes." (It's all imaginary, you understand.)

"Well, that releases the bomb and when it does—boy, when it does, the whole darn airplane disintegrates, and it's got about nine engines, that big old airplane. Okay, now you're the plane—" They'll go along swimmingly for a while and then suddenly Ronnie will turn on his mom for some violation of the rules. "Okay," he'll say. "That's just the limit. I'm sure not going to play with you any more." Whereupon he'll flounce out. Then Perry pounces on her.

"Why the devil do you let him talk to you that way? As if you were one of the boys in the back room or something. Command his respect—"

Roselle of the serene and smiling nature flares up at that. "Command his respect—when I'm alternately his pony, his nurse, his stooge, his buddy. You try it and see how far you get commanding his respect." They'll glare at each other a minute, and then it'll strike them both funny.

"You look like Mickey Mouse in those glasses," Roselle will say. And that'll be that.

For such a sweet and considerate guy, he has one maddening habit. He simply cannot remember dates. There was the time not so long ago that he and Roselle decided to go out to dinner of a Thursday evening. Roselle engaged a nurse to take care of Ronnie to the tune of considerable trouble, assembled her wardrobe, and was in that nice pink state of anticipation the evening of the dinner spree, when in walked Perry with his pal, Mike.

"Come out in the kitchen, baby," he called. "You've got yourself two fine chefs." And out of a large paper bag he pulled the ingredients for a real Italian spaghetti dinner.

"But, doll, this is the night we were going out to dinner. . . ." His face fell.

"Say, that's right." He started putting away his cans of tomato paste, the garlic, the cheese, looking at them sadly as a little boy looks at the toys he's putting away for the night. Roselle was lost.

"I can call off the nurse," she said briskly, trying not to hug him. "It doesn't really matter." And of course it really didn't. What mattered was the big smile he gave her, the look in his eyes when he put the spaghetti in front of her.

There's one date though that Perry doesn't forget, and that's their anniversary. Roselle has every present he's ever given her—from the noisy seven-jewel watch that commemorated their first one, to the most recent gift—a heavenly slim gold watch inscribed on the bracelet part: "To Mom from Ronnie and Pop, as always, only so much more so."

At 34, he's on top of the world, this nice, warm-voiced guy, and a lot of people are wondering, "Has it gone to his head?" Well, listen. He still cuts his kid's hair ("In the garage, please, so you don't get fuzz all over everything.") because no other barber does it right. Last year he was voted one of the ten best dressed men in America, but he still prefers easy, unglamorous clothes. He still gets a kick out of signing autographs for the kids at St. Peter's—Ronnie's school; out of the early show and a soda afterwards; out of visits with his mom and his brothers and sisters in Canonsburg. Has Como gone stuffy? If you ask the girl who owns one, she'll say, "Pierine?" (And there's music in that name when his wife says it.) "He's a small town boy still. Simple, sweet, kind. But, look, don't ask me. I'm in love with the guy."

Well, who isn't?

I SAW IT HAPPEN

A few years ago, when Frankie was just beginning to wow the bobby-sockers, he made a personal appearance at Cleveland's Palace Theater. Just as he was giving out with "Take me, I'm yours if you'll take me . . ." some uncontrollable fan in the balcony shouted, "Wrap him up!"

Margaret Selmants
Cleveland, Ohio

THE FANS

(Continued from page 90)

scrupulous sense of responsibility, a gift for getting along with people, and love of hard work—which we think are the criteria for a good club president—may be found in both age groups.

A special word of congratulation goes to the runners-up, all fine clubs and worthy of high commendation. In League One—the Dick Haymes Associates, Nelson Eddy Music, Guy Madison, Nelson Eddy International, Dennis Morgan, Shirley Temple (Smithka), June Allyson, and Jane Withers Club. In League Two—the Jeanette MacDonald (Waddy), Gene Kelly, Bette Davis, Jack Carson, Bob Crosby, Frank Sinatra (Bush), Evelyn MacGregor, Sinatra (DiMattia) and Rise Stevens Clubs. In League Three—the New Stars, Marian McManus, Jean Pierre Aumont, Frances Langford, Edward Ashley, Errol Flynn, Johnny Coy (Lanzillo), Sinatra (Wolfenstein) and Joe Cotten Clubs.

on with the new . . .

Hardly pausing to say thanks to all the wonderful clubs which cooperated in our old Trophy competition, we're going right on with the start of our contest for the first half of 1947. Here's how the points stack up for January:

1. "This Is My Best" Contest. Each month our editorial board selects the six best articles and/or poems appearing in your club journals. (Note: Do not submit articles or poems direct to us. They must first be printed in your club journal. Winners of our January contest snag 100 points each for their clubs and, in addition, will receive a beautiful gift ensemble of Faberge's glamorous "Aphrodisia" Perfume and Cologne! The lucky gals are Marjorie Heidrick, for "Acres of Diamonds," (Humphrey) Bogart Broadcast; Pat Harris, for "Christmas," Soliloquy (Sinatra; Ling); Jeanne Barbier, for "Class of '49," (Charles) Korvinus; Ellen Caughlin, for "Thoughts of a Bobby-Soxer," Sinatra Journal (Ellovich); Elizabeth Gilson, for "Hollywood Premier," (Diana) Lynn's Lingo, and Muriel Scott, for "My Afternoon at the Cottens'," (Joseph) Cotten Chronicle.

2. Best Journal Editors for January. The club editor in each league, judged by our staff as having done the best editing job, scores 250 points for her club and also rates a lovely gift prize for herself—a special assortment of Pond's fine beauty aids, packed exclusively for the winners of this contest! They are: 1. Rita and Jo Mottola, Nelson Eddy Music Club. 2. Carrie DeHart, Scott McKay Club. 3. Harriet Dworkin, Keenan Wynn Club.

3. Candid Camera Contest. Any member of an MSFCA club is eligible to submit as many candid snaps as he wishes—of any interesting subject—to our Candid Camera Contest Editor. The only requirement is that the pic must be one taken by an amateur. Please write your name, address, club and a line of description on the back of each snap.)

First prize winner this month is Georgia Eustice, who scores 100 points for the Rand Brooks Club, and receives a handsome, serviceable Tangee Trip-Kit, filled with those wonderful Tangee cosmetics! Other winning camera wizards are: Ann Latting, Cornel Wilde Club; Cecilia Giza, Guy Madison Club; Kay McGowan, Pierre Aumont Club; Marjorie Roster, Rise Stevens Club, and Sara Ann Kennedy, Bingites. Each garners 50 points for her club and a dandy selection of four baffling Dell Mys-

SCALP ODOR IS OFFENSIVE!

The Scalp Perspires . . . your hair collects and holds odors and dirt. Don't risk offending either in public, or personal "close-ups."

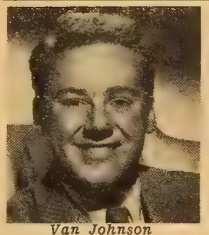
Remove Scalp Odors by using Fitch's Saponified Cocoanut Oil Shampoo. This efficient cleanser "suds-up" into "mountains" of lather that float away dirt and scalp odors. Leaves your hair with a light, fresh scent, radiantly clean, soft and easy to arrange into your personal hair style.

Patented Rinsing Agent contained right in this shampoo eliminates need for special after rinses. No dull film remains on your hair. At drug counters or have professional applications at beauty shops.

Fitch's

SAPONIFIED COCOANUT OIL SHAMPOO

MOVIE STAR PHOTOS IN FULL COLORS



Van Johnson M-G-M Star

CORNEL WILDE—RITA HAYWORTH—ROBERT MITCHUM—TYRONE POWER—ESTHER WILLIAMS—PETER LAWFORD—TOM DRAKE—JANE RUSSELL—GREGORY PECK—JUDY GARLAND—ROBERT WALKER—PERRY COMO—JEANNE CRAIN—DICK HAYMES—HELMUT DANTINE—DANA ANDREWS—INGRID BERGMAN—JOHN HODIAK—GENE TIERNEY—FRANK SINATRA—VAN JOHNSON—JUNE ALLYSON—ALAN LADD—LANA TURNER—ROY ROGERS—BETTY GRABLE—ALICE FAYE—SONJA HENIE—GENE AUTRY—DANE CLARK—GLORIA DeHAVEN—GUY MADISON—SHIRLEY TEMPLE—WILLIAM EYTHE—BOB HUTTON—LON McCALLISTER—BING CROSBY—CLARK GABLE—BETTY HUTTON—LAUREN BACALL—GREER GARSON—MARGARET O'BRIEN—WM. (BILL) ELLIOT—PAULETTE GODDARD.

These gorgeous photos are printed on heavy coated paper, size 8 x 10, in FULL LIFELIKE COLORS. Your choice of any 3 photos listed for 25c—any 8 for 50c—choice of 16 for $1.00 or 34 different for $2.00 postpaid. DON'T WAIT mail your order for this special offer NOW to

IRVING KLAW : 212 EAST 14 ST.
Dept. B-21 New York City 3, N. Y.

FREE ENLARGEMENT OF YOUR FAVORITE PHOTO

from Famous* HOLLYWOOD FILM STUDIOS

Just to get acquainted, we will make you a beautiful professional 5x7 enlargement FREE of any snapshot, photo or negative. Be sure to include color of hair, eyes and clothing, and get our bargain offer for having your enlargement beautifully hand-colored in oil and mounted in a handsome frame. Limit 2 to a customer. Your original returned. Please enclose 10c to cover cost of handling and mailing each enlargement. Act now! Offer limited to U. S. A.

HOLLYWOOD FILM STUDIOS 7021 SANTA MONICA BLVD., Dept. 231 HOLLYWOOD 38, CALIFORNIA

when that mean, old cold makes your laundress scold . . .
to the rescue with SITROUX!
. . . say SIT-TRUE
THE BOX WITH THE BOW ON TOP
SITROUX TISSUES
SITROUX TISSUES
SITROUX TISSUES

AMAZING THING! By Cooper
AN AMAZING NEW SCIENTIFICALLY COMPOUNDED TREATMENT FOR PIMPLES CALLED TING . . , WORKS WHILE IT HELPS HIDE THEM!
WITH PIMPLES ALL GONE LOVE FLIES IN THE WINDOW
APPLY TING TO PIMPLES, LET IT DRY— AND WHISK OFF EXCESS POWDER. TING IS BOTH FUNGICIDAL AND GERMICIDAL— REALLY WORKS WONDERS FOR EXTERNALLY CAUSED PIMPLES!
IN LAB TESTS TING HAS PROVEN EFFECTIVE IN KILLING ON 60 SECOND CONTACT SPECIFIC TYPES OF FUNGI THAT SOMETIMES CAUSE SKIN BLOTCHES
EVEN IF OTHER PRODUCTS HAVE FAILED, TRY AMAZING TING TODAY! ALL DRUGGISTS ONLY 50¢
Ting
ANTISEPTIC MEDICATED CREAM

tery Books, guaranteed to raise the gals' hair clean off their heads!

4. A very special prize goes to Walter Goldby, who wins the month's award for the best original piece of art work published in a club journal. Walt will receive a year's subscription to the popular Front Page Detective Magazine, b. a year's subscription to Screen Album Magazine, and 3. four Dell Mystery Books. He also earns 150 points for the Ilene Woods Club.

5. Best Journals of the Month (500 points to each club): 1. (Dennis) Morgan Memos. 2. (Charles) Korvinus. 3. Voice Parade (Sinatra; Beattie).

6. Best Journal Covers of the Month (250 points to each club): 1. Nelson Eddy Music Club. 2. None qualified in this category. 3. Alan Ladd Club (Pearl).

7. Most Worthwhile Activities of the Month: 1. Guy Madison Club (Donated $70 to VA Hospitals). 2. Frank Sinatra Club (Bund) (Presented 25 dolls to War Orphans Committee; also donated $25 to Sister Kenny Fund for Frank's birthday). 3. Bill Johnston Club (Bought a row of tickets at Miami Theatre, where Bill is appearing in a show, and turned them over to veterans recuperating in nearby VA Hospital).

8. Greatest Percentage Increases in Membership (100 points to each club): 1. Nelson Eddy Music Club. 2. Sons of the Pioneers Club. 3. Nina Foch Club.

9. Best MSFCA Correspondents (50 points to each club): 1. Mary Pritchett, Dennis Morgan Club. 2. Irene DiMattia, Frank Sinatra Club. 3. Louise Warnes, Richard Jaekel Club.

And that's the score for round one!

club banter . . .

As we told you back in September, in our one-sheet issue of THE FANS, Hollywood clubbers will hold their first annual fan club convention and party this summer! Ellen Roufs is chairman; dates: June 23-29.

Lucky Leona Rosenthal, prexy of one of the official Eastern James Mason clubs, was one of the few persons who succeeded in getting an interview with Mr. and Mrs. Mason, on their arrival in the United States. James issued a statement that will make important news among all American Mason clubs, and he requested Leona to forward that message to all Mason prexies in this country. Contact her at 1285 St. John's Place, Brooklyn 13, N. Y.

All Peggy Pearl did was to ask the manager of the Ambassador Theatre in St. Louis if it was all right to publicize her Alan Ladd Club during the run of Two Years Before the Mast. First thing she knew all local members were invited to the preview, were interviewed by a reporter from the St. Louis Star, and were treated to a phone call to Alan!

The Party Parade: The Baritony Club, run by Annette Russell, for Ray Heatherton, Jerry Cooper and Jimmy Farrell, is one of our most party minded clubs. Their latest was a dinner at Chum Lee's Resaurant in N. Y. . . . In Chicago, the Blaine Boosters (Vivian, natch!) threw a birthday party for her in absentia. Shirley Weis and Jacki Jaacks, co-prexies, arranged everything—place cards, candles, cake—in fact, it looked so good, they called Vi long distance and described the scene. . . . The Aumont Club held a Christmas Benefit for their adopted French orphan. They're Foster Parents, you know . . . The Sam Edwards Club (Lilian Nagai, prexy) goes in for skating parties . . . Eileen Sinnott's Johnny Desmond Club surprised Johnny with a birthday shindig in the MBS studios, after his broadcast . . . Ken Curtis is another honorary whose members entertained at a surprise party.

M. S. GOES SKIING

(Continued from page 53)

in Austria years ago, and he was skiing alone, starry-eyed with exhilaration. In front of him yawned a twenty foot drop to a ledge overhanging a steep cliff, but he didn't see it because the wind was blowing the snow out over the ledge like a safe, white sheet. At the edge of the drop he suddenly became aware of his danger, but it was too late to stop and he plunged downward to the ledge, up to his neck in snow.

There are several rules for would-be skiers, the first of which concerns the purchase of equipment. A beginner's skis should reach from the ground to his wrist when the arm is held straight up. Later, when the addict has reached the point where he feels he can handle the situation, the skis should be longer, reaching the fingertips. Hickory wood is the best lumber for skis, but lately they are being made of a lightweight metal, which is a considerable improvement. The ski poles should be a little less than shoulder high —their tips reaching the palm when the hand is outstretched. Shoes can either be worn on the feet and then attached to the skis, as in roller skating, or one can buy ski shoes and have them permanently fitted to the skis.

a st. bernard helps . . .

Of course, having shoes attached to skis means that the skier must carry his walking shoes with him while skiing. This amounts to quite a load, considering that he already is carrying a thermos bottle with coffee or hot chocolate, sandwiches, fruit and, if he believes in the St. Bernard theory, a few nips of brandy. He must also carry a can of wax. This is used on the skis to facilitate moving at all. The skier must always wax his skiis carefully.

There is a jargon that goes with skiing, including such words as herring bone, sidestep, snowplow, telemark and Christiana. A herring bone is a method of climbing, done by moving forward with the toes pointed outward, the skis making a herring bone pattern behind the skier. The sidestep is an easier but more awkward way of ascending. It is done with the skier at right angles to the hill, going up one step at a time much as a child attempting his first flight of stairs. The snowplow is a manner of stopping, done by spreading the legs apart and then pointing the toes inward, running the points of the skis together. This can be embarrassing if carried too far. The telemark will turn you in deep snow and is accomplished, when skiing down a slope diagonally, by shoving the ski opposite the side to which you want to turn in that direction, and shifting weight to that ski. The Christiana is also a method for turning and is done by executing a snowplow and then pulling up one ski and placing it parallel to the mate.

None of this bothers our Mr. Bey, who digests it all with a great continental aplomb. Even on the day MS's cameraman accompanied Turhan to Snow Valley, a skiing resort about three hours' drive from Los Angeles, his rented skis were without wax and continually loaded with snow. As for Yvonne DeCarlo, she was a brave girl and went through her instructions with gritted teeth and prayers. When Turhan asked her if she'd like to go again, she smiled weakly and said, "Well, maybe. Yes, I guess so." Turhan didn't tell her, but she has approximately fifteen hours of steady slope-sliding ahead of her before her reactions grow to fearless enthusiasm.

DOES A BEAUTIFUL GIRL suffer more like this THAN A HOMELY ONE?

Nature has endowed some women with remarkable beauty of face and form—with sweet, loving dispositions. Others—she may have slighted when it came to passing out gifts of charm and beauty.

But in any event—whether beautiful or unattractive—many women by their very physical nature are apt to suffer distressing symptoms on 'certain days' of the month.

This Is Something You Shouldn't Joke About

In case female functional monthly disturbances cause you—like so many unfortunates—to suffer from pain, nervous distress and feel so tired and cranky you lose your sense of humor—this is nothing to joke about.

Start right away—try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to relieve such symptoms! It's famous for this purpose! Taken regularly thruout the month—this great medicine helps build up resistance against such female distress.

For over 70 years Pinkham's Compound has been helping thousands upon thousands of girls and women in this way. Time has proved it one of the most effective medicines for this purpose. Just see if you, too, don't remarkably benefit. Pinkham's Compound is also a splendid stomachic tonic. It is certainly worth trying! Any drugstore.

Lydia E. Pinkham's
VEGETABLE COMPOUND

Dolly had "half-day" hair

tidy at ten — frowsy at four

Her hair looks smooth when she's just combed it; but look at her later!

Poor Dolly didn't know how to make a hair-do stay put . . .

'til she discovered Nestle HAIRLAC

— the delicately perfumed hair lacquer

Men hate "frowsy" women. Why not have that well-groomed look they admire, when it's so easy . . . just pat a few drops of Nestle Hairlac on your finished coiffure and it will stay lovely all day long. Get Hairlac today at your drug or dept. store.

KEEPS HAIR UNDER CONTROL AND LUSTROUS

1–FORMULA 301 will skillfully conceal externally caused pimples and minor skin blemishes.

2–Does not leave a mask-like appearance . . . just sheer, transparent loveliness!

3–Use this glamourizing lotion skin aid as a powder base and complexion beautifier day and night.

4–You will look lovelier after the first application!

FORMULA 301

Powder Base and Complexion Beautifier

Conceals tiny lines and minor blemishes effectively

ANTISEPTIC • ASTRINGENT • PROTECTIVE

At Drug and Dept. Stores 39c • $1.00 • $1.50

At all Ten Cent Stores—Trial Sizes 10c and 20c

If unavailable in your locality, order from us.

10c ☐ 20c ☐ 39c ☐ $1.00 ☐ $1.50 ☐

(Add 20% tax)

Name .....

Address .....

City & State .....

KAY PREPARATIONS CO., 522 5th Avenue, New York 18

SWEET AND HOT

(Continued from page 100)

tunes from "Carnival in Costa Rica" (see Best From the Movies) Jane Harvey sings.

MAD ABOUT YOU—Warren Evans—Sam Price (Decca)—This is the song Lana Turner fell in love with. It was two or three years ago, and she was in some spot on 52nd Street, where Billy Daniels was singing, and it sounded wonderful to her. It sounded so good that she was talking about buying an interest in it, but I don't think anything ever came of that. Nevertheless, here it is, in a new version.

BEST HOT JAZZ

BENNY GOODMAN—Benjie's Bubble (Columbia)—In the old days, a lot of swing numbers ("Tiger Rag," for instance) were derived from marches. Benny Goodman seems to be going back in that direction, because "Benjie's Bubble" is simply a jazzy version of "Under The Double Eagle." It was dreamed up by Benny's former pianist, Joey Bushkin.

JAZZ AT THE PHILHARMONIC, Vol. IV (Disc)—Here's another of those rowdy, informal albums recorded at a jam session. The series originated at the Philharmonic Auditorium in Los Angeles, and since then, the musicians have done two cross-country tours under the title, "Jazz at the Philharmonic." Ironically enough, the L. A. Philharmonic won't let them play there any more. Claim they kick up too much pandemonium.

HAL McINTYRE—Scarlet and Amber (Cosmo)—This is instrumental, in two parts, one slow, one fast. I don't know whether the title's supposed to suggest "Gone With The Wind" and "Forever You Know What" but it's clever sounding.

LEO WATSON—The Snake Pit (Signature)—"Snake Pit" really sounds like its title; it's a wild thing. And the trombone, Vic Dickenson, plays the way Leo sings, if you can imagine such a happening. The other side is the most knocked-out version of "Jingle Bells" yet.

MARY LOU WILLIAMS—Waltz Boogie (Victor)—I strongly recommend this very unusual, very pretty record. It's the only boogie-woogie piano solo ever recorded in three-quarter time, and it shows what a great musician Mary Lou Williams is.

BEST FROM THE MOVIES

SMASH-UP—Hush-A-Bye Island: Frank Sinatra (Columbia)—The other side of "Hush-A-Bye Island" is "This Is The Night" (listed under Best Popular). Both sides are typical Sinatra performances. By the time you read this, though, you'll probably be able to buy something very *un*typical. It's the record Frank made with the Metronome All-Star band. Every year, Metronome makes a record for the Musicians' Charity Fund, and features winners of its annual poll. This time, Frankie, singing "Sweet Lorraine," joined King Cole, Coleman Hawkins and several members of the Duke Ellington and Stan Kenton bands.

I caught Frankie in his act at the Wedgwood Room of the Waldorf Astoria and I swear he gets more sensational all the time. He's not only a great singer, and a great person, but he's a hell of a personality. He told me he was under doctor's orders, and he wasn't even supposed to be working, but when he came on later with a cup of coffee in his hand, singing "They've Got An Awful Lot of Coffee In Brazil," you wouldn't have known there was anything bothering him. They kept him there for an hour and a half, and nobody got tired, except possibly Frank. He only appeared once a night (at the midnight show) but what an appearance! He's got some satirical material—there's one number about Old Man Crosby, who just keeps rolling along—and there's a cute fan-letter-to-Ingrid-Bergman number, and the dramatic soliloquy from "Carousel" and a lot of off-the-beaten-track stuff I wish he'd record.

THE FABULOUS DORSEYS—At Sundown: Tommy Dorsey (Victor): Paul Weston-Matt Dennis (Capitol)—Here's the first record featuring music from the picture based on the lives of Tommy and Jimmy D, but there'll undoubtedly be lots more where this came from. I've seen the script of "The Fabulous Dorseys," and it actually has the name of the town where the boys were born, and the story of their famous feud, and a few other little things that lead me to believe it may possibly bear some resemblance to the facts.

RECORDS OF THE MONTH

Selected by Leonard Feather

BEST POPULAR

AND SO TO BED—Dinah Shore (Columbia), Artie Shaw (Musicraft)
BLESS YOU (FOR BEING AN ANGEL)—Betty Rhodes (Victor), Phil Brito (Musicraft,) Harry Cool (Signature)
HUGGIN' AND A-CHALKIN'—Johnny Mercer (Capitol), Herbie Fields (Victor)
I'LL CLOSE MY EYES—Mildred Bailey Majestic), Teddy Walters (Musicraft), Dinah Shore (Columbia)
I'LL NEVER LOVE AGAIN—Desi Arnaz (Victor)
MAD ABOUT YOU—Warren Evans-Sam Price (Decca)
MAGENTA MOODS—Herbie Jeffries Album (Exclusive)
SONATA—Jo Stafford (Capitol), Tony Martin (Mercury)
THIS IS THE NIGHT—Frank Sinatra (Columbia)
YOU'LL ALWAYS BE THE ONE I LOVE—Dinah Shore (Columbia), Betty Rhodes (Victor)

BEST HOT JAZZ

DON BYAS—Tenor Sax Album (Savoy)
HERBIE FIELDS—Blue Fields (Victor)
BENNY GOODMAN—Benjie's Bubble (Columbia)
BILLIE HOLIDAY—album (Commodore)
JAZZ AT THE PHILHARMONIC Vol. IV—(Disc)
LOUIS JORDAN—Let The Good Times Roll (Decca)
HAL McINTYRE—Scarlet & Amber (Cosmo)
CHARLIE SHAVERS—Serenade to a Pair of Nylons (Vogue)
LEO WATSON—The Snake Pit (Signature)
MARY LOU WILLIAMS—Waltz Boogie (Victor)

BEST FROM THE MOVIES

CARNIVAL IN COSTA RICA—Another Night Like This; Mi Vida: Desi Arnaz (Victor)
DUEL IN THE SUN—Theme Music: Al Goodman (Victor); Album: Boston Pops Orchestra (Victor)
MY HEART GOES CRAZY—So Would I: Georgia Gibbs (Majestic), Claude Thornhill (Columbia), Paul Weston-Matt Dennis (Capitol)
SMASH-UP—Hush-A-Bye Island: Frank Sinatra (Columbia)
SONG OF THE SOUTH—Uncle Remus Said: Woody Herman (Columbia), Monica Lewis (Signature); Song of the South Album: Tony Pastor (Cosmo)
THE BEST YEARS OF OUR LIVES—Among My Souvenirs: Frank Sinatra (Columbia), Bing Crosby (Decca), Etta Jones (Victor), Alvino Rey (Capitol)
THE FABULOUS DORSEYS—At Sundown: Tommy Dorsey (Victor), Paul Weston-Matt Dennis (Capitol)
THIS TIME FOR KEEPS—Easy To Love: Dick Haymes (Decca)
TILL THE CLOUDS ROLL BY—Ol' Man River: Frank Sinatra (Columbia)

STRICTLY FOR LAUGHS

(Continued from page 51)

set. They called for me. When I get my curls caught in a musical score I'm not human. Shall we get to work?"

"Let's," Judy said, trying to look austere to cover up the jelling sympathy she knew would show on her face. After all, forty-five minutes!

They got down to the work at hand. Judy was to do the "Interview" number in Ziegfeld Follies. Kay, a comparative newcomer to the music department, fresh from the prolonged success of her own vocal work as leader of The Rhythm Girls, was to coach her.

"All Judy had to do was sing," Kay said afterwards, "and act like a combination of Gertrude Lawrence, Greta Garbo and five other grand ladies of the screen. She was bristling. She had one thing on her mind—do it—do it so impressively that I'd be flabbergasted, and then get out of there."

That's the way it was.

Judy went home with a better feeling. Kay went home with a solid respect for the star she'd inadvertently left waiting like a hitch-hiker on a speedway.

There were other rehearsals and coaching sessions. They were always gruelling, hard work. When Kay ran through a particularly difficult phrasing or did a whole song to indicate how she thought Judy might improve her delivery, Judy kept thinking, "I wish I had a voice that could do all that!" Sometimes they worked at the studio. Sometimes Kay went up to the home on Sunset Plaza Drive where Judy now had her head in the clouds as Mrs. Vincente Minnelli.

no time for blues . . .

"You teeter along the edge of all sorts of moods and complexes when you are expecting," Judy confided to a friend, "and that's how the camaraderie began to spring up between Kay and me. She's so full of interests, that I never had time while waiting for Liza May's arrival to get blue or giddy or listless."

When the baby was born and time came for the christening, Judy and Vincente decided that Kay should be the Godmother and her husband, radio producer Bill Spier, the Godfather. That clinched the friendship.

There are those who secretly suspect the sanity of Judy Garland and Kay and their respective spouses. That idea could be shared by anyone who happened to be in the vicinity of a small hotel during a recent few days. Judy and Vincente and Kay and Bill climbed into their cars on the spur of the moment and drove down to Laguna Beach one day.

The foursome checked in at the Coast Inn, one of the few places that can boast three terraces of rooms fronting directly on the ocean. The constant roar of the surf was too much for all of them. Such peace after the backstage grinding on four sets of Hollywood nerves made them all lazy. Bill and Vincente, feeling the pangs of hunger setting in, proposed to journey forth among the artists, crackpots, and plain honest citizens, to one of the colorful little restaurants for food.

"I think I'll just quietly starve, instead," Judy said. "The food may be wonderful, but that ocean has given me a touch of paralysis. My legs refuse to move."

So Bill and Vincente went shopping. They came back loaded to the chins with canned goods and two Sterno stoves, also a can opener. Kay went to work.

When the feast was over, Judy said, "It's a miracle—Oscar of the Waldorf never served a finer banquet."

Does your laxative leave a bad taste in your mouth?

THE SICKENING, "druggy" taste of some laxatives is enough to turn your stomach. But it's even worse when that taste lingers in your mouth, as an unpleasant reminder of the dose you've taken.

There's nothing like that, when you use Ex-Lax! You just eat a delicious little tablet which tastes like fine chocolate... and that's all there is to it! Ex-Lax is a pleasure to take—not a punishment!

And Ex-Lax works pleasantly, too. It's dependable and effective, but effective in a gentle way. Not too strong, not too mild... Ex-Lax is the "Happy Medium" laxative!

For more than 40 years, Ex-Lax has been America's favorite laxative—the choice of grown-ups and children alike. Today, Ex-Lax is used by more people than any other laxative . . . over 40 million boxes sold last year! As a precaution, use only as directed.

10c and 25c

The "Happy Medium" Laxative

★When you have a cold—and if you need a laxative—don't dose yourself with harsh purgatives. Take Ex-Lax!

MONEY QUICK — Sell GREETING CARDS AND PERSONAL STATIONERY

Extra cash with new 1947 line. Just show friends, neighbors, others, tremendous value 16-card All-Occasion assortment. Sells for only $1.00. You make as much as 50c per box. Also fascinating Birthday, Get-Well, Baby, Humorous, Gift Wrapping, Correspondence Notes boxes 33½c up. Extra Bonus. Special Money-Saving Offer. Experience unnecessary. Write for Feature Everyday assortment on approval and FREE Personal Stationery sample portfolio.

FREE SAMPLES PERSONAL STATIONERY

Elmira Greeting Card Co., Dept. M-193, Elmira, N. Y.

DON'T DYE GRAY HAIR

until you try Mary T. Goldman's Gray Hair Coloring Preparation. This famous "Color Control" method gives hair the lovely, appealing color you desire, quickly —or so gradually even close friends won't guess your secret.

So simple! Safe! Sure! Comb this clear liquid through your gray, bleached or faded hair. Watch "Color Control" action give your hair the youthful-looking shade you want. Pronounced harmless by medical authorities (no skin test needed). Won't harm wave or hair texture. 50 year favorite of millions. Now help yourself to lustrous hair beauty easily—in the privacy of your home!

Buy a bottle today! Sold on money-back guarantee by drug and department stores. Or if you prefer, order direct from Mary T. Goldman Co., St. Paul 2, Minnesota. Send $1.92 (includes tax) for regular size, mailed postpaid in plain wrapper. State color desired: Black, Dark Brown, Medium Brown, Light Brown, Blonde, Auburn.

VETO Colgate's Amazing New Antiseptic Deodorant, Checks Perspiration, Stops Odor—Yet is Doubly Safe!

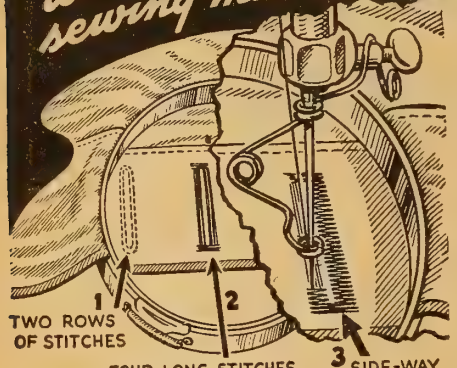
Only VETO Contains DURATEX, exclusive new safety ingredient! Veto is different from any other deodorant...Does not rot clothes. Safe for any normal skin. Stays moist in jar—never gritty, rubs in easily. Use doubly safe Veto regularly to guard your daintiness and to check perspiration, stop odor safely.

OFFICIAL TESTED BY BETTER FABRICS RETAIL LABORATORIES

DOUBLY PREFERRED! Registered Nurses who have tried Veto prefer it almost 2 to 1 over any other deodorant, according to a nation-wide survey.

APPROVED SAFE FOR FABRICS—Better Fabrics Bureau

New EASY WAY Makes
BUTTON HOLES
with your own sewing machine!



Darn Stockings, Mend Tears, Attach Zippers and Sew On Buttons, too!

New! Improved! NOW ONLY $1.00 NOTHING LIKE IT!

Once dreaded by every woman, now button hole making becomes as easy as basting a hem with this sensational new invention! You'll get twice as neat results in half the time, too! Fits any sewing machine . . . attaches in a moment. Simple to operate. Comes complete with hoop for darning stockings, a button hole guide and easy directions in picture. Test at our risk now and realize a new thrill in sewing.

FREE NEEDLE THREADER. As a gift for prompt action, you will receive with your order the marvelous time-saving, eye-saving needle threader. Don't wait but send your name today.

SEND NO MONEY — ORDER NOW. Just send your name and when you receive your new improved button hole attachment and gift needle threader, deposit only $1.00 plus C.O.D. charges thru postman. Do this on the guarantee that if you aren't delighted in every way, you may return purchase for full refund. Or send cash with order, we pay postage. Special . . . 3 for $2.50 NOW . . . Mail your name and address to LONDON SPECIALTIES, Dept. 4-C7, 8505 S. Phillips, Chicago 17, Ill.

WONDERFUL FOR Washing Nylons, Silks, Dishes, Windows and General Cleaning

GENERAL PRODUCTS CHICAGO 16, ILL.

Sell GREETING CARDS

FAST SALES, BIG PROFITS. Show exquisite Everyday, Birthday, Easter, Humorous Boxes, Gift Wraps, Stationery, Correspondence Notes, Special Offers. Bonus. Request $1.00 Everyday Box on approval.

100 MONEY MAKERS

HEDENKAMP & COMPANY
343 Broadway, Dpt. M-9, New York 13, N.Y.

TO THOSE WHO WRITE

WORDS FOR SONGS, BUT CAN'T WRITE MUSIC: We may be able to help you. Our organization of trained composers and songwriters is at your service. Collaborate with professional songwriters; make the most of your song-writing ability. Send us your words for free examination and details.

FIVE STAR MUSIC MASTERS, 475 Beacon Bldg., Boston, Mass.

BRUSH AWAY GRAY HAIR ...AND LOOK 10 YEARS YOUNGER

• Now, at home, you can quickly tint telltale gray to natural-appearing shades—from lightest blonde to darkest black. Brownatone and a small brush does it—or your money back. Approved by thousands—Brownatone is guaranteed harmless when used as directed. No skin test needed. The principal coloring agent is a purely vegetable derivative with iron and copper salts added for fast action. Cannot affect waving of hair. Lasting—does not wash out. Just brush or comb it in. One application imparts desired color. Simply retouch, as new gray appears. Easy to prove on a test lock of your hair. 75c and $1.75 at druggists. Get BROWNATONE now, or

Write for FREE TEST BOTTLE

Mention natural color of your hair. Send a post card today—BROWNATONE, Dept. 293, COVINGTON, KY.

Next day Kay's ever present camera went to work. With the help of those experts in camera angles and direction, Bill and Vincente, Judy and Kay posed like fashion models, on the high stairway which leads to the ocean, sitting on rocks, looking out halfway to Honolulu.

"Get this one," Judy called, striking a pose out of camera range. "I am looking out longingly."

"Some actress," Kay retorted, "You look like a mermaid standing in a rowboat that isn't there."

Fog and the call to work set in like a wet blanket. The Minnellis and the Spiers were urgently needed back in Hollywood. Vincente had final preparations to set for The Pirate, in which he will direct Judy. Kay and Judy had to begin rehearsals of those Cole Porter tunes, "Love of My Life," "Be a Clown," and "You Can Do No Wrong." Bill Spier had at least eight radio shows to line up for production, including his "Suspense" show, on which Judy was doing "Drive In."

For four friends, their mutual interests are as mixed and current as the morning scrambled eggs.

"It's good that way," Judy explained. "Friendship of two couples for each other doesn't happen every day. If the wives get along, the husbands don't, or it's a reverse of that. Maybe one husband is an engineer and the other a lawyer, or one wife works and the other doesn't. Then there are no mutual interests.

"We're lucky, but on the work side, it's strenuous. I'd wanted to appear on 'Suspense' for a long time, but the just-right script didn't come up. When it did, I was anxious to get at it immediately. I would have learned it word for word a week in advance to prove to Bill I wouldn't let him down, but he gave me the same treatment they all get on that wonderful show. My script arrived the day before the rehearsal to make sure I'd do it the way producer Spier wanted it—not the way Garland thought it should be."

spare that beard! . . .

Kay certainly won't object to Judy's letting the cat out of the bag about the reason for the magnificent beard her husband, Bill, wears. It was not cultivated as Bill's idea of the hallmark of genius. A while back, he was ill in the hospital for some time. He didn't have the energy for shaving and couldn't bear being shaved by someone else. So the beard grew. When he at length shaved it off, his face had changed. He didn't look like the same man to his recent bride.

Kay exclaimed, "For heaven's sake, Bill—you grow that beard right back on!"

"Those high Hooper ratings Bill Spier always gets on his radio shows," Judy said to a friend, who brought up the subject of the beard, "are not because Bill looks like a genius. Whiskers won't register on the air, but talent does."

And speaking of talent, sometimes Judy has wondered about eight-months-old Liza Minnelli.

"Liza is always cheerful and seldom cries except for a real reason. Just let me sing Brahms' 'Lullaby' or 'Over the Rainbow,' though, and she yells a mile. Then Kay walks in, um-de-ums something simple and Liza brightens up like a marquee after dark."

Kay had an explanation for that. "Maybe," she said, "Liza plans to grow up to be a music critic!"

"Touché, my friend," Judy smiled. "Touché!"

Then, with Kay listening attentively and nodding occasionally at the round, increasing perfection of voice, Judy sang.

It is on the record that none of the neighbors on Sunset Plaza Drive rushed to close their windows.

You'll LOVE Your Sweetheart
BOWKNOT PIN & EARRING SET

$2.49 A SET

Girls! Adorable NEW SET!

TRUE lovers' knot design in gold or silver. Its thrilling beauty sure to delight you. Each piece has a MIRROR-like finish of PURE SILVER PLATE. Will not tarnish. Safety catch Pin. Send check or money order for $2.49 plus 20% Federal tax. Set will be mailed postpaid; or pay postman on delivery, plus few cents postage. Quantity limited. Order TODAY.

Florentine Jewelry Co., 37 W. 37th St., New York 18

Compare These Values!
MOVIE STAR PHOTOS
12 for 50c ★ 25 for $1.00

Now . . . get MORE for your money. Choose your favorite Hollywood Stars and we'll send YOUR SELECTION of beautiful, glossy photos. Smallest order 50c. Name second choices. FREE! Folder of 250 NAMES and ADDRESSES of popular stars with each order.

BRITESHINE PRODUCTS Dept. A26
Box 352 Church St. Annex N. Y. 8, N.Y.

BE PREPARED FOR
SICKNESS or ACCIDENT
. . . THIS HOSPITALIZATION PLAN
PROTECTS YOU AND YOUR FAMILY

Costs only 3c A DAY • EACH ADULT
1½c A DAY • EACH CHILD

FOR SICKNESS OR ACCIDENT
Hospital Expenses paid, up to . . . $540.00
(beginning with the first day)

FOR ACCIDENT
Doctor Expense paid, up to $135.00
Loss of Wages reimbursed, up to . . . $300.00
Loss of Life by Accident $1000.00

WAR COVERAGE AND EXTRA BENEFITS
Childbirth Expense paid, up to $60.00

● It's easy to run into debt when sickness or accident hit. Under the Family Mutual Plan, you'll be able to pay your hospital bills. And in case of accident, your doctor expenses, and you'll be reimbursed for loss of time from work. You can enter any hospital in the United States or Canada. In the hospital you may have the care of your family doctor. Simply present your Family Mutual card at the time of admittance. Benefits applying to children are 50% of those paid adults.

MAIL COUPON TODAY • No Agent Will Bother You

FAMILY MUTUAL LIFE INS. CO., WILMINGTON, DEL.

MS-20

Family Mutual Life Insurance Co.
Wilmington, Del.

Please send me, without obligation, complete information on your Economical Hospitalization Plan.

NAME_____
ADDRESS_____
CITY_____STATE_____

GOOD NEWS

(Continued from page 12)

being an associate of the famed Charlie McCarthy. The occasion was the christening of Missy Candy and the party that followed was one of the most charming of the holiday season.

It was the very first carrying out the Christmas idea and all through the charming Bergen home were poinsettias, holly wreathes and mistletoe. Candy, who has big blue eyes, blonde hair and is a beauty, loved the bright reds and greens much better than her soft nursery colors.

If you ask me, one of the loveliest women present was our hostess, Frances Bergen. Lady Mendl whispered in my ear, "She has the best figure in Hollywood. Good thing she isn't on the screen to give the others some REAL competition."

* * *

The cutest story left over from the holidays concerns Lana Turner's three-year-old, Cheryl, who for the first time rode down Hollywood Boulevard in Santa Claus' famous sled.

Santa Claus Lane was jammed with fans dying to get a peek at Lana and her beautiful little daughter.

Little Cheryl, thinking all the hubbub was for Santa, went up and threw her arms around him. "Don't be afraid," she called, putting her arms around him, "Don't be afraid. They're bobby-soxers! They just want your autograph."

* * *

Did you ever see a live "Mermaid" serving as a party decoration? Well, I did—and it wasn't a stag party either, baby. S'help me, the Nunnally Johnsons hosted not only one of the most elaborate fiestas ever given in Hollywood, but introduced this idea of "living" decoration.

The Johnson house, one of the show places of the colony and so beautifully decorated by William Haines, is a wonderful setting for a party. Everyone oh-ed and ah-ed as we left our wraps and coats.

But none of the ohs or ahs equalled the gasp that went up as each guest stepped into the elaborately decorated tent adjoining the house and got a load of the mermaid decorations—one of the water babies

"Okay, You wash, I'll wipe!"

How IGNORANCE AND FALSE MODESTY may ruin a young wife's happiness

Find out now
the REAL TRUTH about these Intimate Physical Facts!

It's really shocking how often a marriage breaks up simply because the wife hasn't proper scientific knowledge of these intimate physical facts about herself—because she is too lazy or prudish to find out how important douching often is to intimate feminine cleanliness, health, charm and marriage happiness—how important douching is to combat one of women's most serious deodorant problems.

AND WHAT'S MORE IMPORTANT—too many wives still do not know about this newer, really scientific method of douching with—ZONITE.

No Other Type Liquid Antiseptic-Germicide Tested is SO POWERFUL yet SO HARMLESS

No longer would any well-informed woman think of using weak, old-fashioned or dangerous products for the douche. These DO NOT and CAN NOT give the great germicidal and deodorizing action of ZONITE.

The ZONITE principle is truly a miracle! No other type liquid antiseptic-germicide for the douche of all those tested is SO POWERFUL yet absolutely non-poisonous, non-irritating, non-burning. ZONITE positively contains no phenol, bichloride of mercury, no creosote. You can use ZONITE as directed as often as necessary without risk of injury.

Zonite Principle Developed By Famous Surgeon and Chemist

ZONITE actually destroys and removes odor-causing waste substances. Helps guard against infection. It's so powerfully effective no germs of any kind tested have ever been found that it will not kill on contact. You know it's not always possible to contact all the germs in the tract. But YOU CAN BE SURE ZONITE immediately kills every reachable germ and keeps them from multiplying.

Buy ZONITE today. Any drugstore.

Zonite
FOR NEWER feminine hygiene

FREE! NEW!

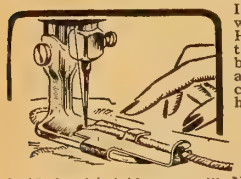
For amazing enlightening NEW Booklet containing frank discussion of intimate physical facts, recently published — mail this coupon to Zonite Products, Dept. MSC-37, 370 Lexington Ave., New York 17, N. Y.

Name_____
Address_____
City_____ State_____

New EASY WAY
Hemstitches
On Your own Sewing Machine

NO BASTING NECESSARY
...Makes Slippers, Comforters, Rugs, too

No more paying someone else to do your hemstitching! No more drudgery making rugs by hand! This amazing invention does both . . . quickly, easily! Fits any sewing machine . . . in a jiffy! Does all types of hemstitching possible: two-piece crisscross, inlaid, circular, hemstitching for pleats! Does tucking, smocking, picoting, too. Most amazing, with this wonderful invention you'll make rugs in all kinds of designs from any material, make slippers, comforters and auto rugs.



In our generous 2-for-1 offer, we'll include with your Hemstitcher and Rugmaker the sensational new Embroidery Guide that you can attach on any sewing machine! No more painstaking hours of embroidering or braiding by hand. This ingenious attachment makes your sewing machine do it for you . . . beautifully . . . and in 1/10 the time! Also rope silk No. 3 pearl cotton, soutach braid, couching cord ribbon!

FREE—SCISSORS SHARPENER As a reward for promptness, we will include free and as a gift, a wonderful Scissors Sharpener that will give you many years of service.

SEND NO MONEY! Simply mail your name. When your purchase arrives deposit $1.00 plus C.O.D. postage with postman on the iron-clad guarantee that you must be 100% delighted or your dollar back. Or send cash with order, we pay postage. Send name and address to:

2 FOR 1 OFFER Only $1.00

LONDON HEMSTITCHER, Dept. H-4
8505 S. Phillips Ave., Chicago 17, Ill.

ladies Earn UP TO $23 Weekly!

LOVELY DRESS GIVEN TO YOU!

Ladies, here's your chance to earn up to $23 weekly! And besides, take your pick of dozens of gorgeous Spring dresses—without a penny of cost. That's what we offer you for representing us in your spare time. Show our popular frocks to your friends, then send us their orders. Collect handsome cash commissions in advance. No canvassing or experience necessary. Get free details of this unusual offer and Portfolio of new styles. Everything furnished FREE. Rush name, address and dress size on postcard. Fashion Frocks, Dept. 43054. Cincinnati 25, Ohio.

WE WILL PAY YOU $25
FOR SELLING 50—$1 ASSORTMENTS
Great Demand for our Birthday and All Occasion Cards. Sell for $1—your profit 50c. It costs nothing to try. Write for samples today.
MERIT CARD CO., Dept. K
70 William St., Newark 2, N. J.

Support the 1947 Red Cross Fund

THE JOB AHEAD . . . DEPENDS ON YOU!

actually alive and breathing and holding motionless court behind the glittering buffet tables! It's a good thing this Lorelei had long golden hair because the upper part of her body was exposed.

In my ignorance (which my host once publicized by calling me "The Gay Illiterate" and I later swiped it for my book), I asked: "Why the mermaids?"

"Our host is making 'Mr. Peabody and the Mermaids,'" I was told.

That was a good enough reason so, now that I knew, I turned my attention to enjoying this fabulous and really unequalled party. There were eight white-capped chefs serving the food behind the buffet tables—and WHAT food! Dave Chasen really outdid himself catering this affair.

There's never been such an array of evening clothes. Loretta Young's dress was a dream in white lace. Mrs. Fred MacMurray wore a stunning black gown and our charming hostess, Doris Bowdoin, looked like a big doll in a pale green satin cut completely off the shoulders. As for Maria Montez in another one of those creations she brought back from Paris—La, la! Her jewels were stunning, too—amethysts and diamonds.

* * *

Every month I'd get a rumor that Betty Grable was going to have a baby and every month I'd call her to see if it were true.

"No, Louella," she would say. "Honest."

Then, when she started to gain weight and my spies reported that she was actually getting chubby in Mother Wore Tights, I started calling her at the studio.

"No, Louella," she'd repeat and so, after awhile, I got discouraged about the Harry Jameses' welcoming a second child and gave up calling Betty.

But not so long ago, my telephone rang and it was Betty on the other end.

"Yes, Louella," was all she said—and that's how I officially received the word that the Stork was heading Betty's way again—and she hopes it's a boy!

* * *

We all got dressed up and on our very best behavior for the formal dinner given by the motion picture producers for the managing editors of Associated Press.

The dinner and show were held in the famed old Gold Room of the Biltmore Hotel—scene of many a gala movie dinner of the past. Each visiting editor had a movie star at his table and, while it isn't fair to mention names, I overheard one of the "Eds" say to a prominent starlet, "Would you mind telling me your name? I've never seen any of your pictures!"

During dinner I sat next to Van Johnson, who was just back from a long location jaunt. He looked thin and said he hadn't been feeling well. I didn't ask him about his marriage to Evie Wynn (Mrs. Keenan) because I know it's a subject he doesn't want to discuss.

I was pretty proud of the whole show the movie folk put on for the visiting firemen, pardon me, I mean editors. Red Skelton was never as funny in his whole life and Judy Garland hasn't sung like that since her early musical comedy days.

* * *

For the eighth year in a row, Greer Garson made the trailer for the Infantile Paralysis Drive and for the eighth year Greer invited 14 children from the Orthopedic Hospital to be her guests on the set.

Later, of course, ice cream and cake were served and the lovely red-headed hostess gave the seven little girls gold bracelets, and the seven little boys gold money clips with a new five dollar bill.

Suddenly, Greer was surprised when one of the little girls called her over and said, "Miss Garson, may I exchange my bracelet for a money clip and the $5 bill?"

"But why, dear?" asked Greer. "That's for little boys."

"I know," said the youngster, "but I love money just like a little boy!"

* * *

Beverly Tyler, that pretty red-headed song bird, and Tom Drake are soooooo in love and it all began with their first kiss when they were making The Green Years. Tom says he knew the first time his lips touched Beverly's that it was NOT just a movie kiss. Apparently, they don't write that kind of thrill in film scripts.

* * *

Last month I reported confidentially to you that Frankie Sinatra and I were having a little feud. Well, I'm willing to call it all off on my part, although I still get little sideswipes from Frankie.

He isn't a well boy, and when I heard he was really ill, he had my deepest sympathy. I was ill for a long, long time last year myself and I know that when you are sick you just aren't yourself.

What I am trying to say is that I can understand Frankie's short temper and the way he feels. And I bet that when he's feeling shipshape again we'll hear no more about his "temperament."

HELLO, GORGEOUS!

(Continued from page 42)

Alice out to Malibu, and they parked by the ocean.

Phil took Alice by the hand and said, "It's a lovely night."

Alice countered with, "Have you ever parked out here before?"

"Nawww," said Phil, looking hurt. "Just look at that moon, it's a perfect setting for something I want to ask you—will you marry me—Paulette?"

Somehow, neither of them was contented with their first vows. The Mexican civil ceremony had been too hectic to seem like a real marriage. Came September 22, 1941, and they were on their way to the altar again. Alice insisted that it wouldn't seem like genuine marriage until they "I do'd" each other in the good old U.S.A.

They were on a train traveling across the big causeway that stretches between Houston and Galveston when Phil tossed a bombshell that nearly gave Alice a nervous breakdown.

"You know, honey," he said, "I haven't wanted to tell you this, but Galveston isn't in the U.S., either."

"Oh Phil," Alice moaned. "It has to be."

"Don't tell me what's in the U.S. and what isn't," Phil exclaimed. "Why, I was born in Indiana, and I ought to know."

Alice was indignant. "Where's the map?"

With no help from Phil, Alice located Galveston on the map all right. She discovered that if Galveston was not in the U.S., it was in the Gulf of Mexico.

And so they were married again.

There are things I wish I could understand about these happy kids. Like getting lost every time I go out there. "We live in Encino on Encino Avenue," Alice says, giving you the number, "and you can't miss it."

Oh, you can't, hey?

Garbo should have such privacy. If the casual visitor is looking for the Harris ranch and stays on Encino Avenue, he winds up in a gravel quarry at the end of the street. After sorting out the hills for a half hour or so, a fellow finally ar-

CORN NIP?
Here's a tip!

BLUE-JAY with Nupercaine* RELIEVES 3 WAYS:

Soft Dura-felt pad stops shoe pressure instantly! Blue-Jay's exclusive anesthetic Nupercaine curbs surface pain! Gentle medication loosens hard core—you just lift it out in a few days! Ask for Blue-Jay—"America's Largest Selling Corn Plaster."

*Reg. U. S. Pat. Off. by Ciba

BLUE JAY Corn Plasters — NOW IN 2 SIZES: STANDARD AND LITTLE TOE

BAUER & BLACK
Division of The Kendall Company
Chicago 16

REMOVE HAIR

easily, quickly without Razor or Paste 25¢

No stubby regrowth! Baby Touch removes hair from arms, legs, and face with equal satisfaction. Try it. Your money will be refunded if you aren't satisfied.

AT DRUG OR DEPARTMENT STORES

Or, send 25¢ for one (or $1.00 for five) of the Baby Touch Pads. Baby Touch Mittens (two sides) 35¢ each, 3 for $1.00.

BABY TOUCH HAIR REMOVER COMPANY
DEPT. 3 · 3750 LINDELL BLVD. · ST. LOUIS 8, MO.

An Economical Relief for ASTHMATIC Misery

Why spend needless time and money when Dr. Guild's GREEN MOUNTAIN ASTHMATIC COMPOUND may bring comforting relief from the misery of asthmatic attacks? On sale at nearly all drug stores. Cigarettes, 50¢. Powder, 25¢ and $1.00. If your dealer cannot supply you, order direct. Use only as directed on package. A FREE SAMPLE will prove how much this trusted product can help you. Write J.H.Guild Co., Dept. F-1, Rupert, Vt.

FALSE TEETH
KLUTCH holds them tighter

KLUTCH forms a comfort cushion; holds dental plates so much firmer and snugger that one can eat and talk with greater comfort and security; in many cases almost as well as with natural teeth. Klutch lessens the constant fear of a dropping, rocking, chafing plate. 25c and 50c at druggists. . . . If your druggist hasn't it, don't waste money on substitutes, but send us 10c and we will mail you a generous trial box.

KLUTCH CO. Box 4787-C © I. P. INC. ELMIRA, N. Y.

STOP Scratching
Relieve Itch in a Jiffy

Sufferers from the torturing itch caused by eczema, pimples, scales, scabies, athlete's foot, "factory" itch, and other itch troubles, are praising cooling, liquid D.D.D. Prescription. This time-proved medication—developed by Dr. D.D.Dennis—positively relieves that cruel, burning itch. Greaseless and stainless. Soothes and comforts even the most intense itching in a jiffy. A 35c trial bottle proves its merits or your money back. Ask your druggist today for D. D. D. Prescription.

rives at a redwood gate and a small stable, which he knows can't be the place. It is.

At this point the procedure is to alight from the car, press a button on a funny looking box that looks like a bird house. A voice comes out which says "Who is it?"

The password is, "This is So-and-So."

"Sorry," the voice in the box booms back, "Don't know any So-and-So's." After you make the grade with the box, the next obstacle is Wonga, the police dog. Wonga's all loyalty.

So much so that on one particular occasion, she outdid herself. Her love for Alice, Jr., who will be five in May, and Phyllis, who will be three in April, is something special. On the evening of the great heroism, Alice and Phil had retired. A driving rain was whipping the trees into figure eights. Lightning had chased the searchlights from the sky. Thunder grumbled distantly; then came right up and shouted in Wonga's ear, as she slept in her doghouse.

CRASH! Not only crash, but assorted sounds of window breaking.

"Phil!" Alice exclaimed, "Burglars!"

Phil hit the stairs with a bound, thinking, "Humphrey Bogart never did better." Alice, only a jump behind, flipped on the light and turned to Phil with a helpless, happy expression.

Wonga was there, sitting on her haunches between the two cribs and daring any eight regiments to move in on her charges. The window—the large and expensive window—was shattered.

Alice promptly went out into the kitchen and wrote on the small blackboard next to the phone, "Phil—fix window pain." Yes, "pain." Who could bother with spelling at a time like that?

long-suffering phil . . .

The husband of Alice Faye is a long-suffering male. One morning, Phil's anguished voice called down from upstairs, "Alice, Alice, where in blazes are my shorts?"

"Your shorts?" Alice feigned wifely surprise. "Don't you remember—they're in the laundry."

"The heck they are," Phil yelped, "They just got back from the laundry!"

"So they did," Alice assured him, "But last night when Alice and Phyllis were playing laundry, they ran out of things to do. I've just hung them all out on the line, and I'm afraid they're awfully wet."

Minutes later came the faint sound of the shower and the booming vocalisms of the guy with the voice Gable ought to have as he sang:

> "Oh what a time I had with > Minnie the Mermaid,
> Down at the bottom of the sea;
> I lost all my troubles,
> Down beneath the bubbles—"

Alice went out and plucked a pair of shorts off the line. "That Harris character," she mused, half to herself and unaware of the habit she has of using his last name. "Sometimes I wish more people knew him like I do!"

When he is not working, Phil won't stir farther away from the ranch than he can throw his prize stallion, Sonny.

There was a time, though, a few years back when he gravely walked in on Alice in her upstairs dressing room and announced, "I'm going to enlist." He was 39, then. He not only enlisted, but took his whole band with him. As a Lieutenant J.G. with the Merchant Marine, stationed on Catalina Island, Phil's was a morale job, and a good one.

He doesn't make anything of it, but when it came to being a married guy away from home, he might as well have been sitting on a freighter 3,000 miles away, for all he saw of the ranch.

GIRLS! Want quick curls?

WHAT girl doesn't want quick curls these days! Especially when that favorite fella gives you a call at the last minute. With New Wildroot Hair Set you can set that favorite hair-do in less time. It's absolutely tops for quick good grooming that's so important these days. New Wildroot Hair Set contains processed Lanolin. Leaves any texture of hair soft, natural-looking, and at its lovely best. Replaces old-fashioned thick gummy wave sets. Light bodied. Faster drying. Lets you style your favorite hair-do at home quickly, without fuss or disappointment.

NEW WILDROOT HAIR SET

Want EXTRA Money? Sell Everyday Greeting Cards

Show beautiful 14-card $1.00 assortments of Birthday, Get-Well, Easter cards; also Baby Congratulations, Sympathy cards, many other big values. Quick sales . . . easy profits. Write today for amazing SAMPLE OFFER!

WETMORE & SUGDEN, INC.
749 Monroe Avenue, Dept. 77-Y, Rochester 2, N. Y.

THROAT MISERY

● For unpleasant hawking, coughing, caused by colds, sinus and catarrh—use this "old stand-by method" that thousands for 70 years have used...HALL'S TWO-METHOD TREATMENT. Loosens and helps clear up phlegm-filled throat and nasal congestion or money back. Ask your druggist. Write for FREE Vitamin and Health Chart today! F. J. Cheney & Co. Dept. 93, Toledo, O.

Swimproof "Dark-Eyes"

EYELASH DARKENER

To keep lashes and brows bewitchingly dark and alluring . . . even after swimming, crying or perspiring, use "Dark-Eyes". This indelible darkener never runs, smarts or smudges. One application lasts 4 to 5 weeks . . . thus ending daily eye make-up bother. Caution: Use only as directed on the label. Try it! Get a package of "Dark-Eyes" today!

$1.00 (plus tax) at leading drug and department stores. If your favorite dealer does not yet carry "Dark-Eyes", mail coupon today!

"Dark-Eyes", Dept. GC-7
218 S. Wabash Ave., Chicago 4, Ill.
I enclose $1.20 (tax included) for regular size package of "Dark-Eyes", and directions.
Check shades: ☐ Black ☐ Brown
Name .....
Address .....
Town ..... State .....

FREE Catalog

Class pins, club pins, rings and emblems. Finest quality. Reasonable prices from 30c up. Write today. Dept. 2, Metal Arts Co., Rochester, N.Y.

TEETHING PAINS RELIEVED QUICKLY

WHEN your baby suffers from teething pains, just rub a few drops of Dr. Hand's Teething Lotion on the sore, tender, little gums and the pain will be relieved promptly.

Dr. Hand's Teething Lotion is the prescription of a famous baby specialist and has been used by mothers for over fifty years. One bottle is usually enough for one baby for the entire teething period.

Buy it from your druggist today

DR. HAND'S TEETHING LOTION

Just rub it on the gums

Meantime, Alice, who shared the queenship of the 20th Century lot, made fewer pictures. There was a lot of opposition to this decision, and some talk that Mrs. Harris had turned difficult. When a particularly important picture came along, Betty Grable called her on the phone.

"Alice," she pleaded, "Please come and do this picture with me."

"I'd love to," Alice replied, "But I want to think about it."

She did, and concluded that she couldn't do justice to herself and her family, or the picture.

If you'd known Alice in the old days, you'd be kind of surprised to find her such a homebody. Show business is a jittery profession that turns the clock upside down. "We all go through it," Alice explained. "Before Phil and the children, I was one of those girls who could walk out in the early morning sun and wonder what it was. Any girl who has sung with a band knows what I mean.

"The other night when Phil was busy, I went out with friends. People saw me dancing with a 'strange' man—strange to them, but not to me, or his charming wife who was, naturally, at our table. I could feel the talk buzz around among the outer tables until inevitably several extra sweet voices, complete with those built-in, unexpressed meanings, began to ask, after saying I looked fine, just fine, 'Where's Phil, tonight, darling?'

homebody . . .

"Golly, before midnight I was ready to go home. Phil couldn't pry me out of the house, even to a neighborhood restaurant for dinner, for the next two weeks."

To make home even more tempting, Phil has just installed a super barbecue—not one of those conventional jobs which broils steaks and hamburgers and lets it go at that.

"There's our menu for the week," Alice said, as Phil slid a chunk of rib roast onto the elevator grill.

"She's not squawking," Phil retorted. "Everything outside the house is my territory. Inside, she runs the show. Say, did you see what she's done with our suite?"

We had. The acre sized bed with the mirrored panel in back, was something to make note of, as was Phil's paneled dressing room and study. Then, off to the right, the mirrored dressing room for Alice, finished in colors of soft rose and grey.

"Man, oh, man, a guy's lucky to have a place like this," Phil exclaimed. "Say, I forgot to tell you. Wait until I take out the smoked turkey. Turkey's not for Thanksgiving around here. We have it almost all year. You can smoke any kind of meat in this thing, and once you get to liking smoked meat. . . ."

Phil looked up at Alice who was teetering on a chair, peering into the bird's nest that hangs in the patio tree.

"Might as well take it down," Phil advised. "No bird is coming back here with all those cats of yours around."

Alice climbed down from her perch.

We wanted to know what kind of tree that was. "You oughta know that," Phil said, when Alice admitted she didn't know one tree from another. "That's a Chinese Elm, and it's deciduous, you know."

"It's what?"

"Deciduous—that means the leaves fall off during a certain time of year."

"That's my man," Alice said. "I have to carry a pocket dictionary around. It would be just too bad if his radio audience found out how bright he really is!"

"Bright?" Phil asked, "Come on, Mom, let's show how I can really go with one of them there jokes."

"All right," Alice said, "Now I'm the straight man. Phil—"

"Yes, Alice."

Are Charming Personality And Pleasing Disposition Necessary For SUCCESS and HAPPINESS?

Why is it that many persons prosper in everything they do? Or why are some people able to gain friends and great popularity without effort? Alexander Keene, a psychologist, has discovered the answer. He found that the qualities which attract success and happiness are purely psychological. He learned that the thought-processes which, when rightly directed, produce a winsome personality are often diverted into negative channels, unbeknown to the individual concerned. He discovered, moreover, that any person may acquire a magnetic personality and gracious disposition by a simple, self-applied "mental operation," just as physical handicaps are frequently corrected by a surgical operation. Alexander Keene has gathered a wealth of scientific knowledge on the subject, now condensed into a 64-page booklet, called FELLOWSHIP. This little book will help you. You can read it in three hours. Every word is easy to understand. For a copy of this book, mail your name and address to Ontology Foundation, Box 832, Chicago 90, Illinois, Dept. F-106. Send no money. When the book arrives, deposit $1.00 with postman, plus postage and fees. Keep book 10 days; then if not completely satisfied, send it back and your money will be refunded immediately without question. (If you wish to save charges, send only $1.00. Same money-back guarantee). Rush your request today and look for the most interesting and exciting facts about yourself you've ever known.

AMAZING NEW RADIO!

Pocket or Purse Size

SMALL AS A PACK OF CIGARETTES!

Weighs only a few ounces—Beautiful black chrome plastic case. Uses new war born crystal diode. Hi-Q-slide dial. No tubes, batteries or electric "plug-ins." Usually receives local broadcasts without outside aerial wires.

GUARANTEED TO PLAY when used according to instructions sent with each radio! You can use it at home, in offices, hotels, cabins, in bed, etc.—lots of fun—real entertainment!

SEND ONLY $1.00 (cash, money order, check) and pay postman $2.99 plus delivery fees on arrival or send $3.99 for postpaid delivery. Complete as shown Ready to Play with self contained personal phone. For Gifts—children will love it—grownups too! An exceptional value—order yours and enjoy the many good radio programs coming. Don't be without your Pakette Radio another day! (All foreign orders $5.00 U. S. cash.)

Pakette Electric Company, Dept. MM-3, Kearney, Nebr.

A NEW AND NOVEL WAY TO MAKE MONEY

SELL INDIVIDUAL 5¢ AND 10¢ GREETING CARDS

COST YOU 2½¢ EACH UP

Extra money quick. Up to 100% profit. Extra bonus. Send at once for FREE catalog of wonderful year 'round money-making line super value greeting card assortments and FREE samples name imprinted stationery. Request special feature $1.00 All Occasion Assortment on approval. Special Offers.

FREE SAMPLES 50 for $1.00 PERSONAL STATIONERY

NEW ENGLAND ART PUBLISHERS, BOX A, North Abington, Mass.

FREE RACHEL FACE POWDER

Send today for free liberal supply of this high grade Face Powder & also our FREE BEAUTIFUL Cosmetic catalog in colors. Help bring out your loveliness by using our glamorous blend of Face Powder. Mention shade wanted— ☐ light or ☐ dark. Be Lovely to Look At—Nice to Know. Don't wait. Send Now!

J. E. McBRADY & CO., (Est. 1894)
1041-49 W. Van Buren, Dept. 710, Chicago 7, Ill.

Marvel WHIRLING SPRAY SYRINGE for Women

At DRUG COUNTERS THROUGHOUT THE WORLD

Free Booklet. Marvel Co., 60 East St., New Haven, Ct.

STAMMER?

GET THIS FREE BOOK!

This new 128-page book, "Stammering, Its Cause and Correction," describes the Bogue Unit Method for scientific correction of stammering and stuttering—successful for 46 years. Benj. N. Bogue, Dept. 2293, Circle Tower, Indianapolis 4, Ind.

BE A Nurse

LEARN AT HOME

Practical nurses are needed in every community . . . doctors rely on them . . . patients appreciate their cheerful, expert care. You can learn practical nursing at home in spare time. Course endorsed by physicians. 48th yr. Earn while learning. High School not required. Men, women, 18 to 60. Trial plan. Write now!

CHICAGO SCHOOL OF NURSING
Dept. 233, 100 East Ohio Street, Chicago 11, Ill.
Please send free booklet and 16 sample lesson pages.
Name .....
City ..... State ..... Age .....

THE PIN WITH THE LASTING GRIP
SMOOTH FINISH INSIDE AND OUT
Scoldy Lox
Lasting Grip
BOB PINS
Scoldy Lox BOB and HAIR PINS
NEVER LET YOUR HAIR DOWN

WHY WEAR DIAMONDS
When diamond-dazzling Zircons from the mines of far-away mystic Siam are so effective and inexpensive? Thrilling beauty, stand acid, true backs, full of FIRE! Exquisite mountings. See before you buy. Write for FREE catalog.
National Zircon Co., Dept. 8 Wheeling, W. Va.
Catalog FREE!

SPOT REDUCE
The new, ingenious HOLLYWOOD WAY with "PAT-A-PUFF"
• EASY • EFFECTIVE • ECONOMICAL
$2.60
Mail your order direct to NORDQUIST SYSTEM
6331 Hollywood Blvd., Hollywood 28, Calif.

WARMTH FOR BACKACHES
Backaches, sacro-iliac or lumbago pains all benefit from the comforting heat produced by Allcock's Porous Plaster. Gives relief, supports muscles. 25c . . . buy one now.
ALLCOCK'S Porous Plasters

Thrilling Work COLORING PHOTOS
EASY TO LEARN
Fascinating vocation learned at home by those with aptitude. Thrilling pastime. National method brings out life-like colors. Free booklet.
NATIONAL PHOTO COLORING SCHOOL
1315 S. Michigan, Dept. 2363, Chicago 5

FREE
BAGFUL BUTTONS
500 YDS. THREAD
PATTERN BOOK
WITH PURCHASE OF 4 POUNDS (Approx. 25 Yds.)
QUILT PIECES
EXTRA LARGE PIECES, ALL NEW REMNANTS CUT FROM COLORFUL BOLTS of EXPENSIVE DRESS GOODS
$1.49
Furnished us by the largest and finest dress manufacturers. SATISFACTION GUARANTEED or we make full refund including postage. Send no money; pay only $1.49 plus C. O. D. fee upon delivery. Remember, FREE BUTTONS, FREE THREAD and FREE PATTERN BOOK.
THE QUILTING BEE DEPT. 114
P. O. DRAWER 449 ST. LOUIS 3, MO.
SEND NO MONEY • ORDER TODAY!

WE PAY YOU $25
FOR SELLING FIFTY $1 ASSORTMENTS of Birthday, All-Occasion cards. Tremendous demand. Sell for $1.00—your profit 50c. It costs nothing to try. Write today.
CHEERFUL CARD CO., Dept. S-1, White Plains, N. Y.
WRITE FOR SAMPLES

STOP CORNS!
HERE TODAY
GONE TOMORROW
SORE TOES
CORNS STOPPED
INSTANT RELIEF
Protect sore toes from tight shoes with Dr. Scholl's Zino-pads today and you'll stop corns from developing tomorrow! But—if you have corns—Zino-pads will instantly stop painful shoe friction, lift pressure and quickly remove corns. Get a box NOW!
Dr Scholl's Zino-pads

"Do you know Lincoln's Gettysburg address?"

"No, honey, I don't—but I know he's got a house in Springfield. Ho! Ho! I got lots more like that."

You can maybe get an idea why the Harris family on the radio seems so genuine. Humor, after all, is intoxicated truth. And what is more true than when Phil, as on a recent Sunday night, picked up his cue and came roaring into homes all over the country, shouting, "How are ya, Gorgeous—your laughing boy is home again—and he's happier than Tom Breneman with an old lady from Peoria!"

ED SULLIVAN RADIO AWARD

(Continued from page 62)

and Bob Hope and Ingrid Bergman. But if you go back with me to 1927, it was a letter that was delivered backstage to me at the Metropolitan Theater, in Los Angeles, now the Paramount. Al Rinker and I were doing a song act in vaudeville, hoping to be picked up by some small band, so we could eat regularly.

"Then the letter arrived. It was signed by Paul Whiteman, and we thought it was a gag letter written by somebody on the bill with us. Paul was playing in Los Angeles, at the time, so it made the gag perfect, but just to be on the safe side, we asked some of the Whiteman musicians about it, and they said that Paul had written to us. I guess that would be the standout thrill, going with Whiteman and then later adding Harry Barris to complete the Rhythm Boys."

It was Going My Way that gave Crosby his most tremendous box office success, and probably his deepest personal satisfaction, for a number of reasons. In the first place, Going My Way vindicated his own judgment. Nobody on the Coast wanted to make the picture; nobody on the Coast shared the intense enthusiasm for it which Crosby and Leo McCarey developed. Producers read the script and when they learned that not only one priest, but THREE priests, were in the script, they fled in horror. Not that they had anything against priests. They simply felt that a picture about a colony of priests couldn't possibly qualify as entertainment.

Bing's own studio, Paramount, washed their hands of it. But it just happened, at that exact moment, that Paramount was negotiating a new contract with Crosby. As one of their top earners, Paramount suggested that Bing make Going My Way as an outside picture with McCarey, and Crosby signed the new contract, and leaped at the opportunity. The last time I spoke to Leo McCarey, he told me Going My Way was heading for an all-time world's record.

Crosby's obstinacy about doing Going My Way, and its enormous pay-off, is an integral part of his makeup. Once he makes up his mind, it's difficult to pry him loose from a decision. When you argue against his decisions, you are aware that no performer in the business has had so many successes. His decision, this past year, to abandon "live" broadcasting in favor of a recorded show was of a piece with his business obstinacy and, once again, those who argued with him were aware that possibly he knew more about public taste than they knew. Arrayed against him, in radio, were those who believed that a recorded program would suffer from lack of topical gags and timely situations. There were others who argued that there are so many "platter" shows on radio that Crosby's own show would be just another "platter" session.

IT'S HERE!
A HAND CREAM
THAT HELPS KEEP HANDS SOFTER,
SMOOTHER...AND
IS NOT STICKY—
NOT GREASY!

Luxor contains Carbamide, the ingredient long familiar to surgeons, which helps relieve the tiny cracks and scratches that make hands look red, feel rough!

Luxor HAND CREAM

Try it!
PROCTOR NEVER-LIFT
The only iron that lifts itself!
Stands on its own cool legs at the touch of a button, saves lifting 2½ tons in an ordinary ironing day. See it at your Proctor Dealers.
"No lift...No tilt...No twist"
It's new... it's exclusive... it's
PROCTOR
PROCTOR ELECTRIC COMPANY, PHILADELPHIA 40, PA.

BLONDES

New Home Shampoo Washes Hair Shades Lighter SAFELY

Made specially for blondes, this new shampoo helps keep light hair from darkening—brightens faded hair. Called Blondex, it quickly makes a rich cleansing lather. Instantly removes the dingy, dust-laden film that makes blonde hair dark, old-looking. Takes only 11 minutes to do at home. Gives hair attractive luster and highlights — keeps that just-shampooed look for a whole week. Safe for children's hair. Blondex is sold at 10c, drug and department stores.

I GOT RID OF BLACKHEADS

NADINOLA'S 4-WAY ACTION HELPS AMAZINGLY TO COMBAT UGLY BLACKHEADS, EXTERNALLY-CAUSED PIMPLES, DARK DULL SKIN

One glance may kill romance—if your skin is dark, dull or needlessly blemished! That's why thousands of girls and women trust to Nadinola Cream, the clinically-proved 4-way treatment cream. Quickly, gently, Nadinola helps to loosen and remove ugly blackheads —to clear up externally caused pimples—to fade freckles—to lighten, brighten and freshen your skin to creamier loveliness. See for yourself what Nadinola can do in days—what wonders it works in weeks! Full treatment-size jar of Nadinola Cream just 60c, with money-back guarantee; trial jar, 10c.

SEND FOR FREE ILLUSTRATED BEAUTY BOOKLET —richly printed in full color, with photographs and sworn proof of wonderful results from just one jar of Nadinola. Write NADINOLA, Dept. 30, Paris, Tenn.

BE A NURSE STUDY AT HOME

HIGH SCHOOL NOT NECESSARY

Prepare for experience as a Trained Practical Nurse. Ages 18 to 55. Many earn while learning. Easy payment plan. Write for facts and fascinating free sample lesson pages.

WAYNE SCHOOL OF PRACTICAL NURSING, Inc.
2301 N. Wayne Ave., Dept. K-24, Chicago 14, Illinois

Easy as A-B-C

Be Your Own MUSIC Teacher

LEARN AT HOME THIS MONEY-SAVING WAY

Simple as A-B-C. Your lessons consist of real selections, instead of tiresome exercises. You read real notes—no "numbers" or trick music. Some of our 850,000 students are band LEADERS. Everything is in print and pictures. First you are told what to do. Then a picture shows you how. Soon you may become an excellent musician. Mail coupon for our Illustrated Free Book and Print and Picture Sample. Mention your favorite instrument. U. S. School of Music, 1443 Brunswick Bldg., N.Y.10,N.Y.

FREE BOOKLET

U. S. School of Music, 1443 Brunswick Bldg., N.Y. 10, N.Y.

Please send me Free Booklet and Print and Picture Sample. I would like to play (Name Instrument).

Instrument..... Have you Instrument?.....

Name.....
(Please Print)

Address.....

Crosby believes differently and Philco has backed his judgment with important money. He sees no reason why his radio show performed before a regular studio audience in Hollywood in exactly the same manner he has always done them should suffer in any way because they are transcribed. In fact, he believes they will be better. After all, he reminds us, the movies are transcribed. Well, time will tell and in the meantime we better remember that his judgment has a high batting average.

His obstinacy has been reflected on other, and earlier, occasions. Some of us felt, years ago, that Bing's Kraft show suffered from too much talk. Instead of singing, Bing developed a fondness for monologues crowded with multi-syllable words. It was his belief that this talking was enjoyed by his audiences, made his show different. When the monologues were reduced, his Crosley rating zoomed.

For close on to a full quarter of a century, 1925-1947, Crosby has out-distanced every singer opposed to him for public favor, and it is a sparkling facet of his nature that Crosby has been singularly helpful to a competitor as formidable as Frank Sinatra. It was Crosby who welcomed Sinatra to the Coast, appeared on his opening programs, extended to him hundreds of little courtesies that only a big guy would extend to a rival.

So this month, in awarding the Ed Sullivan Award of MODERN SCREEN Magazine to Bing Crosby as the all-time, all-American of singing, I'm thinking of the twenty years of pure enjoyment he's given to me; I'm thinking of Crosby's tones, shading and phrasing that no other singer has ever approached. To me, Bing always has been Head Man, and this award is akin to carrying coals to Newcastle, because he's entitled to all the plaques that can be fashioned.

LITTLE MOTHER

(Continued from page 49)

couldn't eat them—

"Come on over to our place," coaxed Sue, "and I'll fix you something hot—" But he wouldn't leave. Every time a nurse passed, out he'd pop like a jack-in-the-box. How was his wife? Comfortable, smiled the nurse. He'd eye her suspiciously. Did she know or was she feeding him pap—? Alan produced a deck of cards. "Dr. Ladd prescribing a nice quiet poker game—"

At two the head nurse shooed everyone home. Ted was left with another waiting father. They paced from opposite ends of the room. The other guy looked wild-eyed, but then Ted had no idea how he looked himself—"We want a boy," the other guy kept muttering. "But they've had ten boys at this hospital already today. So we're bound to get a girl. But we want a boy—" He'd look piteously at Ted, as if hoping that Ted could do something about it . . .

Betty and Ted wanted a boy too. Anyway, that's what they'd been telling each other. Ted, because every man wants a son. Betty, "because I can't picture a little me, just a little you—"

They were going to call him Buddy after Buddy de Sylva, whom Betty loves like a father. More people had tried to talk her out of it—

"You can't name a child Buddy. Call him George if you want to name him after De Sylva. That's his real name—"

The Hutton jaw would set. "Look," she'd explain for the umpteenth time, "Our kid'll be named Buddy, and never George, because if you said George De Sylva, who would know whom you meant? I got along

REDUCE UP TO 7 lbs. A WEEK

DOUBLE MONEY BACK

EAT WHAT YOU WANT

Thousands have used amazing MYLO method to banish ugly fat, and gain gloriously beautiful figure. Easy! Safe! No Starving. You get all daily required vitamins and minerals—delicious concentrated food energy to keep up pep. Just eat sensibly and take healthful, wonderful MYLO as directed—and it is possible for you to lose up to 7 lbs. in a week.

NO STARVING
NO DRUGS
NO MASSAGE
NO LAXATIVES
NO EXERCISE

MYLO 7-DAY NO-RISK TRIAL

Either you are more than delighted with the results MYLO brings you in loss of weight or you get double your money back. SEND NO MONEY! Just mail us your name and address and on delivery of MYLO pay the postman $2.00, plus C. O. D. charges or send $2.00 with your order and we will pay the postage. Follow direction for 7 days. Then, if you are not truly amazed at the loss of weight, if you don't notice remarkable improvement in your figure, if you don't look better, feel better, you will get double your money back. Don't let ugly fat distort your shape. Send for delicious, nutritious MYLO today.

INTERNATIONAL LABORATORIES
329 S. Wood St. • Dept. 15-BB-• Chicago 12, Ill.

High School Course at Home Many Finish in 2 Years

Go as rapidly as your time and abilities permit. Course equivalent to resident school work—prepares for college entrance exams. Standard H.S. texts supplied. Diploma. Credit for H. S. subjects already completed. Single subjects if desired. High school education is very important for advancement in business and industry and socially. Don't be handicapped all your life. Be a High School graduate. Start your training now. Free Bulletin on request. No obligation.

American School, Dept. H314, Drexel at 58th, Chicago 37

Extra Money Every Day

SELL EVERYDAY CARDS

Easy to sell stunning folders for Birthdays, Anniversaries, etc. 15-card Assortment sells $1. You make good profit. Also sell other Everyday card assortments, engraved Stationery $1 a box. Samples on approval.

PROCESS CORPORATION, Dept. H-8
Troy at 21st Street, CHICAGO 23, ILL.

GET SAMPLES

EASE TORTURE OF SIMPLE PILES

• Think of it! A single soothing ointment that speeds relief from those tortures of simple piles. It's amazing Pazo Ointment—acts instantly to relieve pain and itching—soothes inflamed tissues—lubricates dry, hardened parts—helps prevent cracking and soreness—acts to reduce swelling and check minor bleeding. The help you get is wonderful!

So, to speed this relief from itching and pain of simple piles, get Pazo Ointment. Your doctor can tell you about it. At all druggists in tubes complete with perforated pile pipe—also tins and handy suppositories.

Glamour-Eyes with LASH-KOTE

For bewitching, sparkling eyes...enhance their beauty with Lash-Kote. Water-proof . . . tear-proof . . . smudge-proof . . . harmless!

Applies easily, dries quickly. Lasts for days.

In black or brown at all 5c & 10c store cosmetic counters. 25¢

VOGUE PRODUCTS 1151 Seward Street Hollywood 38, Calif.

SUFFERERS FROM PSORIASIS (SCALY SKIN TROUBLE)

MAKE THE ONE SPOT TEST

Use DERMOIL

Prove it yourself no matter how long you have suffered or what you have tried. Beautiful book on psoriasis and Dermoil with amazing, true photographic proof of results sent FREE. Write for it.

Don't mistake eczema for the stubborn, ugly embarrassing scaly skin disease Psoriasis. Apply non-staining Dermoil. Thousands do for scaly spots on body or scalp. Grateful users often after years of suffering, report the scales have gone, the red patches gradually disappeared and they enjoyed the thrill of a clear skin again. Dermoil is used by many doctors and is backed by a positive agreement to give definite benefit in 2 weeks or money is refunded without question. Send 10c (stamps or coin) for generous trial bottle to make our famous "One Spot Test." Test it yourself. Results may surprise you. Write today for your test bottle. Caution: Use only as directed. Print name plainly. Don't delay. Sold by Liggett and Walgreen Drug Stores and other leading Druggists. LAKE LABORATORIES, Box 547 Northwestern Station, Dept. 8909, Detroit 4, Mich.

SEND FOR GENEROUS TRIAL SIZE

©1935 LAKE LAB

AT LAST! SOMETHING NEW and SENSATIONAL in EVERYDAY CARDS

Greetings

Gorgeous Satin and Velour Designs

SHOW friends rich new Satin and Velour Greeting Cards. Never before offered. Astounding value, 15 for $1. Get easy orders FAST! Pays up to 100% cash profit. 14 other money-making assortments retailing 60c to $1. No experience needed. Start now—earn all year 'round. Samples on approval. Write today.

Make Money Easily

PURO CO., 2801 Locust, Dept. 75-C, St. Louis 3, Mo.

3¢ A DAY HOSPITAL PLAN

POLICY PAYS

Hospital Room and Board for Sickness or Accident Per Day Up to $6.00

Doctor Visits In Case of Accident Per Visit $3.00

Surgical Operations Up to $150.00

Time Lost from Work In Case of Accident Per Week $25.00

Accidental Death Up to $2000.00

Physical Dismemberment Up to $2000.00

Identification Service Up to $100.00

Ambulance Service $10.00

PAYS HOSPITAL & DOCTOR BILLS

In case of sickness or accident, you may go to any Hospital in the U. S. or Canada under any Doctor's care. WE PAY YOUR EXPENSES in full accordance with Policy Provisions.

INDIVIDUAL or FAMILY

You are eligible for this low cost Protection from birth to age 70 . . . without medical examination. The famous North American Plan is sold direct at a saving to you. The Company is under the supervision of the Insurance Department. BE PREPARED! Sickness and accident strike suddenly. Insure now! Send for free details at once. No Agent will call.

FREE! MAIL COUPON

NORTH AMERICAN MUTUAL INSURANCE COMPANY
Dept. MM7-3, Wilmington, Del.

Please send me, without obligation, details about your "3c A Day Hospitalization Insurance Plan".

Name.....

Address.....

City.....State.....

without any fancy Elizabeths. Our baby'll do all right as plain Buddy Briskin—"

They'd picked a girl's name too—Lindsay Diane—after a close friend and because they loved the sound of it—

"It'll never be a girl though," Betty kept assuring the world. In fact she said it so often that Ted started wondering—

"If you want a boy that badly, how come you bought those dresses at Saks? Boys don't wear dresses—"

"They looked so darling, I thought I could always use them as shower gifts. But I do want a boy, Ted—"

"Why?"

"So he'll look like you—"

He kissed the top of her head. "Now you've got a reason—"

"Of course he won't hurt my feelings if he turns out twins—"

So Ted had bought twin pairs of booties, pink and blue, which they'd hung over the bed—the pink on her side, the blue on his. Funny to think of them hanging there now while—

. . . A nurse came in and smiled at the other guy. "It's a boy—"

"Who, me—?" Then he came to. "It's a boy!!" he yelled, and proceeded to yank Ted's arm out of its socket.

Ted thumped his shoulder. "Wonderful! Swell!! Congratulations!!!" And to himself —"Boy No. 11. I'm a dead duck—"

But he knew it didn't matter. Nothing mattered but that Betty and the baby should be all right. It was taking forever. The doctor had been in again. Nothing to worry about, he'd said. Sometimes it just took longer than you expected. Why didn't Ted go out for a cup of coffee? Sure, sure, said Ted, and started on his next mile—

. . . It was 7:30. For the dozenth time he stole to the door of the room where Betty lay. Just for something to do. You couldn't hear anything. At least there hadn't been a sound the other times—

But this time there was—a low moaning that stopped his heart. He stood numb against the wall till a nurse came out. "Is she in pain?"

The nurse patted his shoulder. "That's just reflex. She doesn't really know—"

From somewhere the doctor materialized, and the doctor's very presence was reassuring. When he said, "She's fine," you believed him. Not till he had Ted calmed down, did he say, "I'm afraid it won't be till this afternoon—" By that time

MODERN SCREEN

"The happy ending spoiled the picture for me."

THIS EASY WAY TEACHES PIANO Without Sheet Music

NEW SHORT-CUT PIANO METHOD Has No Scales No Conventional Notes...

TEACHES SIMPLE SONGS FROM FIRST LESSON
Including Strong Left Hand Bass
25 LESSONS AT LESS THAN 6c PER LESSON

If you think you must spend weeks and weeks learning note reading and scales to play piano, get ready for a big surprise. Dave Minor at last has perfected an original, different SHORT CUT way to piano playing that's the easiest to follow, simplest method you ever saw. Not one conventional music note or scale in the entire course. Mr. Minor first starts you playing simple melodies with the right hand, then easy chords with the left.

You have simple songs, often the very first day. Each lesson takes you step-by-step into piano playing the short-cut Dave Minor way. And while I won't pretend I'll make you a concert artist, I can and will make you this trial, inspection and approval offer. If don't care if you never played the piano before in all your life. If you can read simple English and put your fingers where my charts show you to put them, you'll agree that truly "music is fun for everyone" THE DAVE MINOR WAY.

2 for 1 offer ONLY $1.49

SEND NO MONEY
Make This Conclusive 10-Day Test

Just write today. On arrival, deposit $1.49 plus c.o.d. postage through postman. See how simple yet thorough course is. Keep 10 days. Then, if you don't agree that I've given you a short cut to piano playing worth to you far more than you paid, return and I'll refund your $1.49. Without extra cost you receive the big 72-page Dave Minor Piano Song Book of 50 ever-popular songs, all charted for your right and left hands . . . waltzes, hymns, western songs, etc., for you to learn to play to your satisfaction. Cash orders sent prepaid on same money back guarantee. Get in on this 2 for 1 offer. Mail your order now to:

DAVE MINOR, Room X-4-C 232 E. Ohio St., Chicago 11, Ill.

Fight Asthma EASY WAY

Do you cough and cough, especially mornings and at night? At times do you feel like you were tearing yourself to pieces trying to get rid of strangling mucus and still you choke, gasp for breath, wheeze and often can't sleep? The cause of these devitalizing symptoms may be recurring attacks of Bronchial Asthma. In such cases, the very first dose of Mendaco, a physician's prescription, usually goes right to work thru the blood helping relax that clogged up stuffy feeling in the bronchial tubes, then helps Nature loosen and remove thick, strangling phlegm. This helps you get good fresh air into your lungs and promotes restful sleep, which is a natural aid to greater energy. Mendaco is not a smoke, injection or spray, but is in tasteless tablets which you take exactly according to simple directions at meals. Mendaco must satisfy in every way or your money back is guaranteed. Don't cough and choke, don't lose sleep another night, because of recurring attacks of Bronchial Asthma, without trying Mendaco. Ask your druggist for Mendaco today.

Now She Shops "Cash And Carry"
Without Painful Backache

Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, a stimulant diuretic, used successfully by millions for over 50 years. Doan's give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Ted could take it.

He called Rose. "The doctor says not till afternoon—" Rose said she was coming down anyway. Five minutes later the nurse dashed in. "It won't be long now. They're taking her into delivery—"

"B-b-but—"

"Easy does it, Pop. Your kid takes after its ma. All of a sudden, bong! baby couldn't wait—"

By Ted's reckoning, it was eternity. By the clock, it was ten minutes when a vision in white came floating toward him, and a heavenly voice caroled: "It's a girl—"

* * *

"It's a girl—"

From somewhere deep down, waves of joy rose and surged over Betty.

Lying there, eyes covered by cool wads of cotton, she did a kind of inward double take. Girl! They'd said girl, and the girl must be okay, she was screaming like mad. It was over then—the long waiting, the fear and the pain. From the waist down, she couldn't feel a thing, they'd given her a caudal, but the rest of her felt fine. It hadn't been nearly as bad as she'd expected.

When would they take the cotton off her eyes? How long did a girl have to wait to see her baby? Having a wholesome respect for the doctor, she didn't dare open her mouth till he spoke to her first. Then she made her voice meek. "Please can I see my baby—?"

Her throat went tight as they took the cotton off, and laid something gently in the crook of her arm. —Oh God, how wonderful! Dear God, how wonderful! Her daughter and Ted's! Her beautiful daughter, not red or wrinkled at all, staring straight at her with eyes that were just like Ted's—!

But Ted had wanted a son— "Does my husband know? Is he disappointed?"

"He said to tell you he's the happiest man alive—"

He was waiting when they wheeled her out. That was the second thrill. Seeing his face. His face looked as if he were slightly delirious. "Oh, darling, isn't she beautiful? You're not disappointed—?"

"I wouldn't change her for all the boys in the world—"

* * *

They acted as if she ought to act like an invalid, but she didn't feel like an invalid at all. She felt very good when they got her settled in bed in a lovely new gown and a pink jacket. Sleep was the farthest thing from her mind. She wanted tea and toast, and she wanted Ted.

They gave her tea and toast, but they gave her a sedative with it, and Mabel took Ted home. Poor darling hadn't swallowed a bite since yesterday noon—

"Poor darling—" she thought, getting a little confused as she drowsed off. "Poor darling's all worn out having a baby—"

. . . It was five when she woke. When could she see her baby again? When would Ted be back? Well, she couldn't make them bring the baby in, but she could phone home. Or maybe she'd better not.

Outside the dusk was gathering, and she wanted her husband. Was it only last night—? No, last night they'd come down here— Well, the night before then—

Night before last, they'd sat together on the nursery floor, remembering—

"Remember what a so-and-so I was, just before we found out—?"

. . . All of a sudden, in the midst of Perils of Pauline, she'd turned mean and crabby. Either she'd be blowing her top, or hating herself because she'd just blown her top. Insomnia didn't help. At 1:30 A. M. she'd start boohooing. Softly at first, so as not to disturb Ted, who'd put in a hard day. Ted had developed a wonderful new camera, the Briskin 8, and was getting the Briskin Camera Corporation started in its new Santa Monica offices. Ted was a busy executive who needed his sleep. But Mrs. Ted's sobs would gradually rise to crescendo—

"Whatsamatter, honey?"

"You duh-don't love me. Else how can you be asleep when I'm wide awake—?"

But as soon as they'd found out about the baby, all her moods vanished. She was a changed woman. The old Betty had been forever restless, forever driven. "What do we do next? Where do we go from here—?" Now for the first time she learned the meaning of peace. "Excitement," she discovered, "is for when you're not happy. Happiness is quiet—"

At first she'd been such a baby about the baby. Getting scared over every little pain—

"Oh Ted, I'm dizzy—"

And he'd say: "I'm dizzy too. There's no air in here. Let's open a window—"

Or she'd say: "I've got such a funny feeling here. Do you think—?"

"I don't think; I know, because I've got the same feeling. I said we shouldn't have eaten that cabbage—"

For a while she believed him, the dope, and it made her feel safe, his having the same pains she did. Till she finally caught on. "Why, you heel, you're making the whole thing up—"

He wouldn't admit it, though. And one night came a pain that really doubled her up. "Hold me," she whispered. "Don't say a word. Just hold me—"

Little by little it subsided, and her nerves relaxed, and she wondered why her heart kept pounding so wildly—and realized it wasn't her heart, but Ted's. "Why," she marveled, "he's just as scared as you are. Only difference is he keeps it to himself. Quit making things tougher for him, Hutton, when his whole idea is to make 'em easier for you—"

* * *

She pulled the same line on her doctor. "I'm restless here. I can't sleep. I miss my husband—"

So he let her go home for Thanksgiving on the promise that she wouldn't stir out of bed.

As this is written, Lindsay is three weeks old. By the time you read it, she'll be well past two months. But you can safely bet that the pattern of talk between her folks hasn't changed very much—

"Darling, tell me again how you felt when you first saw her—"

"Well, they put me into this hospital coat and took me in. And there she lay. And I thought, O God, isn't she beautiful!—she looks just like me—"

For the hundredth time Betty yelps with delight. "You ham!— But you'll have to admit she's got my ears and nose—"

Or they'll be bending over her crib together. "D'you think she knows us yet? D'you think she likes us—?"

As if in answer the baby decides to yawn—a miracle that sends her parents out of their so-called minds. . . .

FREE SUBSCRIPTIONS!

Come on, now, we can't go to press if your vote isn't in. Get on the bandwagon by filling out the Questionnaire below very carefully, and mailing it to us IMMEDIATELY. And—who knows—you may be one of the lucky 500 to win a three months' subscription to MODERN SCREEN (April, May, June issues) ABSOLUTELY FREE!

QUESTIONNAIRE

What stories and features did you enjoy most in our March issue? WRITE THE NUMBERS 1, 2 and 3 AT THE RIGHT OF YOUR 1st, 2nd and 3rd CHOICES.

You May Call It Madness . . . (Lana Turner, Tyrone Power . . ☐

You Can't Print That! by Dorothy Kilgallen . . . . . ☐

"The Gable I Know" by Hedda Hopper . . . . . ☐

He's a Killer! (Burt Lancaster) . . . ☐

Mark Stevens' Life Story (Part One) . . . . . ☐

Portrait of an American (Gary Cooper) by Cecil B. DeMille . . . . ☐

To Each His Own (Perry Como) . . ☐

Brief Encounter (Greer Garson) . . ☐

Little Mother (Betty Hutton) . . . . ☐

Hello, Gorgeous! (Alice Faye-Phil Harris) . . . . . ☐

Can Stars Stay Married? (Betty Grable Vs. Dr. Clifford R. Adams, Director Women's Home Companion Marriage Clinic) . . . ☐

Who Wants To Be a Genius? by Billy Rose . . . . . ☐

It's a Heavenly Age! (Joan Leslie) ☐

That's Life With the Bogarts! (Lauren Bacall-Humphrey Bogart) . . ☐

MODERN SCREEN Goes Ski-ing (Turhan Bey-Yvonne De Carlo) ☐

Gable's Got Her! (Deborah Kerr) ☐

Queen For A Day! (Mary Snee-Lon McCallister) . . . . . ☐

Strictly For Laughs! (Judy Garland) . . . . . ☐

Good News by Louella Parsons . . . . ☐

Which of the above did you like LEAST? . . . . . .

What 3 MALE stars would you like to read about in future issues? List them, 1, 2, 3, in order of preference. . . . . .

. . . . . .

What 3 FEMALE stars would you like to read about in future issues? List them, 1, 2, 3, in order of preference. . . . . .

. . . . . .

My name is. . . . . .

My address is. . . . . .

City. . . . . Zone. . . . . State. . . . . I am. . . . . years old

ADDRESS THIS TO: POLL DEPT., MODERN SCREEN
149 MADISON AVENUE, NEW YORK 16, N. Y.

SEE THE DIFFERENCE Maybelline MAKES!

Compare the two sides of this revealing picture. First, cover the right side . . . then cover only the left. What a thrilling difference! Soft, lovely Maybelline Eye Make-up can do the same for you. It's amazing to see how much larger and more expressive your eyes appear when lashes are darkened to their very tips with Maybelline Mascara—and brows are gracefully defined with the smooth, soft Maybelline Eyebrow Pencil. Insist on Maybelline — the Eye Make-up in good taste.

MAYBELLINE SOLID MASCARA in the new gold-colored metal vanity. $1. Refills. 50c. Shades: Black, Brown, Blue.

MAYBELLINE CREAM MASCARA (applied without water) comes in handy leatherette case. $1. Shades: Black, Brown.

MAYBELLINE EYEBROW PENCIL with fine, smooth, soft point — so easy to use! Black or Brown.

MAYBELLINE EYE SHADOW in subtle shades of Blue, Brown, Blue-gray, Green, Violet, Gray.

EASY TO SEE
why Chesterfield is by far the favorite of Hollywood Stars
Virginia Mayo ONE OF THE STARS IN "THE BEST YEARS OF OUR LIVES" DRESSED IN THE NEW CHESTERFIELD PRINT
Chesterfield
A BETTER TASTING
B
ALWAYS MILDER
C
COOLER SMOKING
ALWAYS BUY CHESTERFIELD
RIGHT COMBINATION · WORLD'S BEST TOBACCOS · PROPERLY AGED

Copyright 1947, Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co.

OCLC 65950

april 15c

modern screen

THE LIBRARY OF CONGRESS
SERIAL RECORD
MAR 21 1947

SHIRLEY TEMPLE

A DELL MAGAZINE

New Discovery!

RADIATED COLOR IN MATCHING LIPSTICK AND NAIL LACQUER

Jewelry—E. Gubelin
Blouse—Persian Shop
Photo—
Alan Fontaine

Now . . . charge both nails and lips with glistening radiated color. Ignite every costume with Floress . . . the new fluorescent lipstick and nail lacquer miracle containing shimmery Florium.* Unbelievably smooth, and long lasting . . . gives you for the first time beauty that glows! In shades to match every costume, every mood. At many drug and dept. stores. If not yet at your cosmetic counter, send coupon now for generous trial sizes!

*Florium adds soft glow

FLORESS

THE FLUORESCENT LIPSTICK AND NAIL LACQUER

NOW HAVE MATCHING LIPS AND NAILS WITH NEW FLORESS LIPSTICK AND NAIL LACQUER.

CHECK SHADES:

- ☐ NEON RED
- ☐ SCARLET SEQUIN
- ☐ TWILIGHT FUCHSIA
- ☐ NORTHERN LIGHTS
- ☐ BLUE FLAME

FLORESS, DEPT. 4-S, 205 N. MICHIGAN, CHICAGO 1, ILLINOIS
*In Canada: Floress, Dept. 4-S, 22 College St., Toronto

Send me two trial sizes (a full month's supply) of fabulous FLORESS, the fluo cent lipstick, in shades checked at left. I enclose 25c in coin to cover all char including tax. Check here ( ) if you wish all 5 shades for 50c.

☐ Send 1 trial size of Floress Fluorescent Nail Lacquer to match each lip shade checked. Enclose an additional 25c for 2 or 50c for 5.

Check here for REGULAR SIZES:

- ☐ I enclose $... ☐ Send C.O.D. $... plus postage tax included
- ☐ $1.00 Lipstick in beautiful all brass swivel case Plus Fed. Tax
- ☐ 60c Nail Lacquer—Slightly fluorescent. Plus Fed. Tax

Name _____ (Print Plainly)

Address _____

City _____ Zone ___ State ___

*In Canada, Large Lipstick $1.35—Lacquer 6

"The man said Smile, Sis!"

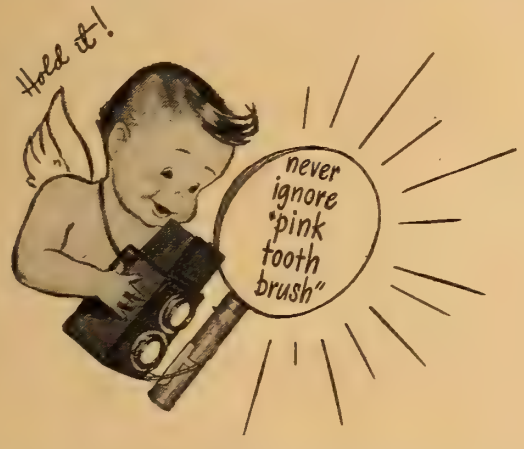
GIRL: Sorry, but I've sworn off smiling. Why, if I smiled—

CUPID: . . . you might get a man into the picture with you some time. Just fancy! Or don't you care for that kind of mush?

GIRL: Look, snip, what I do is my business. Why don't you go attend to your own?

CUPID: It so happens, scrap-happy, that smiles are my business. Men go for smiles. If you think that sour puss of yours will ever make a man look twice . . .

GIRL: Well, my smile is worse than my sulk. It would frighten away even the photographer. No high-lights . . . no glitter. I brush my teeth regularly but—



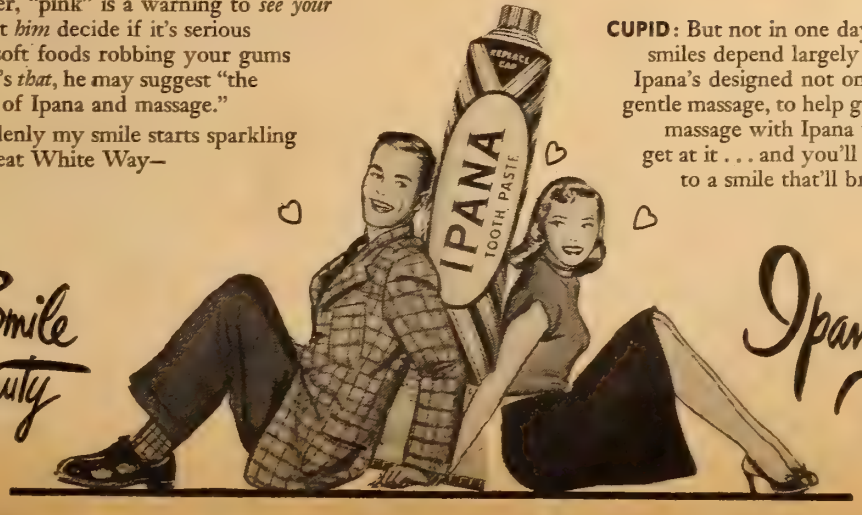
CUPID: But your tooth brush often shows a tinge of "pink"?

GIRL: Pink, green, blue . . . we were discussing the rainbow, perchance?

CUPID: Listen, sister, "pink" is a warning to see your dentist AT ONCE. Let him decide if it's serious . . . or just a case of soft foods robbing your gums of exercise. And if it's that, he may suggest "the helpful stimulation of Ipana and massage."

GIRL: And then suddenly my smile starts sparkling out loud like the Great White Way—

CUPID: But not in one day, dopey. For sparkling smiles depend largely on firm, healthy gums. Ipana's designed not only to clean teeth but, with gentle massage, to help gums. If your dentist suggests massage with Ipana when you brush your teeth, get at it . . . and you'll be on the Great Right Way to a smile that'll break men's hearts!



For the Smile of Beauty

Ipana and Massage

Product of Bristol-Myers

MAR 13 1947

METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER'S
LION'S ROAR

Published in this space every month

The greatest star of the screen!

At last! The world is going to see the dramatic picturization of the most hush-hush secret of all time.

★ ★ ★ ★

M-G-M has made the picture of pictures, "The Beginning or the End"—the story of the beginning of a new civilization or the end of civilization itself—the dramatic story of the atomic bomb.

★ ★ ★ ★

When you see "The Beginning or the End", you'll virtually become a part of the events that were so fraught with drama, danger, and above all—suspense.

★ ★ ★ ★

You'll enter the forbidden city at Oak Ridge.

★ ★ ★ ★

You'll meet the only girl who knew the terrifying secret.

You'll meet the men who enrolled in the army of mystery.

★ ★ ★ ★

And you will know, too, the nerve-fraying tension of their relentless race against time.

★ ★ ★ ★

Here is the story of the hour, the burning topic of the moment, the greatest "must" picture in the history of pictures.

M-G-M has assembled top talent for this mighty production. Brian Donlevy, Robert Walker, Tom Drake and Beverly Tyler (the celebrated "Green Years" lovers), beautiful Audrey Totter, Hume Cronyn and many more. Each contributes an unforgettable performance.

★ ★ ★ ★

To Producer Samuel Marx, Director Norman Taurog, and to the many others who had their part in picturizing the greatest drama of our time, we offer congratulations on an entertainment unique in motion pictures.

"The Beginning or the End" is tremendous from beginning to end!

—Leo

APRIL, 1947

modern screen

the friendly magazine

stories

SUDDENLY IT'S LOVE! (Laraine Day) ... by Florabel Muir 12
THOSE ACADEMY AWARDS! ... by Bosley Crowther 27
"I GIVE YOU JANE WYMAN" ... by Gregory Peck 28
WHY GENE'S DIVORCING MY BROTHER (Gene Tierney) by Cholly Knickerbocker 30
EASTER DREAM (Esther Williams) ... 32
THERE WAS ALWAYS DAD (Teresa Wright) ... by Abigail Putnam 34
THE FIRST YEAR IS THE EASIEST (Shirley Temple) ... By Ida Zeitlin 36
6 TO 5 ON JONES! (Jennifer Jones) ... by Florabel Muir 38
THE MAN I MARRIED (Anne Baxter-John Hodiak) ... by Anne Baxter 40
MARK STEVENS' LIFE STORY (Part II) ... by Kirtley Baskette 42
CLUB CAULFIELD (Joan Caulfield) ... by Betty Caulfield 44
SHE WALKS IN BEAUTY (Ingrid Bergman) ... by Ed Sullivan 46
SAINT OR SINNER? (Errol Flynn) ... by Carl Schroeder 48
BREAK OF HEARTS (Dane Clark) ... by Valerie Sloan 50
"THAT'S WHAT I LIKE ABOUT TOM" (Tom Drake) ... by Maurine Cookson 52
FULL CONFESSION (Ginger Rogers) ... by Ed Sullivan 54
UNCLE JIMMY (James Stewart) ... by Hedda Hopper 56
MANHATTAN NOCTURNE (Rex Harrison) ... by Howard Sharpe 58
FIGHTING LADY (Olivia De Havilland) ... by Hank Jeffries 60
JODY (Claude Jarman, Jr.) ... by Director Clarence Brown 62

features

GOOD NEWS ... by Louella Parsons 4
PICTURE OF THE MONTH: "The Best Years Of Our Lives" selected by Dorothy Kilgallen 14

departments

REVIEWS ... by Virginia Wilson 16
FASHION ... by Constance Bartel 71
INFORMATION DESK ... by Beverly Linet 82
FAN CLUBS ... by Shirley Frohlich 90
BEAUTY: "Hands Around The Clock" ... by Carol Carter 94
MUSIC: "Sweet And Hot" ... by Leonard Feather 100

COVER PORTRAIT BY NIKOLAS MURAY • DESIGNED BY LESTER BEALL
Hat by Walter Florell • Suit by Paul Parnes

ALBERT P. DELACORTE, Executive Editor HENRY P. MALMGREEN, Editor

BERYL STOLLER, associate editor
SHIRLEY FROHLICH, assistant editor
OTTO STORCH, art director
BILL WEINBERGER, art editor
CONSTANCE BARTEL, fashion editor
BEVERLY LINET, information desk
CHARLES SAXON, cartoon editor
MAGDA MASKEL, western manager
FRANKLYN PHILLIPS, western editor
GUS GALE, staff photographer
BOB BEERMAN, staff photographer
CARL SCHROEDER, editorial consultant
LAYNG MARTINE, promotion director
JEAN KINKEAD, contributing editor

POSTMASTER: Please send notice on Form 3578 and copies returned under Label Form 3579 to 149 Madison Avenue, New York 16, New York
Vol. 34, No. 5, April, 1947. Copyright, 1947, the Dell Publishing Co., Inc., 149 Madison Ave., New York. Published monthly. Printed in U. S. A. Published simultaneously in the Dominion of Canada. International copyright secured under the provisions of the Revised Convention for the Protection of Literary and Artistic Works. Office of publication at Washington and South Aves., Dunellen, N. J. Chicago Advertising office, 360 N. Michigan Ave., Chicago 1, Illinois. Single copy price, 15c in U. S. and Canada. Subscriptions in U. S. A. and Canada $1.80 a year; elsewhere $2.80 a year. Entered as second class matter Sept. 18, 1930, at the post office, Dunellen, N. J., under Act of March 3, 1879. The publishers accept no responsibility for the return of unsolicited material. Names of characters used in semi-fictional matter are fictitious. If the name of any living person is used it is purely a coincidence. Trademark No. 301778.

THE LONG-AWAITED DRAMATIC STORY OF THE ATOMIC BOMB

THE BEGINNING OR THE END

M-G-M presents the picture of pictures...the story of the most HUSH-HUSH secret of all time!

M-G-M's "THE BEGINNING OR THE END"

Starring

BRIAN DONLEVY • ROBERT WALKER

with

TOM DRAKE • BEVERLY TYLER

AUDREY TOTTER • HUME CRONYN

Screen Play by FRANK WEAD • Original Story by ROBERT CONSIDINE

Directed by NORMAN TAUROG • Produced by SAMUEL MARX

A METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER PICTURE

Look into the forbidden city! Meet the girl who lost her identity—the only girl who knew the world's most terrifying secret!

LOUELLA PARSONS'

GOOD NEWS

van marries evie!

Fifteen minutes after Van Johnson and Evie Wynn planed in from their Juarez elopement, I was talking to the newlyweds on the phone.

"Happy?" said Van in answer to my question, "Louella, I've never known complete happiness before. Evie is the first and the only girl I have ever loved. This is the love of my life. I think you know that."

Then the bride came on to say that she was still trying to catch her breath after the way Van had swooped her up and carried her over the threshold after the fashion of newlyweds from time immemorial.

"On the way back out to our home," Evie told me, "we stopped by to see my children. I want them with us as soon as I can make arrangements. We really aren't completely settled in the new house yet."

Well, I must say that after all the false starts and, yes, unlucky angles about this most sensational of Hollywood romances, Van and Evie are glowing with happiness.

Believe me, it's a puzzler when a man's wife falls in love with his best friend and yet all three remain on the best of terms even after the wife announces that she is divorcing her husband and sets a wedding date with the friend.

And apparently, their sudden elopement to Juarez, where Evie divorced Keenan one minute and married Van the next, has not interrupted that friendship.

I also talked with Keenan the day of the wedding and he said, "I wish them all the happiness in the world. I'm keeping the children with me for a little while until Evie is ready to take them. But believe me, it won't be one of those cases where I have them six months out of the year and their mother the other six months. I went through too much unhappiness that way in my own youth. The children will stay with their (Continued on page 6)

Hold on, Evie, that's no way to induct an unsuspecting groom into matrimony! Ever since Evie started buying draperies and furniture for his new house, it seemed certain she'd wed Van.

Van Johnson and Evie Wynn were married in Juarez, Mexico, on January 25, as soon as she obtained her divorce from Keenan. There was no time for an immediate honeymoon, so Van, who told Louella he'd never been happier in his life, brought his bride into the $125,000 "bonus" home Metro gave him.

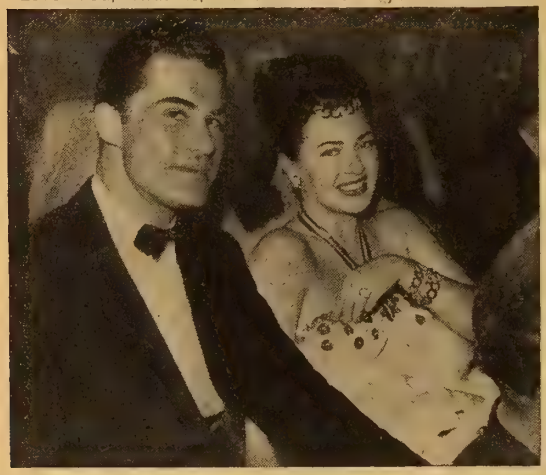
Metro execs are reported worried over the reaction of the bobby-soxers to Van's marriage, but the newlyweds aren't upset; look at Frankie! Van and Gene Kelly will co-star as Weber and Fields.

Van attended the Yearling premiere with old friends Peter Lawford and Lucille Ball. Then he and Evie left for Sun Valley for some skiing. Van invited his Dad to live with them, but Pop Johnson said no; Providence was his proper home.

LOUELLA PARSONS' GOOD NEWS

Greg and Greta Peck (at The Yearling premiere) are planning on a bigger house for their two sons to romp in. Other plans include eventually doing a play in N. Y. every other year.

Recognize the brown-haired Lana Turner, with Peter Shaw? Lana turned songwriter, wrote a tune called "Love You, That Is," and Frances Faye recorded it.



Jimmy Durante may steal a kiss now and then, but Margaret O'Brien's own true love is really Claude Jarman, Jr.—otherwise known as Jody. Only Jody's at the age where he prefers older women—like Mrs. Gregory Peck.

mother with the understanding that I can see them any time."

Perhaps as long as movie history is written, no one will ever really know what happened in this sensational triangle with the exception of the three interested parties.

But this I do believe: In the beginning there was a great deal of opposition to the romance of Van and Evie not only from his studio, M-G-M, but from many of the letter-writing fans as well.

I think the realization of this opposition was responsible for many changes in their plans. Several months ago, you will remember, Evie went to Las Vegas to get a divorce—and then suddenly called it off. Around the holidays she took off for Sun Valley for the same reason—and then again changed her mind.

The elopement, I am sure, was very sudden. I think it came after Van had convinced his studio that this marriage was the one thing in his life really important to his happiness. "All right," said the bosses in effect, "if that's the way it is, marry the girl you love and with our blessing."

And so the beginning of the marriage of Van Johnson and Evie Wynn is the ending of one of the most amazing love stories of all time in Hollywood.

Let's you and I add our voices to those wishing them happiness and health.

* * *

As this is written, two of my closest friends, Greer Garson and Richard Ney, are separated. By the time you read it, they may be back together again. This I sincerely hope.

But at the time I broke my exclusive story of

(Continued on page 8)

His Dream!
Her Love!
"... a filly that doesn't tame easy... long-limbed and deep through the heart!"
"... broad in the shoulder... with fire in his blood... and not too easy to hold on to!"
CORNEL WILDE
MAUREEN O'HARA
Your Kind of Romance!
THE HOMESTRETCH
in TECHNICOLOR
20th CENTURY-FOX ROMANCE!
with GLENN LANGAN · HELEN WALKER
JAMES GLEASON · HENRY STEPHENSON · MARGARET BANNERMAN · ETHEL GRIFFIES · TOMMY COOK
Directed by BRUCE HUMBERSTONE · Produced by ROBERT BASSLER · Original Screen Play by Wanda Tuchock

SERVICE MEN in both the Army and Navy all over the world find Beech-Nut Gum a favorite Everywhere it goes—the reputation of Beech-Nut for fine flavor goes with it

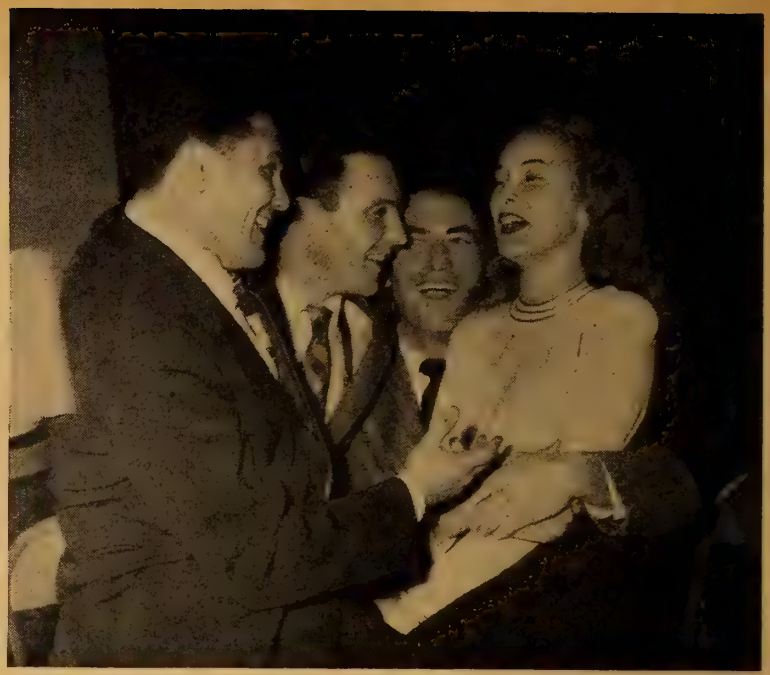
Beech-Nut Gum



Lucky Jean Morrison! The Screen Guild Broadcast found her surrounded by John Garfield, Gene Kelly, and Greg Peck, whose lap proved very roomy.

LOUELLA PARSONS' GOOD NEWS

their separation I knew it was true in spite of the luke warm denials. Richard had admitted it to me. He told me he was living with Ginger Rogers and Jackie Briggs, but "any official statement must come from my wife. She is the star and the important one."

Greer, on the other hand, stuck persistently to her story that Richard had moved out for a few days because the house was being re-decorated (exclamation point).

The trouble, either temporary or permanent, I believe, was due to the fact that Greer has been ill and depressed for several months. She never fully recovered from the accident she suffered filming location scenes for A Woman of My Own, in which she nearly drowned. Finally, when the picture was completed after six gruelling months of work, she was bitterly disappointed in it. The studio agreed with her that some of it would have to be re-shot.

It was impossible for her to pitch right in again without a good rest; she wasn't physically up to it.

"During the past few months both my mother and Richard have had to worry about my depressed condition," Greer told me.

After she has a rest—she's even closing their big house to be free of all worries—I'm hoping that she and Richard will be as happy as they were in the past.

The cutest story of the month concerns Margaret O'Brien, out shopping for new clothes in some of the swank shops in Beverly Hills.

Suddenly she noticed a cute little shop with a skirt in the window which caught her eye. A sign said that the buttons could be moved over, or back, to make the garment bigger or smaller.

"Oh, mother," said the little girl, "let's go in and order one made in my size. If I keep on eating ice cream and cake it would come in so handy."

The shop, if you please, was the famous "Anticipation Shop," specializing in maternity clothes!

* * *

For thirty-six hours, Hollywood had it's own who-dun-it. The big mystery was: WHERE, OH WHERE, WAS BLONDE, BEAUTIFUL VIRGINIA MAYO?

The girl who plays the naughty wife of The Best Years of Our Lives so well, just up and disappeared into thin air for almost three days.

The manager of her apartment house knew nothing of her whereabouts. The Goldwyn studio crowd were so worried and puzzled they were within five minutes of calling the police. Her "fiance," Michael O'Shea, was beside himself.

Then out of the blue, Virginia called me from Palm Springs.

She said she hadn't intended to stir up a mystery, but she hadn't wanted anyone,

(Continued on page 10)

SOL LESSER presents

EDWARD G. ROBINSON

and

LON McCALLISTER

in

"The RED HOUSE"

Straight from the pages of The Saturday Evening Post serial and the novel that thrilled over 7 million readers!

with JUDITH ANDERSON · RORY CALHOUN · ALLENE ROBERTS · JULIE LONDON
ONA MUNSON · HARRY SHANNON · From the novel "THE RED HOUSE" by GEORGE AGNEW CHAMBERLAIN · Written for the Screen and Directed by DELMER DAVES

Copyright by Thalia Productions, Inc. - Released thru United Artists

"Glo-Ver's the Shampoo for me!"

says IRENE KULBACK, lovely PAN AMERICAN WORLD AIRWAYS stewardess

Irene really gets around, in Pan American's big transoceanic Clippers—but, anywhere in the world, she finds the few minutes needed for her regular streamlined shampoo with GLO-VER. No other shampoo can do more for your hair—for that natural-looking hair-beauty! Contains mild, efficient cleansing agents, made from fine blended vegetable oils. Rinses out instantly—no trace of unsightly film. Removes loose dandruff, cleanses scalp. Ask for the regular size package at Drug or Cosmetic Counters—or mail Coupon for free Sampler.

GLO-VER
Beauty Shampoo

FREE TRIAL APPLICATION

Be Glover-wise . . . glamorize with GLO-VER Beauty Shampoo, Glover's Mange Medicine, Glover's Hair Dress! One complete application of each in hermetically-sealed bottles—all 3 in free Sampler Package not sold in stores. Mail Coupon today.

Glover's, Dept. 854
101 West 31st St., New York 1, N. Y.

Send free Sampler Package in plain wrapper by return mail—GLO-VER Shampoo, Glover's Mange Medicine and Hair Dress, in 3 hermetically-sealed bottles, with free booklet. I enclose 10c to cover cost of packaging and postage.

Name.....
(PLEASE PRINT PLAINLY)

Address.....

At the Duet In The Sun premiere: Maria Montez and husband Jean Pierre Aumont. Maria's all excited about making their first picture together, Queen Of Hearts.

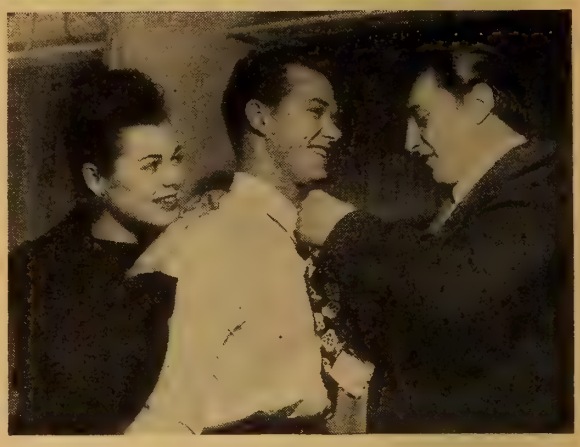
It isn't every broadcast at the Lux Show that features Bob Mitchum as the official four-in-hander. Even Bill Williams' wife, Barbara Hale, said he had a fine technique.



LOUELLA PARSONS'

GOOD NEWS

particularly O'Shea, to know where she was.

"We had a battle," Virginia told me. "I don't know whether we will ever make up." I think the real reason is that Mike's long-expected divorce has not gone through. Ah, amour, amour!

* * *

I have the greatest respect in the world for Jean Hersholt for his candor and honesty in coming out and saying something that many of us have long suspected about the Academy Awards.

And that is—that too much studio politics is tied up in the selections for the coveted Oscars.

In a letter to all Academy members, Jean, who is the president of the organization, said that the "loyalty" of the voters was to the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences and not to any studio affiliation.

The eyes of the nation and many foreign capitals are on Hollywood at Oscar voting time. And the results should be a free and unhampered verdict that proudly bestows honors on achievements proudly won.

To me, and to all of us who so much want the Oscar to stand for the finest achievements in Hollywood, it is completely shocking that professional gamblers have moved in and are quoting "odds" on the players likely to win.

When you read this, we will all know the results. Let us hope, for the dignity of Hollywood, they are honest!

* * *

I don't think any dress in the world is worth 1400 or 1500 dollars even if it were lined with gold and studded with diamonds. And yet, a certain Hollywood designer is getting "them" prices.

What surprises me is that the girls who are paying these sums for finery are not always the biggest stars. A girl who was recently married and who paid $1500 for her wedding gown, is little more than a stock player at one of the major studios.

Another girl, who paid $1400 for a dinner gown, is listed as a featured player. I understand they think the glad rags will attract attention and they will be given bigger opportunities. In other words, a "business investment." As such, it's the best way I know to go broke.

* * *

The biggest yen in town is the undisguised "crush" 12-year-old Claude Jarman, Jr. has on pretty, cute, blonde little Mrs. Gregory Peck. Greg is standing up under his romance

(Continued on page 65)

A MOUTH LIKE HERS
IF YOU WERE NORA PRENTISS WOULD YOU KEEP YOUR MOUTH SHUT?
IS JUST FOR KISSING
Ann Sheridan
AS A WOMAN WHO DOES WHAT SHE HAS TO DO IN "NORA PRENTISS"
THE NEW WARNER SENSATION
NOT FOR TELLING
CO-STARRING
KENT SMITH · BRUCE BENNETT with ROBERT ALDA
ROSEMARY DeCAMP
DIRECTED BY
VINCENT SHERMAN
PRODUCED BY WILLIAM JACOBS
SCREEN PLAY BY N. RICHARD NASH • FROM A STORY BY PAUL WEBSTER & JACK SOBELL • MUSIC BY FRANZ WAXMAN

The law is a little confused about Laraine Day and Leo Durocher— but the heart knows nothing about man-made laws.

Suddenly it's love!

by florabel muir

special correspondent,
N. Y. Daily News

■ A few months ago I chatted with Laraine Day for an hour at the Beverly Hills Club. In the midst of a merry, laughing crowd I had observed that she was quiet and pretty much aloof.

I said: "Laraine, you seem strangely pensive tonight." She shot me a quick glance. "Do I?" I quickly assured her that it was quite becoming.

Little enough did I suspect that she was at an emotional crisis in her life.

A great and overpowering love had come to Laraine. Not one of us here in Hollywood had the slightest suspicion of it. Ray Hendricks was at the club that night. He wasn't spending much time with his lovely wife, but that isn't extraordinary at Hollywood parties. By the same token, Gene Tierney was there with Oleg Cassini, her devoted squire, and no one would have guessed that within a few weeks she would be filing suit for a divorce.

Two years ago, Laraine, on a USO tour, met Leo Durocher on an airplane flying from Chicago to Minneapolis.

Laraine has let me know something of the terrible (Continued on page 130)

Dancing at Ciro's, shortly before their Mexican wedding, Laraine Day and the Dodgers' Leo Durocher were blissfully unaware of the marital mess ahead. At this writing, they are married in every state but Calif.

The Woman Hunt is on for the girl with the little black book!
DEBORAH KERR*....
(you'll love her ..you'll love her brogue) as the Gay Young Innocent caught in a Web of Intrigue and Love!
"The Adventuress"

J. ARTHUR RANK presents

DEBORAH KERR • TREVOR HOWARD in "THE ADVENTURESS" with RAYMOND HUNTLEY • MICHAEL HOWARD • NORMA SHELLEY • LIAM REDMOND

Screenplay written and produced by FRANK LAUNDER and SIDNEY GILLIAT

Directed by FRANK LAUNDER • AN INDIVIDUAL PICTURE

An Eagle-Lion Films Release

* KERR RHYMES WITH STAR

dorothy kilgallen selects "the best years of our lives"

Butch (Hoagy Carmichael, left) is sympathetic, and understands that Homer (Harold Russell, center) must be treated naturally if he is to overcome his physical handicap. Though unhurt in battle, Al (Fredric March) has other adjustments to make when he comes home.

■ You know how you think of an American town—the main street, the gleaming drug store, the parking lot? The bank, and the bar where the nice little guy plays the piano the way it sounds best over a beer at two o'clock in the morning?

You know how you think of an American hero—modest and sensible, good-natured and scornful of pity?

You know how you think of an American husband—hard-working and honest, loving his wife, puzzled a little by the way things are but wanting to make them better? . .

All this, and all these, you will find in Samuel Goldwyn's picture The Best Years Of Our Lives, and that, I think is its secret. It shows the people you know, and it shows them the way you think of them in a setting as familiar as your own backyard, and what is says about them is true. It is a picture for which the only simple descriptive word is wonderful.

American veterans are owed much and owe very little, but they are in debt to Director William Wyler and all others involved in the making of The Best Years Of Our Lives. It tells their story by following the homely and predictable adventures of three men—one young, one middle aged, one very young and maimed

(Continued on page 92)

RAY MILLAND · TERESA WRIGHT
On her wedding night
She Alone Can Send A Stranger To His Death, Or Keep Silent And Have Her Happiness Forever.
Because she loved him so much... she hurt him so deeply!
"The Imperfect Lady"

with

SIR CEDRIC HARDWICKE · VIRGINIA FIELD · REGINALD OWEN · ANTHONY QUINN · MELVILLE COOPER

Produced by KARL TUNBERG · Directed by LEWIS ALLEN

Screen Play by Karl Tunberg · A Paramount Picture

MOVIE REVIEWS

by Virginia Wilson

Cattle baron Jim Brewton (S. Tracy) introduces his bride Lutie (K. Hepburn) to a rancher. Later, he learns that her sympathies lie much more with the ranchers than with him.

SEA OF GRASS

■ There is, perhaps, no more bitter life for a woman than being married to a man whom she loves but cannot respect. A man with a twisted outlook on the world, which results in repeated injury to others. Colonel Brewton (Spencer Tracy) is such a man, but Lutie (Katharine Hepburn) doesn't know that when she marries him.

Lutie is a St. Louis girl, and even in 1880, St. Louis is quite different from New Mexico, Brewton's home. Lutie is used to shining silver, and champagne, and quiet-voiced servants. Brewton, in spite of his tremendous land holdings, has none of these things to offer. They spend their honeymoon in a rough camp at the edge of the "Sea of Grass," Brewton's term for his enormous grazing lands. Lutie soon comes to understand that this land means more to him than anything in his life.

The countryside is in a state of unrest. Small farmers are trying to get holdings, but Brewton and his fellow cattle-barons make it impossible. Even the brilliant lawyer, Brice Chamberlain (Melvyn Douglas), can't win a case in the politically controlled courts against Brewton.

From the time Lutie first meets Brice there is an unmistakable spark of passion between them. Yet she is truly in love with her husband, truly anxious to share his interests and opinions. But she finds it impossible to adopt a belief that brushes aside the rights of everyone except a certain privileged group—a belief that cares nothing for people, only for land. (Continued on page 18)

Lawyer Chamberlain (Melvyn Douglas) loves Lutie, helps her in the fight—against her husband's interests—to get the ranchers the land which they feel is rightfully theirs.

Years later, Jim finds that he has lost touch with his son Brock (Bob Walker) and daughter (Phyllis Thaxter). Lutie leaves him, and it takes Brock's death to bring them together.

If He Knew Where He Lost it...
If He Knew When He Lost it...
Then He'd Know Which of These MISSES to Call MRS.!
The Groom
The Bride
the Wife
LOST! ONE HONEYMOON
If anyone finds a honeymoon with me on it, please return. FRANCHOT TONE
Eagle-Lion Films presents
FRANCHOT TONE
ANN RICHARDS
TOM CONWAY
IN "LOST HONEYMOON"
BRYAN FOY
In Charge of Production
with
FRANCES RAFFERTY · CLARENCE KOLB
UNA O'CONNOR · WINSTON SEVERN
Original Screenplay by Joseph Fields
EAGLE-LION FILMS
Music by Werner Heymann
Produced by Lee Marcus · Directed by LEIGH JASON

now...
all skin blemishes can be completely concealed with this amazing cream

LYDIA O'LEARY'S
COVERMARK

hides birthmarks, vitiligo, liver spots, all skin discolorations . . . quickly, safely!

ACCEPTED FOR ADVERTISING IN JOURNALS OF THE AMERICAN MEDICAL ASSOCIATION

Women everywhere — men, too — have discovered that blemishes . . . even severe birthmarks . . . are nothing to worry about! Not since COVERMARK, the "modern miracle," it completely conceals every blemish . . is easy to apply . . will not rub or wear off. $1.50 and $3.00* at drug and cosmetic counters. See the entire line of Lydia O'Leary Cosmetics. Write us for free booklet and color chart.

*more than a cosmetic — exempt from federal tax.

LYDIA O'LEARY, INC.
551 FIFTH AVENUE,
NEW YORK 17, N. Y. Dept. 104

My Favorite Brunette: Bob Hope finds Dorothy Lamour once again the girl in his arms—in a hilarious parody of Hollywood's tough mystery thrillers.

(Continued from page 16)

Lutie grows increasingly unhappy, even after the birth of her daughter. When Brewton's cowboys beat up a farmer who has gotten in the way of their cattle, Lutie decides she's had enough. She leaves her husband and when she sees Brice again the spark between them fans to flame. A brief, quick-dying flame, for she realizes even then that it's Brewton she really loves.

Lutie has a son and he grows to manhood as Brock Brewton (Robert Walker), although she told Brewton the truth at his birth. In the end it is made clear to both Lutie and her husband that it was always the "sea of grass" which stood between them.—M-G-M.

MY FAVORITE BRUNETTE

Bob Hope's new picture is a hilarious parody of the "tough" mystery thrillers that have lately flooded the screen. With Dorothy Lamour as his favorite brunette, Bob plays a photographer, Ronnie Jackson, who yearns to be a private detective.

His studio is just across the hall from the McLeod Detective Agency. While Ronnie begs squawling children to "Smile and look at the birdie!" Sam McLeod is saving beautiful girls from sudden and violent death. Anyway, that's what Ronnie thinks. Sam goes away for a few days and Ronnie is in the office pretending he's a great detective, when a client walks in. She's a sleek brunette who tells him she is Carlotta Montay (Dorothy Lamour). Before he can explain that he's only a photographer, she has hired him to find her missing uncle, Baron Montay (Frank Puglio).

The Baron is an invalid, confined to a wheelchair, but he has disappeared, wheelchair and all. Carlotta whispers mysteriously that she's afraid "they" have got him. She tells Ronnie to come to a certain address that afternoon to get further details, and she gives him a secret map to hide for her.

The address turns out to be a country estate, complete with a sinister butler called Kismet (Peter Lorre) and a host, Major Montague (Charles Dingle), who tells Ronnie that the lush Carlotta suffers from delusions. "This nonsense about the Baron having disappeared is an example," he explains, when she's out of the room. "The Baron is right in the library here." He takes Ronnie in and produces a man in a wheelchair whom the photographer recognizes from the picture Carlotta showed him of her uncle.

Ronnie is not only convinced, he is now terrified of Carlotta. He's allergic to crazy people, and after all, she might get violent any minute! But as he is about to leave, he overhears a conversation that shows Carlotta is the victim of a conspiracy. Gallantly, Ronnie swings into action again. So far in that he gets thoroughly beaten up, has to dodge knives thrown by Kismet, and spends considerable time in an expensive looney-bin! He even is arrested and almost executed for a murder he didn't commit. Who wants to be a private detective, anyway?—Par.

THE FABULOUS DORSEYS

Fabulous is the word for the Dorsey brothers. They've been a legend in show business for years—their talent, their battles, their rivalry. Tommy on the trombone and Jimmy on the sax are tops in their particular fields, but they just don't play the same kind of music.

That's what starts all the trouble, way back when they are kids in a Pennsylvania mining town. Their dad, Tom Dorsey (Arthur Shields) is a miner, but he's a musician too. He keeps the boys practicing when the other kids are out in the corner lot playing baseball, by the simple expedient of taking away their shoes. Even in those days they'd fight like devils over the way to play a particular passage. Tommy wanted it hot and Jimmy wanted it sweet, and it would take little Jane, the girl next door, to keep them from committing murder and mayhem.

When they grow up, they form a band of their own and go out on the road. Jane (Janet Blair) goes with them as vocalist. Things are tough and they don't get the bookings they'd hoped for. When they do get one, it's apt to end in a row between the brothers. Finally, their piano player walks out. He says he can starve cheaper on Broadway. So they hire a guy who plays piano in a local movie house. His name is Bob (William Lundigan) and he's good.

Of course he falls in love with Jane, and gets awfully tired of seeing her devote her time to patching up the quarrels of the Dorsey brothers. He's writing a concerto

DON'T CONDEMN JANET AMES
UNTIL YOU'VE SEEN THE PICTURE!

COLUMBIA PICTURES
presents

ROSALIND
RUSSELL · MELVYN DOUGLAS

in

The Guilt of Janet Ames

with SID CAESAR · BETSY BLAIR
NINA FOCH

Screenplay by Louella MacFarlane, Allen Rivkin, Devery Freeman
Directed by HENRY LEVIN

That Bandbox Look

isn't come by accidentally, Lamby . . . You achieve it only by paying close attention to the little details of grooming . . . The prettiest hair-do, for instance, can go limp around the edges fast —if you don't anchor it with Bob Pins that have a Stronger Grip. And that means DeLong Bob Pins.

Stronger Grip

Won't Slip Out

They're made of high-carbon steel so they can't slip and slide and they keep their snap and shape indefinitely.

Quality Manufacturers for Over 50 Years

BOB PINS HAIR PINS SAFETY PINS
SNAPS PINS
HOOKS & EYES HOOK & EYE TAPES
SANITARY BELTS

and he wants Jane to marry him and be his inspiration, instead of worrying about Tommy and Jimmy.

The band falls apart, and the brothers get a job with Paul Whiteman. Then they have a really flaming row over who should play what how, and swear they'll never play together again. Each of them wins fame with his own band, and it's a long time before they break that vow. . . .

Paul Whiteman, Charlie Barnet, Henry Busse, Art Tatum and Ziggy Elman are a few of the music-makers you'll hear. Aside from "the fabulous Dorseys" themselves. —U.A.

THE GUILT OF JANET AMES

Ladies and gentlemen of the jury, let me present the case of Janet Ames. The crime she is charged with is selfishness. Consider your verdict carefully.

One rainy night in April, Janet Ames (Rosalind Russell) sets out with a list of five men. They are the men whose lives were saved when her husband threw himself on a Jap grenade. He died so they could live, and Janet has done nothing for two years but mourn him. Now she feels that she must find out all about these men. Were they worth that sacrifice? Could anyone be?

The first address is Danny's saloon. As Janet starts across the street toward it, she is struck by a car. When she comes to in the hospital, she can't walk. The doctors tell her there is nothing wrong with her physically—it's a neurosis. If she really wanted to walk, she could.

Janet has a visitor in the hospital. He's a newspaperman called Smitty (Melvyn Douglas), and he tells her he used to know Dave, her husband. What he doesn't tell her is that the police sergeant called him, because his name—Smithfield Cobb—is on the list in Janet's bag. Smitty asks where she was going, and gradually she confides in him the story of Dave's death, and her decision to find the five men who are alive because of it. But she adds that she won't be able to carry out her plan now—she can't walk.

"Maybe that's why you can't walk," Smitty says slowly. "Because you're afraid of what you'd find."

That doesn't make sense to Janet at first. But Smitty leads her into a sort of dream world where she meets four of the men. And she begins to see what he means. There's Joe who's a bouncer in a saloon because he only has one leg left and wants to prove he's still as tough as any guy with two. There's Pierson who's doing scientific experiments in the desert instead of living on his rich wife's money. There's Merino, whose little daughter needs him. And Sammy (Sid Caesar) who has a wonderful ability to make people laugh. And then there's Smitty . . .—Col.

SINBAD THE SAILOR

No one ever quite believes the stories Sinbad the Sailor tells about his voyages. Around the bazaars of Basra, he's known as Sinbad the Liar, but everyone listens to him anyway. Take the story of his eighth voyage. . .

Sinbad (Douglas Fairbanks) and his first mate, Abbu (George Tobias), see a ship foundering on the rocks. They swim out to it and find the whole crew dead of poisoned water. Sinbad, fascinated by a chart on board which has curious symbols matching those on a talisman he always wears around his neck, feels that Destiny is at work. He bids for the ship at auction, although he hasn't a dime—or its Persian equivalent, in his pocket.

Bidding against him is a spectacularly beautiful girl named Shireen (Maureen O'Hara). Sinbad outbids her and manages to pay for the ship by a piece of magician's mumbo-jumbo which I don't profess to understand. He also fixes up a date with Shireen, and—in the course of it—almost gets a knife in his back. Shireen disappears, although it wasn't she who threw the knife.

Sinbad decides to sail his ship to Daibul where the gorgeous redhead came from. The knife which almost ended his artful career has a name carved on the jeweled handle—Jamal. That name recurs in a threatening pattern throughout the rest of the picture.

Sinbad and Shireen meet again at Daibul, where she presides over the harem of the Emir (Anthony Quinn). The Emir wants her to become Wife Number One, but Shireen dreams of Sinbad and the rose he gave her, and puts off her decision. She and the Emir have a common objective—the discovery of the gold treasure on an island called Deryabar. They think that Sinbad, because of the medallion he wears, is Prince Ahmed of Deryabar, and can lead them there. Actually, Sinbad knows nothing about it, and the direction chart has been stolen from the ship. The fat and crafty ship's barber (Walter Slezak) claims to have memorized the chart. Perhaps he can take them there—but what then?

The Technicolor is something that's out of this world.—RKO.

The Guilt of Janet Ames: War-widow Rosalind Russell tells Melvyn Douglas of her strange quest.

Sinbad the Sailor: Maureen O'Hara listens skeptically to Douglas Fairbanks' weird adventures.

This is the story of Annie...

NOW ANNIE WAS...

AS BEAUTIFUL A GIRL...

AS EVER WAS PUT TOGETHER!

WHY, WHEN ANNIE WALKED DOWN THE STREET... WOW!

YET ANNIE HAD HER BAD MOMENTS...LIKE ANY OTHER GAL.

AND YOU WANT TO KNOW WHY? ANNIE'S HANDS WERE A MESS. ALWAYS ROUGH AND DRY, LIKE SANDPAPER.

AND WHEN A MAN WANTS TO HOLD A GIRL'S HANDS... EVEN A GIRL LIKE ANNIE ...HE DOESN'T WANT TO WEAR GLOVES...

THEN, LUCKILY, FANNIE TOLD ANNIE ABOUT AN ENTIRELY NEW AND DIFFERENT HAND LOTION! THE BEFOREHAND LOTION...TRUSHAY!

SO ANNIE SMOOTHED CREAMY, FRAGRANT TRUSHAY ON HER HANDS BEFORE SHE DID DISHES...BECAUSE TRUSHAY GUARDS HANDS EVEN IN HOT, SOAPY WATER!

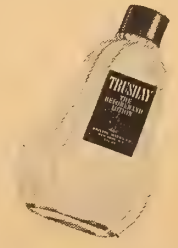
AND ANNIE PUT TRUSHAY ON HER HANDS BEFORE SHE TUBBED HER UNDIES...SO TRUSHAY'S SPECIAL "OIL-RICHNESS" COULD HELP PREVENT DRYNESS AND ROUGHNESS.

SO NOW ANNIE IS ABLE TO KEEP HER HANDS SOFT AND SMOOTH AND HOLDABLE... THANKS TO TRUSHAY'S WONDERFUL SOFTENING HELP.

TRUSHAY

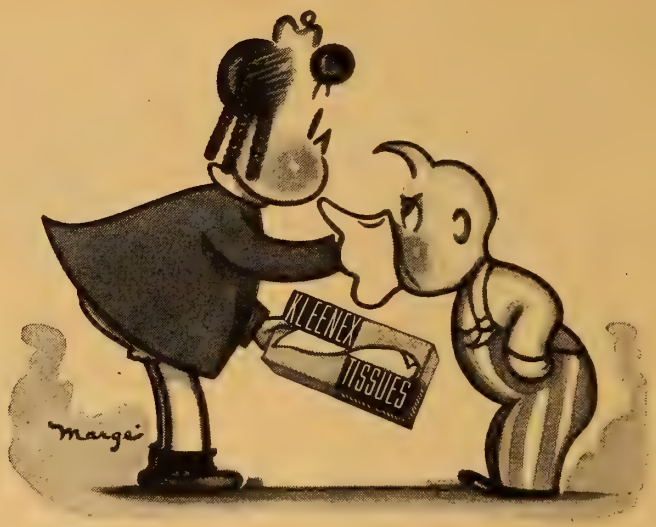


The "Beforehand" Lotion

PRODUCT OF BRISTOL-MYERS

P. S. Trushay's grand for softening hands at any time! Wonderful, too, for rough, dry elbows and heels . . . as a powder base . . . before and after exposure to weather. Trushay contains no alcohol, is not sticky. Begin today to use Trushay!

LITTLE LULU



"You can let yourself go, Alvin, it's Kleenex."

LITTLE LULU SAYS . . . Compare tissues—compare boxes—and you'll see why 7 out of 10 tissue users like Kleenex* best! Soft! Strong! Pops Up! It's America's favorite tissue.

© International Cellucotton Products Co. *T. M. Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

romantic as a rose...

your hair... like your face . . . needs daily make-up!

Ogilvie Sisters Hair Beauty Aids will lend an aura of enchantment to your hair . . . making the most of your own sweet self. . . .

Special aids for dry, oily hair.

New! Creme Shampoo $1
Highlights Hairinse $1*
Creme-Set $1.25*

Ogilvie Sisters
HAIR PREPARATIONS
at Dept. and Drug Stores
604 Fifth Avenue • New York 19, N. Y.

*Fed Tax.

The Locket: Laraine Day is a psychopathic liar and thief, who brings sorrow to Bob Mitchum.

THE LOCKET

When you were a little girl, did you have a gold locket that was your pride and joy? Whether you did or not probably had no lasting effect on your life, but in the case of Nancy Patton (Laraine Day) it made her a thief and a murderess.

Let's start where the picture starts—on the day that Nancy is to be married to John Willis (Gene Raymond). Just before the ceremony, a man appears who demands a private talk with John. He says he's a psychiatrist named Blair (Brian Aherne) and he advises John very strongly not to marry Nancy. "She's a charming girl," he admits. "She is also a psychopathic liar and thief."

John is furious at this accusation, but Blair says quietly that he was married to Nancy for five years and should know what he's talking about. He also says he understands John's feelings, because a short time after his own marriage, a man came to him with much the same story. This stranger was an artist, Norman Clyde (Robert Mitchum), and the story he told Blair about Nancy was a frightening one.

According to him, Nancy had been the secretary of a rich man named Bonner (Ricardo Cortez), whom she persuaded to take an interest in Clyde's painting. But Clyde suspected his real interest was in Nancy, although he was married. One night at the Bonners' house, Nancy steals a diamond bracelet. No one but Clyde knows she has taken it, and he forgives her when she tells him the story of the locket which was taken away from her as a child. He sends the bracelet back, and she promises never to steal again. A few months later, she has not only stolen, but murdered Bonner who caught her at it.

Clyde can't prove she did this, and she denies it even as an innocent man goes to the chair for the murder. Clyde's disillusionment is complete, and tragic. Nancy, however, goes on, unconcerned by the lives she has wrecked or taken. Until the locket of her childhood reappears, and in a strange way she pays at last for her crimes.—RKO

THE BRASHER DOUBLOON

The Philip Marlowe for this month is George Montgomery. Last month it was Robert Montgomery. How confused can you get? The Brasher Doubloon is, like all Chandler mysteries, so full of action that it leaves you gasping like a just-landed trout by the time it's over. Murder, robbery, humor and sex are mixed expertly and ladled out by Montgomery, Nancy Guild, Conrad Janis, Florence Bates and Fritz Kortner.

When Philip Marlowe, detective, is summoned to Pasadena to see a Mrs. Murdock (Florence Bates), he doesn't know that the case's solution will depend on a murder committed seven years before. Mrs. Murdock is a stone-faced, mountainous old woman, with a weakling son, Leslie (Conrad Janis) and a lovely but frightened secretary, Merle (Nancy Guild). Merle has a psychosis about men. Shivers with terror when one tries to hold her hand, the silly girl!

Mrs. Murdock tells Marlowe that a coin known as the "Brasher Doubloon" is missing from her late husband's collection. It is worth ten thousand dollars. But she says sharply that he's only to get the coin back—not try to find out who stole it. She has reason to think that a dealer named Morningstar knows where it is.

Marlowe, expert in such matters, frightens Morningstar into telling him who has the Doubloon. It's a private investigator, Anson, who is murdered before Marlowe can get to him. He finds a baggage check among Anson's clothes, and sure enough, with it he redeems a box holding a small gold coin. He takes it to Morningstar for identification, but you know the Marlowe bad luck! Morningstar, too, has been killed. Shot with a pearl handled revolver just like one Merle had in her desk.

Marlowe thinks Merle is too pretty to be a murderess, but he admits she may be a little bit crazy. Then the story of Murdock's fall from a high window seven years before comes out. And with it the blackmail which provides a motive for murder.—20th-Fox.

DISHONORED LADY

If you're a beautiful woman with a fascinating job, plenty of money and dozens of men in love with you, what you need, it seems, is a psychiatrist. Anyway, that's the way it works with Madeline Damien (Hedy Lamarr), who has everything except emotional security. She is so bored with life that she tries to kill herself.

Madeline is editor of a chic and sophisticated magazine which she runs with the help of Garet (William Lundigan), who likes her but has no illusions about her. One night he introduces Madeline to a diamond merchant named Courtland (John Loder), and she adds him to her collection of lovers. He doesn't make her any happier than the others have, so she finally goes to see a psychiatrist, Dr. Caleb (Morris Carnovsky).

He tells her the only solution is to assume, temporarily at least, a new identity. As a different person, she will not be bound by her past and her interests will be different. Madeline begins a new life. She takes a vacation from the magazine, without telling anyone where she's going. She rents a furnished room in an unfashionable neighborhood. There she meets a young man who is doing scientific Dishonored Lady: Hedy Lamarr is bored with life —until she meets attractive Dennis O'Keefe.

Don't turn it out, Honey— you'll be back by ten!

SURELY A BUNDLE of charm like you couldn't miss out tonight. Yet just when the fun's getting started, the dance will be over for you.

It's so easy for even the prettiest girl to miss, when she fails to keep her charm safe from underarm odor.

She should remember—a bath washes away past perspiration, but to guard against risk of future underarm odor—Mum's the popular word.

Mum

Product of Bristol-Myers

better because it's Safe

1. Safe for skin. No irritating crystals. Snow-white Mum is gentle, harmless to skin.
2. Safe for clothes. No harsh ingredients in Mum to rot or discolor fine fabrics.
3. Safe for charm. Mum gives sure protection against underarm odor all day or evening.

Mum is economical, too. Doesn't dry out in the jar—stays smooth and creamy. Quick, easy to use—even after you're dressed.

• • •

For Sanitary Napkins—Mum is gentle, safe, dependable . . . ideal for this use, too.

The Angel and the Badman: Gail Russell, a well-brought-up Quaker girl, loves "badman" John Wayne, who seeks vengeance for his father's death. Irene Rich plays Gail's mother.

research. His name is David Cousins (Dennis O'Keefe) and he is completely different from the other men she has known. He's serious-minded; he works hard, and to him Morocco is a place in North Africa, not a spot where you go and drink champagne. For the first time, Madeline really falls in love. When David asks her to marry him, she is perfectly happy.

However, the past has an unpleasant habit of catching up with you when you least expect it. David goes away to a science conference, and Madeline meets Garet by accident. He is now working for Courtland, who has been trying to trace Madeline. Garet has stolen money from his new employer and this leads indirectly to Madeline's trial for murder.

Dishonored Lady is reminiscent in spots of Michael Arlen's classic of the Twenties, "The Green Hat," but it's good entertainment.—U.A.

THE ANGEL AND THE BADMAN

Maybe angel is a slight exaggeration, and certainly "badman" is. Even when Quint Evans (John Wayne) is holding up trains, it's with the very best intentions and a pure heart. You see, a guy named Laredo Stevens (Bruce Cabot) killed Quint's father, and all the trouble Quint has gotten into since has been because he's trying to avenge that death.

One of his less successful sorties against the Laredo gang lands him, wounded and delirious, at a ranch owned by Thomas Worth. Worth is a Quaker who doesn't like violence, but that doesn't mean he would turn a wounded man from his door. He takes Quint in, and has his daughter, Prudence (Gail Russell) nurse him. That's fine except that Prudence immediately falls in love with Quint, and naturally he isn't just the type her family would have chosen for her. Furthermore, Quint is not a marrying man—at least he never has been.

Yet where Prudence is concerned, he begins to feel differently. Maybe it wouldn't be so bad to settle down and be a farmer, instead of chasing around the country trying to catch up with Laredo. "When you find yourself thinking along those lines, brother, it's time you got out," Quint decides and, wound or no wound, he gets on his horse and rides off. That night he and a couple of pals hold up some of Laredo's tame gamblers, and come out of it with lots of shiny gold dollars. Only Quint doesn't get any satisfaction out of it this time, and next morning he finds himself riding up to the door of the Worth ranch again. He tells himself that it's because Mother Worth makes the best buckwheat cakes in the county, but he and Prudence both know it isn't anything of the kind.

Laredo continues his career of depredation and murder, and the Marshal of the Territory (Harry Carey) comes around to ask Quint some questions. What with one thing and another, he is forced to use his gun for one last time!—Rep.

TIME OUT OF MIND

"A Bicycle Built For Two" isn't the kind of thing a pianist-composer usually plays for his debut in Symphony Hall. This pianist, however, is drunk. Not falling-down drunk, just "high" enough so the elaborate arrangements his rich and patronizing wife has made for the concert seem suddenly ridiculous. Chris Fortune (Robert Hutton) knows he used to be a good composer. Maybe even a great one. And what is he now? A musical gigolo who plays pretty tunes for his wife's friends. So—he gets drunk.

Things might have been different if Chris' father, Captain Fortune (Leo G. Carroll) hadn't insisted that Chris go into the shipping business with him instead of becoming a musician. Chris and his sister, Rissa (Ella Raines) and their best friend, Kate (Phyllis Calvert), the housekeeper's daughter, are sure Captain Fortune is wrong. So sure, that Kate borrows money from a local fish dealer in the New England town where they live, and with it Chris and Rissa go to Paris where he can study.

But Kate's investment turns out to have been a bad one. Chris marries fashionable, haughty Dora Drake (Helena Carter) while he's there. He gives up the crashing, rugged New England rhythms he used to compose, and becomes lionized as a strictly drawing-room imitator of Debussy. There is no feeling left in his music—or in him.

He and Dora, and Rissa, who goes everywhere that Chris goes, come back to the United States, but not to New England. They live in New York, where Dora arranges the concert at Symphony Hall. But that night Chris realizes how futile the whole proceeding is. Even if Dora's rich father succeeds in buying a favorable notice from a critic or two, it won't mean a thing. So, half-sick, desperate and bewildered by what these few years have done to him, Chris gets drunk.

This finishes his marriage. Dora feels he has disgraced her, and Chris knows by now that he needs someone quite different from Dora. Someone who will believe in the essential things of life, and who will make him believe in them. Someone like Kate.—Univ.

ESCAPE ME NEVER

There is a double love story in Escape Me Never, and four lives are tangled in a web of heartbreak that for a while seems too strong to break. Sebastian Dubrok (Errol Flynn) and his brother, Caryl (Gig Young) live in Vienna in 1900. They are as different as brothers can be. They've both inherited their father's talent for music, but Sebastian is irresponsible, charming, selfish—and a genius. Caryl is only a mediocre musician, but he is dependable, and head over heels in love with Fenella McLean (Eleanor Parker), a pretty English girl.

Sebastian is in love with no one but himself. However, he shares his shabby flat with Gemma (Ida Lupino) and the baby. Gemma was starving on the street when he found her. She idolizes him and waits on him and thinks he's the most wonderful man in the world, with which he is in complete agreement.

Fenella's proper English family hear that the young musician, Dubrok, is living in sin, and jump to the conclusion that it's Caryl, since they don't know he has a brother. They cart Fenella off to Switzerland to forget her love affair. Caryl, disconsolate, tells Sebastian what has happened. Sebastian roars with laughter. "I'll get you a reputation in spite of yourself," he says gleefully. But when he sees how unhappy Caryl is, he makes a typically impulsive resolve. They will all follow the McLean family and straighten things out.

Unfortunately, Sebastian meets Fenella without knowing who she is, and she falls in love with him. When he discovers her identity, he does his best to make things right for his brother. But by now Fenella is too dazzled to think of Caryl. Sebastian and Gemma go back to London and are married there, yet even then Fenella can't recover from her infatuation. Sebastian, working far too hard on his ballet, quarrels with Gemma and is easily persuaded to go away for a weekend with Fenella. Only the ensuing tragedy brings him to his senses.—War.

Escape Me Never: Ida Lupino, Gig Young and Errol Flynn are involved in a tragic love story.

What do you mean... Happy Birthday?

Goodness me — these are regular desserts at our house but every time Mom makes 'em I feel just like bringing her orchids! She deserves 'em.

Chocolate sauce made with KARO* Syrup is wonderful — and the KARO Cake Frosting is tops. Mom makes 'em both in a jiffy.

By the way — if you want a swell recipe for the Spice Cake itself — and for the best Ice Cream ever made — just drop me a post card c/o Corn Products Refining Company, Dept. A, 17 Battery Place, New York 4, N. Y.

— the KARO Kid

SEA FOAM FROSTING

2 egg whites
1 cup KARO Syrup, Blue Label
⅛ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon vanilla

Combine egg whites, KARO Syrup and salt in top of double boiler. Place over rapidly boiling water and cook, beating constantly with rotary beater for 7 minutes or until frosting stands in peaks. Remove from heat. Add flavoring, beating well. Makes enough to cover top and sides of two 8-inch layers or top and sides of 14 large cup cakes.

CHOCOLATE SAUCE

Add 2 squares melted unsweetened chocolate to 1 cup KARO Syrup, Red or Blue Label. Stir until well blended. Add ¼ teaspoon vanilla. Makes 1 cup sauce.

BUTTERSCOTCH SAUCE

Measure ⅓ cup brown sugar, tightly packed, ¾ cup KARO Syrup, Red or Blue Label, 1 tablespoon butter and 1 tablespoon water into saucepan. Bring to a boil and boil 1 minute. Remove from heat. Sauce will be thin until cold. Serve cold over ice cream or pudding. Top with toasted almonds, if desired.

* KARO is a registered trade-mark of Corn Products Refining Company, New York, N. Y. © C. P. R. Co., 1947

Lucky the Girl whose Easter Gift is

Jewelite by PRO-PHY-LAC-TIC

BRUSHES, COMBS, AND COMPLETE DRESSER SETS STYLED IN THE LOVELIEST OF PLASTICS

Jewelite Combs and other lovely Pro-phy-lac-tic Plastic Combs are available in a wide variety of styles for men and women.

Better drop a hint today that you'll want Jewelite this Easter. Its sparkling crystal and joyous colors are a shining promise of lovelier, healthier hair for you. Jewelite Brushes, made by the makers of the famous Pro-phy-lac-tic Tooth Brush, have bristles of long, resilient Prolon that reach right down to your scalp to provide beneficial stimulation, while burnishing each strand of hair to bring out all its natural beauty. Jewelite is sold at good brush departments. Be sure it's genuine Jewelite, a product of Pro-phy-lac-tic, America's foremost maker of fine brushes. Look for the name Jewelite on the box. PRO-PHY-LAC-TIC BRUSH CO., Florence, Mass.

The new Jewelite "Invigorator" provides extra bristle surface (a complete half-circle of bristles) in a brush of unique grace and beauty. And it's easy to clean. Jewelite Brushes are available in delicate shades of ruby or sapphire, or in diamond-clear crystal.

JEWELITE BY PRO-PHY-LAC-TIC

by bosley crowther, celebrated motion picture critic, n. y. times

those academy awards!

■ No matter what else happens on the night the Academy awards are made, you can count on that Hollywood shindig to grab a top spot in the news. For, on that big night, the American public—or a sizeable proportion of it—tunes in on the Hollywood function as though the fate of the nation were at stake.

Your editors feel—and I don't wonder—that these awards are of sufficient import to keynote this issue of MODERN SCREEN. I agree with them—although I don't feel that the possibility of winning an "Oscar" should be the only incentive to the making of good films. However, there is no question that the Academy has exercised a subtly refining influence on the quality of American pictures. And its decisions certainly deserve the thoughtful attention of critics like myself—and naturally a place of honor in MODERN SCREEN.

Unaccustomed as I am to public speaking on the subject of Academy awards—that being a field of selection from which professional critics are adamantly barred—I welcome this opportunity to tell the readers of MODERN SCREEN whom I would pick for "Oscars" as the best performers of 1946. And I do this with full recognition that my friends and I of the New York critics' group have already tossed our parchment laurels onto the brows of a couple of British stars. As a group, we selected Laurence Olivier as the year's best actor for his glowing Henry V and we picked Celia Johnson for her fine style in Brief Encounter. But, of that, more later.

There still isn't any question in my mind, regardless of the above, that the year's best (Continued on page 128)

Jane's emergence as a dramatic star so impressed Jack Warner, he paid $50,000 for screen rights to Johnny Belinda—a script that answers an actress' dreams.

JANE CRIED AFTER THE PREVIEW—AND THEY ALL KNEW WHY. EACH HAD LEFT A PIECE OF HIS HEART WITH THE YEARLING

Ronnie, making his return pic, Stallion Road, polishes his riding boots, while Jane studies up for Cheyenne. They'll play man and wife (in Out of the Frying Pan) for the first time since their marriage.

"I GIVE YOU JANE WYMAN"

by gregory peck

■ I've guessed wrong about Jane Wyman twice in my life—but you can bet it won't happen again.

The first time was in New York, about five years ago. A friend of mine called one evening. "Jane Wyman's in town from Hollywood," he said, "and we're all stepping out tonight. How about you and Greta coming along?"

Greta and I were newlyweds. I'd just closed a flop play; I was out of a job. I wore a chip on my shoulder about movie stars in the money; they gave me the pip. In my mind I had a definite picture. I figured we'd spend the evening at El Morocco talking about Wyman, her contract, Hollywood. I couldn't have cared less.

But this fellow was a friend of mine. "Delighted," I lied.

Well, I got a slight surprise. Jane wasn't dressed (Continued on page 102)

"why gene's divorcing my brother"

by cholly knickerbocker

■ I think most of us generally take any "hot news" breaks from Hollywood with a raised-eyebrow, tongue-in-cheek attitude. Press agents for the fantastic filmfolk are constantly outdoing one another in bizarre attempts to get their clients on the front page.

That is why I first shrugged off reports that Gene Tierney and my brother, Oleg, were getting a divorce. I shrugged, that is, until this particular "rumor" became a bit too persistent. Then I cornered Gene at the Stork Club—during one of her junkets to the East—and decided to crack the case once and for all.

While dancing with Gene, I asked her: "What's all this nonsense about you and Oleg? Is it true that you're going to divorce him? Or are the press agents cutting capers again?"

IT WASN'T "JUST ONE OF THOSE THINGS." THERE WERE REAL REASONS FOR THE TIERNEY-CASSINI PARTING— AND HERE THEY ARE.

Gene Tierney, seen here at a Waldorf-Astoria cocktail party in New York, is one of Hollywood's most "painted" ladies. Artist John Vogel will do her portrait next—for her newest film—The Ghost and Mrs. Muir.

With Gene's divorce suit already filed, hopes of a reconciliation have faded—although both plan joint Eastern trips this month. Gene has asked the courts for custody of three-year-old daughter Daria.

"This one is no stunt," she said. "We are getting a divorce."

Gene wasn't kidding, and I knew it. To say that I was surprised is a fair example of an understatement. After all, I had just spent a month on the Coast as guest in their (Oleg's and Gene's) house, and I can honestly say that I saw nothing amiss in their homelife. Maybe a squabble or two (who knows a married couple that doesn't have them?), but nothing bordering on murder, mayhem or divorce.

But from Gene, herself, I found that the rumor was not a rumor. After nearly six years of what many had termed the "perfect marriage," the Cassinis were now going their merry way—in opposite directions. Up to the time I had spoken to Gene I labeled any talk of a divorce as fantastic. No doubt they were the ideal pair. In Hollywood—where most people expect marriage to be a flop—Gene and Oleg were held up as the happy couple. They were well liked. They were dined and wined frequently by members of the filmland colony. In short, everything clicked smoothly.

What happened? Somewhere, something had gone haywire. And, as usual, the public was misled by stories of the sensational variety. There was nothing "sensational" about it, and there was no lurking villain who came between them.

Recall the rumors:

"Gene Tierney is in love with (Continued on page 114)

EASTER DREAM

IN THE SPRING, A YOUNG GIRL'S FANCY TURNS TO DREAMS—OF CLOTHES. AND ESTHER WILLIAMS DREAMED IN TECHNICOLOR . . .

■ Girls are funny about Easter. The first couple of Easters a girl can remember, she's mainly interested in pushing a chocolate rabbit around the rug with her nose. And saving dirty jelly beans.

But from the minute a girl's mother pulls a girl's howling head out of the chocolate, and ties a ribbon on it (the head, not the chocolate) the girl is cooked. Done. Finished. She gets a load of herself in the mirror, and suddenly she wants to be in pictures.

After that, you've just got to have a new Easter outfit every year. It's part of your debt to society. And for weeks before, you dream. You dream about walking into the fanciest store in the biggest city in the United States. The salesgirl calls you Modom, and fits you out in the prettiest things in the place—all delicately fashioned from old rose petals and the palest stardust, all hideously expensive.

But somehow nobody ever mentions money. And somehow the whole thing never happens, and you go out and buy a cute navy-blue dress which is practical, and maybe you splurge a little on a hat. Maybe the hat has a giddy, (Continued on page 113)

Like all women, Esther Williams had trouble deciding which hat she wanted—even with the assistance of Mr. Wally. He's one of the partners who runs John Frederics, an exclusive millinery store. Esther was charmed with the story of one customer who broke her leg, then sent for a dozen hats—for her morale!

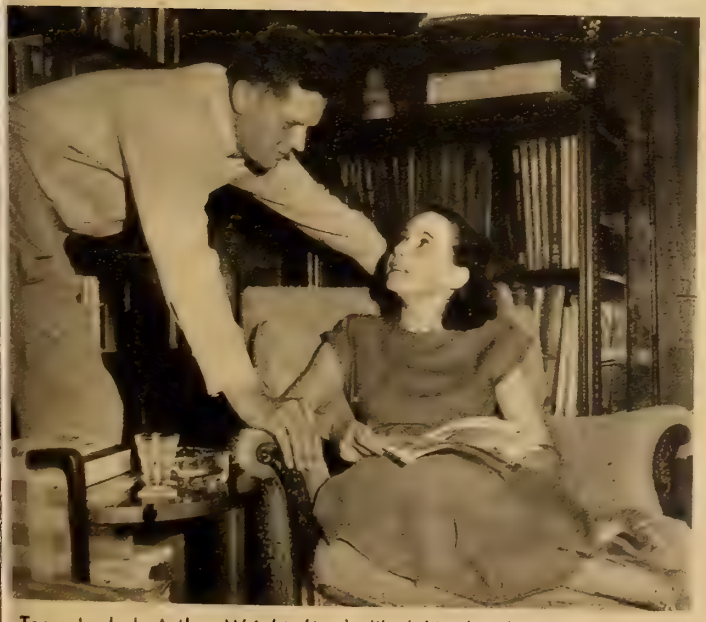
It's all well and good for Esther to pose in gay prints like this, but Mr. Donn, famous Hollywood designer, advises girls on small budgets to plan carefully, choosing one-color costumes with lots of gay accessories.

Mr. Donn congratulated Esther on her new picture, the technicolored Fiesta. So Esther retorted that it wasn't any more colorful than Mr. D.'s dazzling black and red jacket!

there was always dad

HE WAS ALWAYS THERE, TERESA WRIGHT'S DAD, SOMETIMES FOR TRIUMPHS, SOMETIMES FOR TEARS—BUT ALWAYS WITH LOVE.

By Abigail Putnam



Teresa's dad, Arthur Wright (top), liked his daughter's role in Pursued, an original story written for her by husband Niven Busch (below). But he really plays proud father about The Best Years Of Our Lives.

■ There was a certain monotony about the letters Teresa used to write to her father from school. Incidentally, she was Muriel in those days, and still is to her dad and husband. Muriel Teresa, she was christened, and had to drop the first name on joining Equity because of another Muriel Wright already registered.

To get back to the monotonous letters, they'd go something like this: "Dear Daddy, how are you, I'm fine, we went swimming today, I'm having a wonderful time. Your loving daughter, Muriel—"

Once she made a mistake and wrote, "Your lovely daughter, Muriel—" He smiled over it, but felt secretly that she hadn't made a mistake at all. Any revision of opinion since then has been upward. Arthur Wright comes of Dutch and British ancestry, so he doesn't (Continued on page 123)

Shirley Temple and John Agar believe in working out their future carefully, instead of just drifting. For example, Shirley has great hopes for Jack as an actor; would like him as a co-star. Jack isn't so sure.

Shirley Temple doesn't know how it got started-- that myth about the first year being the hardest. It's so silly-- when you're married to John...

Despite Jack's quips to the contrary, Shirl is a good cook. At her recent dinner party for both their families, she prepared food for 14! Main dish was Agar Ham—easy to make. Nobody got sick, either.

With Honeymoon and Bachelor and the Bobbysoxer completed, Mrs. A. deserved a vacation, so she and John went off to Palm Springs for plenty of sunshine, outdoor lounging, and a quiet first-anniversary celebration.

by Ida Zeitlin

THE FIRST YEAR IS THE EASIEST

■ "Golly," said Shirley, "if the first year's supposed to be the hardest, think how easy the rest of our years are going to be—"

The young Agars sat watching the flames of their own hearthfire, Jack in his big chair, Shirley on the floor, using his legs as a backrest. They'd been married several months over a year, but for part of that time Jack had still been in the service. This was a special kind of anniversary—the completion of their first year together under one roof.

"Maybe they're all wrong," Shirley persisted. "Maybe the first year's always the easiest—"

Marriage experts agree that marriage crashes most often against one of three rocks: Money. In-laws. Incompatibility.

The Agars have no money problem in the usual sense. But before their marriage, Jack made one point clear. "If you want to go on working, that's your own business. But we live on my dough. Your three squares a day are my business."

"Two," Shirley said. "I don't eat breakfast."

"Fine. That means I (Continued on page 96)

6 to 5 on Jones!

AS WE GO TO PRESS, THE SMART MONEY'S ON JENNIFER JONES—TO WIN THE HOTTEST "OSCAR" DERBY HOLLYWOOD'S EVER SEEN!

by FLORABEL MUIR
Special Correspondent, N. Y. Daily News

■ This year, for the first time, big-time gamblers east and west made book on the Oscar Derby. Olivia de Havilland moved into top place when prices were first quoted in Hollywood. She was 3 to 1. Then David O. Selznick put on his arc-lighted, illuminated-balloon press preview of Duel in the Sun at the Egyptian Theater and, lo and behold, the next odds sheet showed that a new and sharp young filly named Jennifer Jones had moved up into first position at the prohibitive price of 6 to 5.

A couple of nights later Selznick dropped over to my table at the Chantecleer Restaurant on the Strip where he and Jennifer had been dining with Anita Colby, Skitch Henderson, and the Louis Jourdans.

"That hot copy of yours is getting hotter by the minute," I said to him. "I mean Jennifer. Not only does she sizzle the screen in your picture but she is a feedbox tip to take down her second award. I want to interview her."

The minute Jennifer walked into the private dining room at the Selznick studio for afternoon tea and talk, I got the same kind of hunch that must have stirred up the odds-layers. Around the Selznick stable they call her Jonesy.

But she might have been mistaken for a young society debutante just turned loose on Park Avenue from Miss Spence's school and a postgraduate training at Mme. Balsan's in Paris. Her costume was one of simple (Continued on page 92)

Despite objections of some civic groups, Jennifer and David Selznick are confident that the public will vindicate their faith in Duel In The Sun. Poor Jenny's still living at the beach—uh-huh, housing shortage.

Jennifer hasn't forgotten the veterans, is a regular visitor at Birmingham Hospital. Incidentally, she's the only star to appear in N. Y.'s Metropolitan Museum of Art—as Bernadette in Norman Rockwell's portrait.

Anne goes for Beethoven, John's a jazz fan. She likes to ride, he prefers golf. But in art—ah—they're both mad for young artist Scott Benton, whose "Clown" was a gift from him to her.

ANNE BAXTER SCOFFED AT DREAMS OF A PERFECT MAN—AND THEN SHE MARRIED JOHN HODIAK. NOT THAT HE'S PERFECT. HE JUST DOESN'T HAVE ANY FAULTS

John was a happy man when he finished Desert Fury and Arnelo Affair, and took his wife East for the first time. Before leaving, he set up a fund to provide sports centers for kids in his home town.

Granddaughter of architect Frank Lloyd Wright, Anne (who's next is Blaze of Noon) has a natural interest in home-building. So has John, who likes his landlady (Anne), but would rather not "rent."

the man I married

by anne baxter

■ I have little patience with the time-honored theory that a girl really never knows a man until after they are married.

I don't wish to appear old-fashioned or smug, but the John and Anne of my story knew each other well before their marriage, and built a foundation of friendship along with romance. From the time Hume Cronyn first introduced us, through our brief hello at Alfred Hitchcock's Easter party, to the time of our marriage, two full years and more passed by.

There were several times, shortly after our friendship had blossomed into romance, that we thought of marrying at once, but we decided, at all costs, to be deliberate. This meant that we had to suffer the reading of occasional stories that we had quarreled and called the whole thing off. John and I just laughed. We could afford to, because after all, what was more important: our marriage, or the gossip columns? And besides, nobody really knew what our intentions were.

John Hodiak is the most intriguing man I know.

However, when I try to explain WHY John is my most interesting exhibit in the species male, I'm a little nervous. Perhaps I shouldn't (Continued on page 80)

At four, Halifax's "Sonny" Stevens was a redhead, with a temper that matched.

MARK STEVENS

LIFE STORY

■ As Mark Stevens' bus rumbled across the frozen Canada-U. S. border, headed South, he knew he was going to America for good—and to make good—or else.

His first invasion had been a flop—true enough—but he was seventeen then and he'd tackled New York, the biggest, stoniest city in the world.

This trip Mark was nineteen, and he was headed for a smaller city, Akron, Ohio.

He sat bundled up in his long overcoat, staring through the frosted pane at the snow-packed highway.

Akron was where Marge Shipple lived. The thrilling days of their summer romance at Round Lake in Quebec buzzed up inside his brain. Marge was the first and only girl so far who had penetrated his cautious, touchy heart.

He wanted to see Marge now. He was only a few miles away.

The bus rolled on. He climbed down, finally, at Akron and called the Shipples.

"Mark Stevens! Well—of all people. I'll run right down and pick you up!"

"Oh, no—" protested Mark's pride.

Marge laughed as she hung up. "You certainly haven't changed a bit!"

Mark remembers the Shipples as one of the kindest, nicest families he's ever known. They laughed him out of his stand-offishness, took him into their home, told him to stay as long as he liked. For the first time in his life Mark ran around with youths his own age, tasted—and liked—good clean teen-age fun and companionship. He went to nice parties, (Continued on page 105)

"Wake up, Steve," insists wife Annelle. (He probably wouldn't answer if she called him Mark.) "Aw, Buster," protests Mark. But it's no use; he's got retakes on I Wonder Who's Kissing Her Now.

Like his old man, Mark Richard Stevens, Jr. is a fighter; see those fists? His Grandma brought him a silver cup given to her sea-captain dad by the King of Denmark for the daring rescue of a ship.

Mr. and Mrs. James Cooke, Mark's mother and stepfather, live in Montreal, but came down to see their first grandchild, admit frankly he's "wonderful."

The kitchen in their new house is an alcove off the living room, and the Stevenses do their own cooking—excelling, says Mark, in well-done toast. Dishwashing, when guests are invited, always turns into a riotous community affair.

HE DIDN'T HAVE A PENNY IN HIS POCKET, BUT WHEN IT CAME TO PRIDE, HE'D CORNERED THE MARKET! • (PART II)

By Kirtley Baskette

club caulfield

JOAN'S SISTER BETTY PROVES THAT SISTERS ARE THE SAME THE WORLD OVER, SWIPING EACH OTHER'S SWEATERS, PEARLS—AND MEN!

by betty caulfield

■ Daddy and I were walking home from seeing Blue Skies, grins on our faces two feet long. "Isn't it incredible?" I said. "Joan Caulfield—your very own child in Technicolor!"

"Not exactly incredible," Daddy said smugly. He's gotten very smug over her. Sort of "Well, what did they expect of Henry Caulfield's daughter-" ish. "Quite a sister, eh Betty?" he went on heartily. It is to laugh, really. I knew all along that Joan was wonderful stuff, but they had to show Daddy.

Come to think of it, there was nothing in Joan's past to indicate that she'd one day be a movie star. Whoever heard of a movie star being born in Orange, N. J., and drinking sodas with hordes of unsmooth characters at (Continued on page 86)

When Joan and John Lund were young N. Y. actors, he made a wager she'd win movie stardom first. She lost, and cheerfully paid her debt by playing his guide at Farmers' Market.

Enjoying an afternoon off from her new picture, Welcome Stranger, Joan has a cup of tea with Mrs. Caulfield, who's very particular about the blend. Afterwards, Joan will read, mend, or catch up on household chores.

by ed sullivan

INGRID'S JUST AS BEAUTIFUL INSIDE AS SHE IS OUTSIDE— A WOMAN OF PASSIONATE CONVICTIONS, WITH THE SHINING COURAGE TO LIVE UP TO THEM.

she walks in beauty...

■ For thirty uneasy minutes, Ingrid Bergman had been interviewed by the drama critics, the movie critics and the reporters from the morning and afternoon staffs of Washington, D. C., newspapers.

"Uneasy" is at best a partial characterization of the tautness and tension that electrified the room. It was a fencing exhibition, with the blades never quite completing their forward plunge to the heart of the subject.

"For half an hour," suddenly said Ingrid Bergman, "I have been hoping that one of you would ask me the only important question. Nobody has asked it, so I shall ask the question and answer it myself."

The newspapermen looked at each other.

"Miss Bergman," said Ingrid, "what is your reaction to the knowledge that Negroes will not be permitted to see your performance of Joan of Lorraine at Lisner Auditorium?"

If Ingrid Bergman suddenly had whipped out a king size atom bomb and tossed it deftly at the head of an afternoon reviewer, the sensation could not have been more violent. These Washington newspaper veterans had met other Hollywood stars, and had engaged them in discussion of such innocuous things as California climate, realism in Art, or the (Continued on page 121)

After completing Arch of Triumph, Ingrid flew to N. Y. to star in B'way play, Joan of Lorraine. On opening night, author Maxwell Anderson gave her Joan of Arc statuette.

SAINT OR SINNER?

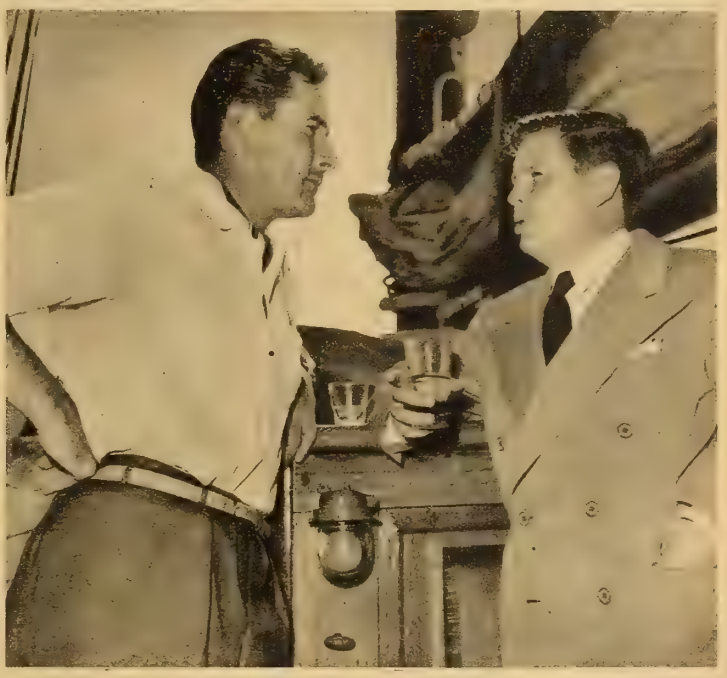
MAYBE SOME DAY HE'LL WANDER OFF AND NEVER COME BACK. . . . ONLY WHEREVER HE GOES, ERROL FLYNN TAKES WITH HIM NORA'S UNDERSTANDING, UNDEMANDING HEART.

By Carl Schroeder

On board the "Zacca" for first postwar marine expedition: Errol and Nora Flynn, artist John Decker, and Errol's father, scientist Thomas Flynn.

Before their yachting trip, Errol escorted Nora to the Brown Derby, laughed at Reno rumors. Nora went only as far as Acapulco, then came home to await her St. Valentine's Day gift: another baby!

Author meets author: Errol, who's working on a new novel, talks shop with Carl Schroeder. Errol (now in Escape Me Never) had to get rid of the talking mynah bird he had aboard his yacht; its language was too offensive!



When Nora Eddington Flynn arrived from Mexico with two-months-old Deirdre (who's now two years old!) reporters wondered why her husband didn't meet her. Was Errol ill with an attack of malaria?

■ A little man stood on a rain-swept street corner in New Orleans, hopelessly hailing taxicabs. To his surprise, one stopped. The door swung open. The wet little man gave an address on St. Charles Street and leaned back with a sigh of relief.

Abruptly, the sigh changed to a gasp. The taxicab, with a great grinding of gears, began to move backward. Then it stopped. It moved backward again.

"Please," the little man said, "we're going in the wrong direction."

"I know it," the driver said, not turning his head.

The cab stopped again, then slammed into high gear and roared away. Eccentric people, these cab drivers, the little man thought.

Nearing St. Charles Street, he leaned forward and said, "Turn right on St. Charles."

The cab driver nodded. At St. Charles Street he turned left. The little man rapped on the window.

"I said right!" he shouted.

The cab stopped.

Still with his eyes straight ahead the driver exclaimed, "Look, bub, I'm driving this cab. We can't both do it. If you (Continued on page 83)

Like his new picture, Dane's That Way With Women—only not with his wife, Margot Clark, who's "agreed to disagree" with Dane. Temperament's the trouble; both Clarks have plenty of ambition and spirit.

Break OF Hearts

THEY COULDN'T BREAK EACH OTHER'S WILLS, STUBBORN DANE AND STORMY MARGOT CLARK—BUT THEY ENDED UP BREAKING EACH OTHER'S HEARTS . . .

by Valerie Sloan
special reporter for MODERN SCREEN

■ Place two restless, dynamic, brilliant individuals together in a man and wife relationship and sooner or later something snaps or one of them bows to the superior will. Set them down in Hollywood, the walled city of the Kingdom of Make Believe, where realities often appear phony and nothing is on the level—except struggle—and true love finds its path rugged, indeed.

Dane Clark has bidden a sorrowful farewell to his talented wife Margot, a beautiful redhead of so many talents that she hasn't up to now been able to decide exactly which one to emphasize. Their break came as a shock to all except close friends who have known for months that it was inevitable.

Margot, a girl of high strung temperament, wilful, determined, ambitious—a dynamo of energy—has gone back to New York. In fact, she went back before Christmas, leaving Dane in the midst of his new starring picture at Warner's, Deep Valley. There have been some guarded whispers that tempestuous Ida Lupino, who co-stars with Dane in the film, may be the other woman in this drifting apart of a magnetic pair; but I can assert with positive emphasis that it is simply not true. There is no other woman; there's only a "thing."

The "thing" in Hollywood rifts is always intangible, imponderable, elusive—but there. I hurried all the way out to Calabasas, in the far end of the San Fernando Valley to get Dane's own story of the breakup of his marriage to Margot. I caught the overtones of sorrow (Continued on page 126)

"that's what I like about Tom"

by maurine cookson

IT WAS RAINING—THEY WERE HUNGRY—AND THEY HADN'T A QUARTER AMONG 'EM. "VIOLETS!" BEAMED TOM DRAKE. "THAT'S WHAT WE NEED!"

Peter Cookson and wife, Maurine (below, with Tom), have been Tom's best pals since hash days on Broadway. Even then, they tagged him for stardom!

■ I remember a scene Tom Drake played once that was good enough for an Academy Award. I didn't see it, but I certainly heard about it. In fact, the only audience Tom had was a nurse in the corridor of a New York maternity hospital.

She glided into my room every few minutes wearing a grin. "We'd better get that baby born, Mrs. Cookson," she laughed, "before your husband wears out the linoleum in the hall!" She said my husband was covering the floor with cigarette stubs like a snowstorm and heaving enough sighs to blow down the walls of Jericho.

It wasn't my husband, of course. My husband's name isn't Tom Drake; it's Peter Cookson, but he's one of Tom's best friends. Peter, who's an actor, too, was on the road with The Merry Widow then. He had to leave New York (Continued on page 98)

That phony beard is a prop for I'll Be Yours, with Deanna Durbin and Bill Bendix. Or does it herald Tom's debut as author of "The Sun Cries At Night"? Yet he does seem more interested in Beverly Tyler than the Sat. Review of Literature.

THE LOVE STORY OF GINGER ROGERS AND JACK BRIGGS? IT REMAINED A SWEET AND GUARDED SECRET UNTIL COLUMNIST ED CORNERED THE LOVERS AND MADE THEM TALK.

by Ed Sullivan

full confession

■ "Shall we tell him everything?" Ginger asked.

We were sitting at a late table in the Stork Club—Ginger, Jack Briggs, Eddie Rubin and I—at the witching hour, when people begin to mellow. Somehow the talk had drifted to love and how sound and sensible it is to say that truth is stranger than fiction—stranger even than movie scripts!

It all began with the flukiest meeting you can imagine. Ginger Rogers was winding up a long and exhausting War Bond tour, accompanied by her Man Friday, Eddie Rubin. "Only one more stop and then we can take a long rest, Eddie," said Ginger, as they headed for San Diego.

The Marine "brass" gave Ginger a typical Marine welcome when she got to the El Cortez Hotel. There were flowers and baskets of fruit and staff cars and all the trappings. "Pardon me, Ginger, I've got things to do," said Eddie Rubin, and he ducked out. One of the things he had reminded himself to do was to telephone ex-RKO stock company actor Jack Briggs, who was completing boot training at San Diego.

"I was called to the phone," remembered Jack, "and it was Eddie. 'Come on over to the hotel, Jack, and spend the afternoon with us,' he said, so I told him that we weren't in Hollywood, and that a buck Marine simply didn't walk off the base for the afternoon. So we talked a little more, and then we hung up and I went back to whatever it was I was (Continued on page 68)

"It's all in the way you flex your wrist," says Jack, who, when he isn't teaching Ginger to pilot a plane with a rubber-band, co-authors a pic for Barbara Stanwyck called Cattle Kate.

On vacation in the East, Ginger accompanied Jack to Quakerstown, N. Y., for his grandparents' 60th anniversary party. Ginny met her in-laws for the first time, stood up as god-mother for her new niece.

Both Jack and Ginger are fidgety sitters, but like to sketch—so they switch positions often. When they left for the East, $35,000 worth of Ginger's clothes went with them—including ermine trenchcoat.

Ginger and Jack paid a social call at 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue in Washington. She and Mr. Truman are both natives of Independence, Mo. And, as Dolly Madison in Magnificent Doll, she's practically a former resident!

The Briggs are excellent tennis players—but Ginger prefers fishing. You'll be her life-long friend if you inquire about the 28 lb. steelhead trout she caught in Oregon—that made the real fishermen turn green.

■ The first words I ever said to Jimmy Stewart were, "Why aren't you in pictures?" And guess what he answered—

"Me? How could they put this puss on the screen?"

Jimmy said that with such a self-deprecating snort that I couldn't help firing right back, "Why not? I've been looking at your face all afternoon," I said, "and do you know what I think? I think it's terrific!"

We were both at Katharine Cornell's New York home on Beekman Place that afternoon, reading parts for the play, Divided By Three which Kit's husband, Guthrie McClintic, was planning for Broadway. Nobody there, except Guthrie, had ever seen or heard of James Stewart before, least of all me. He was just a skinny young guy out of Princeton, trying his luck on Broadway. But everyone, including me, was plenty impressed with the way he read his part. Jimmy himself thought he was the luckiest lad alive when he walked out with the leading man job.

As I write this, that same skinny, awkward guy, older of course, (Continued on page 118)

"Best thing for the nerves—knitting," Jane Wyman advised Jimmy while making Magic Town. But he found her take-off on the Man of Distinction ads—which brings a wry grin from him—more relaxing.

Jimmy's current girlfriend, Ellen Ross (above) was a blind date that Jane Wyman arranged. Janie threw a party at Ciro's, and Jimmy swore he wouldn't attend unless she promised to provide a partner for him!

Lucky Brazil's got a lot of coffee, 'cause Jim drinks gallons of it on the set. No one "fetches" for him, either. He pours his own from the prop truck—and he'll likely bring one back for a busy juicer.

EVERYBODY LIKES JIMMY STEWART, THE SHY GUY WHO HAS A WAY WITH WOMEN —WHETHER THEY'RE FOUR OR FORTY.

by hedda hopper

Uncle Jimmy

■ Rex Harrison stepped off the Century in New York's Grand Central Station that morning and was immediately aware of a sense of excitement and a mood of anticipation. A seasoned traveler, he wondered at this; it did not occur to him that this was the first time he had ever arrived in New York from the lazy, sprawling, grove-filled escape of California and that what he felt was the impact of the greatest city on the earth.

But as he followed his porter up the ramps to the cab stand and rode out into the streets, he understood. He smelled the sharp, metallic air; he heard the ever-present voice of seven million people crowded, story-upon-story, onto a tiny island; and he caught the vitality, the danger, the harsh challenge that not even London could generate in peacetime.

And he knew suddenly that he was going to have a wonderful time. He would miss Lilli, of course, and Carey—but it did a man good, he reflected, to get away on his own once in awhile. I'll raise a little hell, he thought cheerfully, and tried to remember, from the time years before when he had done a play here, where he could most advantageously accomplish this mission.

As it turned out, he was not required to trust his memory. He spent the day avoiding phone calls from studio representatives and the press, then dropped into the Plaza's Oak Room just in time to see a British wing commander with whom he had served during the early days of the blitz in London. Commander Kip Madison had a friend with him, an (Continued on page 116)

Rex is torn between two countries, his native England, where he, Lilli and son Carey (right) lived through the blitz, and America, which he likes better every day.

manhattan nocturne

THE BRIGHT LIGHTS,

THE BIG TOWN'S MIDNIGHT

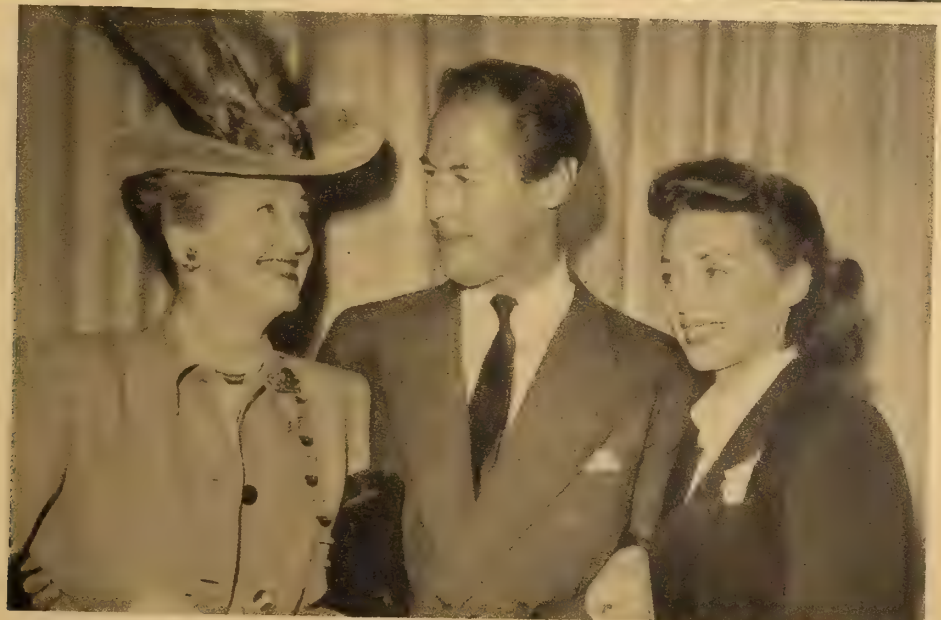
MAGIC—WHAT FUN

WERE THEY, REX HARRISON

WONDERED SADLY,

WITHOUT LILLI TO SHARE THEM?

by Howard Sharpe



Hedda Hopper had better watch out! Rex threatens to punch the nose of the next columnist who reports him separating from Lilli Palmer. While he finishes The Ghost and Mrs. Muir, she's working in Body and Soul—but they'll soon be teamed in former Lunt-Fontanne plays.

SHE'S DAINTY AND DEMURE, BUT DE HAVILLAND IS ALSO DETERMINED. AND IN A CLINCH, SHE'S GOT A MIGHTY WEAPON—A FISTFUL OF HIGH IDEALS!

by Hank Jeffries

fighting lady

■ Male members of the press in Hollywood are never going to be too fond of the man who married Olivia De Havilland. At one time or another, all of them have been sweet on her. There was probably never any hope for any of them. But at least she stayed single.

Then along came a fellow by the name of Marcus Aurelius Goodrich. It didn't take Olivia all of the two weeks of their courtship to make up her mind to say yes, which indicates that a man doesn't have to be nine feet tall or Clark Gable to win the prettiest girl in town.

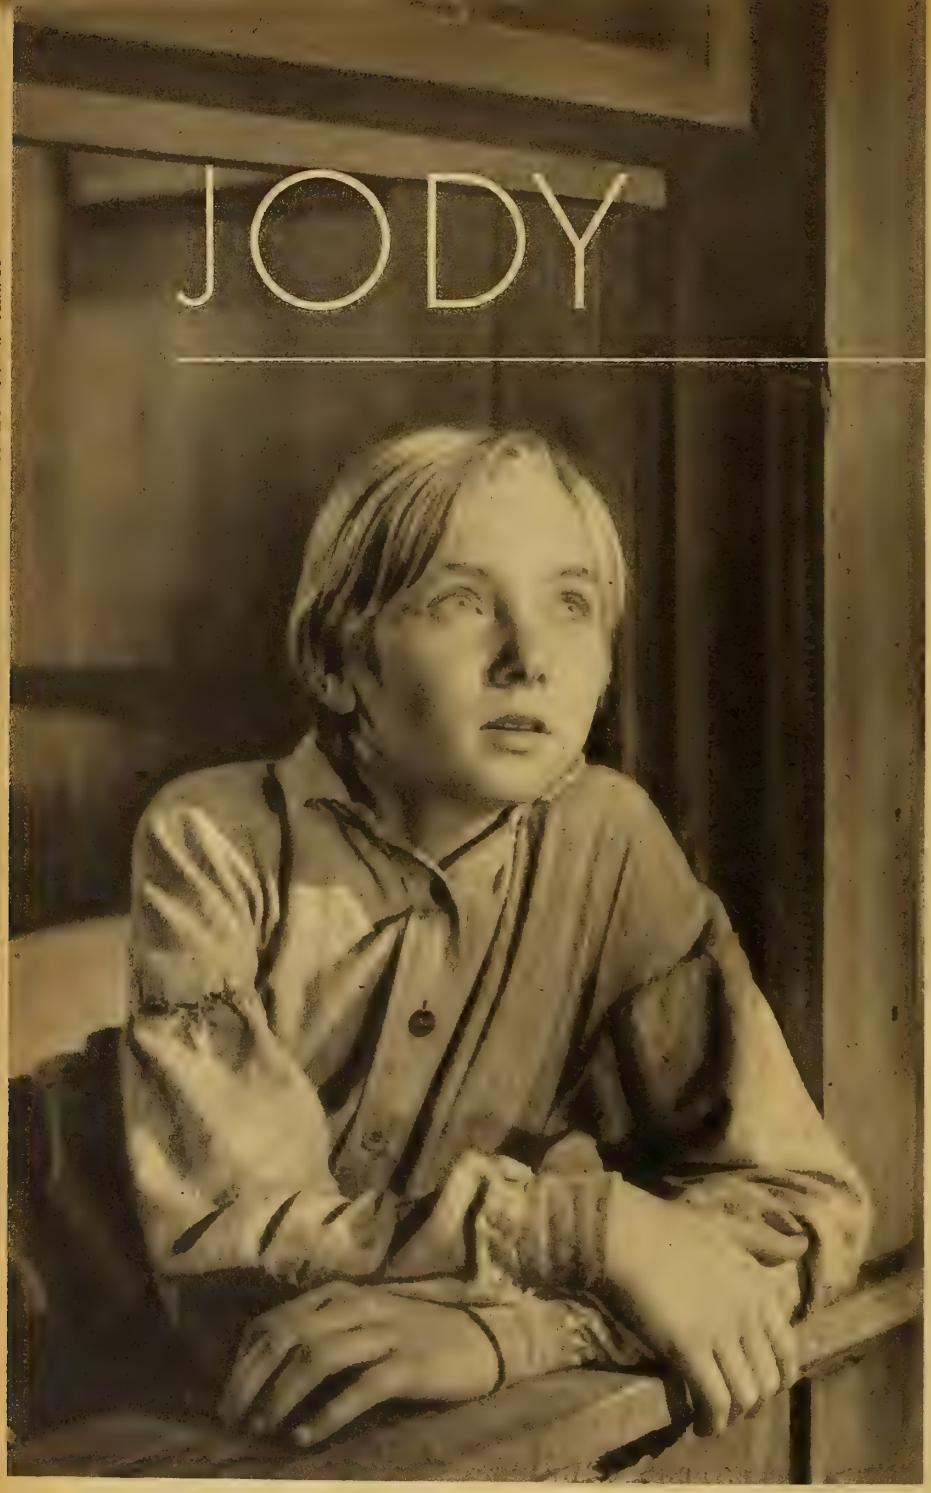
Not that Olivia's husband is a half-pint. He's an impressive five feet eleven and rugged enough beneath his tweeds to have acquitted himself well in two wars, finishing up the last one as Commander in the Navy, with considerable service in the Pacific to his credit.

For those girls in the audience who count each day in their teens lost unless it brings marriage or a successful career a swift (Continued on page 115)

Broadcasting The Dark Mirror with Lew Ayres was good practice for Olivia, who may do a B'way play this Fall. But her husband says maybe they'll holiday in Peru—for a year or so!

At the Stork Club, Olivia and Mark Goodrich (center) entertain England's Phyllis Calvert and husband Peter Hill (right). To Each His Own made Olivia an Oscar candidate!

JODY



Claude Jarman, Jr., of Nashville, Tenn., who will probably be known hereafter as Jody.

by clarence brown director,

m-g-m's "the yearling"

WHEN THE KID HEARD HOW THE DEER HAD DIED, HE BIT HARD—TO HOLD BACK THE TEARS. THAT'S HOW DIRECTOR BROWN KNEW HE'D FOUND THE REAL JODY—AT LAST!

■ By now, since I've bent the ear of everyone I could buttonhole about it, I suppose that everyone knows how I found Jody. It's one of my favorite stories, because—like everyone in Hollywood—I'm an amateur Columbus. I take great pride in having discovered this wonder kid in the wilds of a Nashville, Tennessee, fifth grade school room.

We at M-G-M had been through some rough experiences in trying to get Marjorie Kinnan Rawling's great book, "The Yearling," onto the screen. It had been bad enough to find a suitable locale, and to schedule shooting at the proper time of year, but finding exactly the right lad to play Jody was a headache—jet-propelled.

As you remember, it was ten minutes before three that afternoon in Nashville when my city schools' guide drove up in front of Jody's building and said, "It probably isn't worth stopping, because school will be dismissed in ten minutes."

I had fine-combed Memphis without success, and this school was my last stop in Nashville. My plans were to continue my search in Knoxville, my own home town. I hesitated a second or so, then told my guide that plenty of things could happen in ten minutes.

(Continued on page 70)

La Cross hands you a new idea!

Naylon, the new nail polish miracle!
Genius designed this bottle that won't tip, tilt or topple. And genius made this Steady Stroke Applicator too. It's easy to hold as a pencil, applies polish as simply as you sign your name. Naylon itself is a dream nail polish...dries faster, lasts longer, is flexible as a fingernail. You'll find the colors tantalizing...especially flaming, vibrant Congo Magic. Yes, La Cross puts polish perfection at your fingertips...60¢ plus fed. tax.

and in a word it's naylon by La Cross

SCHNEFEL BROS. CORPORATION • 630 FIFTH AVENUE • NEW YORK 20, N.Y.

NAYLON TRADE MARK REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.

Glamour Changes...3 New Reds for Your Lips

In a modern-design metal case $1.00

U. S. Patents No. 2157667 2211465

Clear Red Blue Red Rose Red

THREE SHADES FOR YOUR TYPE

Correct for your coloring... correct for your costume

BLONDES.....	CLEAR RED No. 1	BLUE RED No. 1	ROSE RED No. 1
BRUNETTES....	CLEAR RED No. 3	BLUE RED No. 3	ROSE RED No. 3
BROWNETTES..	CLEAR RED No. 2	BLUE RED No. 2	ROSE RED No. 2
REDHEADS	CLEAR RED No. 1	BLUE RED No. 1	ROSE RED No. 1

- ✶ New kind of lip make-up...oh! so s-m-o-o-t-h
- ✶ The color stays on until you take it off
- ✶ New original formula does not dry the lips

Hollywood's sensational new lipstick creates a new fashion in lip make-up...Now, three shades for each type, blonde, brunette, brownette, redhead...

Correct for every costume, to match your every mood. See Chart for shades recommended for your type. Then try this new Max Factor Hollywood Lipstick today for a thrilling new glamour change.

Color Harmony Make-Up...

"PAN-CAKE" • POWDER
ROUGE • LIPSTICK

Max Factor ✶ Hollywood

(Continued from page 10)

very well, showing no signs of jealousy.

Never in my life have I seen anything cuter than Claude making with the low bow from the waist, asking Mrs. Peck for dance after dance, at a little party not long ago.

The kid has just learned to rhumba and he must be devoting the best years of his twelve to it!

Mrs. Peck, who is small and petite, looks like a junior deb in the arms of her small, but persistent, partner.

* * *

The young fellow striding up and down the station platform was making short, impatient noises through his teeth as though he were whistling The Chief in from New York.

Maybe he was. It was Larry Parks waitin' for the train to come in bearing his bride of almost four years—and I say bride literally, because of that time they've been able to spend only a few months together—to Hollywood and a honeymoon, at last!

When the train chugged in, an hour late, there was staged a love scene more real than any Larry emoted in The Jolson Story and happier than any Betty Garrett sang or danced in Call Me Mister.

On the ride back to the little house Larry had rented in Nichols Canyon, he slipped a jeweler's box out of his pocket.

It was a diamond engagement ring.

"Honey," said Larry, "I couldn't afford one when we were married. Not even a diamond chip. But here's what you should have had when I asked you to marry me." And he slipped the four-karat sparkler on the right finger.

This is one marriage I'm betting on to last.

* * *

If it's true that "the course of true love never runs smoothly," then Joan Crawford and Greg Bautzer must be truly in love.

These two battle anywhere, any time. They quarrel in Hollywood and make up in New York. And kiss in the Catskills and feud again at Malibu.

They're both intensely proud and inclined to be jealous of each other. But they're in the old spot of not being able to be happy apart—or together.

* * *

I like Cornel Wilde better all the time. There was a time I could take him or leave him. Now he's winning me over completely.

Not long ago, I publicly pointed out some of Cornel's shortcomings as I saw them, calling particular attention to the fact that he seemed a little too serious and without much humor. I also thought he was raising too much thunder about his wife's career.

The other night at La Rue, he came over to my table and with nary a sulk in sight, said: "Thanks for the tip-off about some things you think are wrong with me. I've been thinking about what you said and I think the advice will help me. Sometimes the best thing that can happen to any of us is to see ourselves as others see us. It isn't always flattering—but I hope I never get to the point where I don't pay attention and try to help myself when I feel opinions are honest. Thanks for your interest."

And thank you, Cornel.

* * *

I'm groggy with the marriage and divorce stories that broke this month involving many of the biggest names in the movie colony.

Mickey Rooney and his wife came to a parting of the ways to swell the list of "surprises," although I, personally, had been expecting the break before this.

On several occasions I have talked to Mrs. Panky, Mickey's mother, and she made no attempt to hide the fact that she felt Betty Jane had been neglectful of her. "She never comes to see me," said Mrs. Panky, "and you know how very close Mickey and I are."

Several months before the birth of her second son, Mrs. Mick went back to Alabama to live with her mother. Mickey made a great to-do about planning to fly down there at the time the baby was born. But he never got around to it. In fact, the races at Santa Anita seemed to be claiming his time and attention.

MAY ISSUE

Sweetheart, sweetheart, sweetheart, that's the Maytime song. Our Queen of the May is everybody's sweetheart, Ingrid Bergman. She'll be smiling at you from the cover of our May issue —on the stands April 12.

PARTY POSTSCRIPTS

After the round of holiday parties, I thought, "Well, we'll settle down after this. Things will get back in the normal groove after all these festivities." That's what I THOUGHT!

I want to say right here and now that if millionaire-philanthropist Atwater Kent had paid cash on the line for the array of talent trotted out free at his "radio party," even his healthy pocketbook would have suffered it. But, because the affair was in honor of several visiting radio editors—radio row turned itself inside out for the best private show ever staged in this town.

Consider, if you will, this line-up: Jack Benny playing his violin as only he can't play it. ("Laugh if you will," sneered Jack, as the audience went into gales of laughter when he hit the blue notes, "I've made a fortune doing this."); Edgar Bergen with Charlie McCarthy on his knee; George Burns doing a soft shoe dance that would never make Gene Kelly jealous; Fibber McGee and Molly making with the wisecracks; Eddie Bracken doing his famous baseball rookie routine; Frances Langford and Ginny Simms obliging with an unrehearsed duet and Kay Kyser keeping the whole thing moving as master of ceremonies.

Apparently, everybody wanted to get into the act—and me, too. There I was all dressed up and done to the teeth and Art Linkletter of the "People Are Funny" show suddenly had me out in the spotlight doing the most absurd "orange" gag with Kay Kyser. If you want to completely break up one of your own parties, try this sometime:

The lady puts an average sized orange under her chin. The gentleman tries to get the same orange under his chin by simply nuzzling it into place—no hands are permitted. It's the silliest, craziest antic in the world but the results are hilarious.

My escort for the evening at the Kent party was Roy Rogers, making his debut in Hollywood society and Roy was THE celebrity of the evening to the other celebrities. He looked mighty handsome, pardner, in his tuxedo, which he had rented because he doesn't own one of his own. When I returned to our table after my stint, Roy said, "Louella, you shore surprised me." Surprised HIM? I'd practically knocked myself out.

Maria Montez and Jean Pierre Aumont were at our table. With them was the handsome French actor, Claude Dauphin. He's something of a French Spencer Tracy. Is that bad? Maria, with her hair high on her head, was wearing one of those gorgeous gowns she brought back from Paris—a pink Angora wool with long sleeves and a high collar. Her evening bag was a stunning thing made of alligator. Leave it to la Montez to be different. Later, the same week, Maria entertained for Dauphin and I'll tell you about that further on.

* * *

But there was still another party to be covered that same evening. Yes, the social affairs are getting so crowded that they're tossing them two at a time.

The famous international hostess, Cobina Wright, Sr., was giving one of her delightful affairs and so I grabbed onto Roy and off we went.

Judy Garland, looking like a fashion plate, was leaving just as we arrived but she was still receiving congratulations on the way she had sung "Little Girl Blue" for the guests. Her dress was pale green and with it she was wearing the loveliest coral earrings and necklace, a present from Vincente. Very sophisticated was our Judy, who was just a little girl such a short time ago. But as Mrs. Vincente Minnelli, she could pose for any fashion book.

Lana Turner had come alone—her heartbeat, Ty Power, being in Mexico making Captain from Castile, but, oh, did she look out of this world? She, too, had her hair up and wore a sleek black dress with gold filagree jewelry. Lana never looks the same twice. Sometimes (and this was certainly one of those times) I think she has wonderful taste.

"Are you really in love with Ty?" I asked.

"Oh, yes," she answered, turning those big, brown eyes on me. "This is the real thing." How many times have I heard Lana say that before, each time with the conviction of a girl who has finally met the man she's looking for. "I'm deeply in love with Tyrone and as soon as I finish my picture, I'm going to Mexico to be with him. He's so lonesome." Well, THAT I can understand.

Cobina's house is a divine place for a party. It's right next door, or should I say right next hill, to Pickfair, and has a view of the entire city of Los Angeles from its wide windows that almost seem to be glass walls.

A formal dinner had been served earlier in the evening but at midnight, supper was set up on buffet tables in the dining room—wonderful Mexican dishes. Somewhere in the background, someone was playing romantic music very softly until Skitch Henderson took over the keyboard.

Skitch was with Anita Colby, natch. I was surprised that he wasn't wearing a tie and a few minutes later I discovered why. Anita had taken it off him to wear around the neck of her stunning black fur coat—and believe it or not the effect was so smart it's sure to start a new fad.

At three o'clock in the morning, my cowboy friend, Roy Rogers, who had suddenly become the social hit of Hollywood, started down the hill.

"How did you like your first night in Hollywood society, Roy?" I asked him.

"It's shore wonderful," he said, "if you just don't come unfrayed!"

* * *

Every year Louis B. Mayer, boss of M-G-M, tosses a beeg party and when I say beeg, I mean BIG. Two hundred guests sat down to dinner and later danced at Louis' Beverly Hills house that is literally filled with the racing trophies won by Busher, Honeymoon, Be Faithful and others of his famous race horses.

Little June Allyson, cuter than a bug, in a white gown, danced almost every number with that man she loves, Dick Powell. He's lost so much weight his dinner jacket doesn't fit him at all and June said it looked like it had been made for Sydney Greenstreet. "I was never fat," Dick snubbed her. "Just pleasingly plump."

At the next table were Barbara Stanwyck and Robert Taylor—Barbara looking lovely in a decolleté gown, but admitting that she has made so many pictures in the past twelve months that she's practically out on her feet. She won't work so hard next year. Bob insists that she take time off to go to Europe with him.

The tables were set up way past the dining room out to the patio which had been covered with gay striped canvas. Through the open doors I spotted Claudette Colbert in the most unusual color green dress I have ever seen, but on her it looked good, Walter Pidgeon talking quietly with Cary Grant, much to the distress of several belles who would have liked to be talking to Walter Pidgeon and Cary Grant; Gail Patrick, looking like a dream walking—and Ann Sheridan, simply stunning in a gold gown.

* * *

Still another producer who gave with a terrific party was Hal Roach, and the occasion honored my favorite doctor, Dr. Harry Martin, Bebe Daniels and the host, himself, on their natal day.

Hal's beautiful colonial house in Beverly Hills had practically been turned into a smart nightclub—the whole idea being Mrs. Roach's. A full orchestra played for the dancers until the wee small hours and over one hundred and fifty people sat down to dinner.

The Gregory Pecks seldom attend big Hollywood parties, but they were among the first to arrive at Hal's.

Mrs. Peck is such a cute little thing and I have noticed that she dresses in a very distinctive style. She wears high neck dresses for evening, usually with long sleeves. Here she had on a black bouffant model with a tiny ruffle of white around the neck. With her close-cropped blonde hair she looked like a grown-up doll. And maybe you think her good-looking husband wasn't proud of the admiring glances coming her way.

Dorothy Lamour and Bill Howard told me that their son, Ridge, had just celebrated his first birthday and that he was on his way to becoming the best dressed man in town. "Best diapered," whispered Bill. But it's true that Dottie is having all Bill's best looking sweaters copied into miniatures for Ridge and sometimes he looks like a football player and sometimes like Clark Gable in the turtle neck numbers!

Jeanette MacDonald looked every inch the glamorous opery star in a gold dress and formal hairdo. But she was sad. Gene Raymond was taking off the following day for New York and a Broadway show and they would be parted for a little while.

I noticed that several of the girls were wearing a new hair arrangement. Both Lana Turner and Mrs. Bob Cobb sported long, straight hair with long, uncurled bangs.

Mary Pickford was wearing her famous diamond and ruby necklace—a truly fabulous piece of jewelry. It is elaborate enough to adorn royalty—but wasn't Mary, herself, the "Queen" of Hollywood for many years?

I got a tremendous kick out of the special "newspaper," Bebe Daniels had gotten up, written as I write my column but filled with crazy, and I fear, scandalous "news" about all the guests present. The papers were delivered by the cutest little newsboy I think I've ever seen. No, he isn't in pictures. He's the kid who delivers papers regularly at the Roach house and he asked to be allowed to be in on the gag. His eyes almost popped out at all the famous stars—but I thought he looked longest at June Allyson.

* * *

Maria Montez, who used to be such a flyaway girl, has settled down into one of our most dignified young matrons. She and Jean Pierre Aumont have a charming home, and when I attended a cocktail party there, I thought how beautifully everything had been planned and arranged.

It was quite a gathering of the French colony, but I must say they are always so polite and never embarrass other people by speaking their native tongue.

Among the early arrivals, I noticed Turhan Bey, talking with a very pretty girl, and Joan Bennett and Walter Wanger.

Greg Bautzer was in a corner with Joan Caulfield and Greg was very cool to me. When I inquired the reason, he said someone had told him I had said on my air show that Joan Crawford had given him a car. "I buy my own," he said stiffly. I told him that any one of seven other commentators must have said it. I didn't.

I don't know at this writing whether Greg, who's been attentive to so many Hollywood beauties, Dorothy Lamour, Lana Turner and others, will make up with Joan Crawford or not. That's a romance you can't figure out.

"Is this 256 Forsythe Street?"

CONSTANCE LUFT HUHN
Head of the House of Tangee and creator of Tangee Red Majesty Lipstick and Petal-Finish Cake Make-Up.

"Red Majesty suits my King's taste!"

—says MRS. DICK HAYMES

Thrillingly attractive wife of the popular young singing star.

"WHETHER the problem is 'Get your man'... or 'Keep your man,'" explains pert, charming Joanne Haymes..."Red Majesty is the best friend a girl's lips can have." This new shade makes your mouth look exciting...inviting...irresistible to men! Make your next lipstick Tangee Red Majesty.

Five Famous Glamourous Shades by Tangee

GAY-RED

RED-RED

MEDIUM-RED

THEATRICAL RED

NATURAL

To match your Tangee Lipstick—Tangee Rouge Vanity or Creme Rouge DeLuxe—in five flattering shades. Also recommended is the new Tangee Petal-Finish Cake Make-Up...ideal in every way.

Red Majesty

NEW HIT SHADE BY

Tangee

(Continued from page 54)

doing, and thinking to myself how nice it would have been to duck out of camp and spend the day with Eddie Rubin.

"About 3 o'clock that afternoon," continued Briggs, "I was called to the office for another phone call. I picked up the receiver and said: 'Private Briggs talking,' and then I almost fell on the floor, because the voice on the other end said: 'Private, this is Capt. Smith talking.' I figured it was a gag but before I could make some comedy crack, the voice said: "P.R.O. has asked that you be permitted to go to El Cortez Hotel to renew an old RKO friendship. A station wagon will pick you up in thirty minutes. Your pass will be good until they leave.' Then the phone clicked."

What had happened was this: Rubin told Ginger about ex-RKO actor Briggs, asked if Rubin could use Ginger's name to get him off for a few hours. "Certainly," said Ginger. "Why ask me, Eddie?" Rubin explained that it might be very embarrassing if the Marines asked Ginger about Briggs, and Ginger knew nothing about it. "When you meet him, Ginger," warned Rubin, "make believe you knew Jack at RKO, or he may get into trouble in boot camp."

h'ya,marine . . .

Pvt. Briggs, No. 435529, got to El Cortez Hotel, feeling plenty awkward. Marines passing by the hotel, as the station wagon pulled up, made typical Marine comments as the rookie clambered out. Briggs says he never felt so completely awkward as he felt at that moment. "Ginger," said Eddie Rubin, upstairs, "this is the Marine I was telling you about, Jack Briggs." Ginger, who had been seeing Marines all day long, said casually: "H'ya Marine?" Briggs said he was all right.

"You have dinner with us tonight, Jack," said Rubin. So it was settled, but when they were about to enter the dining room, Pvt. Briggs backed away, his face ashen. "What's wrong, pal?" asked Rubin, solicitously. "You sick?" Mute, Briggs pointed inside to Ginger's table. "I can't sit there," he said. "She's a real nice girl, Jack," soothed Eddie. "She's no movie star prima donna." Gasped Briggs: "It's not her! But look at those officers with her. I can't sit down at the same table with them. It just isn't done!! I'm going out to a beanery and get me a sandwich and coffee, and I'll see you later. Goodbye."

Rubin chased after him, got him in the lobby: "Now, listen, jerk," he stormed. "This is just another day's work to us. I don't know from colonels and captains and all that stuff. You're having dinner with me, and that goes." At the dining room entrance, Briggs again turned pale but Rubin, behind him, shoved, and this time they got to the table. "Hello, Jack," said Ginger, looking up and putting on a personality smile. "I never suffered through such a meal," shudders ex-Pvt. Briggs. "The officers tried to speak to me, but brother, I didn't try to make small talk with them."

Later he and Rubin were in Ginger's suite after the Bond Show. "Well," said Ginger, "that ends the trip." She flipped off her high-heeled shoes, tucked those good-looking legs under her on the divan, and yawned. "Well," said Pvt. Briggs, taking what he thought was a hint, "I'm shoving off. It's been a lot of fun." Rubin looked at him in astonishment: "Don't you want something to eat? I don't think you ate much at dinner." Briggs looked at him gratefully: "I'd love to eat," he said. So Ginger called room service and they sat around for hours, and probably it was at that point that a movie star and a Marine fell in love.

"When you get up to Hollywood, after boot camp," said Ginger, when he was leaving, "give me a ring."

"I couldn't go to sleep all that night," Briggs told me, grinning at Ginger. "I kept telling myself that she'd said to call her only because I was a serviceman. But then I'd think to myself that, now and then, when our eyes met, she had smiled differently from the way a girl smiles at any guy. The next night, I sat down and wrote her a letter, thanking her for the evening and for getting me out of camp. I was really packing a 'torch.' Two days later, I went completely daffy—there was a letter from HER! She said to call her when I got to Hollywood."

But by the time he got to Hollywood, Briggs had lost his nerve. He didn't call, because he didn't know her private number. He didn't call Eddie Rubin, because he didn't want Rubin to tell him to behave himself.

"One day Ginger telephoned me," broke in Rubin. "'That friend of yours, Briggs, is a nice guy,' she said. 'I see by the Hollywood Reporter that he was in town over the weekend. Did he call you?'" Rubin said he hadn't. "'He didn't call me, either," said Ginger. So Rubin, burned at Briggs for this breach of courtesy, sent him a letter at San Diego, bawling him out and telling him, next time in Hollywood, to telephone Ginger and act like a gentleman.

"From then on," said Rubin, "I never heard from Jack, and a couple of times, I commented to Ginger how odd it was. "Maybe he's shipped out," said Ginger.

But Briggs hadn't yet shipped out. Each weekend, he came up to Hollywood, and each weekend, he spent with Ginger Rogers. They picked unusual hideouts.

"Then, one day, Ginger telephoned me from Paramount," interrupted Rubin, "and I rushed over to the Lady in the Dark set. They were just about to shoot a scene when I came on the stage, but Ginger asked the director to hold the shot. She took me to her dressing room, then closed the door, and said: 'Eddie, I've got something important, very important, to tell you and I want you to know it first. I'm going to be married.' I congratulated her and she asked me to guess the man's name. Now, that's a very tough spot, but I made a couple of stabs at it and she said: 'No, it's Jack Briggs. We want you to be best man.'"

Briggs took over as narrator: "She was to meet me at Los Angeles; wait out there in the parking lot in her car. What a day! At the very time I was supposed to be arriving at L.A., the train was just pulling into San Diego, and we left there two hours and 15 minutes late. I was dying. Every now and then, I'd push the window shade aside to see where we were. Finally we got to L.A. As I stood up to put on my jacket, I looked down and there, on the lap of the lady sitting across the aisle was a MODERN SCREEN Magazine, with a picture of Ginger in it. The magazine was upside down, so I leaned down and turned it around, apologizing to the lady.

"'She's mighty lovely, isn't she?' the lady asked. I told her that Ginger certainly was lovely. 'Too bad,' said the lady, 'I understand she's marrying some Marine tonight.'" just another couple . . .

With Rubin at the wheel, they sped to Pasadena, to the rectory of a church they could see from the main street. The rectory room was decorated with basketball trophies which the young pastor had won in school. He didn't recognize Virginia McMath, and Jack Briggs was just another Marine. When Rubin tried to slip him a bill, after the ceremony, Rev. Day refused to take it: "The least we can do for servicemen is to marry them free," he pointed out. The next day, Ginger sent him a letter with her appreciation and something from Jack for the church.

For the next 21 months, Briggs served overseas with the Sixth Marines at New Caledonia, Guadalcanal and Okinawa. "Never met so many Texans in my life," he said.

"I'd kid the new ones by saying my wife came from Texas, and that she'd won a Charleston contest down there. 'Now whaddya know?' they'd say, and when I'd tell them her name was Virginia McMath, they'd allow as how they didn't know the name, but that she sure must be a fine dancer. Later, some of the old-timers would tell them my wife was Ginger Rogers, and they'd come back and ask me all about her. When I'd explain she originally came from Independence, Missouri, they'd say: 'Yeah, but she got to Texas right quick.'"

Briggs, in his plans to become a producer, would like to get some of those Marines to join up with him in Hollywood. "I don't know if they'd care much for it, though," he said. "I think if you took them away from Texas, they'd never forgive you."

"Listen, Jack," I told him, "I'd like to write this love story of you and Ginger, because it's the nicest love story ever told, the story of a Marine and a movie star falling head over heels in love, but fan magazines are a little leary of Hollywood love stories. By the time the magazine gets to the stands, naming an Ideal Hollywood Couple, generally the Ideal Couple has made reservations at Reno. Now that's downright embarrassing."

"Look, Ed," said Briggs, "the Marine Corps motto is 'Semper Fidelis,' 'Always Faithful,' and that's the way it is and it's always going to be. She is the loveliest girl in all the world, and I'm the luckiest Marine."

MODERN SCREEN

Helen Neushaefer, color and style authority, finds in tropic birds Nature's warmest, richest colors.

Captured for your nail-do...flaming color from the enchanted tropics

Your fingers, groomed with Helen Neushaefer Nail Polish, fairly dance with life and color . . . flame like sunlight caught on the wings of tropic birds in flight. And . . . most wonderful to know . . . PLASTEEN, miracle ingredient, found only in colors Helen Neushaefer has created, helps shock-proof your nails against chipping . . . makes more brilliant all twelve of her brilliant color-creations. Only ten cents at chain store and leading drug cosmetic counters.

The Miracle of PLASTEEN

Plasteen is the secret ingredient that makes Helen Neushaefer Nail Polish so easy to put on . . . so hard to chip off . . . keeps it smoother-flowing, free of bubbles . . . adds lustrous, jeweled brilliance to her ravishing colors. And to hers exclusively!

Distributed by
A. Sartorius & Co., Inc.
Fifth Avenue, N. Y. 11

Helen Neushaefer

NAIL POLISH WITH PLASTEEN

It lasts so long . . . it looks so beautiful

And ask for these exciting Helen Neushaefer creations:
Liquid Mascara • E-Z Hair Removing Glove • Lipstick Brush

JODY

(Continued from page 62)

There he was, tow-headed, blue eyed, sensitive faced. As far as appearance was concerned, he was perfect; but there were other things I had to know about Jody, so he was brought to the principal's office. Incidentally, Jody was told that I was a football coach, scouting elementary schools, so he had no real inkling of my errand.

We sat there and talked sports for a few minutes; then I launched into the story of The Yearling as if it were an experience of a friend of mine. I had to be sure of at least two things: that Jody was interested in and responsive to the plight of animals, and that he had imagination enough to react to a story situation.

As I reached the episode in which Flag, the fawn, was shot by mistake, I watched Jody carefully. He pressed his lips together, his button nose began to redden, and those summer-sky eyes filled with tears that couldn't be controlled.

great moment . . .

That was a great moment for me, as it would have been for any director. I knew that my original hunch had been right: here was a responsive youngster who could give a great performance.

However, we did go through moments when both Jody and I wanted to give up and hand the deer business back to Disney. Do you remember the sequence in which Jody and Flag romped along the crest of the hill, silhouetted against the sky?

That scene was intended to express several things: the spiritual renewal of spring, the lilt of the morning, the beauty of all young life. I wanted Jody to stride along in rhythm. My idea of background music for that sequence had already taken form, so I wanted Jody to stride, then skip, then lope absolutely on beat.

When we went into rehearsal I was counting measures like an old music master. Once I felt that I had established the syncopation, I asked Jody to try it. Well, the first result was as far from what I wanted as Ed Wynn is from Astaire. "Hold it, Jody. Let's try it again," I said.

We tried it again. And again. And again. He couldn't get it.

I lost plenty of sleep over it. One morning I looked at Jody, who was rubbing his own eyes, and said, "Didn't you rest well?"

"I stayed awake for a long time last night, figuring out how I'm supposed to walk along the hill," he explained. "I've just got to do it right."

I stopped worrying. That kind of spirit simply can't fail. A few days later we filmed the sequence without a hitch.

For a long time I couldn't talk about our first day of scheduled shooting in Florida, but I've grown mellow with the passing months. The episode hurt me worse than it did Jody—in a different place, as usual. Naturally, the studio had been put to considerable expense to bring Jody and his father from Tennessee to Georgia, to establish them in living quarters, and to make the preliminary tests. I had vouched for the boy, committing the studio for vast sums of money on my judgment.

That first morning a studio car was dispatched to pick up Mr. Jarman and Jody, and to bring them to our location. As they were whisked along the highway, Jody caught sight of one of those highway stands displaying a sign which read, "All the orange juice you can drink—10c."

In the confusion of the car's arrival, Jody slipped away, unnoticed, from his father and me, and hiked back to the stand. When we couldn't find him, we were frantic.

Meanwhile, Jody slapped his dime down on the counter and took the stand operator at his word. He absorbed one glass of orange juice, another, and another.

He started back to camp, but the warmth of the day and the weight of his burden were too much for him. When he finally dragged up the road and into the clearing —where we were forming a posse—he was the sickest lad I have ever seen.

Usually Jody and Gregory Peck spent an afternoon each week in a flat boat on a nearby lake, fishing. They had consistently good luck, if not in catching fish, in locating other objects of interest. They were near shore one afternoon when they spotted a baby crocodile. It was only about eight inches long, and because it was so small they thought it would make a cute pet. Greg caught it and stuffed it inside his shirt.

Back at camp, Greg and Jody fixed up a cosy nest in a cardboard box, and put the baby croc to sleep.

Some hours later the midnight peace of our cottage court was demolished by a series of outraged howls. Greg rolled out first, muttering something about the mama crocodile probably having come to get her child, as he grabbed a gun.

odd bed-fellow . . .

When we reached the Jarman bungalow, we found Jody doing his best to maintain a sorrowful air and a straight face. He had taken the crocodile to bed with him, a stunt he might have learned from sleeping with Flag in The Yearling. Mr. Jarman had come home from a late gin rummy session with members of the crew, had undressed in the dark, and had slid in beside his son. His presence was promptly and actively resented by an object that Mr. Jarman excitedly decided must be at least a diamond-back rattler. He had leaped out of bed, yelling at the top of his lungs.

Quite a few persons have said to me recently, "Do you think Hollywood is going to ruin Jody?"

Certainly I don't. In the first place he isn't the sort of human being who spoils easily. Furthermore, he has a wondering, naïve quality that will—I hope—remain with him all his days.

At Christmas time last year, the cast and crew chipped in and bought Jody one of those canvas director's chairs with his name lettered conventionally in black across the back. You should have seen him. He sparkled like Fourth of July, and thanked everyone remotely connected with the gift. At the end of the day he asked diffidently, "Do you suppose it would be all right for me to take it home to keep?" It never occurred to Jody to keep it at the studio. Impressing anyone is the farthest thing from his mind.

On his birthday, the cast and crew gave him a party—just cake and ice cream on the set—but it made a nice break in the afternoon, and Jody regarded it as a banquet.

A few days later Jody arrived at the studio with a crate of apples and a sign. The apples, which he had bought on his own hook out of his allowance, were placed on a prominent table below the sign which read, "Please Help Yourself."

When he became a full-fledged Boy Scout (he had served his apprenticeship as a cub in Tennessee), Jody invited me to attend the ceremony.

I had never been present at such an affair before. As I watched the lighting of the candles which signified each tenet of the Scout creed, and listened to the tense, dedicated young voices reciting the Scout pledges, I had a lump in my throat the size of a baseball.

There I stood, gazing at Jody and trying to keep my eyes from misting as he marched forward, a lanky, tow-headed, solemn-faced lad who was the very spirit of reverence. I had spent enough time with him to know that his throat was taut, too, and he was having trouble keeping his own eyes dry. After he had finished his part of the service, he swung around and gave me a snappy salute. It was swell. So swell, in fact, that I was glad I had brought along an extra handkerchief.

I've given a good deal of thought to Jody's future. Before long he will have to go through an adjustment period during which he's going to add both height and weight. To judge from the present police-dog puppy size of his hands and feet, I'd say that he may be as tall as Walter Pidgeon or Gary Cooper when he's full grown.

Inevitably, he's going to pass through an awkward stage during which he is going to present a casting problem. Only time will tell how he will emerge from this period of development.

Incidentally, if he goes on with his picture career, he will probably be known as Jody Jarman instead of Claude Jarman, Jr., because no one ever calls him anything except Jody right now.

As I am writing these paragraphs about Jody, the Academy Award nominations haven't even been made. When this is on the magazine stands, the Award for the best performance by a juvenile actor will already have been made, so what I am going to say puts me out on a limb.

Still, I am willing to stake my reputation that he'll win an Award. I think the kid is great and deserves to win because he is intelligent, sensitive, has a swell sense of humor, listens to advice, hasn't grown fresh or wiseguy, and finally because he owns an impressive amount of honest-to-Pete talent. That's my boy.

VIRGINIA WELLES . . .

Paramount featured player, soon to be seen in "Dear Ruth" and "Variety Girl."

Virginia models our pet choice for the Easter parade—a navy blue dress-plus-jacket that sings spring. It's rayon crepe and taffeta. The smart little lumberjacket comes off to reveal a slim dress which will be wonderful all summer long. (You can see the dress without the jacket on the next page.)

The dress is by Doris Dodson. It comes in sizes 9 to 15, and costs about $18.

With it, a pale blue felt cloche—new because it fits the head, because it wears its ribbons on the side. Hat by Ann Portny—$12.

Shining accent—a silver-finished rhinestone chatalette, new because it fastens like a pin. Chatalette by Jordan—$5.

modern screen fashions

Easter must be closer than you think . . .

see the new

VIRGINIA WELLES, Paramount featured player, models your Easter coat. Below, she wears the Doris Dodson dress (without jacket), shown in color on page 71.

1. Short and snappy—with a flare in back. Black and white Shamokin all-wool plaid. 10-18. About $23

By Summit Sportswear

2. Slim dressy twill reefer—shining satin binding. Rayon and wool. Comes in black or navy. 10 to 20. $30

By Judy Nell

To find out where to buy these clothes please turn to pa spring coats!

3. Slick gabardine reefer—big easy sleeves. Rayon and wool. Black, brown, navy, others. 9-15. $35

By Judy Nell

4. Luscious greatcoat — silver door-knocker buttons, crescent pockets, 100% wool suede cloth. Black, red, pastels. 9-15. $40

By Lassie Junior

Easter must be closer than you think . . .

see the pretty hats!

By CONNIE BARTEL

1. Open-crowned flower garden—little brim. By Ann Portny. Swanky, gold-finished pin (copy of a very expensive one), $4. Matching earrings, $2. Both by Jordan. $5.95

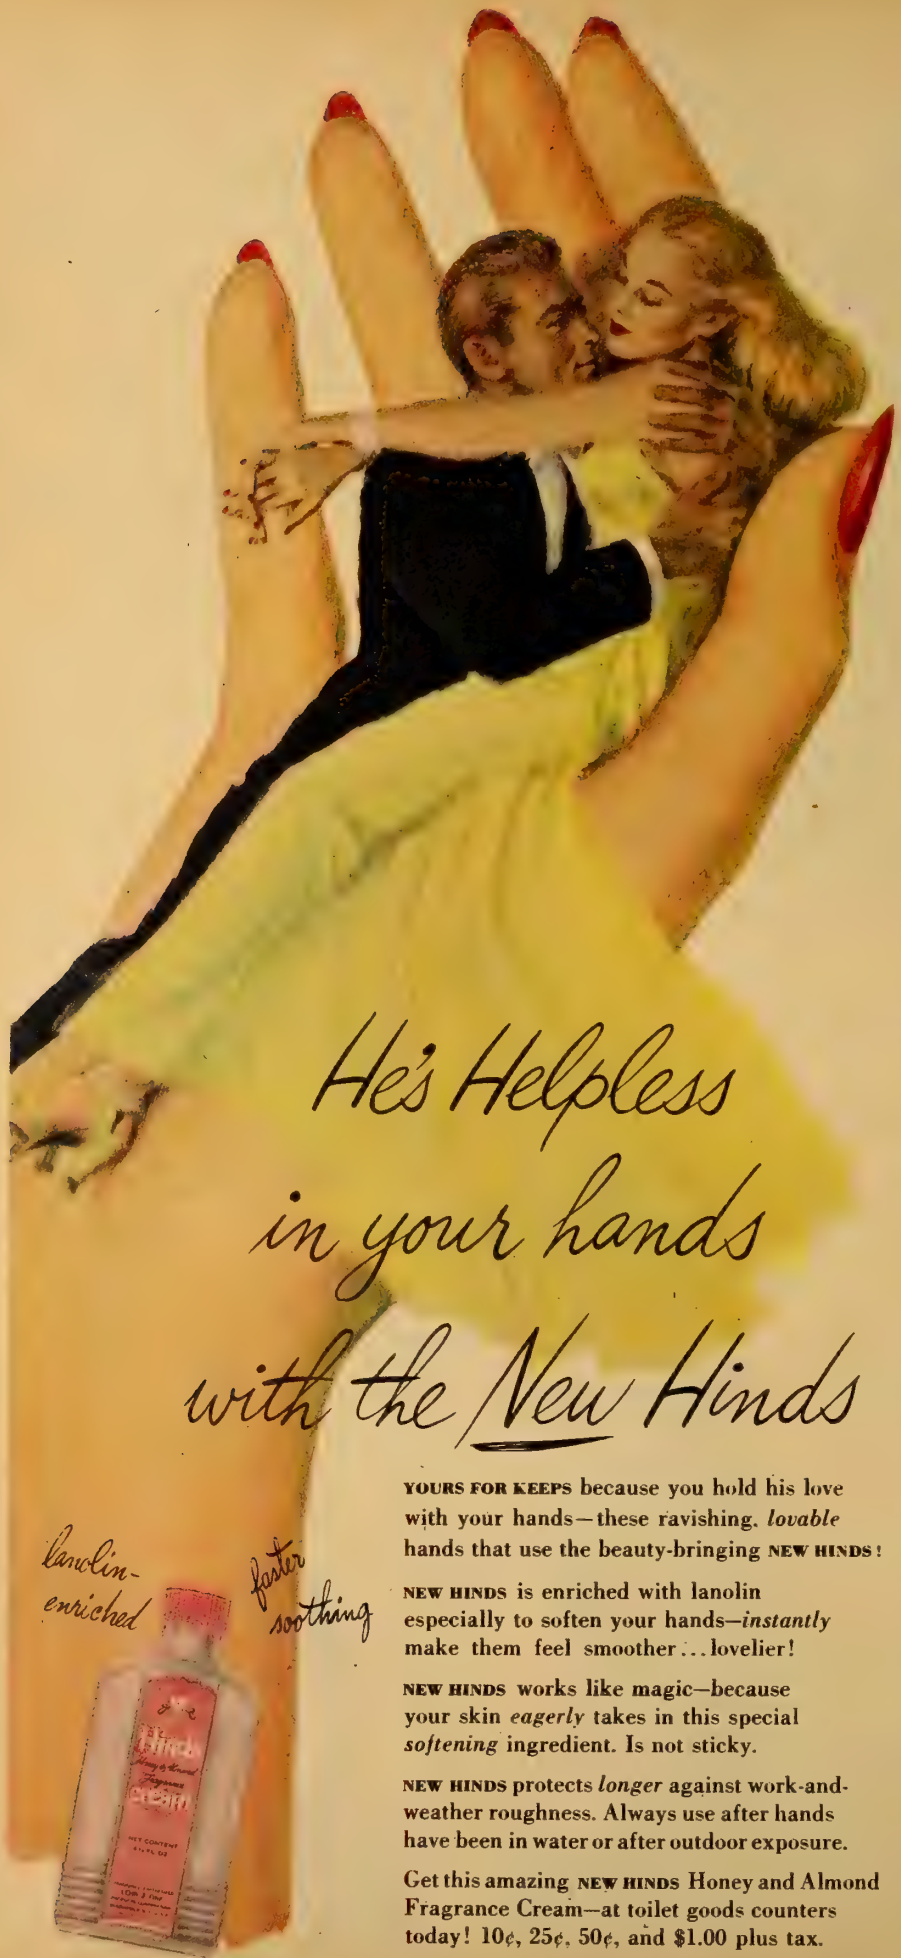
2. Shallow-crowned bonnet—spring flowers. By Ann Portny. Fashion's favorite link choker, gold or silver finished. With matching bracelet, $1 a set. Earrings, $1. By Jordan. $5.95

3. Deep-crowned suit hat—gay tailored ribbons. By Ann Portny. $5.95
Lapel gadget bound to make conversation—gold-finished peace-pipe, with winking stones. $2. By Jordan.

To find out where to buy these hats and jewelry, please turn to page 79.

4. Sonnet-bonnet—with a here-I-come taffeta bow. By Ann Portny. $6.95

Dressed-up pin with spray of sparkles—gold finished with pastel stones. $2. Scroll earrings, $1. By Jordan.



YOURS FOR KEEPS because you hold his love with your hands—these ravishing, lovable hands that use the beauty-bringing NEW HINDS!

NEW HINDS is enriched with lanolin especially to soften your hands—instantly make them feel smoother...lovelier!

NEW HINDS works like magic—because your skin eagerly takes in this special softening ingredient. Is not sticky.

NEW HINDS protects longer against work-and-weather roughness. Always use after hands have been in water or after outdoor exposure.

Get this amazing NEW HINDS Honey and Almond Fragrance Cream—at toilet goods counters today! 10¢, 25¢, 50¢, and $1.00 plus tax.

COPR. 1946 LEHN AND FINK PRODUCTS CORPORATION

LETTER FROM THE FASHION EDITOR

Thank you and thank you some more for your wonderful letters about our new Modern Screen Fashion Section. We simply can't express what it means to us to have you say right out loud in writing that you are finding our fashions right for your taste, your purse, and your life.

We'd like to remind you that you can always find out where to buy Modern Screen Fashions in the list of stores in the back of the magazine. On every group of fashion photos there's a line which says—"to find out where to buy these fashions, please turn to page so and so." Just in case you haven't happened to notice this line—start looking for it now. It will always guide you to our list of stores. Don't forget that if a store in your city isn't listed, if you'll write to me, I'll answer promptly giving you the name of a store near you.

Another thing. If you should have trouble in locating a Modern Screen fashion in a store, remember that stores often sell the same kind of merchandise on different floors. Suits, for example, might be divided up among three different departments in one store. That's why it's a good idea to take the photo right out of the magazine and carry it into the store with you—it'll help you locate it faster. And another good thing to do is mention the name of the designer of the garment—which you'll always find under the photo. We mean those lines that say: "By Jonathan Logan"—or "By Judy 'n Jill" or whatever the designer's name may be.

And have you seen our pretty new pink and green fashion tag yet? It says "As featured in Modern Screen" and you'll find it attached to the actual clothes in the stores. It's so new not many stores have it yet—but we're working on it and you'll be seeing it soon. Watch for it!

Best wishes for being best dressed—

Connie Bartel

Easter must be closer than you think . . .

see the fresh white blouses!

1. Adore little collars—push-up sleeves? 9-15. By Toni Owen. $5.95. Flashing star pins by Jordan. Large or medium, $2. Small, $1.

2. Love square necks—and fagotting? 9-15. By Toni Owen. $5.95. Antique-looking chatelaine, gold or silver finish. By Jordan. $3.

3. Silly for frilly ruffles? 10-18. By Toni Owen. $5.95.

Flower-petal earrings set with stones. By Jordan. $2.

All in Bates Chamikin Rayon Crepe.

To find out where to buy blouses and jewelry, please turn to page 79.

Middy dress in Stunzi rayon crepe.
Grey, navy, aqua, melon. 10-18.
By Lombardy $14.95

Have you seen the latest?

MIDDY torso
PLEATED skirt

■ Here it is—the biggest and most important fashion news of the year. It's the middy top and pleated skirt—and we want to tip you off in advance because it's spreading like crazy. See the long blouse—coming way down over the hips? See the accordion pleated skirt? It adds up to a hit fashion trend you're going to see everywhere—either in one-piece dresses, as here—or in separate middies and skirts. And wait until you try one on—you never saw yourself so slim! The hat is part of the same becoming 1920's trend—too new to be everywhere yet, but a very definite coming attraction. Watch and see!

To find out where to buy the middy dress, turn to page 79

Posed by Paramount's Virginia Welles:

Middy dress—white, aqua, peach top—black or brown shantung skirt. 9-15.
By Jonathan Logan $12.95

WHERE YOU CAN BUY MODERN SCREEN FASHIONS

NAVY BLUE EASTER DRESS AND JACKET
Worn by Virginia Welles
(page 71)

Chicago, Ill.—Mandel Brothers
Cincinnati, Ohio—Mabley & Carew
Cleveland, Ohio—Halle Brothers
Columbus, Ohio—The Fashion
Detroit, Mich.—Himelhoch's
Houston, Texas—Foley Bros.
New Orleans, La.—Maison Blanche
Pittsburgh, Pa.—Kaufmann's
San Antonio, Texas—Frost Brothers
Washington, D. C.—F. R. Jelleff, Inc.

Chatalette pin worn by Virginia Welles
(page 71)
(See jewelry list opposite)

BLUE FELT HAT
Worn by Virginia Welles
(color photo—page 71)

Cincinnati, Ohio—Mabley & Carew
Detroit, Michigan—Himelhoch's
Pittsburgh, Pa.—Kaufmann's
Washington, D. C.—F. R. Jelleff, Inc.

"SEE THE NEW SPRING COATS!"
Coat number 1
(pages 72-73)

Allentown, Pa.—Hess Bros.
Boston, Mass.—R. H. White Co.
Trenton, N. J.—Stacy Sports Shop

Coats number 2 and 3
(pages 72-73)

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Namm's
Philadelphia, Pa.—Lit Brothers Subway Store
Washington, D. C.—Lansburgh's

Coat number 4
(pages 72-73)

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Martin's
Detroit, Mich.—Kline's
New York, N. Y.—McCreery's

"SEE THE PRETTY HATS"
(pages 74-75)

Boston, Mass.—R. H. White Co.
Memphis, Tenn.—B. Lowenstein & Bros.
Nashville, Tenn.—Harvey's

"SEE THE FRESH WHITE BLOUSES"
(page 77)

Boston, Mass.—Filene's
New York, N. Y.—Bloomingdale's
Richmond, Va.—Thalhimer's
Rochester, N. Y.—B. Forman

JEWELRY

Chatalette pin worn by Virginia Welles
(page 71)

Jewelry on pages 74-75

Jewelry on page 77

(All at stores below)

Ashtabula, Ohio—Carlisle-Allen
Atlanta, Ga.—Davison-Paxon
Atlantic City, N. J.—Maeberns
Baltimore, Md.—Hutzler Brothers
Boise, Idaho—Anderson's
Boston, Mass.—Jordan Marsh
Brooklyn, N. Y.—Abraham & Straus
Butler, Pa.—A. E. Troutman
Cleveland, Ohio—The May Co.
Cincinnati, Ohio—H. & S. Pogue Co.
Chicago, Ill.—The Fair
Columbus, Ohio—F. R. Lazarus Co.
Connellesville, Pa.—A. E. Troutman
Dayton, Ohio—Rike-Kumler
Detroit, Mich.—Crowley Milner
Du Bois, Pa.—A. E. Troutman
Easton, Pa.—Orr Dept. Store
Fairmont, West Va.—Jones, Inc.
Flushing, N. Y.—Abramson's
Grand Rapids, Mich.—Herpolsheimer's
Greensburg, Pa.—A. E. Troutman
Harrisburg, Pa.—Worth's
Indiana, Pa.—A. E. Troutman
Jackson, Mich.—L. H. Field
Kansas City, Mo.—Peck Company
La Trobe, Pa.—S. P. Reed Co.
Los Angeles, Calif.—The May Co.
Miami, Fla.—Richard Store
Milwaukee, Wis.—Gimbel's
Minneapolis, Minn.—L. S. Donaldson
New York, N. Y.—Bloomingdale's
Philadelphia, Pa.—John Wanamaker
Pittsburgh, Pa.—Kaufmann's
Portland, Me.—J. E. Palmer
Reading, Pa.—Pomeroy's
San Antonio, Texas—Joske's
San Francisco, Calif.—The Emporium
Seattle, Wash.—The Bon Marche
Springfield, Mo.—Heer's, Inc.
Stamford, Conn.—C. O. Miller
St. Louis, Mo.—Famous Barr
Syracuse, N. Y.—Dey Brothers
Tampa, Fla.—Maas Brothers
Toledo, Ohio—LaSalle & Koch
Washington, D. C.—The Hecht Co.
Wooster, Ohio—H. Freedlander

MIDDY TORSO PLEATED SKIRT DRESS WITH WHITE PIQUE COLLAR AND CUFFS
(page 78)

Chicago, Ill.—M. L. Rothschild
Cleveland, Ohio—The May Co.
Detroit, Mich.—Crowley Milner
Newark, N. J.—Bamberger's
New York, N. Y.—Saks-34th
Philadelphia, Pa.—Strawbridge & Clothier
Pittsburgh, Pa.—Frank & Seder

If no store in your city is listed write: Fashion Editor, Modern Screen, 149 Madison Ave., New York 16, N. Y.

your dream of being

SEE-WORTHY

has come true

LASTEX* Laton batiste . . . so utterly feminine, and practical too. A triumph in figure-flattery. Available in the newest shades. At smart stores everywhere.

Sea Nymph
swim suits by jordan

JORDAN MANUFACTURING CORP.
1410 Broadway, New York City, N. Y.

LASTEX* by FABTEX *Reg. U.S. Pat. Off.

(Continued from page 41)

be, because I am more than a wife to John. I am also, in a sense, his landlady!

With one exception, I knew the man I married pretty well. The exception was that I don't think I ever realized how much John could change some of my ideas. Or how I'd grow to value his opinions.

For instance, there is the matter of the "little room." In our house, which nestles on the hillside beneath huge pine trees just off the Sunset Strip, there is a tiny downstairs sitting room. I never liked that little room. I have a compelling fear of hemmed-in places.

Of course, that little room would be the one place in the house to which John took a sudden special liking.

"You can stay in there all you want," I said, "but you know how I feel—so we'll just call it your hideout."

John and I had discovered an artist whose work we liked tremendously, and I was delighted that for our first Christmas my husband wanted me to pick out one of his canvasses.

We went over to the studio of Benton Scott, who is one of America's most promising young artists, and it took me ten seconds to make up my mind. I wanted Scott's "The Clown."

I'll have you know that the model who posed for this is a genuine circus clown. The face is so lifelike that the facial expression changes, or seems to, depending on your own mood.

Well—wouldn't you know it—"The Clown" now hangs in "the little room," and I spend hours there. His expression seems to say, "How ridiculous can you get?" Subsequently, the last vestige of my complex about the room has vanished.

Maybe one reason John's influence has been so effective is that he doesn't ruffle easily, though his calmness is not of the taunting variety. I think he has good judgment, which causes me at this point to drop the remark that in my opinion, without reference to physical stature (John's being considerable) a girl likes a man she can look up to without the annoying realization that he is looking down at her.

Consider my prime fault. I am not the neatest girl in the world. Oh, I like things in their places. But all I have to do is walk around in a room, and the first thing I know, there may be a dress on the bed, too many magazines on a table and confusion all around. The general effect is as if someone had cleaned the room with an eggbeater!

John, effortlessly, is just the opposite. But bless his orderly heart, he's never once so much as dropped a hint. Unless, of course, you count the time he walked across the room—he would be barefoot, of course—and stepped right on my high heeled sandals. He dropped a hint then, all right—in ringing tones! The first time I really became aware of this considerable difference between us was when we decided to build a separate dressing room for him over the garage.

When all this was completed, I observed that John's quarters were invariably as orderly as one would imagine a cadet's at West Point would be.

To bring the point into sharp focus, John is the type of man who either dresses like a man of distinction or else very casually, but never half and half.

Not that my John is perfect. He'll kill me for telling this story. But I've just got to tell it.

Came the approach of a large party. At the time I was knee deep in Razor's Edge. I was at the studio before 6:30. John, poor man, was momentarily not working in a picture, and the burden of preparation fell on him.

John said not to worry for a second. He'd take care of the whole thing. During a break on the set that day, I received an urgent call.

"I am ten miles out in the San Fernando Valley," he said, "but I have finally located that coffee pot."

"Coffee pot!" I exclaimed. "Don't tell me it was that hard to find!"

"Sure," he replied, "but it's a beauty. Just like they have in restaurants. As a matter of fact, it's really an urn, six feet high, all aluminum, and with a wonderful spigot. Really, darling it's terrific—and such a bargain at only $50.00!"

"But John," I fumbled for words which would avoid delivering a crushing blow at this moment of his triumph. "All I wanted was one of those large crocks with a spigot. They cost three or four dollars. Please don't buy that restaurant thing."

"Look, Anne," he exclaimed, "I can't go back on that deal now."

"And why not?" I demanded.

"Because," he retorted, "I haven't any sales resistance! I was so happy about finding this that they'll think I'm crazy if I don't take it."

When I arrived home that night I found a man's version of the answers to a list a woman can make out and pick up in a few hours, plus enough candy and nuts to open a small shop of our own.

"John," I said, as gently as I could, "there are some things that only a female mind can comprehend."

I suppose that any young wife wonders what is going to happen when she and her husband "settle down" and she isn't in the spotlight quite as much as she was during courtship.

My experience in the "settling down" process came abruptly when John said one day, quite casually, "Anne, I'm going to take up golf seriously."

I swallowed my dubious thoughts and said it was a fine idea. Then I promptly went to look at my riding clothes. It had been quite awhile since I'd ridden horseback regularly. So when John played golf, it wasn't necessary for me to exclaim, "Oh John, you're not going out to the course again today, are you?"

When we went to Palm Springs for a rest after John finished Hal Wallis' Desert Fury at Paramount, I really enjoyed those long rides through the desert while John played golf.

letting her hair down . . .

Since I'm really letting my hair down in this story—maybe I can get away with revealing that John is one of the few actors who doesn't happen to like lunching in all the noise and table-hopping of the studio commissary. After he'd grumbled about it long enough to impress me, I marched myself out one day and purchased a shiny, old-fashioned lunch pail, which I presented to John the next day.

"Look inside, dear," I said, after he'd finished exclaiming. And there, wrapped in double layers of waxed paper, snuggled a fine, fat Dagwood sandwich I had whipped up. You know, one of those super-duper, king-size combinations of bread, meat, cheese, mustard—and pickle, of course! Well, it broke John up. He laughed so hard I thought he'd forget about the practical side of my gift. But not my husband. He toted his pail (and sandwich!) to work the next day and had a nice quiet lunch in his dressing room, where he likes to go over his scenes for the afternoon.

For no reason at all, we put a sign on the pail, reading "The Surrey With The Fringe On Bottom." People look at the sign and roar with laughter or frown and say, "I don't get it." The latter reaction is more sensible—it doesn't mean a thing, except that John and I enjoy our nonsensical jokes.

Don't you think sometimes that

(Continued on page 83)

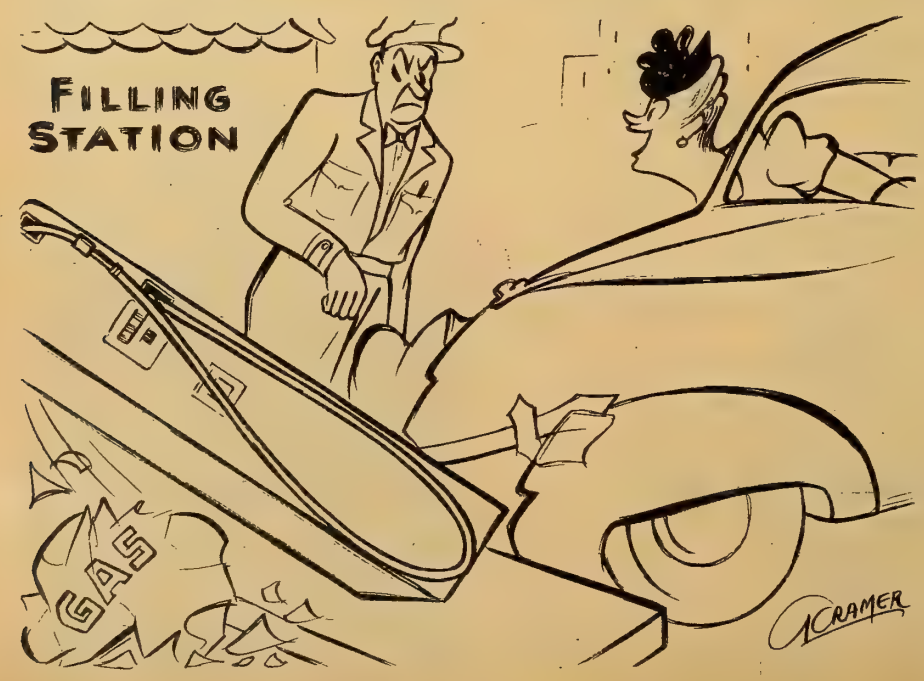
MODERN SCREEN



"It's all right. I just want some water."

Very personally yours

You're Dining Out . . . and you adore it. You love the festive atmosphere . . . listen for the heady Latin music that recalls your first ecstatic glimpse of "night life". It was like a great neon pinwheel spinning with fun and glamour and romance . . . and all very personally yours.

Tonight, you're radiant with that same young enthusiasm. Proving once again that any woman can stay young-in-heart, when she's free from care. "Those" cares, for example. And that's why you always insist on Kotex, for with that exclusive safety center you're sure . . . secure.

Moreover, you're free from revealing outlines, with those flat pressed ends of Kotex. Free from discomfort, too, because Kotex is a dream of softness . . . is made to stay soft while you wear it. And because your daintiness is so important, each Kotex napkin contains a deodorant. Yes, and only Kotex has 3 sizes (Regular, Junior, Super Kotex).

Naturally, then, your every evening can be as carefree as your laughter-loving heart. You can keep that radiant charm always very personally yours.

*More women choose Kotex than all other sanitary napkins

*T. M. Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

Can you tell . . .

which is the expensive curtain

?

Whether you use simple little cotton curtains that hardly dent the budget . . . or Swiss Point imported ones—there's one sure way to have them look their charming best. That's to starch them—fresh and spic-span—with LINIT*.

The curtains shown here were actually laundered and starched with LINIT, to show you that this favorite starch is ideal—whether for modest or costly things. Easy directions are on the LINIT box. Get LINIT today.

The curtain at the right costs $3.95 a pair. The one at the left, $34.95.

. . . ADDS THE "finishing touch"

*LINIT IS A REGISTERED TRADE MARK OF CORN PRODUCTS REFINING COMPANY, NEW YORK, N.Y. ©C.P.R. CO., 1947

LINIT is the smooth, penetrating starch that makes cotton look and feel luxurious as linen. By restoring the original finish, LINIT resists muss and soil. And irons fly—with LINIT!

INFORMATION DESK

by Beverly Linet

ROBERT STERLING, June Allyson's brother in The Secret Heart, was born in Newcastle, Pa. His birthday is November 13. Bob's real name is W. H. Hart; he's 6' 1½" tall; weighs 175 lbs. and has blue eyes and brown hair. Married to Ann Sothern, has one child, and used to be a salesman. His favorite sport is golf. Write him at M-G-M studios.

LLOYD BRIDGES, who played Johnny Steele in Canyon Passage, is a California boy, born at San Leandro on January 15, 1913. He's 6'1" tall, weighs 175 lbs., and has blue eyes and blond hair. His wife is Dorothy Simpson and they have one child. Lloyd got his start in stock and loves to browse in quaint book shops. Write him at Universal. Edith Moss, 150 Ridgewood Ave., San Francisco 12, Calif., has a fan club for him.

HORACE McNALLY, whom you raved about in Magnificent Doll, was born in New York City on July 29. He's 6'1" tall, weighs 185 lbs., and has brown hair and eyes. Rita Louise is his wife and they also have one youngster. Loves to play football. Write to him at Universal. Lorraine Wright, 25 Manhattan Ave., N.Y.C., has his fan club.

Irene T., N. Y.: James Mason will not make a Hollywood picture very soon. First, he and his wife, Pamela Kellino, will do Bathsheba on Broadway.

A. Iskian, Okla. City: Those were excerpts from Brahms' Third Symphony played throughout Undercurrent and Chopin's Etude, Opus 3, No. 10, played in Faithful in My Fashion.

Stephanie F., L. A.: Pearl Tice, 514 Arch St., Perkasie, Pa. has Virginia Field's Club; Iris Archambault, 17 East Greenwich Ave., West Warwick, R. I. has the New Stars Club; Jean Harmon, 26 Foote St., Auburn, N. Y. heads Larry Brooks Club; Jimmy Durante's Club is run by Chuck Mittlestadt, Box 331, Fayette, Iowa.

SPECIAL OFFER

SUPER-STAR INFORMATION CHART — 1946-'47 (10c)—First offered July '46. A new, better-than-ever edition of the chart that's a 32-page pocket encyclopedia of exclusive, fascinating data on the private lives, wives, hobbies, used-to-be jobs, latest pix of all your favorite stars. 100 additional names never before listed! Please enclose 10c in coin with your order.

That's all for now. Do hurry and send those questions of yours to Beverly Linet, INFORMATION DESK, MODERN SCREEN, 149 Madison Avenue, New York 16, N. Y. Be sure to enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request.

THE MAN I MARRIED

(Continued from page 80)

really happy people are those who seem just a little "touched" to their neighbors? For instance, if John should decide to pitch golf balls into the swimming pool, he hasn't lost his mind. It's just that there is not one blade of grass around the house on which he can practice swinging.

Somehow, I know I should be more articulate in telling about John, but I'm not. When I try to "sum him up," the reactions come in "quick takes." Like this—

I like the way he looks directly at you and really listens.

He has a good mind.

He is not a superman, but he is big and strong and you know that the width of his shoulders isn't padding plus.

He is an excellent actor who has just begun to hit his real stride.

He is loyal, thoughtful, and wears like a Rolls Royce engine.

More than that—on a shelf in his dressing room, between a volume of Mencken's "American Language" and "The Pleasure of Their Company" is one of those how-to-be-happy-though-married books. No doubt, this volume is a valuable matrimonial aid, but I'll swear that John has never read it.

With no offense to the author, I hope he never does.

I like things the way they are now.

SAINT OR SINNER?

(Continued from page 49)

don't like it, you can get out and walk."

The little man got out. He fished in his pocket to pay the fare to this madman of cab drivers.

"No charge," the driver declared.

The little man peered at him.

"Why," he exclaimed, "You're Errol Flynn!"

"Of course, my good fellow," Flynn answered, "Who did you think I was?"

The little man went away from there, shaking his head. It is not known whether he tried to tell his wife that he had been driven home—almost—in a taxi chauffeured by Errol Flynn. The good woman probably would have eventually called a doctor and had him taken away in a straight jacket.

At any rate, Errol Flynn did drive a taxi in New Orleans. He had a right to, because he owned it, and it was not his fault if people pestered him for rides. He enjoyed every minute of it, and of course sold the cab to somebody else for nearly as much as he had paid for it.

There may be some who say that such a prank is not exactly adult. Those would be such prudish individuals as people who have never been to an American Legion convention or seen a free soul really enjoying himself. Flynn was at no legion convention; he is not a free soul, as eight hundred yards of court records will prove, but he does indulge in fantastic flights from the confining business of being a movie star.

What trouble Errol Flynn has had during his span of life in Hollywood is caused largely by the fact that he minds his own business. A lot of other people don't. They mind his.

At one time, Errol had the all-time record for alleged romantic escapades that wound up in court. Certain young ladies, apparently ambitious for both notoriety and cash, filed all manner of legal actions, resulting in Errol's regular appearance before the bar of justice. Few lawyers have spent more time there.

All of these trips to court have cost Errol Flynn an astronomical sum, much greater than the average man will earn in a lifetime. At a salary of $6,000 weekly, he could very nearly afford it until taxes zoomed in war time and left him with less than $25,000 from his salaried income each year.

I, who am clarifying a few points regarding Errol Flynn, do not claim that he is either a saint or a sinner. I have talked with him frequently during his ten years in Hollywood, drunk with him occasionally, although never toe to toe, and engaged in several small business dealings concerning his writings. And anyone who has ever bartered with Flynn would much prefer a workout with a Philadelphia lawyer—he is that well-equipped to handle his personal affairs.

Here I want to give answer to a number of questions that are being constantly asked about Flynn, some of which might even amaze him, aware as he is of the speed with which headlines flash by and the stubbornness with which false rumor clings.

Herewith the questions and answers:

Did Flynn really deny his marriage to Nora Eddington right through to the birth of their child?

No. For reasons of their own, the couple wished to keep their marriage a secret at first. Flynn detests making direct and corny replies to questions which begin, "Is it true that—" Reporters have tried to play cat and mouse with him and invariably discover that he is not the mouse. He denied the marriage at first. Later reporters forgot to follow up, and were amazed when Deirdre was born.

Is he actually married?

Yeah man, until further notice. He and Nora were married secretly in Mexico, Flynn using the name of Leslie Flynn.

Is Flynn a citizen of this country?

Yes, a former British subject, he was naturalized as Errol Leslie Flynn.

What is the mystery of his recent cruise?

There is no mystery, except that conjured up by imaginative writers. Flynn planned a cruise to the waters off the Mexican coast to enable his father and another professor to do scientific research. They discovered and studied new types of fish and their feeding habits with relation to the problem of increasing sea food and extending knowledge and research halted by the war.

Was Nora really a "tyrant" as some of the crew members were reported to have said?

Nora, then expecting her second child, was advised not to go on the trip, and couldn't make up her mind until the last minute. From the beginning, some crew members thought it would be bad luck to have a woman aboard, and resented her presence. One day, she stumbled and fell down a ship's ladder and was greatly worried. If she was touchy and momentarily out of sorts, she had reason to be, and

Infadorable by Doris Dodson

Basinette days ahead? Stay lovely, cool and comfortable in Doris Dodson's becoming Infadorable, with the clever, adjustable drawstring back. Pink, yellow or aqua striped gingham with a bolero length yoke of white, eyelet embroidered pique. Sizes 11 to 17 . . . about $13.00. Write for the name of your local shop . . Doris Dodson, St. Louis 1, Mo.

YOUR CHANCE FOR FAME... Pictured is lovely Joan Smith, winner of the last Stardust Beauty Contest, now a Walter Thornton Pin-Up Girl. Enter our 1947 Contest now, YOU may be the lucky winner of $500 first prize or 27 other awards! Just send recent non-returnable photo, with height, weight, bust, waist and hip measurements before May 31, 1947. Decisions of famous beauty judges are final. Mail entry to P. O. Box 65, Station F, N.Y.

Preview of your summer wardrobe!

watch for the may fashion section

featuring crisp cottons and rayons

COPY OF A
$20 MASTERPIECE

Every single detail of the costly original is here! The tucked and fagotted bosom-front goes clear to the bottom hem! The six pearl-drop buttons glisten in glamour. And you'll love the navy grosgrain bow. A custom-shirt rayon crepe, with a white-on-white weave you find only in expensive fashions. Sizes 32 to 38 . . . another CINEMA success . . . and a marvelous buy at Tagil N.Y.

ONLY $6.98

TAGIL OF NEW YORK Dept. 532
1186 Broadway, New York 1
Please send me your TUCKED BOSOM BLOUSE $6.98 plus 10c postage Size.....
Check..... Money Order..... COD.....
Name.....
Address.....
City.....State.....

FULL SATISFACTION OR MONEY BACK

her attitude was considerably more crewmanlike than some of the other members of the party, as was proven when Flynn was forced to discharge several on the arrival of the "Zacca" at Acapulco. Others left of their own accord. One told me he wouldn't take orders from an actor.

Why did Nora leave the ship and not come back on arriving at the first Mexican port?

Nora planned originally to go no further than Acapulco and carried out her plans made with Errol's knowledge. She went to Mexico City and spent some time with Errol, previous to returning to Hollywood She left according to plan—not hastily or in anger.

Does Flynn like to show off pictures of his children just like any other father?

Judging from the pictures I have seen of him posed with them, and his comments, yes.

Why did Flynn halt his trip and loan his boat to a movie company?

He is a good business man. A trip such as he undertook, what with extra expenses that were not anticipated, costs around $3,000 a week. Lending his yacht to the Rita Hayworth-Orson Welles company for a month was simply good business. When the rental period was over, Flynn went on from there, with a partially new crew through the Panama Canal to Jamaica and Haiti. Originally, he intended to cross the Atlantic, but this may be postponed, due to his desire to return home for the birth of the baby.

Why is it that every time Flynn seems to reach an unprecedented peak of domesticity, he takes off on some new adventure?

Errol Flynn is in a position to do what a lot of other men only dream of doing He is a rover and always will be Nora Eddington Flynn is aware of that. He may leave some day and not come back.

Does Nora Flynn live at Flynn's home or elsewhere?

Obviously. As I write this, I just finished talking to her on the telephone via Errol's private number. But I make it a rule never to give out phone numbers of movie stars, in case you don't believe it. It makes 'em furious.

Do you think Flynn will stay married?

Do I think anyone in Hollywood will stay married? In his case, I hope so. As I have observed them, they seem genuinely fond of each other. I'd say that Nora's sense of humor and spirit are a perfect match for his.

What is Flynn's physical condition?

There have been many rumors about this, due to the many times he has been seriously ill. I wouldn't ask any man to answer this question for publication so refrained from asking Flynn when I saw him, the day before he sailed. He looked fit. Several years ago there was a published report quoting a doctor who said he had enlargement of the heart due to excessive athletics. If true, that needn't be too serious.

Is Flynn a publicity seeker?

He is as aware of publicity as any other actor, but grants interviews with more reluctance than most. The headlines he makes usually have been the result of his living just as he pleases and not pulling punches as most prominent actors do.

Can he really write?

Yes. He did collaborate with professional writers early in his career on stories that appeared under his name. This is a common practice. I believe that he has stifled the feeling he had that he himself was not a professional writer. In other words, he writes his own stuff now

Can he really fight?

Pretty well. He was good even before he took lessons from professionals. I wouldn't suggest that any big boys try to take him on in a night club. Some have tried—ouch!

Where does Flynn live?

In a white, rather stately house which looks like Georgian architecture, once removed. The house is on top of a mountain called a hill in Hollywood, and sits back off Mulholland Drive. The grounds aren't too attractive at the moment because Flynn has recently paid little attention to his stables and kennels which now need painting.

Did Errol and Ann Sheridan ever have a romance?

They have both denied it, and had to many times since they happened to be in Acapulco, Mexico, at the same time a few years ago. Then, Flynn said, "We are friends, and could never be serious together. If we tried, we'd probably break out laughing in the middle of a kiss."

Is Errol less impetuous than when he was younger?

Probably. A man is by no means old at 38 (I hope). I'd say that he has mellowed a little. I suspect he will never change radically, and like any other man, will always like a little "helraisin" occasionally.

What do you think of Nora Eddington Flynn?

She is an exceedingly well-bred, attractive girl. Uncommonly pretty in a manner not common to over-glamorized women who couldn't possibly achieve an equal appeal, particularly for men who like her type.

Are Flynn and his father buddies?

Not in an overly sentimental sense. There is a deep attachment there. They respect each other.

What do you think of Flynn?

In my book, he is a good guy.

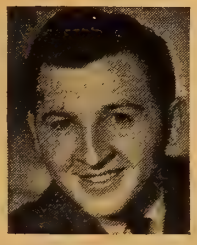
Do you think he is a fine actor?

It depends, as it does in the case of any other actor, on the role. I don't think Flynn, by virtue of the type of pictures the public likes to see him in, fancies himself as the blood brother to an Academy Award. He just does his job.

Will Flynn resent this frank discussion of his personal affairs?

If he does, he can punch me on the nose. (He has to catch me first!)

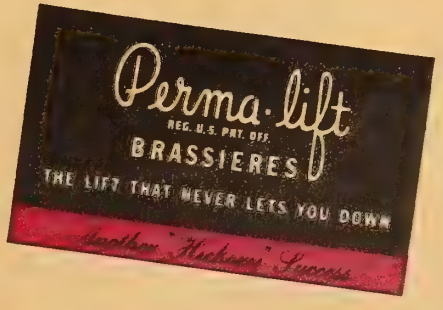
I SAW IT HAPPEN

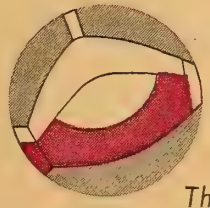


I'd like to say a word or two for Eddie Bracken. During his tour of the Pacific with a USO troupe, Eddie insisted that the GIs have first preference to all available seats during his performance. At a Saipan theater, he noticed that a large section of seats was roped off for officers, despite the fact that many enlisted men were standing. Because many seats were empty, Eddie requested that the men who were standing be permitted to use those seats. But his request was refused. For this reason, Eddie cancelled the show. The Mid-Pacific edition of "The Stars and Stripes" (our Army paper) in Honolulu printed the story and subsequently received many letters from GIs favoring Eddie's walkout. On his way back to California, Eddie dropped in at our "Star and Stripes" office and we were delighted to shake hands with a guy who really lived democracy.

Sgt. James Lyman
Honolulu, Hawaii

THE LIFT THAT NEVER LETS YOU DOWN





There's magic in your "Perma·lift"* Bra—the magic of comfortable uplift. In a "Perma·lift" Bra, the specially constructed cushion insets at the base of the bra cups gently support your bust from below—never lose that support thru ever so many washings and wearings. Your favorite corsetiere has a "Perma·lift" Bra for you—smartly styled in lovely new fabrics—most styles 1.75 to 3.50. • For a real comfort thrill, you'll also enjoy a new "Perma·lift" Girdle. No Bones About It—Stays Up Without Stays.

*"Perma·lift" and "Hickory" are trademarks of A. STEIN & COMPANY (Reg. U.S. Pat. Off.)

He'll love you in this ROMANTIC AZTEC PRINT
Koffee Koat
ONLY $6.50 PLUS POSTAGE

Sizes 12 to 20

STYLED IN HOLLYWOOD

Charm your favorite man just like the gorgeous Hollywood Stars do . . . in this new unusual South of the Border Koffee Koat . . . a tantalizing Latin print unlike anything you've ever seen before, tailored of super quality sanforized washable cotton Balloon Cloth. Two tier Rhumba ruffles, sarong drape, and tie side wrap around. Gay colors of Maize, Aqua, and Copen that he'll be sure to admire. Just the thing for your gift list too!

FOR PROMPT DELIVERY RUSH THIS COUPON

PARADE FASHIONS, INC.

332 So. Michigan Ave., Chicago 4, Ill., Dept. 8

Please send me_____Koffee Koats at $6.50 each plus postage.

Circle sizes wanted: 12, 14, 16, 18, 20.

☐ Maize ☐ Copen blue ☐ Aqua
(Mark first and second color choice)

☐ Money Order ☐ Check ☐ C. O. D.
(Please do not send cash)

Name_____

Street_____

City_____ Zone_____ State_____

Save 30c C.O.D. charge by mailing money order or check for amount plus 20c postage. In Illinois add 2% sales tax.

CLUB CAULFIELD

(Continued from page 44)

Paul's of an afternoon, and having two sisters called Betty and Mary. And not being allowed to wear lipstick until she was fifteen (and then only a little dab of pink pomade) and having to ring the doorbell to get in after a date because her father wouldn't let her have a house key till she was eighteen! It couldn't have happened to Theda Bara or Lana Turner, I betcha. But it happened to Joan.

The only unusual thing about our family at all was our dog, Sunnymead Lady. She was a German short-haired pointer of which there were only sixty-three in the country. Of course she won dozens of blue ribbons in the dog shows, for she'd rarely have any competition. Oh, she did lend us an air all right. I mean there's something about owning a German short-haired pointer. As I say, she was our one oddity.

Not that the Club Caulfield was dull, you understand. Just kinda normal. Smoking out the bath-room window, tiffing over borrowed clothes, that sort of thing. Like the Saturday afternoon that an absolutely divine boy called me up and invited me to the local football game. I was about fourteen and devoid of any really gorgeous sweaters, whereas Joan was just loaded with them. Joan was out, but I got mom to say it would be all right if I borrowed one, provided I took good care of it. I chose a soft blue and a nice tweed skirt, slung on her three-strand pearls, a pair of moccasins, and off I flew. I simply murdered the boy, I was such a dream. He couldn't take his eyes off me. Drunk with power, I steered him into Paul's—and there she was. She made a bee-line for our table, eyes flashing.

goodbye, romance . . .

"You've got on my sweater, Betty Caulfield. My best." She hissed the "S" in best. "And my skirt and my pearls." I was so humiliated, so downright crushed I couldn't speak. But turnabout was fair play—because only a few weeks ago, Joan had done the same thing to me! She spun around and left us, and when I gazed across at my date he practically had his teeth in his hands, he was so amazed at the whole business. I couldn't seem to regain my poise after that, and he never darkened our doorstep again.

Joan fouled up another romance for me—not on purpose, I must admit—but at the time that didn't make much difference. I was sure my heart was broken. One of my beaux had gotten a job in Syracuse or some place, and he'd come to say goodbye to me. I was playing very, very hard to get. Giving him no inkling at all that I absolutely drooled for him. And he was promising to write often, to come to New York every chance he got. And then Joan had to appear and sit down with us.

"How could you leave this lovely child to sob her heart out over you?" she asked him. "How could you go to Syracuse?" The boy looked from Joan to me.

"Well, gee," he said, "well—oh gee—" And presently he bolted. Golly, I was mad.

All has long since been forgiven, because Joan actually taught me all my technique with Men.

"Remember," she informed me, "the rougher you treat them, the better they like you." It was pretty infallible, and jeepers how the lads loved her. She was sort of the belle of the family. Stinkweed (that's Mary), and I were no drips, understand, but Joan was really the spectacular one. The Babe. She played beautiful tennis and had a terrific sense of humor, and

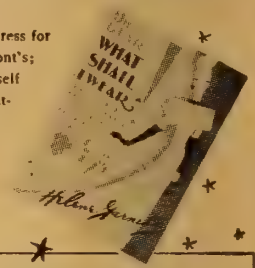
How to dress like a million for $1.50

You're in the know from head to toe when you read "Oh Dear what shall I Wear!" by famed designer Helen Garnell, formerly with Jean Patou.

Shows you how to plan your costume as a whole before you buy a part. Eliminates shopping mistakes and money wasted on mismatched dresses, hats and accessories.

Your clothing budget can be less, but you can be better dressed.

The complete guide to dress for every occasion; do's and dont's; how to shop and put yourself together. This new fascinating book is completely illustrated; 120 pages.



Only $1.50 postpaid. Send check or m. o. to:

THE DALES
Booksellers to Smart Women
3066-B W. 7th St., Los Angeles 5, Calif.

Skintees FOR THE CURVES YOU COVET

Skintees in the individual sanitary wrapper

FITS LIKE YOUR SKIN

Fluffy little whimsies — rose-petal soft and wee as a wink. SKINTEES knit panties accent your contours by banishing bulges and fabric wrinkles. The secret? A precise system of sizing based on your own hip measurements - in - inches. An explanatory certificate guarantee enclosed in each cellophaned garment takes the guess out of panty buying.

*Reg. Trade Mark Dept. US

A. H. SCHREIBER CO. INC.
10 W. 33rd St., New York 1

I, too, crave beautiful contours like the SKINTEES Girl. Send me FREE booklet on Figure Control.

NAME_____

STREET_____ STATE_____

CITY_____

then she looked so darned wonderful. There was one time, though, that I recall, with slightly fiendish glee, when slow-but-sure won the race.

We had gone away to the lake for the summer, and after casing the place for a day or two, Joan and Mary discovered this perfectly magnificent guy and simultaneously fell for him. The day after the discovery, Joan was up bright and early, dressed for action. She went down to the beach, and he was there. First she walked around a little bit. Then she swam. Then she dove; and after that she rowed a boat about a thousand knots an hour. Along about noon Mary appeared, with a magazine and a knitting bag. While Joan knocked herself out, Mary basked and knitted. The night the guy came over to our house, I opened the door and was all set to yell, "Jo-an," when he spoke. "Is Mary home?" is what he said. We still kid Joan about that one.

Gosh, we used to have a lot of fun. And drive each other crazy. F'rinstance. The doorbell would ring, and I would know it was Joan's date by the make of the car. I'd go to the door all smiles. Then I'd open it, peer into his face and—registering utter disgust and disappointment—murmur, "Oh." The way you would if you'd been expecting Gable and Rooney showed up. It shattered the poor boy completely and was no end of fun. The trouble was Joan would do it to my dates, too.

We were terribly critical of each other's dates. Much more so, I'm convinced, than of our own. I'd blithely go out with various sad numbers, but gee—when Mary or Joan did, I'd pounce. Joan had a repulsive fellow for a while who used to shower her with orchids and take her to fabulous restaurants. I'd say, "I would dearly love to know what you see in Orchid Joe," and she'd say, "Well, for someone who's practically going steady with Chinless Chester—" Funny, though, in a crisis, we stuck together like glue.

tears flowed like wine . . .

There was one New Year's Eve when Joan and her date didn't get home until half past three. Mother and Dad kept an anxious vigil at the window from one o'clock on, and by the time Joan and swain arrived, they were in a state. Daddy called the boy into the living room. "Young man—" he boomed, strictly like something out of a Booth Tarkington novel. Whereupon Joan began to bawl, and Mary and I, eavesdropping from above, began to bawl too. We boycotted Daddy for days.

For that matter, we were always pretty sold on mother and daddy, but when we really knew they were something special was when Joan decided that she wanted to go on the stage. There were no scenes, no pleadings. If that was what she really wanted to do, they were all for it. So when she was seventeen, Joan went to Columbia University and took all the dramatic courses she could carry, in addition to a complete secretarial course. She loathed the typing and shorthand and absolutely ate up the drama. When they put on their first play she was beside herself with excitement, and so were we. The play was The Drunkard, and Joan was the leading female. Maybe you remember the story. It is an old-time melodrama, corny as anything, and no doubt if anyone besides Joan had been in it, it would have struck us very funny. However, it made us furious when the audience howled over "Father, dear father, come home with me now," drowning out half of Joan's lines. There was a group of particularly loud and obnoxious boys in front of us, and we stood their kibitzing as long as we could. Then we leaned over and said, "We are trying to hear our sister, if you don't

BESTFORM

BESTFORM ~ GIRDLES . . BRAS . . ALL-IN-ONES

CLEAN HAIR
in 10 minutes
WITHOUT WATER

★ No soap • No rinsing • No drying
★ Removes oil, dirt, hair odors
★ Retains wave; restores sheen
★ Grand between water shampoos
★ Ideal during colds and illness

30 SHAMPOOS WITH MITT 1.00 Plus tax,
At all good drug and department stores.

MINIPOO
DRY SHAMPOO

Cosmetic Distributors, Inc., Jersey City 6, N. J.

HOLD YOUR HAIR WITHOUT A CARE

ORIGINAL GRIP-TUTH
Hair-tainer
HOLDS BETTER ★ IS BETTER

25¢
THE SPRING-TOOTH Grips HOLDS Every COIFFURE FIRM

AT BEAUTY SALONS AND NOTION COUNTERS

YOUR DREAM DRESS WITH

Exquisite Lace Applique

Yards and yards of softly unpressed pleats all around the skirt. Adorable bell sleeves just the right length for warm days ahead. Beautiful white lace, appliqued like the most expensive couturier model. Of Rosewood's Rioboma, a zephyr weight rayon linen. In aqua, blue, maize and pink. Sizes 10–18; 9–17. UNUSUAL AT $12.95

FULL SATISFACTION OR MONEY BACK

TAGIL OF N. Y. Dept. 538
1186 Broadway, N. Y. 1, N. Y.

Please send me Full Skirted Dress.....
Size..... 1st color..... 2nd.....
Check or Money Order..... C.O.D.....
My name .....
Address .....
City..... State.....
Send for our pamphlet of graduation formals.

mind." Oh, golly, we were stuffy. Sarah Bernhard's sisters, if any, couldn't have hung more on her words. We went to that thing fifteen nights in a row and were thrilled to our toes every time.

After two years at Columbia and coaching with Claudia Franck, who now has to struggle with poor me, Joanie left school and went job-hunting along Broadway; came up with a modelling job, and not so long after that with the lead in Kiss and Tell.

She didn't have an agent or anything, you know. She just walked into George Abbott's office stone cold and asked for a chance to try out—and got the part! It was a bit of a tussle, actually, because F. Hugh Herbert, who wrote Kiss and Tell had always thought of Corliss Archer as a brunette. For a long time he couldn't see Joan in the part. Opening night, he came around backstage to see Joan. "I should have known Corliss just couldn't have been anything but a blonde," he said. Pretty cute of him, we thought.

Opening night, gosh, that was wonderful! I'd never seen a rehearsal because I wanted the fun of seeing the play for the first time with a big audience and lemonade in the intermissions and all the trimmings. I'm awfully glad I waited, and I just wish there was some way of telling you what a very large charge it was seeing Joan on the stage and knowing she was good. I kept thinking, that's Joan Caulfield who shares my bedroom and wears my perfume. My own sister. And it's a silly thing, but I wanted to cry, I was so proud, so sort of hurting proud.

those beautiful reviews . . .

After that first performance was over, we went back to her dressing room and hugged her, and then daddy and Mary and I went home, and Joan and mother went on to a party for the cast. In the small hours the phone rang, and it was mom, all breathless and soft-voiced. "We've just seen the reviews," she said. "They're beautiful." And Mary and I looked at each other, the whole miraculous business hitting us again. Our sister.

"Gee," Mary said. "Reviews, yet!" Oh, opening night was terrific.

I went to see the play two or three times a week, and somewhere along the line I got stagestruck. Absolutely nutty crazy stagestruck. I learned Joan's part, and then by hook and by crook I got to be her understudy. After that there was nothing to do but sit around and wait for her to come down with yellow fever or something. "How do you feel?" I'd asked her casually. "You look a little pale-ish."

"I feel fine," she'd say firmly. "Just dandy."

One of the girls got a cold eventually, and I had her part for a month, and then finally Old Ironsides did turn her ankle, and I was Corliss for one exquisite night.

It was my first appearance on the stage, but I didn't muff a line, and the audience laughed in all the right places, and when I went to the dressing-room I was in a pink glow of excitement and joy. In a few minutes there was a knock on the door, and it was George Abbott.

"Betty," he said. "You just aren't Corliss. I can't ever let you go on again."

I said, "Okay, Mr. Abbott," and that was all I could say just then without disgracing myself. When he left Joan put her arms around me.

"He talks like that, Betty. It's his way. Why, you know what he said to me yesterday? 'What have you got—bats in your belfry?' It's his way. Sweetie, don't you mind." But I did mind, like mad.

Then suddenly, Joan got her movie contract, and they needed a new Corliss. I swallowed my pride and begged for another chance, and Jessie Royce Landis (the mother in Kiss and Tell) told Mr. Abbott she'd coach me every spare minute, and she did. What an angel of a woman! And in the end I was Corliss—and played it for a whole year!

It was wonderful, but it was lonesome without Joan. I missed her bounce and her Lou Holtz imitations and her clutter in our room. Her letters helped. Sometimes I'd read them on the Madison Avenue bus, and people would peer at me when I'd chuckle and chortle over them. "They're pulling out all my teeth and changing the color of my eyes," she'd write. Then, right after that she'd write: (joke). Just as if we didn't know. When she wrote that they were changing her hairdo, I thought that that too was (joke), but actually they have done that, and it makes her look much, much smoother. She'd write and tell us what stars she saw and whether they were all so all-fired glamorous. And she'd send along clippings from the gossip columns like the one that practically had her at the altar. "This after one date," she scribbled on it.

greek spoken here . . .

The summer after Joan and Mom went to California, Daddy and I went out for a visit. It was so much fun, and it was nice to find her so exactly the same. Except of course, for the new coiffure. She was working at the time and when I'd visit on the set I was terribly impressed with her cleverness at understanding the absolute Greek everyone spoke.

"We'll dolly up on this shot," the director would say, and Joan wouldn't bat an eye. Seems all he meant was, "This will be a close-up." Some friend of hers dropped in one afternoon and, with no build-up whatsoever, said, "Say Joan, where are they?" Quick as a flash Joan said. "They're all in there. They're at the post." After which they went on to talk of other things.

"What was all that?" I asked her later. "That 'They're at the post' business?"

"Oh, just race-trackese," she said. "That's how they talk out here. The climate makes you slightly nuts."

Just this last winter, Joan and Mom (whom we call Cushions) returned to New York for a visit. It was so elegant, showing Joan off to my friends and borrowing all her snappy new clothes.

It was like old times sitting up half the night talking about boys and life. Joan

I SAW IT HAPPEN

It was May, 1940, after the matinee performance of Romeo and Juliet in New York. The stars were being mobbed at the stage door. When I couldn't get anywhere near them, I handed my playbill to the tall young man who was coming through the stage door. He hesitated to sign it, until I said, "Well, you were in it too! I remember you in Act II, a lovely duelling scene!" He signed the program and smiled as he walked off. Someone next to me said, "Who was that?" I looked to see what he'd written, and there across the front of my program was a name that means much more today than it did then: Cornel Wilde.

Lillian Shay
New York, New York

had a big crush on a lad about that time, and the problem was how to make him fall for her. I said, "Why Joan, that's elementary. You know perfectly well that the rougher you treat them the—" Something in her eyes stopped me. "Only when you really like them, it's different, isn't it?" she said. "Remember Mary and David? When she fell in love with him, she couldn't kick him around." (Stinkweed got married, I forgot to tell you. To the most adorable guy. But the most adorable guy.)

"That's right," I said. "It's funny. All the hard and fast rules that used to be so foolproof don't always work any more, when you really care about the guy."

"Maybe that's growing up," Joanie said. "Finding out that things aren't always black or white. Finding out that you really don't know all the answers. . . ."

puttin' on the ritz . . .

After she'd been home a couple of days I forgot that we were harboring a celebrity. We tramped around New York in polo coats and moccasins, and no doubt the autograph hounds thought we were one of their league. We even went to the Plaza for tea with bandanas on our heads and bobby sox. I took one look at her across the table. "You don't look like anyone who's just inherited Marlene Dietrich's dressing-room," I said. She made a face at me, as though it didn't matter at all.

"You ought to see how fancy I can look, squirt," she told me. And one night she really did lay it on, and she really did look supreme. Daddy took us to the Stork Club, just to show her off, I'm convinced; and that night they asked for autographs. Did they ask for them.

Just before she went back to California we took a flying visit to North Carolina in the new Buick convertible Joan gave Mom for Christmas. (She gave me a beautiful watch, by the way.) Mary and David live down there, and we were all dying to see them. We took turns driving, and when it was Joan's turn, she'd tear along, but when it was my turn she'd sit frozen in her seat if we went over thirty miles an hour. "You see this curve, don't you? You just missed that cow. Is that a state trooper behind us?" That sort of thing. I gave up finally and let her do most of the driving. After dinner she went to sleep in my lap and at midnight we arrived. All cross as bears. All with double-feature paralysis. Mary and David were waiting for us. Sleepy, but up. And after we'd talked to them a little while, Mary said, "Come on, let's all go to bed. But first you've got to peek at little Nicotine." (That's their baby, aged almost a year.)

benzedrine next . . .

"I suppose the next one will be little Benzedrine," Joan quipped. And then we stopped talking, because we were in his room, peering into the crib. I felt all funny inside, sort of the way I'd felt seeing Joan on the stage on opening night. Tight in the throat and stuff. I tried to tell Joan about it when we were getting ready for bed, but it sounded so corny, I gave up. I contented myself with, "Hurry up and find a house big enough for all of us so we can all be together again, hey?" She got all misty-eyed, and she said, "Oh Bett, we'll hunt like mad, Mom and I. Truly we will."

And they are. I had a letter from Joan yesterday saying that they're leaving no stone unturned. So maybe we'll be moving out there soon. And oh golly, wouldn't it be wonderful. Because Joan Caulfield in Technicolor is pretty wonderful, but Joanie, the real McCoy, is strictly out of this world. And if I must say so, that's quite a compliment to get from your own sister.

Joan Hyldoft, lovely skating star of "Icetime," where the accent is on perfect form— smooth, graceful figures—and, of course, Merry-Go-Round bras.

Write today for FREE booklet, "Your New Guide to Bustline Beauty", Dept. D-1

PETER PAN BRASSIERES—GIRDLES • 116 EAST 27 ST., NEW YORK 16

Help Poor Complexion back to beauty . . .

LET NOXZEMA NURSE YOUR SKIN

Look at your skin. Other people do! Is its natural beauty blurred by dryness, roughness, unattractive skin blemishes?

Then do as thousands of nurses do. Depend on Noxzema Medicated Skin Cream! It works for you 24 hours a day . . . as a long-lasting powder base, and as a greaseless night cream. See how quickly this medicated formula soothes and helps soften rough, dry skin . . . helps heal externally-caused blemishes!

Noxzema is a nurses' beauty discovery which is relied on by millions and millions of women. Start to let Noxzema help nurse your skin back to natural beauty. Get your jar today!

Over 20,000,000 jars bought yearly. At all drug counters. 35¢ and 50¢ plus tax.

Ladies, accept this challenge

Dry Clean at Home

• BLOUSES • DRESSES

- Slacks
- Neckties
- Sweaters
- Skirts
- Fabric Gloves
- Slip Covers
- Rugs
- Curtains
- Drapes
- Upholstery

Expert Results or DOUBLE YOUR MONEY BACK!

What a chance to discover Renuzit, America's Largest Selling French Dry Cleaner! Try it to dry clean your lovely dresses, blouses or other pretties. See how easy it is to "dip and rinse"—how much money you save—what expert results you get! With the "Double Money-Back Guarantee"—use it according to directions—if not completely satisfied, return the unused portion to Renuzit Home Products Company, Phila. 3, Pa., and receive double the price.

1 gal. . . 79¢ 2 gal. . . $1.55
Slightly Higher West of Rocky Mts.

Everything Comes Clean With RENUZIT
FRENCH DRY CLEANER

For Hard to Remove Spots!
NEW! RENUZIT SPOT AND STAIN REMOVER
Fruit, Chocolate, Lipstick, Grease and almost all other oil and water soluble spots!

the fans

MODERN SCREEN FAN CLUB ASSOCIATION • SHIRLEY FROHLICH, DIRECTOR

HOLLYWOOD PARTY: Some time at the end of June, there's going to be a mass migration of fan clubbers to the film capital. And here's what's in store for them: a whole week of radio parties, theater parties, visits to the studios, a big tea at the Ambassador Hotel and —as a climax—a formal dinner-dance at Ciro's! Of course, there'll be an open forum, too, where each delegate will have a chance to sound off on the ways-and-means of improving clubs! Ellen Roufs and a staff of Coast prexies are engineering this Convention and among those on the honorary committee are June Allyson, Rand Brooks, Rosemary DeCamp, Nina Foch, Andrea King, Dick Powell, Ronald Reagan, Marshall Reed, John Ridgely, Eddie Ryan, Richard Travis and Jane Wyman! Even if you won't be able to attend, you can still share part of the fun, for there's a nation-wide raffle, with proceeds going to the Cancer Fund. Tickets are 25c each and all the snazzy luxury prizes—costume jewelry, leather purses, cameras, etc. —have been donated by the stars. Write to: Hollywood Party, 427 West 5 Street, Suite 707, Los Angeles 13, Calif., for tickets. And here's a special surprise: One month before the Convention, there'll be a drawing—winner to receive a FREE PLANE TRIP to and from L.A.!

FEDERATION: Following the trend toward Federation are the Frank Sinatra and James Mason Clubs. Forty of Frank's most active clubs will be organized into a Guild; receive monthly bulletins, notes from Frank, participate in one big charity drive a year (selected by popular vote). There'll be contests, too! Under plans worked out with Mason, Leona Rosenthal's and Miriam Strausberg's N. Y. clubs will serve as joint-headquarters for disseminating news, photos; while all clubs will unite for publicity drives, request campaigns, parties, etc. Each club, however, will have equal representation in the Federation Council and take turns editing the Federation Quarterly.

CALLING ALL SMITHERINES: Jack Smith gave us this news "in person," when we sat in on his Oxidol show rehearsal. You know how each club puts out a journal for its star? Well, Jack is turning tables and putting out a special journal for all his clubbers! Of course, they'll continue to get out their own papers, too! And here's a special invitation from Jack to all MSFCA-ites visiting N. Y.: there'll be tickets to his Monday-to-Friday early evening show waiting for you! Ask at front desk, CBS studio, 52nd St. (bet. Madison and Park Aves.).

CLUB BANTER: If there's a talent-group in your club, here's a chance to get needed experience—and perform a worthwhile service, too: In honor of National Laugh Week (April 1 to 8), the Nat. Laugh Week Foundation is sponsoring talent shows (recruited from fan clubs, high schools, Boy Scouts and other groups) at nearby civilian, veterans' and children's hospitals. If you want to volunteer, write immediately to National Laugh Week Foundation, 347 Madison Avenue, New York 17, N. Y. They'll tell you how to work up a show, send you suitable script material (at your request), and arrange for your hospital appearance . . . Pearl Tice (514 Arch Street, Perkasie, Pa.), who needs no introduction, is taking over that defunct Calif. Alan Ladd C. Pearl is reorganizing from scratch, with Alan's approval and, although the old club's assets were nil, she'll make what we think is an equitable adjustment for all who renew or re-join . . . Congratulations to Glenna Riley's Jeanette MacDonald C., celebrating its 15th anniversary; and to Marion Hesse's Ginger Rogers C., on their 13th! . . . Gwen Littlefield, famous prexy of the Allyson C., and Buddy Roufs, son of the equally famous Ellen, have announced their engagement . . . Doris Anderson (Sinatra's Fellow Swooners) won a scholarship to Wayne University . . . Mary Piancone's Sinatra C. discovered they used up their journals to talk about Frank, so they're getting out two supplements annually, devoted to the club and members . . . English branch of Helen Milton's Victor Jory C., is starting a lending library (modeled after Jane Wyman Club's) . . . Joan Crawford's visit East kept Edith Clemens, prexy, busy, helping Joan shop, first-nighting, etc. . . . Helen Smolensky won a trip to Grand Ole Opry, as guest of honorary Ernest Tubb . . . Ann Papparello's Margaret Whiting Clubbers were March of Dimes volunteers for N. Y. headquarters . . . New Stars C. (Iris Archambault) is sending each prospective member a sample journal . . . We like For Men Only in (Dick) Haymes Herald . . . Helmut Dantine invited each N. Y. clubber to the opening of his play, The Eagle Has Two Heads.

TROPHY CUP CONTEST: Winners for February (2nd lap). "This Is My Best" (articles and poems from your journals). Each gal receives a lovely gift of Faberge's tweedy, delightful "Woodhue" Perfume and Cologne; Frank, a bottle of refreshing Woodhue Men's Cologne. Each club, 100 pts.: Katie Green, "Salute To World," Great (Lizabeth) Scott; Frank Dowling, "Television Soon," Cass' (Daley) Columns; Imogene Greene, "You Gotta Be Nice," Glenn's (Vernon) Book (McCarthy); Lee Garber, "I Wonder," Winsocki Kid (Tommy Dix); Elsa Linke, "What Constitutes a Good Fan Club," (Victor) Jory-ful Echoes; Elizabeth Ottilege, "Entertaining Servicemen," The OK Kid (Curley Bradley). CANDID CAMERA CONTEST: (First prize, handsome leather Tangee Trip Kit, brimming with Tangee's superb makeup aids; 100 pts. to clubs) Mary Spoulos, June Allyson C. Others: (gift package of four super Dell Mystery Books; 50 pts. to clubs) Lee Garber, Tommy Dix C.; R. and J. Mottola, Nelson Eddy Music C.; Ena Svedise, Joe Calleia C.; Anna Hreba, John Ridgely C.; Elsie Ellovich, Louise Erickson C. BEST ORIGINAL PIECE OF ART (in journal): One year's sub to: FRONT PAGE DETECTIVE and SCREEN ALBUM Mags., and four Dell Mysteries, PLUS 150 pts. for club: Pete Larney, Tommy Dorsey C. BEST EDITORS: (No League One entries were received in our offices this month). Beautiful assortment of Pond's wonderful cosmetics, especially packaged for winners; 250 pts. to clubs: 2. Marion Hesse, Ginger's (Rogers) Gems; 3. Amena Peacock, Portrait of Vincent Price. BEST JOURNALS: (500 pts.; no entries in L. 1) 2. (Larry) Douglas Highlights; 3. Basil's (Rathbone) Blue Book. BEST COVERS: (250 pts.; no entries L. 1) 2. Jive (Bob Crosby); 3. OK Kid (Curley Bradley). WORTHWHILE ACTIVITIES: (250 pts. to clubs) 1. Gene Autry C. ($150 to Gene for favorite charity; chapter gifts, visits to hospitals). 2. Jeanette MacDonald C. (Waddy) ($50 to CARE to feed Europe). 3. (tied) Jan Clayton C. ($60 to Nat. Tuberculosis Assn.). Sinatra (Piancone) ($30, Sister Kenny). Frances Langford ($42 divided among Salvation Army, Sister Kenny, Tuberculosis Seals). LARGEST PERCENTAGE INCREASE IN MEMBERSHIP: (100 pts.) 1. Rex Allan C. 2. Alan Ladd C. (Spungin). 3. John Lund C. BEST CLUB CORRESPONDENTS: (50 pts.) 1. Berenice Olson, Autry C. 2. Betty Sue Dorris, Pee Wee King C. 3. Violet Theisen, Jimmy Morgan C. LEADING CLUBS SO FAR: 1. Eddy Music, 750; Dennis Morgan, 650; Guy Madison, Autry, 300. 2. Charles Korvin, Larry Douglas, 600; Scott McKay, Ginger Rogers, Bob Crosby, 350. 3. Sinatra (Beattie), Basil Rathbone, 600; Curley Bradley, 450; Ladd (Pearl), Keenan Wynn, Sinatra (Piancone), Jan Clayton, Vincent Price, 350.

—that Always-Fresh look...

"Try my beauty-freshener . . . Woodbury Complete Beauty Cream beautifies skin as it cleanses," says Beverly Tyler

featured in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "THE BEGINNING OR THE END"

WOODBURY Complete BEAUTY CREAM { Beautifies as it cleanses. Contains four rich oils to soften and smooth tiny dry-skin lines.

around the clock... this Woodbury-Wonderful Way!

8 A. M. Morning, beautiful!... Skin a-bloom, Bev reports for film-full day. "Bright and early, I date with Woodbury," she says. "Cream-cleanse my skin so-o smooth." Be as beauty smart, girls . . . this Woodbury-Wonderful care really beautifies!

7 P. M. Evening, lovely! High spot of a night spot is Beverly . . . with her "Always-Fresh Look"! "Skin sparkles," she says, "after Woodbury-cream-cleansing. A second film is my make-up base!" Easy to revive skin beauty with Woodbury!

That "Always-Fresh Look" this Woodbury-Wonderful Way

Cleanse with Woodbury Complete Beauty Cream. Tissue off. Repeat creaming for plus-softening. Tissue. Splash with cold water—skin glows with that "Always-Fresh Look"!

FOR SPECIAL SKIN PROBLEMS

Very Dry Skin: First Woodbury cream-cleanse. Soften with Woodbury Special Dry Skin Cream—rich in lanolin's benefits! Under make-up, Woodbury Creampuff Powder Base.

Oily Skin: Woodbury Liquefying Cleansing Cream—melts on skin. Finish with Woodbury Vanishing Facial Cream to check shine. Stericin in all Woodbury Creams helps purify against blemish-causing germs.

11 P. M. Goodnight, sweet!.. "Before dreams, I cleanse with Woodbury," says Bev. "Then my Beauty Nightcap . . . a Woodbury cream-mist to soften while I sleep!" Four rich oils soften, beautify. It's Woodbury ... for that "Always-Fresh Look"!

Those BAD DAYS CAN BE GOOD DAYS

MIDOL

RELIEVES FUNCTIONAL PERIODIC PAIN

CRAMPS-HEADACHE-"BLUES"

PERSONAL SAMPLE—In plain envelope. Write Dept. C-47, Room 1418, 41 East 42nd St., New York 17, N. Y.

DOROTHY KILGALLEN SELECTS "THE BEST YEARS OF OUR LIVES"

(Continued from page 14)

—after they return from the war to their town and their families.

What happens to these heroes is good and bad. It is not exaggerated into a painful documentary object lesson; it is not minimized into a wishful slice of Pollyanna. It is just told the way things are, the way they happen to soldiers and sailors and marines in big towns and small towns, and the way they are still happening right now—the unfaithful wives, the faithful ones, the hard-to-get jobs, the hard-to-get loans, the wanted love, the unwanted pity.

I sat next to a veteran at the film's preview, and when it was over he said, "You believe it's true but you couldn't know how true unless you'd been in the service. Some of these things happened to every fellow who ever got out of the army."

But for all its needed "message," for all its great psychological information service to the families of the land, The Best Years Of Our Lives is never a preachment. It is just an excellent piece of entertainment, sometimes sad, often very funny, sensitively directed with the sympathetic, amusing and recognizable details that Hollywood loves to call "great touches," and played by a cast that could not have been improved. The minor characters—Ray Collins, Charles Halton, Hoagy Carmichael—are as fine as the stars, and the stars are Myrna Loy and Fredric March and Dana Andrews and Teresa Wright at their very best.

It is only natural that most audiences should go out talking most about a new face in the picture—the face of a boy called Harold Russell who has no hands, only hooks that he uses with amazing dexterity. He is, of course, a genuine veteran, young and amiable and optimistic, with an undercurrent of unquenchable grit. This is his first picture, and they say it will be his last.

But you will remember him for a long, long time.

6 TO 5 ON JONES!

(Continued from page 38)

elegance, that "Mainbocher look" that comes from running around with Anita Colby. I had to do a double take before I could realize that this was the bedraggled girl whom I had seen playing the halfbreed siren, Pearl Chavez, in Duel.

"You look so different," I said. "I mean from the last time I saw you."

"Let's see, just when was that?" Jennifer inquired.

"Why, you were shooting it out with Gregory Peck, remember, up there among those Arizona rocks."

"Well, I've been on a buying spree in New York," she confided. "I went back there as soon as we finished the picture to get the desert out of my system. It was weeks before I got my nails to look like anything human. The desert is a fierce place."

My interview with Jennifer really turned out to be an experience. In the middle of our talk the phone rang and it was the captain from the Los Angeles homicide squad. I had rushed out to Selznick's from working all night and all day on our recent murder horror, the torture killing of pretty Elizabeth Short, the girl they called the "Black Dahlia." I heard the new developments in the case, hurriedly phoned them to New York, and returned to Jennifer, who sat fascinated.

"Think of such a fiend running loose," she cried in horror.

"You certainly did a thoroughly realistic job on Pearl Chavez," I reminded her. "Tell me just how you did it."

For the first time in her career, Jennifer then led me behind the scenes, so to speak, so that I could view at first hand the mental workings of the star who is hailed as one of the great all-time talents developed in Hollywood.

"I sort of hypnotize myself," she explained. "I find myself really living the roles I play. I've read about the East Indian fakirs and mystics who are able to throw themselves into a trance, and I think that my own mental state is something like a trance when I'm acting. If anything else, any outside thought or impulse, disturbs the spell by intruding into my consciousness, I have to break off and start all over again."

I was reminded of something King Vidor told me of his experience with Jennifer while directing her in Duel in the Sun.

"Every morning, while making Duel, we would start the day by talking about the story and the characters and the action coming up. She would fix those luminous, intelligent eyes on my face. I could actually see her gradually becoming Pearl Chavez. Jennifer Jones would disappear as completely as if she had never existed.

"Trying to maintain it through the lunch hour was too much. Conversation with me and others always snapped the string. And when we went back to work we'd have to do it all over again."

I don't believe Robert Walker, to whom Jennifer was married, whom she loved wildly as a young girl, and who fathered her two sons, ever had a full awareness of her. Sometimes I wonder if her father, Phil Iseley, the bluff, hearty, outspoken Thespian who became a rich owner of film theaters, does not sometimes look at this amazing child of his in wonder.

Dave Selznick is the only man who understands Jennifer with an unerring instinct, I believe, because he himself, like her, has lived his life under the whiplash of a driving urge. This is a man whom I have known somewhat closely for nearly twenty years. I have watched him in his fevers of creation. He is not a man who is gaited to carry out the will of others but only to obey heedlessly the imperious urge within himself. Fully aware that he is a creator, he moves on to his destiny unsparing of himself or others, with the appearance of arrogance. But those who work with him know that it is a privilege.

David created the Jennifer Jones of today. He breathed life into her, fanned the flame of talent with which she was born into a mighty blaze, as surely as the sculptor Pygmalion breathed life into his creation, Galatea.

Shall we say that David Selznick loves Jennifer Jones? I do not know. But I do know that his feeling for her as an artist verges upon worship. So powerful is the personality of Selznick that he appears to take possession of the lives of his stars.

But Jennifer has an integrity of her

(Continued on page 95)

WHICH TWIN HAS THE Toni?

Lovely Consuelo O'Connor of New York, the Toni twin, says, "My twin sister, Gloria, had a beauty shop permanent— I had a Toni Home Permanent. And none of our friends could tell which had which— can you?" (See answer below.)

You, too, will want your next wave to be a TONI Home Permanent You'll thank the lucky day you give yourself a Toni Home Permanent. For you'll discover an amazingly easy and inexpensive way to keep your hair always at its loveliest. Beautifully groomed with deep, luxurious waves . . . silky soft and natural looking. Because Toni Creme Lotion waves your hair permanently, but gently . . . leaves it frizz-free and easy to manage.

Toni works like a charm on any hair that will take a permanent — even gray, dyed, bleached or baby-fine hair. That's why every hour of the day another 1,000 women use Toni.

No trick at all to giving yourself a Toni . . . just three simple steps.

1. Roll your hair up on curlers, and dab on Toni Creme Lotion.

2. Tie a turban round your head and relax for 2 to 3 hours. (No sitting under a hot dryer.)

3. Saturate each curl with Toni Neutralizer and rinse.

Your Toni Cold Wave is finished . . . it's beautiful . . . and will last as long as a $15 permanent.

Now, while you are thinking about it, get a Toni Home Permanent Kit. On sale at all leading drug, notion and cosmetic counters.

Consuelo, the twin at the left above, is the one who has the Toni Home Permanent. Could you tell?

Listen to "Give and Take" C B S Network Every Saturday at 2 P.M., E.S.T.

$1.25 plus tax

Easy as rolling your hair up in curlers — but the wave stays in

Toni HOME PERMANENT

THE CREME COLD WAVE

Keep Fresh!

Feel Smooth!

Stay Dainty!

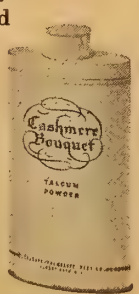
. . . with this delightfully fragrant talcum powder

KEEP FRESH: After you bathe—shower your body with Cashmere Bouquet Talc. It gives your whole person a thrilling, singing freshness.

FEEL SMOOTH: Cashmere Bouquet Talc dries up every vestige of moisture; imparts a silken smooth sheath of protection. Girdles slip on slick as a wink.

STAY DAINTY: For long lasting daintiness—use Cashmere Bouquet Talc generously and often. It points up your feminine appeal with the fragrance men love.

Pamper your person with Cashmere Bouquet Dusting Powder. Smartly packaged with a big velour puff.



Cashmere Bouquet Talc

with the fragrance men love

hands around the clock

Is there ever a time you don't want to have lovely hands? But no! Learn the way to keep 'em pretty.

By Carol Carter, Beauty Editor

■ It's fun to be a clock-watcher, particularly when "he" is to call for a seven o'clock date. You want to look scrumptious from gleaming pate to rosy fingertips. But the fingertips are going to be pretty tacky if you wait until six-forty-five to dab on polish nervously.

Thing to do is to care for your hands intelligently so that they're equal to any and every occasion. RKO's Virginia Huston agrees and very prettily went through some hand-care paces before the studio camera.

Your manicure should be unhurried. And you do have twenty or thirty minutes a week to devote to it. How about that half-hour when you listen to Bing? It will speed up matters if you keep all your manicuring things in one place, a small drawer or a special box. See to it that your working tools are in order. It's a good investment to get a really large bottle of polish remover. Don't hold on to old, dried-out bottles of polish. Toss 'em out and acquire a wardrobe of enamels.

All you really need are three basic shades of red. Have one with a blue base, one with russet tones and one that is a clear, pure red. There you are! Ready to glamourize your nails and to have them agree, not clash, with your clothes. To help your pet polish look its best there is a whole array of bases, finishing toppers and quick driers.

Of course, a manicure looks best on hands that are smooth and unchapped. Use a gentle soap at all times and dry hands thoroughly. And be sure to take Virginia's advice about daily use of hand cream and lotion. There'll never be a moment when your hands aren't gorgeous!

* * *

People were so enthusiastic about our weight-losing pamphlet that I'm offering it again this month. It is "How To Lose Weight" by Dr. E. P. Jordan, syndicated health columnist and associated editor, Journal of the Am. Medical Assn. (First offered Aug. '46.) Eat your way to a lovely figure! A recognized physician has prepared (especially for us) a scientific routine that you'll enjoy following. Send 10c to Service Department, MODERN SCREEN, 149 Madison Ave., New York 16, N.Y.

Time to lacquer nails, says Virginia (Out of the Past) Huston, is when you have leisure for a thorough job.

Work time, Virginia tells us, calls for a softening, soothing lotion to ward off all roughness and redness.

Bed time is so welcome! But spare a second for hand-cream massage. You'll rout nasty hangnails, split cuticle.

(Continued from page 92)
own that instinctively resists the obliterating of her ego; for this ego is her own self that lies at the core of her being and endows it with vibrant vitality.

Very soon after those religious protests about Duel In The Sun came out, many Hollywood columnists, myself included, began to receive anonymous letters and telegrams viciously attacking Jennifer. A well known Hollywood figure was credited with uttering a devastating wisecrack about Duel. Selznick was concerned, traced down the rumor, found it false. Soon a general impression got around that the press agent of a rival actress, also being considered for the Award, was responsible for the anti-Jennifer campaign.

oscar—wham! . . .

"How did you feel that night in 1944 when they called you up and handed you the Oscar?" I asked her.

"I'll tell you truthfully," she replied, "I think I was just numb. It all happened to me so fast I couldn't digest it mentally. I'd been trying so long and with such poor luck to get started on a career, and then all of a sudden—wham! I had success in my hands. I guess I felt like a starving person sitting down unexpectedly to a sumptuous banquet with no warning. The hungry person would gobble up the food but with no leisure or ability to savor it. That was me when I walked on that stage and accepted the little statue. It was weeks before the full significance of what had happened dawned upon me.

"If I ever am able to win another Oscar, I'll be better prepared. I'll enjoy the anticipation. I'll come up to it slowly. Perhaps I'll even be able to make a speech."

Hollywood buzzes from time to time with the story that Robert Walker never will marry again because he's still carrying the torch for Jennifer. I am not one to say that this could not be the case. Robert is a strange, moody boy. It's plain something disturbs him from time to time, otherwise how can one explain his apparent endeavors to escape from reality by disappearing to parts unknown? Perhaps Bob is trying to find himself.

Jennifer refuses pointblank to discuss the boy whom she married and divorced, although her conversation betrays that she retains a very keen and high respect for him both as man and as artist. I'm afraid I worked an old interviewer's trick on her to see if I couldn't get her off guard. I said something not quite complimentary about Bob. Instantly, she flew to his defense with fire in her eyes and wrath in her voice. "Not one of those things has a grain of truth in it," she asserted vehemently. "Bob is a very honorable person and he has high ideals."

The sons of Jennifer and Bob are Michael, now seven, and Bobby, six. They live with their mother, but Bob visits them often. There's a great mutual admiration society between Bob and his boys. They love him and think he's a great guy. "And both of them look like him," Jennifer added.

The future of Jennifer Jones can be summed up in a word, I think, and the word is—career. Just as David Selznick has an irresistible urge to create and develop great stars and screen dramas, she is irresistibly driven by an inner necessity to go on and on scaling the heights as an actress. Wonderful achievements will yet stem from the fire and flint of Jones and Selznick. I said long ago, and in print, that the marks of true greatness in her chosen profession are unquestionably on her. The screen never has had a Bernhardt. Perhaps one is in the making now. If that glory does lie in Jennifer's destiny, be assured of one thing—Selznick will not be far away.

UTTERLY NEW SHAMPOO GIVES softer, more lustrous hair

See how soft — how shining — how easy to manage your hair can be !

NOW, millions of women can have softer, more radiant and glamorous hair that's also easy to manage—thanks to a remarkable cream shampoo discovery — Lustre-Creme Shampoo by Kay Daumit!

Lustre-Creme Shampoo was created by the genius of Kay Daumit. Out of her wealth of cosmetic lore, she combined rich lanolin with special secret ingredients in an almost-magic new formula. Once you try Lustre-Creme Shampoo you'll find its abundant, pleasant lather offers these advantages—compared to soap and liquid soap shampoos you've used before.

1. Lustre-Creme Shampoo leaves hair glowing soft and brilliant, as though it had been given lots of good brushing. 2. Not drying. 3. Leaves no dulling soap film. 4. Your hair is easier to manage, easier to arrange and keep in place. 5. No vinegar or lemon rinse. 6. Works just as well in hard water.

So, no matter how you've been shampooing, you owe it to your hair to try Lustre-Creme Shampoo. See how soft, how naturally lovely, how brilliantly-alive and well-behaved your hair can be. Simple and easy to use. Economical—a little does so much. Ask for Lustre-Creme Shampoo at cosmetic counters in department and drug stores.

KAY DAUMIT, INC.
(Successor)
540 North Michigan Avenue • Chicago, Illinois

4 oz. jar $1.00 • 1 lb. jar $3.50

"Beautiful?"
"Yes! HOW MUCH?"
"GUESS!"

THE DRAPES		THE WINDOW SHADE
$25.00	?	$ 3.00
$12.95		$ 1.25
$ 4.98		$ .69
$ .98		$ .39

THE ANSWERS

THE DRAPES: They're CLOPAY Lintoned Drapes of genuine plasticized cellulose that looks and hangs like expensive cloth. They're a full 2⅔ yards long with matching tie backs, automatic pleater and reinforced edges. You'll scarcely believe it but they cost only..... 98c pr.

THE WINDOW SHADE: A CLOPAY oil finish washable shade, Lintone-processed to look like fine cloth. Ready to attach to roller without tacks or tools, only 39c

Other CLOPAY shades as low as 19c. On rollers about 20c more.

FREE BOOKLET: "Beautiful Windows at Low Cost." Write to: Clopay Corp., 1254 Clopay Square, Cincinnati 14, Ohio.

CLOPAY

Reg. U.S. Pat. Off.

At 5 and 10c Stores, Variety Stores, Department and Other Stores.

THE FIRST YEAR IS THE EASIEST

(Continued from page 36)

can have four—" He grinned at her.

Shirley dips into her own funds only for clothes, which represent professional expense. Otherwise, they live within a budget. Shirley's income is untouchable. Jack's adamant there.

As for in-laws, they happen to be blessed on both sides with the kind who keep their hands off.

It wasn't till last Christmas that the young folks had both families in to dinner. Shirley's a good cook. Most of the Christmas meal she prepared herself—hors d'oeuvres, an Agar ham, mashed and sweet potatoes, carrots and peas and hot rolls. The mince pie she bought. They were fourteen in all, and—again for the first time—Jack and Shirley sat at opposite ends of the table. Ordinarily, he sits at one end, and she at right angles.

They opened their Christmas gifts to each other alone—just the two of them on the couch by the window that overlooks the garden. Shirley gave Jack a white turtle-neck sweater, a folding pipe, some golfballs and cologne. He likes to concentrate on one gift, so he gave her golf clubs—and more about them later.

But first—that third rock—incompatibility. Otherwise known as getting in each other's hair. Here the Agars had one advantage to start with. Shirley and Jack had known each other for two and a half years. Long enough to get pretty well acquainted with the other's habits and ideas. Long enough to know that on all the important things they agreed. Naturally, they had less adjusting to do than if they'd just met a couple of months before. . .

But, of course, they sometimes get in each other's hair; they're human. But they try to be intelligent about their differences—sit down like reasonable people and talk them over. . . .

Going back to the golf clubs—Jack plays tennis but much prefers golf. Shirley doesn't play golf and loves tennis. It was all right with her when Jack went off Sunday mornings to play with her dad. She liked to sleep Sunday mornings and it was nice to think of her two men enjoying themselves together.

She didn't like it so well when they went down to Palm Springs and he played every day. Or when he and Dad spent hours rehashing their shots. Or when he got home so tired that after dinner he'd fall asleep in a chair. Or when he'd shove all the furniture to the middle of the room, plant her best measuring cup by the door and putt to it.

"You angry about my golf?" he asked one day. She nodded.

He pulled her down in the chair beside him. "State your case, madam—"

She stated it. He said, "You've got something there. How'd you like to learn golf?"

She burst out laughing at his technique. Like having some man pick your pocket, then turn around and ask how you'd like to learn pocket-picking.

Having restored her to good humor, Jack went on from there. "Look, honey, you're right. I've been overdoing it. From now on I'll quit before getting too tired and —suppose I use your second-best measuring cup?"

"And suppose you play more tennis with me?"

"It's a deal. Only I'd like to play golf with you, too, and I think you'd enjoy it. How about trying?"

She tried it and liked it. Now she's taking regular lessons. That's how come she got the golf clubs for Christmas.

Shirley once read a story about a woman who left her husband because she couldn't stand watching the way he broke his egg every morning. How silly, she thought. Now she knows it had nothing to do with the egg, the woman just didn't like him. Everybody has little habits they get heckled about. With the Agars, it's Jack's passion for onions—Shirley's refusal to use salad dressing—the way Jack devours popcorn at the movies. The best medicine for that is a sense of humor.

Shirley minds the popcorn less for herself than the people around. Jack's method fascinates her. The bag stands open in his left hand. At some crucial moment—like when Humphrey Bogart is about to sock the girl—he'll shake the bag like dice, stick the other hand in and toss the stuff into his mouth, one piece at a time. Doesn't even know he's doing it, being completely wrapped up in the picture.

MODERN SCREEN

"It's a ghastly habit," Jack sighs. "I'll have to give it up. But I won't enjoy the movies nearly as much."

In displeasure, their reactions vary. Jack has a quick temper. Most of the time he keeps it under excellent control, but when he does get mad, he gets so mad he wants to break things. Shirley's never been the one he's mad at, but of course she has to listen to him explode, that's part of a wife's job. When it happens, she gets terrifically calm—a trick she learned from her mother. She herself has an even disposition—can't remember flaring up more than three times in her life. But she does remember that on those occasions she felt highly belligerent and wanted someone to fight with. Only Mom wouldn't fight.

Still, temper or not, she thinks Jack's way is better than hers. If something goes wrong, he'll speak right out and get rid of it. She, on the other hand, goes up to her room, closes all the doors and play records. When she comes down, she's calm, but untalkative. Gradually, she returns to normal. But the grievance lingers.

shirley gets mad . . .

One night something silly—she can't even remember what it was—happened with Jack. She didn't say a word. Just put a symphony record on the phonograph.

"You mad at me, Shirl?"

"Uh-uh—"

He laid down his book and pulled a hassock over to her chair. "Come on, spill it, honey—"

"Look, Jack, we all have our own ways of letting off steam. You lose your temper. I play symphonies."

"Why? To make me mad?"

"N-not exactly—"

"But I've hurt you and you want to get back at me, so you're going to stew around for a while. Let's have it out instead, honey. From stewing comes ulcers—"

Of course she had to laugh at that, and they did have it out, so there was nothing to store up.

They have one hurdle, not mentioned by the experts, because it's peculiar to Hollywood. Marriage is supposed to be more of a risk in Hollywood than elsewhere. If you're both in the movies, there's the danger of clashing careers. If only one's in the movies, there's the danger of subordinating marriage to the lure of ambition.

Their attitude toward the Hollywood scene is healthy all over. It's generally believed that the rumors of gossip columnists have broken up more than one marriage in the movie colony. Certainly they've caused untold friction and heartache. But the Agars aren't having any—

Jack came in with a newspaper one day. "C'mere. Take a look at this."

The item read: "Shirley Temple and Jack Agar have come to the parting of the ways—reason being that Shirley likes mystery shows while Jack likes symphonies and good books—"

Naturally they howled. Apart from the fact that they listen to mystery shows and symphonies together and read the same books, it sounded so completely idiotic as the reason for a rift. "Shows how hard up they are," said Jack, "for stuff to print.

"But suppose," said Shirley, who's been in the movies longer, "they'd said something that didn't sound quite so idiotic. Would it have bothered you, Jack?"

"Well, I don't think it's fair to print lies and I don't get the point, but why should it bother me? How can someone outside know better than us if we're happy?"

Mrs. Agar hugged him. "Go to the head of the class," she said.

"I get so darn mad!"

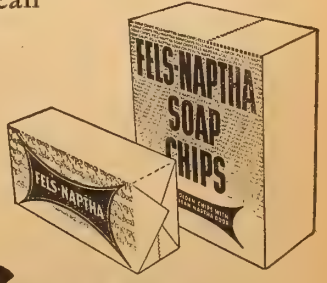
"I'm fed up with 'wash day fairy tales.' How any grown woman can believe some of them is more than I can understand!"

Lady, we don't blame you. But please don't point at Fels-Naptha Soap.

Every word we say about Fels-Naptha has been said before . . . by the women who use it. In fact many of our customers make stronger claims for this fine laundry soap than we do.

We say Fels-Naptha is better because it gives you two great cleaners—gentle, active naptha and good mild soap; that it makes all kinds of washing quicker and easier; that it makes linens and delicate garments so fragrantly clean they're a joy to behold.

And we believe—if you try Fels-Naptha Soap—you'll never even read another 'wash day fairy tale.'



Fels-Naptha Soap

BANISHES "TATTLE-TALE GRAY"

"THAT'S WHAT I LIKE ABOUT TOM"

(Continued from page 52)

just when things got interesting.

Before Peter grabbed his train, though, he asked Tom to pinch hit. "Look after Maurine, will you? And let me know what goes on every minute."

"Sure, Pete, I'll take care of everything. Don't you worry," said Tom. He meant it. There's nothing Tom loves more than rallying for a friend.

Well—as soon as Peter left, the stork flapped his wings. I called Tom. He owned the one automobile in our crowd. It was quite a ride to the hospital, and Tom chewed his fingernails with one hand and steered with the other. But we made it somehow, and I went into my act and Tom went into his. Very realistic acts they were, too.

But I'll never forget Tom Drake for that scene in my life and neither will Peter. It's just one of many I can remember during the happy years we've all been close friends. I've known Tom when he couldn't squeeze his toe inside a Broadway producer's door. I know him now when he's a famous Hollywood star. If there's any difference in Tom Drake himself, I can't name it. He's still the same: kind, thoughtful, charming, a gay guy who has a wonderful knack of brightening up our lives every time he drops in.

I remember one time, when Peter and I had a tiny apartment on 75th Street, in the days when Peter and Tom were battering away at Broadway. We lived on our hopes in those days; money was a rare commodity. One night we were having dinner—maybe you could call it that—Pete, me, and Tom, in the kitchen. The entree was corned beef hash—period. That's all we could afford. The service was tin pie plates—also our speed in elegance. We'd just sat down to this festive spread—it looked exactly like plates of dogfood—when the bell rang and in popped an old friend of ours whom we hadn't seen for years.

To make matters worse, he was one of those critical, fastidious people. He'd looked us up expecting, I'm sure, to find glamorous actors dining and wining in the smartest Manhattan style. When he caught us with the pie plates and "dogfood," it was a pretty embarrassing moment for all concerned—except Tom.

He rose gallantly and bowed to the caller as if he were a visiting prince. "Won't you join us for dinner?" invited Tom, in his best stage Oxford accent—just as if he were about to ring for the butler and order another place set with the gold service. With no apologies at all, Tom daintily dished out another heap of dogfood on a pie tin and we had a dinner party—a good one, too.

The first time Peter and I ever saw Tom Drake was up in the pretty New England town of Westboro, Massachusetts. We were there for summer stock at the Red Barn, and Buddy—he was Buddy Alderdice then—was there, too, with his sister, Claire. We all played together in the Barn production of George Washington Slept Here. Buddy played the funny gardener, a character part, and at first Peter and I wondered what went on when we saw him doing his scenes at rehearsals.

What made us shake our two heads then, when we saw Tom practice his scenes, was that every day he was different. He'd be one kind of crazy gardener one day and the next a completely different one. "That Bud Alderdice," Peter and I agreed, "has a memory about as long as his nose. He forgets what he did the day before." We wondered how he'd ever remember his lines when he went on stage.

We could have spared our worries. Tom knew what he was doing—or rather, he found out. The night the play opened he was perfect. He was just feeling around all week for the right approach. That's the way he always acts.

Next to acting, the two real loves of Tom Drake's life are children and animals.

I'm afraid I've imposed on Tom dozens of times by letting him play nursemaid to my children. But I've never really felt guilty, because I know Tom loves it. In New York, if I could coax my baby girl, Brooksie, out for a stroll in Central Park, I thought I was doing all right. But she much preferred to go with Tom. He'd take her to the Zoo and spend a whole afternoon buying her things she shouldn't have at all.

Peter and I and our family haven't missed a Christmas with Tom since we've known each other. I'll never forget the first one, because of Tom's present for Brooksie. She was just a baby then, and Peter and I and our friends loaded her Christmas tree with the things we thought she'd adore, mostly beautiful dolls and feminine baby trinkets. Tom was coming over to our place for the day and when he arrived he suddenly looked panic-stricken. "Migosh," he cried, "I forgot Brooksie's present!" He rushed out of the apartment house and was gone about twenty minutes. He came back with Brooksie's present—a gun!

ADVERTISEMENT

"But tonight I'd like to find a case of Pepsi-Cola under the bed."

Of course, we all had to howl. Imagine buying a toy gun for a little two-year-old girl! "Typically bachelor," we hooted. Were we surprised! When Brooksie opened her things, she tossed the beautiful dolls aside with a sweep of her chubby hand. What she reached for happily and played with all day was Tom's gun.

Tom was in Seventh Heaven when his sister, Claire, visited him in Hollywood with her two girls, Chris and Casey; he was always darling to his wife's baby, Chrissie, too. The back yard of that house was a regular carnival with slides and sand piles when the kids were around.

This yearning of his for some kind of family life reminds me of the time we all lived in Tudor City in Manhattan—a regular colony of young stage hopefuls. Peter and our family. Tom and Claire. Chris, who later on was Tom's wife. Maggie Ledbetter, Michael Harvey, Kay Sweeterman—a bunch more.

With two babies, Peter and I didn't exactly rattle around in our apartment. But it was headquarters for the gang and they were always dropping in. Tom usually came loaded down with chocolate marshmallow cookies, I remember, and something to make a party—some wine or spaghetti from the delicatessen.

pushcart posies . . .

Tom can take terrific delight in some simple achievement if it happens to be a project of his. He was over at our apartment one gray day in New York. The tiny place wasn't cheerful anyway, and it looked particularly drab that day because of the weather and because for both Peter and Tom a couple of Broadway leads on jobs had fizzled out. We were discouraged and all about broke. Brooksie Jane had a bad cold, coughing away in the bedroom. Tom was looking out the solitary window through which a little light dribbled in. He spied a flower vendor way down below, trundling his gay pushcart. "That's what we need," he cried. "Some cheer in here—flowers. Quick," he yelped, "how much money have we?" We pooled our resources on the rug. I don't know how much it totaled—but Tom ran down to the sidewalk and came back with six bunches of violets. We put them in water glasses in the window sill and Tom nursed them for days, hoping they wouldn't wither and die. "If we can keep them blooming," he said, "our luck will turn."

And sure enough it did. That week Peter got a job in a road show, Brooksie got over her cold and Tom and Claire got a check from home! Tom was sure the violets had worked the whole miracle.

Tom will settle any time for fun around the house with his friends. He's shy and quiet in crowds, but when you know him, you love him and realize how funny, gay and entertaining he can be. I remember once, here in Hollywood, Tom and Peter had some spare time on their hands between pictures and they got an idea for a vacation trip to Sun Valley.

"That's out for me," I explained. There were the children and no one to take care of them. "But," I suggested, "you and Peter go on. You two can rustle up fun."

"You won't mind?"

"Of course not," I said, thinking I meant it.

They made plane reservations, packed their bags, skiis and everything. Then they rolled off in Tom's car to the airport. In

(Continued on page 101)

Sweet and embraceable Utterly face-able if you wear.....

Jergens New Face Powder

Wearing Rachel shade—you're a dream. Such a creamy, dreamy look. Makes his heart ache.

All 6 shades of Jergens new powder have that heart-catching quality. Each is sparked with a glow of color to brighten even a drab complexion.

Velvetized texture gives this new powder clinging smoothness. Helps hide little skin flaws for that faultless-skin look. Luxuriously perfumed. Do try Jergens new Face Powder now and—aren't you lovely! In "compact-size" boxes, 25¢ and 10¢ (plus tax).

SPECIAL FOR $1.00 (plus tax): Large boudoir box of Jergens Face Powder with Jergens velvetized Make-up Cake—both in one box—in 6 made-in-Heaven shade pairs. Ask for Jergens Twin Make-up.

PREVIEW JERGENS
6 SKIN-GLOW SHADES

Naturelle . . . . . for Pink Skin
Rachel . . . . . for Ivory Skin
Peach . . . . . for Medium Skin
Brunette . . . . . for Dark Skin
Dark Rachel . . . for Golden Skin
Southern Rose for Sun-Rose effect

FREE!
POWDER KIT—containing all 6 Jergens skin-glow powder shades.

Please send me Free Powder Kit containing generous samples of all 6 devastating shades in Jergens Face Powder. MAIL TO: Box 37, Cincinnati 14, Ohio Dept. 256

Name _____

Address _____

City _____ State _____

(Paste coupon on penny postcard, if you wish. Print your name, address plainly. Sorry—offer good in U.S.A. only.)

40
MORE PAGES
in the new April
SCREEN GUIDE

There are picture magazines that cover the world. But now there is one devoted exclusively to Hollywood. All of its glamour and gossip in thrilling picture-stories.

MORE NEWS!
MORE GOSSIP!
MORE COLOR!

New writers. New features. New photographers. Brilliant new story-telling picture techniques. Intimate reporting of Hollywood's great—how they work, play, live! Page after page of sparkling, full-color photographs.

Don't Miss the
NEW APRIL
Screen Guide
On Sale Everywhere

sweet and hot

BY LEONARD FEATHER

*Recommended
Highly recommended
No stars: average

POPULAR

CONNECTICUT—Bing Crosby-Judy Garland (Decca); *Martha Tilton (Capitol); *Artie Shaw (Musicraft); Modernaires (Columbia); Herbie Fields (Victor)
The Artie Shaw version of Connecticut has Don't You Believe It, Dear on the other side. Artie plays a duet with himself on this disc.

IT'S A GOOD DAY—*Peggy Lee (Capitol); *Gene Krupa (Columbia)

HOW ARE THINGS IN GLOCCA MORRA?—*Russ Case (Victor, in album); Johnny Long (Signature); Buddy Clark (Columbia)
The hit song from New York's big musical, Finian's Rainbow.

LINDA—*Ray Noble (Columbia), Charlie Spivak (Victor)

MAN WITH THE HORN—Boyd Raeburn (Jewel); *Harry James (Columbia)

OPEN THE DOOR, RICHARD!—Jack McVea (Black & White); Dusty Fletcher (National)
Dusty Fletcher has been using "Open the door, Richard!" as the keyline of his vaudeville comedy act for about twenty years. Suddenly it's made into a song.

SEPTEMBER SONG—Sarah Vaughan-Teddy Wilson (Musicraft); *Joe Mooney (Decca)

STARS FELL ON ALABAMA—*Leslie Scott-Billy Moore (Victor); *Woody Herman (Columbia); Johnny Guarnieri (Majestic)
Leslie Scott is a talented ex-GI baritone who joined Louis Armstrong's band.

SUNDAY KIND OF LOVE—Claude Thornhill (Columbia)
The fine Thornhill record of a fine tune is an all-vocal performance by the remarkably improved Fran Warren, who used to sing with Art Mooney and Charlie Barnet.

WE COULD MAKE SUCH BEAUTIFUL MUSIC—*Monica Lewis (Signature); Frankie Carle (Columbia); Vaughn Monroe (Victor)

HOT JAZZ

DAVE BARBOUR—*Forever Nicki (Capitol)

DUKE ELLINGTON—Happy-Go-Lucky Local (Musicraft)
Musicraft's first Ellington release is a double-sided treatment of Duke's experiment in train music, which forms one of the four movements of his Deep South Suite.

ERROLL GARNER—*Where or When (Mercury)

BENNY GOODMAN—*Oh Baby! (Columbia)

DIZZY GILLESPIE—*Things To Come (Musicraft)

COLEMAN HAWKINS—*Bean and The Boys (Sonora)
Both the Gillespie and the Hawkins records above are strictly on the modern jazz bebop, but sound quite different.

WOODY HERMAN—Woodchoppers Album (Columbia)
Here at last are the discs made last summer in Chicago by Woody, Red Norvo and seven other men: Someday Sweetheart and I Surrender Dear and others.

JIMMIE LUNCEFORD—*Margie (Majestic)
If this sounds identical with the record the Lunceford band made of this tune on Decca almost ten years ago, don't be surprised. It's the same arrangement.

RAY McKINLEY—Tumblebug (Majestic)

JOE THOMAS—*Black Butterfly (Keynote)

FROM THE MOVIES

CARNEGIE HALL—Beware My Heart: *Margaret Whiting (Capitol); Vaughn Monroe (Victor)

LADIES' MAN—What Am I Gonna Do About You?: *Perry Como (Victor); Margaret Whiting (Capitol); Skip Farrell (Mercury)

MY HEART GOES CRAZY—Title Song: *Modernaires (Columbia); Bing Crosby (Decca). So Would I: *Bing Crosby (Decca)

NEW ORLEANS—Endie; Do You Know What It Means To Miss New Orleans; Where The Blues Were Born In New Orleans: *Louis Armstrong (Victor)
The first side features Louis' big band; the other two, a small group.

STORMY WEATHER—Moppin' and Boppin': *Fats Waller (Victor)
Here's a real collector's item. This side and Ain't Misbehavin', too!

THE TIME, THE PLACE & THE GIRL—A Rainy Night In Rio; Through a Thousand Dreams: *Desi Arnaz (Victor)

TILL THE CLOUDS ROLL BY—*All Star Jerome Kern Album (Capitol). All The Things You Are: *Tony Martin (Decca); Guy Lombardo (Decca); Carmen Cavallaro (Decca)
The Capitol album features all the top names—from Johnny Mercer through the Pied Pipers, Martha Tilton, Margaret Whiting and the King Cole Trio.

SONG OF THE SOUTH—Uncle Remus Said: Guy Lombardo (Decca)

(Continued from page 99)

an hour they were back, unpacking.

"I must be dreaming," I kidded them. "Is this Sun Valley?"

"Nope," said Tom. "We got to the airport and it didn't seem like such a good idea leaving you here. Anyway," he grinned, "we can have more fun at home."

Tom has a memory like an elephant about gala dates—anniversaries and holidays. Since I've known him I've never had a birthday go by without a box of flowers from Tom no matter where he was.

I can think of only two bad personal habits of Tom's—and he doesn't know he's doing either one. He bites his nails—which burns him up. And he doodles on tablecloths—which he thoroughly enjoys.

The other love of his life is surprises. Tom would rather pull a surprise—a pleasant one—on some of his friends than get a bonus.

There was the way, for example, he let us in on the news of his engagement to Chris Dunne. Peter and I were tossing a New Year's Eve party at our house a couple of years ago. We'd asked Tom, of course. He called me up that day. "Mind if I bring a girl along?"

"Of course not," I told him, "the more the merrier."

That's all he said. All our old friends were there when Buddy came in with Chris on his arm. We all knew Chris; she was part of the Tudor City crew. Nobody even knew she was in Hollywood. Somehow, Tom had found out and looked her up. We were tickled to death to see her.

A few days later Tom drove up one afternoon with Chris and surprised us again with, "We're going to get married." There's absolutely nothing that Drake would rather do than toss a good news bombshell into your lap!

Peter and I have been in on most of the big moments of Tom's life, and vice versa, since we met him. We've spent every Christmas and Thanksgiving together, birthdays, anniversaries and special events.

Tom changed my mother's name, for instance. It used to be Jeannette until Tom spied her wearing half-sox to keep her feet warm and called her a Bobby-Soxer. It stuck and now Mother's name, even to us, is "Bobbie." My niece and nephew, Janie and Tim, who live with Peter and me, are as proud of Tom—and as pestiferous, too—as if he were their very own big brother.

the children's hour . . .

We simply have to keep the news away from Janie each time Tom's expected. If we don't, Janie's collected all her girl friends, then Tom's blushing and we're practically pushed out of the house. Tim, thirteen, has an even brighter idea he tosses at Tom every time he corners him these days. Tim's trying hard to make some time with a certain dream girl—but it's tough going to get a date, with all the competition.

So Tom finds himself with a real argument on his hands every time Tim spots him. Tim wants Tom to go over to the hard-to-get girl's house with him. "If you'll do that, Tom," Tim argues passionately, "she'll be crazy about me! Don't you see?" I don't think Tom does. Anyway, so far he's managed to duck playing added attraction for young love, and Tim's strictly out of luck!

But short of playing glamorous lovebait, Tom's ready, willing and always able to be the best friend anyone could possibly want. He's always around when you need him and ready to rally. If he isn't, he gets there fast. It's trite but true that to know Tom Drake is to love him. Peter and I do—like a brother. He's the best friend we've ever had or ever will have. I hope he always will be.

JUST RELEASED BY RCA VICTOR!

freddy martin

"Concertos for Dancing"

Grieg Piano Concerto · Symphonie Moderne
Tchaikovsky Piano Concerto No. 1 · Warsaw Concerto
Rachmaninoff Piano Concerto No. 2 · Night and Day
Cornish Rhapsody Theme · Intermezzo

Melodious classics arranged for dancing . . . in the modern Martin manner! All feature sparkling piano passages. Album P-169, $3.15.*

"LOOK! MORE NEW RCA VICTOR HITS!"

"SHAMROCK MELODIES" by Dennis Day: When Irish Eyes Are Smiling, Mother Machree, others. P-153, $2.55.*

"EILEEN." Eight hits from the show. Al Goodman, his Orchestra, and all-star cast. K-2, $4.00.*

TEX BENEKE with the Miller Orchestra: Speaking of Angels; It Might Have Been a Different Story. 20-2123, 60¢.*

"NEW 52ND STREET JAZZ" by Dizzy Gillespie, Coleman Hawkins and their All-Star Orchestras: Night in Tunisia, Say It Isn't So, Ol' Man Rebop, Low Flame, others. HJ-9, $3.75.*

PERRY COMO: I Want to Thank Your Folks; That's Where I Came In. 20-2117, 60¢.*

*Suggested list prices, exclusive of taxes

Naturally . . . on RCA Victor Records! Two "exclusives"—Victor's billion-record skill . . . plus RCA's electronic wizardry . . . make music sound so natural on RCA Victor Records! Hear them on a Victrola† radio-phonograph. (†Victrola—T.M. Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.) Radio Corp. of America, RCA Victor Division.

THE STARS WHO MAKE THE HITS ARE ON RCA VICTOR RECORDS

RCA "HIS MASTER'S VOICE"

"And jewels of fabled Samarkand are drab beside her Moon-white Hand"

"Moon-white" hands that do a baby's daily wash? Of course!

If you think that washing clothes must mean red, rough, flaky-dry hands... you're just not in the know! Snowy, fragrant Pacquins Hand Cream helps make that "housework" look disappear from your hands... in its place there's a softer, smoother look.

Doctors and Nurses were first users of Pacquins

Doctors and nurses scrub their hands 30 to 40 times a day. So, naturally, they need extra rich lubrication to help overcome the drying effects of soapy-water scrubbings. Pacquins was made just to answer that need. Super-rich... it quickly helps overcome the drying effects of hard work and rough weather.

Pacquins
HAND CREAM
Creamy-smooth... not sticky, not greasy. More hands use Pacquins than any other hand cream in the world.
Pacquins
HAND CREAM

102 AT ANY DRUG, DEPARTMENT, OR TEN-CENT STORE

"I GIVE YOU JANE WYMAN"

(Continued from page 28)

up when we got there. We didn't go to El Morocco, or the Waldorf, either. Jane picked a little hole-in-the-wall café for dinner. After that she had another startling idea. "There's a red hot basketball game on at Madison Square Garden," she announced. "Gee, I sure would like to see it."

We went to the Garden. And we had a wonderful time. We liked Jane; she wasn't Miss Movie Star at all. She was real, she was regular, she was swell. That was strike number one for Peck.

The next time I saw Jane was on a test stage for The Yearling. We'd been working months on that picture in Florida. Back in Hollywood, Clarence Brown, the director, asked me one day, "Greg, will you make a casting test with me tomorrow?"

I said, "Of course. What's it for and who is it?"

"For Ma Baxter. Jane Wyman."

I must have looked surprised. "Jane Wyman?"

Clarence gave me a look. "Did you see The Lost Weekend?"

"Not yet."

I wondered if Clarence Brown had been touched by the sun in Florida. Jane Wyman for Ma Baxter! I remembered liking Jane in New York. I'd seen her on the screen by now, too. But as an actress, I confess I saw her playing light comedy, surrounded by guys, gobs and marines. And Ma Baxter had already defeated two actresses who weren't right for the deeply dramatic part.

We did the test. I found myself raving afterwards to Jane, "You were wonderful!" and meaning it. Jane grinned.

"Good golly—don't act so surprised!"

After that, I make a point of seeing The Lost Weekend—one night while we were still shooting The Yearling. Next morning I rushed on the set, a confirmed Wyman fan. Jane's makeup girl was daubing mud on her face for a swamp scene. I gave Wyman an admiring smack on the cheek. "I just saw Lost Weekend," I explained, "and that's exactly what you deserve. You were marvelous!"

"You've got mud on your face," said Jane.

So—that was strike two for me on Jane Wyman—selling her short as a dramatic actress. There won't be strike three. By now I know a fine actress when I see one, and that's what Jane Wyman most certainly is. I also know a very grand girl.

quick change artist . . .

Jane has great courage—professional and personal, too. Jane was on the spot when she took on Ma Baxter. Besides the two actresses who had bowed out and her own hot-cha movie past, Jane had to be a lady. Jekyll-Hyde through the first days of her Yearling job. She ran between Night and Day at Warners, quick-changing from that dressy, sophisticated version of Cole Porter's life, to our backwoods world of rain, mud, shanties and mushmouth talk. It's always tough enough making two pictures at once, but to switch colors like a chameleon every day doubles the order. One minute they were patting her with powder and perfume—the next with mud. Still the amazing thing to me was Jane's masterful switch from the brittle Broadway lingo of a show girl to the soft, drawly speech of the swamps. I complimented her the first day.

"Oh," breezed Jane, "I've just got a gimmick for accents. Look, I can make like a Spaniard or a Frenchman or anything. Listen—" And she went into a dialect routine that was swell. She calls it "gimmick." Another word I like to think, is talent.

Maybe I missed something, but I don't remember seeing Jane look in a mirror all the time we made The Yearling. She wasn't interested in how she looked but how she acted. We worked in the rain for three long days. Jane's hair straggled down but she didn't try to look glamorous.

Jane's a good sport, and she can certainly take it without flinching. I'm thinking particularly of what happened on location one day at Lake Arrowhead.

We went up in the mountains to make some lake-front scenes. There was one where a team of horses pulled Jane, Claude Jarman and me up a steep bank in a rickety buckboard. The first take was no good and we went down to do it again. Unfortunately, we rode the wagon back down. It was very steep. The brakes gave way and the wagon smacked the team in the hind legs. They bolted. A wheel flew off the buckboard and the thing started to fall apart, careening down the hill.

Luckily, Claude was tossed clear and I jumped over Jane's head to grab the horses. I saw her pitch forward on to the tongue between the dashboard and the traces. That's where she teetered the rest of the precarious ride until we got the horses stopped. I reached up and lifted her down. I thought she'd be hysterical. But Wyman winked.

"Thanks," she cracked, "for the buggy ride."

two of a kind . . .

It was through a mutual weakness Jane and I discovered on between-take waits that I found out how sentimental and sensitive Wyman is beneath her bright and breezy manner. Maybe that's what makes her such an unsuspected but fine actress. We're both jive hounds and more or less amateur hep cats, it turned out. I'm strictly an instrumental man, while Jane's strong on vocals. So Jane toted her portable phonograph to the set and we filled in the wait stretches with some solid stuff.

One day we were twirling some platters in her dressing room. I slipped on an old number of a good decade ago—"The Lady is a Tramp." It had made only a few turns when Jane said, "Let's play something else, hey?" Brightly, she said it, but she meant it. I lifted it off. "You know," explained Jane. "I used to sing the socks off that piece once and I've never been able to enjoy it since. It was when I was trying to break into bands as a singer, before I started dancing in Hollywood. Boy, was I busted! When I hear that melody all that old agony hits me right in the face again." We played something else.

Another time I put on another old timer, "Take a Number From One to Ten." It had barely started when I saw a sad look sweep Jane's face. Her lips started to tremble and I yanked it quick. You get sensitive to other people's moods when you work with them day in and day out.

"Darn me!" recovered Jane. "I almost cried. You know, that's really one of my favorite pieces. It came out when I made The Kid From Spain—just a hoofer in the chorus, I was, but it was my first Hollywood picture and things sure looked up for me."

I guess I looked puzzled. If it brought back happy memories how come Jane verged on tears? "Lyda Roberti was in that," said Jane. "Gee, she was a swell girl. Lyda's not here any more," she added, "She died a couple of years ago."

Greta and I and our family got to know the Reagans best when we moved, family style, to Arrowhead for the lake scenes of The Yearling. Both of us took cabins on the lake, rented speed cruisers and foamed back and forth across the waves to each other's lodge every afternoon when the whistle blew. Every night we'd toss a coin

GORGEOUS COVER GIRL SAYS:

Beauty's My Business—

RAE CALDWELL SAYS,
"Discover SweetHeart's 1-2-3 Extra Lather Beauty Care!" Night and morning, massage your face for one minute with SweetHeart's Extra Lather. Rinse with warm — then icy cold water. Skin is cleansed . . . stimulated . . . looks radiant!

So I changed to the Gentle Floating Lift of SweetHeart Soap's Extra Lather!

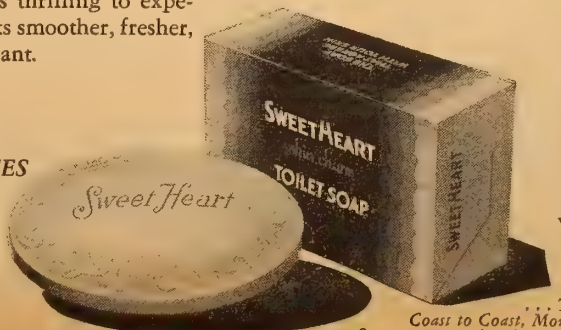
"It gives 3-way beauty help! No wonder I rave about SweetHeart's Extra Lather Care — and feel I'd be risking my success without it," says Rae Caldwell.

You, too, will love this beauty care! For pure, mild SweetHeart Soap gives up to twice as much lather as average beauty soaps. And the countless bubbles in this extra lather have a gentle floating lift. Pictures taken through the microscope prove it!

These bubbles work into the outer pore openings . . . lift off dirt and dry skin flakes. Float them away! It's thrilling to experience. Your skin looks smoother, fresher, more exquisitely radiant.

Imagine yourself a cover girl like Rae . . . at a swanky night club with a wonderful man adoring your SweetHeart complexion!



The soap that AGREES with your skin

Tune in "EVELYN WINTERS" and "ROSE OF MY DREAMS" . . . Two shows, Coast to Coast, Mon. thru Fri. See your paper for times and stations.

STUBBORN FILM ROBS YOUR SKIN OF Half its Beauty!

You can't see or feel this stubborn film . . . and ordinary cleansing fails to remove it once you try this treatment you will instantly see and feel the amazing difference!

BUT

JUST ONE TREATMENT with unique Lady Esther Cream shows how much clearer, fresher, younger your skin can look!

Every woman's skin has this insidious enemy . . . a stubborn film, caused by your natural skin oils mixed with cosmetics and dirt.

You can't see or feel this stubborn film. That's the danger! You think your skin is clean, when it isn't.

Ordinary cleansing fails to remove this stubborn, invisible film. Day after day, it clings . . . dulling the true freshness and beauty of your skin . . . encouraging blackheads and blemishes!

Here's the safe, sure way to get rid of this stubborn, clinging film!

1. Smooth over your face and neck my unique Lady Esther 4-Purpose Face Cream. Wipe it off thoroughly.

2. Immediately . . . and this is the important part . . . apply Lady Esther cream a second time. Wipe it off.

This second cleansing, with Lady Esther, really removes that stubborn film. Now your skin is really clean!

Instantly, you see and feel the difference! Your skin looks so much clearer, fresher, younger! It feels so much softer, smoother. Now, your skin has a real chance to build new loveliness.

My Cream is Unique!

The very texture of Lady Esther 4-Purpose Face Cream is different . . . so soft, so effective. And remember . . . every time you use my unique cream, it does four of the things your skin needs most: 1) cleanses thoroughly; 2) softens your skin; 3) helps Nature refine your pores; 4) and leaves a perfect powder base.

Get Lady Esther 4-Purpose Face Cream today. Let this unique cream work its beauty wonders on your skin!

Lady Esther

4-PURPOSE FACE CREAM

Needs No Help From Any Other Cream

to see who cooked the dinner, Greta at our house, or Jane at the Reagans'.

Jane is no slouch on the domestic side. In fact, at this point, I'll have to tell you what a farsighted mother she is. She's already planning Maureen's wedding.

It seems when Ronnie and Jane were engaged a few years ago in Hollywood, Ronnie gave Jane a huge amethyst ring, instead of the usual diamond sparkler. It was a birthstone, that's why. At the wedding, he came through with a clip of the same beautiful stone and at every anniversary since he's contributed a bracelet or something else to match. Jane keeps these all packed away—with her wedding dress—for Maureen to wear when she's a bride.

The reason I know this intimate and sentimental bit of Reagan family lore is because Jane wore that wedding dress (it's ice-blue and does she look a dream in it!) and all the amethyst pretties one night at a party she gave.

That party she gave was something very special indeed—even in Hollywood. The last guests made their adieus at 5:30 a.m. I know, because those last guests, I'm afraid, were the Pecks.

Jane loves to entertain and she'll worry for weeks to dig up a new idea. This particular party, for instance, was a birthday party for Joan Crawford—and it posed a problem to Jane. How to bring in the cake without the old tired routine of lighting candles while the guests harmonized (they thought) on "Happy Birthday to You"?

The Reagans had their back-yard all covered with cellophane and lights that night to create a night club interior outdoors. Ronnie emceed at a microphone and along about the middle of the evening he stepped up and announced.

"Ladies and gentlemen—welcome to our modest plush-lined saloon. I must explain the reason for this party. There's a little lady in your midst who likes to sing. She can't sing anywhere else because they won't ever let her. But she's boss here, so—ladies and gentlemen—I give you Jane Wyman, and you're stuck with her—" frustrated singer . . .

Jane stepped up to the microphone like the most frustrated torch singer and the orchestra gave her a slow beat. She's always dying to sing, and all her friends know it. Some of them half believed Ronnie's pitch. But what Jane sang was "Happy Birthday to You" to Joan Crawford—as the cake came in. It was a neat surprise and you can be sure that's just what Ronnie and Jane had beaten their brains to achieve.

The first time we actors of The Yearling saw the finished picture was one night when Clarence Brown and Sidney Franklin, who directed and produced it, asked us to a private, pre-preview showing at the studio. There were just a few of us there—Ronnie and Jane, Greta and I, Clarence and Sidney, Claude and his mother.

After the screening we went across the alley to a little beanery. We drank toasts and decided the world was a wonderful place and that we all loved each other. Then Jane started dabbing her nose, and we tried not to notice—until the tears became too big and often.

We thought we understood. This was the payoff of thirteen years of fighting her way to the top for Jane Wyman.

But that wasn't what Jane was thinking about. She wasn't crying for joy over her success. What made Jane cry was the same sad and wistful feeling you have when you're graduated from a school you've loved, or quit any place where you've left part of your heart.

But that was really the beginning for Jane Wyman—the start of a new, bright career. I'm sure of that. I hope she'll let me get with her again. It's a privilege drove out in the country on picnics and clambakes, clustered in juke-box joints over cokes and malts, acted his own age, like an American boy of nineteen.

MARK STEVENS

(Continued from page 42)

But Mark was still too independent to accept the Shipples' hospitality indefinitely. He moved to a room of his own soon and got a job. They weren't hiring any and everyone at A. Polski's Department Store, even if it was close upon the Christmas rush. But when Helen Fennell, the personnel manager, talked to Mark, she knew there was a place for him somewhere. He was such a handsome, friendly, attractive young man, she told herself.

They put him first in the men's department, selling shirts. The shirts sold out. They switched him to electric razors. Mark's sales set a store record. He might have blossomed into a department store tycoon, if business hadn't slumped after Christmas, and a drastic cut laid him off. That shocked him out of his respectable, cozy dream.

Mark had been spending his salary as fast as he made it. He moved to a $2 room and looked for another job. He was about broke when he heard of a radio announcer's job open at a small station in Erie, Pennsylvania. Mark spent his last dimes on the phone call. He exaggerated his show business and radio record in Canada. He hinted that he was pretty good.

"Yeah?" they told him. "Okay, you can have the job."

He should have known it sounded too easy. But he went ahead and borrowed money for the trip from a store pal. When he got to Erie, he hustled over to the radio station.

The manager looked bored. "What job? Oh—you the kid from Canada? Well, sorry, but the spot's filled."

Mark's blood boiled. He felt the old tenseness, the rebellious anger flood back into his veins. He'd never trust anybody again. He turned on his heel and walked out.

He had six dollars left in his pocket. He bought a bus ticket to Youngstown and looked up his Uncle George Morrison and his aunt. Uncle George had an offer ready. He was in the steel business and Mark could start work right away at good wages in the machine shop. "Go to bed now," said Uncle George. "We'll talk about it in the morning."

Mark went to bed, but even though he was dog tired he couldn't sleep.

He rolled out of bed at dawn and told his aunt and uncle goodbye. He wouldn't let them fix him breakfast or drive him to the bus. He walked three miles through snow to town, grabbed a bus to Akron with fifteen cents in his pocket and dropped his bag in the $2 room with a promise to pay rent next week. He didn't let anyone know he was in town—not even Marge Shipple. Not any of her good natured gang he'd had fun with, nor any of the friends he'd made at Polski's store.

Because a radio station had made him sore, that's where Mark was determined to get a job. There was one in Akron, WAKR, down below a drug store where he often grabbed a cup of coffee. Mark walked in. He was tired, travel-stained and rumpled. He looked down and out and he was. Bernard Burke, who ran WAKR, was not impressed when Mark hit him for a job.

"Any experience?"

Mark mentioned his Montreal microphone jobs as grandly as he dared. "Sorry," vetoed Burke. "We need a real experienced American radio man."

On his way out Mark looked exactly the way he felt—sore and desperate. A woman saw him and sized up his plight. She happened to be Bernard Burke's wife. She asked Mark if he needed any help. He shook his red head savagely. "No, thanks," he said. "I want a job."

"I'll see my husband," said the lady, kindly. "He's the manager of the station."

Mark grinned bitterly. "I just did. He said 'No'."

But she took him back in and he walked out with a job—not much of a job, but something. Frankly, Mark Stevens started at WAKR as a flunkey. Everybody at WAKR soon knew him and one of them was Carl Kent, the station's prize announcer. Mark wasn't always busy, but he was always hanging around. Carl would have him cue him now and then.

"You've got a good voice," he told Steve one day. "You ought to learn radio announcing. Stick around and I'll teach you all I know."

"Thanks," grinned Mark. That voluntary gesture of friendship put him right back on the ambition beam. He lost himself in the station. Carl coached him in announcing, and they soon trusted Mark at the mike on a show for the Firestone

The Flavor's All Yours—

when you smoke PHILIP MORRIS!

CLEAN, FRESH, PURE...

America's FINEST Cigarette!

An important difference in PHILIP MORRIS manufacture lets the FULL FLAVOR of the world's finest tobaccos come through for your complete enjoyment—clean, fresh, pure!

That's why PHILIP MORRIS taste better—smoke better—all day long!

CALL FOR PHILIP MORRIS

ALWAYS BETTER... BETTER ALL WAYS

BORDERLINE ANEMIA*

is a threat to your pep and popularity!

Thousands who are tired and pale may find renewed energy—restore healthy good looks—with Ironized Yeast Tablets

Do you tire too easily? Is your color fading—your face unbecomingly pale? Do your enthusiasm and stamina and charm seem to be waning?

Very often these effects stem from a blood condition, and you may be the victim of a Borderline Anemia—due to a ferro-nutritional blood deficiency.

Your red blood cells may be faded and shrunken, weakened to a point where they cannot transmit full energy to your body. Results of medical surveys show that up to 68% of the women examined—many men and children—have this Borderline Anemia.

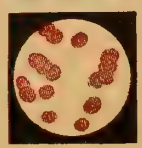
How Ironized Yeast Tablets Build Up Your Blood and Vigor

So, if your color is fading—your energy failing—due to this blood deficiency, take Ironized Yeast Tablets. They are formulated to help build up faded red blood cells—thus to help restore vigor and good looks. Continuing tiredness and pallor may come from other conditions—so consult your doctor regularly. But in a Borderline Anemia, take Ironized Yeast Tablets to help build up your blood. Take them to start your energy shifting back into "high"—to help restore the natural color to your cheeks! Take them so you can enjoy life again!

 Resulting from ferro-nutritional blood deficiency*

BORDERLINE ANEMIA
why it can make you
TIRED • PALE • LISTLESS

Energy-Building Blood. This is a microscopic view of blood rich in energy elements. Here are big plentiful red cells that release energy to every muscle, limb, tissue.



Borderline Anemia. Many have blood like this; never know it. Cells are puny, faded. Blood like this can't release the energy you need to feel and look your best.

Improved, Concentrated Formula

Ironized Yeast

TABLETS

Rubber Company, called "Was I Right?"

Before long, Steve was opening WAKR at 6 a.m. and closing it at midnight. Mark moved into the YMCA in a $7.50 room. He didn't have time to see Marge Shipple and her crowd or much of anyone else the rest of that year.

Mark didn't mind the work, but his touchy temper fired when he found out he was being underpaid—just half what his job was worth. So he switched his voltage to a rival station, WJW, on a full time announcer's spot with five newscasts daily and a commercial show every Monday night. He felt better and got $75 a week.

In what spare time the new job gave him, he found himself wandering over to the Weathervane Theater in Akron to do amateur plays. Vi Oakes, who played there too, was a sensible, understanding girl who caught the spark of restless ambition behind Mark's moody mannerisms.

"I'm not getting anywhere," he fretted to her. "I'm doing the same things over and over again. I've been in Akron two years and I'm darned near twenty-two."

"Well, what do you want to do?" asked Vi.

"I'd like to try Hollywood," began Mark. He was thinking out loud what he'd been thinking for some time—of all the people who'd suggested Hollywood for him. Funny thing, they were all little, unimportant people, not the big stars he'd gazed at in awe around Montreal's show houses, or seen talking big at Dinty Moore's.

And now Vi Oakes, a young girl anxious to act like himself. She said, "Hollywood—why that's just the place for you! Why not?"

Mark shrugged. He was making good money in Akron, but he was still broke. He knew if he struck out for Hollywood, he'd expect that town to say "Hello, Steve—come right in!" And he knew it wouldn't be like that, because Hollywood was the most heartless place in the world. But still Mark had to try Hollywood.

So one morning he climbed out of his YMCA bed with a set look on his square face, walked down to the station, quit his job and took a bus to Montreal. This time he knew what he was going home for—not to lick his wounds—but to tell his mother and Dad Cooke goodbye. He knew they wouldn't like it, this Hollywood idea. He walked inside the familiar front door and blurted out his plans. "And I'm not

I SAW IT HAPPEN

Several years ago, Tyrone Power was visiting Guyaquil, Ecuador. A wild group of fans was mobbing him, and he finally escaped into his hotel room, thinking to avoid further violence. However, a flock of young bobby-sockers had hidden themselves in his room, and they sprang at him as he entered, trying to get a piece of his wearing apparel as a souvenir. Just as he saw an opening in the crowd and tried to duck through, one of the girls caught hold of his suspenders and yanked them loose. His trousers slowly started to slip down, and the girls ran squealing from the room, leaving Tyrone in much deserved peace.

Knud Holst
Mercersburg, Pennsylvania

coming back," Mark added. "I'm going to stay until I do something."

But he was dead wrong on their attitude then. They were beginning to understand; they wanted to help. Dad Cooke bought Mark's ticket west on the Santa Fe's top train, the Super Chief. He handed him a $1000 stake. Mark's parents drove him to the railroad station, took snapshots, gave him a warm send-off, with the comfortable invitation: "If things go wrong, you know you're always welcome here."

Mark Stevens didn't know a soul in Hollywood. The only vague introduction he had was the name of a third-rate talent agent. Larry Sunbrock, a cowboy showman who occasionally brought rodeo shows through Akron, had said, "Look this guy up if you ever get to Hollywood. He might get you a job." Mark had the name scribbled on a piece of paper in his wallet. Maybe he'd look him up, Mark thought, and maybe he wouldn't. He wasn't counting on any help.

When he climbed off the train in Los Angeles, the California sun beamed a dazzling greeting. Mark's spirits zoomed. "This is it," he exulted. "This is for me."

He told the cab driver, "Hollywood Roosevelt Hotel." He whirled up the Boulevard, craning his neck like a hick at the movie sights he'd read about—The Derby, Max Factor's, Grauman's Chinese. The desk clerk said, "Room or suite, sir?" Mark was feeling swell, shot through with luck. "A suite," he said, grandly. He patted the $1000 in his inside coat pocket. He'd shoot the moon, as his old New York hash-slinger pal had advised. His extravagant mood was to cost him dearly, but he didn't know that then.

i want to act . . .

Next morning Mark looked up the agent Larry Sunbrock had recommended. The flesh peddler fixed him with a cold, appraising eye. Mark rattled off his record. "I want to act in pictures."

"Uh-huh. Where you staying?" Mark told him. "Got plenty of money?"

"Sure," said Mark.

"Well," announced the agent. "You don't look like a picture type to me, Bud. But we'll go out to Universal and see what they think."

They didn't think so either. Mark strolled into Casting Director Dan Kelly's office with his guide. He felt cocky and confident. Kelly shot him a flat, impatient stare. Thousands of good looking young guys were led to his desk every week. He listened to Mark's story between phone calls, half listened, half looked. His verdict was blunt and rude.

"Look, son," he said, "why don't you go on back home and forget it? You're no good for pictures. Not the type. Goodbye, now."

That old pressure clamped Mark's jaw. That old furious feeling that surged up when he was smacked down made his muscles tremble. He gritted, "Thanks," and walked out.

He didn't see the man who stared at him keenly as he strode furiously out of Dan Kelly's office. His name was Herb Tobias. He was an agent, too, connected with a big Hollywood talent office, the Goldstone Brothers. He filed what he saw away in his memory. Mark didn't know that.

Mark Stevens' own memory had turned a burning blank. All his dreams darkened and when that happened he could sting himself like a scorpion. He took a cab back to his hotel suite and got on the telephone. He'd run across some party guys and gals in the hotel grill but he'd ducked them. He got in touch now and stayed in touch. He didn't go near the agents again. His marathon mad-on lasted

"RC tastes best, I found!"

says

ANN BLYTH

See her in Mark Hellinger's

"SWELL GUY"

A Universal-International Picture

"IT WAS 'WAY BEST IN MY TASTE-TEST!" says Ann. "I tried leading colas in paper cups and chose Royal Crown Cola—my favorite ever since!" Try it! Say, "RC for me!" That's the quick way to get a delightful quick-up with Royal Crown Cola—best by taste-test!

RC is the quick way to say...

ROYAL CROWN COLA

Best by taste-test

"Girls Men Adore," says GLENN FORD

"have this invincible Charm"

JANIS CARTER, CO-STARRING WITH GLENN FORD IN "FRAMED," A COLUMBIA PICTURE

JANIS CARTER KNOWS the charm Glenn speaks of—the compelling charm of snuggly-soft hands. Janis keeps her own hands deliciously smooth and soft. "I use Jergens Lotion," she says.*

*So many enchanting Stars use Jergens. Of all hand cares, Jergens is 7 to 1 the favorite of the Stars.

Nowadays—even finer. Even smoother, softer hands—even longer protection now from Jergens Lotion, thanks to wartime discoveries in skin-care. Still tucked away in your Jergens are two ingredients, so valued for skin-smoothing that many doctors use them. Still 10¢ to $1.00 (plus tax). Never feels oily, no stickiness.

For the Softest, Adorable Hands, use

JERGENS LOTION

FREE!
See for yourself why Hollywood Stars, 7 to 1, use Jergens Lotion

Mail coupon today for gift bottle. (Paste on penny postcard if you wish.) Box 27, Cincinnati 14, Ohio. Please send my gift bottle.

Dept. 133

*Name*_____

*Address*_____

*City*_____ *State*_____

(Please print name, address plainly . . . Sorry, offer good in U. S. A. only) a week and a lot of his $1000 stake went with it.

On Sunday Mark's distracted rambling led him to the home of a kindly woman interested in the struggles of young Hollywood unknowns. She lived out in Fox Hills and her back yard looked down on the back lot of Twentieth Century-Fox's great studio, studded with sets and stages. A poignant urge struck him.

Mark said it before he thought, with all the wistful desire that burned beneath his angry frustration. "If I could only get inside there!"

"I'll bet you can," said the lady. "I was thinking when I met you that you'd be perfect for pictures. I know a wonderful agency you ought to see." She named the Goldstones. She told what they had done handling stars like Bob Taylor, Alice Faye, Tony Martin, a dozen others. "Why don't you go see them?"

"What's the use?" smiled Mark crookedly. He was still nursing his independence, but not too hard. He couldn't bring himself to call another agent, but that next week he let a Hollywood friend make an appointment with the Goldstones for him. Herb Tobias was there when Mark came in.

"I've seen you somewhere before," he said. "And I liked your style. Were you ever at Universal?"

"For maybe five minutes," cracked Mark, and told his story. Herb stopped him halfway through. He'd heard that so often he could say it backwards.

"I'll bet I can get you a contract," Herb said. "At Warner's. They use lots of young guys like you. They love 'em. I'll promote a test. Keep in touch with us."

no more dough . . .

Mark said, "Sure," and felt better. But the minute his problem with himself ended another popped up. He didn't tell the agents that keeping in touch was going to be tricky. That he'd run through his thousand-dollar stake, was down to $30. That the Hotel Roosevelt address he'd given was good for maybe a couple of hours more, until he could check out and find a cheap room somewhere.

The only room Mark could find was in Long Beach, thirty-five miles from Hollywood. A friend he'd met had an apartment there on the ocean front, and worked in a beach defense plant. Mark moved in and tried to get a defense job himself. The medical exam spotted the smashed vertebra in his back, the one he'd got diving as a kid in Canada, the same injury that had kept him out of both Canadian and American services when he'd tried to enter. The answer was "No."

He was getting pretty seedy, haggard and anxious when the break came. In fact, Mark was actually sleeping on the sands by the ocean, saving his few remaining nickels to drop in a phone slot to call the Goldstones. One Sunday he got the word from Herb. "Get yourself in shape. You make a test at Warner's Tuesday at one o'clock."

Mark couldn't do much about getting himself in shape. He had just twenty cents left. His suits were a mass of soiled wrinkles; he needed a haircut. He thought he'd have Monday to pull himself into some sort of condition for a camera. Luckily, he called Hollywood the next morning. "Date's changed," Herb Tobias told him. "The test's today. Get up here!"

Mark took a bus, he thought, for Cahuenga and Hollywood Boulevard. He dropped one of his two dimes in the box. The other would get him over the pass to Burbank. Then he asked if he was on the right bus. The driver shook his head. "Give me my dime back," demanded Mark.

"I can't. You dropped it in. It's already rung up."

Mark spent his last dime on the right bus. But it dumped him four miles from the Warner Studio. He hoofed it over Cahuenga Pass. He was late but they shot the test anyway. They took Mark over to wardrobe first and tried to dress him up. But fiasco piled on fiasco that day. There wasn't a suit in the whole department that fitted his wide shoulders and small waist. He wound up with a pinch-back number tailored for Humphrey Bogart.

Since he's become famous, Mark Stevens has tried time and again to find that screen test and buy it to run for laughs. He can't, though. Warners long since burned it up. It was horrible. But in spite of all the ghastly trimmings, there was something that came through. His agent, Herb, saw it and went to bat with the studio. He talked them into giving Mark a six-month trial contract at $100 a week.

Mark was floating on air. The Goldstone agency was more sold on him than the studio, too. They bought him a jalopy to get around in, lent him some money for clothes, yanked him out of Long Beach and back to civilization. "Stick at Warner's a while," they told him. "Get your bearings and get fattened up. Then we'll go to town. There are other studios who'll test you."

So Mark Stevens joined the Warner team with rosy hopes. He moved into a furnished room in Beverly Hills. He wheeled his jalopy out over the pass daily. It had no top and when it rained he hunched up in the seat under a battered hat and let the water trickle past down his ears. The jalopy started his troubles.

park outside, bub . . .

Mark drove it up to the studio gates one day and started in. They'd given him a bit in Passage to Marseilles and he was on his way to work. The gate cop barred his way. "Park outside on the street, you," he ordered.

"Why?" asked Mark. "I'm working in a picture."

"You haven't got a pass have you?" Mark said no, he hadn't. He went to get one, found he wasn't earning enough money to rate it. That made him sizzle. The next morning the cop stopped him again. "Okay," said Mark. "If I can't drive in the gates, I'll go home." That started the fireworks.

He was called on the front-office carpet, and for almost two years Mark camped there until he almost wore the thing out. It was that old wounded ego again, Mark's resentment at being underestimated, brushed off, put in his place. He played bits in pictures— God Is My Co-Pilot, Objective Burma, Pride of the Marines, The Doughgirls. But his main role at Warner's was one long fight scene with the studio bosses.

Mark read every script and plugged belligerently for a good part to play. The refusals infuriated him: "Why should we put you in that part when we've got actors earning ten times as much around the lot?"

He balked when they called him in once and made him a mere voice over a loudspeaker in a picture. "You must be kidding!" flared Mark. He was boiling so when he went on the set to do it that he tangled with the director and slammed off in a rage.

You'd have thought Warner's would have been glad to drop him like a hot potato at the end of his first option. But they kept him on, to Mark's chagrin. Because by now other studios were listening to the Goldstones. They said if Mark Stevens ever got free they'd take a look.

"Soaping" dulls hair—
Halo glorifies it!

Yes, even finest soaps and soap shampoos hide the natural lustre of your hair with dulling soap film

- Halo contains no soap. Made with a new patented ingredient it cannot leave dulling soap film!
- Halo reveals the true natural beauty of your hair the very first time you use it, leaves it shimmering with glorious highlights.
- Needs no lemon or vinegar after-rinse. Halo rinses away, quickly and completely!
- Makes oceans of rich, fragrant lather, even in hardest water. Leaves hair sweet, clean, naturally radiant!
- Carries away unsightly loose dandruff like magic!
- Lets hair dry soft and manageable, easy to curl!

HALO REVEALS THE HIDDEN BEAUTY OF YOUR HAIR!

Glamorous Hair Invites Romance

Miss America is Marilyn Buferd of Los Angeles

Miss America uses Fitch Shampoo. Your hair can be like Miss America's . . . velvety soft . . . sparkling with radiant highlights! Do as Miss America does . . . use Fitch's Saponified Cocoanut Oil Shampoo. Made from mild cocoanut and pure vegetable oils, this efficient shampoo does not "dry" the hair. Delightfully fragrant, it "suds-up" into a rich, billowy lather that completely removes all scalp odor. Fitch's Saponified Cocoanut Oil Shampoo contains its own patented rinsing agent, so only an ordinary water rinse is needed. No dull film remains. At drug or toilet goods counters . . . or have professional applications at beauty shops.

Fitch's
SAPONIFIED COCOANUT OIL SHAMPOO

Knowledge is cancer's greatest enemy

Even on the basis of our present knowledge, one in three may be saved through early diagnosis and prompt, effective treatment. Be on the alert for cancer's "danger signals." Remember, knowledge is cancer's greatest enemy.

American Cancer Society

47 Beaver Street, New York 4, N. Y.

That made Steve all the more a problem player. One decent part and some kind, understanding treatment would have cured him. But it never came.

But in the depth of his misery, Mark found a new happiness to soothe his desperation. He fell in love—for the first time since his summer romance with Marge Shipple, in Quebec. He met the girl he was to marry, pretty Annelle Hayes, and of all places—on the set of the picture that was rubbing his temper raw.

Mark was in the cockpit of a prop plane that day, making process shots for his bit in Objective Burma, and cursing his fate. He didn't know that John Sheridan, another Warner stock player, had met the pretty Texas U. co-ed in the casting office. He didn't know Annelle had scanned the Warner players' picture gallery dotting the wall, picked out Mark's and asked, "Who's he?"

"A very interesting character who's working with me in a picture," said John. "Want to meet him?"

So they visited his set and there was something in Annelle's fresh friendliness, her pert charm and the understanding look in her gray eyes that made Mark forget his troubles the minute he saw her.

Annelle lived at the Studio Club. She was in Hollywood for a picture try herself, but she wasn't too sure she really wanted it.

Annelle had more than beauty and sweetness. She had great confidence in Mark as an actor; she supplied what he'd lacked—understanding and sympathy.

lucky 13 . . .

He needed someone to keep telling him, "Never mind, you'll get there." Someone to back him up. From the start Annelle had complete faith in Mark. One night they went to Ocean Park to do the fun pier. Mark bought tickets on the roller-coaster, and after one dip, with his arm around Annelle, he said, "Let's get married." Before the teetery car came to a stop, she'd said "Yes." They planned to get married on a Friday, the 13th of January. The 13th was Mark's birthday and Annelle's, too, their lucky number. The fact that Mark's Warner contract ended at last on that same day and that he was out of a job didn't bother Steve. He had an ace in the hole by then.

Mark was playing a bit in Pride of the Marines when the Goldstone Agency called. The test at Twentieth Century-Fox they'd promoted was scheduled. Mark will always be grateful to Delmer Daves, his director, for re-arranging his shooting schedule to let him off. He hurried out to Fox and made the test that was to give Mark Stevens his first real Hollywood chance.

He'd made the test, but he didn't know the verdict when he married Annelle, on the 13th, as advertised. They waltzed into a little church in Beverly Hills and the minister's wife was their witness. They didn't have a honeymoon, and Mark had no place but his room to take his bride. They kept the wedding a secret for four months until they could find a place to live. The new Mrs. Stevens stayed on at the Studio Club and the newlyweds still had dates. Mark waited for the news on his test—and stewed in his own impatient juice.

But while he paced the floor of his room, Mark's test was writing his future at Twentieth. It went first to Rufus Le Maire, the casting director. He took it to Bryan Foy, the "B" boss of the lot. Brynie already had an actor cast in a prison drama he was making, Within These Walls. He looked at Mark's test and changed his mind fast.

"That's the man I want," he said. He pulled the other actor out. Mark was at home when the telephone rang. Herb Tobias had the good news. "It's a contract—$275 a week. Can you go right to work?"

"You mean they've got a part for me already?"

"Yep—in a 'B'—but a good one."

"A-B-C-D or E—I don't give a damn," shouted Mark. "They can use up the alphabet if it's really an acting job."

Within These Walls was a prison picture, but it gave Mark Stevens the freedom he'd been desperately seeking. The freedom from his own anger, the heart-sickening rage he invariably threw himself into when he was ignored, scorned or belittled. Because Mark acquired his first boosters with that first real acting job. Bryan Foy and his ace producer, Ben Silvey, thought Mark was wonderful. They told him so. They built him up. He purred like a kitten and blossomed like a rose at last.

But that wasn't all that happened. The plans Bryan Foy had to make him a busy star of "B" pictures had been vetoed. And by the boss at 20th-Fox himself, Darryl Zanuck. Zanuck took one look at Mark on the screen and said, "No more 'B's.' Hold him for a good part. He's star stuff." But Mark didn't know all of that. All he knew was that Zanuck was making him wait around. He waited seven months—and being Mark Stevens—he darned near went off his nut.

Those seven months were the Kid's Last Fight for Mark Stevens. He scrapped with his own fretful impatience and won—because while the delay made him wild—he knew he was being appreciated, valued—that at last he was a man with a future.

The only job he did at the studio was a test for Fallen Angel, although Director Otto Preminger told him frankly, "It's probably a waste of time. I want Dana Andrews if I can get him." He got him all right. But that test was no waste of time for Mark. It landed in the hands of Herb Tobias and became the one-way ticket to the stardom Mark longed for. Herb showed it to Producer William Periera at RKO. When the news came to Mark one day—that RKO might co-star him with Joan Fontaine in From This Day Forward, the old jumpiness hit him again.

It was triply tough for Mark to endure

"Some friends dropped in, dear. Could you put on a clean apron?"

Are you really sure of your present deodorant? Test it against Fresh
See for yourself why more and more women are switching to Fresh—the new cream deodorant they find the most effective and so gentle

Use FRESH and be lovelier to love

Lovely to know . . . that you can really rely on Fresh. Fresh contains the most effective perspiration-stopping ingredient known to science!

Lovely to use . . . creamy Fresh stays smooth . . . never greasy, gritty or sticky . . . doesn't dry out.

And gentle . . . Fresh contains a patented ingredient that makes it gentle to skin, safe for fabrics.

No wonder . . . more and more women are switching to Fresh.

FRESH
CREAM DEODORANT
STOPS PERSPIRATION
FRESH is approved by the American Medical Association for advertising in their publications.

© 1947, The Pharma-Craft Corporation, Inc.

DO YOU WANT...

LONGER HAIR?

★THEN TRY THIS PROVEN EASY SYSTEM ON YOUR HAIR ★ ★ ★ ★

Helps Prevent Brittle Ends Breaking Off!

● Hair May Get Longer

when scalp and hair conditions are normal and the dry, brittle, breaking off hair can be retarded by supplementing the natural hair oils, it has a chance to get longer and much more beautiful. Just try the easy JUELENE System 7 days and let your mirror prove results. Your money back if not delighted. See if Juelene's tendency to help your hair to become softer, silkier, more lustrous than it has been before—in just one short week helps your hair gain its normal beauty,

● BRUNETTES, BLONDES, TITIANS!

Just try this System on your HAIR seven days and see if you are really enjoying the pleasure of LONGER HAIR that so often captures Love and Romance for you.

● Send No Money!

Just mail the convenient introductory coupon. Take advantage of this Fully Guaranteed Introductory Offer today, and know at last the happiness of possessing really lovelier hair and be envied by so many.

JUEL COMPANY, 4727 N. Damen, Chicago 25, Illinois

Mail This INTRODUCTORY COUPON!

JUEL COMPANY, Dept. C-603
4727 North Damen, Chicago 25, Ill.

Yes, I want easy-to-manage, longer hair. I will try the JUELENE SYSTEM for 7 days. If my mirror doesn't show satisfactory results, I will ask for my money back.

☐ I am enclosing $1.00.
☐ Send C. O. D. plus postage.

JUELENE Comes in 2 Forms

☐ POMADE ☐ LIQUID

NAME _____

ADDRESS _____

CITY _____ ZONE ____ STATE _____

Our Customers Participate in Gifts

the suspense that dragged him over the hots and colds for weeks. Almost every star in Hollywood was up for that part. It finally simmered down to Mark and one other actor. That's when Bill Periera, with Joan Fontaine's okay, decided to pick the winner with a contest.

He called all the studio secretaries at RKO together one afternoon, ran off Mark's test and his rival's. He asked for a vote. There were thirty-six secretary judges. The vote was for Stevens—34 to 2.

Then began the battle of the telephones—RKO versus Twentieth Century-Fox. Three separate times Mark saw the deal fizzle out, because RKO wanted half of Mark's contract and Zanuck wasn't giving his aces away. They wanted him for peanuts; Zanuck demanded a fat price. It see-sawed back and forth but the good news finally came through and Mark pinched himself. He was a star—it was in the contract—right along with Joan Fontaine. There was his chance, at long last, in black and white.

What Mark Stevens did with it is happy Hollywood history by now—happy for Mark Stevens and Hollywood, too. In From This Day Forward he won the applause of critics, of new and ardent fans. He rose to the top of Darryl Zanuck's new star list of '46. He won a star's job in The Dark Corner, which let him act, and now in I Wonder Who's Kissing Her Now, which let him dance and sing.

under the knife . . .

The other battle Mark won was a two-fisted scrap with bad health. Mark's had two major operations since he reached stardom. He's had his backbone laid bare by a surgeon's knife twice to correct an old diving injury. He's been punctured by penicillin needles so much he feels like a sieve.

But Steve gives his battered body the back of his hand. He can't be bothered—even if he's the nurses' Nemesis and the doctors' despair—to let mere flesh and blood get him down.

Last September, for instance, he drove Annelle and his brand new namesake, Mark Richard Stevens, Jr., proudly home from the hospital. "A little ham just like me," Mark grins proudly.

And then, right before his birthday last December 13th—that lucky 13th for Mark and Annelle—good news came from Darryl Zanuck: Mark's contract was torn up and his salary tripled. The night before his birthday, Mark was wishing out loud.

"What would really make me happy now," he mused to Annelle, "would be to see Mother and Dad Cooke. It's been a long time—five years. Maybe now I rate a trip home."

He didn't particularly like it, either, when she froze up on the idea. "Oh," said Annelle hastily, "you'll get around to that later."

So the next morning, bright and early on his birthday, the knock came at the door. And in walked the very people he wanted to see most—his Mother and Dad, both maybe with a little more gray and with an extra wrinkle or two—but the same pair who'd backed him all his life and now, proud as Punch, they were, of Sonny Stevens, the problem boy of Montreal. "It was so nice of Annelle to ask us out," his mother said. So he gave Annelle a kiss, then turned to his Maw.

"Think I've changed?" grinned Mark.

Mrs. Cooke took a long, happy look before she answered. "Yes, you have. You look like you're happy—for the first time since you were thirteen years old. I think you've found what you wanted at last, here in America, as I said you'd find it some day."

☆ Blondes!

Give Your Time-Darkened Hair That Golden Look!

• Make your hair beautifully blonde again. Give it that wonderful golden look . . . the "little girl blondeness" which the years may have dulled.

If you want dazzling blonde hair that attracts attention, you can have it...so easily ...whether you are a blonde, brunette or redhead. Even if your hair is faded and streaked, you may make it gloriously blonde again! With improved Golden Hair Wash, you can control the exact degree of lightness you desire.

Perfected by experts in hair care, Marchand's Golden Hair Wash is complete in itself for use at home. Not a dye, not an expensive treatment, it's easier than ever to use... yourself...at home!

The new Marchand's Golden Hair Wash is ideal, too, for lightening arm and leg hair. Try it today!

MAKE Spare Time PROFITS

Sell EVERYDAY GREETING CARDS

Easy to earn extra CASH. Show lovely Everyday Greeting Cards for Birthdays, "Get-Well", etc. Assortment of 14 sells for only $1. Take orders, make up to 100% cash profit. 12 other Assortments, Stationery, Gift Wrappings, retail 60c up. START NOW—write for samples now!

PHILLIPS CARD CO., 740 HUNT ST., NEWTON, MASS.

★ TO THOSE WHO WRITE

★ WORDS FOR SONGS, BUT CAN'T WRITE MUSIC: We may be able to help you. Our organization of trained composers and songwriters is at your service. Collaborate with professional songwriters; make the most of your song-writing ability. Send us your words for free examination and details.

★ FIVE STAR MUSIC MASTERS, 475 Beacon Bldg., Boston, Mass.

FREE!! MOVIE STAR PHOTOS IN FULL COLOR

IRVING KLAW, LARGEST DISTRIBUTOR OF MOVIE STAR PHOTOS OFFERS FREE . . . HIS PERSONAL SELECTION OF 5 GORGEOUS COLORED 8 x 10 INCH PHOTOS OF POPULAR MOVIE STARS, TO THOSE WHO ORDER "GET ACQUAINTED SET" OF 30 BEAUTIFUL GLOSSY ACTION PHOTOS OF POPULAR MOVIE STARS ONLY $1.00 (PLUS 15 CENTS FOR POSTAGE AND HANDLING)

Each set is our selection from Hollywood Film Companies contains 30 Original Movie Star Action Photos size 8 x 10 inches black and white prints. Don't delay send for your set of 30 thrilling action photos, and get your

FREE PHOTOS plus large Illustrated Movie Star News

Send $1.00 plus 15 cents postage NOW to

IRVING KLAW

212 East 14th St., Dept. F-2, New York 3, N. Y.

EASTER DREAM

(Continued from page 32)

fat flower. But the dream remains the brightest part of the costume.

There's a girl named Esther Williams, for whom the dream came true.

Esther is a movie star, all right, but she's also young and wide-eyed. One day she was talking about how wonderful it would be to have a splendid new Easter outfit, and a MODERN SCREEN spy who had been sneaking around eavesdropping went racing back to write Al and Henry.

Al and Henry got excited, and their excitement spread to Donn, the clothes designer, and John-Frederics, the hat designers, and the first thing Esther knew, she was going Cinderella two or three better.

When she walked into the place called Donn, Ltd., she was slightly nervous. The rug in the salon was a sort of beige-grey, and marvelously thick under her feet. The walls and furniture were modern, and the same beige color, and there were small, bright touches here and there.

Donn himself, a blond man in a red and black jacket, came to say hello to Esther, and he showed her through his work-rooms (he decorated the whole place) and during the entire tour, Esther scarcely took her eyes off his red and black jacket.

When she couldn't stand it any longer, she began, "Did you—"

And Donn grinned, and said, yes, he had designed it, and she said she thought it was so cute, the way the lapels almost came to his waist, and he said you had to be extreme in this business, and then they got around to Esther's Easter outfit.

Donn's clothes are beautiful. So are the women who go into them. He designs for Lana Turner and Judy Garland, to name a couple, but right then, he was giving his complete attention to Esther, who went from dress to dress gasping, "Oh, look at this! Oh, isn't that charming? Oh, oh, oh—"

She ended up with an Easter trousseau, practically. A white evening gown, a beautiful thing, a thing that would melt in your mouth. A little black suit with a checkered vest; a dress with a darling print—to top things off . . .

By the time Esther was ready to leave Donn, Ltd., she was floating. But as any young girl could have told her, floating around without a hat is very undignified stuff. A bonnet's the most crucial part of an Easter outfit anyway.

So to John-Frederics. Everybody's heard of John-Frederics, Esther included. But she'd never been inside their Hollywood place. All she knew was that they made fabulous hats, and were probably Lily Dache's worst enemies.

She found out more. John-Frederics, Inc., has bleached wood panelling and tables and cabinets. John-Frederics, Inc., has crystal candelabra, and soft lights, and $500 mink hats.

The designer himself comes out from New York for his Spring and Fall shows, and his Hollywood place is run by a Mr. Wally and a Mr. Rex. Mr. Wally took care of Esther. He showed her sets of hand-painted stoles and hats, at $350 a set. He showed her handbags and cosmetics and jewelry. He left her breathless.

And she left him minus several of his most enchanting numbers.

Esther Williams is going to look handsome in that Easter Parade. As for you, you'll probably go back to chocolate rabbits. Or to shining up that gay old dream.

How much freedom can a career girl enjoy?

102 OUT OF 127 MODELS, ARTISTS, WRITERS REPORT NO CHAFING WITH FREE-STRIDE MODESS

Bright young careerists—girls to whom freedom of action means so much—have made a smart discovery for you!

Girls who had suffered chafe with their regular napkin tested a new, improved napkin, Free-Stride Modess. Object: To see if it gave freedom from chafe.

The answer: 102 out of 127 reported no chafing with Free-Stride Modess!

The secret of chafe-free comfort so many girls found in Free-Stride Modess lies in the clever fashioning of the napkin edges.

Free-Stride Modess has extra cotton on its edges—extra softness—right where the cause of chafe begins.

The extra cotton also acts to direct and retain moisture inside the napkin, keeping the edges dry and smooth longer. And dry, smooth edges don't chafe!

So safe, too! Free-Stride Modess has a triple safety shield and a sealed-in deodorant to keep you confident. On sale everywhere now. Product of Personal Products Corporation.

Walk with comfort! Try the new Free-stride Modess!

Before After

"This is my idea of success!"

"My husband and my son are both proud of me now," says Mrs. Mildred Smith, Cleveland, Ohio, "and that means success to a wife and mother." Mrs. Smith can be proud herself—of the way she made herself over at home, but she gives the credit to the DuBarry Success Course.

"The Course was easy," she says. "Each day was a thrilling adventure. I'm down from 150 to 116; from size 18 to size 14. My skin was never bad, but DuBarry beauty care improved it. Now I make up with skill; do my hair smartly and save beauty shop bills. I have only one regret—that I didn't start sooner."

How about YOU? Unhappy about your looks? The DuBarry Success Course shows you, right at home, how to remodel your figure, have a smooth, glowing skin, style your hair, use make-up for glamour, be at your best. It's exciting and it's fun. You follow the same methods taught by Ann Delafield at the famous Richard Hudnut Salon, Fifth Ave., New York.

FREE! Two Beauty-Packed Booklets To Brighten Your Future—

1 Top Secrets from Ann Delafield—13 wonder-working ways to help you have a lovelier face and figure.

2 Your Face, Your Figure and Your Future—the thrilling story of the DuBarry Success Course. How it works, what it has done for more than 300,000 others, what it can do for you.

Send Coupon NOW!

DuBARRY SUCCESS COURSE

ANN DELAFIELD, Directing

RICHARD HUDNUT SALON
Dept. SR-59, 693 Fifth Ave.
New York 22, New York

REPLACEMENT OR REFUND OF MONEY Guaranteed by Good Housekeeping IF DEFECTIVE OR NOT AS ADVERTISED THEREIN

Please send me, free, the two booklets: "Top Secrets from Ann Delafield," and "Your Face, Your Figure and Your Future."

Miss
Mrs_____

Street_____

City_____ Zone_____ State_____

Accepted for advertising in publications of the American Medical Association

WHY GENE'S DIVORCING MY BROTHER

(Continued from page 30)

Tyrone Power . . ."

"Oleg Cassini is crazy about a beautiful (and mysterious) Hollywood lady . . ."

"Now they've kissed and made up . . ."

"Now they're back at each other's throats . . ."

And so forth!

Not a grain of truth in a carload. I think the Ty Power rumors originated smack on the set during the filming of The Razor's Edge. In fact, when Oleg arrived one day for Gene, one of the technicians voiced an uncomplimentary remark regarding Gene and Ty and promptly wound up on the floor.

The whisperings spread from the set; finally they made print. All this was strengthened by the fact that Ty and his own wife, Annabella, were also on the verge of breaking up.

The truth of the matter is that Ty, Oleg, Gene and Annabella were all friends—good friends. They were often seen together. But the rumor-mongers made nothing of it until the question of Oleg's divorce rose to the fore. Had there been anything between Gene and Ty, I'm certain that Oleg and Ty would have engaged in (at least) sharp words. They did not. They are still friends.

Okay, so what did cause the break?

Don't accuse me of taking the easy way out when I blame . . . circumstances. It's a vague word, I know, but I'll explain:

First, you must understand that one of the unfortunate things about Hollywood marriages is that "famous" people more than anybody else are apt to get into each other's hair. Not only are they temperamental, but they move under a constant strain. The merciless glare of the public eye is no pleasant thing. It causes the tiniest, most ridiculous spat to become a home-shaking event.

Look back at Oleg and Gene before either knew what the word fame meant. They eloped nearly six years ago (against the consent of Gene's parents), and at that time neither was established.

Gene had been miscast so many times that the critics had a field day lambasting her. Many producers called her a mediocre actress—nothing more.

Oleg, for his part, was a little-known designer. True, he had established an enviable reputation in Rome and Paris, but six years ago in Hollywood he was just another guy named Joe.

designing husband . . .

Oleg began "dressing up Gene." Sweaters and drab skirts gave way to glamor gowns with trick lines. He showed such a marked improvement over studio-picked designers that eventually he, alone, designed Gene's clothes. And he made her one of Hollywood's Best Dressed Women.

But all was not peachy. Oleg is strictly Continental. He was born and raised in Europe. He lived in a host of countries, studied in various European schools and learned to speak four or five languages. Gene, on the other hand, is strictly American—and the two personalities are bound to clash.

Gene, for instance, wanted to "Americanize" Oleg. She dreamed of him with a crew hair-cut and with the speech and general makeup of an American. A sterling goal, indeed, but hardly a practical one. Birth and tradition and breeding are not easily replaced in a matter of years.

And I ask myself—would Gene have ever fallen in love with the "crew haircut" type of male? I doubt it. I doubt it because I think that European quality is the very thing Gene liked upon first meeting Oleg. But as I have said, I believe this difference is a trifling one—as long as you are not famous.

Where did fame first start? I think Gene first tasted it in Laura, which was a hit. Other hits followed, and she was set.

For Oleg, too, things were opening up. After having left the Army (where Gene had spent a year with him—a year in which she gave up pictures), he was signed on as chief wardrobe designer at the Eagle-Lion studios. Next, he opened up his own thriving business (Casanova), and eventually signed a separate contract with 20th Century-Fox. His reputation as one of the country's top designers was definitely established—as was Gene's reputation as one of our finest actresses.

Their affairs became the public's affairs. Their every move made print.

Their careers were different. They could seldom arrange their schedules to see one another. When Gene was working, Oleg was free. And vice versa. At nights, when they were worn out, they would hunt for rest and comfort in some small cafe—only to be sought out by autograph collectors. Weary and aggravated, they might easily nag at each other.

Hot tempers can get hotter under these circumstances, and sense of uneasiness is increased hourly. What were formerly "nothings" were now subjects for long, heated arguments. Add to that the fact that (as I have mentioned) Gene's parents never really sanctioned her marriage.

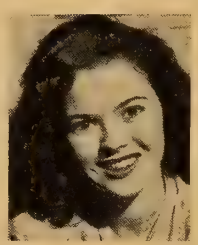
Comprehend the fancies that play in one's mind. They have been sentenced to divorce—by press and public opinion—before the word ever entered their minds.

Now the thing has got to be "played to the finish," as it were. It's almost too late to back out of divorce proceedings—because "everybody" expects it now.

Gene already has started proceedings. I, as her brother-in-law, am not so certain that she will ever complete them. I believe they actually still love each other. I know they are both tremendously fond of their young daughter, Daria. They might still be held together. It's a strange world . . .

Anyway, I'll wait for the final results before I make up my mind.

I SAW IT HAPPEN



When Shirley Temple's husband, John Agar, was still in the Army, Shirley came to Salt Lake City to visit him. One evening I took my grandmother to the Centre Theater to see a picture, and found a long waiting line. Since Grandma is about 80, I went into the lobby to find a place for her to sit. But there were no seats. I stood there, looking around, when Shirley stepped out of line and smiled, showing those famous dimples. "Why don't you take my place?" she said. "We'll go to the end of the line." I started to object, but she said, "Oh, we'd just as soon wait—so long as we're waiting together!" and she took her new husband's arm and went to the end of the line.

Beverly Burt
Salt Lake City, Utah

FIGHTING LADY

(Continued from page 60)

step nearer there is food for thought in the fact that Olivia collided with her thirtieth birthday, the decision to marry and a nomination as the best actress of the year, all at once.

This year, in two pictures, namely To Each His Own and The Dark Mirror, Olivia has given five outstanding performances. Regardless of Academy Award arguments, no other actress has even come close to that. To explain: in the first picture, Olivia played a young girl in love, a frantic mother who had lost her child, and a hardboiled, elderly business woman. The other two performances were the Ruth and Terry roles opposite Lew Ayres in The Dark Mirror. Most capable actresses would not have too much trouble carrying off the first three chores, but the dual role must be considered a singular achievement.

Just what these dual roles added up to is best expressed by Thomas Mitchell, who said: "The public may see the picture and be amazed by Olivia's performance. But no one except those with personal experience will appreciate the understanding and intellect necessary to deliver as she did."

no tantrums for livvy . . .

It should be added that at no time did Olivia crack under the strain and relieve herself with tears, fainting spells or outbursts of temperament as is more or less a common practice. On the other hand, because she loves her roles so intensely, there were occasional brushes with Director Siodmak over script interpretation. Of course, a fight with Olivia is not to be viewed in the popular conception of the word. Olivia does not do battle against people but for the right to uphold her convictions. But for this, she might have lost her famed legal campaign to break her Warner contract. Most young actresses are too concerned with the business of living up to their station to dare risk their careers in such a battle. Olivia stayed off the screen for two solid years while an army of lawyers skirmished through the courts to a decision in her favor.

As a result, Olivia's lawsuit changed the lives and careers of every player in pictures—on one simple point. If a player refuses to do a part, or takes a suspension for other reasons, studios may not add the length of that suspension to the contract. Thus an actor need no longer live in fear of a suspension which might add months to a contract from which he wants to escape.

Lest anyone at this point believe that it is the author's intention to make a "double-domed heroine" of Olivia, the memory of one of her brightest interviews is called to mind. The subject was a press agent-inspired story on the occasion of her 1000th movie kiss.

The interviewer was Frederick C. Othman, now a Washington correspondent. He asked her whether her first screen kiss, engaged in with Dick Powell, was a brotherly affair.

"Brotherly?" retorted Olivia. "I do not know the meaning of the word." She then went on to rib Errol Flynn, who was somewhat under the weather at the time, by pointing out that he had to go to the hospital after each one of their kissing scenes.

Recently, during the rehearsal of a radio broadcast, Olivia called for a chair and a cup of coffee. These were brought to her promptly. Olivia looked up from her

NEW BISSELLS* NEED NO HANDLE PRESSURE!

New "Bisco-matic"* Brush Action adjusts automatically to any rug—thick or thin!

Sweeps clean with one easy swoop, even under beds and chairs! Actually the pick-up is so perfect you never have to press on the handle at all!

Available now in limited quantities at Bissell dealers only—complete with exclusive "Sta-up" Handle and the new, easier "Flip-O" Empty.

NEW BISSELL SWEEPERS

with patented "Bisco-matic" Brush Action

*REG. U. S. PATENT OFF. BISSELL CARPET SWEEPER CO., GRAND RAPIDS 2, MICH.

AMAZING THING! By Cooper

AN AMAZING NEW SCIENTIFICALLY COMPOUNDED TREATMENT FOR PIMPLES CALLED TING... WORKS WHILE IT HELPS HIDE THEM!

WITH PIMPLES ALL GONE LOVE FLIES IN THE WINDOW

APPLY TING TO PIMPLES, LET IT DRY— AND WHISK OFF EXCESS POWDER. TING IS BOTH FUNGICIDAL AND GERMICIDAL— REALLY WORKS WONDERS FOR EXTERNALLY CAUSED PIMPLES!

IN LAB TESTS TING HAS PROVEN EFFECTIVE IN KILLING ON 60 SECOND CONTACT SPECIFIC TYPES OF FUNGI THAT SOMETIMES CAUSE SKIN BLOTCHES

EVEN IF OTHER PRODUCTS HAVE FAILED, TRY AMAZING TING TODAY! ALL DRUGGISTS ONLY 50¢

GIRLS! Want quick curls?

WHAT girl doesn't want quick curls these days! Especially when that favorite fella gives you a call at the last minute. With New Wildroot Hair Set you can set that favorite hair-do in less time. It's absolutely tops for quick good grooming that's so important these days. New Wildroot Hair Set contains processed Lanolin. Leaves any texture of hair soft, natural-looking, and at its lovely best. Replaces old-fashioned thick gummy wave sets. Light bodied. Faster drying. Lets you style your favorite hair-do at home quickly, without fuss or disappointment.

NEW WILDROOT HAIR SET

BLONDES!
lighten hair safely

this easy home way

With New Home Shampoo Made Especially for Blondes

This special shampoo helps keep light hair from darkening—brightens faded blonde hair. Called BLONDEX, it quickly makes a rich cleansing lather. Instantly removes the dingy, dust-laden film that makes hair dark, old-looking. Takes only 11 minutes at home. Gives hair attractive luster and highlights. Safe for children's hair. Get BLONDEX at 10c, drug and department stores.

New SAFE "Touch-up" Rinse Washes Off Like Make-up

When you finish with your BLONDEX shampoo, use BLONDEX GOLDEN RINSE to add the lustrous touch of golden color so often needed. Not permanent—washes off as easily as make-up. Costs little. Sold everywhere.

script in wide-eyed concern.

"Oh," she exclaimed, pointing to a tall radio actor who had been moaning about the anguish an expectant father goes through, "the chair and coffee are not for me. Pass them on to Fred—he's in such a delicate condition."

To many it would seem that Olivia, until now, has been leading a colorless life. For two years she has been living in a small, but attractive, apartment called The Shoreham. This is but three blocks as the Old Crow flies from a night club called Mocambo. Olivia has been there so seldom that if it were not that headwaiters also go to movies she could walk in unrecognized.

If there are more than a dozen costumes regularly in Olivia's wardrobe, this correspondent will buy her a new hat to go with the average. Olivia's clothes are superbly cut and in good fashion, but more the type worn by a well-dressed Eastern girl than the flamboyant creations for which Hollywood women are famous.

Most of her free time is spent reading scripts. She reads them by the bushel basket full, hoping to find a scant few parts she really wants to do, and may choose of her own free will now that she is a free lance player.

Despite this extreme concentration, which should again put her in line for another Academy nomination next year, Olivia does not lead an unsocial life. She simply circulates in a less obvious sphere than most actresses of equal popularity.

As for perpetuating the beauty of face and figure, she accomplishes this perhaps without being aware of it. On several evenings a week she and Mr. Goodrich walk slightly more than a mile round trip from their apartment down Sunset Boulevard to Schwab's drug store to purchase sundry articles and talk with the natives.

Which they are.

MANHATTAN NOCTURNE

(Continued from page 58)

American air forces Major; and it seemed that both Kip and Major Jimmy, who had been on the point of taking off to wider horizons, would be delighted to delay their departure for further refreshment.

Kip was a lad Rex had known for years, a cheerfully disenchanted young bachelor who had seen the war through with a grin. Jimmy, it appeared, was of a pattern—a lanky, graceful chap with a charming smile, green eyes that knew too much, and a sense of humor. The three of them made a group designed for the evening Rex had in mind. "Where," asked Jimmy, "shall we start?"

"Let's do the luxury circle first," Rex said, "beginning with the Pierre and working down through the Sherry-Netherland, the Savoy Plaza and the St. Regis. Then—"

"The Village," Kip suggested, "and the Bowery. Sammy's—"

"And then uptown." Jimmy gave a sudden, exuberant chuckle. "One Hundred and Sixty-fourth Street."

They were still at the St. Moritz at nine o'clock; and Rex and Kip were in the throes of reminiscence. "You disappeared," Kip was saying, "along about '42. I never found out what happened. One moment your were flying along with us, and the next you were sitting in a bomb shelter coping with that radar thing. Weren't you bored senseless with it?"

"You're being sensitive and very nice," Rex told him, "but you needn't bother. The truth is, I'm nearly blind in one eye. When the shortage of pilots was over they began insisting on people with third-dimensional vision, oddly enough. So I went into radar."

the bowery, the bowery . . .

"I suggest we go to Sammy's," Jimmy said. Their cab-driver deposited them in the Bowery only one block from Sammy's, and they made a three-man phalanx down the sidewalk, through the accumulated characters, gently elbowing away the professional panhandlers and threading their way through the throng of innocuous drunks, until they were inside and seated.

"The nice thing about your life," Kip was saying, "is that it's been so satisfactory. No struggle. No fuss. No black years. Lucky chap."

"If you think," Rex said, "I've been wallowing in that thing called the lap of luxury ever since I was born, you've some more thinking due you. What d'you think I've been doing all these years? Playing Noel Coward? Living in a Mayfair flat with a gentleman's gentleman and a smart Rolls Bentley waiting at my door?"

"No offense."

"Let's go over to the Village," Jimmy said.

They went to the Village Inn, big, spacious, vulgar. They found a table.

"If you think," Rex said, "it's been all velvet, let me disillusion you. Without undue emphasis on my past life, that is."

"Well, happy day," Jimmy said.

all wet . . .

"But d'you know what happened to me on my first assignment in repertory?" Rex asked. "I was cast as a native in O'Neill's Gold, and I was supposed to climb a prop palm tree, sight a ship, and then slide down again. Only they fireproofed the blasted tree an hour before curtain, and it was still wet, and when I slid down again all my makeup had come off. Leaving me white in front and dark behind."

"What'd you do?"

"I huddled, rest of the act."

"And all that for thirty shillings a week," added Kip.

Jimmy looked blank.

"About $7.50," Rex explained. "You see what I mean by everything not being crumpets and tea all the while."

They went on to Ruban Bleu, arriving half an hour before the midnight show. Rex went over to another table for a few minutes to chat with an acquaintance, and Jimmy said, "There's one of the smoothest guys I've ever met."

"Have you seen his wife?"

"Isn't she the Lilli Palmer who played the Italian girl in Cloak and Dagger?"

"Right. Lord, she's a beautiful girl. Odd how they met—he was waiting to be called up in 1940 and decided to do a tour in Design For Living. Lilli was in another show and they hit Birmingham at the same time. Met in a restaurant and had a pleasant evening, and thought that was the end of it. Then by a coincidence both outfits went on to the next city together. Seemed too much like fate not to do something about it. So they were married."

"Just like that?"

"Well, there was a bit of a wait. Rex was married before, you know, to a retired Army major's daughter, Collette Thomas. It hadn't worked for years, but they'd never done anything about it."

"Here's the show," Rex said, sliding back into his seat. "I've seen it three times. There's a gal who does Hildegarde wonderfully well."

"Let's catch Hildegarde herself at the Persian Room," Jimmy said. "We'd be in time for a song or two. . ."

By five the next morning the streets of Harlem were deserted, and a light rain had begun to fall. The three friends, emerging from one of the noisier clubs, let the cab they had chartered follow them for a block while they walked. It was Rex's suggestion. "My head needs clearing," he said. His eyes were stinging from the smoke of the hot, tightly packed rooms. It had been a wonderful, fantastic night but there was something missing and he felt oddly depressed.

Suddenly he knew what it was. "I wish Lilli were here," he said aloud.

"Does she like to walk in the rain?"

He laughed. "Yes," he said, "but that isn't precisely what I meant. . ."

Lilli met him at Pasadena in his own Cadillac, with three-year-old Carey standing smartly in the back seat; and she said, "Well, darling, did you have a marvelous time?"

"Mmm," he said, obviously with too much relish, because she gave him a quick look of comprehension.

"I think," she said, "I'll come along next trip."

"I was desolate without you," he told her. "We must make sure you don't miss the next one."

"I'll make sure," she said.

There were important portions of his life that had not emerged, even by implication in terms of twice told tales, that revealing evening in New York. There were little things that only he knew, or that he and Lilli shared knowledge of, together: the years of struggle and poverty, of dank, awful lodgings in small English towns; the despair of realizing, when he finally got into movies, that all his stage experience had done not one thing to prepare him for film techniques—

But this year in America was compensation for all that. As they drove up to the Mediterranean house he had bought from Dick Greene, he remembered a certain draughty room in Brighton, complete with cold running water and a family of three cockroaches, and smiled.

afternoon in the sun . . .

They had tea on the terrace and sat afterward in the late afternoon sun, watching Carey ride his tricycle.

"About this New York thing," Lilli said, after a lazy, companionable silence. "There's a sort of deal on for a radio broadcast for both of us, in a month or two, and we could go ostensibly for that, but truthfully speaking, I'd like to be in the East when my sister has her baby. Also," she added thoughtfully, "I'd like to be in New York with you, and have you show me the itinerary you followed."

"Mmm," he said.

"Was it that much fun?" she asked, rather wistfully.

"Yes," he said, "it was. And you needn't sound so much like a wife. But I'll tell you what—we'll do Los Angeles one evening this week, and I'll take you down to Central Avenue, and Skid Row, and a few sinks of sin I've heard about. Then, if you develop a passion for low life, you shall see New York as only a cad of my stamp can show it to you."

"Do you know," she said suddenly, her face lighting up, "I'll bet five pounds you spent a thoroughly dull fortnight in New York, surrounded at every turn by stuffy matrons and guarded by studio people, and didn't have a chance to fly off at all."

He offered her a look of utter astonishment. "How did you guess?"

She settled back in her chair and surveyed her nails with a certain smugness. "Just wifely intuition," she said.

WILL YOUR DAUGHTER enter marriage blindly.

Because She Only Knows 'HALF THE TRUTH' About These Intimate Physical Facts!

Often a daughter—too shy to ask her mother—is filled with untruths from well meaning but ignorant friends. Falsehoods which may prove very costly to her in her married life ahead.

Your daughter has a right to the TRUTH. She should be told how important douching often is to intimate feminine cleanliness, health, charm, marriage happiness—and to combat one of woman's most serious deodorant problems.

And what's so important—she should be told about ZONITE for the douche!

No Other Type Liquid Antiseptic-Germicide Tested Is SO POWERFUL yet SO HARMLESS

No well-informed woman would think of using weak, old-fashioned or dangerous products for the douche. These DO NOT and CAN NOT give the germicidal and deodorizing action of ZONITE.

No other type liquid antiseptic-germicide for the douche of all those tested is SO POWERFUL yet SO SAFE to delicate tissues.

ZONITE positively contains no phenol, bichloride of mercury or creosote. ZONITE is non-poisonous, non-irritating, non-burning. Despite its great strength you can use ZONITE as directed as often as needed without risk of injury.

Zonite Principle Developed By Famous Surgeon and Chemist

ZONITE actually destroys and removes odor-causing waste substances. Helps guard against infection. It's so powerfully effective no germs of any kind tested have ever been found that it will not kill on contact. You know it's not always possible to contact all the germs in the tract. BUT YOU CAN BE SURE that ZONITE KILLS every reachable germ and keeps them from multiplying.

Buy ZONITE today. Any drugstore.

Zonite
FOR NEWER feminine hygiene

FREE! NEW!

For amazing enlightening NEW Booklet containing frank discussion of intimate physical facts, recently published — mail this coupon to Zonite Products, Dept. MSC-47, 370 Lexington Ave., New York 17, N. Y.

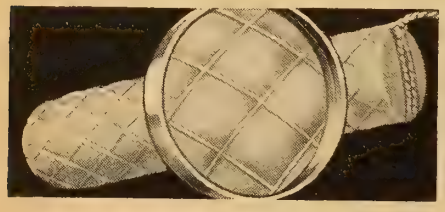
Name_____

Address_____

City_____ State_____

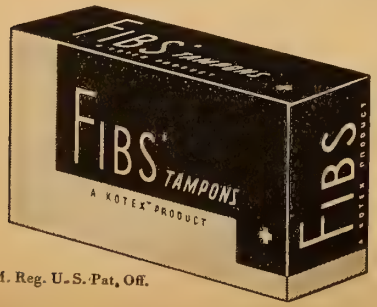
Rounded end like this

One glance at the gently rounded end of Fibs and you know insertion's bound to be easy with this tampon. And your first experience proves it's so! Next month, switch to FIBS.



AND FIBS are quilted!

Only Fibs are quilted to control expansion . . . keep them from fluffing up to an uncomfortable size which might cause pressure, irritation, difficult removal. And quilting helps prevent cotton particles from clinging to delicate internal tissues . . . a FIBS safety feature women always appreciate. For comfort, for safety in internal protection—switch to FIBS tampons. •



*T. M. Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

UNCLE JIMMY

(Continued from page 56)

but famous, distinguished, beloved by all, is up for a crack at his second Hollywood Academy Award. Maybe he won't get it, with Greg Peck and Freddie March running strong at the finish, but even if he doesn't, Jimmy Stewart has proved in It's A Wonderful Life that his post-war comeback is solid and wonderful indeed. And he's as terrific to me now as he was then.

But I don't think Jimmy Stewart quite believes that yet. Not with a string of movie hits back of him longer than Joe DiMaggio's batting record. Not with Hollywood and the movie-going world at his feet again. I'm not sure Jimmy Stewart ever will believe he's much shucks as a movie hero, just as no one will ever sell him on the idea that he was ever a war hero, ever anything but "one of eleven million guys in service."

But I'm glad I thought Jimmy was something special 'way back then in New York and did something about it. When Divided by Three closed, I came back to Hollywood, looking for a job. I stopped in to see Rufus LeMaire, casting director at M-G-M.

"You're just back from New York, Hedda," he said. "See any picture bets?"

get that boy . . .

"You bet I did," I told him "There's a boy just played with me who can't help be a big star!" And I told him the story Before I left his office Rufus was dictating a rush New York wire to his secretary. "Locate James Stewart through Guthrie McClintic stop make test and airmail immediately." Jimmy followed that test West.

Why was I so red hot then on that raw, unknown youngster? For the same reason that I'm red hot on Jimmy Stewart today and always will be. Because I know —I ought to—what makes fine actors. Not just a beautiful "puss," a torso, a personality smile or wavy hair. What makes the really good ones is sincerity, simplicity, utter honesty and a natural instinct for acting—an instinct for what's right and what's real. That's what Jimmy Stewart has. That's what he was born with.

God just has His arms around Jimmy Stewart as He always has had. I don't think there's an inch of conniving cleverness in Jim Stewart's six feet three. In fact, Jimmy bends his lanky frame over backwards to duck the limelight. Nothing makes Jimmy run, but when he says his piece he's right. He knows—from inside.

I can prove that—and it's a story that I've never told before. I saw it happen, right on the stage, in that same McClintic

MODERN SCREEN

"Heels seem a bit high, don't they?"

ELEGANT AT ELEVEN
Hair all smooth and neat—ready for that lunch date. But now look what happened!

WISPY AT ONE
Tillie's coiffure couldn't "take it." Neither could her beau (men hate messy hair) . . .

Tillie was a "Two hour" belle 'til she discovered Nestle HAIRLAC

— the delicately perfumed hair lacquer

Now she pats a few drops of Nestle Hairlac on her hair when she's finished combing it—and her hair-do stays smooth all day! You can have neat and shining hair all day long, too; get Nestle Hairlac at your drug or department store today.

Keeps Hair under control and lustrous

YOU CAN LEARN TO BE AN ARTIST

START DRAWING AT HOME IN YOUR SPARE TIME— Trained artists are capable of earning $50 $60 $75 or more a week! Our practical home study training makes it fun to learn COMMERCIAL ART, DESIGNING and CARTOONING all in ONE course. No previous Art experience necessary. Write for details in FREE BOOK, "Art for Pleasure & Profit." STATE AGE. VETERANS! Course approved for training under "G.I." Bill.
WASHINGTON SCHOOL OF ART
Studio 804-H, 1115 15th St., N.W.
Washington 5, D. C.

DON'T DYE GRAY HAIR

until you try Mary T. Goldman's Gray Hair Coloring Preparation. This famous "Color Control" method gives hair the lovely, appealing color you desire, quickly —or so gradually even close friends won't guess your secret.

So simple! Safe! Sure! Comb this clear liquid through your gray, bleached or faded hair. Watch "Color Control" action give your hair the youthful-looking shade you want. Pronounced harmless by medical authorities (no skin test needed). Won't harm wave or hair texture. 50 year favorite of millions. Now help yourself to lustrous hair beauty easily—in the privacy of your home!

Buy a bottle today! Sold on money-back guarantee by drug and department stores. Or if you prefer, order direct from Mary T. Goldman Co., St. Paul 2, Minnesota. Send $1.92 (includes tax) for regular size, mailed postpaid in plain wrapper. State color desired: Black, Dark Brown, Medium Brown, Light Brown, Blonde, Auburn.

play Divided By Three, where I first met Jimmy Stewart. I was in it too.

Divided By Three was a family love tangle. A woman tried to parcel out her love between her husband, his best friend and her son. It was touchy stuff. One night we were at dress rehearsal in New Haven, Connecticut, before opening on Broadway, when Guthrie McClintic called Jimmy Stewart aside right before curtain time. He told him he had a new line for him at the end of the second act, where Jimmy discovered his mother was philandering with his father's best pal. Guthrie gave Jimmy the line. "You turn to her then and say, 'You're nothing but a ——!'"

It was such a strong word it's even unprintable here. Jimmy turned white as a sheet, and shook his head. "Mr. McClintic," he said, "I can't do that. No matter what my mother did I couldn't call her that. It's against life."

But McClintic knew what he wanted; he was powerful and persuasive. Jimmy said the line that night and at the opening in New York, too. It was such an unpleasant shock that it killed his notices and wrecked his spot—helped wreck the whole play. It ran only eight weeks. Jimmy was right—from the start. He had the right taste, the right instinct. He usually has. He has never acquired the usual actor's callousness.

Jimmy trusts anyone who has proved friendship for him. He's as loyal as a bulldog to people who have helped him to success. Frank Capra made Jimmy's greatest picture, Mister Smith Goes to Washington, and Frank is still Jimmy Stewart's Hollywood god. He placed his comeback fate entirely in Frank's hands.

once an actor . . .

Jimmy never thought of doing anything but returning to Hollywood and acting again if he survived the war. While he was signed up with Uncle Sam, his M-G-M contract ran out. Offers swamped his manager, Leland Hayward. But Jimmy kept mum as long as he was in uniform.

Then, at last, he went on terminal leave and home to visit his folks in Indiana, Pennsylvania, where his first Oscar still sits proudly in the window of his dad's hardware store. He got restless even with the whirlwind hero's reception that greeted him wherever he showed his famous face. He called Frank Capra in Hollywood one night.

"Frank," he asked, "have you got a job for me?"

"I've got an idea," replied Frank.

It was just a rough idea in Frank Capra's mind when Jimmy arrived and sat up most of one night to talk it over. But he told Frank that night, "It's for me." The result was It's A Wonderful Life. And typically, Jimmy was never worried a minute about anything about his comeback picture—except himself.

Frank Capra was telling me a story the other day about Jimmy's first post-war scene. After five years in the world of war, Jimmy quite naturally had some serious misgivings about his first day back in grease paint, before the cold eye of a camera. He was out of practice. It scared him when Capra picked a long, tough first scene with Donna Reed—three pages of action and dialogue. He named the script pages for Jimmy: "Pages 31, 32, and 33."

Jimmy took them home, studied and rehearsed until he had them perfect. But he arrived on the set the starting day wearing a deep furrow in his brow, which isn't attractive. He was tense and nervous. Then Frank sprang his surprise.

"Jimmy," he said, "I've changed my mind. We'll do page 34 today."

On page 34, Jimmy's entire dialogue

Do you have to FORCE your child to take a laxative?

DOES YOUR YOUNGSTER rebel at the laxative you give him? Do you have to force it down his protesting little throat to get him to swallow it?

That's such needless, old-fashioned punishment! Today, millions of considerate mothers give their youngsters Ex-Lax! And how the children go for that delicious chocolate taste of Ex-Lax. They just love it!

Most important, Ex-Lax is a laxative that parents have learned to trust! It does its work thoroughly and effectively, yet gently too! Not too strong, not too mild, Ex-Lax is the "Happy Medium"...a happy solution to the laxative problem for grown-ups as well as children.

No wonder Ex-Lax is America's favorite family laxative—used by more people than any other laxative. Last year alone, over 40 million boxes of Ex-Lax were sold! As a precaution, use only as directed.

10c and 25c

The "Happy Medium" Laxative

★When you have a cold—and if you need a laxative—don't dose yourself with harsh purgatives. Take Ex-Lax!

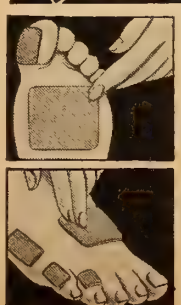
FREE ENLARGEMENT OF YOUR FAVORITE PHOTO

from Famous HOLLYWOOD FILM STUDIOS

Just to get acquainted, we will make you a beautiful professional 5x7 enlargement FREE of any snapshot, photo or negative. Be sure to include color of hair, eyes and clothing, and get our bargain offer for having your enlargement beautifully hand-colored in oil and mounted in a handsome frame. Limit 2 to a customer. Your original returned. Please enclose 10c to cover cost of handling and mailing each enlargement. Act now! Offer limited to U. S. A.

HOLLYWOOD FILM STUDIOS 7021 SANTA MONICA BLVD., Dept.252, HOLLYWOOD 38, CALIFORNIA

Quick FOOT RELIEF



Protects Feet and Toes Wherever Shoes Painfully Rub or Pinch. Helps Prevent "Breaking-In" Torture

For quick relief from corns, sore toes, callouses, bunions, chafed heels, tender spots and instep ridges—use Dr. Scholl's Kurotex. This downy-soft, soothing, cushioning, protective, flesh color foot plaster instantly stops tormenting shoe friction; lifts painful pressure. Helps prevent blisters and "breaking-in" discomfort of new or tight shoes.

Cut Dr. Scholl's Kurotex to any shape or size and apply it. Does not come off in the bath. This superior type of moleskin is also splendid for preventing blisters on hands of Golfers, Tennis and Baseball players. Economical! At Drug, Shoe, Department and 10¢ Stores. FREE sample—write Dr. Scholl's, Inc., Dept. K, Chicago.

Dr Scholl's KUROTEX

The Ideal Way to Reduce

GET RID OF Extra Fat
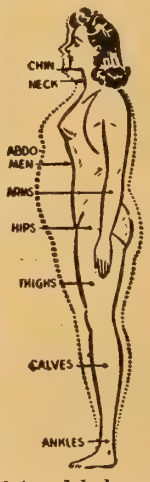
Extra Pounds
Extra Inches

REDUCE
In the Privacy of Your Home
WONDER BATH

HELPS YOU TO RELAX WHILE REDUCING. LOSE WEIGHT with this new, easy, pleasant, harmless method used by the most expensive and exclusive Reducing Salons. This is the way many New York and Hollywood stage, screen and radio people help to keep their figures slim, lovely and glamorous. You can now do exactly the same in your own home. You may now say good-bye to your heavy waistline and hips and those unnecessary unsightly bulges, at a trifling cost. No more tiring exercises, or strain, no laxatives or drugs. No starvation diets. You just take a warm, soothing, comforting WONDER BATH. Simply rest and relax for 15 minutes this healthful, pleasant way. If you are normally overweight, you can easily lose pounds and inches. By following easy, simple directions of the WONDER BATH plan, you will be amazed and delighted at the way your fat and bulges seem to melt away.



WONDER BATH is an amazing, soothing new preparation that helps you to relax while reducing.

FREE A large size jar of Special Formula WONDER Body Cream and "FIGURE BEAUTY" will be included absolutely FREE with your order for WONDER BATH. To achieve best results, this Special Formula WONDER Body Cream should be used after each WONDER BATH.

10-DAY NO-RISK TRIAL

Use WONDER BATH for 10 days at our expense. If you are not truly delighted with your loss of weight, if you don't look and feel better—return the remaining contents and your money will be refunded in full.

ACADEMY VITA PRODUCTS CO., Dept. DM-4
Academy Building, Newark 2, New Jersey

Please send me postpaid, 60-day supply of WONDER BATH, FREE Special Formula WONDER Body Cream and "FIGURE BEAUTY". I enclose $5.00 cash, check or Money Order. If I am not 100% delighted, I may return the remaining contents within 10 days and my money will be promptly refunded.

NAME.....

ADDRESS.....

CITY.....STATE.....

C.O.D. orders. Send $1.00 deposit. Pay postman balance of $4.00 plus postage and C.O.D. charges. Same Money-Back Guarantee.

was one word, "No." And Frank Capra okayed the first take of that. Jimmy's nerves vanished, and never returned.

But frankly, I think it's too bad Jimmy Stewart doesn't love himself a little more. A few weeks ago, for instance, Jimmy was on a radio show in Hollywood. The script writer had a flowery introduction ready—all about the star who rose from private to colonel, etc., etc. Jimmy took one look, whipped out his pencil and crossed it off. His self-written introduction read, "James Stewart, who served with the Army Air Forces overseas . . ."

That's swell. I admire it, and who doesn't? But Jimmy Stewart has no business selling himself so short as an actor and as a person. It's not good for him and —darn it—I love him, like a lot of other people. And I'm old enough to get a little motherly, Lord help me!

I can see Jimmy now that night six years ago at the Biltmore Bowl when all Hollywood was gathered to honor him as its best actor of the year. Jimmy hustled self-consciously up on the platform to get his Oscar from Alfred Lunt as if he was stealing something that wasn't his. He made the shortest, shyest acceptance speech on record. Then he ambled off looking twice as frightened as the deer in The Yearling. He was in such a hurry he almost fell down!

I wish Jimmy Stewart would find himself the right girl and get married. Fundamentally, he's a plain, earthy guy with all the normal, right, solid-citizen instincts. He's devoted and loyal to his family and his close, old friends to the Nth degree. He loves kids. He likes home life. He's "Uncle Jimmy" to the children of two of his oldest pals, Henry Fonda and Margaret Sullavan.

two big kids . . .

Jimmy spent Christmas with the Fondas. He brought a teddy bear to their 7-year-old son, Peter, about twice Pete's size. He helped trim the tree and set up the electric train. Frances Fonda had one of those wonderful model planes that fly with a real motor for Jimmy's present from Peter, but when Hank saw it—the big kid!—he said, "Hey, I want that myself!" Then Jimmy arrived happily lugging an identical model plane that Jane Wyman had sent him for Christmas. Those two big lummoxes spent the day happily buzzing their planes all over the neighborhood.

With a few special exceptions Jimmy sees the same old friends he saw before he went to war—John Swope and Dorothy McGuire, Hank and Frances, Maggie and Leland, Josh Logan, Johnny McClain, Burgess Meredith and Paulette Goddard, Jane Wyman and Ronnie Reagan.

That's a pleasant social set-up for Jimmy Stewart, all right, the kind he likes. But it's also a dangerous one for a bachelor. Jimmy doesn't have to plan a private life; it's organized for him. Maggie Sullavan, the spark-plug of his set, is a natural organizer. There's always something coming up to pass a pleasant evening.

But Jimmy's 38. He needs a real home and his own kids. He shouldn't go on being "Uncle Jimmy." Will he ever get married? Why hasn't he before now? Every time I see him I kid him with that question, "When are you going to get married?" and all I get is an evasive grin and a shrug. I don't think he's a confirmed bachelor, but the longer a man stays single the harder it is for him to settle down. He gets persnickety. Besides, a shy, sensitive guy like Jimmy Stewart has a high hurdle placed before his romance when he gets himself halfway interested in a girl. A bachelor in the movie limelight can't take out anybody in skirts without marriage predictions getting in print. Jimmy's just not working at romance—and I'll have to admit—when he tries, Jimmy seems to be snake-bitten with bad luck.

A few weeks ago, we had the worst pea-soup fog on record here in Hollywood. That foggy Saturday night Jimmy went to a Hollywood party. He spotted a beautiful girl he didn't know and it took him all evening to worm his way inside the cluster of attentive males and get in some work. But Jimmy was intrigued—he turned on the charm and it paid off. The fascinator finally agreed to let him take her home.

Jimmy helped her into his blue 1940 Ford coupe he bought when he came back home. It has a leaky radiator and a bad habit of stalling now and then but Jimmy wasn't counting on a long trip. He asked the girl where she lived. She said, "Saugus." Jimmy almost fainted.

only forty miles . . .

Saugus is a California town some forty miles from Hollywood and, in the fog, Jimmy couldn't see much past his eyebrows. He crept along in low gear all the way, consoling himself that after that rugged trip the girl would practically have to ask him in when she got home. But she tripped right up the steps with a "Thank you. Goodnight!" and slammed the door. Jimmy crept painfully all the way back home, dragging in bed at seven a.m. He'd lost all interest in that romance by then.

But if Jimmy is unlucky at love, he's very fortunate, indeed, to be happily, devotedly wedded to a career he loves and respects as few Hollywood stars do. Heaven knows Jimmy has been through enough vital experiences to make him scorn the artificialities of our town—if he was the type to be running down his profession, as some of our clever young men who rose to fame during the war are prone to do. But nothing burns Stewart more than young actors with their ears barely dry, who have found freak fame and go around pretending it bores them to tears.

Jimmy's next try is in Magic Town which he's doing with Wild Bill Wellman. After that, he does One Big Happy Family, with George Stevens, a war buddy director, who's one of our best. These combinations click like turnstiles—so don't be surprised if next year, they'll be talking about Jimmy Stewart when Academy Awards come around.

Now—if Stewart only had his own big happy family, in his personal life—but there I go again—being Dorothy Dix! The trouble is—I guess I just think Jimmy is too good to waste. And coming from Pa., I just hate waste, even in romance. Jimmy hates waste, too, but then, he's younger and has time for it—I haven't.

DON'T TELL IT TO THE MARINES!

If your friends begin to yawn after the umpteenth time you tell them how you accidentally bumped into Tryone Van Gable, don't tell it to the Marines —tell it to us. Not only will we lend a sympathetic ear, but also, if we use your story, we'll send you a $5 check. We want short, amusing and unusual anecdotes about the time you saw a movie star in person. Read the "I Saw It Happen" boxes in this issue to get the right slant—and then try your luck. Type or write out your true tale neatly and send it to the "I Saw It Happen" Editor, MODERN SCREEN, 149 Madison Avenue, New York 16, N. Y. If we publish your item, you'll have a new story to tell your friends —how you won that $5!

Help yourself to
BEAUTIFUL FINGERNAILS

Don't be embarrassed by short, broken, thin nails. It's so easy to cover unsightly nails with NU-NAILS. Applied in a jiffy, they bring you long, lovely nails that everyone admires. Can be worn any length and polished any shade. Help you overcome nail biting habit. Set of 10 only 20c at all 5c-10c stores ... and at Sears.

NU-NAILS ARTIFICIAL FINGERNAILS
5251 West Harrison Street
Dept. 15-D Chicago 44, Illinois

MATCHED BRIDAL PAIR DIAMOND RINGS

$4.95 EACH
BOTH FOR $8.95

Genuine Diamond Chip engagement Ring set in square 10 kt. Yellow Gold Mounting—perfectly matches the lovely Wedding Ring with 3 brilliant chip Diamonds in embossed 10 kt. Yellow Gold setting. Either ring only $4.95 or both for only $8.95 plus postage and 20% Fed. tax on our Money Back Guarantee. Send No Money! Just send name and address with piece of string or paper showing finger size. Pay postman on delivery.

WORLD-WIDE DIAMOND CO. Dept. H934
1451 S. Michigan Avenue Chicago 16, Illinois

LASHES LOOK LONGER

Eyelashes seem lovelier, longer—Eyes seem lovelier, brighter, gayer when you beautify your eyelashes! Gain glamour and charm this easy way, with Lechler's famous EYELASH GLAMOUR KIT. Use according to simple directions and watch yourself grow more stunning. Enclose only $2.40 (tax incl.) with this "ad." Also C.O.D.

HOUSE OF LECHLER, Dept. 334
560 B'way, N. Y. 12, N. Y.

FREE RACHEL FACE POWDER

Send today for free liberal supply of this high grade Face Powder & also our FREE BEAUTIFUL Cosmetic catalog in colors. Help bring out your loveliness by using our glamorous blend of Face Powder. Mention shade wanted— ☐ light or ☐ dark. Be Lovely to Look At—Nice to Know. Don't wait. Send Now!

J. E. McBRADY & CO., (Est. 1894)
1041-49 W. Van Buren, Dept. 710, Chicago 7, Ill.

Is yours an Allergic Skin?

In cosmetics, too, physicians know best. Ask your doctor about AR-EX Cosmetics. At leading drug stores. Write for FREE BOOKLET: "New Facts on Skin Care."

℞ AR-EX Cosmetics FOR SENSITIVE SKINS

AR-EX COSMETICS, INC., 1036-DM W. Van Buren St., Chicago 7, Ill.

Noreen glamorizes, highlights and lusterizes all shades of hair with Abundant Color... Beautifies white and gray hair. Blends in the unwanted gray in mixed gray hair. NOREEN Colors are TEMPORARY... are intended to wash out at the next shampoo. 12,144,866 NOREEN Rinses were used last year. Ask for a NOREEN Rinse at your beauty salon or buy an 8-rinse carton at drug or dept. stores.

★ For trial in your own home, send 10c (to cover cost of processing your request) and sample rinses will be sent to you FREE: Name hair color, or send hair sample and state your hair color problem. We will select and send to you appropriate NOREEN shade, and advise solution of your particular hair color problem.

NOREEN, Dept. D-2, P. O. Box 989, Denver 1, Colorado

SHE WALKS IN BEAUTY...

(Continued from page 46)

aesthetic value of the sarong as opposed to the girdle. But here, in this hotel room, they were hearing a Hollywood glamor girl demanding open discussion of a subject upon which even angels refused direct quotes, the explosive subject of Negro segregation.

"Well, I'll tell you the answer," said Ingrid, a spot of angry color flaming in each cheek, her eyes stormy: "If I had dreamed that such a law, or custom, was in effect in America's capital city, I should not have agreed to come here. But I learned of it too late, and upon learning of it, I offered instantly to give a special performance for the Negroes. They have rejected that offer, on the wise grounds that such an acceptance could only underscore the discrimination."

actions speak louder than words . . .

While personages as important as Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt and Claire Boothe Luce had condemned the action of the D.A.R. in barring Marian Anderson from Washington stages, it was the Bergman resentment that persuaded Actors' Equity to demand a new 4-point contract with the League of New York Theatres, Inc. A clause in this contract stipulates that Equity members shall not be asked to perform in Washington, so long as Jim Crow laws exist in that city.

The scene at Washington happened last October, when the Maxwell Anderson play, Joan of Lorraine, was breaking in before its Broadway premiere, the wildest opening night in theater history, with disorderly mobs of autograph hounds holding up cabs and popping flashlight bulbs at startled celebs.

Five hundred years away, the original Joan of Arc must have cheered the courage of this Swedish Joan of Arc, in thus attacking the archaic race ritual still persisting in the Land of the Free. The original Joan had uttered equally frank censure of traditional practices, even though it had cost her life. Here was this modern Joan alarming the winds with equal disregard for the consequences. The Washington drama critics looked at Ingrid Bergman clearly for the first time, and suddenly they must have understood what it was that illuminated that face from within, what it was that had gripped the public in her screen portrayals.

If you can force your way through the autograph fans at the Alvin Theater stage alley, and if you can persuade the naturally skeptical stage door man that you have an appointment with Ingrid, you find yourself in the outer room of the two-room suite which serves as her dressing room. First thing which strikes your eye is a cartoon which shows Ingrid in costume on the buckboard of a "Lorraine Milk Co." truck. Perched up with the horses is Sam Wanamaker, who plays opposite her in the show. Other souvenirs are all around this outer room, tiny lambs made of straw, statuettes of Joan of Arc, pictures of Joan—all sent to Ingrid by fans.

At the makeup table in the inner dressing room, where you find a robed Ingrid wiping off her stage makeup with a large, coarse towel, your attention focuses on a Guaranty Trust Co. check in the mirror, tucked into the wooden mirror frame. The check is for $1. "Payment for the first thing I ever wrote," explains Ingrid. "Some magazine sent it to me for quoting something I said."

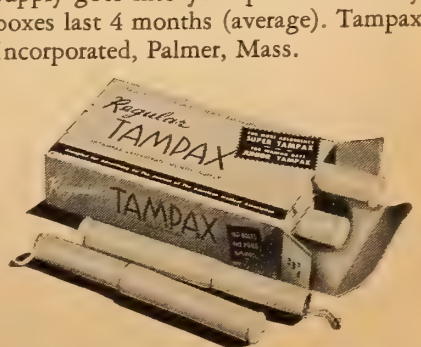
How, I asked, did she like the experience of again playing on the stage. "Frankly, I had been fearful that a play, any play, would become tiresome, soon after the

NO BELTS
NO PINS
NO PADS
NO ODOR

To the modern girl it makes quite a difference to discover a form of monthly sanitary protection (Tampax) which she can continue to wear during a bath or even a swim. And she will get other surprises, too, concerning the use of Tampax by reading the folder that comes in every package.

Tampax was designed by a doctor for internal wear by women during those "unmentionable days" of the month. Constructed of pure surgical cotton compressed into slim applicators, Tampax is neatly and easily inserted, and it cannot be felt when in place. . . . No belts, pins or external pads. No odor or chafing. No tell-tale bulges or edge-lines. No wonder millions of modern women have adopted Tampax!

Buy Tampax at any drug store or notion counter in 3 absorbency-sizes (Regular, Super, Junior) adapted to varying individual requirements. A month's supply goes into your purse. Economy boxes last 4 months (average). Tampax Incorporated, Palmer, Mass.



For FAST RELIEF from distress of sniffly, sneezy HEAD COLDS

Get right after head-cold distress—where trouble is! Just a few drops of Vicks Va-tro-nol in each nostril quickly relieves sniffly, sneezy distress, opens up nose and makes breathing easier. Keep it handy—use it early.

VICKS Follow directions in the package.

VA-TRO-NOL

Lovelier Nails with

TUFFENAIL

Enhance and glorify the natural beauty of lovely nails . . . Hollywood's own daily nail-care with easy-to-use applicator. Nails stay lovelier longer . . with TUFFENAIL. 25¢

AT ALL 5 AND 10¢ STORE COSMETIC COUNTERS

High School Course at Home — Many Finish in 2 Years

Go as rapidly as your time and abilities permit. Course equivalent to resident school work—prepares for college entrance exams. Standard H.S. texts supplied. Diploma. Credit for H. S. subjects already completed. Single subjects if desired. High school education is very important for advancement in business and industry and socially. Don't be handicapped all your life. Be a High School graduate. Start your training now. Free Bulletin on request. No obligation.

American School, Dept. H-414, Drexel at 58th, Chicago 37

BRUSH AWAY GRAY HAIR ...AND LOOK 10 YEARS YOUNGER

• Now, at home, you can quickly tint telltale gray to natural-appearing shades—from lightest blonde to darkest black. Brownatone and a small brush does it—or your money back. Approved by thousands—Brownatone is guaranteed harmless when used as directed. No skin test needed. The principal coloring agent is a purely vegetable derivative with iron and copper salts added for fast action. Cannot affect waving of hair. Lasting—does not wash out. Just brush or comb it in. One application imparts desired color. Simply retouch, as new gray appears. Easy to prove on a test lock of your hair. 75c and $1.75 at druggists. Get BROWNATONE now, or opening," she admitted. "After all, you are doing the same lines over and over again. But this play gives you a feeling of exaltation. Sometimes when I arrive at the theater I am tired, feeling a bit 'down,' but it is a most curious thing: when I come off the stage, I feel refreshed."

Write for FREE TEST BOTTLE

Mention natural color of your hair. Send a post card today—BROWNATONE, Dept. 294, COVINGTON, KY.

One of the stage crew told me: "She cries real tears in those scenes, Ed, no kiddin'. We watched her night after night, figgered there must be a trick to it, but those tears are on the level." Joe Steele, who is closest to her professionally, agreed with the stagehands. "I've begged her not to work herself up to such a pitch, each show," he told me. "She thanked me, said that was the only way she could play it."

How did Ingrid react to New York's notoriously insistent autograph fans? "They know now that I won't sign autographs in public," she explained. "I will sign for them if they send a request backstage, but not on the streets or in front of hotels or in taxicabs, because then a crowd gathers and it becomes chaotic. Oddly, since they learned that, the inveterate autograph collectors no longer wait for me. The people now who wait at the stage door are older people, and the occasional youngsters are quieter, a different type. They call out to me when I pass through them, but they don't ask for autographs."

After Ingrid had returned from an overseas tour with Jack Benny, Jack told me a lot about her, stressing the fact that she was all theater, even to the point where she lavished weeks of preparation on each role. "Before she made Notorious, with Cary Grant," Jack pointed out, "she privately ran picture after picture which Cary had made, to study his technique, his manner of reading lines." I told her what Jack had said, and she smiled: "Jack, I think, is one of the kindest and nicest human beings I have ever met." I pointed out that she was evading the question.

"Well," she smiled, "sometimes I have been in trouble because of that manner of preparing for a picture. Before I made The Bells of St. Mary, Director Leo McCarey learned that I was having private screenings of some of his pictures, and they told me that he was very pleased at my interest in his work. But then, Leo apparently learned that I had gone back about ten years and dug out a print of Ruggles of Red Gap. The next day, at lunch, he told me that he felt very hurt and I expressed complete bewilderment, because I'd never done anything to offend him. 'Look, Ingrid,' he told me, 'if you are so darned uneasy about my work as a director that you must go back to examine it in Ruggles of Red Gap, then it can only mean that you doubt my ability.' The minute he said that, earnestly, I started laughing and I explained to him that far from being a slur, it was just my way of learning what he wished to stress before the camera."

an artists' artist . . .

I asked if other Broadway stars had been in to see the play. She evaded the question, but Joe Steele, her right-hand man, answered. "Helen Hayes, Ina Claire and a lot of great actresses have seen the play, and while Ingrid won't tell you what they said —I can tell you that she was deeply thrilled at their delight that she had come home to the legitimate theater." She held up her hands, "That is all, Joe—no more of that—and anyway, I'm going out to catch Joan Crawford in Humoresque, unless there are other questions you want to ask." I told her that if the last question had produced nothing but the Bergman smile, I'd better let her go and ply Joe with the others, because they were personal things she'd probably rather not answer. "Don't tell him, Joe," she warned, laughingly.

Quite apart from my very sincere respect for him, there are two other reasons for the bond between me and Joseph Henry Steele. He was born in September and so was I. Additionally, we both have ulcers!

What sort of a person was she, I asked him.

"I've met a lot of stars," said Joe, "but she is something superlative. On my word of honor, I have never heard her complain about anything. I've never heard her excited, except on that one occasion at Washington, D. C. And so help me, Ed, each time that wonderful face is a new revelation of lights and shadows. I've often discussed that with her husband, and he says that meeting her, or looking at her, each time is a new experience in beauty. On all of her War Bond tours, or war camp shows, she'd get out of a plane, no matter how tired, rub some cold water on her face, push back her hair and look as though she'd stepped out of a bandbox. If the schedule got out of hand, I'd propose that we postpone a long air trip until the following day. 'No,' she'd say, 'those youngsters have been expecting us, so we'd better push on.' Where she gets her energy from, I don't know, but I'd certainly like to find out."

double trouble . . .

I asked him how she ever had managed to study her long, exhausting part in Joan of Lorraine while working on Arch of Triumph.

"That was completely incredible," he agreed. "But you know only part of it, Ed. While she was making Arch of Triumph, she'd also use up half of her lunch hour taking a French lesson, and at night, before dinner, she'd take a singing lesson. In between times, on top of everything else, she had to go down to Western Costume Company, in Hollywood, where they were making the mail and coat of armor for Joan of Lorraine. They had no suit of armor for a girl, so it was a long and involved process, and successive fittings were necessary."

Joe Steele gravely paused: "Then came the day when the armor was ready! I can still see her as she looked, standing in front of the full length mirror. As she regarded herself in the glass, she sort of threw her head back and raised the sword to her chest and by God, there was Joan!

"We finished Arch of Triumph on a Saturday afternoon," he recalled, "and the balance of the day she spent packing. On Sunday, we were on the plane heading east, and at 11 o'clock, Monday morning, she reported for rehearsal. By the end of the first week of readings, she had her part letter-perfect, all except that one tremendously long speech near the end of the play. She said she was afraid that if she rehearsed that one too much she'd lose some of the values in it. There were only three weeks in which to rehearse, and so she had to go to the costumers for fittings regularly, and to the bootmaker, and sit for photos. But she never became upset, never spoke sharply to anyone, never relaxed her thoughtfulness toward others in the cast. 'This may last for a little while,' some of the cast agreed, 'but one day, Joe, your Hollywood star is going to get an attack of temperament and go right through the roof—and we won't blame her.' Well, it never happened and it won't happen, because she is all thoroughbred."

Talking to Ingrid before, I had told her that Jack Benny had a complaint. "Not Jack," she demurred. I told her that Jack said she'd completely exhausted him, on the overseas tour, by her habit of sitting up until all hours of the morning, over cups of coffee, discussing all sorts of things, generally the stage and acting. "Finally," said Jack, "I told her in self-defense that I was

Fine mesh with elastic

SITROUX HAIR NETS

BY THE MAKERS OF SITROUX TISSUES

Doctors and Dermatologists Agree:
Beauty begins with a perfectly clean skin!

AMBROSIA

The Liquid Facial Cleanser Frees Pores of Dirt.

At Drug, Dept. and 10¢ Stores.

PLAY IN 1 HOUR BY EAR AND NOTE

NEWLY INVENTED SLIDE-CHORD DEVICE Fits Piano. Play any chord at once. Plink out tunes by ear and note and add chords to play beautiful 2-hand professional radio style at one sitting! Fun! A game! No exercises or drills. Startle your friends. PLAY 27 COMPLETE SONGS WITH 4 CHORDS (SEND NO MONEY) (JUST 1¢ CARD), 25 lessons ABC METHOD, including many POPULAR SONGS and SLIDE-CHORD DEVICE ALL for $2 plus C.O.D. Save C.O.D., send $2 cash, check, money order. MONEY BACK GUARANTEE.

DALE SHEARS SCHOOL OF MUSIC
STUDIO 5904, STRUTHERS 3, OHIO

A NEW AND NOVEL WAY TO MAKE MONEY

SELL INDIVIDUAL 5¢ AND 10¢ GREETING CARDS

Extra money quick. Up to 100% profit. Extra bonus. Send at once for FREE catalog of wonderful year round money-making line super value greeting card assortments and FREE samples name imprinted stationery. Request special feature $1.00 All Occasion assortment on approval.

Special Offers

FREE SAMPLES 50 for $1.00 PERSONAL STATIONERY

NEW ENGLAND ART PUBLISHERS
BOX A, NORTH ABINGTON, MASS.

SPOT REDUCE

The new, ingenious HOLLYWOOD WAY with "PAT-A-PUFF"

EASY • EFFECTIVE • ECONOMICAL $2.60

Mail your order direct to NORDQUIST SYSTEM
6331 Hollywood Blvd., Hollywood 28, Calif.

UNWANTED HAIR

Are you a victim of ugly unwanted hair and feel miserable? Unwanted hair can be removed quickly—easily. Lovely, hair free skin—beauty—happiness. Yes—and we have the only method for permanently removing unwanted hair. Write for interesting free booklet. House of Lechler, Dept. H334, 560 Broadway, New York 12, N. Y.

GET THIS FREE BOOK

BE A Nurse

MAKE $30-$40 A WEEK

Practical nurses are needed in every community . . . doctors rely on them . . . patients appreciate their cheerful, expert care. You can learn practical nursing at home in spare time. Course endorsed by physicians. 48th yr. Earn while learning. High School not required. Men, women, 18 to 60. Trial plan. Write now!

CHICAGO SCHOOL OF NURSING
Dept. 234, 100 East Ohio Street, Chicago 11, Ill.
Please send free booklet and 16 sample lesson pages.
Name_____
City_____ State_____ Age____

an old comedian, and that she'd have to sit up with Larry Adler, a young harmonica player." She smiled brightly at the recollection: "That is right, but Jack should have told you I could even outsit Larry." She said it quite proudly. "What a grand trip that was," she continued. "I love to travel, I suppose every girl does, but just imagine traveling that way, with everybody going out of their way to be nice to you—and all expenses paid." That is quite an interpretation of dangerous airplane trips, Army chow, emergency trips to outlying camps, the strain of hospitals and shaking hands with thousands of GI's. "No, it was wonderful," she repeated, and the sincerity in her eyes and voice was not fabricated.

One night, in Germany, she told me, the Benny troupe ran into some gunfire. They were speeding through the night, and their Army driver didn't notice that he had been flagged down by an M.P., half-obscured at the side of the autobahn they were traversing. As the car sped by the sentry, there followed a burst of gunfire. Larry Adler, sitting in the rear of the car with them, let out a gasp of pain as the bullet plowed through the car's upholstery. "I'm hit, Jack," he called out, as the car crunched to a jarring stop.

They lifted him out carefully, as other sentries came racing up. It was discovered that Larry had not been hit at all. What had happened was this: the bullet plowed through the body of the car, hit a ring of the seat spring and the spring, released, had belted Adler through the upholstery with the force of a trip-hammer. It was painful, but not a certificate for a Purple Heart, so on through the night they went, with Ingrid and Jack kidding Larry about his "wounding."

Suddenly, the headlights of the car revealed, in the middle of the highway, a black cat.

"Look," said Benny, "now he tells us."

Whereupon the dignified Miss Bergman admits she collapsed on the bottom of the car and shrieked merrily until they pulled up at the next camp. It must have been quite a trip.

THERE WAS ALWAYS DAD

(Continued from page 34)

bubble. But his forebears can't subdue the light in his eyes, nor keep an occasional quiet sentence from slipping out. Like for instance, "She's a parent's dream come true—"

The Best Years Of Our Lives worked its own private miracle with him. That he considers it the finest picture ever to come out of Hollywood is standard procedure. Most people agree with him, including the writer. But Teresa's performance in Pride of the Yankees so moved him, that for him he felt it could never be topped. This got to be a family gag about other pictures.

"What did you think, Daddy?"

"I thought you did a fine job, dear."

And they'd finish together—"But Eleanor Gehrig is still my favorite."

Till he saw Best Years. "I thought it was beautiful, dear . . ."

"But . . ."

"No. Peggy's my favorite now."

He's proud of her success, but prouder of her as a person. Thinks character's more important than fame and fortune—not on high moral grounds necessarily, but because it gives you a surer footing from which to cope with the world, and so makes you a happier person.

Her mother, after an illness of five years, died when Teresa was seven. Teresa went to boarding school, where she stayed for three years. Most of her adolescence was spent in boarding houses. At eighteen, she

NEW OUTLOOK ON LIFE since I learned about
THIS HIGHER TYPE
Intimate Feminine Hygiene

Easier—Daintier—More Convenient

Greaseless Suppository Gives
Continuous Medication For Hours.
Stainless—Leaves No Odor!

There has long been an urgent need of a higher type method for intimate feminine cleanliness. One that would be effective yet absolutely safe to tissues, easier and daintier to use and not offensive to a woman's delicate feelings.

Thanks to Zonitors—you've got it! And here's why Zonitors are being so enthusiastically used among America's more intelligent and higher type women:

Positively Non-Irritating; Non-Smarting

Zonitors are greaseless, stainless, snow-white vaginal suppositories. When inserted, they instantly begin to release their powerful germicidal properties and continue to do so for hours—assuring you hours of continuous medication. Positively non-burning, non-irritating, non-poisonous.

Easy To Carry If Away From Home

Zonitors actually destroy offending odor. Help guard against infection. They are so effective they immediately kill every germ they touch. You know it's not always possible to contact all the germs in the tract. BUT YOU CAN BE SURE Zonitors kill every reachable germ and keep them from multiplying. Any drugstore.

Zonitors

(Each sealed in separate glass vial)

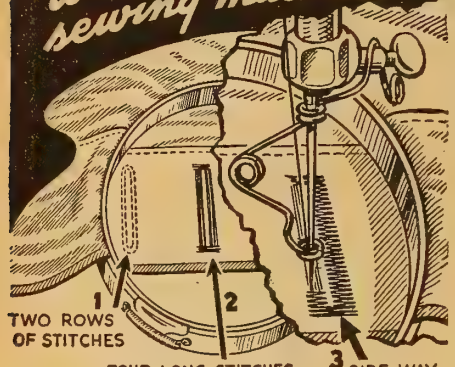
FREE: Mail this coupon today for free booklet sent in plain wrapper. Reveals frank intimate facts. Zonitors, Dept. ZMSC-47, 370 Lexington Avenue, New York 17, N. Y.

Name_____

Address_____

City_____ State_____

New EASY WAY Makes
BUTTON HOLES
with your own sewing machine!



Darn Stockings, Mend Tears, Attach Zippers and Sew On Buttons, too!

New! Improved! NOW ONLY $1.00 NOTHING LIKE IT!

Once dreaded by every woman, now button hole making becomes as easy as basting a hem with this sensational new invention! You'll get twice as neat results in half the time, too! Fits any sewing machine . . . attaches in a moment. Simple to operate. Comes complete with hoop for darning stockings, a button hole guide and easy directions in picture. Test at our risk now and realize a new thrill in sewing.

FREE NEEDLE THREADER. As a gift for prompt action, you will receive with your order the marvelous time-saving, eye-saving needle threader. Don't wait but send your name today.

SEND NO MONEY — ORDER NOW. Just send your name and when you receive your new improved button hole attachment and gift needle threader, deposit only $1.00 plus C.O.D. charges thru postman. Do this on the guarantee that if you aren't delighted in every way, you may return purchase for full refund. Or send cash with order, we pay postage. Special . . . 3 for $2.50 NOW . . . Mail your name and address to LONDON SPECIALTIES, Dept. 4-D7, 8505 S. Phillips, Chicago 17, Ill.

MONEY QUICK

Sell GREETING CARDS AND PERSONAL STATIONERY

Extra cash with new 1947 line. Just show friends, neighbors, others, tremendous value 16 card. All-Occasion assortment. Sells for only $1.00. You make as much as 50c per box. Also fascinating Birthday, Get-Well, Baby, Humorous, Gift Wrapping, Correspondence Notes boxes 33⅓c up. Extra Bonus. Special Money-Saving Offer. Experience unnecessary. Write for Feature Everyday assortment on approval and FREE Personal Stationery sample portfolio. Elmira Greeting Card Co., Dept. M-208, Elmira, N. Y.

FREE SAMPLES PERSONAL STATIONERY

Dennison, Dept. R108, Framingham, Mass.
FREE Please send me a whole day's supply of Dennison Diaper Liners.
Name.....
Street.....
City.....State.....

FOR THE SEAT OF YOUR DIAPER TROUBLES

HEY, MOM! Don't be a Diaper Drudge! Dennison Diaper Liners reduce unpleasantness in changing and washing my diapers. Just fold a Liner inside diaper next to my skin. When soiled, flush away. No hard scrubbing. Sanitary. Helps prevent diaper rash. Costs only a few cents a day. DELUXE: 180 for $1; CRADLE TIME & DOWNEESOFT: 180 for 69¢.

Dennison
DIAPER LINERS
Wherever Baby Goods Are Sold

was sharing a New York apartment with another girl—the first place she could even remotely call her own. Psychologists would frown over such a history. More than anything else, they'd tell you, a child needs the security of a stable background. Yet Teresa was a happy child. She had security. That was her father's great achievement. His love was the abiding element of her world.

Her earliest memories are of being fed and bathed by him, of turning to him in all her childish woes. The cherished companion of those days was a life-size baby doll, known as the Peggydoll. Catastrophe in some form overtook this treasure, and left Teresa desolate. But Daddy scoured the highways and byways till he managed to turn up an exact counterpart. Wherever she went, the Peggydoll went along—even to Hollywood.

There was another quest her father set out on one day, with something more on his mind than dolls. Teresa was in the hospital, very ill after an appendectomy. Nothing would stay on her stomach, not even ginger ale. "Champagne," said the doctor, "is lighter than ginger ale. Maybe she could keep that down."

Prohibition was still in. Not only was champagne high, but it was hard to come by, unless you knew the ropes. Daddy didn't know the ropes, but he finally ran a bottle of champagne to earth and paid for it through the nose.

expensive ginger ale . . .

"Mmm," said Muriel Teresa, aged four and a half. "Nice ginger ale." By any name it would have sounded sweet to her father, for it did stay down.

She trusted him completely. He didn't lay down laws or give orders. "We'll work it out together," he'd say when a problem came up. Because he explained at length why it was best for her to go to boarding school, she accepted the idea at once.

Rose Haven was a small school that stressed home life, cultural activities and close personal attention to its 25 boarders. For Arthur Wright, it must have meant cutting corners, but Teresa stayed at Rose Haven for three happy years. Every Sunday, Daddy would come out.

There were special holidays, when he'd take her out to lunch. She always wanted the same lunch—bacon and tomato sandwich, chocolate ice cream and milk. But he always asked, "What'll you have, dear?" She liked that. It made her feel grown up.

He never had a lot of fancy pet names for her. Till she was nine or ten, he called her Chickie, and she returned the compliment by calling him Chickiedaddy.

Very early in her life, it seemed apparent to others that Teresa was destined for the theater. In a croquet game at Rose Haven, a mallet collided with her nose. One of the teachers rushed her to the doctor.

"You've got to take care of Muriel's nose, doctor. It just mustn't be broken. She's going to be an actress, you know."

That was the first she'd heard of it, and she went very still and ashamed inside. "It's because I'm not bright," she thought, remembering her spelling. "The only thing left for me to be is an actress."

Dad was neither depressed nor elated over the prospect. When people said, "Why don't you put her on the stage?" he'd shrug it off, his instinct being to mind his own business. Teresa's life belonged to Teresa. If the talent and ambition were there, they'd come out.

By the time she was attending Columbia High at Maplewood, Teresa wanted nothing more than to be an actress. But those were depression days. The depression had taken her out of Rose Haven. Which was all right. She couldn't imagine being happier than she was at Columbia, where Stanley Wood, who taught English, and Mildred Memory, the dramatic coach, both thought she could act. Only for training you had to go to dramatic school, and dramatic schools cost money.

But Dad was thinking his own thoughts, meantime. He'd seen her play Grazia in the high school production of Death Takes A Holiday. To him she'd seemed exquisite, but he could have been prejudiced. The New York critic, however, who compared her performance favorably with that of the original Grazia, couldn't be prejudiced. Neither could Stanley Wood. "Your daughter's a natural actress," he'd told Dad. "I'd like to see her encouraged."

He started scheming as to how he could manage the impossible. Independently, Teresa wrestled with the same problem. It was Stanley Wood who came up with an answer. Associated with the Wharf Theater at Provincetown, he said he could arrange a summer scholarship for her. This would pay her expenses in part. The father of a friend, also going to Provincetown, offered to pay the balance.

She told him about Stanley Wood and Provincetown and—now came the hard part—about her friend's father. He looked away toward the window for a moment, but when he turned back, his face was perfectly clear.

"This means a lot to you, doesn't it?"

"It means everything, Daddy."

"Well, I'd like to help, and if I can do that by letting someone else help, it's all right with me."

It was all right with him, too, when she took a small apartment in New York with another girl. She was eighteen and knew how to look after herself, and you can't haunt agents' offices from New Jersey. They had dinner together a couple of times a week, talked on the phone almost daily. If he was lonely, he kept it to himself. When she needed him, he was there . . .

She must have phoned him a thousand times about Our Town. They needed an understudy for Emily, and Doro Merande, whom she knew from Provincetown, had put in a good word for her. She'd read for the stage manager, and now she'd been waiting a month to read for Jed Harris. "Be here at such-and-such a time," they'd say. "We're expecting Mr. Harris." She'd go down and wait. Then they'd say, "You'd better go home. He isn't coming."

It happened again on a day of teeming rain. She had a cold in the head, felt rotten and looked worse. Late in the afternoon they sent her home.

At nine the phone rang again. "Be down here right after the performance tonight. We're expecting Mr. Harris."

bawling bernhardt . ...

For a wonder, their expectations were realized. She read one scene, but how good can you be with a running nose and eyes like a couple of puffballs? He told her to wait. She retired to the wings, leaned her head against the nearest prop and bawled.

Her eye caught sight of a pay phone on the wall. In New Jersey a bell shrilled, waking one A. Wright. "Daddy," said a tense voice. "I've just read for Jed Harris and I'm waiting to read again. Could you meet me at the theater?"

He got up and dressed and took the tube to Manhattan, where he found a deliriously happy girl who'd just copped her first professional job in the theater. That was a night to paste in their memory books. The rain had stopped, so they climbed on a bus which floated them uptown . . .

She gave him a bear hug at parting. "Poor daddy, now you'll have to go all the way back alone."

"I wouldn't have missed it for anything. First time I ever rode a bus with an actress."

She played the part on the road and got rave notices in Boston. Dad saw it in New Haven, took her out to supper, felt like any

30 PERSONALIZED LESSONS PLUS BOOK OF 53 SONGS Now Only $1.69

Starts You Playing Songs At Once

It's easy to play the guitar! If you want to play song hits, hymns, waltzes, western songs, and old guitar favorites like "La Paloma," here's sensational news! One of the nation's foremost instructors has perfected a wonderfully quick and easy course that teaches guitar in your own home! Tells all you need to know about guitar playing, shows where to put your fingers, starts you playing simple songs like "Long, Long, Ago" the 2nd lesson. 30 lessons in all, so perfectly arranged, you'll be thrilled at your rapid progress. Write for this outstanding course today!

Gift Song Book Included

Act today, and receive, without extra cost, KARL & HARTY'S BIG 53 SONG BOOK regularly priced at $1.00 . . . words and music to 53 radio favorites like "I'm Here To Get My Baby Out Of Jail," "Friendless and Sad" and 51 other songs especially suitable for guitar. This wonderful book without extra cost if you act TODAY!

SEND NO MONEY

Let 3 Week Home Trial Convince You
Send name and address and receive complete, pictured guitar instructions for approval. On arrival pay postman only $1.69 plus postage and you must play guitar to your complete satisfaction in just 3 weeks or return for money back. Write to:

JIM MAJOR, Room 4-D, 230 E. Ohio Street, Chicago 11, Ill.

KIDNEYS MUST REMOVE EXCESS ACIDS

Help 15 Miles of Kidney Tubes Flush Out Poisonous Waste

If you have an excess of acids in your blood, your 15 miles of kidney tubes may be over-worked. These tiny filters and tubes are working day and night to help Nature rid your system of excess acids and poisonous waste.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Kidneys may need help the same as bowels, so ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, a stimulant diuretic, used successfully by millions for over 50 years. Doan's give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Sell GREETING CARDS

FAST SALES, BIG PROFITS. Show exquisite Everyday, Birthday, Easter, Humorous Boxes. Gift Wraps, Stationery, Correspondence Notes. Special Offers. Bonus: Request $1.00 Everyday Box on approval.

100 MONEY MAKERS

HEDENKAMP & COMPANY
343 Broadway, Dpt. A-9, New York 13, N.Y.

Thrilling Work COLORING PHOTOS

EASY TO LEARN

Fascinating vocation learned at home by those with aptitude. Thrilling pastime. National method brings out life-like colors. Free booklet.

NATIONAL PHOTO COLORING SCHOOL
1315 S. Michigan, Dept. 2364, Chicago 5

AVOID BEING GRAY!!
USE GRA-NO-COL

It is safe! Easy to apply!
Neither a rinse, nor a dye.
Just use a few drops a few times and bring your hair to the natural shade you desire. GRA-NO-COL is sold on a money back guarantee. Price: $2.00. Send check, money order, or cash for this remarkable hair coloring to:

THE JOSEPH TALL COMPANY
32 Station St., Brookline, Massachusetts proud papa when people stopped by to compliment her. But their biggest night was Teresa's first Broadway opening—as Mary in Life with Father. They celebrated with a party at the Biltmore—Teresa and a boy friend, Edna and Daddy (who were married in '40, with the groom's daughter as maid of honor).

Those days were tinged with glory, and quite unbelievable. All she'd hoped for was a chance, and here she was in a Broadway hit, getting offers from the movies. Daddy'd meet her every Saturday after the matinee, and they'd have dinner at Bleeck's, where actors and writers congregated. "Guess you'll have a bacon and tomato sandwich," he'd say gravely.

He was far from enchanted when she finally accepted Samuel Goldwyn's offer to go to Hollywood for The Little Foxes. Not that he had anything against the movies, except that they were 3000 miles away. But it might have been a lot worse. After all, she was coming right back.

i wanna get married . . .

She came back all right, but in such a frenzy to get something off her chest that what her greeting amounted to was, "Hello, Daddy, how are you, I'm in love with a man and want to go back and marry him."

He sat there carefully, trying to reassemble his brain as it had been before the explosion. What did you say when your only beloved daughter informed you suddenly that she wanted to marry a man? You asked about the man. Naturally—

"What's the color of his hair?" Dad demanded.

This broke them both up enough so that they could relax. By the time she got through telling him all about Niven, including his hair, Dad was himself again. "If you love him, I'll like him."

But when Niven wrote, saying how he felt about Teresa, Teresa's dad wrote back: "I have every confidence in Muriel's ability to choose her own husband. You must be a fine person, or she wouldn't be interested in you."

Niven Terence Busch is directly responsible for the fact that Edna and Arthur Wright now live in California. Dad had missed Teresa's wedding—the one great disappointment of his life—but he wasn't going to miss the baby, by gosh!

When they learned that a baby was on the way, he talked things over with his wife. Young in spirit, he saw no reason why he couldn't sell insurance in California as well as Detroit. Edna agreed, and out they came. Dad was partial to girls. He wanted one just like Teresa.

Things happened so quickly the night the baby was born, that they had to go to the hospital without calling Dad. Waiting for a phone call, Dad was startled to hear a knock at the door.

There stood Niven. "What did you say you wanted, a boy or a girl—?"

"A girl."

"Well, you've got a boy."

"That's fine. I wouldn't change him for two girls."

Terry's past two now, and clever enough to look like both his parents. When Niven's dad came out to visit, he realized the necessity of distinguishing between his grandfathers, and without any prompting, started calling one G'pa and the other G'poo. Grandfather Wright was G'poo.

G'poo gave him his first rocking horse, and felt slightly cheated because somebody else turned up with a bike before he got around to it. For the rest, he considers himself the most fortunate of men. Having spent some of the best years of his life with the little girl who was (and is) his lovely daughter Muriel, he's now spending some more best years with the little boy who is his g'son.

SILVERWARE ...or SILVERWEAR?

The two blocks of sterling inlaid at backs of bowls and handles of most used spoons and forks. They make this silverplate stay lovelier longer. Fifty-two piece set $68.50 with chest. (tax free)

HOLMES & EDWARDS
STERLING INLAID° SILVERPLATE

Copyright 1947, The International Silver Co., Holmes & Edwards Division, Meriden, Conn. Sold in Canada by: The T. Eaton Co., Ltd., °Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

many Doctors PRESCRIBE these SENSIBLY-PRICED Shoes for Infants and Toddlers Why?

Greatest harm to little feet comes from letting baby grow into and out of shoes. Doctors who have examined WEE WALKERS know they are well-made, accurately-shaped, flexible and carefully designed to serve baby's footwear needs. The sensible price lets them give this sound "Buy the correct size Wee Walker NOW and change to a larger size IN TIME"

Ask your doctor about WEE WALKERS . . . see them . . . compare them . . . try them . . . in Infants' or shoe department of stores listed. Birth to size 8.

COMMENDED PARENTS MAGAZINE CONSUMER SERVICE

W. T. Grant Co. S. S. Kresge Co. J. J. Newberry Co.
H. L. Green Co., Inc. I. Silver & Bros. Scott Stores
McCrory Stores Schulte-United Charles Stores Co.
Metropolitan Chain Stores, Inc. Kinney Shoe Stores
F. & W. Grand Grand Silver Co. McLellan Stores
Montgomery Ward & Co.

Smooth One-Piece Tongue:

Stops pressure on nerves, muscles, blood vessels caused by sewed-on tongue, still used on some shoes selling at top prices.

FREE: Pamphlet, "Look At Your Baby's Feet." Valuable information on foot care, and scale to measure size needed. Moran Shoe Co., Dept. M, Carlyle, Ill.

WEE WALKER Shoes
FOR Wee WALKERS

CORN AWAY!

HAPPY DAY!

BLUE-JAY

Corn Plaster with NUPERCAINE*

FOR GREATER RELIEF!

Stops shoe pressure—its soft Durafelt pad relieves pain instantly! Curbs surface pain, thanks to Blue-Jay's exclusive anesthetic Nupercaine! Loosens the hard "core" with gentle medication—you just lift it out in a few days!.

*Reg. U. S. Pat. Off. Ciba's brand of Dibucaine

NOW IN 2 SIZES
Standard and Little Toe

Ask for Blue-Jay—"America's Largest Selling Corn Plaster"

BLUE JAY REG. U.S. PAT. OFF. Corn Plasters

BAUER & BLACK
Division of The Kendall Company, Chicago 16

VETO Colgate's Amazing New Antiseptic Deodorant, Checks Perspiration, Stops Odor—Yet is Doubly Safe!

Safe for Skin! Safe for Clothes! Keeps You Dainty!

Says EDNA HINES, Registered Nurse

Only VETO Contains DURATEX, exclusive new safety ingredient! Veto is different from any other deodorant... Does not rot clothes. Safe for any normal skin. Stays moist in jar, never gritty, rubs in easily. Use doubly safe Veto regularly to guard daintiness—and to check perspiration, stop underarm odor safely.

DOUBLY PREFERRED!

Registered Nurses who have tried Veto prefer it almost 2 to 1 over any other deodorant, according to a nation-wide survey.

APPROVED SAFE FOR FABRICS—Better Fabrics Bureau

BREAK OF HEARTS

(Continued from page 50)

in his voice; observed his puzzled shrug; listened to him forthrightly declare that "Margot is the swellest girl that ever lived."

"We met while I was working in Stage Door for the Group Theater in New York," he told me. "We went together for a year before we married. We were married five and a half years. Our separation is really months old. We decided quite a while ago that we couldn't make a go of marriage any longer. But, at the time, we were living in a big place I bought in Brentwood, and there wasn't any place Margot could go.

"I felt that she was unhappy because she found it impossible to go on any further as a concert pianist. She has a wonderful talent, but a professional pianist has to keep in training, like a fighter. Margot couldn't take it any longer."

Dane should know about those things. He was a professional boxer before he became an actor. Today he keeps himself in tip-top condition by never missing a day's work-out at a gymnasium. As I sat talking to him on the set of the Deep Valley location, I couldn't help comparing him mentally with the sleek, thoroughbred horses in the corrals at the Harry Warner ranch nearby. Dane is the racehorse type. He doesn't bend to the will of others.

And right there, I believe, is the rub. I'm sure that's the secret of why he and Margot have called it a day. Margot is as high spirited and independent, herself, as a thoroughbred. All her life she has been making her own decisions, living her own life, asking no odds. A girl like that becomes more dominant as the years go by. She's had a romantic career of her own.

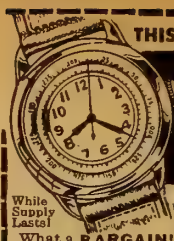
The second child and the eldest daughter of a well-to-do Texan, who founded the town of Snyder, Texas, she left home early to make her way. Her artistic talents were pronounced: she painted; sang; played the piano; read everything, and absorbed what she read. As a girl she married a struggling young painter in Chicago, where she was a student at the American Conservatory of Music. But, he died soon after.

She went to Paris; became the bride of a titled Englishman; studied piano with the famous Alfred Cortot for two years. She was part of the artistic life of the French capital. Charming, vivacious, temperamental, her redheaded beauty adorned social gatherings in high circles. She absorbed her marvelous piano technique by

I SAW IT HAPPEN

My friend and I went to a musical comedy, and when the lights flashed on between the acts, I recognized the face of Ted Briskin, sitting a few aisles away. Oddly enough, I saw him before I saw his lovely wife, Betty Hutton. They both seemed surprised when I asked, "May I have your autograph, Mrs. Briskin?" Turning to her brand new husband, Betty exclaimed, "Gee! She called me 'Mrs. Briskin!' Here, honey, just for that, you must sign your 'X,' too." It seems it was the first time anyone had ever called her that in public.

Lorraine Hartley
Pittstown, New Jersey



THIS COUPON GOOD FOR 50c

GENUINE IMPORTED SWISS WRIST WATCH

While Supply Lasts!

Regularly $8.45 With this Coupon Only $7.95 Below Ceiling Price

What a BARGAIN! What a beauty is this handsome, serviceable, Imported Wrist Watch. Beautifully designed Dial, Sweep Second hand. Luminous Numerals shine in the Dark. Expensive-looking Stainless Steel Case and adjustable leather band. Send No Money! Just send name and address with this Coupon as your 50c deposit. Pay postman only $7.95 plus 10% tax and postage when watch is delivered.

WORLD-WIDE DIAMOND CO. Dept. N-966
2451 S. Michigan Ave., Chicago 16, Illinois

AMAZING NEW RADIO!

Pocket or Purse Size

SMALL AS A PACK OF CIGARETTES!

Weighs only a few ounces—Beautiful black chrome plastic case. Uses new born crystal diode. Hi-Q-slide dial. No tubes, batteries or electric "plug-ins." Usually receives local broadcasts without outside aerial wires.

GUARANTEED TO PLAY when used according to instructions sent with each radio! You can use it at home, in offices, hotels, cabins, in bed, etc.—lots of fun—real entertainment!

SEND ONLY $1.00 (cash, money order, check) and pay postman $2.99 plus delivery fees on arrival or send $3.99 for postpaid delivery. Complete as shown Ready to Play with self contained personal phone. For Gifts—children will love it—grownups too! An exceptional value—order yours and enjoy the many good radio programs coming. Don't be without your Pakette Radio another day! (All foreign orders $5.00 U. S. cash.)

Pakette Electric Company, Dept. MM-4, Kearney, Nebr.

ITCH CHECKED IN A JIFFY

Sufferers from the torturing itch caused by eczema, pimples, scales, scabies, athlete's foot, "factory" itch, and other itch troubles are praising cooling, liquid D. D. D. Prescription. This time-proved medication—developed by Dr. D. D. Dennis—positively relieves that cruel, burning itch. Greaseless and stainless. Soothes and comforts even the most intense itching in a jiffy. A 35c trial bottle proves its merits or your money back. Ask your druggist today for D. D. D. Prescription.

LEG SUFFERERS

Why continue to suffer without attempting to do something? Write today for New Booklet—"THE LIEPE METHODS FOR HOME USE." It tells about Varicose Ulcers and Open Leg Sores. Liepe Methods used while you walk. More than 40 years of success. Praised and endorsed by multitudes.

FREE BOOKLET

LIEPE METHODS, 3284 N. Green Bay Ave., Dept. D-25, Milwaukee, Wisconsin

Destroy UNWANTED HAIR

Temporary relief not enough—you want freedom

Only by KILLING THE HAIR ROOT can you be sure your unwanted hair has gone FOREVER. The Mahler Method—used successfully all over the world for over fifty years—positively enables you to do this in the privacy of your home. It brings relief and social happiness long denied you. . . . Send 6c in stamps TODAY for illustrated booklet, "New Charm for Madame."

MAHLER'S, Inc., Dept. 376 D, E. Providence, R. I.

SUFFERERS FROM PSORIASIS (SCALY SKIN TROUBLE)

MAKE THE ONE SPOT TEST

Use DERMOIL

Prove it yourself no matter how long you have suffered or what you have tried. Beautiful book on psoriasis and Dermoil with amazing, true photographic proof of results sent FREE. Write for it.

Don't mistake eczema for the stubborn, ugly, embarrassing scaly skin disease Psoriasis. Apply non-staining Dermoil. Thousands do for scaly spots on body or scalp. Grateful users, often after years of suffering, report the scales have gone, the red patches gradually disappeared and they enjoyed the thrill of a clear skin again. Dermoil is used by many doctors and is backed by a positive agreement to give definite benefit in 2 weeks or money is refunded without question. Send 10c (stamps or coin) for generous trial bottle to make our famous "One Spot Test." Test it yourself. Results may surprise you. Write today for your test bottle. Caution: Use only as directed. Print name plainly. Don't delay. Sold by Liggett and Walgreen Drug Stores and other leading Druggists. LAKE LABORATORIES, Box 547 Northwestern Station, Dept. 9009, Detroit 4, Mich.

SEND FOR GENEROUS TRIAL SIZE

©1933 LAKE LAB.

REDUCE
Fatty "Spots"

LOSE TO 15 POUNDS in less than 30 DAYS

Without Drugs Laxatives

Here is a "PLAN" that is designed for YOU, the normal healthy, Busy Woman who has no time for Strenuous Exercise . . . Severe Diets. YET . . . Rolls and Bulges mar Beauty and Happiness. Slender Loveliness may be Yours again if you use the HOLLYWOOD TWO-WAY PLAN, an External, Scientifically proven method that includes Internal-External Correction, Caloric Guidance, and the Hollywood Body Toner for effective Self-Massage and "SPOT" TONING.

"SPOT" TONE $2.25

ANY PART OF THE BODY

Self-Massage and "SPOT" TONE Any Part of the Body with the Hollywood Body Toner. This external applicator works like a Good Firm Hand Massage. Passive and Soothing, its action Stimulates Active Blood Circulation in Fatty Tissues. It takes a few minutes a day to Tone and Tighten Flabby Flesh and Sagging Muscles to Normal, Desirable Firmness. FEEL YOUR BODY GLOW FROM "TOP TO TOE."

REDUCE or MONEY REFUNDED

ORDER TODAY . . . At No Risk To You . . . Either REDUCE NOTICEABLY within 10 days or your money will be refunded immediately. You are "Sole Judge." Just mail Coupon TODAY . . . NOW . . . . for the "HOLLYWOOD TWO-WAY PLAN" including the self-massage "Hollywood Body Toner" and a liberal supply of Body Cream. Not a monthly purchase but complete at $2.25. SEND NO MONEY.

On delivery simply pay $2.25 plus postage. If you prefer, mail check or money order for $2.25 and save postage! Address:

Hollywood Beauty Consultants
6808 Sunset Blvd. Dept. 3-DM, Hollywood 28, California

64 ACTUAL PHOTOS OF THE FAVORITE MOVIE STARS

INCLUDING INGRID BERGMAN, CORNEL WILDE, VAN JOHNSON, ESTHER WILLIAMS, GUY MADISON, JUNE ALLYSON AND MANY OTHERS.

50c
for complete set of 64

Catalogue of the complete list of pictures available with first order.

STEWART-CROXTON STUDIOS
1408 Westwood Blvd, Dept. OB
West Los Angeles 24, California

AT LAST! SOMETHING NEW and SENSATIONAL in EVERYDAY CARDS

Greetings

Gorgeous Satin and Velour Designs SHOW friends rich new Satin and Velour Greeting Cards. Never before offered. Astounding value, 15 for $1. Get easy orders FAST! Pays up to 100% cash profit. 14 other money-making assortments retailing 60c to $1. No experience needed. Start now—earn all year 'round. Samples on approval. Write today.

Make Money Easily

PURO CO., 2801 Locust, Dept. 75-D, St. Louis 3, Mo.

I SAW IT HAPPEN

When our Robert Mitchum fan club arrived at the RKO studios, Bob was making a close-up with Laraine Day. The director was explaining the scene, in which Laraine was to slap Bob. They rehearsed the scene over and over before Miss Day could get up enough courage to do it. Finally she said she was ready. The cameras rolled and the scene progressed; then came the slap, loud and hard. We all breathed a sigh of relief, but to our amazement, Miss Day had stopped the dialogue of the scene and was saying apologetically, "Oh, Robert, I'm so terribly sorry! Did I hurt you?" Everyone roared, especially Bob, and when we left, he was still reassuring the gentle Miss Day that he wasn't mortally wounded.

Pat Hutchison
Los Angeles, California accompanying Cortot on a tour.

Ten years ago she came to Hollywood, met and married George Fisher, now a brilliant writer and radio commentator; then, a struggling press agent. She tried to become an actress and studied at Jean Muir's school. Margot's tendency to dominate was a factor in the breakup of her marriage to Fisher, who professes the highest regard for her.

The careers of the Hollywood stars run in a pattern: success goes with success. There came a day when Dane Clark began to find the recognition that his talents deserved. He became known as an actor of importance. His studio handed him better roles, heavier responsibilities.

And he has a temperament of his own. If an actor hasn't got temperament, there's a pretty good chance that he hasn't got anything else that success in his craft demands. And so two egos clashed. For there is nothing lackadaisical about Dane Clark. Not only is he a two-fisted young man physically, but he has strong notions about where he wants to go and how he proposes to get there. He's definitely not the type that craves petticoat government.

But he is sad. Life has dealt him a blow. This handsome chap said to me, "I hate to talk about it. It's like probing an open wound with a knife. Margot's really a swell gal. In fact, she's the swellest person I know. And, of course, it makes me furious to have insinuations made that there is someone else in my life. The way I feel now there never will be."

Undoubtedly, there is a deep friendship between Dane and Ida Lupino. They are both passionately interested in the theater. They both have the same keen, restless minds, always searching for something new to challenge their understanding. Few actors in Hollywood have Dane's education. He studied law and was admitted to the bar in New York State, and if acting ever fails him, he could undoubtedly take his place among the outstanding attorneys in California.

As soon as he finishes Deep Valley, he is going to New York for a meeting with Margot. He doesn't know how their estrangement will come out. I suggested to him that everything might be patched up when they sit down to talk things over. He smiled a bit wistfully and said, "the fact that we are separated now is evidence that we are pretty far apart. I'm not optimistic about our getting together again."

NO DRY BRITTLE NAILS

When You Use This Amazing NEW

Non Acid

Polish Remover

WITH NAIL CONDITIONER

1. Helps prevent dry-brittle nails
2. Helps prevent nails from splitting
3. Helps prevent polish from chipping
4. Helps prolong the lustre

INSIST ON 25¢ at all cosmetic counters

TRIMAL
NON ACID
POLISH REMOVER

Demanded by millions of smart women everywhere

Contains no acetone
No offensive odor
Delicately Perfumed

WE PAY YOU $25
FOR SELLING FIFTY $1 ASSORTMENTS of Birthday, All-Occasion cards. Tremendous demand. Sell for $1.00—your profit 50c. It costs nothing to try. Write today.
CHEERFUL CARD CO., Dept. S-2, White Plains, N.Y.

WRITE FOR SAMPLES

MARTHA TILTON

Singing Star of Old Gold's, Meet Me At Parky's program, Sunday Nights on the N. B. C. Network

Makes Dull Hair Beautiful

1. Friends — and your mirror — will tell you there is new beauty, more silky sheen, more dancing highlights in your hair after your first, easily applied Golden Glint hair rinse.
2. Emphasizes the natural color. There's a special Golden Glint rinse for your hair—12 different shades and many more easily prepared combinations.
3. Relieves tangles and snarls. Pure RADIEN, used only in Golden Glint, adds gloss, saving hours of comb-snagging and brush fouling.
4. Fifty million Golden Glint rinses sold. Why not join the throng of modish women who know how much superior to lemon juice or vinegar this scientific, modern rinse is? Get a 25c or 10c packet at drug or variety store.

GOLDEN GLINT

NADINOLA'S 4-WAY ACTION HELPS AMAZINGLY TO COMBAT UGLY BLACKHEADS, EXTERNALLY-CAUSED PIMPLES, DARK DULL SKIN

One glance may kill romance—if your skin is dark, dull or needlessly blemished! That's why thousands of girls and women trust to Nadinola Cream, the clinically-proved 4-way treatment cream. Quickly, gently, Nadinola helps to loosen and remove ugly blackheads—to clear up externally caused pimples—to fade freckles—to lighten, brighten and freshen your skin to creamier loveliness. See for yourself what Nadinola can do in days—what wonders it works in weeks! Full treatment-size jar of Nadinola Cream just 60c, with money-back guarantee; trial jar, 10c.

SEND FOR FREE ILLUSTRATED BEAUTY BOOKLET—richly printed in full color, with photographs and sworn proof of wonderful results from just one jar of Nadinola. Write NADINOLA, Dept. 30, Paris, Tenn.

Marvel

$3.50 WHIRLING SPRAY SYRINGE for Women

At DRUG COUNTERS THROUGHOUT THE WORLD

Free Booklet. Marvel Co., 60 East St., New Haven, Ct.

STAMMER?

GET THIS FREE BOOK!

This new 128-page book, "Stammering, Its Cause and Correction," describes the Bogue Unit Method for scientific correction of stammering and stuttering—successful for 46 years. Benj. N. Bogue, Dept. 2294, Circle Tower, Indianapolis 4, Ind.

FAST RELIEF FROM THE PAIN OF SIMPLE PILES

● Think of it! A single soothing ointment that speeds relief from those tortures of simple piles. It's amazing Pazo Ointment—acts instantly to relieve pain and itching—soothes inflamed tissues—lubricates dry, hardened parts—helps prevent cracking and soreness—acts to reduce swelling and check minor bleeding. The help you get is wonderful!

So, to speed this relief from itching and pain of simple piles, get Pazo Ointment. Your doctor can tell you about it. At all druggists in tubes complete with perforated pile pipe—also tins and handy suppositories.

Be Your Own MUSIC Teacher

LEARN AT HOME THIS QUICK MONEY-SAVING WAY

Simple as A-B-C. Your lessons consist of real selections, instead of tiresome exercises. You read real notes—no "numbers" or trick music. Some of our 850,000 students are band LEADERS. Everything is in print and pictures. First you are told what to do. Then a picture shows you how. Soon you may become an excellent musician. Mail coupon for our illustrated Free Book and Print and Picture Sample. Mention your favorite instrument. U. S. School of Music, 1444 Brunswick Bldg., N.Y. 10, N.Y.

FREE BOOKLET

U. S. School of Music, 1444 Brunswick Bldg., N.Y. 10, N.Y.

Please send me Free Booklet and Print and Picture Sample. I would like to play (Name Instrument).

Have you Instrument.....Instrument?.....

Name.....
(Please Print)

Address.....

THOSE ACADEMY AWARDS

(Continued from page 27)

performance by an actor was turned in by Fredric March as the middle-aged homecoming veteran in The Best Years of Our Lives—and I'm right here to state that my vote went to him in the New York critics' poll. Great motion picture acting is a rare and remarkable thing; we see it about as often as we see great motion pictures—and that's not often! Too many times, mere acrobatics are mistaken for acting art; too frequently are we deceived by personal charm. But I am firmly convinced that Mr. March's performance in The Best Years is great—and, no matter who gets the "Oscar," he is definitely my boy.

He is an adult, mature and finished actor who has long since graduated from glamor roles and is one of the screen's men of real distinction. That's the key to his success in The Best Years. For, in this facile portrait of a husband and a father who returns home from war, expected to resume civilian routines in a good but inevitably stuffy job, aware that he is not a chipper youngster yet reluctant to detach himself from youth, Mr. March has created a character of warm and inspiring quality, demonstrated in a hundred subtle ways.

best scene, best years . . .

I'd say that one of the most appealing scenes I've ever witnessed on the screen is that which takes place in Butch's tavern in the early part of The Best Years. For here Mr. March, grandly pickled as a normal way of release from the tensions of sudden reunion with his family (Myrna Loy and Teresa Wright), reveals in his manner of introducing his wife and daughter to his veteran friends, Dana Andrews and Harold Russell, all the joy and the pathos of the back-to-civilian-life jump. Acting a drunk is not easy, and many an actor has floundered in such a task. But Mr. March, being blessed with a magnificent sense and tempo for comedy, as well as a feeling for human sentiment, has illuminated in this scene—as well as in that later one, when he gets up to speak at the dinner for him—a sweet and heart-warming character, a real man.

A role must be written as well as acted. The greatest actor in the world can't give an Academy performance unless it is in the script. For this reason, I found it most revealing when Mr. Robert E. Sherwood told me the other day that the role played by Mr. March in The Best Years was rather negative as originally conceived—that it wasn't until Mr. Sherwood knew that Mr. March was going to play the role that it took on a positive magnetism and became the focal character in the script. That, in my estimation, is a score for Mr. March.

It might, too, be well to remember that Mr. March is an old and honored hand—that he was playing romantic heroes back in the Garbo-Shearer days when most of our current heart-throbbers were playing mumbly-peg. How fondly do many of us recall him in Anthony Adverse, Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde (for which he won the 1932 "Oscar"), Smilin' Through and The Barretts of Wimpole Street!

Oh, sure—there are other contenders. Jimmy Stewart (see page 56) in It's a Wonderful Life gives a charming and flexible performance of a big-hearted, small-town guy—a multi-mannered fellow with a wide emotional span. And Dana Andrews, Gregory Peck and Rex Harrison (see page 58) turned in swell ones in 1946. But where Jimmy's performance, for instance, is patterned to a stamped theatrical style—a "typical Frank Capra hero"—Mr. March's is unique. I'd vote for him.

Take your pick of gorgeous, glossy photos of your favorite Hollywood Stars in their newest poses. Smallest Order 50c. Name 2nd choices. FREE! THREE 8 x 10 PICTURES, GIFT COUPONS and CATALOG of OVER 200 EXCITING PHOTOS with each order.

DE LUXE PHOTO SERVICE Dept. H-41
Box 953 Church St. Annex New York 8, N. Y.

FREE BAGFUL BUTTONS 500 YDS. THREAD PATTERN BOOK

WITH PURCHASE OF 4 POUNDS (Approx. 25 Yds.)

QUILT PIECES

EXTRA LARGE PIECES, ALL NEW REMNANTS CUT FROM COLORFUL BOLTS of EXPENSIVE DRESS GOODS $1.49

Furnished us by the largest and finest dress manufacturers. SATISFACTION GUARANTEED or we make full refund including postage. Send no money; pay only $1.49 plus C. O. D. fee upon delivery. Remember, FREE BUTTONS, FREE THREAD and FREE PATTERN BOOK.

THE QUILTING BEE P. O. DRAWER 449 — DEPT. 114 ST. LOUIS 3, MO.

SEND NO MONEY • ORDER TODAY!

DEVELOP NATURAL FIGURE LOVELINESS

Bust-Aid, a simple mechanical device, develops and firms your bust . . . naturally! No embarrassing pads or messy creams. Physician endorsed and recommended . . . Proven at New York's Charm Clinic. Bust-Aid Exerciser plus Chart plus Manual of Bust Care . . . all for only $5.95. Money Back Guarantee!

The CHARM CLINIC
210 Fifth Ave, New York, N. Y.

THE JOB AHEAD DEPENDS ON YOU!

Support the 1947 Red Cross Fund

HELPING

sister Red Cross Societies, so that kindness, mercy, and mutual aid may bind together the people of this planet.

LEARN MILLINERY AT HOME

Design and make exclusive hats under personal direction of one of America's noted designers. Complete materials, blocks, etc., furnished. Every step illustrated. You make exclusive salable hats right from the start. Begin a profitable business in spare time. Low cost, easy terms.

LOUIE MILLER SCHOOL OF MILLINERY
225 North Wabash Avenue, Dept. 184, Chicago 1, Ill.
Please send me your FREE illustrated catalog.

Print
Name
Address

REDUCE
UP TO 7 lbs. A WEEK
...OR DOUBLE MONEY BACK

EAT WHAT YOU WANT

Thousands have used amazing MYLO method to banish ugly fat, and gain gloriously beautiful figure. Easy! Safe! No Starving. You get all daily required vitamins and minerals—delicious concentrated food energy to keep up pep. Just eat sensibly and take healthful, wonderful MYLO as directed—and it is possible for you to lose up to 7 lbs. in a week.

NO STARVING
NO DRUGS
NO MASSAGE
NO LAXATIVES
NO EXERCISE

MYLO 7-DAY NO-RISK TRIAL

Either you are more than delighted with the results MYLO brings you in loss of weight or you get double your money back. SEND NO MONEY! Just mail us your name and address and on delivery of MYLO pay the postman $2.00, plus C. O. D. charges or send $2.00 with your order and we will pay the postage. Follow direction for 7 days. Then, if you are not truly amazed at the loss of weight, if you don't notice remarkable improvement in your figure, if you don't look better, feel better, you will get double your money back. Don't let ugly fat distort your shape. Send for delicious, nutritious MYLO today.

INTERNATIONAL LABORATORIES
329 S. Wood St. • Dept. 15-DD • Chicago 12, Ill.

PROTECTION IN CASE OF SICKNESS OR ACCIDENT

3¢ A DAY HOSPITAL PLAN

PAYS HOSPITAL & DOCTOR BILLS

In case of sickness or accident, you may go to any Hospital in the U. S. or Canada under any Doctor's care. WE PAY YOUR EXPENSES in full accordance with Policy Provisions.

INDIVIDUAL or FAMILY

You are eligible for this low cost Protection from birth to age 70 . . . without medical examination. The famous North American Plan is sold direct at a saving to you. The Company is under the supervision of the Insurance Department. BE PREPARED! Sickness and accident strike suddenly. Insure now! Send for free details at once. No Agent will call.

POLICY PAYS

Hospital Room and Board for Sickness or Accident
Per Day Up to $6.00

Doctor Visits In Case of Accident Per Visit $3.00

Surgical Operations
Up to $150.00

Time Lost from Work In Case of Accident Per Week $25.00

Accidental Death
Up to $2000.00

Physical Dismemberment
Up to $2000.00

Identification Service
Up to $100.00

Ambulance Service
$10.00

FREE! MAIL COUPON

NORTH AMERICAN MUTUAL INSURANCE COMPANY
Dept. MM7-4, Wilmington, Del.

Please send me, without obligation, details about your "3c A Day Hospitalization Insurance Plan".

Name.....
Address.....
City.....State.....

Citing an actress for the "Oscar" is a little bit tougher for me because my admiration is divided among three or four ladies of note. I think that Rosalind Russell did a remarkably dexterous job with her difficult role in Sister Kenny—an oddly exacting task—and especially was I attracted by the sincerity of her attitude towards the children in the film. I liked, too, Olivia de Havilland's (see page 60) sensitive playing of the tragic heroine—the self-sacrificial mother—in the highly sentimental To Each His Own. Both Miss de Havilland and Miss Russell covered a wide range of ages in their respective roles with fascinating development of each small detail.

But I am also quite vividly mindful of Dorothy McGuire's striking versatility in the role of the mute girl in The Spiral Staircase and of Teresa Wright's (see page 34) wistful yearning in The Best Years. Indeed, in my estimation of the virtues (and faults) of all of them, I find my book near a Mexican stand-off. But in the last analysis, I'd give Miss Russell my vote.

However, there's no denying that I think the best actress of the year was the aforementioned Celia Johnson, who helped make the British film, Brief Encounter, such a gem. Her unglamorized demonstration of how an English housewife might behave if she found herself desperately attracted to a young (and married) doctor whom she met, struck me as supremely true and finished—a rare exposure of a woman's heart. But she's not eligible for an "Oscar," since Brief Encounter, being an English film, is outside the "jurisdiction" of the Academy.

supporting roles raise problem . . .

The choice of supporting players for Academy honors must be hard for those who are qualified to make them. So many contradictions are involved. For instance, I think Hume Cronyn was extraordinarily good as the mean-minded Scottish grandparent in The Green Years—but wasn't that a leading role? Likewise Michael Chekhov, as the gaudy ballet impresario in Specter of the Rose, played a character of primary importance in the tale. Philip Merivale was excellent as the doctor who opposed Sister Kenny in that film. His was hardly a "supporting" performance, yet I suppose that is how it is classed. At the same time, a very slight appearance, such as that of comedienne Celeste Holm in Three Little Girls in Blue, a slight picture, would not, I presume, qualify for Academy consideration, but I thought it quite a winning bit.

However, I have my own hopefuls. I'd like to see Mr. Cronyn get the nod for his role in The Green Years. And I'm confident that the best supporting actress that I saw during the year was Leopoldine Konstantin, who played the German mother—an awesome creature—in Alfred Hitchcock's Notorious.

As for the best child's performance, can there be any question that little Claude Jarman, Jr. (see page 62) who plays the role of Jody in The Yearling will run away with the prize?

But, again I repeat, we working critics have no vote in these affairs. Selection is strictly limited to those who work in Hollywood. So are the qualified candidates. Both limitations strike me as wrong. For I feel that some partial determination of the highest film awards of the year should come from outside the industry—and I feel that all film artists in the world should be qualified for consideration. The motion picture is an international art in which the measure of talent and accomplishment should not be made along national lines. That's how we New York critics feel about it—and that is why we give our awards to what we think are the "best" in the year's productions that are laid before our eyes.

NO DULL DRAB HAIR

When You Use This Amazing

4 Purpose Rinse

LOVALON, simple and quick to use after a shampoo, does these 4 things to give YOUR hair glamour and beauty:

1. Brings out lustrous highlights.
2. Adds a rich, natural tint to hair.
3. Rinses away shampoo or soap film.
4. Leaves hair soft, easy to manage.

LOVALON does not permanently dye or bleach — merely tints the hair as it rinses. Comes in 12 flattering shades. Try Lovalon.

At stores which sell toilet goods

25¢ and 10¢ sizes

REPLACEMENT OR REFUND OF MONEY IF NOT AS ADVERTISED THEREIN
Guaranteed by Good Housekeeping

THE PIN WITH THE LASTING GRIP
•
SMOOTH FINISH INSIDE AND OUT

Scoldy Lox BOB and HAIR PINS
NEVER LET YOUR HAIR DOWN

Pins and Rings
Class pins, club pins, rings and emblems. Finest quality. Reasonable prices from 30c up. Write today. Department Z, Metal Arts Co., Rochester, N. Y.

FREE CATALOG

CAT'S PAW
Finest Rubber Heels & Soles!

(Continued from page 12)

struggle she waged since. She has been acutely aware for a long time now that life without Leo Durocher means nothing to her. Actually she and Leo are worlds apart. Durocher comes from a world to which she is a stranger. Leo is a man's man, tough-bodied, tough-minded. He knows what it means to fight and claw his way to the top. He's smart, aggressive, wise in the Broadway sense, sophisticated, and no stranger to romance.

Yet once the hands of these two had clasped, once their lips had met, they knew that none of life's glories or triumphs ever could mean a thing to them unless they could share them.

But, of course, Laraine is a girl of gentle, rigorous upbringing. She comes from Mormon people in Utah. High ideals of personal conduct were early instilled into her character. She was determined above all else that this irresistible love should not wreck her career or her life, that it must not touch her adopted babies.

Leo loves the children. Laraine yearned for children of her own to satisfy her mother instinct. When the story of their love first broke as a stunning surprise on Hollywood, I went to see Laraine at her Santa Monica home. I found her changing the baby's diaper. Only one of her three youngsters has been legally adopted, the others being in process now. Fear that she might be deprived of any one or all of them worried Laraine.

The complaint filed by Ray Hendricks in which Leo was made to appear a "love-thief," stealing into his and Laraine's home to make off with her affections, shocked and stunned her. She realized the threat involved her right to keep the children.

Behind the scenes the lawyers haggled. When the divorce matter finally came up before Superior Judge George A. Dockweiler, it was cut and dried. Durocher's name was not mentioned. Only consideration for the children induced Laraine to go through with a settlement which unquestionably gave her the worst of it financially. What price freedom indeed?

On a Monday Laraine's decree was granted. That night she and Leo boarded a plane for El Paso over American Airlines using the names of A. and V. Johnson. Her real name is Loraine Johnson. The word seeped around that they were eloping. Reporters pursued them.

At El Paso they went to the Hilton Hotel. The manager delightedly prepared to show them to the bridal suite.

"No, no," Laraine protested. "We want two rooms!"

The hour was early morning. They slept briefly, refreshed themselves, and kept an appointment with an El Paso attorney who escorted them across the International Bridge to Juarez. In a few minutes she had a Mexican divorce to add to the interlocutory decree granted in Los Angeles.

Hurrying back into the United States, they proceeded to the office of a justice of the peace where they remained for more than an hour. When they emerged reporters asked if they were married. Leo replied curtly: "No, we're not married."

Meanwhile in Los Angeles things were happening. Attorney Bernard Silbert, Laraine's divorce counsel, was worried for fear of what they might do in Texas and had advised them against a hasty marriage. They assured him that they had no intention of getting married. And I think when they said that they meant it. Judge Dockweiler, hearing that they had flown away together, promptly developed a fine case of judicial anger, threatening to set aside the divorce and property settlement if they should, as he put it, "flout the laws of California."

Silbert called Durocher in El Paso. "It's too late," Leo told him. Durocher called Judge Dockweiler. "We are very much in love," he pleaded. "We were married on an impulse, the spur of the moment. In two weeks I am going to Havana to start spring training with the ball club. I promise you that we will not live together as man and wife in the interim."

His Honor was grim and unyielding. "See me when you get back," he ordered.

The plane that brought the newlyweds back to Los Angeles arrived ten minutes ahead of time, but I've learned not to trust airplane schedules too closely. While wire services fumed and fretted and sent wrong stories to New York, while all Hollywood waited and wondered, I got the whole story directly.

"We shall live apart in California," said Laraine. "I am going right home and Leo will go to the Hotel Miramar. Yes, it is true that we are married. I do hope the Judge will not be too angry.

"In two weeks Leo goes to Havana. I stay here working on my picture, Tycoon, with John Wayne, until February 22. Then I, too, shall fly to Havana and we shall have a two weeks' honeymoon. Then back to work for me and at the end of April, I'm going to pack up and go to New York where we shall live."

They were a worried pair of wedded lovers. I don't know which was the more worried of the two, but maybe it was Leo. He told me volubly that his New York lawyer, Bernard Sandler, had assured him a Texas marriage was okay and did not "flout the laws of California." New York recognizes both the Mexican divorce and the Texas marriage, Sandler assured Leo.

Friends of Laraine who have watched her closely these last few months have been amazed at the change in her. Once she seemed definitely the mousy type.

Now she has become one of the town's dashing beauties. Her laughter is gay and sparkling, her manner warm and friendly.

Somehow the whole affair adds up to the most thrilling love story that has come out of Hollywood in a long, long time. And to me, the magnificent transformation in Laraine proves anew the sagacity of the old philosopher who said, "A woman is not truly a woman until she has loved!"

FREE SUBSCRIPTIONS!

We're laying aside modesty and admitting quite frankly that we're pretty proud of our story line-up for April. But, first, last and always, it's your opinion that means most to us. So—after you've read the stories and features in this issue carefully, take a few extra seconds to fill out the Questionnaire below. If you do it NOW, you may be one of the lucky 500 who'll receive a three months' subscription to MODERN SCREEN (May, June and July issues) ABSOLUTELY FREE!

QUESTIONNAIRE

What stories and features did you enjoy most in our April issue? WRITE THE NUMBERS 1, 2 and 3 AT THE RIGHT OF YOUR 1st, 2nd and 3rd CHOICES.

Those Academy Awards! by Bosley Crowther ☐
The First Year Is the Easiest (Shirley Temple) ☐
Saint or Sinner (Errol Flynn) ☐
Easter Dream (Esther Williams) ☐
Break of Hearts (Dane Clark) ☐
I Give You Jane Wyman, by Gregory Peck ☐
"That's What I Like About Tom" (Tom Drake) ☐
The Man I Married (John Hodiak) by Anne Baxter ☐
Club Caulfield (Joan Caulfield) by Betty Caulfield ☐
She Walks In Beauty (Ingrid Bergman) by Ed Sullivan ☐
There Was Always Dad (Teresa Wright) ☐
Uncle Jimmy (Jimmy Stewart) by Hedda Hopper ☐
6 to 5 on Jones! (Jennifer Jones) ☐
Fighting Lady (Olivia DeHavilland) ☐
Mark Stevens Life Story (Part Two) ☐
Why Gene Tierney Is Divorcing My Brother ☐
Manhattan Nocturne (Rex Harrison) ☐
Full Confession (Ginger Rogers) by Ed Sullivan ☐
Jody (Claude Jarman, Jr.) by Clarence Brown ☐
Suddenly It's Love! (Laraine Day) ☐
Good News by Louella Parsons ☐

Which of the above did you like LEAST?.....

What 3 MALE stars would you like to read about in future issues? List them, 1, 2, 3, in order of preference.....

.....

What 3 FEMALE stars would you like to read about in future issues? List them, 1, 2, 3, in order of preference.....

.....

My name is.....

My address is.....

City..... Zone..... State..... I am..... years old

ADDRESS THIS TO: POLL DEPT., MODERN SCREEN
149 MADISON AVENUE, NEW YORK 16, N. Y.

"Frankly, this was written for lazy people who want to get slim who don't like to exercise who do like to eat!"

Here is the "10-DAY MIRACLE DIET"

Average Overweight Person May Expect to Lose 5 to 10 Pounds in 10 Days, Yet Enjoy Better Health, Delicious Meals Every Day—No Exercise or Drugs!

HERE is the pleasant, sensible, scientific way to REDUCE. To see those unattractive bulges "smooth out" and disappear as if by magic. To enjoy the frankly admiring glances that a slim figure always attracts. This slenderizing miracle can be accomplished for the overweight quickly and safely—whether you are a man or woman, young or old. And, best of all—

WITHOUT starving yourself! (You'll eat delicious, satisfying meals every day, including a tasty breakfast.)

WITHOUT the drudgery of exercise! (You can be as lazy as you please.)

WITHOUT drugs, pills or compounds! (They can definitely hurt your health and appearance.)

WITHOUT steam baths or massage! (So often they don't work —and they are usually terribly expensive.)

How then? By simply knowing certain up-to-date scientific facts about food-selection!

"Oh, of course," you may reply, "it's just a matter of calories." But IS it? Suppose you had to choose between a large glass of orange juice and half a sirloin steak? You would probably reach for the orange juice. Actually, the steak would give you 15 times as many precious ENERGY-stimulating calories. Yet the total number of calories in each is roughly the same!

So you see it ISN'T "just a matter of calories." It's the KIND of calories that makes the big difference!

Calories, Yes—But Which KIND?

Some foods are high in fat calories. Others are high in energy-stimulating calories. Science has discovered that if you eat the first kind of foods, your body burns LESS ENERGY and stores MORE FAT. But if you eat the second kind your body burns MORE ENERGY and stores LESS FAT!

This simple scientific fact explains why most ordinary "dieting" fails . . . and why "The New Way To Eat and Get Slim" (as explained by Donald G. Cooley in his book) produces such amazing results.

How Much Do You WANT to Lose?

Since no two persons are exactly alike, it is impossible to predict the exact number of pounds you will lose on the "10-DAY MIRACLE DIET" given in this book. But the average overweight person can expect to lose 5 to 10 pounds in 10 days—even though the diet provides as much daily bulk as the average American diet!

Then the book also gives you a diet for losing 10 pounds a month; and a "stay-slim" diet, so when you reach alluring slenderness, you can stay there. You don't have to stick to each day's menu, either. Substitution Table gives you dozens of other meats and foods you may eat instead.

What This Book Is Doing For Others

"Lost 10 lbs. in 10 days. Feel better than I have in years."—Wisconsin.

"My sister is very short, weighed 196. Was so thrilled to be losing weight, would even get up in the night to weigh herself. Now weighs 120, is healthier, happier."—Michigan.

"Kindly forward me the book. Have a friend who lost 34 lbs., is now ever so much better in health, appearance."—California.

"Most sensible way to reduce I have seen yet. I'm a registered nurse and can fully appreciate sensibility of this means." — Massachusetts.

"Have lost 44 lbs. and have never felt better."—Michigan.

THE NEW WAY TO EAT and GET SLIM
10-DAY MIRACLE DIET
Eat for BEAUTY, CHARM, and —yes, really—SEX APPEAL
Lightning VITAMIN Calculator
Diets That KEEP YOU SLIM Without Exercise or Hunger
Two-Minute Counting Table
Cooley

Examine It 5 Days FREE

It costs only a stamp to get this book for FREE EXAMINATION. No money need be sent now. "The New Way to Eat and Get Slim" (in a plain wrapper) will be sent with the understanding that you may keep it for five days.

Leading medical authorities have approved this book. We believe that your doctor will, too. Show it to him. Unless you are convinced that this book offers you the quick, safe, pleasant "lazy-way" to reduce, return it without obligation. Otherwise it is yours to keep for only $2.00 plus few cents postage. Mail Free Examination Coupon at once. WILFRED FUNK, INC., Dept. R 354, 227 East 44 St., New York 17, N. Y.

PARTIAL CONTENTS

Showing HOW This Book Takes Off the Pounds and the Bulges

I. THE SURE WAY TO REDUCE

The "Lazy Way" to Lose Weight. How you can reduce quickly and safely—no exercise, no hunger pangs, no drugs, girdles or gadgets.

How Much Do You Want to Reduce—How Fast? Your choice of diets that reduce you rapidly or gradually, as you wish.

Counting Calories Isn't Enough. How to pick "galloping calories" that slim you faster.

Exercise Is a Practical Joker. Why exercise alone is a poor way to reduce. No Drugs, No Sweat. Why you can ignore costly sweat baths, reducing drugs, dangerous fasting, etc.

II. WHY YOU DON'T GET SLIM

Coffee, Tea, Cocoa, Milk, Water, Soft Drinks. How beverages affect weight control—with some surprises.

Cocktail Calories. The strange role of alcohol in building fat.

III. YOU CRACK DOWN ON CALORIES

How Proteins Help You Get Slim. One secret of reducing without feeling hunger pangs or sacrificing vitality.

The Simple Arithmetic of Reducing. Easy way to set your Calorie quota whether you're a housewife, factory worker, stenographer, etc.

These Diets Will Reduce You Safely. Best proportions of food elements assured by the new way of calorie-counting.

The Fastest SAFE Slimming Program. Diet safeguards that make speedy weight reduction safe.

10-Day Miracle Diet. Safe way for average overweight person to lose 5 to 10 pounds in 10 days.

Daily menus for 10 days. Heartier Diets. 3 diets for losing 10 pounds a month. How to substitute other foods you like better. 2 "STAY Slim" diets.

Two-Minute Calorie-Counting Table—At-a-glance chart showing kinds of calories in 26 meat dishes, 4 kinds of milk, 13 fish, 10 kinds of cheese and egg servings, 41 vegetables, 29 pies, pastries, 17 fats, sugars, syrups, 7 nuts, 11 soups, 18 "little things," 15 beverages.

Split Your Quota Any Way You Like. Exploding the no-food between meals myth and the nothing-but-coffee-for-breakfast error.

IV. YOU COUNT YOUR VITAMINS THE EASY WAY

You Needn't Pay Extra for Vitamins. How to get all you normally need from foods alone.

Your Daily Vitamin Needs. Complete table showing units of A, B1, C, G and D needed daily for Adults, Adolescents, Children, Infants and Pregnant Women.

Lightning Vitamin Calculator. Vitamin units in 78 common foods, in handy chart.

Cook Them Kindly, 9 simple rules to preserve vitamins in preparing foods.

V. EAT FOR BEAUTY, CHARM

No Pep, No Joy, No Friends. Is this you? Maybe you can remedy it —at the dinner table!

Skin You Love to Touch. How Vitamin A and other elements promote clear, beautiful skin.

Teeth You Love to Brush. Food minerals for healthy teeth.

The Diet Cure for Common Constipation. "Scare" warnings vs. truth.

WILFRED FUNK, Inc., Dept. R-354
227 East 44th St., New York 17, N. Y.

Please send me—in a plain wrapper—"The Way to Eat and Get Slim" for 5 days' FREE EXAMINATION. If I keep the book I will send you $2.00, plus actual postage. Otherwise I will return it without further obligation.

Name_____
(Print Plainly)

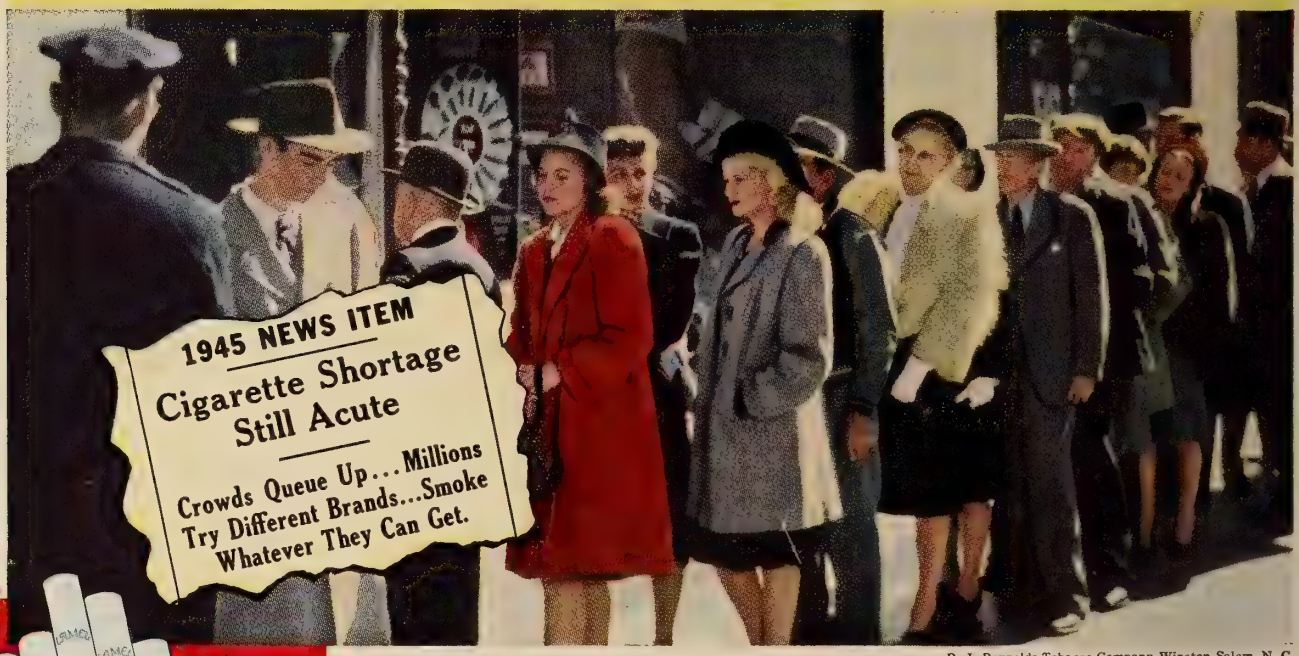
Address_____

City_____ Zone No. (if any)_____ State_____

☐ Check here if enclosing $2 WITH this coupon, and WE will pay the postage. The same 5-day return privilege, for full refund, applies.

(Canadian orders must remit in U. S. currency.)

EXPERIENCE IS THE BEST TEACHER!



1945 NEWS ITEM
Cigarette Shortage Still Acute
Crowds Queue Up... Millions Try Different Brands...Smoke Whatever They Can Get.

R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company, Winston-Salem, N. C.

EXPERIENCE TAUGHT MILLIONS THE DIFFERENCES IN CIGARETTE QUALITY!

Your "T-Zone" will tell you...
T for Taste...
T for Throat...
that's your proving ground for any cigarette. See if Camels don't suit your "T-Zone" to a "T."

Result: Many millions more people found that they liked Camels best.

IT'S ONLY a memory now, the war cigarette shortage. But it was during that shortage that people found themselves comparing brands whether they intended to or not.

And millions more people found that the rich, full flavor of Camel's superb blend of choice tobaccos suited their Taste to a "T." And that their Throats welcomed the kind of cool mildness Camels deliver.

Thus the demand for Camels . . . always great . . . grew greater still . . . so great that today more people are smoking Camels than ever before.

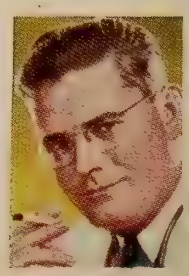
But, no matter how great the demand, this you can be sure of:

Camel quality is not to be tampered with. Only choice tobaccos, properly aged, and blended in the time-honored Camel way, are used in Camels.

According to a recent Nationwide survey:

MORE DOCTORS SMOKE CAMELS

than any other cigarette



When three independent research organizations asked 113,597 doctors—What cigarette do you smoke, Doctor?—the brand named most was Camel!

may 15c

modern screen

LIBRARY OF CONGRESS
SERIALS DIVISION
APR 21 1947
RECEIVED

Just One Cake of Camay for Softer, Smoother Skin!

MRS. JOHN WILLIAM COURSEN
the former Marian Reid of Valley Stream, N.Y.
Bridal portrait painted by SANDOR

It's lovely to look at—thrilling to touch—the clearer, softer complexion that comes with your first cake of Camay! So change from careless cleansing—go on the Camay Mild-Soap Diet. Doctors tested Camay's daring beauty promise on scores of complexions; reported that woman after woman—using just one cake of Camay—had softer, smoother skin!

WITH THE COURSENS

A mutual interest in auto racing helped to bring engineer Johnny Coursen and lovely Marian together. They went often to a speedway in a New York suburb. But races couldn't compete with Marian's fair-skinned beauty for Johnny's attentions! She uses Camay for her skin!

Now the Coursens have a home in Connecticut, and Johnny vows he'll build a closet just for Marian's hats. She has dozens—and her young-bride complexion looks lovely with every one. Marian pledges: "I'll stick with the Camay Mild-Soap Diet." Why don't you? Follow directions on wrapper.

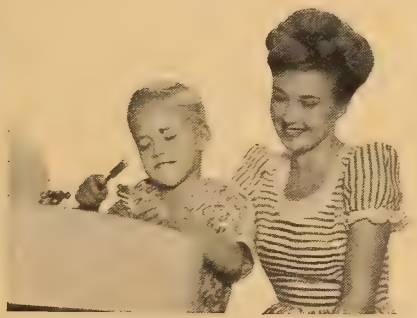
©CIB 71857

Handsome lifeguard in daring rescue. Every day, almost, Junior (very) Lifeguard Georgie rescues his "model" mother. It's good fun and exercise. Fortunately, Virginia knows that gums, too, need exercise. Because today's soft, creamy foods often tend to make them tender and flabby. So the Swensens use Ipana Tooth Paste—specially designed, with gentle massage, to help gums to healthier firmness.

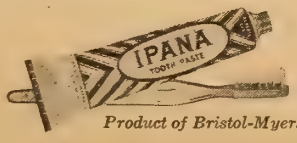
This Mother never dreamed of becoming a Model

...until her lovely figure and winning smile won Virginia Swensen a Florida beauty contest

Giddyap Napoleon! A few more riding lessons and Georgie will go tearing off in a cloud of dust. But he needs no lessons in care of teeth and gums. "When you brush your teeth, massage your gums gently," Virginia has taught him. This brief workout with Ipana helps speed up circulation within the gums.



"A lifeguard must be strong," Virginia reminds ambitious Georgie, "with sound teeth and gums." Sensitive gums often herald their warning with "pink" on your tooth brush—a sign to see your dentist. Let him decide whether yours is simply a case for "the helpful stimulation of Ipana and massage."

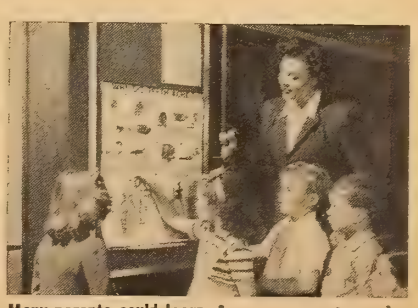


Product of Bristol-Myers

IT'S POSSIBLE that if she hadn't won a beauty contest, Virginia Swensen of Miami Springs might still be modeling aprons in her kitchen ... instead of fashions in a model agency.

It's possible—but not probable. With her figure, her sparkling smile, she couldn't miss becoming a hit. Today this lovely mother knows more than ever the importance of a smile. So she's teaching 4-year-old Georgie her own prized dental routine: Regular brushing with Ipana—then gentle gum massage.

Mrs. Swensen knows what thousands of dentists and schools teach—that a radiant smile depends on sparkling teeth. And sparkling teeth call for healthy gums.



Many parents could learn from youngsters the importance of gum massage, taught in thousands of schools. Also, 7 in 10 dentists recommend gum massage, national survey shows. (And dentists, 2 to 1, prefer Ipana for their own use!) But let your dentist decide whether and how to massage your gums.

Start today with Ipana and Massage

The METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER'S LION'S ROAR

Published in this space every month

The greatest star of the screen!

Brooklyn boasts a tree, a ball club, and a flair for butchering the English language.

★ ★ ★ ★

But that's not all. Now it's also famous for a wonderful musical film!

★ ★ ★ ★

M-G-M has turned four of its most talented stars loose somewhere in the area of Brooklyn Bridge . . . and what comes out is sheer enchantment, sure-fire humor, solid entertainment entitled "It Happened In Brooklyn".

★ ★ ★ ★

Frank Sinatra is cast as the girl-shy hero who thinks that "New York is just a place to see Brooklyn from". And "The Voice" is in rare voice.

★ ★ ★ ★

Then, to prove that Brooklyn has an eye for beauty and an ear for song, there's lovely Kathryn Grayson.

As the romantic young blue-blood who doesn't know that Greenpoint is pronounced "Greenpernt", Peter Lawford proves he's the screen's new heart-throb.

★ ★ ★ ★

Brightening "Brooklyn" with songs and quips is Jimmy Durante, who's got a million of them!

★ ★ ★ ★

Yes, it happened in "Anchors Aweigh"; it happened in "Till The Clouds Roll By"; and it's happened again.

★ ★ ★ ★

That now-famous M-G-M "musical romance" touch is TOPS!

★ ★ ★ ★

The screen play by Isobel Lennart, based on an original story by John McGowan, abounds in happy moments.

★ ★ ★ ★

Richard Whorf directed and Jack Cummings produced the picture and it's a happy combination.

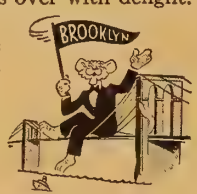
★ ★ ★ ★

"It Happened In Brooklyn" is a wonderful weaving of story and song, a rollicking, easy-going motion picture that simply bubbles over with delight.

★ ★ ★ ★

It's just about the happiest thing that ever happened!

— Leo



P. S. Best-sellers make best pictures! Three great novels are on their way to being M-G-M hits: "The Hucksters", "B. F.'s Daughter", "East River".

MAY, 1947

modern screen

the friendly magazine

stories

HOW VAN GOT MARRIED (Van Johnson) ..... by Florabel Muir 12
THE CHURCH VS. SELZNICK ("Duel In The Sun" controversy) by Albert P. Delacorte 27
INGRID (Ingrid Bergman) ..... by Charles Boyer 28
WHAT'S WRONG WITH FRANKIE? (Frank Sinatra) ..... by Hedda Hopper 30
CAPTAIN COURAGEOUS (Sterling Hayden) ..... by Hank Jeffries 32
HOPALONG HOPE (Bob Hope) ..... by Kirtley Baskette 34
FOR SENTIMENTAL REASONS (Gail Russell) ..... by Kaaren Pieck 36
A WOMAN'S PREROGATIVE (Linda Darnell) ..... by George Benjamin 38
STOP, LOOK AND WHISTLE (Marie McDonald) ..... by Abigail Putnam 40
IT'S A BOY! (Alan Ladd) ..... by Jane Wilkie 42
MADAM QUEEN (Irene Dunne) ..... by Jack Wade 44
"I'VE GOT IT BAD" (Larry Parks) ..... by Betty Garrett Parks 46
"MY DONNA" (Donna Reed) ..... by "Heidi," Donna Reed's sister 48
THE ADVENTURES OF GLENN LANGAN ..... by Howard Sharpe 50
ON MOTHERS' DAY (Betty Hutton) ..... by Betty Hutton 52
TWO ON A STRAW (Jane Powell) ..... by Christopher Kane 54
JUST BECAUSE SHE'S JOAN (Joan Crawford) ..... by Carl Schroeder 56
JOHN LUND'S LIFE STORY (Part I) ..... by Ida Zeitlin 58
"CHICAGO, I LOVE YOU!" (Diana Lynn) ..... by Jean Kinkead 60 CRACK-UP (Greer Garson, Richard Ney) ..... by Valerie Sloan 62

features

GOOD NEWS ..... by Louella Parsons 4
PICTURE OF THE MONTH: "The Beginning Or The End" selected by Dorothy Kilgallen 14

departments

REVIEWS ..... by Virginia Wilson 16
FASHION ..... by Constance Bartel 73
INFORMATION DESK ..... by Beverly Linet 88
BEAUTY: "Formal And Fancy Free" ..... by Carol Carter 102
MUSIC: "Sweet And Hot" ..... by Leonard Feather 104
FAN CLUBS ..... by Shirley Frohlich 106

COVER PORTRAIT BY NIKOLAS MURAY • DESIGNED BY LESTER BEALL

ALBERT P. DELACORTE, Executive Editor — HENRY P. MALMGREEN, Editor

BERYL STOLLER, associate editor
SHIRLEY FROHLICH, assistant editor
OTTO STORCH, art director
BILL WEINBERGER, art editor
CONSTANCE BARTEL, fashion editor
BEVERLY LINET, information desk
CHARLES SAXON, cartoon editor
MAGDA MASKEL, western manager
FRANKLYN PHILLIPS, western editor
GUS GALE, staff photographer
BOB BEERMAN, staff photographer
CARL SCHROEDER, editorial consultant
LAYNG MARTINE, promotion director
JEAN KINKEAD, contributing editor

POSTMASTER: Please send notice on Form 3578 and copies returned under Label Form 3579 to 149 Madison Avenue, New York 16, New York
Vol. 34, No. 6, May, 1947.

Copyright, 1947, the Dell Publishing Co., Inc., 149 Madison Ave., New York.

Published monthly. Printed in U. S. A. Published simultaneously in the Dominion of Canada. International copyright secured under the provisions of the Revised Convention for the Protection of Literary and Artistic Works. Office of publication at Washington and South Aves., Dunellen, N. J. Chicago Advertising office, 360 N. Michigan Ave., Chicago 1, Illinois. Single copy price, 15c in U. S. and Canada. Subscriptions in U. S. A. and Canada $1.80 a year; elsewhere $9.80 a year. Entered as second class matter Sept. 18, 1930 at the post office, Dunellen, N. J., under Act of March 3, 1879. The publishers accept no responsibility for the return of unsolicited material. Names of characters used in semi-fictional matter are fictitious. If the name of any living person is used it is purely a coincidence. Trademark No. 301778.

it's the happiest thing that ever happened!!!

FRANK SINATRA

sings 7 romantic songs . . . and

KATHRYN GRAYSON

finds love in the arms of handsome

PETER LAWFORD

Hollywood's new heart-throb, and is funnier than ever!

JIMMY DURANTE

It's from M-G-M

IT HAPPENED IN BROOKLYN

Screen Play by ISOBEL LENNART • Based on an Original Story by JOHN McGOWAN

Directed by RICHARD WHORF • Produced by JACK CUMMINGS

A METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER PICTURE

Song Hits

"Time After Time"
"Brooklyn Bridge"
"It's the Same Old Dream"
and many more!

louella parsons'

■ Murrrder! Are the bachelor girls getting good and miffed with Peter Lawford and Keenan Wynn!

With Hollywood embarrassingly short on eligible males, these two attractive gents are starting something guaranteed to drive single gals crazy.

What they do is merely this: They start out on a stag evening and then wind up in one of the local cafes featuring a pretty girl singer. The singer is then invited to join their table for supper, following her show, and the boys take turns dancing with her.

It's a lovely way for bachelors to spend an evening. Nice company, pretty girl, no romantic implications. But how the "date"-able gals hate it!

* * *

That very young star, with a baby not yet a year old, can't hide the fact much longer that her marriage is tottering.

She shows up at the studio every day almost a nervous wreck, with dark shadows under her eyes, and her face is getting so thin the cameraman has a hard time keeping her glamorous.

All but one of their marital tiffs have been kept very much on the q.t.

* * *

You'll never guess who is Bing Crosby's rival for sporting the loudest shirts.

Gregory Peck showed up on the set of The Paradine Case wearing a shirt that made Bing's selections look like studies in pastel.

The colors were green, yellow and red in checkerboard pattern and with this charming creation Greg wore a bright yellow tie. (Continued on page 6)

Glo DeHaven Payne's new hair-do created a minor sensation at a recent Hollywood shindig. Note the on-the-bias cut of the bangs. John's headed for the hospital shortly to fix up his knee, injured when he was a G.I.

The wedding of Ella Raines and Major Robin Olds, former jet plane ace of the 8th Air Force, was the most elaborate since the Shirley Temple-John Agar merger. See the impressive rows of ribbons on Robin's chest?

David Rose seems to have invented a new ear-boxing technique that delights June Haver. A few weeks after this photo was shot, June, who had vowed not to wed for 5 years, eloped to Las Vegas with Jimmy Zito.

Charles Boyer, happily married for 13 years, teased bride Olivia De Havilland, at their recent Lux appearance. "Mark and I will beat your record," challenged Livvy, "because he won't interfere with my career."

David Niven attended the Stairway To Heaven opening with Richard Greene and wife, Patricia Medina. Pat refused a contract at Richard's studio, recalling bad publicity Cornel Wilde and Pat Knight received.

At Earl Wilson's Marquis party, Esther Williams congratulated Jackie Coogan on, 1: his forthcoming marriage to starlet Ann McCormick and, 2: his new radio show. Esther and husband Ben Gage are adopting a baby.

louella parsons'

Alice Faye and Phil Harris spend a rare evening out—dining at the Beverly Tropics. Getting ideas, maybe for their planned coast-to-coast chain of restaurants.

Lon McCallister squired Ann Blyth to the Look Award party; drank a toast (in water) to Ann's hope of getting the role of Regina in Another Part of the Forest.

Mr. and Mrs. Sonny Tufts, guests at Look's party, told friends they'd given up the idea of adopting Don Devlin, the boy who worked with Sonny in Swell Guy. Don's dad objected.

(Continued from page 4)

Without a word to spoil the gag, director Alfred Hitchcock had a prop boy supply the entire cast with dark glasses! If you think that piqued Mr. Peck you can guess again.

The next day he wore a black shirt and white tie with bright yellow canaries on it!

* * *

Have you ever stopped to wonder just what a traveling movie star has to take along with her in the line of clothes when she goes out on a personal appearance jaunt?

When Martha Vickers headed for New York to appear at the Strand Theater with That Way With Women, it was decided that the glamor build-up was as important off the screen as on. Martha isn't a million dollar salary star—so here's what the good brethren Warners loaned her:

15 evening gowns designed by Bernie Newman, Milo Anderson, Travilla and Leah Rhodes.

22 pairs of shoes.

One $3000 evening coat trimmed with ermine.

One stone marten stole valued at $2200.

One $6000 mink coat.

One leopard coat—$750.

Five suits and five dresses.

25 hats of all types from five leading designers.

Appropriate costume jewelry to match each complete outfit.

Pretty nice to have such a wardrobe checked off to "exploitation" isn't it— even if Martha, like Cinderella, does have to return most of the finery when she gets home.

* * *

By the time he finishes The Hucksters, Clark Gable will be the most-kissed man in Hollywood. His first scene called for him to kiss Connie Gilchrist, who plays a telephone operator, three times. Later, the same day, he kissed Deborah Kerr, Ava Gardner and five-year-old Diane Perrine!

Clark has dropped 20 pounds since he made Adventure—and not from all that kissing, either. He didn't like the way he looked on the screen with all that weight and went to work exercising it off.

Here's a little tip that may interest you. After seeing Gable and Ava Gardner in action, M-G-M is thinking about remaking some of the old films Clark made with Jean Harlow —particularly Red Dust and China Seas.

* * *

Van and Evie Abbot Wynn Johnson have been living so quietly since their marriage that some of their closest friends haven't been invited to their new home. They've gone mad for tennis and play every day.

The few times they've dined out, on cook's night out, it's been at one of the quietest cafes in town. Evie's wearing one of those old fashioned gold bands for a wedding ring and Van has one just like it. Theirs was a double ring ceremony.

But just in case you WERE lucky enough to be invited out to (Continued on page 8) with a taunting smile . . .

TIERNEY

HARRISON

with a haunting kiss . . .

. . . doin' what comes super-naturally!

It's the man-woman affair like nothing on earth . . . from the best-seller that spread a sly smile across the face of America!

GENE TIERNEY · REX HARRISON · GEORGE SANDERS

The Ghost and Mrs. Muir

A 20th CENTURY-FOX ROMANCE!

with EDNA BEST · Vanessa Brown · Anna Lee · Robert Coote · Natalie Wood · Isobel Elsom · Victoria Horne

Directed by JOSEPH L. MANKIEWICZ · Produced by FRED KOHLMAR · Screen Play by Philip Dunne From the Novel by R. A. Dick

That Bandbox Look

isn't come by accidentally, Lamby . . . You achieve it only by paying close attention to the little details of grooming . . . The prettiest hair-do, for instance, can go limp around the edges fast —if you don't anchor it with Bob Pins that have a Stronger Grip. And that means DeLong Bob Pins.

Stronger Grip

Won't Slip Out

They're made of high-carbon steel so they can't slip and slide and they keep their snap and shape indefinitely.

Quality Manufacturers for Over 50 Years
BOB PINS HAIR PINS SAFETY PINS
SNAPS PINS
HOOKS & EYES HOOK & EYE TAPES
SANITARY BELTS

John Agar takes Shirley Temple out for a Saturday night on the town. The place is Earl Carroll's—and did Shirley ever look more sophisticated than she does in that off-the-shoulder gown! They'll be up early tomorrow, though—for golf!

louella parsons'

their house—here's what you'd find:

The Johnson home is situated in Santa Monica at the end of a dead-end street. It is protected by high shrubbery and an electrically controlled gate.

Inside, the house is extremely modernistic. It was designed by Cedric Gibbons, M-G-M's art director, and the front is almost entirely glass. From almost every room in the place you can look out on the tennis court and swimming pool, the latter boasting heated water.

On the first floor are a foyer, bedroom, dining room, kitchen and pantry. This downstairs bedroom has been converted by the Johnsons into the one and only guest room. It's furnished as a combination library and bedroom and is more fitting for a gentleman guest than for a lady.

The second floor boasts a large, cheerful living room opening onto two bedrooms with private dressing room suites and baths. Every bit of the furniture in the place, with the exception of the dining room, is built in. For instance, an open fireplace in the living room has two built-in divans on either side, a huge built-in mirror, and bookshelves built almost to the ceiling lining the walls.

The newlyweds' house will be painted white inside and out and the carpets and draperies in the living room are white, too.

* * *

Hollywood hostesses who have hesitated about inviting Evie and Van Johnson and Keenan Wynn to the same party, need have no fears. The Johnsons paid Keenan a visit on the set of Song of The Thin Man and all of them seemed, I must say, the best of friends.

I noticed, however, that at Louis B. Mayer's big party for the young Henry Fords, Keenan brought Nan Bennett. On the same night, the Johnsons were the guests at Atwater Kent. These two big parties, on the same night, had every big star in Hollywood circulating between the two hilltop mansions.

We have few visitors in our town more popular than Ann and Henry Ford. They are so attractive and likeable. At L. B.'s party for them, I sat between Cary Grant and Peter Lawford and I must say I enjoyed myself. I want to predict right here that Cary will marry Betty Hensel. He says he never missed a gal so much in his life since she's been visiting relatives in St. Louis.

Cary's ex, Virginia Cherrill, is back in Hollywood and divorced from the Earl of Jersey—but he has had no dates with her. He also told me that Barbara Hutton, also an ex, had called him from Paris to tell him she was marrying again. That boy certainly stays friends with all the women in his life.

Both my dinner partners were doing raves over Virginia O'Brien, the famed "dead pan" singer who is rapidly developing into one of the real beauties in our town. This night she was wearing a coral-red gown and with her dark hair piled high on her head in an upsweep and her big blue Irish eyes, she was a rarin', tearin' beauty, believe me.

Loretta Young was another beauty in red —one of the new short evening gowns. On her it looked good, but I think most women look better in long evening gowns. It seems to me the new dresses which end at the ankle are awkward and unbecoming to most women.

The two dancers who "necked" most on the floor were June Allyson and Dick Powell. "Look at those two," said my husband. "They're certainly in love." And believe me, it doesn't mean that they're in love just in public—they really care.

Joan Crawford, who at this writing is madly, but madly, in love with good looking, Irish Peter Shaw, came late. But her appearance was worth (Continued on page 10)

THE EXCITEMENT THEY COULDN'T DRIVE OUT OF THEIR BLOOD WILL SURGE IN YOURS...THESE TWO WHO SHARED A SAVAGE
LOVE NOT EVEN THE LAWLESS WEST COULD FORGIVE!

TERESA WRIGHT ROBERT MITCHUM

"PURSUED"

with Judith Anderson · Dean Jagger · Alan Hale · AND INTRODUCING John Rodney DIRECTOR Raoul Walsh · PRODUCER Milton Sperling ORIGINAL SCREEN PLAY BY NIVEN BUSCH · MUSIC BY MAX STEINER
Produced by United States Pictures for Warners

1947's Greatest Travel Values!

Choose From
65 PLEASURE PLANNED VACATION TOURS

Travel Trailways...Thrill to a Perfect Low-Cost Vacation. Enjoy America at "Scenery Level"

National Parks, West—East • Ozarks
California • Gulf Coast • New York
Rocky Mountain Playgrounds • Texas
Historic Southeast • Southwest
Washington, D.C. • Mexico • Florida
New England • Pacific Northwest

5 DAYS from $29
7 DAYS from $42
14 DAYS from $95
20 DAYS or longer from ... $124
TAX NOT INCLUDED

Trailways Pleasure-Planned Tours include transportation, fine hotels and de luxe sight-seeing. Start any day you like—follow a regular itinerary or arrange stop-overs to suit you. Travel by yourself or with your own small group. There's no better way of seeing America. Mail coupon for complete details.

FUN... ADVENTURE... ROMANCE!

Exciting days, romantic nights, watching America's spectacular beauty... her mountains, beaches and famous cities, while enjoying the friendly atmosphere and comfortable accommodations aboard a big Trailways luxury liner. For good times, good friends and grand memories, take a Pleasure-Planned Tour. It's low cost... easy on the budget... shows you more... takes you farther... gives you extra spending money.

MAIL THE COUPON TODAY

TRAILWAYS

NATIONAL TRAILWAYS BUS SYSTEM
Dept. D5, 185 N. Wabash Ave., Chicago 1, Ill.
Please send me free tour folder as checked:
Gulf Coast ☐ California ☐ Florida ☐
Southwest ☐ National Parks ☐
Historic East ☐ Southeast ☐

Name.....
Address.....
City..... State.....

louella parsons'

waiting for, Joan and George Murphy danced together and they were so wonderful that most of the others got off the floor to watch. No exhibition dancers were ever more graceful. "And George and I haven't danced together for fifteen years," said Joan. Peter said that after watching Joan dance with George, the only thing left for him was to go out and take dancing lessons.

I saw the other Joan—Joan Caulfield—with Hurd Hatfield at Atwater Kent's. Maybe Greg Bautzer, the popular lawyer-about-town, had a night off and was playing cards with the fellas.

Cleatus Caldwell, Bob Hutton's pretty bride, had had her hair made several shades lighter that very afternoon—and was worried! She goes to Perc Westmore's, the hair-doing emporium all us girls "take" from, and she was in a private tizzy that Bob might not like the new color. She could have saved her fretting. He told me he thought she had never looked so beautiful.

I have often said that Ginger Rogers overdresses. Now I want to take back those words and say that she was one of the smartest looking women at the Kent party. Ginger wore a plain black gown set off with a stunning diamond pin shaped like a fan. She and Jackie Briggs have such fun together.

I asked Ginger how her "boarder" was getting along. Richard Ney went to the Briggs' to live after he separated from Greer Garson. She told me he had left and was looking for an apartment. We both agreed that boy is carrying a torch.

Merle Oberon looked like a dream walking in a white lace gown with diamond necklace, earrings and bracelet. Merle really has THE most gorgeous jewels of any of the screen stars.

Diana Lynn, on the arm of Robert Neale, the young Texas millionaire who has been trailing her all around the country, fairly beamed. Young Diana falls soooooo in love and then, boom, it's all over. I can't say she'll marry young Neale (she didn't marry Henry Willson after announcing their engagement) but there are rumors thataway.

Robert Stack came with vivid Yvonne De Carlo. He has also been escorting Irene Wrightsman McEvoy, socialite, to various places and s'help me, the way he dreams into the eyes of both fair charmers—it's hard to say which has caught his heart.

June Haver, all by her little self, came with that "old" married couple, the John Paynes. By the way, Johnny and Gloria de Haven seem to have ironed out those matrimonial troubles that once parted them.

Brian Aherne and his charming wife were among those I said "Hello" to and Brian told me that he had just that day talked long distance to Katharine Cornell, completing plans to tour the Coast this summer in their old hit, The Barretts of Wimpole Street.

You have to take off your hat to a girl like Jane Wyman, who has always put her family ahead of her career. I certainly doff my latest Josephi chapeau to her. She and Ronnie Reagan are expecting their third baby and Janie couldn't be happier about it.

It doesn't matter in the least to her that her career is right at its peak. In fact, I broke the "scoop" about the expected arrival the very week Janie was nominated as an Oscar candidate for her wonderful work in The Yearling.

How different her attitude is from another young actress I know, also going places in a big way right now, who told me:

"I would love to have a baby. But my agent thinks it would be very unwise right now—when I'm just beginning to get my best breaks!"

* * * *

Everything has happened to the Guy Madison-Gail Russell romance—but my bet is that true love will conquer all, as they used to put it in the old-fashioned novels.

In the beginning, their studios were opposed to their (Continued on page 116)

That's Anita Colby in the foreground, with Mr. and Mrs. Tom Lewis (Loretta Young) behind her. Tom surprised everyone at Look's party by announcing he'd been given the most excellent Order of the British Empire by the King of England.

Look who's back! It's Bill Holden! It's Sterling Hayden! They're not only back on the screen . . . but they're both in love with the same girl!

THEY WERE BROTHERS . . . who shared the desperate adventure of flying the mail!

BUT THEY WERE MEN . . . who couldn't share the warm heart of the girl one of them married and the other loved so hopelessly!

Paramount presents

"BLAZE OF NOON"

Back together.. after their super-smash in "Two Years Before The Mast"!

All kinds of men were interested in Poppy's charms . . . but only one kind of husband.

Starring

ANNE BAXTER
WILLIAM HOLDEN
SONNY TUFTS
WILLIAM BENDIX
STERLING HAYDEN
HOWARD DA SILVA

with

JOHNNY SANDS · JEAN WALLACE

Directed by JOHN FARROW

Screenplay by Frank Wead and Arthur Sheekman

by Florabel Muir

THE WHOLE THING WAS SO SWIFT AND SECRET, YOU'RE PROBABLY STILL WONDERING HOW IT HAPPENED. SO HERE'S THE INSIDE STORY—BY OUR SPECIAL HOLLYWOOD CORRESPONDENT.

how Van got married

■ Here's your ringside story of the stunning elopement and marriage of Van Johnson and Evie Wynn, a love dénouement so sensational that it jerked even blasé Hollywood out of its joint and collective seats and left it agasp!

On Friday, the 24th of January, Evie Wynn, telling not a soul, quietly obtained air passage to El Paso, Texas, via American Airlines. Alone, mind you. Van drove her to the airport and then returned quietly to the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Studio where he hurried to the office of a friend.

"Evie has just taken off for El Paso," he announced. "I'm flying back there tomorrow. We're going to be married."

Before the friend could react from his astonishment, enter a tall, dark and handsome figure. Just how and why Keenan Wynn happened to drop in at that moment no one will ever know. Keenan doesn't.

(Continued on page 125)

For weeks before Evie Wynn and Van Johnson were married, Evie haunted local antique shops looking for furnishings for their new home. Now she says that there's no room—Van's cluttered up everything with his books and records.

The same Glenn Ford who tamed GILDA!

"I didn't ask you to come into my life!"

COLUMBIA PICTURES presents

Glenn Ford

in

FRAMED

with

Janis CARTER · Barry SULLIVAN

Edgar BUCHANAN · Karen MORLEY · Jim BANNON

Screenplay by Ben Maddow

Directed by RICHARD WALLACE · Produced by JULES SCHERMER

dorothy kilgallen selects "the beginning or the end"

■ Any Hollywood producer knows as well as he knows the palm of his hand that no ticket-buyer ever walked up to a box-office and put his dollar on the line because a picture was advertised as "significant," "historical" or "important." Those are frightening adjectives to the average cinema customer; he is traditionally lured into the flicker palaces by words like "daring!" "passion!" "adventure!" and "Betty Grable," and surveys prove that when history is being shown on his local movie screen he is apt to be bowling 250 or spending a quiet evening at home.

So I am reluctant to say that The Beginning Or The End is an important picture, for fear of poisoning it at the box office. I hesitate to describe it as historic because that is never a lure to the public and I fervently hope that every man, woman and child in the nation—or even better, the world—will go to see it. I don't like to brand it as "significant," because any apprentice ad writer would scream, with justification, that a picture could be killed overnight by such a tag. But the fact remains that the atom (Continued on page 98)

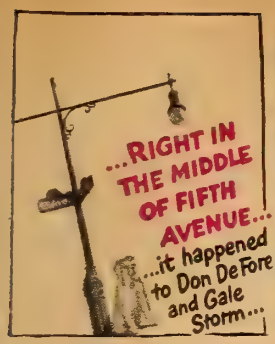
Experimenting on the world's deadliest weapon, scientists Richard Hayden, Tom Drake and Norman Lloyd are sworn to secrecy.



ON THE STREET WHERE ANYTHING CAN HAPPEN . . . ONE WONDERFUL NIGHT EVERYTHING DID!.....

"IT HAPPENED ON 5TH AVENUE"

ALLIED ARTISTS PRODUCTIONS, INC
Presents

DON DeFORE · ANN HARDING
CHARLIE RUGGLES · VICTOR MOORE
GALE STORM
in ROY DEL RUTH'S
"IT HAPPENED ON 5TH AVENUE"
with GRANT MITCHELL · EDWARD BROPHY · EDWARD RYAN, Jr.

Produced and Directed by ROY DEL RUTH · Associate Producer, JOE KAUFMAN · Screenplay by EVERETT FREEMAN
Story by HERBERT CLYDE LEWIS & FREDERICK STEPHANI · Music and Lyrics by HARRY REVEL & PAUL WEBSTER
Musical Score by EDWARD WARD

ALLIED ARTISTS

Macomber (Bob Preston, right) reveals his cowardice early in the hunt, when he leaves the job of killing a charging lion to his professional guide (Gregory Peck).

Macomber's wife, Margaret (Joan Bennett), has seen him fleeing from the dangerous beast, and is filled with loathing. Wilson, the guide, is an embarrassed observer.

The attraction between Margaret and Wilson increases as Macomber's weakness becomes more apparent. Their problem is dramatically resolved.

"the Macomber Affair"

■ "The Short Happy Life of Francis Macomber" was what Ernest Hemingway called it when he wrote it, and you'll understand why when you see the picture. Francis Macomber (Robert Preston) doesn't really begin to live until the morning of the day he dies, but his life is very important to two people. One is his wife, Margaret (Joan Bennett). The other is the guide Macomber has hired for his East African hunting trip, Robert Wilson (Gregory Peck).

In Nairobi, when you start out on a hunting trip, there are certain conventions to be observed. You treat the native bearers well, you keep your guns clean, and you never let anyone know if you're afraid. Francis Macomber breaks every one of these traditions. All his life he has been afraid. Four million dollars hasn't helped. Neither has his beautiful wife, because he knows her contempt for him. Now he has come to Africa to hunt lions, hoping that he can prove to her—and to himself—that he isn't really afraid at all.

Wilson doesn't know at first the situation he has gotten into. On the surface, the Macombers are a charming couple. As a rule, Wilson doesn't like taking women along on trips, but Mrs. Macomber doesn't seem the type that would frighten easily. She isn't. But Francis is. Wilson finds that out on their first lion hunt. The beast is wounded and they must go into the brush after him to finish him off. The lion charges, and Macomber runs away, leaving Wilson to do the job. Then Macomber vents his rage at his own cowardice on the native bearers and that night Margaret leaves her husband's tent.

The next day they hunt buffalo. Not too dangerous, ordinarily. But somehow in the course of that hunt Macomber comes alive. He isn't afraid any more of anything or anybody, even Margaret. And so he dies.—U. A.

(Continued on page 18)

MOVIE REVIEWS

by Virginia Wilson

SHE'S HIS GLAMOR GIRL...HE'S HER GUY!
Elope to Mexico City with Shirley, gay and grown-up... and Guy, ready for romance... in a very funny story of a marriage in the making!
The Guy you loved in 'Till the End of Time!'
RKO PRESENTS
SHIRLEY TEMPLE
FRANCHOT TONE
GUY·MADISON
in Honeymoon
A WILLIAM KEIGHLEY PICTURE
with
LINA ROMAY · GENE LOCKHART
CORINNA MURA · GRANT MITCHELL
Produced by WARREN DUFF • Directed by WILLIAM KEIGHLEY Screen Play by MICHAEL KANIN • Based on a Story by VICKI BAUM
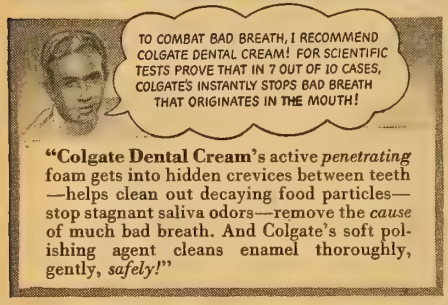
RKO RADIO PICTURES

No Male... Either!

U.S. MAIL
IT'S JUST NOT FAIR, CLAIRE! I WRITE THE LETTERS—AND YOU GET THE MAIL! MUST BE WHAT I WRITE IS WRONG!
I THINK IT'S MORE A MATTER OF BREATH, BETH! WHY NOT ASK YOUR DENTIST ABOUT BAD BREATH, HONEY? THEN SEE IF THE MALES DON'T CROWD THE MAILS!



TO COMBAT BAD BREATH, I RECOMMEND COLGATE DENTAL CREAM! FOR SCIENTIFIC TESTS PROVE THAT IN 7 OUT OF 10 CASES, COLGATE'S INSTANTLY STOPS BAD BREATH THAT ORIGINATES IN THE MOUTH!

"Colgate Dental Cream's active penetrating foam gets into hidden crevices between teeth—helps clean out decaying food particles—stop stagnant saliva odors—remove the cause of much bad breath. And Colgate's soft polishing agent cleans enamel thoroughly, gently, safely!"

COLGATE DENTAL CREAM
Cleans Your Breath While It Cleans Your Teeth!
COLGATE
RIBBON DENTAL CREAM
COLGATE
Use COLGATE DENTAL CREAM twice a day and before every date!

Framed: Janis Carter puts up bail for Glenn Ford, who's been framed in a truck accident. Actually, she's planning to double-cross him herself.

FRAMED

Glenn Ford, as exciting as when he speeded up your pulse in Gilda, now plays a guy who has two weaknesses. The usual two—liquor and women. Between them, they almost cause his sudden and violent demise.

Mike Lambert (Glenn Ford) is a mining engineer, out of a job, when he comes into La Paloma cafe. He has landed in this out-of-the-way Arizona town by accident. An accident which involved a truck without any brakes, and which cost him next to his last dollar. The last one he has left to spend for a couple of drinks.

There's a blonde waitress at the cafe who evinces considerable interest in Mike. Not for the routine reasons, either. Paula (Janis Carter) has been working there for six weeks, on the chance that someone who looks like Mike will show up. She has her own mysterious purpose in this, and it isn't a pretty one.

Mike is having his first drink when the cops come in and arrest him for the truck accident. Paula, surprisingly, pays the fifty-dollar fine for him, and gives him enough extra so he gets thoroughly drunk. Then she dumps him in a hotel room while she goes off to a mountain rendezvous with Stephen Price (Barry Sullivan). Price is the town's leading banker, and no one knows of his connection with the "waitress." He and Paula have concocted a neat little plot between them. Price will steal a quarter of a million dollars from the bank, and put it in a safe deposit box which Paula has rented. Then, if they can find a man who looks something like Price, they will stage an accident. A fatal accident, with Price as the supposed victim.

They have the man now, Paula tells him. A few days to arrange the last details and they'll be all set. But the next day they almost lose their prospective victim. Mike is offered a job as engineer at a nearby silver mine. It takes some fast finagling on Price's part to kill the deal, but he manages it. Now everything is ready, isn't it? Only—people do unexpected things sometimes. This is one of the times.—Col.

CARNIVAL IN COSTA RICA

What's the difference between the county fair in a small American town and a carnival in Costa Rica? Not much, really. You have color and music and boy meets girl, and that's the same anywhere. In Costa Rica, the girl happens to be Luisa Molina (Vera-Ellen), daughter of Rica Molina (J. Carroll Naish) and his American wife (Anne Revere). The boy is Jeff Stevens (Dick Haymes), who is from Kansas. (Continued on page 20)

Carnival in Costa Rica: Vera-Ellen, promised to another, falls in love with Dick Haymes at the Carnival. Here, they're on Celeste Holm's float

A great big wonderful show!

Great* Tunes!
Big* Laughs!
Wonderful* Romance!

Hit Parade of 1947

Starring

EDDIE ALBERT · CONSTANCE MOORE · JOAN EDWARDS

with GIL LAMB · BILL GOODWIN · WILLIAM FRAWLEY

WOODY HERMAN AND HIS ORCHESTRA • and REPUBLIC GUEST STARS ROY ROGERS AND TRIGGER and BOB NOLAN and THE SONS OF THE PIONEERS

Songs by JIMMY McHUGH and HAROLD ADAMSON • Screen Play by Mary Loos • Original Story by Parke Levy

Associate Producer and Director — FRANK McDONALD . A REPUBLIC PICTURE

Swing With Woody Herman
Sing With Joan Edwards to songs by JIMMY McHUGH and HAROLD ADAMSON
"I Guess I'll Have
That Dream Right Now"
"Is There Anyone Here
From Texas?"
"It Could Happen To Me"
"Chiquita From Santa Anita"
"The Cats Are Goin'
To The Dogs"

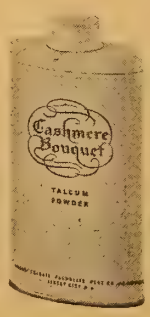
with this delightfully fragrant talcum powder

KEEP FRESH: First bathe and then sprinkle Cashmere Bouquet Talc into every curve. Like a scent-laden breeze it freshens and cools your skin.

FEEL SMOOTH: Shake Cashmere Bouquet over those chafable places. It gives your skin a satin-smooth sheath of protection . . . girdles slip on like magic.

STAY DAINTY: To prolong your bath-tub freshness, use Cashmere Bouquet Talc generously and often. It perfumes your person with the fragrance men love.

Pamper your person with Cashmere Bouquet Dusting Powder. Smartly packaged with a big velour puff.



Cashmere Bouquet Talc

with the fragrance men love

Luisa's father has arranged a marriage between her and his best friend's son. But when Luisa meets her fiancé, Pepe Castro (Cesar Romero), she finds him definitely depressing. He takes pills and his temperature alternately. He says dancing sends his blood pressure up. When Luisa wistfully mentions that she would like to visit the glamorous El Sesteo club, he almost faints, and forbids her ever to go there. As Luisa's kid sister, Maria (Barbara Whiting), remarks, "Pepe isn't half dead. He's dead, period."

It's really no wonder that when the Molinas go to the Fiesta, Luisa gives Pepe a tactful brush-off and wanders with Maria to the Promenade. There she meets Jeff, who quickly makes her realize that love is not a matter of family arrangements. Jeff is fascinated by the lovely Luisa and has no idea that she is engaged to his friend, Pepe.

At that moment, Pepe, completely re-vitalized from the languid specimen Luisa knows, is dancing a fast rhumba. In his arms is the reason he forbade her ever to come to El Sesteo club. The reason is named Celeste (Celeste Holm) and she and Pepe are in love, but he doesn't dare tell his father.

The Fiesta is especially brilliant that year. Rica Molina is one of the judges, and is in a high good humor until he recognizes his daughter, Luisa, on one of the floats holding hands with an unknown young man. That is the first time it has occurred to him that perhaps she isn't exactly thrilled with the husband he has picked out for her. You had better see for yourself what happens next—in Technicolor.—20th-Fox.

JOHNNY O'CLOCK

If you're in a bad racket, maybe it's better to be all bad yourself. Because if you're a good guy in a bad racket, like Johnny O'Clock (Dick Powell), you're likely to end up with a bullet in your back.

Johnny's been around. He was brought up in a tough school and he's gotten pretty near the top in the racket world. He's a junior partner of Guida Marchetti (S. Thomas Gomez), who runs a string of fancy gambling clubs. The third member of the gang is a policeman named Blayden (Jim Bannon). If a rival gambler gives Marchetti any trouble, he's "arrested" by Blayden and "shot while trying to escape." Very neat. Johnny doesn't think so much of this system, but he's a smart guy, he keeps telling himself, and the way to get rich and live to an old age is to keep your mouth shut.

However, Johnny forgets to stick to his system. Blayden has been playing around with Harriet (Nina Foch), a pretty hat-check girl, and is now giving her the brush-off. Johnny tells him to mend his ways or there'll be trouble. There's trouble anyway—a police detective, Koch (Lee J. Cobb), comes around next day to tell Johnny Harriet has been found dead in a gas-filled room. And Blayden has disappeared.

There are other complications, too. Marchetti's wife, Nellie (Ellen Drew), is in love with Johnny. She has given her husband a beautiful platinum watch, specially made. Not being a very bright girl, she gave Johnny one just like it. He handed it over to Harriet to give back to her, but now Harriet is dead and the watch has vanished.

Harriet's sister, Nancy (Evelyn Keyes), arrives and refuses to believe her sister committed suicide.

Blayden's body is found floating in the river, and the police consider the possibility that he, and perhaps Harriet too, have been murdered. By now Johnny and Nancy are in love, but that word "murder" stands between them. That and Johnny's past.

Dick Powell is excellent as the good guy in a bad racket. Lee J. Cobb and Nina Foch are particularly helpful in supporting roles.—Col.

THE ARNELO AFFAIR

Advice to husbands: Don't get so absorbed in business that you forget about your wife. Advice to wives: Even if your husband neglects you, don't get involved, however, innocently, with another man. Advice to husbands and wives: See The Arnelo Affair. (Continued on page 22)

Johnny O'Clock: Detective Lee Cobb quizzes Evelyn Keyes in the "suicide" of her younger sister. He's trying to pin the rap on Dick Powell, whom Evelyn loves.

WIN A free, ALL-EXPENSE 2-WEEKS TRIP TO HOLLYWOOD!

...FOR YOURSELF AND A MEMBER OF YOUR FAMILY!

Or $50.00 Second Prize — $25.00 Third Prize — Five $5.00 Prizes

Contest Rules . . .

1. Entries are limited to girls between the ages of 16 and 22. Awards will be based on cuteness and personality as shown by snapshots plus the originality and interest of the written message.
2. Send us a full-length snapshot and negative, unretouched. Professional studio portraits or prints from retouched negatives will be rejected.
3. Snapshots must have written on the reverse side, in ink, the name, address and birth-date of the contestant. You may submit as many snapshots as you want, but be sure to accompany each one with the other items specified in the next paragraph.
4. Each snapshot must be accompanied by either a Victory bobbie card or a Victory hair pin container (without pins, of course), or facsimiles of them, and an original statement in 25 words or less, on the subject, "What I Look For in a Bobbie Pin."
5. Entries will not be returned, and the decision of the judges will be final. In case of a tie, duplicate prizes will be awarded.
6. Ineligible are all Smith Victory Corporation employees and their families, the employees and families of the company's advertising agency, and artists or models or others employed by the agency in the preparation of Smith Victory advertising.
7. Entries, to be eligible, must be postmarked no later than midnight of July 1st, 1947. The name of the winner will be announced in this magazine.
8. Smith Victory Corporation shall have the right to use the photograph of the winner in its advertising and packaging.

Here's all you do -

- Send us a full-length snapshot, with the negative, to prove that you most closely represent the typical American girl now portrayed by "Vicky," the trade-mark girl of Smith Victory Corporation. NOTE: Color of hair is not important.
- Also write a 25-word (or less) message on the subject, "What I Look For in a Bobbie Pin."
- And accompany your entry with either an empty Victory bobbie pin card or an empty Victory hair pin package, or facsimiles of them

YOU'LL BE JUDGED BY:

PERC WESTMORE

Director of Make-up and Hairstyling for Warner Brothers Studios and a panel of HOLLYWOOD MOVIE STARS

Enter Today!

Hi Chicks!

Want to know what the excitement's all about? Just this—they're trying to find me! No, I didn't get lost or kidnapped—I just never existed, I mean, really existed. An artist dreamed me up to be a trade-mark girl for the Victory line of hair and bobbie pins. Now they want to produce me in the flesh—and they're offering a two-week trip to Hollywood, with all the trimmings, to the girl the judges say is the cutest, peppiest, most typical bobbie pin-up in America . . . and to some member of her family! You can be blonde or brunette, blue-eyed or brown-eyed, 16 or 22—it doesn't matter—just be cute. But whatever you are, don't be late!

Yours,

Vicky

CONTEST ENTRY BLANK

Department D, SMITH VICTORY CORPORATION
2969 Main Street, Buffalo 14, N. Y.

Enclosed is ☐ a Victory Bobbie Card or ☐ a Victory Hair Pin Package together with my snapshot and a 25-word (or less) message on "What I Look For in a Bobbie Pin." In addition, I consent to all the rules of the contest.

*Name*_____ *Age*____
Please Print

*Street*_____

*City*_____
Zone State

*School*_____

SMITH Victory CORP. Hair Pins and Bobbie Pins* BUFFALO 14, NEW YORK
Since 1871
The Original Bobbie Pin Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.*

NEW Lustre-Creme Shampoo

LEAVES YOUR HAIR SOFTER, MORE LUSTROUS... EASIER TO MANAGE

Not a liquid — Not a soap — but a revolutionary new CREAM shampoo that gives amazing results!

See how soft—how shining—how easy to manage your hair can be with Lustre-Creme Shampoo!

Now, millions of women can have softer, more radiant and glamorous hair that's also easy to manage—thanks to a remarkable cream-shampoo discovery—Lustre-Creme Shampoo by Kay Daumit!

Lustre-Creme Shampoo was created by the genius of Kay Daumit. Out of her wealth of cosmetic lore, she selected lanolin with special secret ingredients to achieve an almost-magic new formula. Once you try Lustre-Creme Shampoo you'll find its abundant, pleasant lather offers these advantages—compared to soap and liquid soap shampoos you've used before:—

1. Lustre-Creme Shampoo leaves hair glowing soft and brilliant, as though it had been given lots of good brushing. 2. Not drying. 3. Leaves no dulling soap film. 4. Your hair is easier to manage, easier to arrange. 5. No vinegar or lemon rinse. 6. Works just as well in hard water.

So, no matter how you've been shampooing, you owe it to your hair to try Lustre-Creme Shampoo. See how soft, how naturally lovely, how brilliantly-alive and well-behaved your hair can be. Simple and easy to use. Economical—a little does so much. Ask for Lustre-Creme Shampoo at cosmetic counters in department and drug stores.

KAY DAUMIT, INC. (Successor)
540 North Michigan Avenue, Chicago, Illinois

4 oz. jar $1.00 • 1 lb. jar $3.50

Ted Parkson (George Murphy) and his wife, Anne (Frances Gifford), have been married for ten years. They have a charming home, and a little boy, Rickey (Dean Stockwell), whom they adore. Their friends point them out as an ideally happy couple until Tony Arnelo (John Hodiak) comes along.

Arnelo, a night club owner, has known many women but none like Anne. When Ted takes him home to discuss a business deal, Arnelo's bold, black eyes take in Anne—and the situation. He sees that Ted has let his law business crowd out his personal life. Anne, still young and lovely, naturally feels neglected. Arnelo's first move is to admire the way Anne has furnished the house. Now if she would just be willing to give him some advice about his apartment. Anne is doubtful at first. Arnelo's eyes have informed her quite plainly that it isn't her ability as an interior decorator he's interested in. But perhaps it wouldn't do any harm to go and look at his place. . .

So she makes her first visit to his apartment. Harmless enough as to what actually happened, but far from harmless in its implications. Arnelo gives her a key to use on future visits. Next day he hasn't arrived when she gets there, but a girl comes in. Claire Lorrison (Joan Woodbury) her name is, and she warns Anne in coarse and bitter terms against Arnelo. Anne leaves, shocked and frightened, dropping a compact in her hurry.

The next day she reads that Claire has been murdered and that the only clue is a woman's compact found with the body, and initialed "A." Anne realizes in terror that Arnelo must have deliberately involved her, as indeed he has. And what will happen when Ted finds out?—M-G-M.

IVY

In 1909, there's no one in all England as beautiful as Ivy Lexton (Joan Fontaine). Beautiful and child-like and imperiously charming. But Ivy is what's known as a "femme fatale"—meaning heaven help the men who love her. And, particularly, heaven help her young husband, Jervis (Richard Ney), because he is in her way, and Ivy is as ruthless as she is beautiful.

She and Jervis have been married just long enough for them to have spent his entire inheritance. Now they're living in cheap lodgings and cadging meals from their friends. Ivy has been having an affair with Dr. Roger Gretorex (Patric Knowles), who wants her to divorce Jervis and marry him, but the idea only irritates Ivy, since he, too, is poor.

Ivy: As Joan Fontaine's husband, Richard Ney is a weak tool for her ruthless schemes.

Then she meets Miles Rushforth (Herbert Marshall). Miles has several million pounds, and is fascinating, besides. Ivy makes herself seem as appealing and helpless as possible. Soon Miles and the young Lextons are on intimate terms. He takes them for a cruise on his yacht, and then gets Jervis a position with his London firm. However, Ivy runs into a difficulty she has not expected. Miles Rushton is an honorable man, and when he finds himself falling in love with another man's wife, he goes to South Africa to forget.

But Ivy has no intention of still being married when he gets back. She gives Jervis what she considers a fair chance. She asks him for a divorce. When he refuses, his fate is sealed. She steals poison from Dr. Gretorex' surgery, and a few doses in Jervis' scotch and soda do the trick. Ivy is the loveliest widow in London. She weeps bitterly.

Ivy is beautiful, but she isn't really very clever. And you have to be clever to get away with murder. Not since Rebecca has Joan Fontaine had as exciting a role as this. —Univ.

THE BELLS OF SAN ANGELO

Excitement in the little border town of San Angelo centers around the Monarch silver mine. Gridley (John McGuire), its owner, has a nasty habit of shooting trespassers first and asking questions afterward, if at all. The padre at San Angelo asks Roy Rogers, border investigator, for assistance.

Roy isn't fond of Gridley and is sure the mine owner is up to no good, but he hasn't a thing in the way of proof. The Sheriff, Cookie (Andy Devine), is helpless for the same reason. They know that Ulrich (David Sharpe), Gridley's assistant, shot Ramon, a young Mexican boy. However, Ulrich claims that Ramon was stealing silver from the mine and produces a chunk of silver ore from the dead boy's pocket to prove it.

Roy gets a wire from the Chief of Border Investigations which comes as near making him lose his temper as anything can. The Chief says that Lee Madison, writer of lurid Western mystery novels, will arrive that afternoon.

Roy decides grimly that he'll provide some local color that will send Mr. Madison screaming back to civilization. He disguises himself as a Western desperado and holds up the wagon. Only Lee Madison turns out to be a pretty girl instead of a man, and she isn't even faintly impressed by Roy's rootin'-tootin' desperado act.

Later Roy and Lee get on a more friendly basis, and she joins him in the investigation of the Gridley mine and its attendant complications. They find clues indicating that the mine may be a blind to cover the smuggling of silver across the border. A lawyer from England shows up to say that all this land belongs to a missing Earl, thought to be around here somewhere. No, it isn't Roy, so help me! You'll have to see for yourselves!—Rep.

That April shower won't bring you flowers!

LEAVES YOU whistle-clean and sweet—a refreshing shower like that. But don't stop there, honey. Think of your future charm!

Remember, your bath washes away past perspiration, but Mum protects underarms against risk of odor to come.

So follow up your bath with safe, dependable Mum. That's the way so many popular girls win bouquets and keep a beau enamored.

Mum

better because it's Safe

1. Safe for skin. No irritating crystals. Snow-white Mum is gentle, harmless to skin.
2. Safe for clothes. No harsh ingredients in Mum to rot or discolor fine fabrics.
3. Safe for charm. Mum gives sure protection against underarm odor all day or evening.

Mum is economical, too. Doesn't dry out in the jar—stays smooth and creamy. Quick, easy to use—even after you're dressed.

• • •

For Sanitary Napkins—Mum is gentle, safe, dependable . . . ideal for this use, too.

Product of Bristol-Myers

THE FARMER'S DAUGHTER

You'll laugh a lot and maybe cry a little, too, at The Farmer's Daughter. The story is simple enough. A pretty Swedish girl, Katie Holstrom (Loretta Young), leaves the farm to study nursing in nearby Capitol City. She only has seventy-five dollars, so to save the three-fifty bus fare she accepts a ride with a neighborhood house painter, Adolph (Rhys Williams). Adolph gets drunk en route, smashes up his car and borrows the naive Katie's money. She arrives in Capitol City cold broke, and takes a job as waitress to get money enough to start her nursing career.

It's a big, imposing house she comes to, but the people are not imposing—they're friendly and charming. There is Congressman Glenn Morley (Joseph Cotten) and his mother, Agatha Morley (Ethel Barrymore), and the butler, Clancy (Charles Bickford). Clancy was an old friend of the late Senator Morley and is on such close terms with the family that he calls Mrs. Morley, Agatha. A bit startling to guests, but they get used to it.

Katie fits in from the beginning. She isn't afraid of Clancy's acid wit, and she makes wonderful coffee. Her only fault as a waitress is her habit of joining in the political discussions that go on. She doesn't approve of all Glenn Morley's policies, but she does approve of Glenn, very definitely.

And Glenn finds himself curiously attracted to this demure girl with the Scandinavian accent and the practical idealism. His mother likes Katie, too, and watches with slightly perplexed interest the progress of this unexpected romance. Less impartial but even more interested is Virginia (Rose Hobart), a newspaperwoman who's had a predatory eye on Glenn for years.

Everything is fine until the evening Katie goes to a political meeting. She asks the speaker some very direct—and very awkward—questions. The next thing that Glenn, angry and baffled, knows, Katie is running for Congress.

There's sly humor and excellent characterization here. Charles Bickford as the butler is one of my favorites of the year.—RKO.

Stallion Road: Ronald Reagan, proud owner of Stallion Road ranch, loves pretty Alexis Smith, but does little about it.

The Farmer's Daughter: Congressman Joseph Cotten finds himself curiously attracted to Loretta Young, the poor farm girl, who takes an interest in his politics.

STALLION ROAD

Between the blue-black mountains of the Sierra Madre range and the placid waves of the Pacific lies some of the best grazing land in the world. Horses are all-important to the people who live there. People like Larry Hanrahan (Ronald Reagan), who owns Stallion Road ranch, and is, besides, a skilled veterinarian.

Steve Purcell (Zachary Scott), who comes to visit his old friend Larry, is not particularly interested in horses. He prefers women. The first one he meets at Stallion Road is a pretty matron, Daisy Otis (Peggy Knudsen), who obviously is much more intrigued by Larry's handsome tallness than she is by her dull husband.

The next girl of the Sierras is quite different. Her name is Rory Teller (Alexis Smith) and she's one of the most accomplished horsewomen anywhere around. Both Larry and Steve fall in love with her, but in quite different ways. Steve makes his usual pitch, gets nowhere, and settles down for a long siege. Larry puts Rory on a romantic pedestal, but doesn't do anything about her. No woman wants to be left sitting around on a pedestal indefinitely. Also, Rory's little sister, Chris (Patti Brady), reports that she has seen Larry kissing Daisy Otis, which doesn't help the romantic plight of the lovers in the least.

When Larry lets Daisy ride his horse in the Madre Range show, Rory is determined to win with her own mare, "Sultan's Pride." She gets the blue ribbon, but is sure she has no chance with Larry. Then the mare falls ill of anthrax and she phones for him frantically. Larry is the only one who might have a chance of pulling the horse through. And Larry can't come because he is inoculating Daisy's cattle, hoping to prevent an epidemic. To Rory that's the last straw. She convinces herself that she's through with Larry, and she tells Steve she'll marry him. But when Larry himself comes down with anthrax, nothing in the world can prevent her from going to him . . . —War.

THE IMPERFECT LADY

The English upper classes have never been noted for their broad-mindedness. In 1892, girls of the theater occasionally made temporary romantic alliances with dashing young lords, but never matrimonial ones. An exception is the case of Milly Hopkins (Teresa Wright) and Clive Loring (Ray Milland).

Milly meets Clive by accident. She and her friend, Rose (Virginia Field), have squandered their last shilling on a hansom cab ride home from rehearsal, and they stop to listen a moment to a political speaker being heckled. The speaker is Clive, who is running for Parliament on a platform which includes women's suffrage—a very unpopular subject with the crowd. To escape a barrage of tired vegetables, he jumps into the cab.

Rose sees a chance for a free meal and tries to impress him with their "gentility." Milly is more interested in his views on suffrage. She agrees with them, but suggests more tactful ways of putting them across. Clive is amused by her agile mind and delighted by her beauty. They see each other again, and soon Milly gives up the theater and goes to the city where Clive lives. He wants to marry her.

But his elder brother, Lord Belmont (Sir Cedric Hardwicke) intervenes. He persuades Milly that it would be ruinous to Clive's political career to marry a girl of her background. She sees his point, and without a word to Clive, joins a theatrical troupe.

One night she and Rose meet an ex-concert pianist, Martinez (Anthony Quinn), and to escape a misguided policeman, Milly has to spend the night in his rooms. It is all quite innocent, and she forgets about it when Clive comes to see her next day and demands that she marry him. She agrees and they spend a delirious honeymoon in France. When they come back, she hears that Martinez is on trial for murder, and only her testimony that she spent the night with him can save him. Quite a dilemma for an imperfect lady!—Par.

THIS DIFFERENT Face Powder

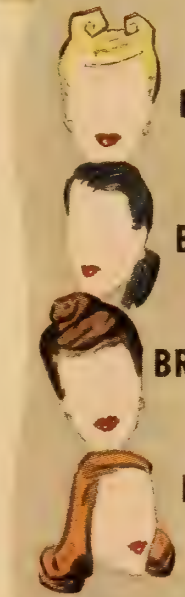
GLORIFIES YOUR OWN INDIVIDUAL COLORING

ARE you blonde, brunette, brownette or redhead? Now you can add to the natural loveliness of your own individual coloring with this unusually different face powder in your own Color Harmony Shade.

And just consider these exceptional qualities in this different face powder:

1..It imparts a lovelier color to the skin
2..It creates a satin-smooth make-up
3..It clings perfectly..: really stays on

Try Max Factor Hollywood Face Powder...a beauty secret of the famous screen stars ...now created for you to bring a surprising new loveliness to your make-up. $1.00



Smart, new, artistic powder box —beautiful white and gold plastic design.

Max Factor • Hollywood

COLOR HARMONY MAKE-UP... Face Powder, Pan-Cake Make-Up, Rouge, and the New, Sensational Lipstick in Clear Red, Blue Red and Rose Red for each type, blonde, brunette, brownette, redhead

★ So fashion-fresh—this newest Cutex shade. A ripe rosy red that shines up to Spring's new styles. Tipping "APPLE-CART" upon their pretty fingers, Young America is ready for anything this season. Same way with new Cutex "PIPPIN," another new come-hither color!

Remember, new Cutex contains a specially developed ingredient. Tests* prove it wears longer, dries faster than even higher priced polishes. See for yourself what a difference it makes! See how it wears and wears and wears!

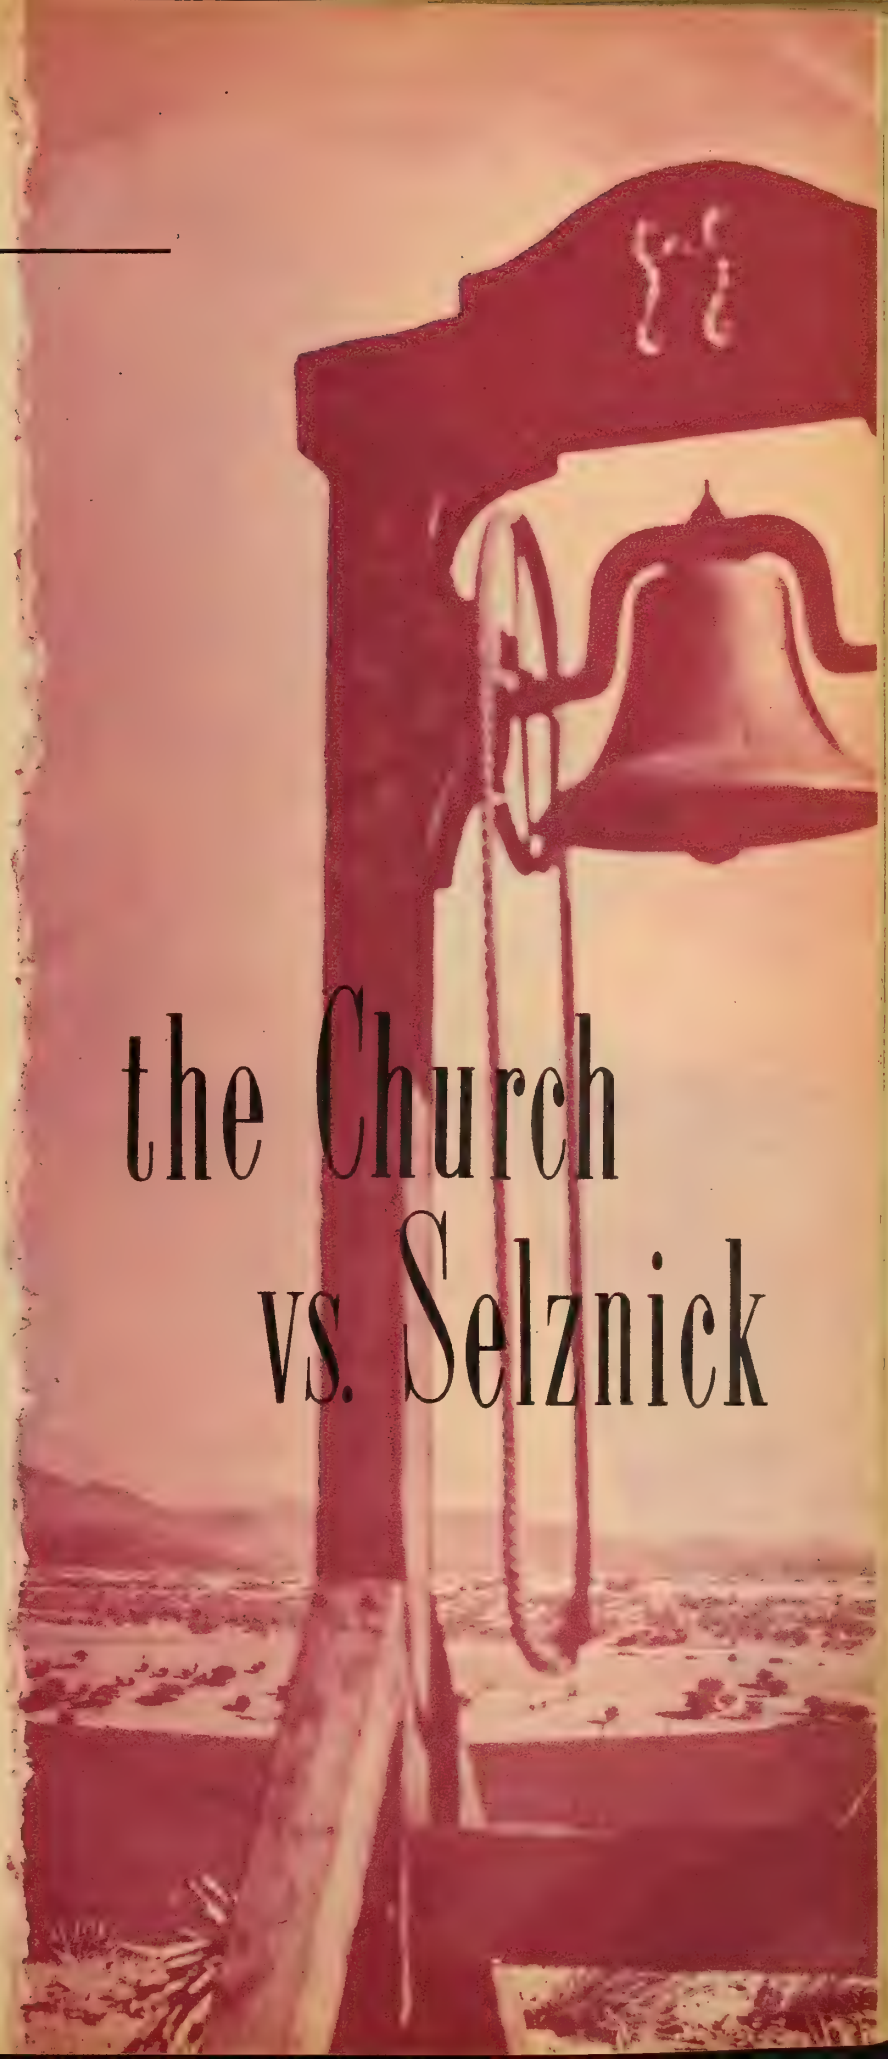
Shhh! Rumors are flying about a new Cutex idea . . . for Cutex, the originator of matching lips and finger tips, is preparing a new harmonizing lipstick that'll open your eyes! Watch for it soon.

* * *

Tests made in our own research laboratory by one of the foremost nail-polish chemists in the country.*

the Church vs. Selznick

by Albert P. Delacorte



■ Oceans of printer's ink have been spilled in the course of the Duel in the Sun controversy. The Catholic press has carried reams about it. The secular press has, too. Now we want to get into the act—but don't get us wrong. We're taking no sides. We simply want to point a moral, as we see it, to this whole unhappy fiasco.

In March, 1944, David O. Selznick began the making of Duel in the Sun. After seemingly interminable delays, brought about largely by wartime shortages and strikes, the tremendous job was finished; and in December, 1946, a purity seal was issued for the film by Joseph I. Breen, administrator of the Production Code Administration, in the following emphatic language: "This is to certify that Vanguard Films, in producing Duel in the Sun, has complied with the self-imposed regulations of the industry to maintain right standards in the production."

So far so good. Now, normally, David Selznick would have immediately rushed a print of the picture to the New York office of the Legion of Decency. (This is not only as a courtesy, but as self-protection, since the rating given pictures by the Legion affects their standing with state censorship boards. A "C" rating from the Legion almost automatically means condemnation by the censorship boards of New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Ohio—which states comprise approximately 50% of the movie-going public.) However, due to the film industry strikes, he had only one Technicolor print assembled, and this he just managed to get under the wire for consideration in the annual Academy Awards.

The film was shown for the first time just prior to the first of the year, and immediately afterwards a hostile review of it appeared in The Tidings, (Continued on page 85)

by charles boyer

as told to howard sharpe

ingrid

■ You may remember the extremely dramatic opening scene of Erich Remarque's Arch of Triumph. Ravic, the refugee doctor practicing in Paris without a license (this is my role in the film) reaches out and takes the arm of a girl as she stumbles past him. She has a "pale face, high cheekbones and wide-set eyes." The face is "rigid and masklike."

"He took out a package of cigarettes and fumbled in his pocket for matches . . . bent down cautiously to shelter the flame with his hands against the soft breeze of the river.

" 'Give me a cigarette too,' the woman said in an almost toneless voice.

". . . She smoked hastily, inhaling deeply."

After the first take of this scene Ingrid lunched at Lucey's with David Lewis, her producer. When the coffee was brought, he lighted up a cigarette.

"Give me one, too," said Ingrid.

"You're not on the set now," Lewis said. Nevertheless he gave her a cigarette and held a match for her. She smoked three before they left and each time singed her lashes with the match flame. Lewis was concerned. "You'll make yourself sick, inhaling like that," he told her. "Save it for the camera."

"You misunderstand," she said. "I'm learning to smoke for myself. People seem to enjoy it so much."

"That's different," he said. Then he did a double-take. "Bergman, learning to smoke?"

"Isn't it high time?" she asked demurely.

Next day he presented her with a lighter that would not burn her lashes. She learned rapidly. By the time we made the final take of the "cigarette" scene she was able to inhale as if she had been addicted to nicotine since the age of five.

And just before she left for New York to do Joan of Lorraine (Continued on page 103)

Frank started his vacation trip alone, later wired Nancy, "Will you be my valentine? Meet me in Mexico City." Nancy (that's Phil Silvers kissing her above) did; both went on to Acapulco.

Most of us have never heard the hilarious Command Performance broadcasts Bing and Frank made for the armed forces. The friendly, hearty ribbing each gave the other is now legend; made the GIs love 'em all the more.

Frankie, Jr. visits his Dad's radio show often, sings for the studio audience. At dinner in Maxim's, he broke up the crowd by asking loudly, "When do we go to Romanoff's, Daddy?"

by hedda hopper

Peter Lawford, his British pal in It Happened in Brooklyn, is as happy as Frank over Harper and Brothers' book, called "The Voice." Based on E. J. Kahn's New Yorker articles, it's the longest work on Frank.

■ One morning last year I ran into Frank Sinatra in the Waldorf-Astoria. He was pale as a ghost, skinnier than usual, and drooping like the last rose of the summer before last.

I'd attended his opening in the Wedgwood Room the night before. It was Frankie's opening but he wasn't there. His friend, Danny Kaye, pinch-hit when he heard a flu bug had hit Frankie. One look at Sinatra and I knew he still shouldn't be walking around. When he said hello he was as hoarse as a bullfrog.

"Coming over to hear me tonight, Hedda?" Frankie croaked.

"You don't mean you're going to sing?"

He nodded, "Sure."

"Why," I exploded, "you haven't got enough energy to swat a mosquito the way you are. You sound like a crow. Go on back to bed!"

"I can't."

"Listen," I said, feeling like shaking that little guy. "Singers just don't act like that. You have to take (Continued on page 94)

HE WAS "THE VOICE"

THAT COULDN'T SAY "NO."

THEN SUDDENLY, HE

BANNED HIS BOBBY-SOXERS,

SPURNED HIS SPONSOR

AND WALKED OUT ON HIS WIFE.

WHY? THE ANSWER WILL

AMAZE YOU.

what's wrong with FRANKIE?

SOME PEOPLE LIKE TO LIVE IN HOUSES. BUT FOR STERLING HAYDEN, THERE'S NO ROOF LIKE THE WINDSWEPT SKY AND NO FLOOR LIKE THE BOUNDING SEA.

By Hank Jeffries

captain courageous

Giving Sterling a hand with the chores is blonde, lovely Betty De Noon. A model by profession, she's just as much at home on a boat as he is. A good reason why she may become Mrs. Hayden.

Back home after a brilliant war record, Sterling spends his time aboard his 63-foot schooner, the "Quest." On land, he lives above a garage, in an apartment he rented while working in Blaze of Noon.

■ The night was dark as the heart of a Hollywood villain. A snarling surf bounded shoreward from a violent sea. Precariously close to the beach, a sixty-foot fishing boat stood by, its crew expecting momentarily to find out how it feels to be drowned a long way from home.

A certain John Hamilton was among those present, and he was muttering to himself.

"Times," he grumbled, "are tough all over."

At that instant the moon, which had been winking its indecision through racing, dirty clouds, made up its mind. A baleful, pale light stared brutally down at more than fifty guerrilla fighters on the strand below.

A machine gun began to chatter from the cliff above. The matter of fact cursing of men who face death often rose above the snarl of the surf. In the water swimmers were straining clumsily toward the boat. Some of them made it, but ten or more drowned silently.

The firing was (Continued on page 99)

STUDIO AUDIENCES DON'T

FRIGHTEN HIM, BUT HEAVEN HELP

BOB HOPE IF HE FLUFFS

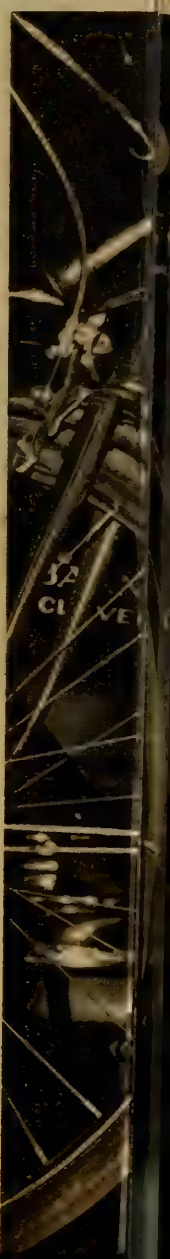
A LINE WITH THOSE SMART KIDS

OF HIS LISTENING IN!

By KIRTLEY BASKETTE

With Mrs. Hope, Bob reads aloud an account of his and Bing Crosby's ball teams. They're part owners of the Cleveland Indians and Pittsburgh Pirates. (Above, right: in uniform.)

Bob's a sucker for all kids, but especially for his own Linda and Tony. A sentimentalist, Bob's favorite song is, "It's Only A Paper Moon," which his wife was singing when he met her.



HOPALONG HOPE

■ Once, during the war, Bob Hope came home to Hollywood from a flying GI tour. His family—wife Dolores, brothers Jack and George, moppets Linda and Tony—all met him at the airport. "Hello!" everybody yelled.

"Goodbye, Daddy," lisped Tony. That's what he was used to saying whenever he saw his Pop!

Bob breezed into the nursery the other morning where his new infant darlings, Kelly and Nora, were wolfing their formulas. They both gave him that surprised "Who dat man?" look and burst into bawls.

"Hey," protested Bob to the nurse, "what are they crying about?"

"They're scared of you," she explained. "After all, you're a stranger."

"Stranger?" yelped Bob. "Heck—I'm their dad!"

That snapped Bob into a state of surprised shock. Then he realized he'd been spending about six (Continued on page 89)

Now that My Favorite Brunette and Road to Rio are both filmed, Bob goes in for golfing and bicycling. A theater fan, Bob's idols are Charlie Chaplin, Bea Lillie.

Guy's still teasing Gail about the puppy she was going to give him. Gail (who's now in Calcutta) made the mistake of taking the dog home overnight. She couldn't part with the pup, so she bought Guy another!

The nose is right, but Gail isn't satisfied with the rest of her efforts at sculpting Guy. Once she's perfected the clay model, she'll make a bust of him. Gail's also interested in wood-carving, ceramics.

■ Her beau, Mr. Madison, that tall, handsome vision, almost split his floating rib, laughing. If men have floating ribs.

It made her so mad she wanted to split all his other ribs, too.

"Why didn't they tell me?" she kept wailing. "How was I supposed to know? Just because your boy friend is an archery expert doesn't mean you absorb it by osmosis!"

Mr. Madison, the archery expert, smiled at her pityingly. "Poor child. Any cluck should know enough not to hold the bow upside down!"

He ducked just in time. "Any cluck" had hurled a pillow at him.

The whole thing happened when a magazine decided to shoot some pictures of Gail practising archery. Gail, being a sweet, agreeable soul, said why not?

As she explained to Guy later, "I figured if a bone-head like you could manage—"

Anyhow, the pictures were taken, and the magazine came out, and the letters started pouring in. Miss Russell, the bow-and-arrow beauty, was holding the bow upside down.

It doesn't really matter. She's got other talents. She does clay modeling, and she finished a head of Guy that's pretty good. She claims it's not so hot.

"The nose is you," she says. "But that's all."

And he wants to know, "What are you going to do with it?"

And she says, "Well, if you behave, maybe we'll hollow a hole and grow ivy out of the top of your head."

He's so grateful.

She intends to put him up in the den, with ivy growing out of his head. The den used to be a patio, but the Russells roofed it over, and put a fireplace where a barbecue used to be, and it's practically a hunting lodge now. Deer's head over the mantel, animal skins on the wall, and Indian rugs thrown artfully here and there.

It's also got something a lot of dens don't have. Leaks. The leaks are artistically spaced, and the Russells stick potted plants under them. They don't like to be too obvious with dishpans, and this way the plants get (Continued on page 118) for sentimental reasons...

OUTSIDE, SHE'S ALL [illegible] VOICE AND DARK SOPHISTICATION. BUT THE REAL GAIL RUSSELL HOARDS OLD LOVE LETTERS AND SOBS OVER SAD MOVIES.

By Kaaren Pieck

by george benjamin

Before a broadcast, Don Ameche and Linda Darnell swap baby talk—Don about his six kids, Linda about the two she and husband Pev plan to adopt after their vacation.

Changing her mind is a woman's oldest prerogative. So nobody was surprised when Linda Darnell left husband Pev. But when she went back...!

A woman's prerogative

■ When a young Hollywood actress decides to divorce her husband, that's not news—it's routine.

On the other hand, when a very special girl who is playing the outstanding role of the year decides to end her separation and go back to her husband, stop the presses, boys!

Linda Darnell was nice about the whole thing. I wanted to talk to her about her reconciliation with Pev Marley. We made a date to talk it over, and sat down to do just that in her second floor dressing room suite on the 20th Century lot.

This was Linda's third day off in four solid months of strenuous work in her role of Amber for Forever Amber. She should have shut up shop and refused to see anyone. Instead, she faced the inquisition cheerfully.

I said: "I thought it would be a good idea, at first, to talk to Pev Marley about this, but I understand he is in Honolulu, enjoying your second honeymoon."

Linda smiled gently, and retorted: "I like you. You're practicing to be a cad, aren't you?"

She lit my cigarette.

"The only reason I am talking to you is that you once said (Continued on page 133)

Pev Marley, Linda, Ann Miller, Phil Raffin at Mocambo's in 1943. Ann was Linda's bridesmaid, is her best friend.

stop, look and whistle!

HER FAIRY GODMOTHER MUST'VE HEARD THE SKINNY KID PRAYING SHE'D TURN OUT PRETTY—BECAUSE WHEN SHE GREW UP THEY NICKNAMED MARIE McDONALD "THE BODY"

By Abigail Putnam

■ The prop man stopped short and stared. He watched the blonde girl, laden with luggage, struggling through the door of the elaborate bungalow that had belonged to Eleanor Powell. Hastening down the studio street, he caught up with a pal.

"Hey, Mike," he said. "Who's that blonde in Powell's bungalow?"

"Marie McDonald," came the answer.

"Who?"

"You know—The Body."

"Oh! I've heard of her. What's she doin' here? That's the first time they've given Powell's bungalow to anybody since Eleanor quit."

"Yeah. I heard she's Gene Kelly's new leading lady."

"Geez. Must be good, huh?"

Inside the bungalow, Marie McDonald dropped her luggage and stared. The furniture was sumptuous, including a fine piano, and the walls were lined with mirrors. She did a time step and smiled at herself in the mirrors. Her multiple images smiled back at her.

That fragile, blonde exterior is a fraud—Marie McDonald's a ju-jitsu expert! But she also has her domestic side; the star of Living In A Big Way once designed a parasol that sold commercially.

"Gee," she said aloud. "They must think I'm good."

Two weeks later, producer Pandro Berman sat in the bungalow, watching Gene Kelly put Marie through the steps of his own choreography for Living In A Big Way. The producer of the old Astaire-Rogers films, Berman knows dancing talent when he sees it.

A month later a perspiring publicist put down his telephone.

"I don't get it," he said to his fellow worker. "That's the fourteenth request I've had this week for pictures of McDonald. She's been in Hollywood two years and made fifteen pictures, and now that she's over here and up to her neck in work, they're all screaming for her."

"Marie!" It was the assistant director, howling for the star. "Where's The Body?" he bawled.

The Body, thought Marie. The nickname given her by the GIs had done a great deal for her career. Fifteen pictures and nobody knew (Continued on page 92)

Peter Lawford had better guard his station wagon; nothing mechanical is safe around Marie, who's invented an electrical bed. The pride of the house, it pops up a desk, radio or coffee at the proper button!

■ The antique shop was spotted with dormer windows that looked out on the sunny New England street. It was one of those old Connecticut shops that seem to have snuggled in one spot since time began. Sue saw it first, and touched Alan's sleeve.

"Let's look inside," she said.

Then she saw the cradle. It was very old, made of solid cherry wood, and had an air about it of having made scores of babies extremely uncomfortable.

"Let's buy it," said Sue.

"What for?" Alan wanted to know.

"Because it's cute." That settled it, as it always does for females.

Back in Hollywood, it was installed in their bedroom. And within a few weeks, the Ladds found that their family was going to be increased by one.

"It's the cradle," said Alan. "It's New England witchcraft." He looked at Sue. "Well, (Continued on page 131)

Alana Ladd, called "Lonnie" by everyone, suggested "Butch" for her new brother, David Alan—so "Butch" it is. Lonnie holds on to Butch's hand while he's fed, is fascinated by the whole process.

EVERYBODY WAS "EXPECTING"—THE MARE, THE RABBITS AND THE LADDS—WHICH WAS KIND OF COZY, BUT HARD ON ALAN, WHO HAD TO WORRY FOR THREE.

By Jane Wilkie

Susie was sicker than even Alan knew, after the birth of their son (5 weeks old, above). Even required several blood transfusions. "Now she can't brag she's never been ill," says Alan. He was a bit wilted, too, after a month of phoning home hourly for news of the stork.

Alana, just getting wise to the fact that her daddy's a film star, has been promised visits to the movies to see him in Wild Harvest and Calcutta.

Dr. Francis Griffin and his wife, Irene Dunne, celebrate their 17th wedding anniversary this spring—quite a record for a Hollywood marriage. Aside from their chosen professions, the Griffins are hotel owners.

madam queen

IRENE DUNNE HAS ALL THE POISE AND STATELY SERENITY YOU'D EXPECT FROM ROYALTY. BUT THERE'S SOMETHING DOWN-TO-EARTH ABOUT THAT DEVASTATIN' DIXIE DRAWL!

by Jack Wade

Irene, who's Mother in Life With Father, made a rare radio appearance with Rex Harrison in Anna and the King of Siam. Daughter Mary, who's 12, is a piano-prodigy, already launched on a successful concert career.

■ Irene Dunne was sitting that day in Leo McCarey's office—it was a Tuesday—and they had completed an hour-long discussion of the picture just finished and the promotion campaign planned for it. Leo stretched back in his chair.

"That's that," he said. "Now to get back to work."

"I know what kind of work you mean," Irene told him. "I saw the paper on your desk when I came in—you were looking over the entries for the Kentucky Derby. Next Saturday, isn't it?"

"Yes. It is, and I was. Do you know," he added pathetically, "I've always wanted to see a Derby, and I never have. How about you, Irene?"

"Why, I've seen dozens of them, naturally. Don't you hear mah Suhthen accent? I was bohn in Louisville."

"In Louisville, hey?" said Leo. He stared past her, his eyes glazing with thought, his fingers drumming meditatively on his desk.

"What are you cooking up now?"

"I can see it now," he said. "Local Louisville girl makes good. Mayor presents her with keys to the city. Speeches on the steps of the City Hall. School children assembled to cheer an alumnus who fulfilled her dream. Banquets in her honor . . ." He paused for breath.

"Me?" Irene shrieked. (Continued on page 120)

IF COFFEE TASTES JUST LIKE CHAMPAGNE AND

YOU PLAY YOUR MOST ROMANTIC SCENES OVER THE PHONE—THAT'S LOVE.

AND MRS. LARRY PARKS HAS IT BAD—FOR GOOD!

"I'VE GOT IT BAD"

by betty garrett parks

■ I was working at a place called the Clover Club, when I got the call from the Actors' Lab. Would I like to do a show, they wanted to know.

I said sure. The Lab is for people like me—fools who'll perform all day and all night, and then, for relaxation, go over to the Lab and perform some more.

I went, and there was this boy. Brown eyes, brown hair, serious-looking. He said, "Hello, I'm Larry Parks," and I said, "Hello," but I wasn't sure who I was. I think it started right then, with me. Like they say in the movies, it was bigger than I was.

He asked me if I wanted a cup of coffee. He could have held out for a short opium pipe, and I wouldn't have known the difference. When he smiled, I sort of got lost in it.

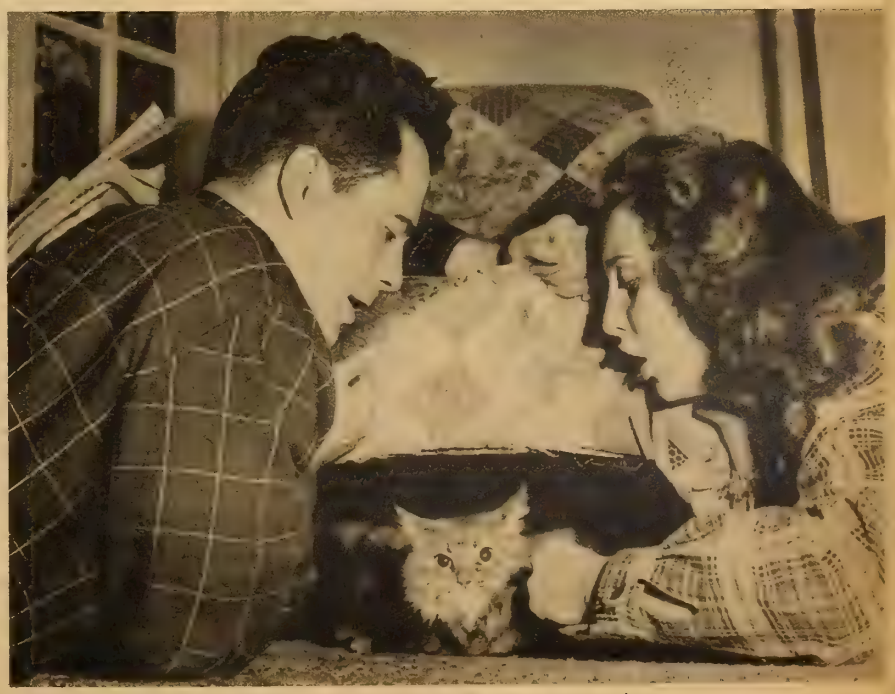
For a week, steady, we saw each other, until I had to leave for Chicago, where I was going to play a date at the Camellia House in the Drake Hotel.

I was in Chicago two days, and the phone rang. Phones play a big part in this story. There was a familiar voice on the other end. "Care to have a cup of coffee?" it said.

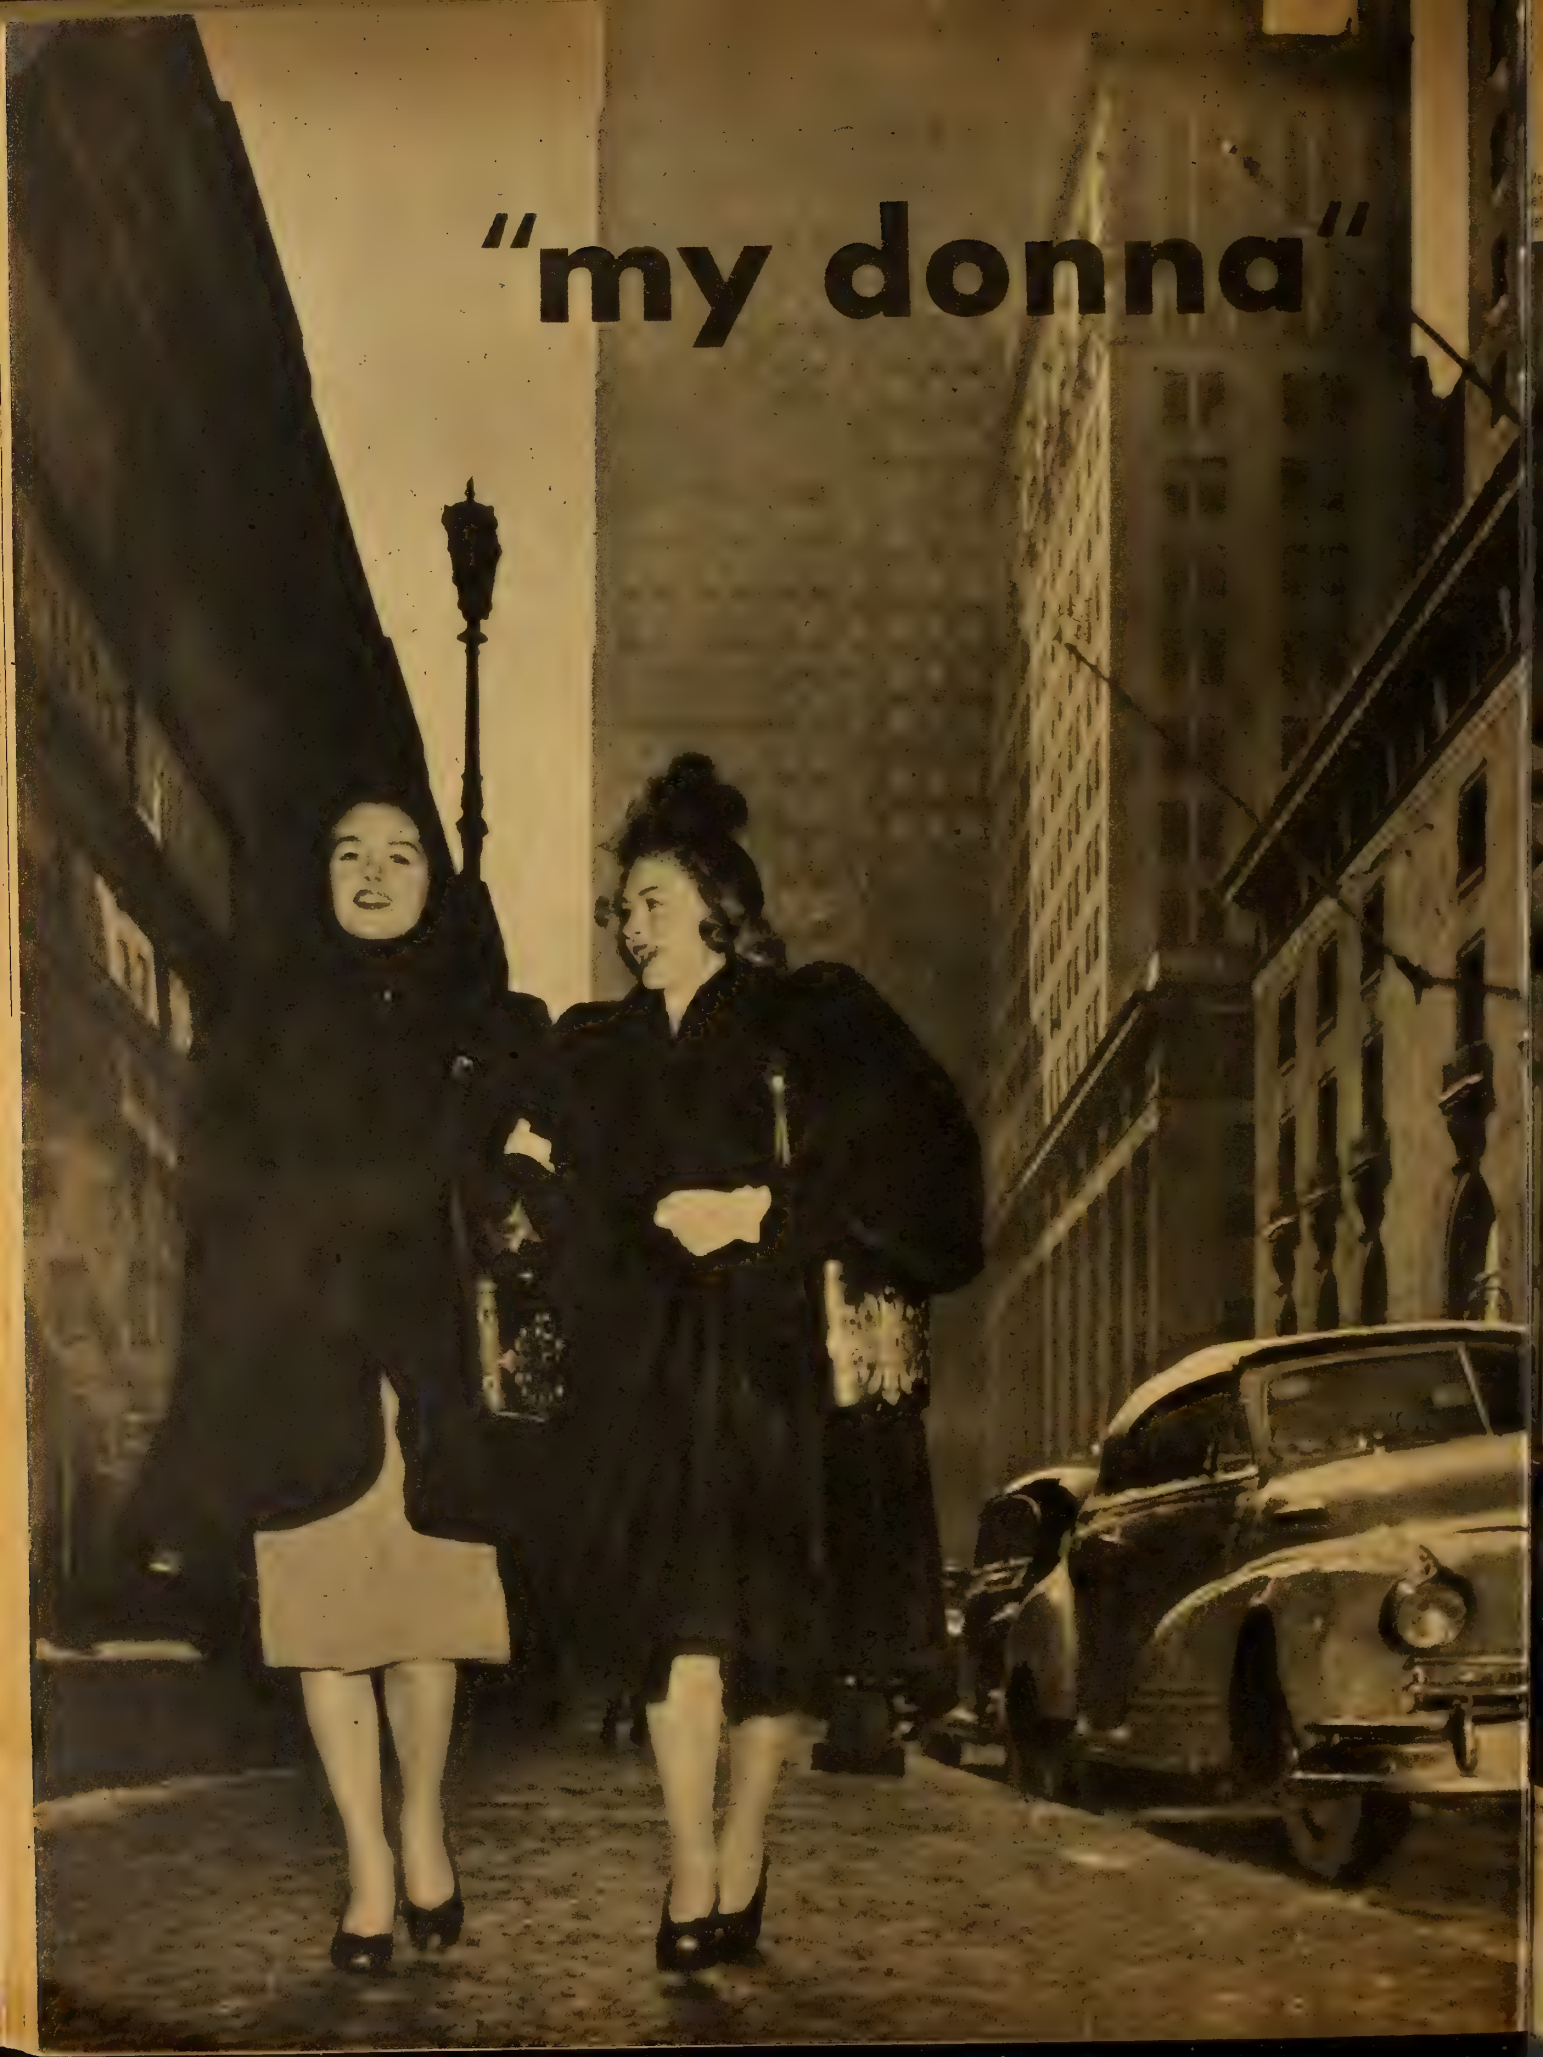
So he was there, and we had one more week. After that, he had to go back to California. For three months, I worked at the Camellia House, (Continued on page 108)

"He did it with his own little hands," Betty laughs proudly —referring to the cactus Larry raised. He's learned from painful experience to handle his "baby" with gloves.

ɔtty's in Hollywood for good now, with a brand new M-G-M ɔntract and a big role in Good News. Larry's latest is Down o Earth, but the Parks'aren't taking that title seriously at all.



Pepper's a Blue Persian who makes you lure her out from under chairs and has seven toes on her south paw. Larry's scared of the "beast"; not even her impending motherhood can soften his heart.



"my donna"

odel agent Harry Conover, Donna and sister Heidi (a Conover gal her-lf) look over the new crop of hopefuls. Donna did some modeling etween scenes of Green Dolphin Street for our Fashion Dept. (p. 73).

■ The radio was playing "Some Day I'll Find You." I could hear it from the side porch where I was sitting alone in the swing. I could look in the window, too, and see Donna and Jack dancing. I could, but I wouldn't. Dancing was silly, I told myself firmly. Having boy friends was silly, too, and even when I got to be seventeen, like Donna, I wouldn't waste my time with them.

Sure, that's what I kept telling myself, but I knew it wasn't true.

I sat there with the toe of my battered old saddle shoe tapping to the music. I looked up at the May evening sky and wished quickly on the first star I saw. "Star light, star bright . . ." But I didn't have time to finish because the door opened and there was Donna. (Continued on page 123) emember the gawky kid you were at 14?" Donna chides. Donna (of a Wonderful Life) and husband Tony Owen are so happy their own little cover girl, Penny Jane, they'll adopt another.

SOMETIMES IT'S HARDER

TO SHOW GRATITUDE TO YOUR OWN

FAMILY THAN TO A STRANGER.

THAT'S WHY ALL DONNA REED'S SISTER

CAN SAY IS "THANKS, DONNA."

by "heidi"

Sister of

M-G-M Star, Donna Reed

the adventures of glenn langan

It all began when he was 15 and ran away from home—because of a girl. After that there were tent-shows, burlesque, Broadway—and finally Lucille.

By HOWARD SHARPE

When Glenn and wife Lou bought their own home, they fulfilled an old ambition—to cram it with the over-sized furniture necessary for their respective 6'4" and 6'1" frames.

"I should have gone to fencing school, instead of dramatic school," sighs Glenn, whose role in Forever Amber requires lunging as well as love-making. His fan clubs now total 23.

Lillian, the Langans' cook, has to chase her boss out of the kitchen—he's a celery-snatcher. Glenn scares party guests by staging fake seances, playing the ghostly visions himself.

■ Glenn Langan has laughed and bullied his way through life for thirty years. When success finally came to him, it came as an anti-climax . . .

He had already brought a kind of fame to the respectable, immigrant Irish family of Langan by the time he was fourteen. He accomplished this by reaching the height of 6′ 3″ at that age and thus becoming The Tallest Boy Scout in America. For some reason this was considered news of nationwide importance, and the press everywhere published photographs of him, standing thin and proud and towering in his uniform.

His father was a retired fireman, a pillar of the community of Berkeley Gardens (which is a small suburb near Denver), and a good (Continued on page 71)

by Betty
Hutton

Poor Betty had to shed 20 pounds after the birth of Lindsay Diane, who's every bit as photogenic as her Ma. Radio's "Hit Parade" claims Betty's services soon for eight weeks.

It's fun now, but Mrs. Mabel Hutton remembers when dish-washing was a chore. Mabel bit her nails to the elbow over Perils of Pauline, but wait'll she sees Betty in Dream Girl!

Betty says, "Thanks, Mom"—from the heart. Because Mabel Hutton knew the price of her daughter's happiness, and paid it gladly through the lean years.

On Mothers' Day

■ I once heard somebody say that Mother's Day is sentimental. "That's for me," I said. "I'm a sucker for sentiment."

So when Al Delacorte asked me to tell the story of my mother for Mother's Day, he was doing me a favor. I've been wanting to tell that story for a long time. And for lots of reasons, all sentimental.

I always knew my mother was a swell person. Even as a kid, I knew what she went through for my sister Marion and me. But now that I have a baby of my own, it's different.

Our baby has everything Ted and I can give her, but I still worry. One day the baby had a little upset and I fell completely apart. In the midst of the circus, in walks my mother, and looks at me with a kind of funny expression. All of a sudden, my mind flew back to the old days—Momma working at the factory for just about enough to keep a roof over our heads and food in our (Continued on page 111)

■ I've known Jane Powell since we were kids in Portland. I was older, but she was brighter, so it sort of evened up.

Her name was Suzanne Burce, those days. We went to a school called Beaumont, and we had nothing much on our minds most of the time. We didn't even have much minds, most of the time. Certainly, Suzanne didn't sit around plotting to be a great singer. She had a good, healthy life with her mother, who's tiny, and curly-haired and simply darling, and her father, who has the gayest brown eyes you ever saw.

Our big passion was ice cream sodas, but we still had our baby curves and we used to look unhappily at the way our clothes fit. Or fat. Every day, we'd go to this soda fountain and stare the man straight in the eye and order one soda and two glasses of water, please. We got to be known as the "two-on-a-straw" kids.

And then, one afternoon when she was thirteen, and we were batting around on a handball court, she announced casually that this friend of her family's was on a War Bond Committee. "They're looking for a girl who can sing," she said. "He thinks I might do."

She did, all right. The next thing we knew, Suzanne—or maybe I'd better call her Janie from now on—was the Oregon Victory Girl. And all of her friends went around looking smug, as if we'd had something to do with it.

Janie snowballed into a national figure awfully fast. She had two radio shows in Portland, and she went on a tour of Oregon to sell bonds.

I got a letter full of enthusiasm from her. It seemed she was riding through towns in fire trucks, with the siren going full blast, and you know how satisfactory a thing like that can be. When she wasn't singing, or riding in a fire-truck, she was eating four-inch steaks. That letter was insufferable. Four-inch steaks, and Portland hadn't seen a cow since the war began. Obviously, patriotism was paying off. (Continued on page 128)

two on a straw

Jane is a very good cook, claims author-friend Christopher Kane. But she'd rather sing on Sinatra's radio show or make wishes about Cornel Wilde—like wishing he'd have a picture taken without his wife!

Jane has a whole drawerful of bathing suits, loaned a blue one to Chris and wore a pink two piece job. Now in The Birds And The Bees, Janie prefers pedal pushers and plaid shirts to slacks.

Chris helped Jane's mother, Mrs. Burce, wind up balls of wool for her daughter's hobby: knitting. Janie's just finished a pair of baby blue socks for herself. Her feet are so small, socks look like a child's.

WHEN THEY WERE KIDS IN PORTLAND, JANE POWELL AND CHRISSIE SHARED SODAS TOGETHER. FOUR YEARS LATER, THEY MET IN HOLLYWOOD—AND SPLIT A MALTED TO CELEBRATE!

By Christopher Kane

just because she's joan

Graciousness comes from the heart, not from any stuffy books on etiquette. And Joan Crawford's got a king-size heart . . .

By CARL SCHROEDER

■ I put my feet up in one corner of Joan Crawford's dressing room, all set to pop that $64 question: When was she going to re-marry? And whom? The question never got out, drowned by the violent barking of an outraged dog just outside the door. I thought somebody's Great Dane had broken loose on the studio lot and was assailing a passing profile. But no. As the roar of airplane motors receded in the distance, a Cocker Spaniel puppy rushed in and tried to wiggle its way into Joan's lap.

"Honey Boy, you mad fool," Joan exclaimed, "don't you know you'll never win?"

Honey Boy has an idea that he will some day get his teeth into the tail of a four-motored (Continued on page 64)

On the set, Joan and producer Jerry Wald discuss the suit brought against her by a former mental patient. The woman has alleged that Joan invaded her privacy to observe psychiatric treatment for her role in Possessed.

Joan's newest romance is British Peter Shaw, former escort of Lana Turner. They had tongues wagging at Look Award party. So perhaps Greg Bautzer has bowed out of Joan's life.

IN JOHN'S SCHOOL, A KID WHO WAS YOUNGER THAN THE OTHERS, READ BOOKS, AND KNEW THE RIGHT ANSWERS, WAS A SISSY. SO JOHN HAD TO BE TWICE AS TOUGH! (PART ONE)

By Ida Zeitlin

john lund life story

■ It's your own fault that you won't be seeing John Lund in Blaze of Noon. When he hit the MODERN SCREEN poll, Paramount yanked him. Why waste this new bonfire on a picture loaded down with guys? Betty Hutton got him instead as the principal peril in Perils of Pauline.

For the benefit of those unfortunates who missed To Each His Own, John Lund played Olivia De Havilland's sweetheart and son. The footage was relatively brief, the impact was socko. As Captain Bart Cosgrove, he gave you a sense of masculine ease and authority more potent than dimples. When, as Greg, the son, he spoke that simple, scalp-tingling last line, "This is my dance, Mother," you'd have loved to change places with Mother, agonies and all. That moment paid for the years, with some change left over.

You MODERN SCREENers weren't the only smart ones. There was, for instance, the phenomenon of the secretaries . . .

Studio secretaries are immune to actors; they've been vaccinated. Naturally, you get an exception here and there, but the over-all attitude is healthy, skeptical and matter-of-fact. They like the good eggs, they dislike (Continued on page 66)

Wife Marie taught him about realism for Theater Guild's Time Of Your Life radio show. For the scene where he had to talk and chew 14 sticks of gum at same time, she suggested John (in Perils of Pauline) hold a wad ready.

Stars look forward to personal appearance tours about the way the kids look forward to mid-year exams—with teeth on edge and hearts of stone.

"Darling," everyone told Diana Lynn as she packed her bags for her Chicago junket, "it will be strictly awful. You will emerge a blithering wreck. You will absolutely die." And now it's all over, and Diana's almost ashamed to admit it, but she actually gained a little weight; she never felt better in her life; she loved it! Eileen Horn, her secretary and good friend, has an explanation for it. "It's Chicago," she told Diana. "You couldn't possibly blither in Chicago. It's too magnificent."

Their visit got off to a good start. It was snowing the day they arrived, and the wind piled the snow into great drifts and flung handfuls of it into their sun-kissed faces. Waiting for a cab, Eileen hopped from one foot to the other to keep warm, but Diana sort of leaned into the wind, letting her hair blow.

"You look positively pleased," Eileen accused her.

"Why, I am," Diana said, a little surprised, herself. "I really am."

The Chicago Theater where Diana appeared is perfectly enormous, and when she first saw it she very nearly swooned. "Look," she told Nate Platt, the theater manager, "there's been a mistake. I'm not a real pianist or anything. I just play a few little pieces, and I don't play very loud. If there was a smaller place—an auditorium or something—"

"We have a fairly modern public address system, Miss Lynn," she was informed. "Frank Sinatra sang here, and they heard him way up in the last balcony."

The day she opened, the place looked even bigger, and just before she went on, she stood in the wings with Eileen and shook. Eileen put a clammy (Continued on page 114)

Voted Queen of Chicago's B. & K. Theaters, at their annual employees' party, Miss Marianne Russell gets crowned by Diana Lynn. Chicago showed off for her, Diana insists, giving her a display of all kinds of weather, from springtime to snowtime.

"Hi-Shoppers"—that's the name of a newspaper feature devoted to Chicago's teenagers. Editors held a contest, the subject of which was "Why, I'd Like To Meet Diana Lynn." Here winners and editors swoop down on Diana in her dressing room.

"CHICAGO, I love you"

Trombone artist Bill Harris gives Diana Lynn a sample of what won him the Esquire Jazz Award. The trophy Diana's holding was given to Bill at a jazz concert held in Kimball Hall. Diana still prefers the piano—you don't have to carry it around!

That straw bonnet didn't stay on Diana's head long. Chicagoans Mrs. Utley and Mrs. Grubb persuaded Diana (in Variety Girl) to donate her hat to a charity auction.

"You'll hate it," everyone assured Diana Lynn. "Personal appearances are awful." But Diana fell in love—with Chicago

By JEAN KINKEAD

crack-up

Before their separation, Greer Garson and Richard Ney attended many Hollywood parties. Richard's completing his role in Ivy, and plans a long European tour afterwards. He's still upset over Greer's near-drowning at Monterey while making A Woman Of My Own.

Laughing on the outside, crying on the inside—that's the way Richard Ney feels. Because deep down he still thinks Greer Garson's the only one . . .

By VALERIE SLOAN

Special Reporter for Modern Screen

■ When I first heard the news of the crack-up of Greer Garson's marriage, I was reminded of the evening Hollywood threw the big dinner in honor of the first showing of It's a Wonderful Life. Greer was so beautiful that night, and happy.

And I think I've never seen a young man so completely in love as Richard. He could speak freely and from the heart because he so little suspected that the dashing of his hopes lay just around the corner.

"Valerie, I can't visualize a future for myself without Greer," he said earnestly. "She's the only woman in the world for me!"

What has happened to this, the latest "perfect Hollywood marriage," to wreck itself in shoal waters?

I wish I could have got Dick or Greer to answer this question for the readers of Modern Screen. But as soon as Greer reached her decision to separate from Richard she tore herself out of Hollywood and went into the strictest seclusion at her home in Pebble Beach. And Richard sealed his lips like the gentleman he is.

This much is clear. Richard had left home ten days before the outside world or even his closest friends suspected it. He went to the (Continued on page 136)

Hollywood inspired Woodbury Fiesta

...saucy, spirited new powder shade named for the technicolor hit picture "FIESTA"

Rose-sparkle for your skin! Wear Fiesta, spirited new powder shade that warms and livens your skin to breathless new beauty. Blended first for Fiesta's dazzling star, Esther Williams, this enchanting Woodbury shade is color-right for YOU! Luscious rose-rachel—disarming, disturbing! A Woodbury-Wonderful shade that stays color-fresh. See its loveliness on you! For free "try-on" sample, mail coupon below!

Woodbury Matched Make-Up with Woodbury Fiesta Film-Finish Powder you also get Fiesta Red Lipstick and Rouge . . . all 3 in the dollar powder box—only $1.00

"Try-it" sizes of Fiesta Film-Finish Powder... 8 other Star shades... 25c, 10c. All prices plus tax.

Esther Williams

starring in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "FIESTA"

That glow-of-roses on her skin? It's yours . . . with Woodbury Fiesta.

Free Sample! FIESTA POWDER... *so beautifying!

See Fiesta's sparkle on your skin! Send for free Woodbury Powder Sampler (contains eight other flattering shades), plus Hollywood Make-up Chart. Print name, address clearly. Mail* to Box 45, Dept. 303, Cincinnati 14, Ohio.

NAME.....

STREET.....

CITY..... STATE.....

(Sorry, offer good in U.S.A. only.) *Paste coupon on penny postcard, if you wish.

JUST BECAUSE SHE'S JOAN—By Carl Schroeder

(Continued from page 57)

Constellation as it gains altitude over the studio. Honey Boy doesn't bother about the two-motor jobs, but his back hair curls when he hears Connie warming up over at Lockheed.

"Personally," Joan said, "I'll always be a Dachshund woman, and Honey Boy was not my choice of a name for this hysterical little sweetheart—Christina insisted on the name and the breed, too. I'll confess, though, that I can see now why she wanted one so badly."

I've seen a good deal of Joan when she is around her children. As a male parent, I thought she was a little overboard on the subject of perfect manners. But I must admit she makes a good case for her side.

"Personally," she said, "I think nothing is more important than discipline of the right kind. We have an understanding around our house that when anyone is talking on the telephone, people in the same room are quiet. I had an important call one morning and in the midst of it my two angels dropped their haloes and began to yell at each other. When I hung up, I gave them whatfor. Then I took Christopher, who is just four, on my lap for a session of hugging, because I don't think any child should be disciplined without being left with the idea that you love him very much."

Discipline or no discipline, Joan, in my book, is a sucker for other people. She is an habitué of a restaurant on the Sunset Strip known as The Cock 'n' Bull, an English type pub, frequented largely by journalists who are both in and out of work. She appears there so frequently that she is accepted as a regular by the customers who consider themselves a part of the management. One day, while on the way to her table, she said hello to a feminine writer who was sipping a cocktail and mulling over a personal problem. The writer looked up, mumbled "Lo," and went back to her mulling. About six weeks later, she bumped into Joan at a party.

Joan said, "Tell me, have I done anything to offend you?"

The writer was astonished. "Of course not, why?" she asked.

"Now I feel better," Joan said. "When I passed you a few weeks ago at the C & B, I thought you were a little abrupt, and it's been worrying me."

One night, not long ago, I had occasion to put Joan's association with people under a microscope. I had been on a howler with Mr. and Mrs. Bob Preston, a howler being my word invention for a lot of evening. I was convinced, as we left Mocambo some time after midnight, that I had to go swimming. After the Prestons tossed me at a towel and poured a black cup of coffee, we fell to talking about their house on North Bristol. I asked whether the next door neighbor was likely to complain about odd-hour athletes who made so much noise in the middle of the night.

Kay Preston said, "Oh, no—Joan Crawford is our ideal neighbor!"

Then Bob Preston, who never throws a punch or a remark unless he means it, said, "You know why I like Joan? The night of the Academy Awards, Kay and I listened over the radio. When we heard that Joan had won, Kay scribbled a little note and I took it out and put same in Joan's mail box. Next afternoon when I picked up our mail, I found a note in return. It said: 'Thanks, neighbors, for completing my happiness!' "

Some volunteer is always "completing" Joan's happiness. Cameraman Joe Valentine and his crew were assigned to do Possessed, Joan's current picture. For the first few days, the simple chalk marks which were scrawled on the sound stage floor, indicating that Joan was to put her feet there in order to be in proper focus, were as efficiently drawn as ever.

Abruptly, the chalk marks disappeared. One morning Joan found a drawing of a boy and girl holding hands. Thereafter there was an original idea every day, the last of which was a pair of hearts and the words, "We love you!"

Joan can count the day bleak when she fails to receive or send a couple of notes. One day while we were lunching in the Green Room at Warners, Joan looked up from her plate of fried chicken to exclaim, "That girl over there—who is she?"

I glanced around. Four tables away sat an almost chubby blonde girl, wearing glasses and the look of a seventeen-year-old. "Somebody's movie fan, I guess."

"No," Joan replied, "I've seen her somewhere before—and not around Hollywood." In another moment she had the answer. The girl was Bambi Lynn, a standout performer in Carousel. Joan remembered that on her last trip to New York she had seen the musical and was so impressed with Bambi that she wrote her a fan letter. Now Bambi had arrived in Hollywood and at Warners to test for an important picture. When I saw her later she told me that Joan's note had given her the confidence she needed.

for the love of mike . . .

Speaking of confidence, I asked Joan why she didn't appear more often on the radio. She by-passed the question, but a prominent radio producer supplied the answer. "Some of our finest actors," he said, "have difficulty in achieving a relaxed approach. Fear of not doing a good job over the microphone is not an uncommon malady. Joan is rapidly surmounting her phobia, but she likes to have a chair handy so that she can grip the back of it between lines."

Actually, though, Joan can rise to any occasion. I discussed Joan's superior ability to concentrate on the business at hand with Herschel Daugherty, an actor-director from the famed Community Playhouse in Pasadena. Hersch is just beginning his screen career and confessed that he had never seen anything like Joan in Possessed.

"There is a scene in the picture," Hersch told me, "in which Joan goes mad and loses control in an animalistic sort of way. Obviously, it was extremely difficult to do without over- or under-playing and losing the complete meaning. It couldn't be done, except by someone who is really great—a star who could combine technique with heart and soul and belief.

"We started work early in the morning. Everyone knew that Joan had been worrying about this scene for a week. There was no rehearsal. We simply roughed in the scene. Joan was in a hospital bed, and the camera moved in above her on a crane. When she took her place, it was as quiet as grass growing on the set. A tear trickled from the corner of one eye. She nodded her head, and director Bernhardt called, 'Roll 'em!'

"Joan began to babble incoherently, then ad libbing, she screamed, 'David—David—I killed him!' The camera crane came in close as two actor-doctors bent over to administer a prop hypodermic, and the scene concluded. There was a crop of goosepimples blossoming under my collar and I saw several girls on the set crying openly. Joan's hysteria seemed almost to be out of control. She was helped from the bed and to her dressing room.

"Then minutes later she reappeared, subdued but smiling a little ruefully. Director Bernhardt said, 'All right, let's do it again, Joan, with just a little less emphasis.' She didn't bat an eyelash, but climbed back into bed and repeated the same scene with just a slight undertone of restraint. The telling of it can't possibly be as dramatic as the actual occurrence—to employ an overused word, she was terrific." That's a good word for Joan—terrific.

MODERN SCREEN

"May we have the windows closed, please?"

there is no substitute for the professional touch . . .
YOUR BEAUTICIAN'S SKILLED PROFESSIONAL TOUCH AND A
Helene Curtis Cold Wave
FULFILL YOUR WISH FOR LASTING HAIR LOVELINESS
LOOK FOR THIS EMBLEM . . .
THE SYMBOL OF PROFESSIONAL SKILL
MEMBER
Helene Curtis GUILD Professional
Beauticians
Your wish for thrilling hair beauty is easily granted, with a genuine Helene Curtis Cold Wave, given by your skilled professional beautician. This flattering, soft, natural-looking permanent lasts . . . and lasts . . . and lasts.

STUBBORN FILM ROBS YOUR SKIN OF Half its Beauty!

You can't see or feel this stubborn film . . . and ordinary cleansing fails to remove it once you try this treatment you will instantly see and feel the amazing difference!

BUT

JUST ONE TREATMENT with unique Lady Esther Cream shows how much clearer, fresher, younger your skin can look!

Every woman's skin has this insidious enemy . . . a stubborn film, caused by your natural skin oils mixed with cosmetics and dirt.

You can't see or feel this stubborn film. That's the danger! You think your skin is clean, when it isn't.

Ordinary cleansing fails to remove this stubborn, invisible film. Day after day, it clings . . . dulling the true freshness and beauty of your skin . . . encouraging blackheads and blemishes!

Here's the safe, sure way to get rid of this stubborn, clinging film!

1. Smooth over your face and neck my unique Lady Esther 4-Purpose Face Cream. Wipe it off thoroughly.
2. Immediately . . . and this is the important part . . . apply Lady Esther cream a second time. Wipe it off.

This second cleansing, with Lady Esther, really removes that stubborn film. Now your skin is really clean!

Instantly, you see and feel the difference! Your skin looks so much clearer, fresher, younger! It feels so much softer, smoother. Now, your skin has a real chance to build new loveliness.

My Cream is Unique!

The very texture of Lady Esther 4-Purpose Face Cream is different . . . so soft, so effective. And remember . . . every time you use my unique cream, it does four of the things your skin needs most: 1) cleanses thoroughly; 2) softens your skin; 3) helps Nature refine your pores; 4) and leaves a perfect powder base.

Get Lady Esther 4-Purpose Face Cream today. Let this unique cream work its beauty wonders on your skin!

Lady Esther

4-PURPOSE FACE CREAM

Needs No Help From Any Other Cream

JOHN LUND LIFE STORY

(Continued from page 58)

the stinkers and they swoon for nobody. But all of a sudden at Paramount, secretaries started hanging out of windows. "What is this?" yelled the bosses, and it was always John Lund crossing the courtyard. "What's he got?" they demanded. One crisp keypuncher hit nearest the bull's eye. "That's not an actor," she declared firmly. "That's a man!"

Unlike many discoveries, John was acting when they found him. Playing Yank in The Hasty Heart. "Paramount," says John, "plucked me from the dark obscurity of a leading role in a Broadway hit."

His humor is ironic, but for the most part, genial. At the Ice Follies, a child asked for his autograph. Ten minutes later she came back with a furrowed brow. "Please would you tell me what this name is? It looks like 'John Lund'."

"It is 'John Lund', my pet, and you're stuck with it."

Paramount has no reason to feel stuck with John. He photographs well enough to have rolled up—on the strength of a single release—a round, a firm, a fully-packed 2000 - fan - letters - per - week. His sea-blue eyes he must have got through his father, a Norwegian-born glassblower who died when John was three. The way he tosses language around sounds more like a gift from the maternal, or Irish side.

His mother was small, but not meek. If something went wrong with the garbage disposal, she'd call the mayor. Once they got a gas bill to the tune of thirty-five bucks. Obviously, a clerical error. But Mother stormed into the president's office and harangued him to such purpose on the subject of rascally public utilities, that it was months before the company dared send another bill.

quiz kid . . . .

John was the youngest of seven, with a gap of many years between him and Louise, next older and his natural champion. Their home was in Rochester, New York. They didn't have much money, but managed to live on the more respectable side of the tracks. For the first decade of his life, John was a law-abiding quiz kid who shot through six grades in three years and entered junior high at the age of ten. That year marked the climax of his good citizenship phase. For a statewide hospital campaign, he wrote an essay winding up as follows: "A hospital is a sacred thing. Life begins, life ends. I challenge you one and all to do your duty toward life."

This won him the privilege of appearing at a money-raising luncheon. Only he forgot about it till somebody plucked him out of a ball game, and said: "It's time to go." He didn't look too formal. There was a tooth missing, but that wasn't his fault. There was also a hole in his stocking, mud on his shoes, a rip in his pants and an all-over sense of grime. He knew his mother'd raise cain. She raised cain if you wore your underwear twice in a row. "Suppose you got run over and they saw your dirty linen in a hospital!"

He decided to solve the problem by keeping his coat on. This garment—sheepskin-lined and fur-collared, had been a gift from his brother Ole, and in it he felt like the Czar of all the Russias. Attempts to get him to remove it were in vain till they led him to the speaker's table to introduce him. There, someone too firm in authority to be resisted, said, "Sonny, take your coat off."

Cornered, John hurled it to the floor in a grand gesture. His head was just visible over the table-top. "Fellow citizens," he began, and the cameras popped.

The early editions were out before he got home. "Mrs. Lund, Mrs. Lund," shrieked the little girl next door. "There's a picture of John in the paper with a dirty old sweater on and his mouth open."

This plunge from glory into shame may have had some bearing on John's sudden revolt against organized authority. A more potent influence was society—the society, that is, of his peers. He was 10 in a class where the others were 12 and 13. Being 10 was sissy. Reading books was sissy. Knowing the right answer was sissy. John wanted in. The shining goal was to be a toughie.

The heaviest cross he had to bear was his age. He'd have died before admitting to less than 13. In class, he'd give wrong answers deliberately, go out of his way to prove how dumb he was.

All this paid off in 9A, when he was not merely left back, but demoted. John Lund was now definitely recognized as one of the elect—an honor which bore him serenely through the storm at home. By the time he was 14, he'd been thrown out of three grammar schools and as many high schools. To study was against the code. To pass an examination, you copied.

It all ended inevitably one day when he announced defiantly to the family:

"I'm quittin' school."

They couldn't budge him. This was still the Red Grange era. Thanks to the Galloping Ghost and his ice-wagon, manual labor lay bathed in radiance. Anyway, working was more hard-boiled than school. What's more, teachers were dopes.

"You're a dope," said Ole. "I wanted to go to school and couldn't."

jack of all trades . . .

His mother drew dark pictures of doom. Even Louise was against him, but he went his way. For two years he worked at odd jobs, learned to shoot an indifferent game of billiards, and got hep to the joys of staying up late. Being a clean-cut young fellow, he didn't have much trouble finding work.

He lasted longest as a pattern-chaser in a clothing factory. The boss was inclined to bully him at first, but one day John turned on him. "Go to blazes, will you?" he remarked conversationally.

"What's that?"

"Go to blazes, will you? At your convenience, of course."

From then on he was left to his chores in peace till the truant board caught up with him. On quitting school, he'd neglected one small formality—to register for continuation classes. Faced now with the choice of making up his time at night, or finishing it out at regular school till his seventeenth birthday, he picked the latter and speedier course, and took revenge by making a nuisance of himself. If the question was, "How old is Charlie?" a voice from the rear would boom, "Old enough to know better." With such pleasantries he managed to pass the time, and everyone was relieved to see the last of him.

After that, he jerked sodas, worked on farms, dug ditches, collected bills and left adolescence behind for his early twenties. Al Sweeting, a friend, who'd been working with stock companies in and around Rochester, joined a newly formed dramatic club to direct a production of Waiting for Lefty. He needed more actors. He new John had a loud voice.

"Come on in with us. You can play Keller. Leader of the strike block. Good part."

"And you can go fly a kite."

"Nothing to it, John. Like a school play. You must've acted in school plays."

"Not so much as The-Spirit-of-Clean-

Are you really sure of your present deodorant? Test it against Fresh
See for yourself why more and more women are switching to Fresh—the new cream deodorant they find the most effective and so gentle

Use FRESH and be lovelier to love

Lovely to know . . . that you can really rely on Fresh. Fresh contains the most effective perspiration-stopping ingredient known to science!

Lovely to use . . . creamy Fresh stays smooth . . . never greasy, gritty or sticky . . . doesn't dry out.

And gentle . . . Fresh contains a patented ingredient that makes it gentle to skin, safe for fabrics.

No wonder . . . more and more women are switching to Fresh.

FRESH
CREAM DEODORANT
STOPS PERSPIRATION
FRESH is approved by the American Medical Association for advertising in their publications.

© 1947, The Pharma-Craft Corporation, Inc.

Haunting as a Serenade

Perfume portrait by Aud ey Buller

Poetic Dream—a tender floral blend sings of sheer enchantment

Leigh Perfumes

"POETIC DREAM" REG. U. S. PAT. OFF. BY LEIGH PERFUMES, A DIVISION OF SHULTON, NEW YORK

Teeth in a pageant."

"Well then, do it to help me out."

This went on for four weeks, with John saying yes on Monday and no on Tuesday. In the end he gave in. On opening night he climbed into his oldest and most disreputable clothes, slipped a flaskful of martinis into his pocket and prepared to slink from the house.

"Where you going in that get-up?" asked his mother.

"Gonna be in a play."

"Not in those filthy clothes you're not. Go put on your new suit."

"I'm a cabdriver on strike, Mom. The guy hasn't smelled a new suit in thirteen years."

There was quite an argument. He left her moaning, "In front of all those people! What'll they think of us!"

Without the martinis, it would have been impossible. With them, it was a nightmare. But once he'd come through it and out at the other end, he decided it hadn't been so bad.

"That's good," said Al. "We've been asked to do a repeat in Buffalo."

They did it in several surrounding towns. Result: a bid from a bunch of college kids who'd started a stock company and craved Mr. Lund as their leading man. It was the kind of outfit whose 19-year-old press agent popped a cigar in his mouth, stuck a hat on the back of his head and—to retrieve the balance—talked British.

Paid $12 a week, John earned every penny. They opened with Ibsen's Doll's House and closed soon after. John profited to the extent of a call from the Community Playhouse and allied himself with that organization. It was a pleasant social endeavor and coddled your vanity, but didn't pay your bills. John continued to thrust feelers into industry—more with the brain now and less with the brawn, though he could still dig ditches when he had to. "Here a sewer, there a sewer," he recalls. Did he want to be an actor? It was like asking, did he want to be a pearlfisher? Both pipedreams that had nothing to do with the workaday Lunds of a workaday world.

He moved to New York to go into the circular ad business—a minor branch of advertising that he'd tried with some success in Rochester. But by the time he'd scraped a few dollars together and landed in Manhattan, the guy he was supposed to go in with had another job. John looked the place over and decided to stay anyway. He stuck some ads in the trade papers, got a few answers, and wrote enough copy to keep body and soul together.

i've been workin' on the railroad . . .

Meantime he'd run into Joe Bassett, another Rochester alumnus, with whom he was presently sharing an apartment. From the Flushing dumps, the World's Fair was about to blossom. Joe nailed a job as stage manager for the Railroad Pageant, and what was simpler than to ring in his housemate as one of the actors. With John, it was Waiting for Lefty all over again. On the one hand, circular ads were opening up. On the other, he'd be sure of a small but regular income. Still, he'd settled on some form of writing as a trade. Shoemaker, stick to your last.

At next to the last minute, a change of heart sent him hiking over to Grand Central where the show was rehearsing.

That first season with the Railroad Pageant cooked his goose. Meeting show people, learning their jargon, getting the feel of the theater from its outermost fringes where he dangled, he was caught up once and for all in the magic of show business.

One day he and his new crowd were hanging 'round Walgreen's, when word came by the grapevine that Shumlin had a call out. John let the tide carry him. The line was so long, it made you feel anonymous, and staying was more conspicuous than leaving. They moved fast—up the stairs, along the hall, through the door and into the room where Shumlin leaned against a desk and said—wearily, but courteously— "No, thank you." John felt a sense of achievement. A Broadway producer had said, "No, thank you," to him. (Shortly after the opening of Hasty Heart, Shumlin called John's agent. "I want a Lund type," he said. Such are the satisfactions of success.)

The second encounter was even more accidental. John bumped into Joe on the street; Joe had an appointment at the Theatre Guild; John went along to kill an hour. He was sitting there, minding his own business, when the executive-in-charge appeared from the inner fastnesses, sort of looked around, sort of nodded to people she recognized, and brought her eyes to rest on John in a kind of glazed stare. He stirred uneasily.

"What's your name?" she asked.

He couldn't say, "I'm waiting for Joey;" it sounded foolish. For a second it looked as if he couldn't say anything. Then he pushed it out. "John Lund."

"Oh yes, I've heard of you. What have you done again?"

"Uh—nothing much—"

"Oh, yes." If she'd had a beard, here's where she would have stroked it. "Will you stand up, please?" The target of fifteen pairs of eyes, he stood up. "Mmm. Will you turn around, please?"

"And as God is my judge," he groaned, telling the story to Joe, "I turned around."

"Then what?"

come back thursday . . .

"Then she said to come back and see her next Thursday."

On Thursday the lady said "Oh, yes" again, but more vaguely. "Would you come back next Thursday?"

He went back four Thursdays running, by which time the lady'd forgotten who he was. "Oh, yes," she said. "That part is cast."

Thus encouraged, he registered at Feagin's Dramatic School. One day a fellow asked him how he felt about Shakespeare.

"He sends me."

"That's what I thought. I just got a job stage managing As You Like It. Alfred Drake and Helen Craig. Come on over and read."

They hired him to understudy Drake. While Drake remained in good health, John was to wear tights, say "Ho, who comes?" and carry a stool after the wrestling match. On learning that they didn't rehearse understudies till the run had started, his delight ebbed. Drake could drop dead on opening night and it wouldn't do him any good, they'd just ring down the curtain.

Came summer and the World's Fair again. And a party. And a girl . . .

A guy named Arthur invited them to the party. It was a party with a purpose. Bunch of kids in the theater wanted to form a little dramatic group to keep their hands in. Bassett and Lund were through with little dramatic groups, but sure, they'd come to the party.

It was Arthur again who introduced them to the girl. Marie Charton. Tall, dark and slender, with creamy skin and a child's hazel eyes in the lovely oval of her face. The general effect was best described by a friend who said: "When Marie walks into a room, people fall down."

Marie had a phone call to make in the course of the evening—rather a personal

"Kiss-Me!" Skin

Delicious to kiss . . . skin that's satin-smooth with Jergens Face Cream. Enriched with Vitone! Unsurpassed as a dry-skin smoother, Vitone is exclusive with Jergens Cream. Tests by doctors show: with Jergens, 8 out of 10 complexions improved . . . "Skins softer, fresher, smoother."

All-Purpose...plus Vitone

Works like four creams. Jergens Vitone-enriched Face Cream is your "beauty-all" in one jar. It softens . . . cleanses . . . helps smooth tiny lines of dry-skin...acts as clinging powder-base. Contains Vitone, yet costs no more than other fine creams. 10c to $1.25. (Plus tax)

VITONE: special Dry-Skin "Smoother" in

JERGENS FACE CREAM

A Cleanser....
A Softener.....
A Dry-Skin Cream
A Powder Base..

Free! Prove to yourself at our expense what Vitone can do for your skin!

Please send me generous trial-size, free, of Jergens Vitone-enriched Face Cream.

MAIL TO: Box 57, Cincinnati 14, Ohio

Dept. 418

Name _____

Address _____

City _____ State _____

(Paste on penny postcard, if you wish. Sorry, sample offer good in U.S.A. only.)

Which Twin has the Toni?

(and which had her permanent at the beauty shop?)

Miss Ella Wigren, the lovely Toni twin, says, "No one at the party could tell our permanents apart — can you?" (See answer below.) "My Toni Home Permanent looked soft and lovely from the start! No wonder Lila says after this we'll be Toni twins."

Yes, you can give yourself a lovely TONI Home Permanent for your date tonight

It's easy as rolling your hair up on curlers. No trick at all to give yourself a Toni Home Permanent. And you'll be delighted with results. Deep, wonderful waves — heavenly soft and natural-looking. Easy to manage, too, because your Toni Home Permanent is frizz-free from the start.

Toni works like a charm on any kind of hair – even gray, dyed, bleached or baby-fine hair. And the permanent is guaranteed to last just as long as a $15 permanent—or your money back. Try Toni today. See why every hour of the day another 1000 women use Toni. Just ask for the Toni Home Permanent Kit at your drug, notion or cosmetic counter. Ella, the twin with the Toni Home Permanent, is the one at the left above.

De Luxe Kit with re-usable plastic curlers	Regular Kit with fiber curlers	Refill Kit complete except for curlers
$2.00	$1.25	$1.00

All prices plus tax

Toni

HOME PERMANENT

THE CREME COLD WAVE

call. As she talked, the feeling came over her that someone was listening. Turning, she found Mr. Lund smiling down at her. Hm, pretty fresh. Another girl might have told him off. But Marie is of Russian parentage, with manners a shade more formal than those of the average girl. She cut the conversation short, and stood up.

"Pretty dress you're wearing."

"Thank you very much."

"Are you an actress?"

"I had a small part in the road show of Golden Boy. But mostly I work as a Conover model."

They rejoined the others. Plans were being made for a follow-up meeting next week.

"Will you be here?" asked John.

"Oh, I wouldn't miss it for anything."

"Then I'll come too."

Arthur took her home. "Joe Bassett's a nice guy," he volunteered, "but that John! Works in the Railroad Show and has about eight girls."

So it didn't surprise her when that John failed to show up.

A couple of weeks later they ran into each other at Sardi's. Marie felt self-conscious. Despite her profession, she was no sophisticate. An only child, her life had been sheltered by both parents till her mother's death some five years earlier. This had drawn her still closer to her father, a wise person who left her free to do the work she liked. She'd met plenty of men, but a guy with a fast line still made her self-conscious. John's line was terrific. To confuse her still further, she found him and his mocking blue eyes very attractive. So, in spite of the line, she was glad when he asked, "May I have your phone number?"

He scribbled it down on a matchfolder, but he never called.

smoke got in his eyes . . .

John pulled out the last match, ignited the folder and watched it burn.

He'd meant not to ask for her number, but his tongue had betrayed him. Now he had it, okay, what was he going to do with it? Where could he take her on thirty-five a week—to the zoo?

So he burned it, and that was that. Finished. Forgotten. For the next several months he forgot her frequently, though in order to do so, he had to remember her first. Moreover, he saw the wisdom of his course justified. As the World's Fair followed world peace into oblivion, he landed a much more stylish job as actor and announcer with CBS television. Those were the days when you got into television on the ground floor. "Only," says John, "they didn't tell you you had to mop it." Along with opportunity, they gave you impressive-looking cards and twenty-five a week. At that figure, even the zoo became a luxury.

Having forgotten Marie, he couldn't account for the way his ears pricked up at mention of her name. "I hear Marie Charton's on the road with a show." He couldn't account for the sense of loss that crept over him. But when he suddenly glimpsed her at Walgreen's one day—a Vision with Hatbox—he didn't stop to account for anything, he just walked over.

"I thought you'd gone out of town."

"I thought you took my number."

He smiled. "I lost the matchfolder."

She knew there was more behind it, but she didn't care.

"Are you free now?" he asked.

"Yes. I've just come off a job."

So they walked up Fifth Avenue, talking about astrology, which neither believed in. They bought peanuts from the vendor in Central Park, and fed them to the squirrels. Then they went to the zoo.

(See Part II, June Issue)

THE ADVENTURES OF GLENN LANGAN

(Continued from page 50)

churchgoer. He knew what a son ought to be: diligent, ambitious, a good Boy Scout and a good churchgoer. He felt that Glenn had fulfilled these expectations to the letter and that, by way of reward, he should be allowed certain liberties.

It was with good will, then, that Mr. Langan surrendered the keys to the family Maxwell sedan to his son, Saturday night after Saturday night, during the following year. Until, one midnight, Glenn found his father waiting up for him.

"Son, I'd like a word with you."

There was something wrong. A girl named Irma Wilkins. A nice girl, too, but Glenn's father just didn't like her family.

"I don't want you to see her again," said Father Langan. "You might stay serious about her. You might want to marry her in a couple-three years."

"What if I do?"

"There'll be no one from that family brought into my home."

A few minutes later Glenn left by the front door and started walking.

It was 1932. He sat on a bench in a Denver park, reading meager want ads in the Post by early morning light. "Wanted," one of them said, "asst. stage manager for tent show. Denver to Albuquerque, and return. Apply—"

He found Ted Grant, entrepreneur, thespian, showman, in a walkup room. Ted Grant had a lot of hair at the nape of his neck, an open Barrymore collar, and the brightest Ascot Glenn had ever seen. "What can you do?" Ted asked, speaking around his cigar.

"Anything."

"In that event, you're hired. As a matter of fact, you'll be my partner if you've any money. Have you?"

"No."

"You're my partner anyway. Half the profits."

"I'd rather have a salary till I find out what the profits are."

"Oh ye of little faith," said Ted, registering agony. "All right, a salary. Can you leave tomorrow?"

"I can leave this minute."

"I see," Ted said, registering affectionate joy, "that we shall get on together—pardner."

prestige, but no pay . . .

As a matter of record, he did pay Glenn a salary. For one week. For the next fifty weeks he handed Glenn an occasional half dollar, when pressed. Glenn drove the truck, set up the tent, handled the heavy work, and played half the roles in a skit designed for small town audiences. Ted played six other roles, including the lead.

And it was 1933, and he was now sixteen, and he walked into the parlor of the little house in Berkeley Gardens, saying, "I've come home."

"We're glad," his mother said, simply.

"But only out of desperation." He straightened himself, banging his head against the white chandelier. "I'm an actor," he declared. "It's my life."

Glenn hung around home for awhile, getting a bit of dramatic coaching, holding down odd jobs.

Then he met Dolores Miller. Dolores dropped by his dramatic school one day, to say hello to the gang, and remained to look at—and get to know—Glenn Langan. She was thirty-eight, and her hair would never see its natural color again, but she had the figure of a sylph, the facial bone

—that Always-Fresh look says BARBARA BRITTON co-starring with Randolph Scott in "Gunfighters" a Producers'-Actors' Production

"My beauty-glow cleansing

"In Hollywood, a girl's skin has to be on-the-glow! I'm always cleansing fresh with Woodbury Cold Cream! It's different—so quick 'n' clean-cleansing—make-up whisks away—and skin's fresh-lovely!" Know why, Barbara? Four rich oils in Woodbury—deep cleansing oils float out dirt, powder, rouge. Try it, girls, for that "Always-Fresh Look!"

Dream-lovely Barbara—dining with husband Dr. Eugene Czukor. "After the studio—my Woodbury cream cleansing! So smo-o-thing...my skin blooms afresh!" Reason? Woodbury's rich softening oils! Try Woodbury Cold Cream for cleansing fresh, for softening all-night. Keep skin Woodbury-Wonderful!

—with Woodbury Cold Cream"

WOODBURY CREAMS FOR PROBLEM SKINS

DRY SKIN. First, cleanse with WOODBURY COLD CREAM. Soften with WOODBURY Special DRY SKIN CREAM—rich in lanolin's beautifying benefits. Skin looks fresher, younger!

OILY SKIN. Cleanse with WOODBURY Liquefying CLEANSING CREAM. It melts—takes off surface oils, grime, for clearer skin!

structure of a fallen angel; and Max Factor had the rest under control.

"Come with me," Dolores said one day. "I can get us booking, even if it is 1936. With my figure, and what you've got—you can play straight man to my strip tease, and we'll do the sticks."

When he and Dolores finally parted company, he owned a train ticket to New York, $168 in folding money, a small wardrobe and incredible brass. The $168 he lost in a hectic half hour at craps with the depot porters, while awaiting his train; the ticket he exchanged for a Greyhound bus passage, with $15 left over.

Three dollars and forty-eight cents of this still remained in his pocket when he arrived in New York.

Several months later, Glenn stood in his shorts before the miniature stationary tub in his third-floor-back 47th Street tenement apartment, scrubbed earnestly at his two white shirts, and reflected upon his first months in New York.

In the beginning there had been the job at the Automat, washing dishes for three squares a day. He had lived in Sloan House, on 34th Street then. He had also met Lucien Self, stage manager for Swing Your Lady at the Booth Theater, and Lucien had said, "I'll give you a walk-on. One buck a performance. That's $8 a week. Want it?"

share-the-wealth . . .

On this munificence, Glenn had moved to this flat, which he shared with a well-to-do family of cockroaches.

Swing Your Lady had closed, unlamented; Glenn had had about $10. It had not been enough. There had been the day when Glenn stepped off a penny scale that registered 155 pounds for his long, big-boned body, and had walked three blocks to the Astor and passed completely out in front of it.

Someday, God willing, he would learn the name of the old gentleman who had come along, fended off the police with his walking stick, remarked, "He isn't drunk. He's hungry," and had sent him in a cab to the Polyclinic Hospital.

They'd fed him up there, for a week, all expenses paid by the little old guy; then, on the way home in the subway, he'd struck up a conversation with another chap who, by virtue of also being 6' 4" tall, was the only face on a level with his.

John Collier, Roxy Doorman. The Roxy hired you if you were taller than anybody else in New York, and had manner, and could wear your uniform like a Colonel in the White Russian Army. "Hell," Collier had said. "Maybe there'll be another opening. I'll speak to the big boys."

But there hadn't been . . .

Someone, Glenn realized suddenly, was knocking. He stripped the suds from his hands, and went to the door. Collier stood there, grinning. He had a girl with him.

"Ouch!" Glenn said. He made an undignified retreat to the bedroom, emerging after a moment in a sweater and a pair of pants. This time he looked at the girl. Really looked at her.

"Lucille Weston," Collier said. "Show girl. Dancer. Lately of Long Island. A girl in a million. The point is, lay off, you bum."

Glenn didn't answer. He was too busy taking stock of the only girl he had ever met whom he would like to marry. His eyes, although he did not intend them to, said this to her; and her eyes, in recognition, were ready with his answer . . .

The next day one of the Roxy doormen quit, and, on Collier's recommendation, Glenn got the job. Eighteen bucks a week. "This is the deal," Collier told him, gleefully. "You move in with me in that place I told you about. Thirty-eight a month, uptown, and a kitchen. Okay?"

"You're talking now, boy," Glenn said. But his mind was saying, "She makes $60 a week. You get $18, you big dope."

"You want to move this week?" Collier asked. "We could be settled by Saturday and throw a party."

"All right. You'll bring Lou?"

"Of course."

They were not really finished with the apartment before eleven Saturday night, and no one could come around until the theaters closed anyway. The party was a post-midnight supper, with seemingly limitless quantities of beer, and over-seasoned Welsh rarebit. Neither Glenn nor Lou paid proper attention to their food. They did not look at each other during the party, and when of necessity they spoke, it was in monosyllables, brisk and self-conscious half-sentences.

At three-thirty the beer ran out.

Glenn departed, returning half an hour later with a heavy load. Lou opened the door. They stood facing each other, smiling a little.

Suddenly he put the bottles down on the hall table. He reached out and touched her shoulder, very lightly, with the tips of his fingers.

She stepped forward, deliberately, not smiling any more.

Collier found them there, a minute later. He said, "Hey!"

He had to say it twice . . .

They told him then. There was no alternative. "These things happen," Glenn said helplessly, hating the cliché which was the only thing to say; and, "We tried. It wasn't any use . . ."

"Sure," Collier said. White-faced, he walked past them to the door, closing it very softly after him.

"I'll wait for you, of course," Lou said. He had been offered the juvenile lead in a Denver production of Ah Wilderness, and it had looked like something to do, and he had gone to Denver, and played the juvenile lead, and an agent—fresh from Hollywood—had visited him backstage, saying, "If you'll come to Hollywood I'll do this, and thus, and whatever . . ."

". . . so you see it's the only answer," Glenn had explained to Lucille. "If I'm ever going to amount to anything, be able to support you, I'll have to hit the movies."

"I'll wait," Lou said.

brush-off . . .

He went to Hollywood. He languished two months before the agent's secretary at last said that he was in; then the great man said, "Who? I beg your pardon—who? Well, yes. Denver. Yes. Uh . . . Do you remember when this was? Oh, yes. Uh—if you'll give me a ring one of these days . . ."

So Glenn went to Henry Duffy, then conducting a school of the drama, and talked himself into a scholarship which paid $1 a day plus tuition. There was a bed on the roof. After the first week, Duffy, who was a thrifty man, fired his janitor. With Glenn on the premises, the janitor was no longer needed.

"I'm doing very well," Glenn wrote Lou. "I'm working with the Henry Duffy Players—you must have heard of them—and I've a penthouse atop a theater, and a salary that makes sense. It won't be long now."

"It isn't going to be long at all," she wrote back. "If you're doing that well we needn't wait any longer. Meet the Chief on Tuesday."

She had already left New York by the time his frantic wire was delivered to her address.

"So all right," she said, when she discovered to what extent his pride had misled her. "We can't get married but I'm staying here. Something will turn up."

But nothing did turn up. Lou said one day, "Why don't we get married anyway?"

"On ten bucks?"

"On ten cents," she said. "Haven't you heard preachers are notoriously not very bright about money?"

They had four dollars left when they walked out of the minister's house, husband and wife.

With a little luck, they finally made enough money to take them back to New York. They were living at the Van Cortlandt when Glenn first felt the sharp, knife-like pain in his chest. They called the hotel doctor, who said, "Worst heart I've heard in twenty years. Call his parents. It may not, of course, be fatal."

"Well, this licks me," Glenn said. "I'm in my twenties, and I've got a heart like that. Why try?"

Lou called her father, in Long Island. He sent over a specialist, routed out of a poker game. He listened to Glenn's chest.

"Damn!" said the specialist. "Pleurisy. Best heart in the world. Tape him up. Good as new in a week. Damn!"

But there wasn't any luck left, after that. Nor any money. One day the Van Cortlandt's manager said, "You can go but only with what you've got on your backs. I keep the rest."

"After all," Glenn told Lou next day, "Horatio Alger didn't write us. We don't have to play by the rules all the time. I think we need a boost. Shall we just relax, and call your father, and ask him to send us a check?"

"Okay," she said, laughing suddenly. "I'll take you up on that." And a few minutes later she said, into the phone, "Dad? Look, we're in a spot. Want to help?"

Sometimes, when at last you break the pattern and do something that isn't cricket, you startle your personal Fates into fixing you up. Maybe they are grateful for a good laugh. Anyway . . .

A man with the improbable name of Harry Wagstaff Gribble signed Glenn almost immediately thereafter to do a play called Johnny Belinda, which ran for ten months; he played with Luise Rainer in A Kiss for Cinderella. He was brought to Hollywood by Mitch Leisen, wasted a year at Paramount, went to Twentieth, and played small parts, until something titled Margie eventually happened to him.

And you found him there. You said, all of you, "Well what do you know? Where've they been keeping him?"

Wherefore this story has been written. You wanted to find out what made with Langan. Now you know . . .

Donna Reed . . .

who zoomed to stardom with her wonderful performance in It's a Wonderful Life—and who will soon be seen in M-G-M's Green Dolphin Street.

Donna poses for Modern Screen in one of the summer's prettiest dresses—a mint-fresh green and white striped cotton.

It's two-piece, the top is long-torso, the skirt is pleated—and that adds up to just about every high-fashion point of the season. The fabric is Hope Skillman's smooth satin-striped chambray—and it comes also in red or royal blue stripes. Sizes 9 to 15.

By Junior House $14.95.

Necklace and bracelet by Jordan.

To find out where to buy these fashions, please turn to page 90.

modern screen
fashions

Donna Reed watches sister Heidi pose for fashion photos

Donna's pretty sister is a Conover model. Recently Donna dropped in to watch Heidi model summer cottons; tried on a couple herself. Left, she wears Tommie Austin's money pocket dress, in Bates cotton.

• Heidi models a city-slicker peplum suit that can go anywhere—with cool assurance. Cotton plaid top is red and navy; aqua and brown; or yellow and black. Skirt is navy, brown, or black butcher rayon. 10-18. $10.95.

By Jerry Gilden

WHERE TO BUY
See page 90

• Between takes, Donna tells Heidi what fun she and Jimmy Stewart had making It's A Wonderful Life. Donna looks dreamy in a silvery grey suit that makes you feel ten degrees cooler just to see. It has a saucy little peplum, nicely cut revers and cuffed sleeves, and elegant covered buttons. The fabric is a fine combed cotton, and comes also in aqua, lilac, maize or brown. Sizes are 10-18. By Jerry Gilden $12.95.

• Heidi is all set for the half-dozen poses a model must strike—and hold—in each fashion she wears under the lights. The question is—should this plaid tunic dress be shot front or back? It's two-piece, with that oomphy long torso look, and the buttoned-up back is something. Oh, well, let the photographer figure it out. Red and navy; aqua and brown; or black and yellow cotton. 10-18. By Jerry Gilden $10.95 suddenly it's spring

and Arleen Whelan, starring in Paramount's gay comedy of the same name, tries to choose between two very cute spring numbers. Left: gold smoothie with high neck and lizard-like belt —worn with Betmar's big gingham hat and bag. Right: navy blue darling with a green doodad on the pocket and bright green belt. With it, she wears Madcap's white pique helmet. Both dresses in linen-like butcher rayon, in navy, black, grey, luggage, pastels. 10-16; 9-15.
R. & K. Originals Each, about $15.

WHERE TO BUY
See page 90

"SUMMER MAGIC"... cap sleeves and peplum crisped with white eyelet embroidery. Your Carole King Original of MALLINSON'S Miami spun rayon. Junior sizes 9 to 15. About $11.00. Exclusively at one fine store in your city.

WHERE TO BUY
See page 90

● Arleen Whelan wears an all-round pleated seersucker—for all day cool crispness. Green, blue, brown or red striped rayon and cotton. Also in checks. 10-18. A Tommie Austin Casual — $10.95.

● And what would we do without the shirtdress? Right, Arleen wears chambray with full cuffed sleeves, carries a little straw basket. Red, blue, brown striped cotton. 10-18. A Surrey Classic About $11.

available at FAMOUS-BARR, St. Louis, Mo.
MEYER & FRANK, Portland, Ore.
MAY CO., Baltimore, Md.
ABRAHAM & STRAUS, INC., Brooklyn, N. Y.
HIGBEE CO., Cleveland, Ohio
J. L. HUDSON, Detroit, Mich.
MAY CO., Los Angeles, Calif.
F. & R. LAZARUS CO., Columbus, Ohio
JORDAN MARSH, Boston, Mass.
L. S. DONALDSON CO., Minneapolis, Minn.
BON MARCHE, Seattle, Wash.
JOSKE BROTHERS CO., San Antonio, Texas
WM. H. BLOCK CO., Indianapolis, Ind.
HALE BROS., Northern Calif.
A. POLSKY CO., Akron, Ohio.

BEACH BELLE! You'll feel like a Lauren or a Lana in this smooth twosome designed to keep you curvaceous and oh-so-comfy in the water and out . . . trim boxer shorts with matching bra; small, medium and large. Handsome, roomy beach coat hugs you snugly after that refreshing dip, sizes 12 to 18. In blue or red stripes on white, solid colors and large print. Shorts and bra about $3.00. Beach coat about $6.00.

for the store nearest you, write

Boreva SPORTSWEAR COMPANY · 318 West Adams · Chicago 6

suddenly it's spring

. . . and Paramount's Arleen Whelan decides to take her skye terrier, Pic, along on her tea date. Must be something special, from the looks of her pretty peplum suit with the square neck and festive bows. It's a heavenly slate grey chambray with raspberry satin stripes, and the buttons are smoky grey pearl. Also brown with aqua stripes, or blue with lemon, in Dumari's cotton. 12-20.
By McKettrick Classics. About $13.

WHERE TO BUY
See page 90

LETTER FROM THE FASHION EDITOR

Dear You:

We're feeling like strawberries and cream and big shady hats, and the cool, awninged feeling you get in soda fountains, and the creak of a porch swing, and the small pleasurable thrill of hearing people say: "It's going to be a scorcher."

In short, we feel like summer. We always do, the minute we take off our Easter bonnet—even if we haven't so much as spied a robin.

Because we've observed that once spring comes, warm weather is just a matter of waking up suddenly one morning and thinking—"wish I had something cool to wear!"

So, naturally, we're preparing you ahead of time for the hot spell, with the most spellbinding fashions we can find. (We hope that you don't need to be reminded that the prices have our usual tender regard for your budget!)

Isn't cotton wonderful? What makes you feel so pretty and so feminine? What's crisper? What's cooler? What can you dunk so blithely in suds—and press so quickly back to fragrant freshness? Can't help it—love that cotton!

Love the cottons we've selected for you in this issue, too. We drooled over the terrific striped number Donna Reed wears on the color picture—and so did everyone else who saw it, including the photographer—and he's hard to impress. Then those slick little suits Donna and her sister Heidi wear on pages 74 and 75! They're our idea of what you'd like to wear when the thermometer zooms.

And that's only the beginning! Starting on page 76, Arleen Whelan models for you a terrific little navy linen-like number—plus a wonderful checked hat and bag, plus—well, see for yourself.

And oh, yes, we want to thank you again for your letters—we love 'em. But here's a little thing: we'd appreciate it if you wouldn't enclose actual cash (might get lost)—and if you wouldn't order our fashions C.O.D. That C.O.D. stuff is too complicated for us to handle. But if you write us for the name of a store in or near your city—either we or the designer will write you pronto and tell you where you can actually try on the fashion. Or you can order by mail, enclosing check or money order, from one of the stores listed as featuring the fashion. OK? And thanks for remembering.

Yours for a well dressed summer,
Connie Bartel,

DD
DIAMONDS ARE TRUMPS . . .
in Doris Dodson's beguiling Zephyr Gingham tunic dress, "Sophisticated Summer." You'll love the smart saw tooth edging and beautifully colored checks, designed exclusively for Doris Dodson. Pink and grey, yellow and grey or blue and grey. Sizes 9 to 15. About $11.00.
Doris Dodson
JUNIOR ORIGINALS
Write for name of your local shop... Doris Dodson, St. Louis 1, Missouri

2-timing Accessories

SCARVES can make a plain dress and hat look very sophisticated-lady, if wound 'round head, knotted at throat Glen fashion hat, Glentex silk scarf, $3.

. . . or SCARVES can make a long skirt an evening dress—if draped as a bodice, pinned with jewels. Glentex rayon crepe 36" scarf comes in all colors, $2.

BELTS can turn your favorite basic black dress into a vogue-y looking day costume, if decked with a pair of gold-finished safety pins by Coro, $1 each.

. . . or BELTS can be romantic on dates, pierced with a pretty posy, real or fake. Criterion's plastic calf belt comes in navy, red and many other colors, $3.50.

GLOVES can be an immaculate accent on dark day or office clothes, if snowy white and sparkling fresh. Arisette's shell-stitched cotton gloves, $1.75.

. . . or GLOVES can be dressed up and festive if pinned at the edge with a jewel. Coro's gold-finished sun-burst with fake amethyst rhinestones, ruby $2.

WHERE TO BUY
see page 90

BY MAXINE FIRESTONE

Modern Screen shops for you

Pert and perky twin gold or silver-finished lapel pins set with multi-color stones. Designed by Alpha Craft. You can get the pair for $2, plus tax. At Saks-34th, N.Y.C.

The look men like—a soft shoulder peeking from a simple Vicki Lynn cotton blouse. Red, blue, green, black dots, sizes 9-15. At Bamberger's Basement, Newark, N. J. $3.

Look what Ben-Hur has done—put a jeweled turtle on the end of a gold-plated bobby pin. What won't they dream up for us next! About $1 each, plus tax. At Macy's, N.Y.C.

BESTFORM

BESTFORM ~ GIRDLES . . . BRAS . . . ALL-IN-ONES

PUT Spring IN YOUR STEP, FASHION ON YOUR FEET WITH

Slick as a whistle . . . and just as sharp . . . are comfortable Kickerinos, beautifully styled, beautifully made in red, brown, white, black, blue or green soft foot-yielding leathers.

Kickerinos

A GREAT NAME IN CASUAL FOOTWEAR

At better stores everywhere . . . for one nearest you, write —

MARILYN SHOE CO. MILWAUKEE 5, WISCONSIN

Ladies, accept this challenge

Dry Clean at Home

YOUR LOVELY DRESSES . . .

Blouses • Sweaters
Skirts • Slacks • Rugs
Upholstery • Slip Covers
. . . everything dry cleanable!

Expert Results or DOUBLE YOUR MONEY BACK!

Like millions of other homemakers, you're sure to like this safe, modern way to save time, work and money by dry cleaning at home. Use it according to directions—if not completely satisfied, return the unused portion to Renuzit Home Products Company, Phila. 3, Pa., and receive double the purchase price.

1 gal. . . 79¢ 2 gal. . . $1.55
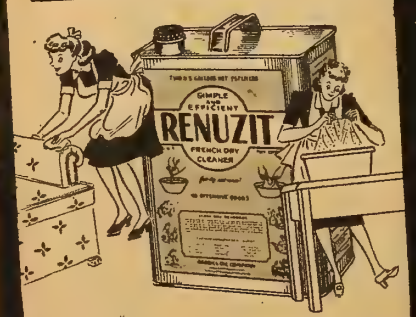
Slightly Higher West of Rocky Mts.



Everything Comes Clean With

RENUZIT

FRENCH DRY CLEANER

For Hard to Remove Spots!

NEW! RENUZIT SPOT AND STAIN REMOVER

Removes Fruit, Chocolate, Lipstick, Grease and almost all other oil and water soluble spots!

Modern Screen shops for you

BY MAXINE FIRESTONE

Gift for Mother's Day. Handmade felt spectacle case. All pastel colors. $1 for donkeys, the padded southern mammy $2. Order from Clairmont-Nichol, 515 Madison Ave., N.Y.C.

Fun afoot with these Kickerinos wonderful red wedgies. Wear them with everything! White or natural leather too. About $7. Marshall Field's Budget Floor, Chicago, Ill.

Another gift for Mother. Gold-finished lighter with red, green, or blue jeweled ladybug on top. $3.60, tax included. Order at Nilmelior, 15 E. 52nd St. N.Y.C.

CUTE BIKE PIN
Gold finish, studded with multi-color stones; 2½ inches. Pin only $2.40. Pin and earrings $3.60 postpaid including tax. No C.O.D.'s.
Mastercraft Products
27 Haymarket Sq.
Boston, Mass.

florida fashions

BRINGS FLORIDA GLAMOUR TO YOU

WITH THE FOUR-TIER

5-Yard S-W-I-N-G Skirt

SIZES 9 TO 15

Big, full, 4-tier skirt—five full yards at the hem—to swirl when you walk—to make your waist look pert and tiny—to glamourize your Junior figure. Whirligirl comes in a Florida floral cotton, colorfast for washing!

SEND NO MONEY, • WE WILL MAIL C. O. D.
Full satisfaction or money back

florida fashions
SANFORD 94 FLORIDA

Please send C.O.D. ..... "Whirligirls" at $3.98 (2 for $7.75) plus postage. I may return purchase within ten days for full refund if not satisfied. (If you enclose purchase price, add 20c for postage—same refund privilege.)

Circle color: ROSE BLUE
Circle size: 9 11 13 15

Name .....
Address ..... Zone.....
City & State .....

THE CHURCH VS. SELZNICK

(Continued from page 27)

a publication of the Catholic archdiocese of Los Angeles. Not long after that, Archbishop Cantwell of Los Angeles agreed that no Catholic could see Duel with a clear conscience until it had been given a rating by the Legion of Decency.

Selznick was stunned. He had worked closely with the Production Code Administration and the Motion Picture Association of America throughout the filming, and his picture had received the purity seal from Joseph Breen—a devout Catholic and former secretary to the president of Fordham University—without question. Now, suddenly, it was in ill-repute. Catholic societies and sodalities were campaigning against it. There developed overnight a completely false impression that the film had actually been banned.

Is the Church then to blame for this terrific furore? Emphatically no. She is the guardian of the morals of her people. Then is David Selznick to blame? Again an emphatic no. His job is to provide entertainment for the world, under the supposedly adequate supervision of the Production Code Administration. Both the Church and Selznick have done their jobs well. The trouble is that there are too many censors, and the right hand apparently does not know what the left is doing.

A way must be found to reconcile the Legion of Decency and all other large censorship groups with the Production Code Administration, so that they are able to work together rather than against each other. If this were accomplished, a producer—having once achieved a purity seal—could consider his work finished and well-done. He could put his heart and soul into the next job at hand. If such a merger is not accomplished, producers will grow increasingly fearful of investing large sums of money and months of labor in their films, having no guarantee that some powerful group outside the industry won't condemn the production. Film fare will become ever more watered, more childish in scope. The movies as a real medium for artistic expression will no longer exist. And the people in the movie industry won't be the only ones to suffer. You and I will suffer. The Church—whose cause has been furthered by such beautiful films as The Bells of St. Mary's, The Song of Bernadette, and many others—will suffer.

We, who have faith in the future of motion pictures, plead for a closer understanding between the Church and the industry, both of which exist only to serve the people. We are raising our voices in praise of a centralization of authority among movie censorship boards. We would like to see this accomplished soon—so that Duel in the Sun may be the last duel between the movies and the Church.

JUNE ISSUE

J is for June is for June. That's a riddle, son—but we're not going to make you wait a whole month for the happy solution. We're passing the good word along right now that the June issue of MODERN SCREEN will be the one with the prettiest cover, the one with pretty June Haver on it. On your newsstand May 13th.

smart and practical... summer frocks
with washable
Costumakers
Trade Mark
"buttons that more than buttons"
And it's so thrifty, too, to make your summer outfits in tubbable fabrics, with wonderfully washable Costumakers giving that "custom-made" look! Choose from the large selection of Costumakers at your favorite chain store—at only 10c and 25c a card.
FREE: New fashion ideas! Write for "Stretch Your Fashion Dollar With Costumakers."
LOOK FOR THESE CARDS AT YOUR FAVORITE STORE
LIDZ BROTHERS, INC.
Dept. W 1, 250 West 36th Street, New York 18

For happy feet this Spring and Summer, there's nothing quite like these fine Trimfit mercerized cotton ribbed anklets for all your activities. Wear them straight up or cuffed. Get them in colors to match every outfit!

About 59c
Others 35c to $1.00

Trimfit SOX

At good stores everywhere. For one nearest you, write:
TRIMFIT, EMPIRE STATE BUILDING, NEW YORK 1, N. Y.

There's new beauty in Bias-Cup, the bra whose patented feature holds your breasts gently but firmly in place... prevents shoulder straps from slipping. In individualized cup depths at better stores.

Write for NEW Beauty Hint Booklet
Made by MODEL BRASSIERES
DEPT. 3D 358 Fifth Ave., New York 1
U. S. PAT. NO. 2267595

It's the Fit in the Cup that Counts

For a Romantic Summer be

SEE-WORTHY

Definitely made to turn heads and influence Cupid. For smooth figure-witchery, ask for Sea Nymph. At your favorite shop, in a wide variety of flattering styles and colors.

LASTEX* woven by FAB-TEX

Sea Nymph*

swim suits by jordan

JORDAN MANUFACTURING CORP.
1410 Broadway, New York 18, N. Y.

Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

HOW DOES SHE DO IT?

How does she do it—that terrific looking girl down the street, or at the desk next to yours at the office, or in your home-room at school?

How does she manage to look always wonderfully dressed—morning, noon and night—at work or at play—on the dance floor, the skating pond, or just doing the marketing for her mother?

Even when you unexpectedly ring her bell, on, say, a Saturday morning—does she turn up in a nobody'll-see get-up that looks as though it were thrown at her? Not a chance. She comes to the door in the slickest of slacks—or a cute housecoat—or maybe a darling sweater and skirt.

Yet you absolutely know that her salary or allowance isn't one penny more than yours—if as much. What's her secret?

Well, it's an open secret, thank goodness. Anybody can learn it.

Our best dressed girl friend simply knows that anyone can look terrif on even a handful of cash—by being a smart shopper. And that means really smart—and careful. After all, looking like whistle-bait brings so much fun in the way of dates and friends and a generally wonderful life—that you can't expect to have it by merely wishing for it. You've got to earn it.

But earning it is a cinch and it has absolutely nothing to do with how much money you have to spend.

First of all, the thing to do is be very cagey about every purchase you make—right down to the merest accessory. In buying clothes, you're striving for a record of all hits, and no errors. But before a dress, or a suit, or a hat, qualifies to be a real hit, it has to meet a lot of tests.

First, does it do something for you? Does it show up your best features, and tone down your not-so-goods? Suppose dropped shoulders are all the rage. If they make you look droopy, what good are they to you? Suppose full skirts are the latest gasp? If they make you look hefty—the heck with them! In other words, never buy a single thing that doesn't more or less hint that someone ought to photograph you immediately.

Next, once you're sure the dress, or whatever, is more than becoming—consider how it fits into the rest of your wardrobe. All right, it's emerald green—and you look like a dream in it. But your coat is blue plaid, and besides you've just bought that red bag and belt. What are you going to wear emerald green with?

Point is—no dress, or suit, or hat is worth a red cent, regardless of how it looks on you—if you can't wear it with at least two things you already have in your closet. Buying anything that doesn't meet these requirements add up to a big error—the kind of error that will make you complain that you have a closet full of clothes, and not a thing to wear!

Where were we? Ah, yes, fit. Now suppose that you've latched on to something that meets our first two tests—becomingness, and happy marriage with the clothes you already have. Next question is, does it fit? And we mean really fit. How are the shoulders? Are the seams where they should be—right at the edge of your own shoulders? What about the collar? Is it too loose? Or does it lie flat to the back of your neck—where it belongs. Take a look at the back view. How's the distance from collar to waist line? Does it bulge out or does it lie smooth, and still give you room to move your arms? Does the waistline coincide with your waistline?

Unless the fit fits all these musts—pass it up. The best looking dress is a flop if it's too big, too tight, and buying it is another fatal error—

And those three tests are the answer to "how does she do it"—when a girl on a budget always looks like a magazine cover.

—Connie Bar

At Last... Greggies TRADE-MARK Trouble-Free Casuals only $3*

also in any two-color combination of black, blue, red, yellow, natural, green and multi—About $3

You can walk, jitterbug, cycle, even play tennis in Greggies and be sure they won't come apart, fray, sag or wobble. The reason? Greggies are built like real shoes! The gay, brilliant fabric tops are not just glued but stitch-welded to the famous, cool, light, airy Rub-R-Rope soles. The result? Greggies hug the feet, float you through the hottest days, and no plop-plop from heels that flop-flop! Greggies come in dozens of glamorous styles and colors to match every costume—and the price is so low—only $3—so you can buy two pairs for the average price of one.

Available at your favorite store.

also in black, blue, red, yellow, green and multi—About $3 also in black, blue, yellow, natural, green and multi—About $3

Never before Greggies All-Leather Loafers only $5*

In rich, soft suede or fine grain genuine leather—on the famous Rub-R-Rope Sole. With full leather heels. Also in black, beige, red, and blue.

also in blue, red, yellow, natural, green and multi—About $3

©1947, THE GREGG COMPANIES, INC., ATLANTIC CITY, NEW JERSEY

*APPROXIMATE PRICE

INFORMATION DESK

by Beverly Linet

Everyone's interested in the real AL JOLSON since the release of The Jolson Story, so here's some data about him. He was born Asa Yoelson in St. Petersburg, Russia, on May 26, 1886. Stage career began in a bit role in a N.Y. show. Then went into vaudeville and minstrel shows before crashing the Broadway big-time. Early shows included Honeymoon Express, Bombo, Sinbad, and Big Boy. Made screen debut in 1927 in The Jazz Singer. Other pics include The Singing Fool, Mammy, Hallelujah, I'm a Bum, Wonder Bar, Rose of Washington Square. He married Ruby Keeler (Julie Benson in The Jolson Story) in 1928. They were divorced eight years ago. He's married to Erle Galbraithe now. Ruby remarried John Lowe and retired. Al's busy making records, has no movie plans. Yes, he has recorded the beautiful "Anniversary Song," from the pic. He did the singing for Larry Parks, of course, and you can write to him at Columbia Pictures.

JAYNE MEADOWS, who attracted your attention as Sylvia Burton in Undercurrent, was born in China on Sept. 27, 1922, of American parentage. She is 5'6", weighs 130 lbs., and has black eyes and titian hair. Was a model before being discovered for films. Write to her at M-G-M. She has no fan club, and is currently being seen as a psycopathic girl in Lady in the Lake. Next pic: Song of the Thin Man.

BRUCE BENNETT was formerly known by his real name of Herman Brix when he appeared in several Tarzan pics. He was born in Columbia, Wis., on May 17. Is 6'2" tall, and weighs 192 lbs. Is married to Jeanne Cannon, but has no children. Write to him at Warners, Burbank. He has no fan club. You'll be seeing him soon in Nora Prentiss and Dark Passage.

Leonard Joseph, N.Y.: It's The Same Old Dream, I Believe, Brooklyn Bridge, Whose Baby Are You, Bach Invention, The Song Got to Come from The Heart, Time After Time, Bell Song from Lakme, Selections from Don Giovanni are the songs from It Happened In Brooklyn. (Clip for future reference.) Billy Roy was Leo, Bobby Long played Johnny in the picture.

Jackie O., Queens: J'Aime Ta Ponné was the name of that French song in the cafe scene of The Razor's Edge. It was revised by Edmund Goulding, had American words added by Mack Gordon, and is being published under the title of Mam'selle, by Leo Feist, Inc. Recordings in English should be out soon, but the French words are unavailable.

Cynthia Dodd, Boston: If you wish the music from Humoresque, send me a self-addressed, stamped envelope, and I'll send the score. Too lengthy to print. Same thing goes for the entire list of Academy Award Winners from 1928. Anyone else interested in either, do the same.

F. J., Omaha: Your favorite, Gertrude Niessen, has no pic plans, but has been busy wowing them at B'way's newest night-spot, Vanity Fair, together with Jan Murray and Boyd Raeburn. Val Valentinoff has changed his name to Paul Valentine, and will soon be seen in Out of the Past. This picture is also the next for Kirk Douglas and Richard Webb. All can be reached at RKO.

Joe Walker, Pa.: Lorraine Rossi, 47 W. 87 Street, N. Y., now has the Larry Parks Club. There are two for Burt Lancaster: Jo Ann Julian, 1233 E. 21 Avenue, Columbus, Ohio, and Dwayne Armsted, Madelia, Minn., are in charge. Muriel Scott, Star Rt. Box 98, Detroit Lakes, Minn., has a club for Joseph Cotten, and Beverly Montabano, 2691 Sacramento Street, San Francisco, Calif., heads one for James Mason.

The above is just a wee sample of the info I have stored away for you. So keep sending those questions with a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Beverly Linet, Information Desk, MODERN SCREEN, 149 Madison Avenue, New York 16, N. Y. Okeh?

SPECIAL OFFER

SUPER-STAR INFORMATION CHART — 1946-'47 (10c)—A new better-than-ever edition of the chart that's a 32-page pocket encyclopedia of exclusive, fascinating data on the private lives, wives, hobbies, used-to-be jobs, latest pics of all your favorite stars. 100 additional names never before listed! Please send 10c in coin to Service Dept., Modern Screen, 149 Madison Avenue, New York 16, N. Y.

HOW TO JOIN A FAN CLUB (10c)—Brand new re-edited chart, listing over 100 of the best clubs for Frankie, Van, Allyson, Lawford, Wilde, Ladd, Madison, Glenn Ford, Gene Autry, Burt Lancaster, etc. Learn about the MODERN SCREEN Fan Club Assn. Also, how to write good fan letters. Please send 10c in coin to Service Dept., Modern Screen, 149 Madison Avenue, New York 16, N. Y.

"It's my key to fingertips that flatter"

Dura-Gloss Fuchsia fingertips add flashing brilliance to Electric Blue crepe

It's color range for costume change

"Smart fingertips," says lovely Lisa Prokoff. "are color-keyed to complement the occasion, one's frock, one's mood. To make this brilliant harmony easy, I've several of the 18 fashion-right Dura-Gloss Nail Polish shades on my dressing table." Whisking off one color and brushing on exciting, harmonizing Dura-Gloss takes little time, brings you the lilting fascination of fingertips always in tune... 10¢ plus tax

NEW! Dura-Gloss Lipstick in five shades to match and blend with Dura-Gloss Nail Polish... 39¢ plus tax

Eighteen fashion-right shades

It's by DURA·GLOSS

©1947, LORR LAB., PATERSON, N. J., FOUNDED BY E. T. REYNOLDS

HOPALONG HOPE—By Kirtley Baskette

(Continued from page 34)

hours out of every twenty-four at home, and most of that in the hay, restoring his battered tissues. The reason—Bob Hope is Hollywood's Public Personage Number One, the busiest star in the business. Between movies, radio, records, his column, and bundles of benefits, he spins like a top. The guy has practically no home life at all.

That old Bible scholar, Bing Crosby, handed Bob a framed Good Book quotation the other day that he'd dug out of the Chapter of Matthew: "For where two or three are gathered together in My name there am I in the midst of them."

"That's you, Bob," said Bing. Bob hung it in his dressing room. "Well, at least," he sighed, "the Bible says I'm on the beam."

spell it backwards . . .

So are Bob's family—right along with Bob. They couldn't help it, so mixed up is Hope's public life with his home life. Both Tony, 7, and Linda, 6, are hep to-the-minute on their old man's career. He breezes down for breakfast in the morning.

"Hi Trebor!" Trebor is Robert spelled backwards. "Dad" is still "dad"—so is "Bob"—so they're no go.

"Hi Adnil! Hi Ynot!" Usually, Bob's had about five hours sleep. Something's kept him up until midnight—a benefit rehearsal, a movie conference, writing a script, editing jokes. If it's the morning after his regular program, Adnil and Ynot take Trebor apart. If a joke died they remind him; if he fluffed, they lecture him severely. If Miriam is out of Irium they're appalled. They like his "conscience" routine especially. You know, where Bob says something like, "I love my sponsor," and then, through a filter-mike, his "conscience" voice echoes:

"Yeah—then why do you steal his money?" The kids love that.

"Do the conscience next week again, Trebor."

"Okay," promises Dad Hope. Because that's an order. Bob Hope has two bosses on his program—his sponsor and his kids.

He whizzed off once to do a broadcast in San Diego. Linda yelled down from the nursery window, "Can I go?"

"No," said Bob. "But if you and Tony are nice, you can listen in and maybe I'll say 'Good-night, Tony and Good-night, Linda' at the end of the show."

That sounded swell to Linda; but she wasn't taking any chances. "Put it in the script," she said.

Another time Bob and Dolores had the kids up at Pebble Beach for a few days of golf. Bob was in the dining room of the Lodge one morning having breakfast with his foursome. Linda bounced in soon with her nursemaid, spied Bob.

"Hi, Bob Hope!" she caroled. Bob's golf partners roared along with the other diners.

That kidding stuff was okay at home, he reminded Linda later, but when he was with other grown-ups, in a public place, there should be some respect, some family dignity. It should be "Hello, Daddy," not "Hi, Bob Hope."

Linda pouted. "Aw," she sighed, "you just want to get all the laughs!"

Actually, Bob's loaded with sentiment. Most funny guys are. Underneath Hope's breezy, funny front, he's got a heart soft as a ripe strawberry.

An incident that hit Bob hardest of all his war tour experiences happened in a hospital on Espiritu Santo in the New Hebrides. In one ward a young kid, badly wounded, was getting a blood transfusion as he passed. Bob stopped, grinned down at the weak, wan face.

"Giving you the old raspberry, hey?" he cracked.

"Yeah," whispered the soldier, "and it feels mighty good." Then he smiled straight up into Bob's eyes. Bob couldn't forget that smile. He still can't. An hour later, he was having chow at the officers' table. A medic came in and sat down silently, didn't touch his plate. He'd escorted Bob through the hospital. Bob asked what was the matter.

"Remember that kid you chatted with, the one getting the transfusion?" Bob nodded. He felt a catch at his throat.

"He just died." Bob has never forgotten that crack of his and the kid's smile. He knows sometimes it's not so funny being a funny man.

Around this last Christmas time, Bob emceed the annual all-star Elgin radio show in Hollywood. It ran two hours and Bob had to keep up laugh chatter all the time. He drew on all his old sure-fire gags, among them the alcoholic jokes on his friend, W. C. Fields, that Bill himself had always chuckled over. Bob's first Hollywood job was with Bill in The Big Broadcast of 1938. Every time he'd used a Fields likker gag on his show Bill had always sent him a funny message the next day. So this time he brought in a couple of jokes ribbing the same subject: "I passed W. C. Fields on the Boulevard coming down here today. I waved at him."

"What did Bill do?"

"He weaved back."

After the broadcast Bob Hope learned a shocking bit of news. A few hours before, W. C. Fields had made his last exit. Bob felt awful. Never in the world would he have made a joke on Bill at that point if he'd known. Although up above, he knew, Bill's spirit was probably chuckling at that. A few days later Bob received a record album from W. C. Fields' secretary. A note explained: "Before he died, Bill picked out the close friends he wanted to have this. I found your name on the list." It was a recording of Bill's famous and very funny Lecture on Temperance!

Bob's not a fake, calculating comic; he's really a funny guy, all the time. That's why he gets a kick out of real life jokes on himself. He knows, as all great comics do, that fun is only a hair's breadth away from tragedy. That nothing's really funnier than a celebrity getting a kick in the pants. And something funny's always happening to Hope, levelling his dignity.

One of his favorite stories on himself is a crack his daughter, Linda, made. Driving with Bob, Linda heard her dad bawl out motorists who blocked his path. "Just look at that jerk! Why doesn't he learn how to drive? Now look at the idiot!" Bob mumbled constantly.

One day, Linda was riding with Dolores. They rolled along quietly and without any fuss. Pretty soon Linda asked, "Mommy, where are all the idiots today?"

"You only see them when your daddy's driving," explained Mrs. Hope.

Bob's convinced he's got a funny looking puss and isn't touchy about it. One time in a Chicago night club, Chez Paree, Bob was sitting at a table when a middle-aged woman came over, grabbed him by the chin, swivelled his profile around and yelled to her girl friend across the room, "See, Julie—this is it. Ain't it funny?"

Actually, Hope's a good looking guy—a six footer with all his hair, teeth, even his figure. But he takes care of himself. Golf is Bob's conditioner and favorite sport.

Johnny Weissmuller, Jimmy McLarnin and Vic Hunter—a favorite foursome of Bob's—were touring the Lakeside course with him one day when they spied a couple of little men in aprons chasing them from hole to hole. They caught up at the thirteenth green. Bob was putting. "Mister Hope," panted one, "please—the measurements." One man whipped out a tape measure, the other a pencil and pad.

"Pardon me, fellows," apologized Bob, resting his putter while the Paramount wardrobe tailors measured him for a costume. Then he knocked in a 30-foot putt, and went on with the game.

Bob likes to gamble at golf. He's not much at horse-racing, but he's superstitious and can't resist hunches. The other day, Bob spotted a horse running at Santa Anita named "Lakeside Hope." Lakeside is his golf club; Hope's his name. "That's for me!" yelped Bob. He placed a bet, across the board, 5-5-and-5. His horse-wise friends on the set of Road to Rio including Bing Crosby, told him he was out of his mind. "Even my dogs can beat him running backwards," scoffed Bing. But Bob wouldn't be touted off. Lakeside Hope came in the winner and paid $84 on a $2 ticket!

the family comes first . . .

Bob isn't a particularly self-indulgent guy. But nothing's too good for his family. The Hopes don't live in royal style, but they live well. Bob and Dolores and all the little Hopes, with their cook, maid, nurse and Great Dane, "Red Son," live in Toluca Lake.

Bob has an office over the garage where he huddles with Brother Jack, his personal business man, his radio writers, and all sorts of slaveys connected with Hope Enterprises, even when he thinks he's having some home life. That's where, half the time, his famous "check, mark and circle" triple-tested jokes are determined, where Bob edits what his six gag men think is funny and puts his radio show together.

Inside the house, his dream room is a circular chamber right off the bedroom where he's got the walls covered with autographed pictures—from Eisenhower, FDR, Churchill, MacArthur, Ernie Pyle—every hero he rubbed up against in his wonderful war tours. He's got closets

(Continued on page 91)

IT SHOULDN'T HAPPEN TO A DOG!

We'd look awfully silly throwing $5 checks to the dogs. (What piggy bank would cash 'em?) But we've got a bright, shiny, new check for everyone who sends us an "I Saw It Happen" anecdote that we can use. Take a peek at the "Happen" boxes printed in this issue, so you'll get the style down pat. Then, write out as plainly as you can your true experience in meeting up with a movie star. It can be amusing or dramatic—but it must be short! Send your story to the "I Saw It Happen" Editor, MODERN SCREEN, 149 Madison Avenue, New York 16, N. Y. And if you win that $5—you can really put on the dog!

Smart girls say... "McKay Lingerie!"

No matter what the occasion, there's a cleverly styled McKay undie to pamper your figure . . . without bulging . . . without binding.

Each is fashioned of fine, rinsable rayon . . . each is priced to accommodate the most modest budget. Wear them . . . compare them.

Featured by S. S. Kresge & Co., S. H. Kress Co., and Sears Roebuck Co.

Next time, say "McKay Lingerie"

McK McKay LINGERIE

Empire State Bldg. New York

WHERE YOU CAN BUY MODERN SCREEN FASHIONS

Green and white striped long torso dress with pleated skirt worn by Donna Reed (Page 73)

Baltimore, Md.—Stewart's
Brooklyn, N. Y.—Abraham & Straus
Los Angeles, Calif.—The May Co.
New York, N. Y.—Bloomingdale's

Jewelry worn by Donna Reed (Page 73)

Jordan necklace and bracelet, $1 per set

Boston, Mass.—Jordan Marsh
Brooklyn, N. Y.—Abraham & Straus
Chicago, Ill.—The Fair
New York, N. Y.—Bloomingdale's

"DONNA REED WATCHES SISTER HEIDI POSE FOR FASHION PHOTOS"

Plaid and dark suit worn by Heidi (Page 74)

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Abraham & Straus
Chicago, Ill.—Carson, Pirie Scott & Co.
Los Angeles, Calif.—The May Co.
Washington, D. C.—Brooks, Inc.

Silver grey peplum suit worn by Donna Reed (Page 75)

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Abraham & Straus
Buffalo, N. Y.—The Wm. Hengerer Co.
Chicago, Ill.—Carson, Pirie Scott & Co.
Los Angeles, Calif.—The May Co.
San Antonio, Texas—The Vogue, Inc.
Washington, D. C.—Brooks, Inc.

Plaid tunic dress worn by Heidi (Page 75)

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Abraham & Straus
Chicago, Ill.—Carson, Pirie Scott & Co.
Houston, Texas—Sakowitz Bros.
Los Angeles, Calif.—The May Co.
San Antonio, Texas—The Vogue, Inc.
Washington, D. C.—Brooks, Inc.

"SUDDENLY IT'S SPRING"

Both dresses, navy blue with green belt and gold with lizard-like belt worn by Arleen Whelan (Page 76)

Atlanta, Ga.—Davison, Paxon Co.
Boston, Mass.—Chandler & Co.
Cleveland, Ohio—The Halle Bros. Co.
Los Angeles, Calif.—The May Co.
Pittsburgh, Pa.—Joseph Horne & Co.
St. Louis, Mo.—Famous Barr & Co.
Washington, D. C.—Woodward & Lothrop

White pique helmet worn with navy blue dress (Page 76)

Madcaps helmet, $4

Boston, Mass.—R. H. White's
Erooklyn, N. Y.—Abraham & Straus
New York, N. Y.—Bloomingdale's

Pleated seersucker dress worn by Arleen Whelan (Page 78)

Dallas, Texas—Sanger Bros.
New York, N. Y.—Arnold Constable

Chambray shirtwaist dress worn by Arleen Whelan (Page 78)

Chicago, Ill.—Carson, Pirie Scott & Co.
Minneapolis, Minn.—Harold's
New York, N. Y.—John Wanamaker

Little straw basket carried by Arleen Whelan (Page 78)

Basket shoulder-bag by Beltmodes, $3

New York, N. Y.—Gimbels

Striped peplum suit worn by Arleen Whelan (Page 80)

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Abraham & Straus
Los Angeles, Calif.—Bullock's
Philadelphia, Pa.—Strawbridge & Clothier
New York, N. Y.—Bloomingdale's

"2-TIMING ACCESSORIES" (Page 82)

White gloves, both scarves, belt, safety pin and sunburst pin all at these stores:

Boston, Mass.—R. H. White's
Brooklyn, N. Y.—Abraham & Straus
Cleveland, Ohio—The Higbee Co.
Detroit, Mich.—Crowley Milner Co.
Nashville, Tenn.—Harvey's
New York, N. Y.—Saks-34th
Philadelphia, Pa.—Lit Brothers
Washington, D. C.—The Hecht Co.

If no store in your city is listed write: Fashion Editor, Modern Screen, 149 Madison Ave., New York 16, N. Y.

(Continued from page 89)

there, too, stuffed to the bursting point with souvenirs from all over—mostly things grateful GIs shoved into his hands around the world's battle stations. He has a wonderful collection of Nazi trophies: Hitler's personal stationery, a Nazi flag, gold draperies from Adolf's Chancellery hideout, a Gestapo ring of Himmler's—all trophies of his on-the-spot visit to beaten Berlin. That's just one collection. It's matched by others from every other battle area.

Bob's always planning on getting everything arranged, building a trophy room to display them all properly, but he probably never will. He's a creature of habit. Bob still has the same dressing room he started with at Paramount. They pester Bob all the time to give him a fancy, glamorous new salon like Bing has, but he shakes his head. "I'm at home here," he says.

To Bob, the main room in his house will always be the nursery. The most important meal is breakfast with Tony and Linda. He nodded yes to all the work requests around last Christmas week, but Christmas Day he took off. "I've got to see the 'takes' on the kids' faces," he explained. It's that way with most holidays for Hope. He's a sucker for 'em—and they have to be at home. Thanksgiving, Christmas and such, Bob himself carves the turkey for all the Hope relations from nearby El Segundo.

Bob doesn't get to see his sidekick, Bing Crosby, much away from the studio, except on the golf course. But since he and Bing turned producer tycoons they see each other often during business hours.

For The Road To Rio, which Bing and Bob have just finished, Hope Enterprises & Crosby, Inc., merged. Strictly for laughs, both Bing and Bob have seized on this new partnership to razz each other silly. They keep time clocks on each other and have executive conferences constantly.

it's only money . . .

Bing, for instance, wanted to go up to Pebble Beach while Road to Rio was shooting, for a golf tournament. Bob called a corporation meeting. He had it all figured out that it cost Hope Enterprises and Crosby, Inc., $10,000 a day to shoot the picture. Bing asked for three days off.

"That's thirty thousand dollars," cried Bob. "I vote 'No'!"

"What's money," argued Bing, "compared to my artistic happiness? I vote 'Yes'!"

They were deadlocked until the Paramount representative made the big kids compromise. Bing got a day-and-a-half off for his golf. That was $15,000. Bob decided to come along, too. So it added up to $30,000 after all! But, after all, what is money?

Now that Road to Rio is in the can, Hopalong Hope is going to take himself a two-months rest with the kids at his hideaway Palm Springs retreat where there's no telephone. After that, he sails on a boat to Rio and then to the South of France. It's all arranged. "I am going to do an el foldo in a deck chair," Bob assured me with his hand on a Bible, "and spend all my days hissing shuffle-board players!"

I'll bet a cookie that Bob's back at work inside a month instead of the six he says he's going to spend in a lazy daze. Maybe not, but at least Robert the Hope realizes one of his own limitations. He's taking French lessons, he and Dolores and the kids and everybody. Maybe he can get along in a prone position. But to exist for months without opening his trap!

"With all those foreigners popping off?" gasps Bob.

That's why he's boning his parlez-vous every second he can snatch. "So I can talk back," says Bob.

Miracle of miracles, a sleek new girdle that STAYS UP WITHOUT STAYS. No more wrinkling, rolling over, no more discomfort found in old-fashioned boned garments. Your beautifully styled, lightweight, comfortable "Perma·lift"* Girdle eliminates all that. A Magic Inset, soft yet firm, prevents your "Perma·lift" Girdle from wrinkling, rolling over . . . gives you smooth, comfortable support. Best of all, the "Perma·lift" Magic Inset is self-ironing, withstands countless washings and wear. For a comfort thrill beyond belief, wear a new, youthful, lightweight "Perma·lift" Girdle, Pantie, or Foundation. At fine corset departments everywhere—most styles $7 to $12.50. The perfect companion to your "Perma·lift" Brassiere — AMERICA'S FAVORITE BRA—with The Lift that never lets you down.

*"Perma·lift" and "Hickory" are trademarks of A. Stein & Company (Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.)

NOW! Order by Mail!
HOLLYWOOD STYLED BLOUSE
by donig of california

SIZES 12 to 18
$2.98

You'll love this exquisite rayon jersey with the new off shoulder drape. Button down the back...easy to wash and iron...smartly fashioned for any occasion. Order this exciting new blouse in melon red, aqua, California gold, desert brown, black or white.

April Lane
SEND CHECK OR MONEY ORDER
APRIL LANE
BOX 65, PREUSS STA.
LOS ANGELES 35, CALIF.
QUANTITY | SIZE | COLOR
NAME
ADDRESS
CITY ZONE STATE

EASY

For spots on clothes, keep the Mufti bottle handy!... Mufti gives you not 1, but 4 tested cleaning ingredients... cleans so many spots from so many fabrics—cleans them in a jiffy, too!

NOT 1 BUT 4

MUFTI
SPOT REMOVER

THE PIN WITH THE LASTING GRIP
•
SMOOTH FINISH INSIDE AND OUT

Scoldy Lox BOB and HAIR PINS
NEVER LET YOUR HAIR DOWN

STOP, LOOK AND WHISTLE—By Abigail Putnam

(Continued from page 40)

Marie McDonald—but they knew who The Body was.

She thought of the days when she had despaired of her figure. She had been a bright kid in school, and consequently was two or three years younger than her classmates. Her legs were too skinny and her hair was straight, and she wanted terribly to be pretty—and grownup.

"Mom," she'd say, "please could I have a four-gore skirt like the other girls?"

"You haven't the hips to hold up a skirt like that. You're thirteen and they're sixteen."

And Marie would clump into the classroom, day after day, in laced health shoes, high socks, no makeup—and no four-gored skirt. The humiliation seared her young soul.

"Dear Lord," she prayed, "please give me a pretty figure when I grow up."

Confined to earth, her thoughts wandered to show business but were promptly discouraged by her mother, who had been in the Ziegfeld Follies. Wiping her hands on her apron, she looked dolefully at her daughter and said, "Forget it, Marie. Forget it. It would break your heart."

Marie, of course, had no intention of forgetting it. One night, at a meeting of her sorority chapter, one of the girls swayed languidly into the room.

"I am now," she announced, "a Powers model."

That did it. The next day Marie went to see John Powers.

His reception room was jammed with smartly dressed girls when a wide-eyed Marie stole through the door. She found a seat by the window, protected from the stares of the other girls, and sat down until Powers came into the room.

"Line up," said his secretary. The girls scrambled into a long line, and Powers walked slowly past them.

"You in the blue hat, go into my office. The red purse. The bolero suit. The alligator shoes." He paused a moment. "That's all."

one more chance . . .

He had passed Marie as though she weren't there. Crestfallen, she slipped out and started down the hall. A few steps away, she noticed the girl in the blue hat come out of a door without lettering. Marie stopped short. When the girl with the red purse came out, Marie desperately shoved her foot against the door before it closed, thrust her shoulder against it, and fell flat on her face. She looked up to see John Powers glaring at her from behind his desk.

"Well?" he said.

She scrambled to her feet and let loose a stream of breathless dialogue.

"Oh Mr. Powers—I want to be a model. One of my sorority sisters works for you and if she can I guess I can. And if I want to be a model I figure I ought to work for the best, and you're the best, Mr. Powers, so I ought to work for you." She paused to note the effect. . . .

He was looking her up and down, and he was smiling.

"If you have enough nerve to come popping in here like this, I suppose you can be a model."

Marie was sent out on her first job that day. She was to pose for a stocking ad, and her heart swelled at the news that her legs weren't too skinny, after all. Arrived at the photographer's studio, she found she was to pose in a slip.

"I won't do it," she said.

"But—" said the photographer.

"No." She wanted to cry, but she turned and walked out.

Mr. Powers was a patient man, wise in the ways of youth's modesty, and instead of reprimanding Marie, proceeded to send her on assignments modeling for teenage clothes.

The summer Marie graduated from high school, her mother admitted defeat in the matter of her daughter's ambitions. The annual State beauty contest was raging and Marie had badgered her mother to the edge of complete surrender.

"What'll you do about the space between your front teeth?" her mother asked finally.

"Oh, that'll be easy. I just won't smile, that's all." Marie knew she had won.

"Well—"

"Oh, let her go." This was Marie's stepfather, a man who married her mother when Marie was still in school. A great bond of mutual admiration had grown between the man and girl, and now they winked at each other like fellow conspirators.

The day of the judging found Marie nervous but confident. She knew her legs were good enough to have been displayed in scores of advertisements, and she had stood before a mirror for hours, practicing smiles that did not show her teeth. Tight-lipped, she walked past the judging stand, and won.

As Miss New York State, she was flooded with offers, among them the chance to join the George White Scandals as a showgirl.

Show business led to many things. She went on the road with the show after playing Broadway, and quit in California to break into pictures. Studios had numberless blue-eyed blondes under contract and were unimpressed. She was signed by Tommy Dorsey and sang with his band, along with Frank Sinatra, Connie Haines, Jo Stafford and the Pied Pipers. She sang in New York night clubs. Then came word, finally, from Hollywood. Universal offered her a contract, and Marie had the space filled in between her teeth, packed her luggage and steamed to movietown. Cast in picture after picture as a Tahitian maiden with little to wear and less to say, she began a trek from studio to studio, faring little better. Until she made Lucky Jordan at Paramount, Marie hadn't been particularly interested in acting, but with that role she fell in love with the profession and set out to acquire some solid theatrical training. Marie worked hard with her dramatic coach, and in the interim went on making movies.

MODERN SCREEN

Also, in the interim, she married Vic Orsatti. Vic was her agent, and impressed with Marie's talent, hammered at the importance of her career. Marie balked. She had concentrated for years upon her career and nothing much had come from it. She desperately wanted a home and kids, but the conflict in their interests broke up the marriage after three years. Still her agent as well as her friend, it was Vic who finally made M-G-M see the light and sign Marie.

On a personal appearance tour last year, Marie scraped through on a thin budget, putting all her excess cash into a fund for a home. On her return to Hollywood, she bought a two-acre farm in the valley and installed in it her mother and stepfather.

She acquired two cats and two dogs and looked around for a horse. Her passion for riding worried her family and friends.

"I've been riding since I was a kid," she told them, "and I've yet to be thrown. Intelligent people don't get thrown. Besides," she added, "I happen to have a sixth sense about horses."

She purchased a coal black mare and had it delivered to the farm.

"She's a beauty, isn't she?" said Marie. "I think I'll ride her right now."

marie bites the dust . . .

She climbed on a bench, leaped onto the mare's back and was immediately dashed to the ground. Marie sat in the dust and ruefully rubbed her shoulder.

"Now what do you suppose is eating her?"

After much experiment, it was determined that the mare was actually allergic to blondes. Marie was thrown time after time, and after weeks of ribbing from her friends about her sixth horse sense, was forced to sell the animal.

There were five hundred man hours of work to be done on the ranch. Marie and her stepfather together cultivated the vineyard, planning to make wine. Then they tackled painting the roof. In blue jeans and splashed with paint, Marie was carefully sloshing with her brush one Sunday, when she started to slip. Seeing her peril, her stepfather jumped to catch her, slipped himself and fell to the ground. He suffered several broken ribs and a crushed chest. In the middle of Living In A Big Way, Marie was forced to work each day, distraught with worry. For three nights in a row she sat up with him from darkness until dawn and then dragged herself to the studio. Not until he was completely out of danger did Marie consent to a full night's rest.

Marie is unpredictable on the romance score, wearing her heart well on the inside of her sleeve. Harvey Karl, a shoe manufacturer, has been her almost constant escort for some time. Hollywood was set to predict an engagement when Marie showed up at The Yearling premiere without Karl. In fact, with three other men, including Rory Calhoun. She swept into the theater with a man on each arm and one behind her, and a slight ripple of comment sailed over the audience.

"Now what?" they said.

They would have been more surprised had they known that after the film Marie quietly shed two men and disappeared with Rory for the remainder of the evening.

No one knows what she'll do next. With her varied talents, she might end up most anywhere. Our bet is that it will be a home, husband and kids of her own, for The Body has that kind of a heart.

THE Lovable GIRL-OF-THE-MONTH
Miss Jean Welch wears Lovable's sensational new REVERSA-BRA pure white on one side, shining black on the other. (Also French blue with black or nude.)
REVERSE IT to wear under light or dark clothes
You'll be lovely too...in a Lovable BRASSIERE
Lovable Brassiere Co., 358 Fifth Ave., N.Y.C.

What does a man like about a girl's hair?

Do you know the secret, girls? Do you know how to catch a man's eye and bring it straight to you? It's easy — JUST GIVE YOUR HAIR

Lovely color

Men love hair that gleams with rich, warm color. Yes, whatever the color of your hair, Nestle Colorinse will enhance its beauty.

Sparkling highlights

Wait 'til he sees the glamorous highlights Nestle Colorinse rinses into your hair . . . sparkling highlights that make your hair seem alluringly "alive"!

Silken sheen

A man loves to caress hair that's soft and shining. You'll be thrilled when you see the beautiful silken sheen that Nestle Colorinse gives your hair.

Nestle COLORINSE

RINSES TINTS GLORIFIES YOUR HAIR

GET NESTLE COLORINSE TODAY!

In 9 colors to glorify every shade of hair.

10c and 25c at beauty counters everywhere.

WHAT'S WRONG WITH FRANKIE?—By Hedda Hopper

(Continued from page 30)

care of yourself."

"Smile when you call me that," grinned Frankie, weakly. "But honest, Hedda, you don't understand. I'm committed here," he explained.

I felt like saying, "Committed! That's your trouble. You're committed for a crack-up, Sonny, if you don't watch out!" But I didn't. I wish I had. Because, since then Frank Sinatra has had his crack-up.

Thank goodness it wasn't a big quake that hit Frankie. He didn't lose his voice, or his health, or have a real, walloping nervous breakdown. But he did lose some of his good sense under the strain of trying to measure up to his fame, trying to make everybody happy, be a singer, an actor, a sport, a politician and Heaven knows what-all—and still be a loving husband and an attentive father. It's a wonder he lasted as long as he did without blowing his top, even mildly.

who's to blame? . . .

Yep, Frankie ran a swell race before his fame caught up with him. But he was bound to stumble some time, and who tripped him? You and me.

Last summer, Frankie almost lost his wife, Nancy, whom he dearly loves, and his family, who mean everything to him. He almost lost a lot of friends who love Nancy as much as they do Frankie. He's patched that up and I hope it's for a good, long time.

But since then Sinatra's clipped some other hurdles pretty close. What's the matter with Frank? Is he changing?

He's banned the bobby soxers, who made him what he is today, from his radio show. He's sent pugilistic challenges to columnists whose digs he used to laugh at. He's taken out a permit to carry a gun. He walked off his Old Gold radio show on a sudden vacation. Rumblings come out of M-G-M that Sinatra's high-handed on the set, a hard-to-handle headache of a movie star; they say he's scrapping with Louis B. Mayer. And he's been taking vacations again—alone.

Well—what's it all about? We ought to know—you and me. We did it. That's what I said. Yes, we've drained the talent of that good-natured guy, like leeches, until he doesn't know what's what. We've rubbed his nerves raw, done our best to scuttle his health, literally eaten him alive. What do we expect?

You see, what Frankie's been after is popularity. That may sound funny—a guy like him who needs applause like a hole in his curly head—but Frank from the start sized up his fame as significant and himself as a symbol. He was an Italian-American boy from across the tracks made into an American hero. He had to live up to it, had to prove it was a Great Idea that it could happen here.

The toughest word for a popular celebrity to say is "No." If you say it too soon the word comes back. "Uh-huh—high hat, temperamental, stuck up." If you say it too late, or not at all, you're hunting an early grave. Frankie took the second road. He practically wiped "no" from his vocabulary. I don't mean in business matters—but in the things that really counted with Sinatra, his personal standing with the millions.

Frank gave of himself as no sensation has ever given before. And he took a terrific beating, physically, mentally, nervously. The "swoon" maniacs started it. They mobbed, mauled, pawed and harried him. He took it all with a good natured grin, but it wore him out.

He came to fame too, at the start of a war—and the pressure for benefit performances on Hollywood and the radio world was terrific. Frank welcomed every chance to sing for a cause. He was the Benefit Boy. He was on a double spot because his body wasn't good enough for a uniform and GIs leaving sweeties at home after those fatal "Greetings," were not amused at a bow-tied, curly-haired, anemic, romantic singer. Frankie felt himself on the defensive. So he slugged himself twice as hard, singing night and day (no wonder it's his theme song!) to win over those GI characters. He did all right. His war front tour was one of the best. So were the Command Performance shows he ground out steadily. He ended up at V-Day a service favorite. But it took just that much more out of Sinatra. Then, of course, Frank snatched up the torch against Intolerance. That's a full career field for anyone. But because he believes in it so fervently, he lent himself to any and every meeting — singing, talking, preaching, fighting battles, traveling here and there like a crusader. Frankie succeeded in securing what he wanted—the good will, the respect, the love of everyone. But he paid the price, too.

Then there's the business about Frankie, the Actor. Hard to handle, they say. When I hear M-G-M studio rumblings about Frank getting temperamental, they shoot out my other ear so fast I need earmuffs from the breeze. That's too often the old Hollywood maneuver of cracking down on a star. Frank Sinatra's never given M-G-M half the trouble dozens more I could name have—Garbo, for instance, Garson or Hepburn. It really boils down to the old tug-of-war between movies and radio. Every big air star who comes to Hollywood lands smack in the middle of that exhausting tussle. Bing Crosby and Bob Hope know what it means at Paramount. They've been stretched in the middle for years. So has Frankie since he came to Hollywood. It's inevitable.

Radio shows take time for rehearsals, for scripts to be rewritten, spots to be polished—and the stop-watch waits for no man. I know—I have one. But when a radio star makes a movie, studios figure each production hour in thousands of dollars. So they're natural enemies. Bob and Bing and Frankie and all the rest are pursued every spare minute by a time-harried wolf pack from NBC and CBS when they're shooting. So the studio tries to cut that radio star down to movie size. It's only good business policy. I didn't hear any hard-to-handle rumors about Frank Sinatra after the money started rolling in from Anchors Aweigh, did you? It's as simple as that. Let's face it.

fair warning . . .

Frank Sinatra isn't temperamental. Considering what he's faced, he's been a sport made in Heaven. Before he said "no audiences" on his Old Gold radio program a while back, Frankie stepped to the footlights and pleaded with his noisy fans to lay off. He explained why patiently—and for three straight shows: His sponsors were mad. You couldn't hear him sing. Audiences were disgusted—squealing was no longer funny, or "cute" or interesting. It spoiled the show. They promised to stop. The next time it was the same old story. So Frankie laid down the law—"No more audiences." When they realized he meant it, they behaved. Now they're back.

(Continued on page 9

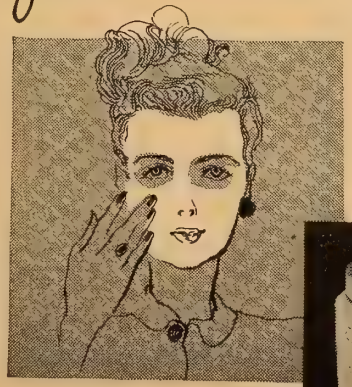
Dines at The Waldorf-Astoria —— Antonia Drexel Earle

"Before I go out—always a 1-Minute Mask!"

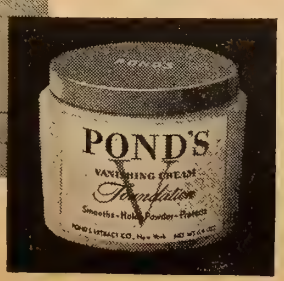


Smooth on a cool, lavish mask of Pond's Vanishing Cream. Leave one minute.

"Keratolytic" action dissolves off stubborn dirt and dead skin particles! Tissue off!

Right away, your skin looks brighter and clearer! Feels smoother. Have a 1-Minute Mask every time you want to look your very best!

In the most colorful season that society has seen for many years, Mrs. Lawrence W. Earle is an outstanding beauty. Especially lovely is Mrs. Earle's complexion—smooth, milk-white, without flaw. Like many of her friends in Philadelphia and New York society, Mrs. Earle is devoted to the 1-Minute Mask of Pond's Vanishing Cream. "In only one minute, the Mask makes my complexion look clearer and more alive," she says. "Gives a smooth finish that takes powder perfectly. I always have a Mask before an important evening!"



It's a lovely foundation cream, too!

Tips for 2 lovely you's

Two smart hair-dos from a single Tip-Top setting — Tip-Top shows you how to do them at home!

Daytime Chic

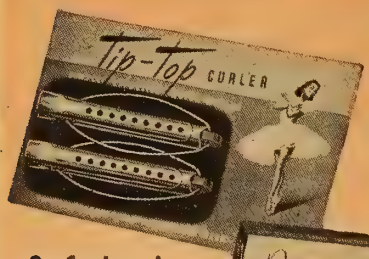
You're smartly set for a busy schedule when you style your hair in minutes with Tip-Top Curlers.

Then...

Merely Recomb Your Curls

for date-time charm. Your hair is radiantly lovely when you're out "on the town".

Gone are the days of unmanageable hair when you entrust your beauty setting to Tip-Top Curlers. So easy to use — just grip . . . turn . . . close —Tip-Top Curlers need no special skill to achieve soft, natural-looking curls.



On Cards or in $1 TIP-TOP KIT

Everything you need for home hair-styling — curlers, waveclips, "Professional Hair Styling At Home" booklet included. At notion counters everywhere.

Tip-Top CURLERS

TIP-TOP PRODUCTS CO.
2106 GRAYBAR BLDG., N.Y. 17, N.Y.

Now let's get down to the top question: Nancy. Frank and Nancy were married when both were kids. She was his childhood sweetheart, as everyone knows. That was long before fame grabbed the struggling, catch-job crooner. Most men have a fling at a few wild oats before they're married, while they're still fairly wet behind the ears. Bing Crosby painted the country red from one end to the other before he settled into a solid citizen and pillar of the church. Frankie couldn't; he was too poor. Then he was married. Psychologists tell us that, girl or boy, there's always a lingering yearning to kick up your heels later on.

I think Frank's case of accumulated nerves and too much success to handle turned his head maybe a wee bit, at long last, when he strayed from Nancy. If you keep telling anyone, day in and day out, he's gorgeous, wonderful, simply divine, sooner or later he's bound to think, somewhere back in his brain, "Maybe I am."

And here's another thing—mind, I'm not defending Frankie—but I've lived a few years and I've seen a lot. When a married man is pressed in his profession until he's about wild—you know where he takes out his irritation, don't you? That's right. At home. It has to come out somewhere and that's a wife's cross to bear. Nancy Sinatra understood that. She never stopped loving Frankie for an instant, or forgot to understand him. She was thinking of Frank all the time he wandered away.

I called Nancy and asked her to sit at my table in Ciro's the night MODERN SCREEN gave its big award party in Hollywood and presented Frank with his sculptured bust by Jo Davidson. Nancy rated an invitation; I knew she wanted to be there, too. Who wouldn't—to see the man she loved at a triumph like that?

But Nancy declined. "Thank you, Hedda," she said, "that might embarrass Frankie." That's the way that girl thinks.

indiscreet Frankie . . .

I saw Frankie that night, too. He was just back from Palm Springs where he'd fled from himself, and I can't say he'd been thinking of Nancy's best interests, as she had his. In fact, Frank was naively thoughtless, being the Hollywood celebrity that he knows he is. He'd been seen in public with girls and rumors went flying. Frankie should have known better, for instance, than to sit with Lana Turner at Sonja Henie's party, when Nancy wasn't there. I don't care how many other girls he dated when he was mixed up emotionally. That's not my affair, but it was very definitely Frankie's—and Nancy's. The point is: He's in a goldfish bowl. Every public indiscretion of Frank's hurts Nancy, his family—and himself.

So that night at our MODERN SCREEN party, I stuck out my neck—a very old habit. I practically grabbed Frankie by his generous ears. "Come here," I said, "I want to talk to you." Frankie's eyes rounded like saucers and his bow-tie bobbled. He was surprised. He didn't say anything. I did all the talking, straight from my heart.

"Look, Frank," I told him. "It's none of my business—but I think you're making the mistake of your life! I've never been a red-hot booster of yours but I admire you and how you've handled your career, up till now. But I'm an older woman and I want to tell you something for what it's worth to you." I let him have it.

I asked Frankie if he'd ever thought about his responsibility to Nancy and his children. I knew he had, of course, plenty. "You know you brought them into the world just as much as she did," I reminded him. "And children need a father as well as a mother. I know. I raised a son without a father." I sat down and talked to him like a Dutch aunt. I told him what a wonderful career he'd had, what a wonderful one lay ahead. But I warned him that he was public property now and that part of that public property was Nancy and his children. And it is.

When I was through, Frankie said, "Hedda, no one ever talked like that to me before."

I'm sure no one had. He'd heard nothing but "yesses," and raves for four years. He'd turned tone-deaf to criticism. He was hungry for frank, honest opinion. "Look," suggested Frank, "I want to talk some more. Can you have lunch with me next week?" I said I certainly could. Well, we didn't have that lunch because Frank and Nancy were back together again before then. But what struck me about the whole thing was Frank's reaction to a good bawling out. He could have snapped, "Mind your own business!" and I'd have been put right in my place.

Frank appreciated it. What's more, he didn't sulk or nurse a grudge. On the contrary, when Frank and Nancy and all their friends staged their wonderful New Year's Eve party—for my money the greatest private show ever put on in Hollywood—I was the only newspaper reporter in town invited. And I appreciated that. But before then, of course, the Sinatras had patched things up and Frankie had come to. By the way he did that, incidentally, Frank proved he knows what to do when the moment arrives. He showed his heart was always with Nancy.

It was a gang of Frank's friends—all men—who got together and decided to do something about the separation which they knew was all wrong for everyone.

They learned one night that Frankie was helping Phil Silvers open his new show at Slapsie Maxie's night club. They called up Nancy without saying a thing about that. "Get all gussied up in your best dress," they told her. "We're stepping out." Nancy did. She had no idea where or what was up. But she had eight devoted, adoring escorts and when Frankie

I SAW IT HAPPEN

One windy March day my girl friend and I were strolling down Main Street, when we noticed everyone turning to look across the street. We looked, too, and saw the strongest, toughest looking woman anyone had ever laid eyes on. She was wearing a fuchsia dress, thick stockings, low-heeled shoes, and a hat covered with flowers. We continued on our way, thinking no more about the incident until we heard a newsboy shouting, "Bob Hope Arrives In Town For a Tour." Of course, everybody became excited and anxious to see the famous celebrity, but forgot about Hope when this same strange-looking woman appeared again. She was walking along awkwardly and stopped to hold her hat when a strong breeze blew. But it was no use because her hat whisked clean off her head and rolled into the gutter. Then the mystery was solved! This sturdy female turned out to be Bob Hope, himself! I shall always remember this story because it was one time when Bob Hope failed to put over a joke!

Maxine Clark
Tallahassee, Fla.

saw her with them at the ringside table he came over right after he'd finished his number. "Come on, Nancy," he said, "let's go home." And that was that.

I've heard people in Hollywood say that episode was all framed—that Frankie and Nancy had arranged it secretly. That's not true. I know a few of those Mister Fixits pretty well. It was all a deep-dyed plot on their part. And it worked. It worked because Frankie had sense enough to realize the moment had arrived and made the most of it. He's no fool, either.

By the time 1948 rolls around, I've a hunch Frank Sinatra will have caught up with himself, ironed out the kinks in his psyche and be very much back in the groove. There are a lot of reasons why I'll play prophet—and, brother, that's risky business in Hollywood! For one, Nancy's realized that a high pressure entertainer like Frankie has to blow off steam and have some time by himself now and then. For another, Frank's begun to tell himself, "What difference will it all make a hundred years from now?" He's put one foot at least off the merry-go-round. He says "nuts" to his own ambitions a lot oftener than he used to. If he doesn't like anything—a radio show or a picture, he turns it down; he's not a Hollywood handyman any more.

new year's nightmare . . .

Even the short rest he's had has brought back the old Voice that sometimes went flat and husky when Frank overdid things. After being up all night New Year's, Frankie went on his air show New Year's Day and I shivered when I heard him. He realizes now those things don't pay.

Frank will be back on the air by the time you read this. He wants to do another picture with Gene Kelly next—a baseball story Gene wrote and sold to M-G-M. He'll probably sing again next year at the Waldorf, where he's always broken all records. And there's a new ready-made career crying out loud for Frankie in England, too, where his BBC Command Performance shows and Anchors Aweigh won him millions of British fans. The biggest Sinatra fan group in the world is in London right now. It's the British Frank Sinatra Club and one member is James Mason, who wrote Frankie a fan letter after hearing him the first time. Every note I get from Jimmy raves about Frank. All in all, Sinatra couldn't have a rosier path ahead at this peak in his career—if—he can only slip into the easy-does-it groove of his colleague rival and ancient ideal—Bing Crosby. If he can only learn to relax. I'm hoping by next New Year, that's in the cards for Frankie. I know he's planning a trip soon to Europe with Nancy and the kids for that very purpose of mixing business with pleasure.

I'm afraid it's too much to expect Frank Sinatra to turn tactful and smooth overnight. He'll still have his touch-temper; he'll do some wrong things that'll reap bad publicity for him. Even now, he's suing the Scripps-Howard newspaper chain for half a million dollars because one of their columnists printed alleged reports that Frank had been pal-ing with the notorious gangster, Lucky Luciano, on his recent vacation to Havana. He'll struggle, too, until the end of his days for what he thinks is right. He's no phony—he's all man.

But meanwhile, what about us—you and me, who made Frank what he is today? Well, here are a couple of thoughts: Frank's tired. Let's don't be so greedy. Let's give him a rest now and then. And let's don't hoist him on a pedestal with one hand and reach for a tomato to heave the minute he wobbles. He's Frank Sinatra—but he's only human, too.

So I changed to the Gentle FLOATING LIFT of SWEETHEART SOAP'S Extra Lather!

Discover SweetHeart's 1-2-3 Extra Lather Beauty Care! Night and morning, massage your face for one minute with SweetHeart's extra lather. Rinse with warm—then cold water. Skin is cleansed . . . stimulated . . . looks more radiant!

• "I marvel at the way SweetHeart's Extra Lather Care helps reveal deep-down loveliness," says Rosemary. "My skin photographs rose-petal clear."

It gives thrilling beauty help. You'll love pure, mild SweetHeart Soap's extra lather—up to twice as much as average beauty soaps give. And SweetHeart's extra lather has a wonderful floating lift. Pictures taken through the microscope prove it.

Countless bubbles bathe the outer pore openings . . . lift off — float away — dirt and rough skin flakes—revealing true beauty. Just see how much smoother, fresher, lovelier your skin may look!

The Soap that AGREES with Your Skin

Make believe you're Rosemary at a famous night club! You sway to wonderful music as he raves about your exquisite SweetHeart complexion.

Tune in "EVELYN WINTERS" and "ROSE OF MY DREAMS" . . . Two shows, Coast to Coast, Mon. thru Fri. See your paper for times and stations. Listen especially May 2nd through May 16th for sensational jewelry "gift offer."

"Learn to Understand Men"

says Cathy O'Donnell

"Know the part soft hands can play in love," Cathy O'Donnell says. "And keep your hands completely feminine; appealingly soft with Jergens Lotion."

CATHY O'DONNELL, FEATURED IN SAMUEL GOLDWYN'S "THE BEST YEARS OF OUR LIVES".

CATHY O'DONNELL uses Jergens Lotion for her adorable hands. So do other Stars. Jergens Lotion is 7 to 1 the favorite hand care of the Stars.

You can expect even more from Jergens now — even smoother, softer hands and longer protection. This comes from wartime skin research. Two skin-care ingredients many doctors use are included in postwar Jergens Lotion. Still 10¢ to $1.00 (plus tax) for this hand care the Stars use. Never oily-feeling; no stickiness.

For the Softest, Adorable Hands, use

JERGENS LOTION

FREE!
See for yourself why Hollywood Stars, 7 to 1, use Jergens Lotion

Mail coupon today for gift bottle. (Paste on penny postcard if you wish.)
Box 27, Cincinnati 14, Ohio. Please send my gift bottle.
Dept. 160

Name _____

Address _____

City _____ State _____

(Please print name, address plainly) (Sorry, offer good in U. S. A. only)

DOROTHY KILGALLEN SELECTS "BEGINNING OR THE END"

(Continued from page 14)

bomb is the most significant thing that has happened to the human race since the birth of Christendom, and inasmuch as The Beginning Or The End is about nothing but the atom bomb, it must be the most significant motion picture ever made.

When Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer decided to cut this terrifying slice of current history, it chose a story about which there is no argument. Critics may disagree with the casting here, the direction there, the dialogue somewhere else, but when the reservations of the perfectionists are wrapped up and tossed away, what remains is the most exciting drama ever shown on the screen: the drama of man's discovery of a way to change his world, or destroy it.

Much toil and sweat and heartache, and many new miracles, went into the making of the first atomic bomb; men in darkened rooms in the White House and under tents on the dry earth of Los Alamos spent sleepless nights over its making and over the first use of it. Their struggles of conscience and their decision constitute the greatest moral issue civilized men have ever had to face.

Aside from the supreme urgency of its theme, The Beginning Or The End is an exciting picture. How could it be otherwise? It tells you and me and the rest of the non-scientific members of the human race about the long and painful birth of a monster, spawned by gentle and peace-loving men, that may make the world easy and beautiful for our children or may pulverize us into unknowing dust.

Director Norman Taurog and others who worked behind the cameras have reproduced the technical scenes with heart-stopping realism. Some of the scenes were shot in the actual locales, but many were brilliant process shots created by a genius named A. Arnold Gillespie who "made," for benefit of the M-G-M lenses, an atom bomb that astounded the Army.

It is perfectly possible to buy a ticket to The Beginning Or The End as you would buy a ticket to a great adventure story; you will get your money's worth of adventure. But you will leave the theater with thoughts in your head that were not there when you passed the ticket taker—thoughts about your neighbor, and your children, and the future of the world.

I SAW IT HAPPEN

Glenn Ford and I were in many plays together when we attended Santa Monica High School. He was such a fine actor, we expected him to become a professional. Now we've "seen it happen." We've seen him become a fine leading man in pictures and we're glad because he was always so modest and unassuming. So modest, in fact, I have to smile whenever I look at the school year book. He autographed it for me, back there in school, as follows: "Good luck to a great actress—from a poor ham. Glenn Ford."

Alyce Walker
Burbank, Calif.

CAPTAIN COURAGEOUS

(Continued from page 32)

heavier now. Seventeen patriots were aboard, but it was obvious that those left on the beach were doomed.

John Hamilton made his decision.

"Shove off!" he yelled. Then, with his shipmates, he turned his eyes toward the open sea.

He was a rough, tough boy, this John Hamilton, engaged in a rough, tough business, which ruled out thinking with your heart. One of John Hamilton's crew told this story. Hamilton himself doesn't talk much. If this were his habit, people in Hollywood would not have asked casually at intervals, "I wonder whatever became of Sterling Hayden?"

For Sterling Hayden, the actor, and John Hamilton, Capt., U.S.M.C., were and are the same man.

Usually, young men coming to Hollywood change their names. Sterling Hayden reversed the process when he left the place in 1941, on urgent business. He picked up the name John Hamilton in a court in Bridgeport, Conn., and put Sterling Hayden in moth balls for the duration.

The scene shifts now to the calm harbor at Santa Barbara, California, a hundred miles north of Hollywood. Inside the breakwater lies a trim schooner, called "Quest." She is 63 feet in length at the waterline, carries an 80-foot main mast, and is as fast as anything her size.

Master of the "Quest" is Sterling Hayden, who has evened the score with Captain John Hamilton by putting that worthy individual in moth balls, now that the shooting is over.

you made me love you . . .

Sterling, who was once known as the champion of all Hollywood-haters among the acting profession, now has a fondness for the place, even though it took him seven months to locate an apartment in which he now stays only when working in a picture. Promptly, as the last scene for Blaze of Noon was finished, Sterling took off for Santa Barbara.

"Some people," he told me one day when I dropped down for a visit, "like to live in houses. They get satisfaction out of gathering possessions around them, growing gardens, talking with neighbors over the back fence. That's good. Maybe I'll get around to that, too."

Sterling Hayden may not hate Hollywood as he once did, but he certainly spends little enough time there. Whereas those of the movie colony who own boats keep them moored at nearby Santa Monica or Newport, some thirty miles south of Hollywood, the "Quest" is the only movie-star-owned craft in the Santa Barbara harbor.

The reason for this seclusion is that harbors near Hollywood usually attract the festive crowd—the people who just stop by to say hello and wind up staying half a day. Friends Sterling Hayden has, but Hollywood's erratic social life leaves him cold.

This is nothing new. Since the time when Sterling's family suffered severe financial reverses, along with a good many thousands of others, he has been unimpressed with money and the theory that those who have it should club together for mutual contentment.

"Don't make me politically significant," Sterling said as he wielded a paint brush. "Since I've come back I've seen a number of things going on in the country that I don't think are right, any more than any other veteran does. I belong to the American Veterans' Committee, and I think it's Why didn't somebody tell me - All tissues aren't Kleenex ?

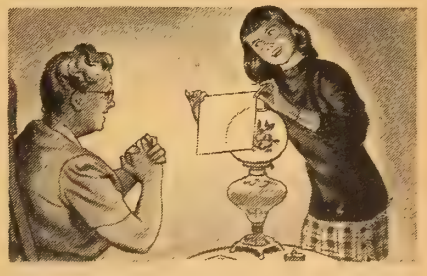
Not on your life they aren't! bellowed Uncle Mayhew. Fine thing!—I'm sneezing my head off and my sister brings me plain tissues. If you think all tissues are Kleenex, I wish you had this sniffle-sore nose! It says there's only one Kleenex!

Bess, you alarm me —snapped Cousin Cynthia. Surely you know better than to confuse Kleenex with other tissues. Very unfunny—when I depend on Kleenex so. Listen. My skin knows there's not a tissue on earth just like angel-soft Kleenex!

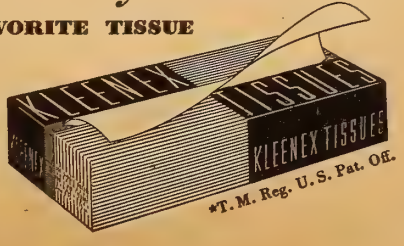
Buck up, Auntie! said Teena. Bend an eye at the real McCoy — the one and only Kleenex! See that box, how different it is? How it gives with the tissues — one at a time? Neat feat! Only Kleenex can do it! What's more . . .



Hold a Kleenex Tissue up to a light. See any lumps or weak spots? 'Course not! You see Kleenex quality smilin' through — always the same — so you just know Kleenex has super softness. And are those tissues rugged!

Now I know... *There is only one KLEENEX

AMERICA'S FAVORITE TISSUE



*T. M. Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

Advice from a bride of '27

Choose these

The two blocks of sterling inlaid at backs of bowls and handles of most used spoons and forks. They make this silverplate stay lovelier longer. Fifty-two piece set $68.50 with chest. (tax free)

HOLMES & EDWARDS
STERLING INLAID° SILVERPLATE

Copyright 1947, The International Silver Co., Holmes & Edwards Division, Meriden, Conn. Sold in Canada by: The T. Eaton Co., Ltd., °Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

Infant and Toddler feet are S-A-F-E-R in these SENSIBLY-PRICED shoes

Why?

Wise mothers know that greatest harm to little feet comes from letting baby grow into and out of shoes. They know that WEE WALKERS are well-made, accurately shaped, flexible shoes, carefully designed to serve baby's footwear needs at moderate cost. The sensible price allows you to buy the correct size NOW and change to a larger size in TIME.

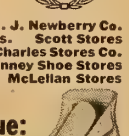
Ask your doctor about WEE WALKERS . . . see them . . . compare them . . . try them . . . in Infants' or shoe department of stores listed. Birth to size 8.

COMMENDED PARENTS MAGAZINE CONSUMER SERVICE

W. T. Grant Co. S. S. Kresge Co. J. J. Newberry Co.
H. L. Green Co., Inc. I. Silver & Bros. Scott Stores
McCrory Stores Schulte-United Charles Stores Co.
Metropolitan Chain Stores, Inc. Kinney Shoe Stores
F. & W. Grand Grand Silver Co. McLellan Stores
Montgomery Ward & Co.

Smooth One-Piece Tongue:

Stops pressure on nerves, muscles, blood vessels caused by sewed-on tongue, still used on some shoes selling at top prices.



FREE: Pamphlet, "Look At Your Baby's Feet." Valuable information on foot care, and scale to measure size needed. Moran Shoe Co., Dept. M, Carlyle, Ill.

WEE WALKER Shoes
FOR Wee WALKERS

important . . . observe what's going on and try to better conditions. That can't be done by taking a running jump at every situation that comes along, wrestling one problem after another.

"There are not a great many veterans who have run for office. I think most of them have acquired a sound judgment during the time they were removed from civilian life. The real impact of the things veterans think and do will come a couple of years from now."

A slow grin traveled easily across his rugged face.

"Don't make that sound like a speech, please."

From the harbor dock, a block or so away, a small sailing dinghy beat up alongside the "Quest." A trim young blonde girl climbed aboard.

"Hi, Sterling," she said.

"Hi, Betty."

The visitor was Betty De Noon, an attractive young model whom Sterling met last May in Laguna Beach. Their friendship doubtless will have columnists in a considerable dither, which will put a stop to frequently recurring items concerning the Ida Lupino "romance" which was apparently over before it began.

Betty, arms full of packages, disappeared below.

Her appearance brought to mind another lovely blonde lady, one Madeleine Carroll. There has been much conjecture concerning details about and reasons for Sterling's divorce from Madeleine. Most Hollywood writers come equipped with built-in theories concerning the reasons for the collapse of this marriage, which was one of the most interesting and delightful of the many romantic sagas which spring up out of whole cloth and celluloid.

Sterling and Madeleine are said to have parted because of a discrepancy in ages.

new life, new interests . . .

Vague rumor reports that one or both, during the long separation caused by war, found new interests in a couple of someone elses.

Because it is better to knock on the front door than try to climb in a side window, in the business of reporting. Sterling was faced with the why question.

He put away the bucket of paint, tied a loose shoestring and faced the issue with an uninjured air.

"At this point it wouldn't be right to be quoted about my former wife," Sterling said. "I hold Madeleine in the highest esteem. She is married again and that's that."

Even if the man were less than six feet, four inches tall, and the water was too cold for swimming to shore, this simple statement defied any thought of further discussion.

A voice came from the galley.

"Soup's on."

And Betty De Noon meant soup. Soup and salad. Apple turnover and coffee. If for no other reason, the quality of Betty's cooking is enough to start romantic speculation.

Afterward, Sterling explained how a man comes to own a boat like the "Quest."

"I collect them as a hobby," he said. "One at a time, of course. This is the first sailing craft I've owned, though, that hasn't been used commercially. It began to get under my skin when I was thirteen. I shipped aboard a yacht, through the Panama canal to California. My job was to do anything nobody else would do, and I was paid 25 cents a month. After we hit the West Coast, I fooled around with a few odd jobs, then grabbed a freight East. I had $125 saved—from the odd jobs, not the 25 cents a month—and I found myself a sloop. Went into business for myself, carrying tourists around the harbor.

"After that I worked on a number of ships, still suffering from the fever a man has to go to sea anywhere, any time, so long as it is under canvas. When the 'Aldebaran' came up for sale, I had to have her. A friend of mine named Herb Talbot formed a corporation with me. He put up the money, and I put up the know-how. We paid $15,000 for her. Originally, the 'Aldebaran' cost $350,000, and was she elegant!

"We had an idea that we could start a passenger service between Hawaii and Tahiti. Originally, the 'Aldebaran' was the 'Meteor III,' christened by Alice Roosevelt in 1902. She was 167 feet long, and a three-master.

"I had my captain's papers and figured that this would be my real career. It didn't last long. While we were taking the 'Alderbaran' from Vancouver to Panama with a crew of 14, we ran into a heavy Northeaster. The day before, the water was calm as ice; but on Christmas a wind came up from the Southeast. Then it changed, fast.

"By the time the gale hit its peak, water got into the generator which fed the pumps. We had to form a bucket brigade to heave water over the side, and for the next twenty-four hours the galley was unapproachable.

"We flew the American flag upside down, finally attracted attention of the Coast Guard, and limped home in sad condition. There wasn't enough money to repair the damage, so we lost the 'Aldebaran.'

"Getting into movies kept me from feeling too bad about that, but I've always wanted another boat—one I could hang onto. Funny thing, the 'Quest' cost me exactly the same amount of money as the 'Aldebaran'—$15,000."

This is no ordinary actor's story. Sterling Hayden is neither ordinary, nor yet an actor in the accepted sense of the term. A natural performer, he's had that bit in Captains Courageous, his famous role in The Virginian, and his second starring picture, Bahama Passage, a film in which he was sideswiped by a story that didn't jell.

Yet, six years later, he turns up again to rate as an even-money bet with the best of the top stars on the Paramount lot.

Look for a reason and there is the simple explanation that what a man is comes out clearly when magnified by the camera.

And what is Sterling Hayden?

For one thing, he's the kind of guy who

I SAW IT HAPPEN

It was a real warm fall day and I was waiting on line to see the Kate Smith program. Her guest for the evening was to be little Margaret O'Brien. As the stage entrance is right next to the theater entrance, I had the pleasure of seeing Margaret step from her car with her mother and aunt. A great many people were milling around, trying to get her autograph. One small boy remarked in a sarcastic tone, "Oh, leave her alone. She can't write yet." "Oh, no?" said Margaret, indignantly. "I can write my name and almost any other word, too!" And she gave the boy a sample of her scrawl and a promise to answer his letter if he wrote her at the studio.

Joy Felsinger
New York, N. Y.

takes the engines out of a boat because he'd rather "sail" than "yacht."

His nature is so simple—and the word is not used with a Hollywood twist—that his needs are few.

His personality is revealed in copies of two letters more or less smuggled off the wall of his cabin while Sterling was in the galley washing dishes.

These communications read:

Yugoslav Embassy
Feb. 4, 1946

Dear Captain Hamilton:

I have the honor to inform you that the President of the National Assembly, on the proposal of Marshal I. B. Tito, has awarded you with the "Order of Merit to the People of Yugoslavia," II Grade.

I take this opportunity to congratulate you upon the receipt of what is one of the highest orders of the People's Republic of Yugoslavia.

Very sincerely yours,
Dr. Sergije Makiedo,
Charge d' Affairs, a.i.

Supplementing the formal letter is another and more personal missive, which tells the story behind the work of many young men like Sterling Hayden:

Feb. 4, 1946

Dear Hamilton:

I am sure you never dreamt in the time you first met the greasy and dirty Partisan Chief in Italy that one day he would be an American diplomat.

And what is most amazing, just today I signed an official letter to our old friend, John Hamilton, alias Sterling Hayden, in which I inform you of the high decoration you have been awarded by our own people as a sign of recognition for what you did for us when we did not have very many friends and when being a friend of ours was very dangerous.

I am so glad for this because I feel that we and your group were in this time a united group, and just as you enjoyed and were pleased with every one of our successes, now I enjoy the fact that you, Toftie, Thompson and Huot received this decoration.

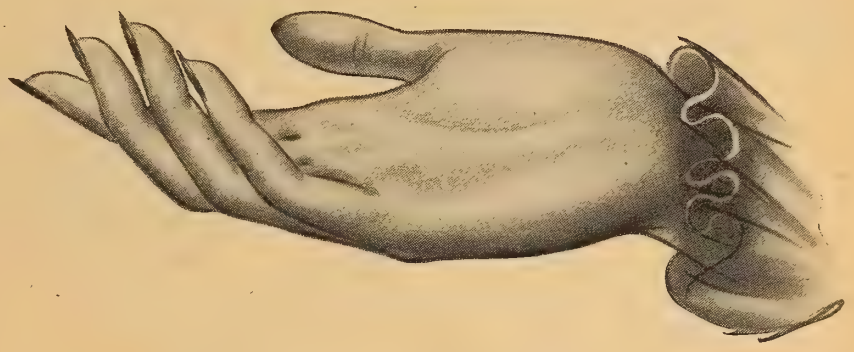
Sincerely yours,
Dr. Makiedo

It couldn't have happened to a couple of nicer guys!

I SAW IT HAPPEN

While in the Air Sea Rescue unit, stationed at Balboa, California, we often made patrol runs to Catalina Island. One day, while the rest of the crew was playing volley ball on the beach, I was in the galley preparing lunch. I looked out and saw a man and woman standing on the deck of our boat. My first impulse was to order them to leave, since it was an Army boat. But when I got a better look at the pair, I saw they were Humphrey Bogart and Lauren Bacall. Bogart explained that his boat was anchored a little further off, and that he and his wife wanted to come aboard and "see what a good boat looked like."

Vincent Mancusi
Brooklyn, N. Y.



Double or . . .

To all housekeepers we venture a gentle warning: don't gamble on laundry soap. You can't win.

Millions of women before you have found from experience that ordinary laundry soap can't—and won't—wash like Fels-Naptha.

Your bar of Fels-Naptha soap contains double the usual dirt-removing action. . . . Because it's good mild soap blended with active Fels naptha. Together, these two grand cleaners do a matchless washing job.

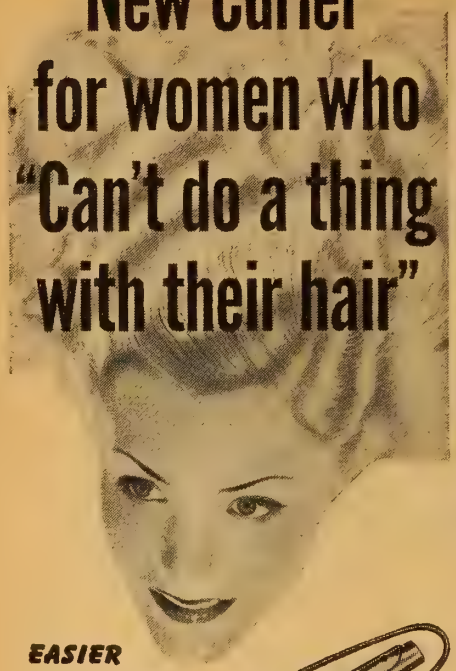
They get ground-in dirt out quickly. And get it all out. They keep colors bright and clear. They wash towels and linens white-clean, through and through.

Whenever you are spending money for laundry soap, spend it on a 'sure thing'—Fels-Naptha Soap.

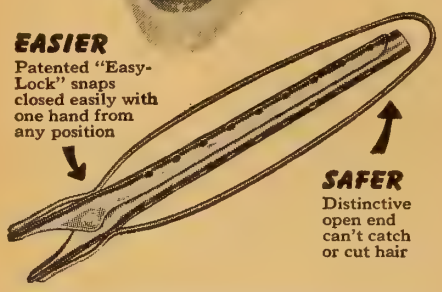
Fels-Naptha Soap

BANISHES "TATTLE-TALE GRAY"

New Curler for women who "Can't do a thing with their hair"



EASIER
Patented "Easy-Lock" snaps closed easily with one hand from any position



SAFER
Distinctive open end can't catch or cut hair

FOR HAIR LOVELINESS GUARD AGAINST SPLIT, FRIZZY ENDS. No matter how beautiful your permanent, no matter how natural your wave, broken hair ends can cause ugly, unmanageable frizz and ruin the most becoming hair-do.

The revolutionary new GAYLA "Easy-Lock" Curlers "baby" delicate hair-ends, treat them softly, gently — thanks to the unique "open end" feature. Your hair becomes "easy to manage" — you can try many new hair-dos — and make them becoming, soft and natural.

Get a whole set of these new, safer curlers today

Gayla
"EASY-LOCK"
CURLER

by the makers of the famous GAYLA Hold-Bob bobby pins and hairpins

©1947 • GAYLORD PRODUCTS, INCORPORATED • CHICAGO 16, ILL.

Formal—Frances Gifford of M-G-M models an easy-to-copy coif. Frequent shampooing and brushing give that satin sheen to her locks.

For you—the inside, how-to-do story about a pretty Hollywood coif. Let your locks be pretty as a star's!

By Carol Carter, Beauty Editor

formal and fancy free

Fancy free—a second version of the same hairdo. Read how you can enjoy both editions. For that professional look do use a good setting lotion.

■ Hair styles have their ups and downs! And, honestly, one head can enjoy both styles. Wear a loose, informal coif for your informal moments and, presto, slick your locks up into a smooth, formal hairdo when in the mood. How? Frances (The Arnelo Affair) Gifford shows us a wonderful way. For the basic setting with a good lotion, dress the hair off the face. Set a deep wave on each side of your center part. Finish by setting the ends into large pin curls upswept high on the head. That's all!

Though impatient to see the happy results, do wait until your hair is thoroughly dried. Comb the top first, allowing it to fall in a loose wave on each side of the part, then comb these side waves up and back. Now listen intently, this is important: make a part down the back of your head. Brush the left strand to the right side, vice versa with the right strand. The crisscross effect means you'll look just as pretty going as coming.

Later, you slip into your siren garb, and in a few moments your fancy free hairdo follows your sophisticated mood. Brush those two back strands up and coil 'em together. If the resulting coil is skimpy, let it be a secret between you and me that you've plumped it out prettily with a prepared roll or a hair switch. Fasten the coil across the top of the head. Try the glamorous touch of clipping on a jewel. You'll be as enthusiastic about this hairdo as is Frances, for whom it was designed by M-G-M Hair Stylist Sydney Guilaroff.

Of course, only natural curly-heads will look good in this or any hairdo. But you other 99.9% don't despair! I was really joking because permanent waves bring curls to all. What's your choice—waves or crisp ringlets? A perm will give them to you. What's your problem—wispy hair of heavy, oily hair? There's a perm to meet your problem. And every day, a girl gives herself a home permanent wave for the first time and the results are so beautiful that she becomes a "homer" fan for life!

* * *

Get your "How to Be Beautiful" chart. It's a thorough glamorizing course, gives skin care, facials, hair styling, makeup, exercises, etc. Send 10c in coin with name and address to: Service Dept., MODERN SCREEN, 149 Madison Ave., New York 16, N. Y.

INGRID—By Charles Boyer

(Continued from page 28)

(during the run of which she proposed to give up smoking) she gave Lewis a very smart silver cigarette box; on the inside cover was the engraved legend: "Give me one, too," and the box contained one cigarette, and one match, kitchen variety. It took me a while to learn that this was a typical Bergman gesture. I knew very little about her, actually, when we first met, on the set of Gaslight. I had seen her pictures and listened to people talk about her, and I was naturally very curious. There was no doubting her ability as an actress. It had at times the element of greatness; she not only was a born actress, but she worked with her head as well as emotionally.

I could not, however, anticipate her personality. People had said, "Remember —she is at all times an actress!"

That was so. She was more like the European women with whom I had worked in Paris. Her first concern was her role, the woman she must portray. She was to play a wife who believed she was going crazy, and for preparation she had read a formidable number of books on psychiatry.

With the first scenes I discovered that she is the most daring performer I have ever known.

perfect from every angle . . .

Ingrid will stop at nothing to keep her performance from being even faintly phony. She knows, of course, that she possesses an almost perfect figure and head, photogenically; that there is no bad angle she can present to the camera, no matter what she does. With this knowledge as security, she does things no other actress dares to do.

She understands, for instance, that a woman who drinks habitually does not get drunk in the same fashion as a woman who is not saturated with alcohol. She knows the occasional drinker, given too much liquor on a certain evening, will be hilarious, sick, and pathetic in successive stages—and these are stages which, with some women, can be amusing and sometimes even attractive in a comic sort of way.

But an habitual drunk wears a strange mask as the evening wears on: her drunkenness is evidenced in speech that is overly precise, with a subtle slur and a throatiness. Her gait is not a stagger, it is an ordinary gait slowed like a phonograph record played under tempo, with occasional near-accidents quickly recovered.

And Ingrid knows, too, that a woman awakening with a hangover is hideous.

Thus in Notorious, and again in Arch of Triumph, there is a special realism about her drunk scenes. I don't think anyone who saw Notorious can forget that wisp of hair that had somehow got caught in her mouth during the night, and which she was too hung over to notice during much of the following sequence.

Ingrid has no inhibitions about herself. She does not bother to minimize what she likes about Bergman any more than she rationalizes what is wrong.

When we went together to watch the first rushes on Arch, she sat lounging in the deep leather chair and made no comment until the first scene was finished. "Good," she said then. "I was wonderful."

After the next scene, she sat in glum silence. "Well?" I asked.

(Continued on page 105)

"Soaping" dulls hair—
Halo glorifies it!

Yes, even finest soaps and soap shampoos hide the natural lustre of your hair with dulling soap film

- Halo contains no soap. Made with a new patented ingredient it cannot leave dulling soap film!
- Halo reveals the true natural beauty of your hair the very first time you use it, leaves it shimmering with glorious highlights.
- Needs no lemon or vinegar after-rinse. Halo rinses away, quickly and completely!
- Makes oceans of rich, fragrant lather, even in hardest water. Leaves hair sweet, clean, naturally radiant!
- Carries away unsightly loose dandruff like magic!
- Lets hair dry soft and manageable, easy to curl!

HALO REVEALS THE HIDDEN BEAUTY OF YOUR HAIR!

Bring out the Brilliant Overtones

IN ALL OF YOUR RECORDINGS

WITH GENUINE

Recordiopoints

BY WILCOX-GAY

RECORDIOPOINT High Fidelity PLAYBACK NEEDLE

Tipped with lustrous Sapphire!

One of the finest playback needles that money can buy. Developed for record connoisseurs, this hand-lapped, diamond-polished needle has a lightweight aluminum shaft and fine sapphire tip to bring out the rich, bell-clear tone in any record. Laboratory tested for thousands of high fidelity reproductions. Price.....$2.50

ALL RECORDIOPOINTS are scientifically ground to ride the sides of the record groove where they search out and reproduce the finer shades of tones and musical highlights. Deeper, fuller, tones throughout a wider scale are yours with RECORDIOPOINTS in the tone arm.

PLAYBACK NEEDLE . . . Osmium-Alloy-Tipped . . . Flint-hard, Osmium alloy resists the abrasive effect of all-type record playing. Overtones otherwise lost are retained and reproduced by these skillfully constructed RECORDIOPOINTS. Price.....$1.00

PLAYBACK NEEDLE . . . Precious-Metals-Alloy Tipped . . . A scientific combination of metals combined to provide the longest record wear and high fidelity reproduction. Manufactured under precision control of Wilcox-Gay engineers. Price.....$0.50

PLAYBACK NEEDLE . . . High Grade Steel Cutaway Type . . . Carefully ground, economical steel needles built for rugged, everyday use. Finished to a smooth, scratch-free point. Package.....$0.25

Recordiopoints

ARE "POINTS OF PERFECTION"

Insist on RECORDIOPOINTS for realistic reproduction from all of your records.

WILCOX-GAY CORPORATION • CHARLOTTE, MICH.

MANUFACTURERS OF

Recordio

T.M. Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

. . . the World's Finest Home Recording Instrument

114M

sweet and hot

By LEONARD FEATHER

Recommended
*Highly recommended
No stars: average

POPULAR

HEARTACHES—*Dinah Shore (Columbia); Ted Weems (Victor); Red McKenzie (National); Joe Alexander (Capitol)

Remember Red McKenzie? He sang with Paul Whiteman in the pre-swoon era, and brings memories of it with a real heart-throb voice, but thick!

HIS FEET TOO BIG FOR DE BED—*Stan Kenton (Capitol)

Stan Kenton has fallen into the commercial pattern; now he's got a vocal group too. But the way he uses it in this Calypso novelty is kinda cute.

HOW ARE THINGS IN GLOCCA MORRA—*Tommy Dorsey (Victor); *Georgia Gibbs (Majestic); Bob Houston (Sonora)

IF I HAD MY LIFE TO LIVE OVER AGAIN—Red McKenzie (National); Chickering Four (Signature); Three Suns (Victor)

MANAGUA, NICARAGUA—*Kay Kyser (Columbia), Freddy Martin (Victor), Gordon Trio (Sonora)

MOVIE TO-NIGHT—*Johnny Mercer-Pied Pipers-Paul Weston (Capitol)

THAT'S HOW MUCH I LOVE YOU—Frank Sinatra (Columbia).

An unusual, oddly-shaped tune, with Frankie sounding very informal, and for this you don't have to thank his folks, but his accompanists, the Page Cavanaugh Trio. Let's hear more of him with this kind of background.

WHO CARES WHAT PEOPLE SAY?—Mel Torme-Sonny Burks (Musicraft)

WHY DID IT HAVE TO END SO SOON?—Charlie Spivak (Victor).

HOT JAZZ

SID CATLETT—*Just A Riff, *Mop De Mop Mop (Super Disc)

The All-American drummer with an all-star group featuring Coleman Hawkins.

KING COLE QUINTET—Album (Disc)

Recommended with reservations, if at all; poorly recorded and unfair to Nat Cole.

WOODY HERMAN—Woodchoppers' Ball; *With Someone New (Columbia)

GENE KRUPA—*Opus One (Columbia)

DAVE LAMBERT & BUDDY STEWART—Perdido; *Gussie G (Keynote)

Remember Gene Krupa's What's This? Dave and Buddy extend the idea they started in Gene's band. On these sides, they sing scat vocals in unison, joined by another ex-Krupa man, trumpeter Red Rodney. It all combines to make a weird and wondrous sound, strictly in the bebop style.

TONY MOTTOLA—*Trigger Fantasy (Majestic)

A fine jazz item featuring the bass work of Trigger Alpert, who was overseas with the Glenn Miller band.

EARLE SPENCER—*Five Guitars In Flight (Black & White)

This is different! Five electric guitars, headed by composer Arv Garrison, surrounded by a big, too-loud band. The guitar passages are great.

JUAN TIZOL—*The Sphinx; Keb-lah (Keynote)

Trombonist Tizol and another ex-Harry James man, alto saxist Willie Smith, in some typical Tizol mood music.

GERALD WILSON—The Moors (Black & White)

Believe it or not, this fine Ellington-sounding opus was written and arranged by a girl, Melba Liston, who plays trombone in the band!

LESTER YOUNG—*Jumping With Symphony Sid (Aladdin)

Dedicated by the All-American tenor sax man to Harlem's favorite disc jockey.

FROM THE MOVIES

CARNEGIE HALL—Beware My Heart: *Les Brown (Columbia); d'Artega (Sonora); The Twilight Three (Majestic); Del Casino (Manor)

DOWN TO EARTH—They Can't Convince Me: *Elliot Lawrence (Columbia)

FABULOUS DORSEYS—At Sundown: Mildred Bailey (Majestic); *Tommy Dorsey album of all time favorites (Victor)

LENA HORNE—Little Girl Blue album (Black & White)

A Rodgers and Hart tune gives this album its title. Lena, aided by Phil Moore's music, again proves she's a swell singer, with eight sides on which the surface noise is the only flaw. Included is the late Victor Schertzinger's great tune I Don't Want To Cry Any More.

JOLSON STORY—The Anniversary Song: *Dinah Shore (Columbia); *Artie Shaw (Musicraft); *Andy Russell (Capitol); Tex Beneke (Victor); Louis Prima (Majestic); Larry Douglas (Signature).

By the time you read this there will be many other versions out, including Woody Herman's, also one by Kate Smith on the much-vaunted new M-G-M record label.

LADIES' MAN—I Got A Gal I Love: *Frank Sinatra (Columbia)

NIGHT IS YOUNG—When I Grow Too Old To Dream: *Ray Block (Signature).

Johnny Guarnieri on piano.

(Continued from page 103)

"I stank. I did too much of everything, I was busy all over the screen."

"It isn't that bad."

"It was that bad."

It is taken for granted in Hollywood that Ingrid Bergman be addressed as "Miss Bergman," although she would be the last person in the world to suggest the formality. Only a few people—Milestone, David Lewis, Leo McCarey, Bing Crosby, myself—call her by her first name. There is already the aura of The Great Star about Ingrid which communicates itself to everyone who meets her.

She is almost a legend, as Garbo was a legend, and Bernhardt: but there could not be a greater difference between two personalities than that between Bergman and Garbo. I have worked with both. Both are Swedish. Both are magnificent actresses. But Garbo never conquered her shyness, and her work to her was almost a holy rite. Ingrid's work is a consuming passion; yet she is able to draw a curtain in her mind between work and the rest of life; and she is no longer shy.

She is, of course, beginning to realize that she is a star. You cannot receive Oscars, and be number one at the box-office without being aware that you are something very special.

People change, and Ingrid has changed in accordance with her new stature. It has taken her a long time to discover that life can be great fun as well as an earnest business.

't aint funny, mcgee . . .

Ingrid has a sense of humor that matches her healthy mind and body. She is outraged by filth of any description. She has always managed to disappear in the midst of the telling of dirty stories, and although she has removed herself without remark, the scent of her tacit disapproval remained, somehow to the raconteur's embarrassment.

There is a Bergman personality in the process of development which would be fairly unrecognizable to those Hollywood residents who knew the self-conscious Ingrid when she first arrived from Sweden. The changes are expressed in little things, unimportant on the surface but of tremendous significance when one considers her almost unbelievable popularity with studio personnel.

Consider the matter of the mid-morning coffee "break" when she was making Bells of St. Mary's, over at RKO.

On her first day there, Ingrid found herself growing tired and irritable at about eleven o'clock and accordingly asked for a cup of coffee. After a considerable interval, a waiter appeared with a tray containing one pot of coffee, sugar, cream and one cup.

Ingrid had taken only a sip or two when she observed that no one else on the set was joining her. She beckoned to an assistant producer and asked him why this was so. He told her that RKO had a no-coffee, no-time-out rule. "Why, then," she said, "I can't possibly sit here having coffee when it is forbidden the rest." And immediately sent the tray away.

She knew, of course, what she was doing. Ingrid Bergman could not be allowed to sulk or be made unhappy because of lack of coffee; and if she would not drink her coffee unless it were made available to the others on the set, there was no alternative except to revise the rule.

This was done.

She found that a different attitude prevailed at Enterprise Studios when she arrived to make Arch of Triumph. A buffet table was set up in the sound stage

(Continued on page 107)

NEW RCA VICTOR ALBUM...BY POPULAR DEMAND!

"Wayne King Waltzes" VOL. II

Marie Elena ★ Song of the Islands ★ Mexicali Rose
In Apple Blossom Time ★ The Anniversary Waltz ★ Carolina Moon
'Til the Sands of the Desert Grow Cold ★ Roses of Picardy

Eight of your favorite love songs in moonlight-mood arrangements by "The Waltz King" and his orchestra. Ask for RCA Victor Album P-171, $3.15.

"MORE HITS—FRESH FROM RCA VICTOR!"

Prices are suggested list prices, exclusive of taxes. Radio Corp. of America.

RODGERS and HART Album—Milton Berle, Betty Garrett, Marie Greene, Vic Damone. Includes This Can't Be Love, Falling in Love with Love, There's a Small Hotel, Here in My Arms, others. P-170, $3.75.

COWBOY CLASSICS—Sons of the Pioneers. Includes Tumbling Tumbleweeds, Cool Water, Trees, Blue Prairie, others. P-168, $3.15.

HARMONICA CLASSICS—John Sebastian. Includes Malagueña, Inca Dance, Ritual Fire Dance, The Maiden with the Flaxen Hair, Moroccan Serenade, Stompe a la Turca, Harmonica Player, others. P-166, $3.15.

Naturally*...on RCA Victor Records!

Victor's billion-record skill, plus RCA's electronic wizardry, make music sound so natural on RCA Victor Records! Hear them on a Victrola radio-phonograph.

(Victrola—T. M. Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.)

SEE "CARNEGIE HALL," new United Artists film starring RCA Victor artists Heifetz, Jan Peerce, Artur Rubinstein, Leopold Stokowski, Vaughn Monroe!

THE STARS WHO MAKE THE HITS ARE ON RCA VICTOR RECORDS

"HIS MASTER'S VOICE"

NOW YOU CAN OWN THE FIRST FULL-LENGTH BOOK ABOUT the Voice

the story of
FRANK SINATRA
By E. J. Kahn, Jr.

Here is the book about Frankie you've been asking for. It is the first full-length book about him that's ever been written. It's so handsome you'll be proud to own it and show it to all your friends.

16 PICTURES OF FRANKIE—many of which have never been printed before

THE VOICE is packed full of facts about Frankie's life—what sort of person he really is, what he likes to eat and wear, what kind of house he lives in, what his wife and children are like, who his friends are, all about his fans and fan clubs, how he works for tolerance and understanding among all Americans, what he did for the war effort, where he lived as a boy, and how he got to be famous. And it's written so that it's fun and interesting to read.

BE THE FIRST TO OWN
This Wonderful New Book
TEAR OUT THIS COUPON
NOW

HARPER & BROTHERS, 637 Madison Ave., N. Y. 22
Please rush my copy of THE VOICE.
☐ I enclose $2.00.
☐ Send C.O.D. (Publisher pays postage on orders accompanied by payment.)

Name_____
(Please Print)
Address_____
City_____ Zone_____
State_____ #7000

the fans

MODERN SCREEN FAN CLUB ASSOCIATION • SHIRLEY FROHLICH, DIRECTOR

■ SINATRA STUFF: Good news for Sinatra clubbers: a whole book is being published by Harper and Bros. about Frank's life, career and clubbers! Called "The Voice," it's based on E. J. Kahn's New Yorker articles.

SUBSCRIPTION CONTEST: Seems ages ago that local clubbers wound up their efforts in our fascinating (and worthwhile!) MODERN SCREEN Subscription Contest. At last, the votes have been counted up and those lush and lovely prizes are at hand. So here's the news you've been waiting for: First prize (we can hardly believe it, ourselves) is a genuine 17-jewel Gruen gold wrist watch—and it's really a beauty! Lucky winner is that hard-working, ever-plugging gal, Ev Beasley, prexy of the Evelyn MacGregor Club! Second prize is a handsome Eberhard Faber Effortless Writing Pen—the kind that writes under stacks of membership blanks. Its proud claimer is Margie Ciaravino. Third, 4th, 5th and 6th prizes are magnificent Elgin-American compacts, all different shapes and sizes—each more gorgeous than the next! The happy powder-dabbers are Lola Ciaravino (just a lucky family, that's all—and good salesgals, too!), Marie Pellegrini (Tommy Dix C.), Elsie Ellovich (Frank's U. S.), and Julie Sanges (Jan Clayton). Thanks again to the go-getting clubbers who must have made themselves a small fortune selling MS subs. (Well, enough for some extra snaps, anyway.) It's been swell fun.

CLUB BANTER: That gala party which Urban Jones' Jimmy Lloyd Club threw for Buffalo mems netted the happy clubbers $30 for the Sister Kenny Fund. To make things even more wonderful, Jimmy came through with an added check for $50 . . . Congrats to Filmland Fan Club, on their 14th anniversary . . . that Dick Jaeckel Club sketch contest, with prizes for the best drawings of Jake, sounds like a novel idea . . . Donald Blaha's Peter Karson Club is offering free (one-year) memberships to the first 500 who apply before April 30; the next 500, joining up before May 31, will be given a reduction of 75 cents on the regular $1.00 annual dues. Don's address is 3192 Scranton Rd., Cleveland 9, Ohio . . . Foreign memberships are free in the Helen Walker F. C.; domestic dues, only 25 cents . . . Arlene Maxon and the Joe Dosh Clubbers are plenty excited about Joe's new album of lullabies . . . We certainly would like to have been there when Carmen Cavalaro threw a farewell party for his clubbers at the Mark Hopkins Hotel, in San Francisco . . . Bill Williams and Barbara Hale entertained the winners of Joyce Chandler's membership drive for Bill, at a party in their home . . . Eileen McCarthy's Glenn Vernon Club has a bright idea, dreamed up by Imogene Green. Imogene is putting on a show. The theme will be: join Glenn's club and have fun . . . Vi Paynter is throwing a send-off party for "her boy," Eddie Ryan, who's coming East to do a play . . . Shirley Bieringer, expert editor of Ed's Editions, met her honorary, Ed Ashley, in Calif. . . . Vincent Price Club made the Tampa Morning Tribune for their gift of 300 books to Bay Pines Vets' Hospital.

(Continued on page 122)

MODERN SCREEN Trophy Awards were presented at Dolores Craeg's WINS show. L. to r., Dolores, m.c.; Ginny Vickery (prexy, Danny Kaye F. C.); Mary Murha, of the Gene Autry F. C.; Shirley Frohlich, MSFCA Director; Kent Smith, who made the awards, and Catherine Crookston, of the James Stewart Club.

(Continued from page 105)

containing cups bearing the names of each person associated with the production. Cookies, cakes, fruit juices, various cola drinks and everything but scotch were provided, as well.

If I make it sound as if food and drink were important to Ingrid Bergman, it is because that is true. Between pictures she lives casually at home, without paying too much attention to her weight or figure. When an assignment is imminent, she diets.

Then, for the duration of the picture, she once again eats what she likes. She can do this because she works so hard that no amount of food could add a pound to her weight. She is partial to beef tartare—chopped beef mixed with egg, onion and garlic, and eaten raw—which is not fattening; and to ice cream, which is very fattening.

When she is at home in Hollywood, Ingrid lives in a Provincial house in Beverly Hills. She calls it a "big small house" because it does not have many rooms. But each one is on a grandiose scale. The living room is fifty feet long, with a dining space attached to one end. There are a number of nooks in the walls of this room, and Ingrid calls them "conversation groups." She enjoys people like the Alfred Hitchcocks and the Jean Renoirs, and adores giving dinner parties for them.

She drives a Studebaker coupe, not very new. She has a skimpy wardrobe because she is not fascinated with clothes. When she comes downstairs she may well be dressed in a sweater and a tweed skirt, both of which appear to complement the French Provincial furniture with which she and Dr. Lindstrom have furnished their house.

She has no conception of the value of money, but she is instinctively thrifty. She simply pays no attention to the problem of expenditures. For a long period she has been financially independent; her needs are not great, since she is not a devotee of the chinchilla-and-diamonds manner of living. It pleases her that her husband can contribute his services to clinics rather than offering them for a fee, and she is glad that her life is not complicated by worry over bills and how to pay them.

She likes to sing, and to play the piano. She reads scripts of plays and pictures, and all the current books. She likes parties, and she adores to go dancing of an evening with Dr. Lindstrom. She likes night clubs and smart cafés. She is an addict of the thing called excitement and loves new experiences.

These are the things I know about the fascinating creature named Ingrid Bergman, and they are not nearly enough to define her character for you, nor her personality, nor to give you the experience of reacting to her charm, being stimulated by her occasional flashes of genuine temperament, or watching her grow not only as an especially endowed woman but as a fine artist.

But there is one thing about Ingrid which I feel you must remember above everything else. That is her quality of tranquillity with excitement, her self-possessed awareness. She is an adult. She can laugh, when others would complain.

I like the story of her interview with Leo McCarey, the charming genius who wrote, produced and directed Going My Way and Bells of St. Mary, and who asked Ingrid to play Eve in his new, ambitious production, which is titled Adam and Eve.

"There's one thing," Ingrid said. "My agent tells me it's time I demanded top billing. Can you give me that?"

McCarey regarded her with an expression of sheer wonderment. "Of course," he said finally. "The ads will read, 'Ingrid Bergman and Whoever, in Eve and Adam.' Right?"

"Okay, I'll wait for that top billing," smiled Ingrid.

I SAW IT HAPPEN

My girl friend's Marine brother was stationed in California, after having served overseas. One day he and a couple of other servicemen were trying to sink a putt on Bing Crosby's golf course, which was free to the armed forces. They were soon joined by an unprepossessing guy, wearing a sweat-shirt, baggy green slacks ("You could have sat in the bags at the knees," said the brother), moccasins and no sox. The guy asked casually, "Can I join you fellows in a game?" The servicemen assented. During the entire game the stranger hummed a tune—and the others knew to whom that hum belonged. It was Bing Crosby! Later, they went back to the club house, where Bing heard himself singing on a juke-box. He said, "Imagine that! After knocking myself out on the course all afternoon, I've got to come back and listen to that!"

Arlene Hart
Rochester, N. Y.

NEW theme hits STATIONERY
by the creators of Hit Notes
Your favorite musical stars announce:
"WE HAVE Autographed YOUR WRITING PAPER"
Just think! These nine artists together bring you THEME HITS, the most exciting stationery ever created. Box contains individual sheets from each artist, decorated in colors with his photo, autograph and theme song. Beautiful white paper. Matching deep-flap envelopes have autographed photos of all nine stars.
At department, gift, stationery, music stores and record shops. If stores are out of stock, send $1.00 to The Hart Vance Co., 17th & Delmar, St. Louis 3, Mo.
Autographed PHOTOS ON BOX, TOO
Contents: 36 sheets, 18 envelopes. Size of paper 6¼ x 8½, which folds once to fit large envelope.
Price $1.00

Don't be uncomfortable "next time"

I'll send you NEW COMFORT today!

Tired of "monthly" bother? Had enough of old-fashioned belts and pads? Been disappointed in other methods? You will certainly welcome Meds perfected internal protection—invisible in use!

- Meds have the famous "Safety-Well" for your extra protection.
- Meds are made of fine cotton—soft and absorbent for extra comfort.
- Meds expand gently, mostly side to side, adjusting to individual needs without back pressure.
- Meds applicators are dainty and efficient, firm, smooth, completely disposable.

Meds are made in two sizes: De Luxe with super absorbency; and Slender—the new, easy-to-insert size that brings you undreamed-of comfort with the REGULAR absorbency most mature women need.

Do send today for your introductory package of these new Slender Meds—so "next time" you, too, can enjoy this wonderful new comfort!

De Luxe MEDS with SUPER absorbency for greater need (in dark blue box)

Slender MEDS with REGULAR absorbency and extra ease-of-use (in light blue box)

29¢ for 10 in applicators

Guaranteed by Good Housekeeping IF NOT AS ADVERTISED THEREIN — REPLACEMENT OR A REFUND OF MONEY

Meds are made by Personal Products Corporation (makers of Modess) and are acceptable for advertising in the Journal of the American Medical Association and in Good Housekeeping.

Martha Steele
Personal Products Corporation
Milltown, New Jersey

MS-5

Dear Martha Steele: I want to try the new Slender Meds. Please send me, in plain wrapper, the introductory package of 3 for which I enclose 10¢ in coin to cover mailing cost.

Name.....

Address.....

City.....State.....

"I'VE GOT IT BAD"

(Continued from page 46)

and the Federal government had to put three new mail planes on all the routes between California and Illinois.

I was due in New York, afterwards. There was a show that had a part in it, and I'd waited a long time . . .

I stuck it out in New York for three weeks, and if anybody said, "Good morning, Betty," to me, I cried. I couldn't sleep, I couldn't eat, my eyes had shadows under them as deep as the Grand Canyon.

It just wasn't any good. So I went down one morning, after I'd had a wistful letter from Larry, and called him up. Daytime rates, and everything. He sounded sort of worried, on the other end.

"What's the matter?" he said sharply.

I was sniffing into the phone. "You want me to come out?" My voice was getting weaker. "And we'll get married?"

For half a minute, there wasn't any answer. And then Larry was saying "You little cluck, when's the next plane?" and the man in the drugstore thought I was crazy, because I came out of the phone booth laughing and crying and waving my arms as though I thought I could fly without waiting for a plane.

Maybe you've figured out I had it bad.

Larry was working in Counter-Attack, at Columbia, when we got married, and the studio wouldn't let him shave.

hobo groom . . .

You should have seen us that night—me in my new blue dress, with flowers, and Larry, fresh out of the Hobo News.

It was a beautiful wedding, anyhow. Small, and quiet, and the church looked pretty, and there were candles. I guess any wedding is beautiful, if you care enough. I'd have married Larry at high noon on stilts in Madison Square Garden.

When we were driving home, my new husband, who'd been searching through his pockets, sighed deeply.

"What's the matter?" I said. "Aren't you happy?" He looked as though he was thinking about Betty Grable, and having regrets already.

"I've locked us out," he said in hollow tones. "And I've lost the key. I've never been married before."

"I know," I said. "You'll never be married again, either."

By this time, we'd reached the apartment, and parked the car. "I," said Larry in a very business-like voice, "will go in the window."

He was half-way through, when the cop came along. The cop looked at me suspiciously. "What's he doing up there?"

"Trying to get in," I said helpfully.

"No!" The cop was sarcastic. He went over closer, and I began to fear for the seat of Larry's pants. "You come down out of there," the cop said nastily. "I want to arrest you for house-breaking."

Larry, who was panting from exertion, gasped, "This is my house! I just got married."

The cop, who had noticed my flowered state by then, was about willing to accept the fact that Larry and I were simply peculiar. Until he got a look at Larry's beard. Then he began to think we were peculiar, but there was nothing simple about it.

He went off down the street, muttering to himself about what a lousy beat this was.

Larry finally made the grade. He walked through the apartment to open the place for me, and when I went in, I found him standing beside the door, laughing.

He couldn't talk, but he kept pointing to the door. There in the lock was the key.

I think you love people more for the small foolishnesses you remember, than for any sterling virtues they may have. The picture of Larry, struggling through that window, is all I need to put me in a sentimental mood for a week.

Well, we had a honeymoon. One month. And Larry worked every single night, all night. After that, I went back to New York.

It's funny, when I look back on our marriage. For two years, we were busy grabbing a week here, and a month there, so that I still can't believe we're together now, in a place of our own, with an honest-to-God cat, and a cook, and a hammock in the backyard.

Sometimes we sit out in the hammock till midnight, swinging, while the air gets cooler and sweeter, and I have to pinch Larry to prove I'm not dreaming.

We go off into "do you remember?" routines. There was the time Larry got to New York this last winter, after he'd finished Down To Earth, with Rita. He'd had a rocky trip out, but we were going to have five days together. Together with the city of New York, that was. Because a Columbia representative met him the minute he got in, and handed him a schedule.

He had a date every half hour.

They got us a beautiful suite at the Waldorf, and we used to retire to it late at night, and laugh.

"How nice to see you, Miss Garrett," my husband would say. "So glad you could come."

And I'd say, "Lovely party. Don't forget you're being photographed at two. How do you do, how do you do, how do you do?"

We were laughing with tears in our eyes.

Larry made five New York trips last year. I couldn't get away at all. After the show, I'd clean off my makeup, and we'd walk around the dirty, exciting streets. We both love New York. There are so many memories . . .

When Larry was going to school at the Group Theater Studio, and guiding Rockefeller Center tours as a side-line, he lived on 39th Street, between 6th and 7th Avenues.

beer-barrel serenade . . .

There was a restaurant across the street—called Zucca's—and about four o'clock every morning, they started banging beer cans around. In the beginning, Larry'd leap out of bed, start pulling on his pants, and wonder why the place was being raided. After a while, he got so he simply stayed in bed and muttered bad words.

It's strange that we never ran into each other before we did, our backgrounds were so parallel. Larry was born in Olathe, Kansas. I was born in St. Joe, Missouri, right across the border!

We were both only children, of middle-class families. We even had the same dramatic school teachers, though we went to different schools.

And we both came to New York in 1936.

After we got married, we'd be talking, and I'd mention a girl I ran around with in New York, and Larry'd stare.

"You knew her?" he'd ask.

"Well, I was practically her best friend!"

He'd grin. "Me too."

"Oh, really," I'd start, a little miffed, and then I'd notice that his eyes were twinkling, and I'd have a breakdown, too.

I love this house we have now so much it frightens me. You shouldn't get that attached to anything inanimate. But I've never before owned anything bigger than a bottle of cologne.

April Showers
PERFUME
The fragrance of youth!
Discover the lovely secret of April Showers . . . a dash of recklessness, a murmur of mystery, a breath of romance. Enchanting fragrance for enchanted hours!
Eau de Toilette, $2.00
Dusting Powder, $1.00
Perfume, $7.50, $4.50, $1.25
—plus tax
CHERAMY
Frolic
PERFUME
It's fun... it's young... it's meant for you!
There's fresh bright magic in this gay perfume! Frolic whispers to you of high-hearted moments—joy that lingers in your heart, and his!
Eau de Toilette, $2.00. Dusting Powder, $1.00. Talcum Powder, 50¢. Perfume, $7.50, $4.50; debutante size, $1.25 —plus tax
PERFUMERS TO ROMANCE

The proof of my ignorance about houses came one afternoon. I was home all by myself, and I'd decided to haul some wood in, and surprise Larry. I was going at it with a zeal to break your back, when a lady came and sat on our porch.

"Hello," said the lady. "I'm from the tax assessment office. Last time we assessed this house, the furniture was worth $200. Do you have the same furniture?"

We'd bought the house as was—stamp scales, down puffs, everything—so I said yes. But the $200 value amazed me. "I'm sure it's worth more than that," I told her. "Why, we've bought a brand-new refrigerator, and I have my own good silver—"

The upshot of it all was that the lady raised the assessment value, and when Larry came home, he got hysterical.

And he kept right on teasing. "Why don't you write the government and tell them we can't afford to pay our income tax this year, because I gave you a diamond ring, honey?"

I had to grin, too. I grin just looking at that ring. It's very simple, and very lovely. I'd never thought about a diamond before. When we were first married, we needed so many other things.

And then, last Christmas, Larry handed me this little box, and I looked in it, and I could feel my throat all closing up.

"After two and a half years of marriage, I've decided to get engaged to you," he said cheerfully. "There are times when you're quite cute."

Sometimes I think Larry's too conscientious. He works so hard, he gets so nervous about things.

On the other hand, I'm too lax, too willing to "do it tomorrow."

He's got tremendous powers of concentration, and it's hard to make him stop driving himself.

MODERN SCREEN

"Allow me, Mr. Quimby."

The first time I walked into the house and found some clothes on the floor where he'd dropped them, I rejoiced.

I went hooting all over the house. "Larry, Larry, Larry, you dropped your clothes on the floor."

He came out of the kitchen. "You like that, huh? Darling, you're a moron."

"I know it," I said. "So are you!"

He isn't really. He never will be, either, despite my efforts. But I think he is a little less tense than he was. And he's influenced me for the better, too. Now, occasionally, I'll try to keep my mind on something for more than six and a half minutes flat.

He's in love with his little garden, and brags about it to everybody. I spoil things by announcing that it ought to look good, because after all, we have a gardener, and my husband says bitterly, "The times Jose comes in one year, you can count on Pepper's seven toes." (Pepper's our cat, and she really has seven toes on one paw.)

As usual, my husband is right. He's been babying one little cactus for a year. It has an odd, wine-colored flower, and you'd think he invented it.

This last year's been pretty terrific for both of us. Larry won an award for The Jolson Story, and I won an award for Call Me Mister, and he's getting better parts, and I've got an M-G-M contract.

It's happened so nicely, so that neither of us feels out of it, and each knows the excitement the other's going through.

And we're together. The only fault I find with my husband is that he likes to stand behind doors and leap out at me.

He thinks if he tells me he's going to do it, that makes everything all right. I can't seem to explain to him that it's even worse that way. By the time he finally leaps, I'm a nervous wreck.

But sometimes, when we're just sitting in front of the fireplace, I can forgive him even that, because the light flickers strangely over his thin, brown face, and I find myself being moved for no particular reason, or for a lot of particular reasons, and they all look like Larry Parks.

I forgot to tell you—he's the nicest guy I know.

ADVERTISEMENT

"...I don't mind the porridge... but somebody drank my Pepsi-Cola."

ON MOTHERS' DAY...

(Continued from page 52)

stomachs, and not always that. Marion and I meant the same to her as Lindsay Diane means to Ted and me. Here was my baby getting the best of care, and me going to pieces over an air bubble. For the first time, I really got a dim idea of the punishment my mother had taken. There are all kinds of heroes in this world. For the first time I realized that one kind is my mother.

Her hard times started early. Our childhood—Marion's and mine—was pretty rugged, but in between we managed to have some fun. Momma never had any. She was nine when her mother died and she went to live with a family where she washed and cooked and took care of the kids to earn her keep. At sixteen, she took a job with the phone company, didn't know a thing about life, thought she was in love with the first guy who came along, and boom! they were married. Marion was four and I was two when they called it a day, and my father faded quietly out of the picture.

From then on it was strictly up to Momma. She heard you could get work at the Oldsmobile plant in Lansing, so we moved there from Battle Creek. Then word got around that the money was better in Detroit, and that's where most of my memories begin.

My earliest memories are of Momma scrubbing. She was a bug on cleanliness. We lived in a brokendown flat, and keeping it clean was tough unless all the other tenants felt the same way, and there were always some who didn't. But Momma never gave up. After a day at the factory, she'd come home and scrub and scour and disinfect. And wash our clothes.

Momma worked at Chrysler's, trimming cars. That meant she stood on the assembly line, sticking tacks into the upholstery as it came along. You had to work real fast, and sometimes your hands would get in the way. I remember she'd come home with her fingers swollen to twice their natural size. It used to break my heart, but she'd laugh it off. "Never mind my fingers. Just be a good girl and do what Marion says."

big sister . . .

She depended a lot on Marion. Maybe too much, she thinks now, but what else could she do? To start working at seven, she'd have to be up by 5:30. Before leaving, she'd lay our clean clothes on a chair and set the alarm. Marion always heard it. She'd wake me up and get breakfast, which wasn't much of a job. Momma was deathly scared of fire. She'd have nightmares about our getting burned up. So every morning she'd hide the matches, and winter or summer we'd eat cold breakfast food.

Things really got bad when the depression started. There were times when we couldn't pay the rent, little as it was, and she made a deal to keep the halls and stairways scrubbed so they wouldn't put us out.

I'll never forget the time Momma'd been out all day, looking for work. All she said when she came in was, "I'm not hungry," and went inside to lie down. We knew darn well she was hungry, but we also knew there was no sense in making a fuss, she'd only feel worse. So we pretended, fine, she'd eaten somewhere. There was a solitary can of beans in the house. Marion heated the beans and the two of us sat there, with the tears dripping off our chins on to the plate.

My mother never read any psychology books, so it must have been instinct or

LEADING HOLLYWOOD STUDIO HAIR STYLIST SAYS:

"Easy...easy...easy!

SCOTTY RACKIN.
famous motion picture hair stylist.

GALE STORM . . . starring in
"IT HAPPENED ON FIFTH AVENUE"
a Roy Del Ruth Production for Allied Artists

. . . so easy to style your hair when you give yourself a

Portrait COLD WAVE

with easy-to-use Plastic Curlers

And it's so easy, too, to give yourself a Portrait Cold Wave right in your own home because Portrait features Plastic Curlers specially designed for easy home use. In two to three hours, soft, gloriously-natural waves that last and last! Portrait comes complete with 50 plastic curlers that can be used over and over again.

Complete $1.49 plus tax
Refill Kit $1.00

ORIGINATORS OF PLASTIC CURLERS FOR HOME COLD WAVES.

Portrait
COLD WAVE PERMANENT

AT ALL DRUG, COSMETIC AND NOTION COUNTERS.

TRIAL OFFER. Now you can see how easy it is to give a Portrait-perfect Cold Wave at home. Send for Trial Kit. Contains everything you need including 8 Plastic Curlers Ideal for end curls.

H. H. TANNER COMPANY Dept. D-1
127 East 9th Street, St. Paul, Minnesota

Please send me____(how many?) Portrait Trial Kits including Plastic Curlers. I enclose 25 cents for each kit to cover handling and postage.

Name_____

Address_____

City_____ Zone____ State_____

Holds 144% Better

At last— a bobby pin that really holds fully 144% better by unbiased certified test* . . . a totally new kind of bobby pin! You'll see the difference at once—these bobby pins look like lightning. You'll feel the difference at once, too. They're strong, yet flexible—gentle as a lover's embrace. Note, too, the invisible heads, rounded-for-safety ends, super-smooth finish. They stay more securely, feel better, keep your hair looking neater, smarter all day through.

A NEW KIND OF BOBBY PIN

Gayla
HOLD-BOB
SUPERGRIP

*United States Testing Company, Inc. Test No. 75436, Nov. 25, 1946

COPYRIGHT 1947 GAYLORD PRODUCTS, INCORPORATED

plain horse sense that told her how to handle me. I was the difficult one. Marion was an angelpuss—wavy hair, huge blue eyes and a skin like peaches and cream. Everybody liked her. People didn't like me much. I was a rack of bones with freckles and hair standing on end two minutes after you combed it out. Marion was reserved and quiet. I was always at boiling point.

My mother was a fighter herself. She knew that a certain amount of rebellion was good for the soul. She never tried to squelch it in me, just to direct it. Her ambition for both of us was a high school diploma. To put us through high school, she'd work herself to the bone. But I was stagestruck already, running around to amateur contests, sometimes winning a buck.

I wanted things now. Not only for me but for her, too. I couldn't stand the thought of her slaving away for years. And the turning point came one evening when some friends took us all to one of those family beer gardens they have in Detroit. The piano player knew me from having seen me around on amateur nights, and started kidding me. "How about a song, Betty?"

pennies from heaven . . .

One song led to another, and the people liked it. They began throwing pennies and nickels and dimes and yelling for more. Before I sat down, I'd made ten dollars. Ten dollars was a fortune. Then and there I decided that somehow I was going to get out of this life and on to the stage.

And that was another thing about my mother. She knew when to hold me and when to let me go. She knew that once I made up my mind, you couldn't budge me. I kept on at school but started running down leads at the same time, till I got this chance to sing with Frank Weingart's little local band. Frank's idea was to get to New York. That sounded like music to me.

"You can't," Momma said. "You're too young."

"How old were you when you went out on your own?"

I can remember how she looked at me. And how I looked back. And how she suddenly gave in. "All right, Betty. I guess you'll have to learn things your own way—"

This is Momma's story, not mine, so I'll skip the details of that adventure. Suffice it to say, we were a bust and had to borrow money to get ourselves home. And there I discover that my sister's singing at the Nut House. . .

So when little Betty comes home, everything's settled. "Honey," says Momma, "things are easier now. Marion's earning some money and you're going back to school."

And I, being kind of discouraged, said okay.

But my sister's job turned out to be my break. Comes New Year's Eve, she's working, so her boy friend picks me off the scrub team and takes me to the Club Continental. The guys in the band ask me to do a number; Vincent Lopez is there and he says, "Who's that?" I've told it a million times. Where my mother steps into the picture again is early a.m. with me whooping. "Wake up, Momma, he's paying me $65 a week!"

Momma got two weeks leave from the factory to see me open at the Casa Mañana. The morning she came in, I climbed into her lap like I did when I was six. I was sixteen and scared to death.

It would have been nice if Momma had had somebody to sit with, but we didn't know a soul in New York. We picked out a teeny table up on the balcony, where I could see her from the mike. My first number was "Old Man Mose" and, you can take it from me, it was lousy.

"If you get enough applause," they'd said, "do another number." I didn't get enough applause to scare a rabbit, but I looked up at Momma. From the smile on her face, you'd have thought I'd laid 'em in the aisles. My heart came up from my boots and lifted me with it. There was no logic in it. I knew she was prejudiced. But I didn't need logic then; I needed faith. "Now we go," I thought, "or we're finished." Well, we weren't finished. I'd stopped shaking; I felt like someone had given me wings; I saw people nudging each other, laying down their knives and forks, the waiters quit serving. . . .

They kept me on stage for an hour. When it was over I found Momma on a little iron fire-escape outside the building. We fell into each other's arms and cried and cried.

Vincent said to Momma: "I think you ought to stay with Betty. She's so young."

At the time, my salary was still $65 a week, which didn't go a long way in New York. Today I was a small hit. Tomorrow I could be a big bust. In a factory, seniority's very important. Momma'd worked years for hers, she didn't want to lose it. She said: "I'll try to get an extension of my leave." But they wouldn't give it to her.

I was young and sure of myself. "You won't have to go back, Momma. I promise you, you'll never have to go back."

Vincent didn't make any promises. He just said: "Mabel, you ought to stay."

So she stayed, and it turned out all right. But for all she knew then, it could have turned out just as wrong.

We've had lots of wonderful experiences together since, but you couldn't top that Casa Mañana opening, because it was the first. And I don't think you could top our first Christmas in New York. For one thing, Glenn Miller's band was playing the old Paradise Restaurant, and his singer was none other than Miss Marion Hutton.

But the five-star feature for me was my mother's coat. All my life I'd been saying, "Some day, Momma, you'll have a fur coat down to here." That was my idea of riches—a fur coat down to the ground. One day we were passing a little Seventh Avenue shop, and there was a coat in the window—black cloth with an imitation Persian lamb collar. "Most elegant coat I ever saw in my life," said Momma.

gift for a queen . . .

Next day I ran in to price it—$49.50. The money wasn't easy to save, but dollar by dollar I stashed it away, and on Christmas Eve the coat was lying in its box under the tree. I'd planned to be real nonchalant about the coat, but by the time I plunked it in Momma's lap, I was so keyed up I must have looked like something on wires.

"Of course it's not fur," I babbled as if she didn't know. "But at least it's new. It was never somebody else's first."

Now she's got a fur coat and a car and an apartment she swears is twice too big for her, but we think she's entitled to spread herself a little.

But sometimes I suspect my mother. Sometimes I catch a happy glint in her eye that no Chanel No. 5 ever put there. Like the time Ted's room was just finished, and the painters didn't leave things as clean as she thought they should've. If you dropped in that day, you'd have seen a blonde in a house dress, bon-ami and a pail of water at her feet, scraping paint spots off the French doors with a razor blade, and humming a lively tune. That was no maid, folks. That was my dearest mother.

Who said nothing could astonish a secretary?

OFFICE GIRLS TEST NEW NAPKIN—82 OUT OF 103 REPORT NO CHAFING WITH FREE-STRIDE MODESS!

East, West, North, South—the bright girls who smooth the path of business have made a smooth discovery for you!

Business girls who had suffered chafe with their regular napkin tested a new, improved napkin, Free-Stride Modess. Purpose of the test: To see if Modess gave them freedom from chafe.

The result: 82 out of 103 reported no chafing with Free-Stride Modess!

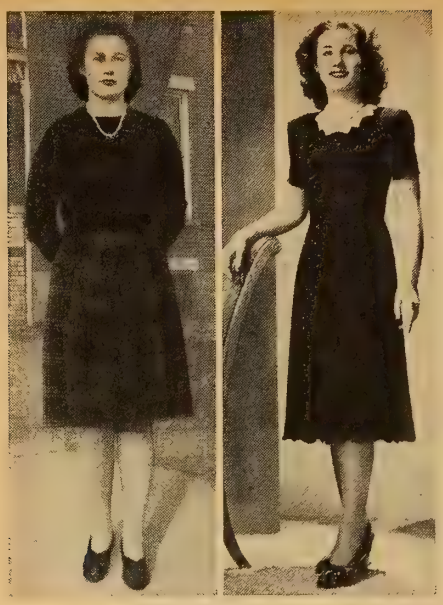
The secret of chafe-free comfort so many girls found in Modess lies in the clever fashioning of the napkin edges.

Modess has extra cotton on its edges—extra softness—right where the cause of chafe begins.

The extra cotton also acts to direct and retain moisture inside the napkin, keeping the edges dry and smooth longer. And dry, smooth edges don't chafe!

So safe, too! Free-Stride Modess has a triple safety shield—and a sealed-in deodorant—wonderful guards against embarrassment! No telltale outlines with Modess—it's silhouette-proof! On sale everywhere now. Product of Personal Products Corporation.

Walk with comfort! Try the new Free-stride Modess!



Before After

"I Feel as though I had Started Life Over"

—says Edith McCormick

At 31, Mrs. Edith McCormick of Johnston City, Illinois, weighed 150, wore a size 20, was getting a "middle-aged spread." Her skin was dry, her hair hard to manage; she was tired all the time. Wisely she enrolled for the DuBarry Home Success Course. What happened seemed like magic. In 8 weeks, she lost 34 pounds, reduced her waist 4½ inches, her abdomen 9 inches, her hips 7½ inches. She now wears size 11 dresses. Her skin is soft and smooth, her hair lovely. Skillful make-up gives her natural good looks a girlish glamour.

"The DuBarry Success Course has helped me in so many ways," says Edith McCormick. "I feel as though I had started life over. Now I have more vitality than 10 years ago."

What about YOU? Unhappy about your looks? The DuBarry Success Course shows you, right at home, how to remodel your figure, have a smooth, glowing skin, style your hair, use make-up for glamour, be at your best. It's exciting and it's fun. You follow the same methods taught by Ann Delafield at the famous Richard Hudnut Salon, Fifth Ave., New York.

FREE! Two beauty-packed booklets for you—

1 Top Secrets from Ann Delafield—13 wonder-working ways to help you have a lovelier face and figure.

2 Your Face, Your Figure and Your Future—the thrilling story of the DuBarry Success Course. How it works, what it has done for more than 300,000 others, what it can do for you.

Send Coupon NOW!

DuBARRY SUCCESS COURSE

ANN DELAFIELD, Directing

RICHARD HUDNUT SALON
Dept. SS59, 693 Fifth Ave.
New York 22, New York

REPLACEMENT OR A REFUND OF MONEY
★ Guaranteed by Good Housekeeping
NOT AS ADVERTISED THEREIN

Please send me, free, the two booklets: "Top Secrets from Ann Delafield," and "Your Face, Your Figure and Your Future."

Miss
Mrs_____

Street_____

City_____ Zone____ State____

Accepted for advertising in publications of the American Medical Association

"CHICAGO, I LOVE YOU!"

(Continued from page 60)

hand on her arm and said, "Don't be the least bit nervous. You're the most famous person here, and what's more you can play rings around anyone in the whole place." She had barely mouthed the words when one of the Lane Brothers, half of an acrobatic act on the same bill, hissed into their ears:

"I just saw Eleanor Roosevelt in the front row. And a few seats down, Stokowski."

Eileen's clammy grip tightened convulsively, and then they looked at each other and began to giggle. When both their nervous systems are absolutely shot, they giggle. They know it's not adult, but they're convinced that it often saves their sanity.

shades of caruso . . .

